48. See 6 C. L. 65.

49. Failure of the court to put its entire charge in writing as required by Revisal 1905, § 536, upon request of counsel before the close of the argument, is reversible error. Sawyer v. Roanoke R. & Lumber Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 84. Remarks of court during the examination of a witness held not objectionable as an oral instruction. Hayes v. Wagner, 220 Ill. 256, 77 N. E. 211.

50. A statute requiring instructions to be in writing does not apply to a mandatory direction to return a verdict. Salisbury v. Press Pub. Co. [Neb.] 108 N. W. 136. Not an instruction as to the law. Economy Light & Power Co. v. Hiller, 113 Ill. App. 103. Where an oral request to direct verdict is immediately reduced to writing by the court and given, the rule requiring instructions to be in writing is sufficiently complied with. Landt v. McCullough, 218 Ill. 607, 75 N. E. 1069.

51. Const. art. 7, § 23, requiring instructions to be in writing, does not require the court to reduce additional instructions to writing in the absence of a request. O'Neal v. Richardson [Ark.] 92 S. W. 1117.

52. A judge is not required to recapitulate the evidence in writing under Revisal 1905, § 356, requiring the court to put its charge in writing on request. Sawyer v. Roanoke R. & Lumber Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 84.

53. See 6 C. L. 65.

54. Where additional instructions are givstance thereof may be given in the absence of the parties or their attorneys.[55] It is not error preliminary to the giving of the charge for the court to state certain immaterial matters contained in the pleadings, the jury being subsequently fully and clearly instructed.[56]

§ 16. Additional instructions after retirement.[57]—In some states the giving of additional instructions after retirement is forbidden by statute.[58] Where allowable they may be given when the jury returns to have the original instructions reread.[59]

§ 17. Review.[60]—It is presumed on appeal that the jury understood the charge of the court and applied it correctly.[61] Where evidence might have sustained an instruction, it is presumed to have been justified.[62]

Objections and exceptions below.[63]—Exceptions must be taken to instructions severally.[64] A general exception is insufficient unless the entire charge is erroneous.[65] An exception properly taken to one instruction brings up for review another embodying the same principle.[66] An objection must specifically point out wherein the error lies,[67] and must be made in a manner approved by law.[68] An instruction given of the court's own motion is reviewable on exception.[69] A party who has not asked for a proper instruction cannot complain of refusal to give an improper one.[70]

The record on appeal.[71]—Instructions must be made a part of the record by bill of exceptions.[72] Objections must be set out in the brief[73] and referred to in the argument.[74] en after retirement, and are sent to the jury room by the bailiff, the record should show consent of the parties. Martin v. Martin [Neb.] 107 N. W. 580.

55. It is not reversible error for the trial judge after the jury have retired and in the absence of the parties and their counsel to give the jury at their request additional instructions as to the form of verdict to be used by them in case of certain findings where the instructions could not affect the substance of the verdict. Whitney v. Com., 190 Mass. 531, 77 N. E. 516.

56. Korby v. Chesser [Minn.] 108 N. W. 520.

57. See 6 C. L. 66.

58. Under Rev. St. 1901, par. 1410, prohibiting further instructions after argument begins, it is not error to refuse to give further instructions after retirement though the jury requests them, especially where objected to by a party. Southern Pac. Co. v. Wilson [Ariz.] 85 P. 401.

59. Where after the jury had deliberated a while they returned and asked that the instructions be reread, the giving of additional instructions at that time is not ground for reversal. Choctaw, etc., R. Co. v. Craig [Ark.] 95 S. W. 168.

65. Foote v. Kelley [Ga.] 55 S. E. 1045. An exception to an instruction as a whole is insufficient if any part of such instruction is correct. Lindblom v. Fallet [C. C. A.] 145 F. 805. An exception to instructions as a series is of no avail if any one of the instructions is correct. Moore v. Lanier [Fla.] 42 So. 462.

66. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Lee [Va.] 55 S. E. 1.

67. An objection that instructions given were indefinite, uncertain, and inapplicable, is insufficient unless stating how or in what respect. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Lightheiser [Ind.] 78 N. E. 1033.

68. A statement by an attorney to the judge outside the court room that he desired to change an instruction submitted by him is not sufficient to entitle him to set up error in giving such instruction. McDermott v. Mahoney [Iowa] 106 N. W. 925. Where at the close of the charge counsel stated that he had no exceptions, exceptions attempted to be taken after the jury had retired were too late. Invited error.[75]—A party cannot complain of instructions given at his own request,[76] nor of error in instructions given where instructions requested by himself contain like error,[77] nor of an instruction which follows the language of his pleading.[78]

Harmless error.[79]—A party cannot complain of an error favorable to himself,[80] nor of one by which he is not prejudiced[81] and which does not affect the verdict,[82] nor of an error which was cured by other instructions.[83]

Instructions must be considered as a whole,[84] and if when so considered they

76. Where a defendant requests the submission of the issue of contributory negligence, he cannot thereafter assert that the evidence shows contributory negligence as a matter of law. Ft. Smith Light & Traction Co. v. Barnes [Ark.] 96 S. W. 976. One who requests an instruction not based on evidence cannot complain of another correct charge as in conflict with his request. Hammer v. Crawford [Mo. App.] 93 S. W. 348. Cannot predicate error on an erroneous instruction given at his request. Haxton v. Kansas City, 190 Mo. 53, 88 S. W. 714. May not complain of an instruction given at his own request. Anderson v. Northern Pac. R. Co. [Mont.] 85 P. 884. A party cannot urge that an improperly worded instruction submitted by him may have led the jury to misconceive the rule it announced. Hellthaler v. Teft Weller Co., 98 N. Y. S. 823.

77. An instruction substantially the same as one requested cannot be complained of. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Snedaker, 223 Ill. 395, 79 N. E. 169; Davis v. Holy Terror Min. Co. [S. D.] 107 N. Mahoney [Iowa] 106 N. W. 925. Charge that it is a carrier's duty to transport passengers safely held not erroneous in connection with other instructions. Blumenthal v. Union Elec. Co., 129 Iowa 322, 105 N. W. 588. Instruction in personal injury action that questions involved as to negligence, reasonable care, etc., are what are known as questions of fact which it is the duty of the jury to determine is not erroneous as summarizing the elements of recovery and directing a verdict without requiring proof of injury. Chicago & J. Elec. R. Co. v. Patton, 219 Ill. 214, 76 N. E. 381. Every phase of the case need not be covered in a single instruction. Davis v. Holy Terror Min. Co. [S. D.] 107 N. W. 374. Inasmuch as it is impossible to state all the law in a single paragraph or a single special charge, reversible error cannot be predicated upon the criticism of a special charge in this case in that regard. Cincinnati Interurban Co. v. Haines, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 77. Instruction correctly stating plaintiff's theory need not be incumbered with defensive matter and is sufficiently qualified by a subsequent charge submitting such defense. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Fowler [Tex. Civ. App.] 93 S. W. 484. An instruction is not erroneous because embracing all the law pertaining to the case. Beacham v. Kennedy, 125 Ga. 113, 53 S. E. 589. An instruction which purports only to define the law as to one branch of the case need not embody every element essential to the conclusion of the cause. Where other instructions perform that office. Trubey v. Richardson, 224 Ill. 136, 79 N. E. 592. Error in not charging that injury must have resulted from the negligence alleged is cured by subsequent instructions, especially where the jury are charged that they must consider the instructions as a series. Chicago City R. Co. v. McDonough, 221 Ill. 69, 77 N. E. 577. It is not necessary to cover all questions or phases of the case in one instruction. It is sufficient if the instructions as a whole cover the case. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Higgs, 165 Ind. 694, 76 N. E. 299. Not required to give all the law applicable to the case in one instruction. Allyn v. Burns [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 636. Instruction defining negligence is not erroneous because not defining contributory negligence where such doctrine was instructed upon later. McIntyre v. Orner [Ind.] 76 N. E. 750. Instruction that the burden of proving contributory negligence is on the defendant is erroneous if standing alone but not when coupled with other instructions that if plaintiff committed any act which contributed to his injury he could not recover. Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Mills [Ind. App.] 77 N. E. 608.

85. Hayden v. Consolidated Min. & Dredging Co. [Cal. App.] 84 P. 422. If as a whole it presents a full and fair exposition of the law of the case, it is sufficient. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Taylor, 125 Ga. 454, 54 S. E. 622. Sufficient if taken together they announce the law of the case. Mississippi Cent. R. Co. v. Hardy [Miss.] 41 So. 505.

86. If as a whole the case was fairly presented and it does not appear that substantial injustice has been done, the fact that instructions were subject to criticism is not ground for reversal. Harris v. Gaunt, 122 Ill. App. 290. Instruction which does not with technical accuracy limit damages for pain and suffering to such as result from the injury complained of is not error if such inference arises from reading other instructions. City of Gibson v. Murray, 120 Ill. App. 296. Inaccuracy in an instruction will not reverse where its meaning is indicated by other instructions and the evidence is such that it could not have been prejudicial. Id. An instruction that the action is several when in fact it is joint and several, but which further charges that any or all the defendants may be found guilty, is harmless. Earp v. Lilly, 120 Ill. App. 123.

87. If as a whole they fairly and correctly present the law it is not fatal error that a particular instruction or portion thereof standing alone is erroneous. Loofborrow v. Utah Light & R. Co. [Utah] 88 P. 19. Inaccuracy in particular instructions is not ground for reversal if as a whole the instructions are not misleading and fairly present the case. Niemyer v. Washington Water Power Co. [Wash.] 88 P. 103. Instruction in an action on a promissory note, if erroneous, was cured by other instructions. Waples-Painter Co. v. Bank of Commerce [Ind. T.] 97 S. W. 1025. If taken as a whole they present the case fairly and so clearly as to be understood by men of plain common sense it is sufficient, though isolated sections if standing alone might be mis-

This rule applies to special charges requested.[90] The instructions will not be read with a view to making them inconsistent.[91]

Curing bad instructions.[92]—An erroneous instruction is presumed to be prejudicial.[93] As a general rule a bad instruction cannot be cured by the giving of a correct one,[94] the two being in conflict.[95] It cannot be said that the jury accepted

Error in a particular instruction standing alone does not justify reversal if explained by other instructions. Southern Ind. R. Co. v. Baker [Ind. App.] 77 N. E. 64. If as a whole the law is stated with substantial accuracy, it is immaterial that particular instructions or detached portions are not precisely correct. Springer v. Bricker, 165 Ind. 532, 76 N. E. 114.

88. Omissions in one may be supplied by the contents of another. Cable Co. v. Elliott, 122 Ill. App. 342. An instruction defective because incomplete in its statement of the law is cured where the omission is supplied by other instructions. Southern R. Co. v. Cullen, 122 Ill. App. 293. Failure to submit issue of proximate cause cured by subsequent instruction. Deschner v. St. Louis & M. R. Co. [Mo.] 98 S. W. 737. Where an instruction was good so far as it went an omission therein was held to have been cured by other instructions. Nephler v. Woodward [Mo.] 98 S. W. 488. Ambiguous instruction that there could be recovery unless it was found that plaintiff was guilty "of contributory negligence and was not injured on account of assumed risk" was not fatal where the court subsequently instructed on assumed risk. International, etc., R. Co. v. Von Hoesen [Tex.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 574, 92 S. W. 798.

89. Misleading charge as to the burden of proof of contributory negligence cured by other instructions. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Groves [Tex Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 895, 97 S. W. 1084. It is not reversible error that a particular instruction if standing alone might be confusing. Starr v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 1119.

W. 440; Bayles v. Daugherty [Ark] 91 S. W. 304. Instruction announcing an erroneous rule of law in regard to negligence is not cured by one announcing the correct rule. Rietveld v. Wabash R. Co., 129 Iowa, 249, 105 N. W. 515. Error in assuming a disputed fact is not presumed cured where the evidence introduced is not preserved. Turner v. Righter, 120 Ill. App. 131. Where an instruction stating facts upon a finding of which a verdict may be returned is erroneous, it cannot be cured by other instructions as the jury might have based their verdict on such instruction regardless of others and it cannot be known that they did not. Osner v. Zadek, 120 Ill. App. 444. Error in an instruction authorizing a verdict on the finding of facts therein recited in not stating all the facts is not cured by other instructions stating all the law and facts. Standard Distilling & Distributing Co. v. Harris [Neb.] 106 N. W. 582. Instruction placing the burden of proof as to damages in an action for wrongful death on defendant is not cured by specific charge on the question of damages. Hupfer v. National Distilling Co., 127 Wis. 306, 106 N. W. 831. Error in an instruction on the weight of evidence not cured by other instructions. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Turner [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Instruction taking from the jury the question of negligence not cured. Damsky v. New York City R. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 579. One which erroneously casts the burden of proof is not cured by a subsequent contradictory one. Best v. Rocky Mountain Nat. Bank [Colo.] 85 P. 1124. Error in allowing a recovery of punitive damages without denominating them as such is not cured by a charge that punitive damages cannot be recovered. Wilson v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 257. Erroneous charge on duty of master to furnish a safe place for his servant to work in not cured by subsequent charge. Grayson-McLeod Lumber Co. v. Carter [Ark.] 88 S. W. 597. An instruction erroneous in not failing to condition recovery on the establishment of negligence alleged is not cured by a subsequent correct instruction. Hamilton v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 114 Mo. App. 504, 89 S. W. 893. Error in submitting an issue not raised is not cured by a subsequent correct instruction. Dallas Consol. Elec. St. R. Co. v. McAllister [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 388, 90 S. W. 933. Erroneous instruction as to presumption of negligence not cured. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Hand, 101 Md. 233, 61 A. 285. Instruction that an interested witness will not be as fair, honest, and candid as a disinterested one is not cured by an instruction that the credit to be given witnesses is for the jury. Muncie, etc., R. Co. v. Ladd [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 790. An instruction that wanton and willful negligence results from a certain act is not cured by an instruction that the act must have been consciously done with knowledge that it was likely to result in injury. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Muscat [Ala.] 41 So. 302. Erroneous charge in libel not cured. Miller v. Nuckolls [Ark.] 91 S. W. 759. Error in an instruction hypothesizing facts and directing a verdict thereon in not summing up all the facts cannot be cured by other instructions. Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern R. Co. v. Schell, 122 Ill. App. 346.

the correct and rejected the erroneous instructions.[96] But an error of omission in one instruction may be cured by other instructions,[97] and an erroneous statement may be cured by specifically calling attention to it.[98] And it is held that positively erroneous instructions may be cured by others without specific mention of the inconsistency of the two.[99] Any error in refusing an instruction is cured by stating the principle in the main charge,[1] and error in giving[2] or refusing an instruction may be cured by the verdict.[3]

§ 1. Insurance laws, regulations and supervision in general.[6]—Statutes in some states provide for the election of an insurance commissioner by the general assembly.[7]

§ 2. Corporations and associations doing an insurance business. A. Corporate existence, character, management, rights and liabilities.[8]—The constitutions and statutes of some states provide that the charters of corporations shall be subject to alteration, suspension, or repeal by the legislature at any time.[9] The company's property and the equitable property rights of the members are within the constitutional guarantees as regards the inhibition against laws impairing the obligations of contracts, the equal protection of the laws, and the deprivation of property without due process of law;[10] and the legislature, while it may under the power reserved to it in the constitution alter or amend the company's charter, cannot appropriate its property without the consent of all its members, either to its own use or that of a private party, though such party be a successor corporation, in the absence of a provision in the original charter to the contrary.[11] The New York stat-not required is cured by one requiring only a preponderance of evidence. Roberge v. Bonner [N. Y.] 77 N. E. 1023.

98. Error in the language of the court is cured where on his attention being called to it he remarks that he did not think he made the error but if he did the jury should disregard what he said and try the case on their recollection of the testimony. Coles v. Interurban St. R. Co., 49 Misc. 246, 97 N. Y. S. 289. A charge inapplicable to the issues is cured on announcing that it does not apply to the case on trial. Southern R. Co. v. Holbrook, 124 Ga. 679, 53 S. E. 203. An instruction which singles out and gives undue prominence to the facts proven by one party is cured by another instruction calling facts proved by the adverse party to the attention of the jury. Western Underwriters Ass'n v. Hankins, 221 Ill. 304, 77 N. E. 447. Error in instruction in an action for wrongful discharge as to condonation for offenses held cured by other instructions. Murray v. O'Donohue, 109 App. Div. 696, 96 N. Y. S. 335.

Antram [Miss.] 41 So. 257. Erroneous charge that any negligence, however slight, warranted a recovery held cured by other instructions. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Rhoads, 28 Ky. L. R. 692, 90 S. W. 219. Instruction fixing an erroneous standard of ordinary care for a child held cured by a subsequent instruction. Stewart v. Southern Bell Tel. & T. Co., 124 Ga. 224, 52 S. E. 331. Erroneous definition of proximate cause cured by other instructions. Rice v. Dewberry [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 193, 93 S. W. 715.

2. Where in an action for damages a verdict is returned for defendant, an erroneous instruction on the question of damages is without prejudice. Elbert v. Mitchell [Iowa] 109 N. W. 181. An erroneous instruction is not ground for reversal where the verdict is right. Indianapolis St. R. v. Schomberg, 164 Ind. 111, 72 N. E. 1041.

3. Where there is no evidence of contributory negligence and the verdict against defendant is clearly right, giving or refusal of instructions relative to such doctrine is cured. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Higgs, 165 Ind. 694, 76 N. E. 299. Refusal of a request on the issue of contributory negligence is cured by a verdict of guilty of such negligence. Edwards v. Carolina & N. W. R. Co., 140 N. 7. Act March 9, 1906 (Laws 1906, p. 122, c. 112), is not in contravention of Const. art. 12, § 155, authorizing the corporation commission to appoint officers, etc., and to establish bureaus of insurance, etc., such provision not conferring the duty of appointing such commissioner on them. Button v. State Corporation Commission of Virginia [Va.] 54 S. E. 769.

8. See 6 C. L. 70.

9. Const. art. 8, § 1, providing that laws passed thereunder for organization of corporations may be altered or repealed, held to give legislature power to amend charter of corporation organized under such a law by means of an amendment to the law. Lord v. Equitable Assur. Soc., 109 App. Div. 252, 96 N. Y. S. 10. Hence legislature had authority to amend general law under which life insurance company was organized so as to provide that a majority of directors should be elected by policy holders instead of all being elected by stockholders, such action not operating to deprive the latter of any of their property rights. Id. Rev. St. pt. 1, c. 18, tit. 3, § 8, making the charter of every corporation subject to alteration, suspension, or repeal in the discretion of the legislature, held not to have been rendered inapplicable to life insurance companies organized under Laws 1853, p. 887, c. 463, by §§ 11 and 20 of the latter act. Lord v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 109 App. Div. 252, 96 N. Y. S. 10.

10. Wis. Const. art. 1, § 12, U. S. Const.

ute authorizing the reincorporation of domestic companies under the general law does not contemplate or authorize any radical change in the character of companies taking advantage of its provisions.[12] Where an attempted reorganization is ineffectual because of the invalidity of the enabling act, the business continued in the name of the new company will be regarded as that of the old.[13] The law that corporate existence cannot be inquired into except by judicial proceedings in the name of the state does not apply to a pretended but not even a de facto corporation.[14] An unconstitutional provision is not a sufficient basis for a corporation de facto.[15]

The character of insurance which a company or association may write is to be determined from its charter or the general laws under which it is organized.[16]

In some states trustees of mutual insurance companies are required to nominate candidates for vacant offices a specified time before election and to file a statement of the same with the superintendent of insurance, and the company is required to mail a statement of the nominations approved by the superintendent of insurance to each policy holder.[17] The superintendent has no authority to change the nominations as made, or make any different statement of the nominees than the ones filed,[18] and hence mandamus will not lie to compel him to change the record of nominations

14th Amend. Huber v. Martin, 127 Wis. 412, 105 N. W. 1031, 1135.

11. Huber v. Martin, 127 Wis. 412, 105 N. W. 1031, 1135. Laws 1903, p. 341, c. 229, providing for changing certain mutual fire companies into stock corporations, held unconstitutional in that it authorizes appropriation of property of old company and equitable interests of members to use of new one and its members, in violation of corporate and charter rights of former, and in defiance of wishes of nonconsenting members. Id. Rev. St. 1898, c. 89, governing the incorporation of mutual companies, must be deemed to have been incorporated in the act of 1903 for a complete scheme of reincorporation of such companies, and the act of 1903 being the inducing feature of the legislative scheme under which the reincorporation occurred and being unconstitutional, the whole scheme is void. Lord v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 109 App. Div. 252, 96 N. Y. S. 10.

13. In case of success, in form, of an attempt to reorganize mutual company on stock plan under law authorizing it and insurance business formerly carried on by old company to be continued ostensibly by new company, using former's assets and good will, if the attempt is fruitless because the enabling act is void, such continued business is to be regarded as really that of the old corporation as belonging to it. 16. McClain's Code, § 1695, authorizing domestic companies to insure property against loss or damage by fire "or other casualty," held to authorize writing of burglary insurance, particularly in view of fact that officers from whom § 1685 required company to obtain permission to do business had so interpreted it and had authorized plaintiff to carry on such business, which authority had not been questioned for 10 years. Banker's Mut. Cas. Co. v. First Nat. Bank [Iowa] 108 N. W. 1046. Where company in articles of incorporation expressly assumed to carry on business of burglary insurance, and secured from proper state officers permission to do business, held that, since it could not escape liability on its policies by plea that statute did not authorize such insurance, policy holder could not defend action on premium note on that ground. Id. A foreign mutual casualty association, incorporated for the purpose of insuring its members against injuries of every nature and description to persons or property, held sufficiently empowered to write an assessable policy of insurance on the mutual plan, for a street railroad company in Ohio, indemnifying it against "injuries of every nature and description to persons or property, causing loss, damage, or liability." Stone v. C., D. T. Traction Co., 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 104. On such casualty association becoming insolvent, its receiver, duly appointed by court, may maintain an action against said street railroad company to recover an assessment ordered by court to be levied on the members of said association, for the purpose of paying losses and expenses and otherwise liquidating the affairs of said mutual casualty association. Id. Sess. Laws 1899, p. 176, c. 17, art. 1, § 9, authorizing certain associations to insure growing wheat, etc., "and other crops" against loss by hail, held to authorize insurance of growing cotton so that company could recover on premium note given therefor. 18. No such authority is conferred on him by Laws 1906, c. 326, or by Id. c. 354, providing that election shall be under his supervision. People v. Kelsey, 100 N. Y. S. 391.

filed with him,[19] nor will mandamus lie to compel the company to send a different statement of nominations to the policy holders than that required by the statute.[20] The acts of the de facto officers of a mutual company, while in possession of their offices, are the acts of the company and binding on it.[21] Officers and directors are personally liable for losses due to violations of their duty and the wrongful exercise of their power[22] or their negligence.[23] A stockholder may recover in the right of the company and in its behalf money owing to it by its directors,[24] provided he establishes both a right of action in the corporation[25] and facts entitling him to sue in its stead.[26] The donation of the funds of the company to a campaign committee for use in a political campaign is contrary to public policy and illegal.[27] Any member of a mutual company suing for himself and others similarly interested may invoke equity jurisdiction to prevent or redress any wrong injuriously affecting the property rights of the corporation when its officers will not move appropriately to that end.[28] The granting of mandamus to compel a mutual company, having no capital stock, to allow a policy holder to inspect its books rests in the sound discretion of the court.[29]

21. Acts of directors entering into office under color of election in voting to pay loss, though election was irregular. Gleason v. Canterbury Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 73 N. H. 583, 64 A. 187.

22. Acts of officers and directors of credit insurance company in procuring it to purchase from them stock in another company, organized to furnish additional reserve for insurance company, held a violation of their duty and a wrongful exercise of power making them personally responsible for resulting losses. Bowers v. Male, 111 App. Div. 209, 97 N. Y. S. 722.

23. Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1781, 1782, attorney general may maintain action to charge negligent officers and directors of insurance company with loss sustained by corporation through their misfeasance. People v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 101 N. Y. S. 354. Allegations as to lease of premises held to sufficiently aver loss through negligence. Id. Allegations that defendants caused funds of company to be kept on deposit in trust companies, of which they were stockholders, at small rate of interest, and at same time caused payments to be made to trust companies at greater rate for interest on ostensible loans carried on books but not actually made other than in form of credit which was not to be made basis of withdrawals, and that defendants permitted assets to be wasted and acquired to themselves or transferred to other sums so lost, held sufficient. Id. Allegations as to sale of stock for less than market value held sufficient to show neglect or malfeasance, it not being necessary to negative possible defenses. Id. Allegations charging defendants with having wastefully and improvidently permitted payment of excessive salaries held to show waste of assets through misfeasance. Id. Fact that every instance of loss alleged does not involve each defendant is unimportant, nor is it essential that the periods of service of the defendants as officers or directors should coincide. Id. Complete inaction on the part of directors is ground of liability. Young v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 49 Misc. 347, 99 N. Y. S. 446, afd. 112 App. Div. 760, 98 N. Y. S. 1052. Fact that some of the directors are charged with faults of commission and some with neglect of duty omitted to be performed held not to show misjoinder of causes of action. Id.

24. Laws 1892, p. 1958, c. 690, § 56, providing that no order, judgment, or decree providing for an accounting, or enjoining, restraining, or interfering with prosecution of business of any domestic insurance company, or appointing receiver therefor shall be made except upon application of attorney general or after his approval of a request therefor by superintendent of insurance, held not to preclude stockholder from maintaining suit. Young v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 49 Misc. 347, 99 N. Y. S. 446, afd. 112 App. Div. 760, 98 N. Y. S. 1052. One who was both a stockholder and policyholder in mutual company held entitled to maintain action, she having an interest in the corporation's property and being in one capacity or the other a cestui que trust. Id. Fact that plaintiff alleged that she was both stockholder and policyholder held not to show improper joinder of causes of action, the action being a stockholder's action simply. Id.

25. Complaint held to sufficiently allege liability to corporation for neglect of duty and damage. Young v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 49 Misc. 347, 99 N. Y. S. 446, afd. 112 App. Div. 760, 98 N. Y. S. 1052.

26. Suit may be brought by stockholder without a demand on corporation to bring it in its own name where it appears that corporation is still under control of the defendant directors and that such a demand would therefore have been futile. Young v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 49 Misc. 347, 99 N. Y. S. 446, afd. 112 App. Div. 760, 98 N. Y. S. 1052.

28. To prevent stock company from wrongfully disposing of assets of mutual company which it succeeded. Huber v. Martin, 127 Wis. 412, 105 N. W. 1031, 1135.

29. Company not being required to keep

Stockholders may generally be assessed to restore impaired capital.[30] Where demand notes are given to the company by certain stockholders for the purpose of increasing the capital stock so as to prevent a forfeiture of its charter, and pursuant to a resolution of the board of directors providing that on the winding up of the corporation noncontributing stockholders shall not be entitled to share in the fund so derived, on the dissolution of the company and the payment of its debts in full, such noncontributing stockholders are not entitled to compel the collection of the notes and the distribution of the proceeds among the stockholders generally.[31]

A contract by a company to sell its good will and turn over a list of its policy holders to the purchaser, reciting that the seller is about to discontinue its business and wind up its affairs, is not broken by the subsequent insolvency of the seller.[32] The purchaser, after accepting the benefits of such sale, cannot contend that it was ultra vires.[33] In New York a life insurance company which, though not insolvent, is doing a losing business, and is unable to continue without further loss, may sell out its business to another company and cease operations, provided it acts in good faith and for the best interests of its creditors and stockholders.[34]

Insolvency.[35]—A member of a mutual company must pay his proportion of all liabilities occurring during the continuance of his policy up to the time of his withdrawal,[36] notwithstanding limitations on his liability in the contract.[37] The payment of a loss to him and the surrender and cancellation of the policy and of the premium note does not relieve him from liability for assessments for debts incurred by the company up to the end of the term for which he was insured,[38] unless a settlement of such future liability is made by the company and the insured at that list of policy holders and not having done so, held that mandamus would not issue to compel it to allow policy holders to inspect card index containing in addition to names of policy holders, much private information for purpose of enabling petitioners to confer with other policy holders in regard to selection of trustees. People v. New York Life Ins. Co., 111 App. Div. 183, 97 N. Y. S. 465.

30. Code §§ 1731, 1732, providing that an insurance company which has received a requisition from the state auditor to make good impairments of its capital stock cannot enforce assessments made for that purpose as a personal liability of the stockholder, but on failure of a stockholder to pay the amount of his stock shall be reduced proportionally, does not prevent such company, before a requisition is made, from assessing its stockholders for the purpose of restoring its impaired capital, thus giving them the option to avoid requisition, assessment, and reduction, and stockholders may pay same if they see fit. Iowa Nat. Bank v. Cooper [Iowa] 107 N. W. 625.

31. Fact that statement filed with state auditor pursuant to Code 1896, § 1109, showed such notes as assets, held not to estop directors to deny that notes were unconditional obligations. Anderson v. Buckley [Ala.] 41 So. 748.

32. Especially where buyer had previously obtained all the benefit which could arise under contract. Bowers v. Ocean Acc. & G. Co., 110 App. Div. 691, 97 N. Y. S. 485.

33. Where company fully performed contract to sell good will of its business and to turn over list of policies, etc., to purchaser, held that latter, having accepted benefits thereof, was estopped to contend that the seller had no power to make the contract. Bowers v. Ocean Acc. & Guarantee Corp., 110 App. Div. 691, 97 N. Y. S. 485.

34. Raymond v. Security Trust Co., 111 App. Div. 191, 97 N. Y. S. 557. Unintentional omission to provide for certain scattered creditors, who can be, and undoubtedly will be, paid as fast as claims are presented, held not to make agreement void as matter of law. Id.

35. See 6 C. L. 71.

36. Company does not, by permitting member to withdraw, relieve him from obligation to pay his proportion of losses incurred during life of policy, even where it was not charged against him prior to his withdrawal, and member cannot, with its consent, pay less sum and receive release from remainder. Brown v. Spackman, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 638.

37. A limitation in the contract cannot relieve members of a mutual fire company from a liability to pay a proportionate share of losses and expenses for the period during which they were members, when company's affairs are being closed up by a receiver. Nichol v. Murphy [Mich.] 108 N. W. 704. Comp. Laws § 5187, relating to liability of members of mutual company for assessments, in terms applies only to contracts made before it went into effect. Id.

38. Requested instruction held erroneously modified. Swing v. Rose [Ohio] 79 N. E. 757. Instruction that defendants were not liable unless they were policy holders when assessment was levied held misleading and also erroneous in view of the fact that it was conceded that policy was surrendered and canceled at time of payment of total loss some time previously. Id.

time.[39] Directors of a mutual company subscribing to a fund represented with their knowledge to be paid up capital are, on the company becoming insolvent, estopped to deny their liability to the extent of such subscriptions as against policy holders who were induced to become such in reliance on such representations.[40]

Creditors[41] and policy holders[42] of an insolvent company may ordinarily apply to a court of equity for the appointment of a receiver and the winding up of its affairs, but it is not within the province of a court of chancery to grant such relief at the sole instance of a stockholder upon the ground alone of such insolvency.[43] Statutes in some states require the insurance commissioner to be made a party to the proceedings.[44]

An order of court in insolvency proceedings, to which the company is a party, levying or directing the levying of an assessment on the members is conclusive on them both as to the necessity for an assessment and the amount thereof,[45] even though they are not individually made parties,[46] but is not conclusive as to who are members.[47] The power of the board of directors to levy assessments passes in such case to the receiver.[48] The court ordinarily has discretionary power to set aside an irregular and excessive assessment[49] and to authorize the levying of another in its place.[50] Limitations begin to run against the liability of a member for an assessment from the date when the assessment is made.[51] The fact that one was induced to become a member through fraud is no defense to an action by the receiver to recover an assessment as against the rights of bona fide creditors and members becom-

Evidence to effect that defendants in action to recover assessments were not parties to or served with process in proceeding in which assessment was made held improperly admitted. Swing v. Rose [Ohio] 79 N. E. 757.

47. Swing v. Rose [Ohio] 79 N. E. 757. May show that he is not a policy holder, that he has paid in full, has been released, or has an offset. Swing v. Consolidated Fruit Jar Co. [N. J. Law] 63 A. 899.

48. Where court of foreign state in which company was organized authorized receiver to sue for assesements and fixed percentages due from policy holders, held that member could not defend suit against him for amount of his assessment on ground that amount of assessment was not fixed by directors. Swing v. Consolidated Fruit Jar Co. [N. J. Law] 63 A. 899. Immaterial in such case that receiver derived his authority from order of court rather than statute, and that percentage was fixed by court where it did not appear that court figured actual sum due and receiver adopted assessment, however made. ing such after the date of his contract.[52] Where the basis rate at which the policy was issued and in force is made the basis of the assessment, the assessment books of the company, when properly identified,[53] and evidence of previous assessments laid by the company on defendant's policy and paid by him without objection, are admissible.[54]

Taxation[55] of the property of domestic and foreign companies is governed by the provisions of the general and special revenue laws, and is treated elsewhere.[56]

(§ 2) B. Conditions necessary to engage in insurance business, and certification and withdrawal of right.[57]—Statutes in some states require insurance companies to deposit securities to a specified value with the state treasurer or other officer for the protection of policy holders,[58] provision being made for their return to the company depositing them on a satisfactory showing that all debts and liabilities due or which may become due on any of its outstanding contracts are paid and extinguished.[59] Mandamus to compel the surrender of such securities is not an action against the state.[60] An association organized for the purpose of securing to each of its members a burial worth a specified sum in consideration of stipulated assessments paid by them during life is an insurance association within the meaning of the Kansas statute.[61] In order to recover on a bond given by the company to the state pursuant to statute and conditioned on the prompt payment of claims arising and accruing to any person by virtue of any policy upon the life of any citizen, the plaintiff must show that there is something due him on the policy which the company has refused to pay.[62]

Joint resolution passed by general assembly at January, 1905, session, in regard to refund of illegal taxes paid by New York companies on business done in Connecticut, held to impose on insurance commissioner the duty of deciding and certifying the sums which in his judgment ought, in view of existing laws, to be refunded, and not merely to determine the amount actually paid, and hence mandamus would not lie to compel him to certify the amount paid as the amount which should be refunded. State v. Upson [Conn.] 64 A. 2. Mutual companies doing insurance business held corporations for pecuniary profit within meaning of tax laws. Iowa Mut. Tornado Ins. Ass'n v. 58. St. 1903, § 648, does not apply to foreign companies. Prewitt v. Illinois Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 93 S. W. 633. Superintendent of insurance held not personally liable for difference in value between government bonds deposited with him by insurance company and municipal bonds which he permitted to be substituted therefor, where latter met requirements of law as to value and no bad faith was shown. Raymond v. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co., 111 App. Div. 191, 97 N. Y. S. 557.

59. St. 1903, § 650, provides that treasurer and insurance commissioner may return them when satisfied of such facts. Prewitt v. Illinois Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 93 S. W. 633. Where foreign company reinsured risks of domestic company with consent of latter's stockholders and the insurance commissioner, and domestic company transferred deposited securities to foreign one, and had no outstanding debts, held that foreign company could compel surrender of securities. Id. Agreement whereby foreign company reinsured risks of domestic company held not a consolidation within Const. § 200, providing that such consolidations shall not make domestic company a foreign one. Id.

62. McCulloch v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n [Ark.] 93 S. W. 62. Where policy provided that company should not be liable on policy and that no suit should be brought thereon after the lapse of one year from insured's death, held that suit based on policy could not be maintained on bond after that time, since company then owed nothing on it. Id. Statute held designed to protect restrictions as it may see fit to impose,[65] provided such conditions are not in conflict with the constitution or laws of the United States,[66] and may regulate the form and substance of their insurance contracts and prescribe what conditions may or may not be imposed upon the insured.[67] It may require them to appoint the insurance commissioner as their agent upon whom process may be served,[68] and may prohibit them from removing cases brought against them to the Federal courts.[69] It is generally held that neither a foreign company nor its receiver can enforce contracts made with residents of a state before complying with the statutory provisions regulating such companies,[70] though there seems to be some conflict of authority in this regard.[71]

66. Restrictions and conditions imposed by Rev. St. 1898, §§ 1220, 1947-1954, held not to contravene constitution. Presbyterian Ministers' Fund v. Thomas, 126 Wis. 281, 105 N. W. 801.

67. May require all representations or warranties upon which company proposes to rely to be embodied in or attached to policy. Rauen v. Prudential Ins. Co., 129 Iowa, 725, 106 N. W. 198. State of Missouri held to have right to make Rev. St. 7890, which in effect cuts off defenses based upon false representations unless matter misrepresented contributed to death of the insured, applicable to foreign companies, particularly where they came into state after its enactment. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Riggs, 27 S. Ct. 126.

68. Provision in power of attorney that his authority should "continue in force irrevocable" so long as any liability of the company remained outstanding in the state held not to render such power irrevocable as to nonresident policy holders, and hence service on commissioner gave court no jurisdiction of suits by residents on claims assigned to them by nonresident policy holders after such revocation. Hunter v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 184 N. Y. 136, 76 N. E. 1072. Authorization of service on commissioner being a condition precedent to right of company to transact business in state, company could not escape consequences of its agreement by any deceptive or apparent withdrawal and attempted revocation so long as transaction of such business actually continued. Id. Company having in good faith attempted to withdraw, held that its acts in dealing with contracts previously issued and settling liabilities thereunder did not amount to such a continuance of an ordinary, active, and substantial insurance business as would be necessary to keep alive power of attorney. Id. Service of process on agent appointed to receive it, and after company had ceased to do business in state and had revoked appointment, held to have given court no jurisdiction of suit by resident on contract made in another state with resident of latter and by him assigned to plaintiff. Hunter v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. S. 888.

69. Ky. St. § 631, providing for revocation of license on removal, held valid. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 200 U. S. 446, 50 Law. Ed. 545, afg. [Ky.] 83 S. W. 611.

70. Policy issued by foreign company before complying with St. c. 73 is void ab initio and cannot be enforced either by it or its receiver. Swing v. Thomas, 120 Ill. App. 235. Subsequent compliance does not render such contract valid. Id. Rules apply regardless of where contract was made, if made with citizen of state and covering property within the state. Id. Receiver of foreign company, which issued policy covering property in Michigan without having complied with laws of that state, held not entitled to recover assessment levied as provided by policy to pay losses, regardless of where contract was made. Comp. Laws §§ 5157, 5162, construed. Swing v. Cameron [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 419, 108 N. W. 506. In view of Rev. St. 1898, § 1978, prohibiting foreign companies which have not complied with statutory provisions in relation thereto from making insurance contracts with residents, held that such company could not recover on premium note given for policy. Presbyterian Ministers' Fund v. Thomas, 126 Wis. 281, 105 N. W. 801. Contract of foreign corporation with resident being in conflict with letter and policy of laws of forum, held that comity did not require its enforcement. Id.

71. Citizen may make a contract of insurance with a foreign company in a foreign state covering property in state where such citizen resides, and such company, or its receiver or trustee, may sue thereon for assessments in the last named state though it has not complied with its laws regulating foreign corporations, a denial of the right to do so being a violation of the 14th amendment to the U. S. Constitution. Swing v. Brister & Co. [Miss.] 40 So. 146. Policy insuring property in Mississippi written at home office of foreign company in Ohio, and applied for by insured through a firm of brokers in Indiana who were his agents, the company not doing business in Mississippi and having no agents there, held an Ohio contract. Id. The bringing of a suit by the trustee for creditors and policy holders of an insolvent foreign mutual company to collect assessments imposed by the courts of a sister state is not the transacting of insurance business within the meaning of Code 1880, § 1073, and Laws 1890, p. 15, c. 4, re-

It is sometimes specifically provided that compliance is not necessary to enable such companies to deal in notes, bonds, mortgages, and other securities.[72] The refusal of the insurance commissioner to grant authority to a foreign company to do business in the state after the expiration of a former permit does not raise a Federal question.[73] A receiver cannot be appointed for a foreign mutual company which has no assets in the state other than the contingent liability of members to pay future assessments.[74] When a policy holder in such a company is sought to be held liable for a ratable proportion of its losses and expenses, under the laws of the state wherein the company was chartered, the plaintiff must affirmatively show by his pleadings that the laws of that state impose upon the policyholder a statutory liability to meet the demand upon him.[75]

§ 4. Agents and solicitors for insurance. A. Distinctions and kinds of agency.[76]

(§ 4) B. The right to negotiate insurance and regulations thereabout.[77]—Statutes in many states require agents to procure a license from a designated state officer[78] and make it a crime to act as agent without having done so.[79] No recovery can be had on contracts of employment made in violation of such statutes.[80]

quiring foreign companies to procure certificates from the auditor before doing business in the state. Id.

72. Fact that foreign company had not obtained permit to do business in state as required by Code § 1637, held not to preclude it from suing and recovering on a bond and mortgage executed to it to secure a loan. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 130 Iowa, 378, 106 N. W. 934.

73. Law required annual renewal of permit. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 200 U. S. 446, 50 Law. Ed. 545.

74. Levying of assessment does not make member a debtor to the association authorizing it to sue him if he does not pay, but the only effect of nonpayment is to relieve association from liability to member, and receiver would have no greater rights in this regard than the association. Blackwell v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n [N. C.] 53 S. E. 833. Court could not through receiver compel payment of assessments to be appropriated to claim of plaintiff for return of assessments paid by him in violation of terms of contract, which impresses assessments with trust for benefits of all policy holders and requires a certain part of them to be set apart for specified purposes. Id.

75. Swing v. Farrar, 124 Ga. 951, 53 S. E. 269. Petition in action by trustee, appointed by court of Ohio on dissolution of Ohio mutual fire company to represent stockholders and creditors, to collect assessment directed to be made by Ohio court for purpose of paying debts, etc., held insufficient for failure to show that laws of that state relied on were applicable to such company. Id. Since demurrer to declaration in action by receiver of foreign mutual company appointed by foreign court to collect assessment admitted allegations that company was duly incorporated, held that declaration was not objectionable for failure to set out various steps necessary to constitute such due incorporation, such as assumption by insured of his liability in writing and the fixing of the amount of the contingent liability. Swing v. Consolidated Fruit Jar Co. [N. J. Law] 63 A. 899.

78. Under Laws 1902, p. 62, c. 59, no one may represent any character of insurance company unless the same has procured from the insurance commissioner a license to do business within the state, and unless such agent has himself received a certificate entitling him to solicit and write insurance. Fikes v. State [Miss.] 39 So. 783. Applies to a foreign company which agrees, in consideration of the payment of weekly dues, to provide members with sick and burial benefits. Id. Issuance of permit is a condition precedent to the exercise on the part of any agent of any of the powers of such agency, and such permit and license is the sole proof under the law of his authority to engage in insurance business in the state. Id. Uncontradicted testimony of commissioner and certified copies of records of his office held competent evidence in prosecution for unlawfully assuming to act as insurance agent, and conclusive evidence that neither company nor agent was lawfully authorized to operate in state. Id. The provisions of § 283, Rev. St., making it unlawful for one not duly authorized by the insurance company and licensed by the superintendent of insurance to procure, receive, or forward applications for insurance in any company, are not applicable to a contract by an insurance agent to pay another a commission on premiums received from persons recommended by him. Connelly v. Pickard, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 294.

79. Affidavit on which prosecution for unlawfully assuming to act as an insurance agent was based held fatally defective for failure to show what particular violation of Laws 1902, p. 62, c. 59, was intended to be charged, since that statute condemns numerous different acts by distinct provisions and prescribes varying punishments therefor. Fikes v. State [Miss.] 39 So. 783.

80. Subagent who had not obtained certificate from superintendent of insurance as required by Laws 1892, p. 1972, c. 690, § 91, held not entitled to recover commissions on his wrongful discharge, he not having the legal capacity to perform. Wyatt v. Mc-

(§ 4) C. Rights and liabilities of agents.[81]—The general rules of contract and agency apply as between the company and its agents.[82] One cannot act as agent for both parties where their interests conflict.[83] Writings relating to the same subject-matter, between the same parties, and delivered at the same time, are to be construed as one instrument in so far as they can stand together.[84] Cases construing provisions as to the duration of the contract,[85] commissions,[86] and advances,[87] will be found in the notes. Agency contracts contravening a penal statute against rebating are void, and the courts will not assist either party in enforcing them against the other.[88] Illegitimate acts done outside of the terms of a valid contract

Namee, 101 N. Y. S. 790. General agents who had paid him advance commissions pursuant to the contract and with knowledge of the fact that he had not procured such certificate held not entitled to recover same. Id. Complaint in action on contract of employment to solicit life insurance need not allege that plaintiff has secured certificate of authority from superintendent of insurance as required by statute, failure to do so being a matter of defense to be alleged in the answer. Wyatt v. McNamee, 98 N. Y. S. 749.

Security Trust & Life Ins. Co. v. Ellsworth [Wis.] 109 N. W. 125.

83. Employe of certain firm, who was also the agent of the insurer, issued a policy to insured in which a clause was subsequently inserted making loss payable to said firm. Agent was not a creditor of the insured and had no interest in his business. Held that he was not the agent of the insured. German Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, Wilson & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 798, 92 S. W. 1068.

85. Contract held to give company right to withdraw from district for which it had employed plaintiff to act as its agent, and its liability to plaintiff thereunder ceased on such withdrawal. National Life Ins. Co. v. Anderson [Ky.] 92 S. W. 976. Contract held neither expressly nor impliedly to prohibit agent from resigning after he had made a reasonable effort to successfully manage the business and failed. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co. v. Ellsworth [Wis.] 109 N. W. 125.

86. Broker held not entitled, under his contract, to commissions on insurance issued to railroads through other brokers where he never furnished to company schedules of property on which insurance was desired so that it could formulate a bid thereon. Helmick v. Western Assur. Co., 121 Ill. App. 281. Where agent resigned after procuring application and another agent subsequently induced applicant to apply for double the amount of insurance contemplated by the original application, held that first agent was entitled to commissions on basis of amount of first application, it appearing that he alone was responsible for placing that amount of insurance. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Rilling, 121 Ill. App. 169. He was not, however, entitled to commission on additional amount, it appearing that he had nothing to do with procuring it. Id. Questions asked in support of theory that agent's resignation was an abandonment of compensation for services previously rendered, even though such services contributed to insurance evidenced by policies subsequently issued, held properly excluded. Id. Resignation of agent held to terminate his right to renewal commissions. Scott v. Travelers' Ins. Co. [Md.] 63 A. 377. In determining the net profits of the monthly premium business of plaintiffs' agency on which their commissions were based, held that all losses paid for disabilities beginning before the termination of the agency were chargeable against the business as debits, whether the disabilities ceased before the date of such termination or continued thereafter. Perry v. U. S. Health & Acc. Ins. Co., 73 N. H. 608, 63 A. 489. Agent held not entitled to commissions on second year premiums where parties by mutual consent terminated their relations at end of first year. Butler v. New York Life Ins. Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 1119. Contract held to entitle agent to commissions on premium paid after he had left service so that company was not relieved from liability therefor by payment to broker. Watson v. Travelers' Ins. Co. [Wash.] 86 P. 659.

87. Contract construed to be that mortgage given to secure advances should be paid out of renewal commissions only. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co. v. Ellsworth [Wis.] 109 N. W. 125. Agency agreement whereby agent was to turn over commissions in satisfaction of future advances held not to supersede previous agreement whereby commissions were to be used to pay note and mortgage given to secure past advances, but the two, not being inconsistent, would both be given effect. Id. Liability of agent on mortgage given to secure advances and which it was agreed should be paid out of commissions held terminated where he lawfully exercised his right to resign. Id. Contract held not to mean that advances made by company to agent should be repaid only by moneys coming into its hands to which agent was entitled, called "equities" in contract, and that therefore court properly refused to charge that note given by agent for difference between advances and "equities" was without consideration. Whitestone v. American Ins. Union [C. C. A.] 143 F. 862.

88. Where company assents to rebating of will not, however, vitiate it.[89] Where an agent breaches one of two contracts made between the same parties and at about the same time, the later of which was demanded by him as a condition of executing the first, and the observance of both of which is obligatory, he is in no position to sue the company for an alleged breach of the later contract.[90] An agent who, at the time of resigning, specifies certain grounds for so doing is estopped, in a subsequent action against the company for breach of the contract of employment, from alleging other grounds therefor.[91] A remedy fixed by the contract in case of a breach is exclusive.[92] If the company prevents performance or puts it out of its power to perform, the agent may treat the contract as terminated and at once recover whatever damages he has sustained thereby.[93] Performance is excused when made impossible by decree of court.[94] The receipt and retention of an account and a sum remitted as the balance claimed by the company to be due does not estop the agent to claim additional items where he notifies the company at the time that the statements are not correct and will not be accepted as final.[95] An agreement whereby a company purchasing the assets of another assumes and agrees to pay all its valid contractual liabilities renders it liable for damages for a breach of the contract of the seller with an agent resulting from the consummation of the contract of sale.[96]

Where a bond given by an agent to the company to secure the faithful performance of his contract of agency contains no description of the contract, except a statement of the agent's appointment, parol evidence is admissible to prove the terms of the contract for the purpose of showing the nature and extent of the surety's liability.[97] Any substantial change in the contract releases the surety if made without his knowledge.[98] premiums in violation of St. 1903, § 656, it cannot collect from the agent the whole amount of the premium which he should have collected from the insured. National Life Ins. Co. v. Anderson [Ky.] 92 S. W. 976.

89. Where company accepted services of agent with knowledge that he had given rebates, held that it could not, after termination of contract, refuse to pay him for legitimate services rendered thereunder after the illegal acts were done. National Life Ins. Co. v. Anderson [Ky.] 92 S. W. 976.

90, 91. Kansas Union Life Ins. Co. v. Burman [C. C. A.] 141 F. 835.

92. Plaintiff's contract with company provided that, if it should end for any cause, company would pay him commissions on renewed policies as same were paid. Company sold its business to another company which guaranteed performance of plaintiff's contract, but before any renewal commissions were received transfer was declared invalid by courts and parties were placed in statu quo. Held that plaintiff could not sue transferee for estimated value of renewal policies on ground that it had wrongfully rendered contract impossible of performance. Kansas Union Life Ins. Co. v. Burman [C. C. A.] 141 F. 835.

93. Crowell v. Northwestern Life & Sav. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 962. Sale and transfer by company of all its business and assets and going out of business held to put it out of its power to perform contract with agents whereby it agreed to pay them a certain percentage of the amount of outstanding premium notes when they were paid, since it rendered policies and notes voidable at election of policy holders, and notes thereby ceased to be absolute and became conditional. Complaint held to state cause of action. Id. Presumed that makers of such notes were solvent. Id. Burden held to be on purchasing company, sued by virtue of assumption of liability, to plead and prove, on issue of damages, the facts with reference to the election of the policy holders to continue the policies with it. Id.

94. Two companies entered into agreement whereby business and policies of one were taken over by the other. Agent of former took service with latter under agreement whereby it was to guaranty his commissions on renewal premiums. Before any such commissions were collected transfer agreement was declared invalid by court at suit of stockholders, statu quo was re-established, transferee was enjoined from collecting renewal premiums, and agent was enjoined from paying same except to transferor. Held that vis major preventing performance was intervention of court and its decree rendered performance impossible. Kansas Union Life Ins. Co. v. Burman [C. C. A.] 141 F. 835.

98. Change in contract of agent whereby he was to receive a commission, pay office expenses, and be responsible for premiums due on policies written by him or his subagents, instead of receiving a fixed salary

Special agents must act strictly within the limits of their powers.[99] The company is not ordinarily responsible for premiums paid to one having no authority to represent it.[1] By statute in some states the agent of any foreign company which fails to comply with the laws of the state is made personally liable on all contracts of insurance made by or through him, directly or indirectly, for or on its behalf.[2]

The usual rules of construction,[3] and as to the measure of damages for a breach,[4] apply to contracts made with brokers for the procuring of insurance.

and the company paying expenses, held a substantial one which released surety on his bond when made without his knowledge. Germania Fire Ins. Co. v. Lange [Mass.] 78 N. E. 746.

99. Local soliciting agent appointed by general state agent to take applications and send them to him held to have no authority to appoint subagents. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Reynolds [Ark.] 98 S. W. 963.

1. Application was taken and binding receipt issued by, and first premium paid to, one having no authority to represent company. Application was forwarded through special and general agents to company and was rejected. Neither special nor general agent nor company knew that premium had been paid or receipt issued, nor was there any evidence authorizing finding that company held out person to whom payment was made as its agent. Held that such person was alone liable for amount collected by him. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Reynolds [Ark.] 98 S. W. 963.

2. Act May 1, 1876, § 48 (P. L. 66), applies to contracts made outside of the state. Bartlett v. Rothschild, 214 Pa. 421, 63 A. 1030. Evidence held to sustain burden of proving defendant's agency. Id. Evidence held to show that what was done was transaction of business, even if section only applies to agents of foreign companies transacting business in the state. Id. Where vessel insured was owned by residents of state and sailed from port of state, held that it was property, within the state when contract was made, if it was necessary that it should have been. Id.

3. Where contract required broker to furnish defendant a certain amount of fire insurance per year and to keep same good during the year, the defendant to pay therefor a certain per cent. on the amount as commission, held that, where a portion of the insurance so obtained and paid for was canceled during the year, broker was obliged to furnish other insurance for a similar amount without any further payment of commissions by defendant. Tanenbaum v. Federal Match Co., 111 App. Div. 416, 97 N. Y. S. 1101.

4. Where owner entered into contract with plaintiff whereby latter was to procure fire policies for him, but refused to accept policies when tendered to him before date on which by their terms they became effective, held that judgment awarding plaintiff full commissions which he would have received if premiums had been paid for entire period covered by terms of policies was erroneous. Weingrad v. Kletzky, 101 N. Y. S. 588.

5. See 6 C. L. 78.

6. Held to have insurable interest: One who has purchased property conditionally, the vendor retaining title until purchase money is paid. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Enoch [Ark.] 96 S. W. 393. One to whom goods are consigned for sale on commission and who is required to account to the owner for all goods received. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Herpolsheimer [Neb.] 109 N. W. 160. Bailee, mortgagee, or other lienholder upon property. American Cereal Co. v. Western Assur. Co., 148 F. 77. Estate by the curtesy initiate given husband in wife's realty on birth of child, which was an insurable interest, held abolished by Const. 1874, only the possibility of an estate by the curtesy consummate being left. Lloyd v. Planters' Mut. Ins. Co. [Ark.] 97 S. W. 658. Under Civ. Code 1895, § 2090, parent has such an insurable interest in separate property of his children as to authorize him to make a contract of insurance in their behalf though he personally has no interest whatever in the property, but such contract, to be valid, must be made by the parent in his representative capacity and not as an individual since he has no insurable interest in the latter capacity. Fox v. Queen Ins. Co., 124 Ga. 948, 53 S. E. 271. Where policy is issued to parent individually, he must prove an individual insurable interest in order to recover. Id. Instruction in action on builder's policy held not erroneous in that it referred to the insured building as "the property of the plaintiff," since, under his contract, plaintiff was liable for any loss resulting before completion of the building, and hence had an insurable interest in the building and therefore a qualified interest in the realty, though a large part of the contract price had been paid to him. King v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 195 Mo. 290, 92 S. W. 892.

Held not to have insurable interest: Realty belonging to plaintiff was sold to satisfy judgment and purchased by him in his wife's name, he and another becoming sureties on her bond for purchase money. Held that suretyship did not give plaintiff an insurable interest in such property, he never having had any lien thereon nor any control or custody thereof as security for his liability. Lloyd v. Planters' Mut. Ins. Co. [Ark.] 97 S. W. 658.

Life insurance.[8]—Life policies issued to one having no insurable interest in the life of the insured are in the nature of wagering contracts, and hence are void as contrary to public policy.[9] One may, however, insure his own life in favor of another having no insurable interest, provided he acts in good faith and pays the premiums himself.[10] By statute in some states the beneficiary must have an insurable interest when assessments are paid by any person other than the insured and without his written consent.[11] If the policy is originally valid it is generally held that it is not rendered void by reason of the cessation of interest in the subject of insurance.[12] One who advances money to the insurer to pay premiums is not precluded from recovering the same from the party for whose benefit the payment was made by reason of the invalidity of the policy.[13] The right to assign policies to persons having no insurable interest is treated in a subsequent section.[14]

§ 6. Application.[15]—The company has the right to provide a form of application for its business, to require that it be used by its agents and those desiring insurance of it, and that a separate application be made and signed for each policy,[16] and may reject all applications made otherwise than as required by its rules and regulations.[17] Questions and answers in the application will be construed liberally in favor of the insured.[18] The answer "no" may be construed to mean not any or none.[19]

not delivered, for which he may be held liable." Insured subsequently entered into agreement whereby it sold all glass manufactured or to be manufactured by it within a specified time to a certain company, it being provided that glass should become property of vendee as soon as manufactured, that it was to be stored in insured's warehouses leased to vendee for that purpose, that insured was to be responsible for all loss except loss by fire, and that glass was to be insured by vendee, the vendor to pay the premiums. Held that vendee was vested with title and entire insurable interest in case of loss by fire, and hence that insured could not recover. Burke v. Continental Ins. Co., 184 N. Y. 77, 76 N. E. 1086. Person holding title under land contract held not deprived of his insurable interest by agreement to surrender contract on payment of specified sum, where property was destroyed before day fixed for consummation of contract and on which it was consummated, and he was entitled to possession until such consummation, since title did not pass until date fixed. § 7. The contract of insurance in general, and general rules for its interpretation. Definitions and distinctions.[20]—The contract of insurance is a contract of indemnity.[21] A contract whereby a company or association agrees to pay a certain sum of money on the death of a member, in consideration of the payment by him of fixed sums at fixed periods, is a life insurance policy by whatever name it may be called.[22] A charter provision that the business of the company shall be conducted on the mutual plan means that the premiums paid by each member for the insurance of his property or life constitute a common fund devoted to the payment of any losses that may occur.[23]

Essentials and validity; acceptance.[24]—Statutes in many states prescribe a standard form of fire policy and prohibit the incorporation into such contracts of any other provisions than those therein prescribed.[25] It is also frequently provided that the entire contract must be expressed in the policy,[26] that certain classes of policies and applications therefor must be printed in type not smaller than brevier,[27] and that the policies of assessment companies must specify the exact sum payable thereunder on the happening of the contingencies insured against.[28] Mutual fire companies sometimes require an appraisement of the property before a policy is issued.[29] The right to recover for a loss is not affected by the fact that the insured is a stockholder in the company issuing the policy.[30]

Leg. N. 978, 106 N. W. 860. Answers to questions written by medical examiner must be construed most strongly against company. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Ass'n v. Meyer, 118 Ill. App. 155. Answer "ten" to question as to age of applicant's deceased brother held not a representation that brother was ten years old. Id. Word "no" held not an answer to question as to whether certain of applicant's relations had had certain diseases. Id. Where application signed in blank was to be filled in by agent from information in previous application, held that answers in second application were not such necessary inferences from those in the first as to be regarded as statement of applicant. Henry v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 100 Me. 523, 62 A. 600.

19. Negative form of question as to use of explosives and negative answer held not to constitute two negatives amounting to an affirmative statement that explosives would be used. Employers' liability policy. Columbian Exposition Salvage Co. v. Union Casualty & Surety Co., 220 Ill. 172, 77 N. E. 128.

20. See 6 C. L. 80.

21. Contract whereby company undertakes to defend physicians against suits for malpractice, but does not assume or agree to pay any judgments rendered against them in such suits, is not an insurance contract. State v. Laylin, 73 Ohio, 90, 76 N. E. 567.

22. Certificate issued by society calling itself a fraternal mutual benefit society. Cosmopolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Koegel, 104 Va. 619, 52 S. E. 166. Society held to be doing life insurance business and not to be a purely fraternal benefit association within the meaning of Acts 1897-98, p. 734, c. 688, defining and regulating such societies. Id.

24. See 6 C. L. 80.

25. Standard form of fire policy prescribed by Gen. Laws 1895, p. 417, c. 175, as amended by Gen. Laws 1897, p. 468, c. 254, contains the only terms and conditions which can be incorporated in a contract of fire insurance, the only changes which may be made in the statutory form prescribed in the former statute being those specifically authorized by § 53 of the latter. Wild Rice Lumber Co. v. Royal Ins. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 871. Section 52 of the act of 1895, providing that the conditions of insurance shall be stated in full, etc., though not repealed by the act of 1897, cannot be used to restrict the express requirements of the latter act and does not authorize insertion of other provisions than those allowed thereby. Id. Cannot attach clause whereby insured warrants the maintenance of a designated clear space about the insured premises. Id. Provision of § 53, subd. 2, of the act of 1897, that company may attach permits for the maintenance of sprinkling "or other improvements" held not to authorize such a clause. Id. Since statute expressly authorizes company to print or use forms of description and specification of the property insured, such "space clause," though void as a warranty, may contain effective language limiting the general descriptive language of the policy. Id.

26. Ky. St. 1903, § 656, does not apply to note given by insured for money borrowed on policy from insurer according to provisions of policy. Jagoe v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 96 S. W. 598. Provision in such note authorizing issuance of paid up policy if it was not paid at maturity or if premiums were not paid held not inconsistent with policy. Id.

27. St. 1903, § 679, applies only to co-operative companies and not to old line companies. Provident Sav. Life Ins. Co. v. Elliott's Ex'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 659.

28. Provision in by-laws limiting indemnity to be paid in case of disability resulting from illness to a period of ten weeks held not in conflict with Rev. St. 1899, § 7903. Courtney v. Fidelity Mut. Aid Ass'n [Mo. App.] 94 S. W. 768.

In the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary,[31] an oral contract of insurance is valid.[32] Statutes in some states require contracts of fire insurance to be in writing and signed by the insurer or by some person authorized to sign for it.[33] The usual and proper place for the signature is at the end of the matter which it attests, but it is sufficient if, with intent to constitute a signing, it is inserted in the writing at another place.[34]

In order to constitute a valid contract of insurance the minds of the parties must meet as to all its essential terms.[35] The application is a mere offer which must be accepted[36] unconditionally[37] in order to constitute a binding contract, and may

29. Constitution required appraisement by trustees for purpose of protecting company against overinsurance. Shortly after policy was issued it became void by reason of a transfer of the property. Held that a new appraisement was not a condition precedent to the validity of an oral contract in favor of the transferee, it not appearing that property had deteriorated in value. Posey County Fire Ass'n v. Hogan [Ind. App.] 77 N. E. 670.

31. U. S. Internal Revenue Act (Act June 13, 1898, 30 St. 448) requiring stamps on insurance policies held not to render oral contracts void. King v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 195 Mo. 290, 92 S. W. 892.

32. Posey County Fire Ass'n v. Hogan [Ind. App.] 77 N. E. 670; Kimbro v. New York Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 1025; Whitman v. Milwaukee Fire Ins. Co., 128 Wis. 124, 107 N. W. 291. Particularly in view of Rev. St. 1899, § 974, making parol contracts binding on corporations if made by their authorized agents. King v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 195 Mo. 290, 92 S. W. 892. Provisions in charter or by-laws of company requiring the signature of the president to all policies, but containing no prohibitory words, do not prevent the making of oral contracts. Id. Such holding held not an impairment of obligation of contract in that agent had no power, under his contract of agency, to enter into oral contract. Id.

33. Civ. Code 1895, § 2089, providing the contracts must be in writing, held to contemplate signature. Delaware Ins. Co. v. Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 330.

34. Allegations of petition in action on contract of reinsurance held sufficient to withstand demurrer on the ground that paper was not signed, where there was no signature at the end of the policy, but it commenced with name of company and its general agent, and proceeded "do insure" the plaintiff, etc. Delaware Ins. Co. v. Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 330. Vacancy permit signed by reinsuring company acting as defendant's agent held an acknowledgment of the policy of the number stated therein, so that the signature thereto would supply the lack of signing the policy so referred to. Id. Allegations as to vacancy permit signed by company reinsuring defendant held to sufficiently show that such company was defendant's agent in so doing. Id.

35. Parties must have agreed on all essential elements, viz., the subject-matter insured, the risks covered, the amount of the insurance, the duration of the risk, and the premium to be paid. Posey County Fire Ass'n v. Hogan [Ind. App.] 77 N. E. 670. Evidence held to sustain finding of valid oral contract. Id. Evidence held to show that there was no valid contract entered into between the parties covering liability for accident to plaintiff's employes while engaged in certain work, agent's agreement to bind risk being of limited duration. Bradley v. Standard Life & Acc. Ins. Co., 112 App. Div. 536, 98 N. Y. S. 797. Where sole issue in case was raised by conflicting testimony as to whether oral contracts were entered into covering property from time of application until written policy was issued, held that question was one for the jury. Grossbaum Ceramic Art Syndicate v. German Ins. Co., 213 Pa. 506, 62 A. 1107. Instruction calling attention to correspondence between plaintiff and defendant's brokers bearing on question whether oral contract had been completed held proper, that being the only issue in the case. Id. Charge in case where sole issue was as to whether there was binding oral contract held not unfair or partial to defendant or argumentative in its favor. Id. Must meet as to time of commencement of the risk. Whitman v. Milwaukee Fire Ins. Co., 128 Wis. 124, 107 N. W. 291. Evidence held insufficient to establish an oral contract in praesenti, but to show that only contract in contemplation was one to be evidenced by policy issued in usual way. Id. In order to be enforceable a parol contract of insurance, as distinguished from a parol contract to insure, must not be executory but must take effect in praesenti. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Whitman [Ohio] 79 N. E. 459. Evidence held insufficient to show parol contract binding on defendant. Id.

36. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Levy's Adm'r [Ky.] 92 S. W. 325. The mere mailing and filing of the application can never be deemed an acceptance. McGrath v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 54 S. E. 218. Instruction held erroneous as a charge on the facts. Id. There must be an actual acceptance, the mere fact that the company fails to notify the insured of the rejection of the application being insufficient to raise a presumption of acceptance. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Whitman [Ohio] 79 N. E. 459. Waiver of provision in application that no liability should be incurred until application should be approved, the policy issued, and the premium paid while applicant was in good health, held not to deprive company of right to reject application. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Elliott's Ex'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 659. Approval by medical board of report of local board showing applicant to be a suitable risk held not an acceptance of application, the medical department having no authority to accept applications or grant insurance. Id. Contract is consummated upon the unconditional acceptance of the application of the insured by the insurer. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Whitman [Ohio] 79 N. E. 459. When accepted applicant is to be deemed insured upon terms and conditions of the application. Kimbro v. New York Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 1025. Nonpayment of premium for fire policy held not to defeat recovery where policy was completed and became executed contract and right of cancellation was never exercised. Concordia Fire Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 121 Ill. App. 35.

be withdrawn at any time before acceptance.[38] Temporary insurance is sometimes provided for pending acceptance or rejection.[39] Where it is agreed that the contract is not to become effective until the performance of certain specified conditions, compliance therewith must be shown.[40]

37. Deceased applied for policy for $10,000 and subsequently paid premium to agent. Before such payment was made, however, company rejected application for that amount but approved it for $5,000 and issued policy for that amount which it sent to agent. Latter did not receive it until after applicant's death but delivered it to applicant's son. Held no contract for any amount. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Levy's Adm'r [Ky.] 92 S. W. 325. Where application for policy under which insured could change beneficiary was rejected, but company prepared two new applications in accordance with their rules, attached each to a policy which did not provide for change of beneficiary, and forwarded them to agent to be delivered when applications were signed and premiums paid, and agent did not receive them until after death of applicant so that applications were never signed or policies delivered, held that there was no contract. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Elliott's Ex'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 659.

38. Where agent to whom application and premium note were delivered received them with agreement and understanding that they were to be deposited in the bank until plaintiff "was satisfied that everything was right," held that there was no completed contract for insurance but the negotiations were still pending, and hence plaintiff had a right to withdraw therefrom and recall the note if he was not satisfied with the proposed contract. Hubbard v. State Life Ins. Co., 129 Iowa, 13, 105 N. W. 332.

39. Binding receipt held intended to effect present contract of insurance binding from date of receipt, which would be superseded by policy when issued or terminated by rejection of application and notice to insured, so that company was liable where insured died before policy was actually issued or delivered, notwithstanding provision in application that insurance should not take effect until policy was issued. Starr v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 41 Wash. 228, 83 P. 116.

40. Payment of premium: Instruction requiring verdict for plaintiff if jury found that first premium was paid at any time before insured's death, and for defendant if they found that it was not, approved. Mutual Industrial Indemnity Co. v. Perkins [Ark.] 98 S. W. 709. An instruction that issuance of receipt for premium was not conclusive as to payment, but would authorize finding of payment in absence of countervailing evidence, and that when other evidence tended to show delivery without payment question was for jury on all the evidence, approved. Id. Evidence held to require submission to jury of question whether first premium had been paid. Id. Applicant held not bound to pay agreed premium until policy was issued and ready for delivery, so that failure to pay did not prevent there being a valid oral contract in the meantime. Posey County Fire Ass'n v. Hogan [Ind. App.] 77 N. E. 670. Where application provided that policy should not take effect until premium was paid, and it appeared that premium had never been paid and that no note or obligation had been given therefor, and that application and medical examination, which had been deposited in postoffice by agent addressed to company, were withdrawn therefrom by him on learning of applicant's death, and hence were never delivered to company, held that there was no contract. Torpey v. National Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 92 S. W. 982. Evidence held insufficient to sustain finding of payment of premium. Shoemaker v. Commercial Assur. Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 316. Evidence that soliciting agent and applicant agreed that contract was not to become obligatory on company until part of premium, for full amount of which applicant had given his note, had been paid in cash, and that no payment was made until three days prior to applicant's death, and while he was suffering from his last illness, and that payment was then made by third persons, evidently in contemplation of his death, held not to show binding oral contract, even if agent was authorized to make one. Harriman v. New Yok Life Ins. Co. [Wash.] 86 P. 656.

Delivery and payment of premium during good health: Provision that no obligation is assumed unless the insured is alive and in sound health when the policy is delivered is valid. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Willis [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 560. Evidence showing conclusively that between date of application and delivery of policy insured had been adjudged insane and committed to an asylum, held to relieve company from liability. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Willis [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 560. Contract held not to have been completed, policy not having been delivered or premium paid. Hill's Adm'r v. Penn. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 790, 90 S. W. 544. Compliance with provision in application that no liability is to be incurred until application is approved, policy issued, and premium paid while insured is alive and in good health, is necessary in order to fix liability on the company. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Elliott's Ex'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 659. Where application provided that policy

Some courts hold that delivery is conclusive proof of the completion of the contract in the absence of fraud;[41] others that the contract is prima facie incomplete before delivery.[42] Delivery is largely a question of intention.[43] In order to make a valid delivery there must be an intention on the part of the person executing the policy to give it legal effect as a completed instrument, which must be evidenced by some word or act indicating that the insurer has put it beyond his legal control, and which must be acquiesced in by the insurer.[44] Where nothing remains to be done by the insured, the mailing of the policy duly executed to an agent of the company for delivery to the insured constitutes a delivery, though insured dies before it is received.[45] In the absence of proof to the contrary the presumption is that the insured accepted the policy delivered to him as a binding contract of indemnity.[46] The rule that possession of the policy by the insured is presumptive evidence of delivery does not apply where upon the face of the instrument some act remains to be done to make it complete.[47]

should not be binding unless insured was alive and in sound health at noon upon its date, held that no recovery could be had thereon where it appeared that he was not in sound health on such date. Carmichael v. Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 602. Finding of jury that insured was in good health when first premium was paid not disturbed on appeal. Fidelity Title & Trust Co. v. Illinois Life Ins. Co., 213 Pa. 415, 63 A. 51.

Acceptance of application by home office: Where application for insurance in mutual company provided that there should be no contract until it was accepted by home office, and under the statute insurance could only be issued to members and there was no evidence that agent had authority to make or deliver contracts, held that his declarations made at the time he received application and delivered receipt that the property was insured from the time the receipt was given were inadmissible. McGrath v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 54 S. E. 218.

41. Is conclusive proof that the contract is completed and is an acknowledgment that the premium was properly paid during good health, and in such case the policy takes effect from its date. Raburn v. Pennsylvania Casualty Co. [N. C.] 54 S. E. 283.

42. In the absence of an oral agreement for insurance prior to the taking effect of the policy, if the policy has been duly executed but has not passed out of the possession of the insurer or his agent and no payment of premium has been made, the contract is prima facie incomplete. Party asserting that there is contract has burden of showing that policy became operative by intention of both parties. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Whitman [Ohio] 79 N. E. 459. Where there was no oral agreement for insurance to take effect prior to issue of policy, evidence that, upon application for insurance at regular rate, agent wrote up and countersigned policy and, without parting with possession thereof, wrote applicant that he had "issued" policy but would hold it until he had time to hear from company, and company thereafter rejected risk, whereupon agent forwarded policy to company, held not to show consummated contract. Id. In order to establish the relation of insurer and insured as existing before the delivery of the policy, the plaintiff must do so by full and clear proof. Id.

45. Where applicant pays first premium to agent, contract is consummated when company accepts application, executes policy, and deposits it in mail directed to agent for delivery to applicant. Kilborn v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 861.

46. Presumption may be overcome. Helbig v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 120 Ill. App. 58.

47. Amos-Richia v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 143 Mich. 684, 13 Det. Leg. N. 129, 107 N. W. 707. Where policy provided that it should not take effect until the first premium was paid while insured was in good health, and it appeared that internal revenue stamps required by law were not affixed, though placed in envelope attached to policy with directions to agent to attach them when put in force, held that burden was on plaintiff to prove delivery and payment of premium though policy was found among insured's papers after his death. Id.

48. Agent having power to issue policy on all cotton in warehouse held to have power to issue one covering a portion of it. Phoenix Assur. Co. v. Boyett [Ark.] 90 S. W. 284. A new building in process of construction held not an "unoccupied building" within the meaning of a list of prohibited risks furnished agents. Harris v. North American Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 361, 77 N. E. 493. Application provided that no statements or promises made by person soliciting or taking application should be binding on company unless reduced to writing and presented to officers of company at home office in application. General agent of company authorized to procure applications and forward them to home office, concurrently with taking plaintiff's application, executed and delivered to him a writing to the effect that he was to examine applicants for the company until fees equaled amount of first year's premium for which insured had given notes. Company issued policy without knowledge thereof. Agent then sold notes and remitted proceeds, less commission, to parent scope of his authority,[49] notwithstanding limitations on his authority of which the person dealing with him has no knowledge.[50]

Construction.[51]—The policy may contain conditions not found in the application, but outside of an independent agreement the application and policy together usually form the contract.[52] If there is a variance between the two, the policy controls.[53] By statute in some states the application cannot be considered a part of the contract or be received in evidence in an action thereon unless a correct copy thereof is attached to the policy.[54] A copy of the application is sometimes required company. Plaintiff was appointed examiner but no applicants presented themselves to him for examination. He was compelled to pay notes which were in hands of bona fide holder. Held that he could not recover amount thereof from defendant, the agent having no authority to make contract binding company to furnish any applicants, even if contract could be construed as an attempt to do so, and company having in no way ratified his acts. Dickinson v. National Life & Trust Co. [S. D.] 107 N. W. 537. Evidence held to sustain finding that rule prohibiting local agents from insuring class of risks covered by policy declared on had been abrogated as far as agents' issuing such policy was concerned, and that they had authority to issue it. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Stogner [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 260, 98 S. W. 218.

49. Authority of a general agent must be determined by the nature of his business and the apparent scope of his authority therein. Green v. Star Fire Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 586, 77 N. E. 649. Evidence held to sustain finding that agent of foreign company was not a mere special agent with no other authority than that proved to have been specially given him, but that he possessed a broad general authority sufficiently large to make his delivery of policy to insured binding on company. Id. An agent intrusted with blank policies signed by the proper officers of the company and with authority to negotiate, fill up, and issue the same, may bind the company by an oral contract. King v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 195 Mo. 290, 92 S. W. 892.

50. As to delivery of policy, which were not known to insured. Green v. Star Fire Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 586, 77 N. E. 619. Broker's agency for insured held to have ceased when policy had been prepared and countersigned by company's agent and had been given by latter to his clerk to be delivered to insured, so that insured was not chargeable with notice of actual limitation on agent's authority in letter which agent subsequently showed to broker, there being nothing to show that delivery of policy was to be made through broker. Id. Company held not entitled to rely on limitations on authority of soliciting agent to issue binding receipts. Starr v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 41 Wash. 228, 83 P. 116.

51. See 6 C. L. 83.

52. Paquette v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Mass.] 79 N. E. 250. "Application" incorporated into policy by reference held to include all the statements on both pages of the application except medical examiner's report. Id. Application addressed to particular company contained warranty that insured would keep watchman in mill. Agent forwarded it to another who split up insurance between company named and two others. Held that policies of two latter companies, which in no way referred to application, could not be said to be issued on such application, nor was such application an application to them, and hence insured did not contract with them to keep watchman in mill. Waukau Mill. Co. v. Citizens' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 937. Application and policy are to be construed together, and any stipulation in the former, not inconsistent with the latter, becomes a part of the contract. As where beneficiary is named in application but not in the policy. Ogletree v. Hutchinson [Ga.] 55 S. E. 179.

53. Ogletree v. Hutchinson [Ga.] 55 S. E. 179.

54. Iowa: Under Code § 1819, failure to attach copy precludes company from pleading or proving application or representations therein or the falsity thereof. Rauen v. Prudential Ins. Co., 129 Iowa, 725, 106 N. W. 198. Statute (Iowa Code 1897, § 1741) held to apply to fidelity bond insuring against loss through fraud or dishonesty of single employe. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Egg Shippers' Strawboard & Filler Co. [C. C. A.] 148 F. 353. Writing executed by corporation for purpose of obtaining bond held an application or representation within meaning of statute. Id.

Massachusetts: Rev. Laws c. 118, § 73, held not to prevent proof of fraud by introduction of written application, no copy of which is attached, in cases where no application is referred to in the policy. Holden v. Prudential Life Ins. Co., 191 Mass. 153, 77 N. E. 309. Question and answer held properly excluded where copy of application attached to policy did not contain them, and no copy of the declarations and answers in which they were found was annexed. Paquette v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Mass.] 79 N. E. 250. Whenever a scheme of actual fraud in procuring the insurance, of which the negotiations form a part, is pleaded and shown, an unattached application may become material and admissible on that issue. Id. Where defendant sought to avoid policy because of concerted plan to defraud it existing at the inception of the contract, held that unattached application was inadmissible until foundation had been laid by the introduction of at least some evidence to sustain such claim. Id. Application held to form a part of the policy and to be admissible in evidence where copy was attached, though it did not have printed on it the words "under the laws of Mass., each applicant for a policy of insurance to be issued hereunder is entitled to be furnished with a copy of this application attached to any policy isto be returned at the time of a renewal as well as at the time of the original issuance of the policy.[55] The by-laws of mutual companies form a part of their contracts of insurance,[56] but where the insured agrees to be bound by by-laws annexed to the policy, and the policy requires special provisions not inserted therein to be attached thereto, by-laws not so inserted or annexed cannot be used to vary, contradict, or enlarge its terms.[57] Where the charter or by-laws are inconsistent with the provisions of the policy, the latter will ordinarily control.[58] Statutes of the state where the company is organized are a part of the contract and are binding on policy holders even though they are citizens of foreign states.[59]

In the interpretation of the contract the expressed intention of the parties controls if not in conflict with the statutes or public policy.[60] Language which is clear and unambiguous must be taken in its plain, ordinary, and popular sense.[61] The policy sued thereon," as required by such section. Moore v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. [Mass.] 78 N. E. 488.

Minnesota: Minn. Gen. Laws 1895, p. 430, c. 175, § 1, operates to exclude or eliminate from the contract all reference to an application a copy of which is not attached, and to render ineffective all defenses based upon anything contained in such application, and policy will be treated, construed, and enforced as if no written application had been made. Rauen v. Prudential Ins. Co., 129 Iowa, 725, 106 N. W. 198. Demurrers to pleas of breaches of warranty and false representations in applications as to health and medical history and plea of false and fraudulent representations to medical examiner, the medical examination being a part of the application, held properly sustained. Id. Company failing to comply with provisions must be conclusively presumed to have elected to rely upon contract contained in policy without reference to any representation or warranty not contained in that instrument. Id. Plea in answer held to have raised question as to effect of statute so that it was proper for court to inquire into it. Id.

Pennsylvania: Under Act May 11, 1881 (P. L. 20), neither application nor its contents is admissible unless copy is attached. Fidelity Title & Trust Co. v. Illinois Life Ins. Co., 213 Pa. 415, 63 A. 51. Where affidavit of defense admitted that written application had been made in which there were written questions and answers as to whether insured had kidney disease, held that defendant could not show false and fraudulent misrepresentations in that regard. Id. Are inadmissible in evidence and cannot be considered part of the contract. Hews v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 850. Answers made by insured to medical examiner held not within statute where the policy and application constituted the entire contract and answers were neither referred to in former nor made part of latter. Id. Statute does not apply where contract is void by reason of fraud practiced by the insured in its inception. Id.

Wisconsin: Exception of certain "mutual companies in cities and villages" from operation of Rev. St. 1898, § 1945a, held to refer only to domestic companies, in view of Id. §§ 1941-1 to 1941-13. Waukau Milling Co. v. Citizens' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 937.

55. Rev. St. § 3623 clearly contemplates that there may be more than one application in connection with a life policy. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Gilligan, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 397.

56. When assented to by the member, as provided in the charter, constitutes the measure of duty and liability of the parties, if they are reasonable and not in violation of any principle of public law. Duffy v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 79.

57. Gleason v. Canterbury Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 73 N. H. 583, 64 A. 187.

58. Insurer cannot invoke them to defeat policy claim. Bruger v. Princeton & St. M. Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 95. Exclusion of copy of articles and by-laws offered for purpose of showing that they prohibited company from insuring more than two-thirds of the value of any property "including the insurance of other companies" held harmless where they were not referred to in policy or incorporated therein, and condition in policy did not contain the words quoted. Id. In view of Rev. St. 1899, § 7903, requiring policies of assessment companies to specify the exact sum payable thereunder on the happening of the contingencies insured against, the provisions of the policy in that regard control over inconsistent provisions in the by-laws. Courtney v. Fidelity Mut. Aid Ass'n [Mo. App.] 94 S. W. 768.

59. N. Y. Laws 1892, p. 1958, c. 690, § 56, prohibiting appointment of receiver and accounting unless attorney general makes application or approves same. Brown v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 142 F. 835.

60. Policy to be given fair construction in harmony with meaning and intention when unambiguous and not unreasonable or against public policy. Jagoe v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 96 S. W. 598. While policies are construed strictly against the insurer and forfeitures are not favored, yet courts cannot make new contracts for the parties or grant relief where a forfeiture has accrued under the plain and unambiguous terms of the contract. Jump v. North British & Mercantile Ins. Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 928. Cannot make new contracts. Ferguson v. Lumbermen's Ins. Co. [Wash.] 88 P. 128.

61. Kentucky Vermillion Min. & C. Co. v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 695. As to meaning of "cyclone," losses due to which were excepted from risk. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Finch [C. C. A.] 147 F. 388. Nontechnical words given ordinary meaning. Kansas Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Whitehead [Ky.] 93 S. W. 609. Ordinary should be construed as a whole and effect given to all its parts.[62] Written provisions control printed ones.[63] If two clauses are repugnant and cannot stand together, the first will stand and the latter be rejected.[64] The contract should be liberally construed in aid of the contemplated indemnity[65] and in favor of those who may naturally be presumed to have been the special objects of the insured's bounty.[66] A construction sustaining the contract will be preferred to one which would work a forfeiture.[67] In case of ambiguity or inconsistency the contract will be construed most strongly against the insurer and most favorably to the insured.[68] Where the written contract is susceptible on its face of a plain and unequivocal interpretation, resort cannot be had to evidence of custom or usage to explain its language or qualify its meaning.[69] Where it is ambiguous, however, it is to be construed in the light of the attendant circumstances and the intent of the parties.[70]

The ordinary office of an exception or proviso is to take special cases out of a general class or to guard against misinterpretation.[71] Where the exception is of something which would not without it have been included, it will be regarded as having been introduced merely from excessive caution and will not operate to include in the general class other matters of the same class as those excepted.[72] To ascer-meaning of words. Weidner v. Standard Life & Acc. Ins. Co. [Wis.] 110 N. W. 246.

62. Herdic v. Maryland Casualty Co., 146 F. 396.

63. Binding receipt wholly in writing held to control conflicting provisions of application on printed form with blanks not filled out. Starr v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 41 Wash. 228, 83 P. 116.

64. Particularly where latter is carelessly drawn and vague. Provision as to amount of indemnity for loss of arm. Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. v. Morrow [C. C. A.] 143 F. 750. A subsequent clause irreconcilable with a former one and repugnant to the general purpose and intent of the contract will be disregarded. Exception to risk in health policy removing from its operation every possible condition under which disease specifically insured against could occur. Jones v. Pennsylvania Casualty Co., 140 N. C. 262, 52 S. E. 578.

65. Fire policy where insured acts in good faith and fully and fairly discloses all information desired by company. Porter v. Insurance Co. of North America, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 75.

66. Life policy. Lehman v. Lehman [Pa.] 64 A. 598, afg. 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 60.

67. If provisions are inconsistent or policy is open to two constructions, that which will sustain contract will be adopted rather than that which would work forfeiture. Kavanaugh v. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 96 S. W. 499.

68. Brooks v. Conservative Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 106 N. W. 913; Bickford v. Aetna Ins. Co. [Me.] 63 A. 552; President, etc., of Insurance Co. of N. A. v. Pitts [Miss.] 41 So. 5; Western Assur. Co. v. Ferrell [Miss.] 40 So. 8; Jones v. Pennsylvania Casualty Co., 140 N. C. 262, 52 S. E. 578; Reynolds v. Maryland Casualty Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 456; Edge v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. [S. Where it attempts to limit liability. Central Acc. Ins. Co. v. Rembe, 220 Ill. 151, 77 N. E. 123, afg. 122 Ill. App. 507. So as not to defeat indemnity. National Fire Ins. Co. v. Three States Lumber Co., 119 Ill. App. 67; Reynolds v. Maryland Casualty Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 456. Provisions for forfeitures. Weidner v. Standard Life & Acc. Ins. Co. [Wis.] 110 N. W. 246. Provisions imposing forfeitures for collateral matters should be strictly construed against the insurer and confined in their application to the narrowest possible limits, particularly where they exact the disclosure of facts known to the insurer, or which it is bound to know, and of which the insured may be ignorant. Monahan v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [Md.] 63 A. 211. Provision avoiding policy if there was in force another policy on same life previously issued by same company unless permission was indorsed thereon. Id. As to forfeiture for failure to give notice of loss. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. v. Fielding [Colo.] 83 P. 1013. Provision as to arbitration. Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. Parker, 119 Ill. App. 126. As to risk. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Ayers, 119 Ill. App. 402. Appraisal. Concordia Fire Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 121 Ill. App. 35. Provision avoiding policy for vacancy of premises. Home Ins. Co. v. Gagen [Ind. App.] 75 N. E. 927.

69. Kentucky Vermillion Min. & Con. Co. v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 695. Inadmissible to show meaning of term "watchman's clause" in provision "privileged to make alterations, etc., incidental to the business, to remain idle subject to the conditions of the watchman's clause." Id.

70. Bickford v. Aetna Ins. Co. [Me.] 63 A. 552.

71. Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. v. Morrow [C. C. A.] 143 F. 750.

72. Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. v. Morrow [C. C. A.] 143 F. 750. Exception of claim arising from death, etc., from proviso tain the meaning of one of several exceptions from the risk, the rule noscitur a sociis will be applied.[73] A proviso utterly repugnant to the body of the contract and irreconcilable with it will be rejected.[74]

Conflict of laws.[75]—As a general rule the interpretation and validity of the contract are to be determined by the law of the place where the contract is made,[76] which is generally held to be the place where the policy is delivered and the premium paid.[77] Stipulations as to the place of the contract and as to what laws shall govern are valid and binding unless they impair contract obligations[78] or conflict with the laws of the state where the contract is made.[79]

§ 8. Premiums and premium notes, dues and assessments, and payment of the same.[80]—A promise to pay the premium may be implied from an acceptance and retention of the policy by the insured.[81] Policies sometimes provide for the deduction of the premiums from insured's wages in instalments, each instalment to pay for insurance for a specified period.[82] Entry of the payment in a premium receipt that, in case of other insurance making total weekly indemnity in excess of value of insured's time, company should only be liable for such proportion of insurance as money value of time should bear to aggregate of weekly indemnity of total insurance, held not to operate to make proviso applicable to fixed indemnity payable on loss of arm. Id.

73. Word "cyclone," losses due to which were excepted from risk, held, when construed with other exceptions in connection with which it appeared, to refer to that character of windstorm distinguished by its concentrated force and violence, so resistless as to make it especially destructive to buildings in its pathway. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Finch [C. C. A.] 147 F. 388.

74. Removing from operation of policy every possible condition under which disease insured against could occur. Jones v. Pennsylvania Casualty Co., 140 N. C. 262, 52 S. E. 578.

75. See 6 C. L. 83.

76. Whenever the contract is silent as to the place of performance, the place of making the contract is presumed to be the place of performance and the interpretation and validity of the contract must be determined by the law of the place where the contract is made. Napier v. Bankers' Life Ins. Co., 51 Misc. 283, 100 N. Y. S. 1072.

77. In the absence of other evidence, the state where the application is made, the first premium paid, and the policy delivered. Napier v. Bankers' Life Ins. Co., 51 Misc. 283, 100 N. Y. S. 1072. Where policy purported to be signed and delivered in New York, consent to assignment thereof purported to be executed and delivered there, and policy provided that premiums were payable at home office in that state and that amount due should be payable after receipt at home office of proofs of death, held a New York contract though insured was a nonresident. Id. Contract is made by the insured when the contract is delivered to him and the premium paid or agreed to be paid. South Bay Co. v. Howey, 113 App. Div. 382, 98 N. Y. S. 909. Fact that policy insuring property of foreign corporation in New York was shown to have been subscribed by insurer's attorney in fact in that state, and that insurer had home office in that state, held not to show that contract was made there in absence of showing where it was delivered, so as to preclude plaintiff from recovering thereon because of its failure to obtain certificate authorizing it to do business there. Id. If a contract is made in one state to be performed in another, the place of payment and performance is the place of the contract. Where Pennsylvania company sent application to resident of Wisconsin, who filled it out and returned it, and policy was issued in former state and premium note was payable there, held that contract was made in Pennsylvania. Presbyterian Ministers' Fund v. Thomas, 126 Wis. 281, 105 N. W. 801.

78. See 6 C. L. 83, n. 11.

79. Provision that contract should be governed by, subject to, and construed only according to the laws of New York, and that the place of the contract was expressly agreed to be the home office of the company, held void under Revisal 1905, § 4806. Blackwell v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n [N. C.] 53 S. E. 833.

80. See 6 C. L. 86.

81. In action for premium, evidence tending to show that fire policy was delivered by broker to insured, who promised to pay for it and kept it three months, held to make prima facie case. Westchester Fire Ins. Co. v. Gurian, 101 N. Y. S. 50.

82. Accident policy providing that premiums were to be paid by deductions from insured's wages construed, and held that where insured left employment after deduction of first instalment of premium, leaving no funds in employer's hands, and was injured after expiration of period covered by first instalment and while second remained unpaid, he could not recover. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Ricks [Ark.] 94 S. W. 923. Insurer agreed to accept orders on railroad company employing insured in payment of premiums, the company being the agent of the insurer and it being its duty to deduct premiums from insured's wages. Insured was told by insurer's agent that all that it was necessary for him to do was to execute assignment directing payment and premiums would be deducted in same manner as hospital fees. Insured executed orders. Subsequently he demanded from railroad all that was due him, and received full amount without de-book provided for that purpose is sometimes required.[83] In the case of employers' liability insurance the premium is generally based on the compensation paid by the insured to his employes during the period covered by the policy.[84] Provision is often made for the payment of premiums in instalments,[85] any instalments remaining unpaid at the death of the insured to be deducted from the amount due under the policy.[86] Policies sometimes provide that the insured shall have a certain number of days of grace in which to make payment,[87] or that the agent may, under specified circumstances, accept premiums within a specified time after they come due.[88]

The delivery of the policy is prima facie evidence of the payment of the first

duction. He was ignorant and did not know how much was due him and supposed deduction had been made. Held insurer could not forfeit policy under provision that it should be void if insured failed to leave any instalment in paymaster's hands, failure being result of negligence of its agent. Johnson v. Standard Life & Acc. Ins. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 831.

83. Provision that payment to be recognized must be entered in premium receipt book belonging with policy held to render inadmissible evidence of a premium not so entered, in the absence of any explanation as to why it was not entered. McNicholas v. Prudential Ins. Co., 191 Mass. 304, 77 N. E. 756. Plaintiff held not to have made out a case of fraud, accident, or mistake by testifying that payment had been made and then showing that it had not been entered. Id.

84. Evidence in action to recover additional premiums held not to sustain judgment for plaintiff. Fidelity & Casualty Co. v. Fischer, 101 N. Y. S. 545.

85. Evidence held to have conclusively shown that payment was made and accepted as and for a payment in full of a quarterly premium and not a payment on account of an annual premium with credit extended for the balance, so that policy was continued in force for only three months and had lapsed at time of insured's death, and verdict was properly directed for defendant. Battin v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 473.

86. Whole year's premiums deducted from face of policy, though payable in quarterly instalments. Crowder v. Continental Casualty Co., 115 Mo. App. 535, 91 S. W. 1016. Where policy contained a provision, made a part of the contract, that though "based on the receipt of premiums annually in advance, the premium may be made in semiannual or quarterly instalments in advance, but in such case any future instalments which at the maturity of the contract are necessary to complete the full year's premium shall be deducted from the amount of the claim," held that, on insured's death during first half of policy year, company was entitled to deduct premium for second half, though policy provided for semiannual instead of annual premiums. Bracher v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. [N. Y.] 78 N. E. 714, rvg. 103 App. Div. 269, 92 N. Y. S. 1105. Provision for deduction held not inconsistent with absolute obligation on face of policy to pay amount of insurance. Id.

87. Where 30 days' grace given by policy and statute had not elapsed when agent received a part of the premium and agreed to continuance of the policy until the balance was paid, held that, policy being still in force, extension agreement did not "renew or create any liability on behalf of the company under the policy" within the meaning of a revival receipt given when such payment was made, and which provided that it should not be construed as having that effect. Carr v. Prudential Ins. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 158. Where policy provided that a grace of 30 days would be allowed and there was no express provision for forfeiture for nonpayment on the due date, held that it was not forfeited for nonpayment on such date but remained in full force during the period of grace so that beneficiary could recover where insured died during that period. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Taylor [C. C. A.] 142 F. 709, afg. 134 F. 932. Provision in regard to grace held an integral part of the policy and a contractual right of the assured, and not a mere personal privilege exercisable only in his lifetime or a mere continuing offer never accepted by him. Id. Notice specifying date when premium was due and that if not paid on that date policy would be forfeited held not to change contract, particularly where it provided that it did not do so. Id. Rights of parties being fixed by death of insured, no tender of premium after his death and during period of grace was necessary. Id. Provision for thirty days' grace held inapplicable to note given for part of second premium in view of provision therein that it should be payable at a specified time "without grace." Lefler v. New York Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 814. Further provision in note that policy should be void if note was not paid at maturity "except as otherwise provided in the policy" held not to change construction, words quoted referring only to automatic nonforfeiture provisions. Id. Similar provision held inapplicable to similar note given for past due premium. Bank of Commerce v. New York Life Ins. Co., 125 Ga. 552, 54 S. E. 643. Provision in note that policy should be void if note was not paid at maturity "except as otherwise provided in the policy itself" held not to require different construction. Id.

88. Where general agent had authority to accept premium within 30 days after it became due and deliver receipt of company renewing and continuing policy in force if he had no reason to doubt that insured was still insurable, held that his acceptance of premium within that time through a bank acting as his collecting agent and delivery of receipt to insured would operate as a renewal whether he had authority to extend the time for payment of premium or not, premium.[89] In the absence of fraud an acknowledgment of payment in the policy is conclusive evidence thereof.[90] A provision that the policy shall not become effective until the first premium is paid does not require payment in cash in the absence of a further provision to that effect nor restrict the right of the company to accept notes therefor.[91] Failure of consideration is a defense to an action on premium notes.[92]

The liability of the applicant to pay the premium is a liability to the company and not to the agent, unless the latter pays the amount thereof to the company under an agreement that the applicant shall reimburse him.[93] Payment[94] to the company's duly authorized agent is binding on it.[95] The act of its agent in extending credit to the insured,[96] or in taking notes for the first premium, is binding on the company where he acts within the apparent scope of his authority in so doing,[97] regardless of express limitations on his authority of which the applicant has and whether he made an agreement for 30 days' extension or not. Talbott v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 142 F. 694.

89. Globe Mutual Life Ins. Ass'n v. Meyer, 118 Ill. App. 155. Is an acknowledgment of payment. Raburn v. Pennsylvania Casualty Co. [N. C.] 54 S. E. 283.

90. Company is estopped to prove, for the purpose of avoiding the policy, that the premium acknowledged in the policy to have been paid was not in fact paid. Helbig v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 120 Ill. App. 58. Provision that company insures a certain person in consideration of a specified sum, together with proof of the delivery of the policy to insured, is an acknowledgment of the receipt of the premium. Id.

91. Kimbro v. New York Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 1025. Where company by its duly authorized agent delivers policy and accepts notes for premium, it is presumed that notes were accepted as payment. Kilborn v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 861.

92. Where agent inserted false answer in application though insured gave true ones, and insured discovered fraud before any part of contract had been performed by company or any real benefit received by insured or beneficiary, held that there was an entire failure of consideration for premium notes, since company was thereafter no longer estopped to rely on fraud. Curry v. Stone [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 645, 92 S. W. 263.

93. Agent cannot become creditor of applicant without latter's consent, agreement, action, or acquiescence. Rafferty v. Romer, 122 Ill. App. 57. Whether defendant agreed to take policy only on condition that he was to render certain services to plaintiff's mother, the price of which was to be deducted from the premium, and whether he accepted policy without performance of such condition so as to become bound to pay premium in any event, held for jury under the evidence. Id.

94. Where company and bank to which note had been sent for collection notified insured that it was due, and insured, who had sufficient funds in bank for that purpose, told cashier to pay it, which latter promised to do, but money on deposit was never applied to payment of note and bank did not credit company or charge insured with the amount thereof on its books until after the fire, held that there was no payment. Driver v. Planters' Mut. Ins. Ass'n [Ark.] 93 S. W. 752. Evidence that amount of premium was left with child to be delivered to agent when he called held not to show payment, it not appearing that child gave it to agent. McNicholas v. Prudential Ins. Co., 191 Mass. 304, 77 N. E. 756.

95. Evidence of payment to third party, not defendant's agent, who undertook to remit it to defendant but did not do so, held insufficient. Shoemaker v. Commercial Assur. Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 316. Evidence held to sustain finding that person to whom insured paid premium was company's agent so that he could not be compelled to pay it again though agent failed to account therefor to the company. Globe & R. Fire Ins. Co. v. Robbins & Myers Co., 109 App. Div. 530, 96 N. Y. S. 378, afg. 88 N. Y. S. 996. Provision in policy that no person, unless duly authorized in writing, should be deemed the agent of the company held to apply only to matters connected with the making of the contract and not to collection of premium after contract was made. Id. Question whether bank, of which insured was a client and which acted as agent of company in collecting premium, took insured's draft for company or whether it discounted draft and advanced money for payment of premium, and hence whether transaction constituted payment on day when receipt was delivered, though draft was subsequently dishonored, held for jury under the evidence. Talbott v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 142 F. 694.

96. Superintendent and general agent held to have had authority to receive part of premium and to consent to continuance of policy until balance was paid, and to subsequently receive balance, no limitation on his authority having been shown. Instruction approved. Carr v. Prudential Ins. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 758. Evidence held to sustain finding that agent when he accepted a payment of part of premium consented to continuance of policy until balance was paid. Id.

97. At least where policy contains no provision that premiums are to be paid in cash. Kilborn v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 861. Agent of foreign company acting for it in negotiating contract held company's agent for purpose of receiving premium by virtue of Laws 1895, p. 437, c. 175, § 88. Id.

no knowledge.[98] It is presumed that he is acting within the scope of his authority in this regard.[99] Where the company permits agents at their own risk to advance the first premium and take notes of the applicant therefor, the giving of such a note is regarded as a payment as between the applicant and the company,[1] provided the transaction is made in good faith.[2] The indorsement of the amount of an agent's commission on a note given by him for the premium on a policy on his own life is not the payment of an instalment of the premium in advance within the meaning of a provision allowing such payments.[3] So too, the act of the agent in crediting an applicant with the amount of his commission is not a payment in cash where such commission accrues only when the premium is paid to the company in cash.[4]

The giving of notice of the accrual of premiums is a condition precedent to forfeiture for their nonpayment when required by the contract[5] or by statute,[5] or Agent of foreign life company, who has obtained license as provided by Gen. Laws 1895, p. 392, c. 175, and authorized to solicit insurance and collect first premium, has apparent authority to take promissory note therefor. Id.

98. Provision in policy that agent had no authority to extend time for payment of first premium held not binding on insured where he never saw the policy. Kilborn v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 861. Limitations on agent's authority in policy, of which applicant has no knowledge, have no application to matters occurring before policy is issued. Id.

99. Kilborn v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 861.

1. Delivery to agent who paid premium and took note from insured held to constitute complete delivery as between latter and the company, provided transaction was in good faith. Payne v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 339. Rule would be otherwise, however, if transaction was result of fraudulent device participated in by insured for purpose of increasing apparent amount of business done by agent so as to enable him to obtain a prize, and it was agreed that no premium should be paid or obligation assumed by insured. Id. Where it was a common practice, known to and approved by company, for agents to take notes for first premiums payable to themselves and to charge themselves therewith in their accounts, the company holding them responsible as for a cash collection, held that the giving of note was a payment. Kimbro v. New York Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 1025. Where insured gave agent note for premium and company charged agent with amount thereof which he paid. Buckley v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 112 App. Div. 451, 98 N. Y. S. 622.

2. Question whether policy, on which agent paid full net first year's premium to company, taking, it was claimed, a note from insured and her husband therefor as company permitted him to do at his own risk, was taken out in good faith or was issued in pursuance of fraudulent scheme of agent, participated in by insured, to increase apparent amount of business done by him and thereby enable him to obtain a prize, held for the jury under the evidence. Payne v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 339. Alleged agreement that insured need not pay note held not to affect his liability thereon. Id.

3. Franklin Ins. Co. v. McAfee, 28 Ky. L. R. 676, 90 S. W. 216.

4. General agent of company had authority to issue binding receipt on payment of first premium in cash, which operated to effect insurance from date of its issuance if approved and accepted by company, and provided that if application was rejected amount paid was to be returned to applicant. He issued such a receipt on receiving a note for half the amount of the premium, which he discounted, and agreed to give applicant credit for other half, to which he claimed to be entitled on account of commissions. Agent's contract provided that he should have as commissions 50 per cent. of first premium, which was, however, to accrue only when premium was paid in cash to company, and that all sums collected by him should be held in trust for company. Applicant died before policy was issued. Held that, agent not having received payment in cash before issuing receipt, transaction was not binding on company in absence of proof that it ratified it with full knowledge, nor was acceptance and approval of contract evidenced by receipt binding on it without such knowledge. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co. v. Robinson [C. C. A.] 148 F. 358, rvg. 144 F. 1005. Attempted gift of commissions having been for purpose of enabling agent to earn bonus, held that he was acting in his own interest and adversely to that of the company so that his knowledge would not be notice to the company. Id.

5. Agreement by company to notify assignee of maturity of all premiums as they become due held not to require it to give notice of maturity of note given by assignor for past due premium prior to the assignment. Bank of Commerce v. New York Life Ins. Co., 125 Ga. 552, 54 S. E. 643. By-law of assessment company providing that notice of assessments may be given to members by mailing notices to them, properly addressed, is valid and binding. Duffy v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 79. Where the mailing of a notice of assessments is a condition precedent to a right of forfeiture for nonpayment, the company must show that the notice was mailed, properly addrssed, within the time fixed. Id. A provision of the by-laws making the certificate of the treasurer that the notice was mailed where the company has by long custom led the policy holder to believe that it will be given.[7]

Premiums paid under a mistake of fact may be recovered back, though there was negligence on the part of the person paying them.[8] So too, if the policy never attaches and no risk is assumed, the insured may recover back the premiums paid unless he has been guilty of fraud,[9] or unless the contract is illegal and he is in pari delicto.[10] As a general rule premiums paid on a policy void for want of insurable interest cannot be recovered, the parties being in pari delicto,[11] but this rule has been held not to apply where one has been induced to take out the policy through the fraud of the insurer and is himself innocent.[12] Mere ignorance of the law on the part of the insured will not, however, authorize a recovery.[13]

conclusive evidence of that fact is invalid and unreasonable, and does not preclude admission of evidence that notice was not received, particularly as by-law does not require treasurer to state fact within his own knowledge. Id. Where certificate relied on referred to attached affidavit of mailing clerk, held that it was hearsay. Id. Mailing of notice to last post office address of member appearing on books of company, in accordance with the terms of the policy, held sufficient, letter of insured not being an authorization to change his permanent address and company not being bound to send notice to beneficiary. Smith v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 347.

6. Laws 1892, p. 1972, c. 690, § 92, as amended by Laws 1897, p. 91, c. 218, providing that no life company shall within one year after default in payment of premium declare policy forfeited or lapsed, unless specified notice shall have been duly addressed and mailed to insured "at his last known post office address in this state," applies only to New York contracts made with persons having a known post office address in that state. Napier v. Bankers' Life Ins. Co., 51 Misc. 283, 100 N. Y. S. 1072. Notice not in form required held ineffective to enable defendant to declare policy forfeited or lapsed. Id. Where note given for premium expressly provided that policy should lapse if it was not paid at maturity, and action on policy was not brought within one year from the default day, held that it was unnecessary to determine whether notice required by statute was mailed or not. McGuire v. Union Mut. Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. S. 891. Where affidavit as to mailing of notice was defective, and there was evidence that notice was never received, held that question whether such notice was mailed was one of fact precluding nonsuit. Carr v. Prudential Ins. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 158. Statute held inapplicable where company made no attempt to cancel policy until more than a year after default. McDougald v. New York Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 674. Statute applies to defaults in payment of premiums under policies in force when it went into effect. Id. Laws 1898, p. 160, c. 85, providing for service of notice upon all policy holders irrespective of their place of residence, applies only to companies issuing "stipulated premium" policies. Napier v. Bankers' Life Ins. Co., 51 Misc. 283, 100 N. Y. S. 1072.

7. Kavanaugh v. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 96 S. W. 499. 12. American Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Mead [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 526. Allegations that plaintiff paid a larger assessment during first year upon defendant's representations that it was necessary for him to do so in order to keep policy valid, and that when he made application he believed contract to be valid, held not to state facts entitling plaintiff to relief, there being nothing to show that he did not enter into the contract of his own volition and as a pure speculation, or that his belief that contract was valid was not due to a mistake of law. Id.

13. American Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Mead [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 526. Complaint held not to state facts entitling plaintiff to relief where, from anything appearing therein, the representations of the defendant relied on by plaintiff were as to the legal effect of the contract based on facts known to both parties. 14. St. 1903, § 656. United States Life Ins. Co. v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 948, 90 S. W. 970. Foreign company held not liable for fine for act of its soliciting agent in absence of evidence that his act was known to it or its general agent. Id.

Mutual companies.[15]—The purposes for which mutual companies may levy assessments,[16] and the amount[17] and disposition thereof,[18] are generally regulated by statute. In the absence of a charter provision to the contrary, the company may make rates for insurance with a view of creating a surplus and of subsequently distributing the same to members in so far as not needed in the business.[19] The levying of an assessment does not ordinarily make a member a debtor to the company so as to enable it to sue him therefor in the event of his neglect or refusal to pay, but the sole effect of a default is to relieve the company from further liability to him on the contract of insurance.[20] The company cannot suspend a member for nonpayment of an assessment when at the time such assessment becomes due it owes him a greater sum under the policy.[21]

§ 9. Warranties, conditions, and representations. In general.[22]—A warranty is a statement made by the assured which is susceptible of no construction other than that the parties mutually intend that the policy shall not be binding unless such statement be literally true.[23] An affirmative warranty consists of representations as to existing facts[24] and a promissory warranty of representations as to things to be done in the future.[25] In the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary,[26] the falsity of a statement which the parties have expressly warranted to be

26. Kentucky: Provisions in policies and applications declaring representations warranties held in conflict with St. 1903, § 639, providing that all statements and descriptions in the application shall be deemed and held to be representations and not warranties, and that no misrepresentations shall prevent a recovery unless material or fraudulent. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Whayne's Adm'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 1049. Whether a fact is material depends upon whether prudent men of ordinary judgment engaged in the same business would, if it had been disclosed to them, either have raised the price or refused the risk. Id. Question is what would company probably have done had it known the truth, which is to be determined from usual course of those engaged in such business under similar circumstances. Instruction modified. Id. If information concerning a matter material to the risk is substantially untrue, the policy is avoided whether the misrepresentation caused the loss or not. Id. Misstatements as to health held to have avoided policy as matter of law. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Schmidt [Ky.] 93 S. W. 1055.

Maryland: Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1907, art. 23, § 196, when application for life policy contains clause of warranty of truth of answers to questions, no misrepresentation or untrue statement therein made in good faith works a forfeiture or is a defense unless in regard to a matter material to the risk. true,[27] or the breach of a promissory warranty,[28] avoids the policy whether actually material to the risk or not[29] and regardless of the insured's good faith.[30] False representations, on the other hand, avoid the policy only if material to the risk or fraudulent.[31] that no misrepresentation made in obtaining or securing life policies shall be deemed material or render the policy void unless the matter misrepresented shall have actually contributed to the contingency or event on which the policy is to become due and payable, and that whether it so contributed shall be a question for the jury, places warranties and representations on same footing, and company cannot avoid policy for warranty not material to risk. Keller v. Home Life Ins. Co. [Mo.] 95 S. W. 903. Company held to have precluded itself from questioning applicability of statute by requesting instruction predicated thereon. Id. Statute applies to representations in application for old line policy as to health of applicant and treatment by other physicians, and whether false representations in that regard contributed to insured's death is for the jury. Id. Statute does not deprive foreign company of its liberty or property without due process of law or deny it the equal protection of the laws. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. v. Riggs, 27 S. Ct. 126.

North Carolina: Under 2 Revisal § 4646, all statements or descriptions in application or policy are to be deemed representations and not warranties, and no representation prevents a recovery on the policy unless material or fraudulent. Fishblate v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 140 N. C. 589, 53 S. E. 354. A fact is material to the risk if the insurer would naturally be influenced thereby in making the contract. Id. Instruction that to become material a misrepresentation must have been as to something contributing to loss of sight for which indemnity was claimed held harmless in view of finding as to waiver. Laws c. 118, § 21, statements of insured that building insured was dwelling house was not completed and would not be occupied until completed, being material representations, became part of policy though not incorporated therein. Harris v. North American Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 361, 77 N. E. 493. Fact that applicant for surplus line insurance, procured from companies not authorized to do business under the laws of the state and permitted to be taken out by Laws 1892, p. 1991, c. 690, as amended by Laws 1894, p. 1378, c. 611, § 1, on request for names of three admitted companies on the risk by mistake gave names of two who were not, held not to avoid policy where there were in fact four such companies on the risk, the error in the names having worked no prejudice to defendant. Hirsch v. Fidelitas Societe Anonyme D'Assurances & De Reassurances, 99 N. Y. S. 517.

32. Insured held precluded from recovering on policy of burglary insurance by failure to notify company of fact that house had been left in charge of servants while repairs, etc., were being made. Katzenstein v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 48 Misc. 496, 96 N. Y. S. 183.

Fire insurance.[34]—Fire policies ordinarily provide that they shall be void if the real interest of the insured in the property is not stated,[35] if his interest is other than unconditional and sole ownership[36] or if he is not the owner of the premises in fee,[37] or if without the consent of the insurer there is any change in the title, interest, or possession of the property,[38] if the property is or becomes incumbered by a mortgage or otherwise[39] in case of any increase in the hazard,[40] if gasoline is kept or

33. Policy insured against loss of property by theft from the building "actually occupied by the insured," and provided that it should be void if the "conditions or circumstances of the risk" were changed without the written consent of the company. It was further provided that policy should be void if the premises were left without an occupant for more than six consecutive months without written permission. Held that insured had right to leave premises unoccupied for a period not exceeding 6 months without consent, and hence could lease them for that period to persons not shown to be of a criminal or suspicious character since their possession would necessarily afford more protection to property. Thomson v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 486.

Letter of president of company refusing to make loan to insured, to be secured by chattel mortgage on insured property, or to indorse his note, and wishing him "success in his undertaking," held not a consent to the insured incumbering the property, in any event where the incumbrance exceeded the amount of the requested loan. Weddington v. Piedmont Fire Ins. Co. [N. C.] 54 S. E. 271. Unrecorded mortgage avoids policy, being good as between parties. Rhea v. Planters' Mut. Ins. Co. [Ark.] 90 S. W. 850.

40. Hazard not necessarily increased by vacancy. Chismore v. Anchor Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 230. Question whether risk was increased by allowing house to remain vacant after mechanics, who were building it, had left it, held one of fact under the circumstances. Harris v. North American Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 361, 77 N. E. 493.

41. Temporary presence of small amount of gasoline in bottle, which was in no way connected with origin of fire, held not to avoid policy, it being a technical violation only. Arnold v. American Ins. Co., 148 Cal. 660, 84 P. 182. Where policy provided that it should be void if gasoline should be "kept, used, or allowed" on the premises, held that insured could not recover where her tenant set up a gasoline stove for domestic use and fire was caused by ignition of gasoline, though insured had forbidden tenant to use such a stove and was ignorant of the fact that he was doing so. McCurdy v. Orient Ins. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 77. There being no definite intention as to duration of use of gasoline stove, it could not be regarded as merely temporary. Id. Where policy authorized use of gasoline lighter, held that it was not error to refuse to allow amendment alleging that it was defective and that that fact was known to insured or could have been known by exercise of ordinary care for purpose of taking advantage of provision avoiding policy if risk was increased by any means within the knowledge or control of the insured, the liability of the lighter to get out of repair being a risk assumed by the insurer, and amendment not alleging that risk was increased by any means within insured's knowledge or control, particularly where insurer was permitted to attempt to prove allegations of amendment but failed. German Ins. Co. v. Goodfriend [Ky.] 97 S. W. 1098.

42. Provision held not intended to be applicable where policy covered building which insurer knew was so occupied when it was issued, in view of fact that condition was one of a class or group separated by "or" and appeared in policy executed upon a printed form which manifestly was designed for exclusive use in insuring houses to be occupied by owner. Ohio Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Vogel [Ind.] 76 N. E. 977.

43. Though insurance is suspended by vacancy it is revived by reoccupancy, and hence insured is entitled to recover when the premises are occupied when destroyed though they had previously been vacant for more than the prescribed period. Insurance Co. of North America v. Pitts [Miss.] 41 So. 5. The condition as to vacancy and unoccupancy must be construed with reference to the class or character of property to which it relates. Ohio Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Vogel [Ind.] 76 N. E. 977. When used in policies covering property occupied by tenants the condition will be deemed to have been made in view of the probability that there will be changes of tenants and that some time will be necessary to effect such changes, and the policy will not be avoided because of vacancy during the necessary and reasonable time between the leaving of one tenant and the coming in of another. Id. Where policy was issued with knowledge that building was occupied by tenant and was to be used as tenement, and term of insurance was for three years, held not avoided because tenant moved out four hours before fire without insured's knowledge or consent. Id. The words "become vacant by the removal of the owner or occupant" refer to a permanent removal and entire abandonment of the house. Harris v. North American Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 361, 77 N. E. 493. Where building insured as dwelling house was in process of construction when policy was issued, and agent was informed and understood that insured had not occupied it and could not occupy it in sense of living in it as a home, until finally ready for occupancy, held that provision for forfeiture in case it became vacant for more than 30 days before fire by removal of owner without company's written permission was not intended to become applicable until occupancy had commenced. Id. Statements of insured, being material representations, were incorporated in policy under Rev. Laws c. 118, § 21, though not expressed in policy. Id. All that insured undertook to do was to use building as dwelling house when it was occupied. Id. Hence policy was not forfeited by reason of fact that house remained vacant for more than specified period after mechanics had left it while insured was waiting to occupy it until it could be supplied with water. Id. Insured never having occupied house held that it could not be said that it had ever become vacant by reason of his removal. Id. Permit allowing mechanics to work in and about premises for 30 days held designed to prevent forfeiture under provision prohibiting increase of risk and not to refer to provision prohibiting vacancy, and hence did not operate to make vacancy clause applicable immediately on termination of 30 days therein specified. Id. Where house is not described as occupied or unoccupied, and there is no warranty or presumption of present or future occupancy, parol evidence that it was in process of erection when policy was issued, and hence could not be inhabited in sense of being a residence until completion, does not contradict written instrument and is admissible. Id. Provision in policy of fire insurance on barn that it should be void if the "premises" should be or become vacant, unoccupied, or uninhabited, held to have reference to continued occupancy of farm by tablishment covered by the policy shall cease to be operated for more than a specified time,[44] or if additional insurance is obtained.[45] Policies covering stocks of merchandise generally require the insured to take certain inventories[46] and keep certain books[47] and to keep the same in a fire-proof safe at night and produce them after the fire.[48] A substantial compliance with this provision is generally held to be sufficient,[49] and this rule is by statute in some states made applicable to all the terms, conditions, and warranties of policies covering personal property.[50] human beings, the word "premises" meaning the farm, so that policy was not avoided because evidence showed that barn had never had anything in it. Home Ins. Co. v. Gagen [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 827. Vacancy held to preclude recovery though insured. whose title was a sheriff's certificate and who had not yet received deed, had neither the right to the possession nor control of the premises. Chismore v. Anchor Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 230.

44. Provision that policy should immediately cease and determine if plant should be idle or shut down for more than 30 days unless notice was given to company and permission indorsed on policy held reasonable and valid. Kentucky Vermillion Min. & C. Co. v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 695. Violation held to have avoided policy. Id. Where policy warranted that watchman should be constantly employed at all times when property should be idle, and provided that it should be void if idle for more than 30 days without permission indorsed on policy, held that proof of presence of watchman for 30 days prior to fire did not show compliance with warranty. Id. Mere temporary suspension is not ceasing to operate. Waukau Mill. Co. v. Citizens' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 937. Where it was known to company at time of issuing policy on mill run by water power that it could not be operated in severe winter weather because of lack of power, held that period of such necessary cessation must have been contemplated by the parties as not within the clause avoiding the policy for cessation of operation, and a failure to operate during such period did not avoid the policy. Id.

45. Provision held valid. Polk v. Western Assur. Co., 114 Mo. App. 514, 90 S. W. 397. Question whether notice of the existence of other insurance was given to company as required by policy held for jury under the evidence. Bruger v. Princeton & St. M. Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 95.

46. In determining what constitutes an inventory within the meaning of the iron-safe clause, regard must be had to the purpose for which it is required, in seeking which all parts of the clause should be read and considered together. Ruffner Bros. v. Dutchess Ins. Co. [W. Va.] 53 S. E. 943. An "inventory" of a stock of merchandise within the meaning of the iron-safe clause is a list of all the articles of merchandise in the stock sufficiently itemized to show the kinds and numbers or quantities thereof, together with their values at the time of making the same, as nearly as they can be ascertained. Id. In case of a store opening with an entirely new stock of goods at or about the date of the issuance of the policy, the invoices of the first lot of goods put into it, giving the quantities thereof and the cost prices, if preserved and kept for production upon demand of the insurer as and for an inventory, constitute such a list, and insured will have substantially and sufficiently complied with provision requiring taking of inventory. Id. Where iron-safe clause required inventory to be taken within 30 days from date of policy and that books should show condition of the business from the date of the inventory, held that there could be no breach of such provisions where fire occurred less than 30 days from date of policy. Parker & Co. v. Continental Ins. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 717.

47. Iron-safe clause held to require books to be kept from issuance of policy and not from date of inventory. Carp v. Queen Ins. Co., 116 Mo. App. 528, 92 S. W. 1137.

48. Provision requiring insured to keep books and inventory in fireproof safe and in case of loss to produce them for the inspection of the insurer, and that a failure to produce them shall avoid the policy, is reasonable and valid. Gish v. Insurance Co. [Okl.] 87 P. 869. Failure to comply with iron-safe clause held to prevent recovery, it being a condition precedent. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co. v. Knerr, 72 Kan. 385, 83 P. 611. Iron-safe clause is a promissory warranty and a failure to substantially comply therewith does not avoid the contract but defeats the right to recover thereon. Johnson v. Mercantile Town Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 697. Evidence held insufficient to show either literal or substantial compliance. Id.

49. That is, though insured fails to keep it in all respects, yet his right to indemnity remains if he has so far complied that its purpose will not be defeated. Carp v. Queen Ins. Co., 116 Mo. App. 528, 92 S. W. 1137. Plaintiff held to have substantially complied. Id. Proof of keeping of merchandise account and an account of cash sales, and production of same in court, held to show substantial compliance though invoice book was left on shelf in store and burned. People's Fire Ins. Ass'n v. Dully Gorham Co. [Ark.] 95 S. W. 152. Evidence held to show substantial compliance with provisions as to keeping books and preparing inventory. Security Mut. Ins. Co. v. Woodson & Co. [Ark.] 95 S. W. 481. Evidence held to show substantial compliance as to keeping books. Queen of Arkansas Ins. Co. v. Cooper-Cryer Co. [Ark.] 98 S. W. 694. Held substantial compliance though book containing credit sales was destroyed, where it appeared that such sales were small part of business and were copied from lost book into another book, which was preserved and presented for inspection. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Berry [Ark.] 98 S. W. 693.

50. Under Kirby's Dig. § 4375. Iron-safe clause. People's Fire Ins. Ass'n v. Dully Gorham Co. [Ark.] 95 S. W. 152; Security Mut.

In order that overvaluation in the application may avoid the policy on the ground of fraud, it must have been willful and made with an intent to deceive, which was successful.[51]

Life and accident insurance.[52]—Life policies generally provide that they shall be void if the applicant makes untrue answers to questions in regard to his health,[53] his use of intoxicants,[54] his occupation,[55] as to when he last consulted,[56] was attended by,[57] or was under the care of a physician,[58] or if his answers to questions in the application are not full and complete.[59] A provision in the application that where nothing is written in answer to a question it is agreed that the warranty is true

Ins. Co. v. J. E. Woodson & Co. [Ark.] 95 S. W. 481. Act makes a substantial, as contradistinguished from a strict, compliance with iron-safe clause sufficient, and is not confined in its operation to excusing technical and nonessential details of performance merely. Security Mut. Ins. Co. v. Berry [Ark.] 98 S. W. 693; Queen of Arkansas Ins. Co. v. Cooper-Cryer Co. [Ark.] 98 S. W. 694.

51. Evidence held to sustain finding that insured gave his honest judgment and opinion as to value. Helm v. Anchor Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 605. On issue of fraud in overvaluing property in application, evidence held to justify charge that company would be bound by any knowledge gained by agent while soliciting insurance though not communicated to it, and that, if he knew value when he received application, company must be deemed to have known it when it issued policy, and hence it could not be deemed to have been deceived by or to have relied upon insured's representations. Id. Evidence held to sustain finding that stock was worth substantially the amount stated when insurance was procured. Nerger v. Equitable Fire Ass'n [S. D.] 107 N. W. 531.

52. See 6 C. L. 98.

53. Incorrect answers in application or statement made to medical examiner as to insured's health where policy provided that it should be void if answers were untrue, held false warranties rendering policy void regardless of whether applicant believed them to be true or false. Scofield's Adm'x v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Vt.] 64 A. 1107. Evidence as to whether or not insured had consumption when he answered that he had not held to justify submission of case to jury. Id. Fact that brother of insured received letter from him from Colorado held to have no tendency to prove that he had consumption or that he resided in that state, even if latter fact would tend to prove that he had consumption. Id. Question whether answers were true held for jury under the evidence. Perry v. Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 143 Mich. 290, 12 Det. Leg. N. 978, 106 N. W. 860. Where only inference which could reasonably have been deduced from evidence was that material representations as to insured's physical condition and as to his use of alcoholic beverages were made by him both in application and answers to medical examiner, which he knew to be false, and made with intent that company should believe and act upon them, held that verdict was properly directed for defendant. Hews v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 850. Illness means a disease or ailment of such a character as to affect the general soundness and healthfulness of the system seriously, and not a mere temporary indisposition which does not tend to undermine and weaken the constitution. Instruction approved. Scofield's Adm'x v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Vt.] 64 A. 1107.

54. Occasional use of intoxicating liquors, or an occasional case of using them to excess, does not render one a man of intemperate habits. Fludd v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. [S. C.] 55 S. E. 762.

55. Question whether keeper of house of ill fame was a "housewife" as stated in application held for jury. Perry v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 143 Mich. 290, 12 Det. Leg. N. 978, 106 N. W. 860. Evidence held to clearly show that insured was keeping house of ill fame so that it was error to submit question to jury. Id.

56. Merely calling into the office of a doctor for some medicine to relieve a temporary indisposition, or simply for an examination to ascertain whether there is any ailment or complaint about the person, and for nothing more, is not a consultation by a physician. Superficial examination for which no charge was made and at which doctor gave no advice. Scofield's Adm'x v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Vt.] 64 A. 1107. Evidence held to require submission of question whether insured had consulted physician to the jury. Id.

57. Inquiry as to date of attendance held to refer to date of last attendance in view of preceding question. Hanrahan v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 72 N. J. Law, 504, 63 A. 280.

58. Plea setting up breach of warranty that insured had not been "under the care of" a physician, except one named, for two years, held sustained by proof that within that time he had been attended by another physician eight times for rheumatism in the shoulder. Fish v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 64 A. 109.

59. Where statements in application and answers to medical examiner were warranted to be "full, complete, and true, and without suppression of any fact or circumstance which would tend to influence the company in issuing a policy," held that omission to name a physician who had treated insured, in answer to question calling for names of all such physicians, rendered answer incomplete and untrue, and as obnoxious to the warranty as though he had named a physician who had not treated him. National Life Ins. Co. v. Reppond [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 829, 96 S. W. 778. Words "without suppression of any fact or circumstance which would tend to influence the company," etc., held not to make answers mere representations. Id.

without exception makes it the duty of the applicant to state any exception he wishes to make.[60] Where the application and policy provide that the policy shall not take effect unless the insured is alive and in sound health when it is delivered, its acceptance by the insured is a representation that he is in sound health, and if he knows that he is not the policy is obtained through fraud.[61] Accident policies sometimes provide that they shall be void in case the insured makes false or incorrect statements as to his earnings.[62]

§ 10. The risk or object of indemnity. Accident and health insurance.[63]—Accident policies generally provide for an indemnity for death resulting solely and proximately[64] from injuries sustained through external, violent, and accidental means[65] leaving visible marks on the body.[66]

60. Where application provided that "wherever nothing is written in the following paragraphs it is agreed that the warranty is true without exception." Fish v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 64 A. 109.

61. Thompson v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. S. 1006.

62. Provision held applicable only to the weekly indemnity to which the assured would be entitled in case of an injury which incapacitates him from following his vocation and not to an injury resulting in death. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Leibus, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 201.

63. See 6 C. L. 100.

64. Provision "if death should result solely from such injuries" means that injury must stand out as the predominant factor in the production of the result, and not that it must have been so virulent in character as necessarily and inevitably to have produced that result, regardless of all other conditions and circumstances. Driskell v. U. S. Health & Acc. Ins. Co., 117 Mo. App. 362, 93 S. W. 880. The active, efficient cause that sets in motion a train of events which brings about a result without the intervention of any force started and working actively from a new and independent source is the direct and proximate cause. Id. If, under the peculiar temperament or condition of health of an individual upon whom it is inflicted, such injury appears as the active, efficient cause that sets in motion agencies that result in death without the intervention of any other independent force, then it should be regarded as the sole and proximate cause of death, notwithstanding the physical infirmity of the victim may be a necessary condition to the result. Id. Accident is sole and proximate cause of death though blood poison ensues, if the inoculation occurs at the time the wound is made and is a part of the accident. Central Acc. Ins. Co. v. Rembe, 220 Ill. 151, 77 N. E. 123. Where physician while preparing medicine for patient suffering with syphilis accidentally broke bottle and cut his finger, and blood poison resulted from which he subsequently died, held that the accidental injury and not the poisoning was the proximate cause of death. Instruction approved. Id., afg. 122 Ill. App. 507. Claim that inoculation was caused by pus discharged from ear of patient treated later held unsupported by evidence. Id. The proximate cause is not necessarily the immediate, near, or nearest cause, but the one that acts first, whether immediately to the injury or such injury be reached by setting other causes in motion, each in order being started naturally by the one that precedes it, and altogether constituting a complete chain or succession of events so united to each other by a close causal connection as to form a natural whole, reaching from the first or producing cause to the final result. Cary v. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 127 Wis. 67, 106 N. W. 1055. Where insured accidentally fell and sustained abrasion of skin on his leg, which appeared red and inflamed on second day, and on eighth day physician examined wound and found him to be suffering from blood poison from which he died two days later, held that accidental falling was proximate and sole cause of death. Id. Evidence held to support finding that injuries were proximate and sole cause of death. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. v. Fielding [Colo.] 83 P. 1013. Evidence held to sustain finding that injuries solely and independently of all other causes necessarily resulted in insured's death. Instructions approved. Continental Casualty Co. v. Hunt, 28 Ky. L. R. 1006, 90 S. W. 1056. Death held not to have resulted from accident solely and independently of all other causes but to have been natural and proximate result of diseased condition of the heart. Shanberg v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 143 F. 651.

65. Evidence held to sustain finding that injuries were sustained through external, violent, and purely accidental means. Instructions approved. Continental Casualty Co. v. Hunt, 28 Ky. L. R. 1006, 90 S. W. 1056. Death resulting from accidental falling of scalding water into ear held produced by external, violent, and accidental means. Driskell v. U. S. Health & Acc. Ins. Co., 117 Mo. App. 362, 93 S. W. 880. Prima facie case of death by external violence and accidental means is made out by proof of death by unexplained violent external means, without direct or positive testimony as to accident. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. v. Fielding [Colo.] 83 P. 1013. Evidence held to sustain finding that death was so caused. Id. Where policy provided for monthly indemnity for total or partial loss of time resulting from bodily injuries caused solely and exclusively by external, violent, and accidental means, and for payment of specified sum "if death should result solely from such injuries," held that the words "such injuries" referred to bodily injuries caused solely and exclusively by external, violent, and accidental means

Weekly indemnity is generally made dependent on the insured being wholly and immediately disabled.[67] Confinement to the house is also sometimes required.[68]

Such policies frequently exempt the insurer from liability for death or injuries resulting from voluntary or unnecessary exposure to danger,[69] or from any gas or vapor,[70] or from poison,[71] or from bodily infirmity or disease,[72] or for injuries intentionally inflicted[73] or received while fighting,[74] or for injury, sickness, or disability without regard to the extent of disablement that immediately followed the injury. Driskell v. U. S. Health & Acc. Ins. Co., 117 Mo. App. 362, 93 S. W. 880. A result which is the natural and direct effect of acts voluntarily done or of conditions voluntarily assumed is not accidental, though it may not be designed, foreseen, or expected. Fidelity & Casualty Co. v. Stacey's Ex'rs [C. C. A.] 143 F. 271, rvg. 137 F. 1012. There can be no recovery for death due to disease unless it can be shown that the disease is the direct result of accidental means. Id. Where insured assaulted a person who made no resistance and in striking him in the face injured his hand and blood poison developed from which he died, held that there could be no recovery under policy insuring him against death resulting directly and independently of all other causes from bodily injuries sustained through external, violent, and accidental means, injury which was direct cause of death being natural result of voluntary act. Id. Where insured while assisting another to carry door along level street said that he was tired and suddenly fell down and died, and autopsy showed that death resulted from rupture of heart, which was badly diseased, held that death was not accidental. Shamberg v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 143 F. 651.

66. Provision as to visible marks on body held applicable only to injuries not causing death within three months. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Ayers, 119 Ill. App. 402. Instruction that there could be no recovery if insured came to his death from injuries leaving no visible mark on his body properly refused where uncontradicted evidence showed that there were such marks. Id.

67. Where insured after his injury continued in his regular employment for a week, when he left on account of disagreement with employer, and thereafter worked several days for others, held that he was not "immediately" disabled. Letherer v. U. S. Health & Acc. Ins. Co. [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 439, 108 N. W. 491. Insured held not entitled to recover under accident policy providing for weekly indemnity while he was "wholly, immediately and continuously disabled from transacting any and every kind of business pertaining to his occupation," which was stated to be that of a section foreman, where, though partially disabled by accident, he continued to follow the same occupation, work the same force of hands, and receive the same pay, at least in the absence of evidence showing that salary was paid him as a mere gratuity through the generosity of his employer. Raburn v. Pennsylvania Casualty Co. [N. C.] 54 S. E. 283.

68. Where policy provided for payment of specified sum per week to plaintiff for period of disability during which "he shall be necessarily confined to the house," held that he could not recover in absence of showing that he was so confined. Schneps v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 101 N. Y. S. 106.

69. See 6 C. L. 99, n. 44, et seq. "Voluntary or unnecessary exposure to danger" means a conscious or intentional exposure involving gross or wanton negligence on the part of the insured. Hunt v. U. S. Acc. Ass'n [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 860, 109 N. W. 1042. Must be a realization that an accident will in all probability result, and an injury follow, from the action about to be taken. Danger of injury must be obvious. Id. Company held liable where insured broke his ankle while playing indoor baseball. Id. Question whether insured was killed because of unnecessarily exposing himself to danger from passing trains held, under the evidence, for the jury. Continental Casualty Co. v. Hagerty, 28 Ky. L. R. 925, 90 S. W. 561. Evidence held to support finding that death was not due to unnecessary exposure to danger or to obvious risk of injury. Continental Casualty Co. v. Johnson, 119 Ill. App. 93.

70. Exemption held not to exclude liability for death resulting from the involuntary inhalation of illuminating gas by insured while asleep. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Ayers, 119 Ill. App. 402.

71. Where physician broke bottle and cut his finger while preparing medicine for syphilitic patient and blood poison was caused by wound coming in contact with virus, held that death was not caused by "coming in contact with poisonous substance" within meaning of exemption, since germs would have produced no injurious effect except for wound. Central Acc. Ins. Co. v. Rembe, 220 Ill. 151, 77 N. E. 123, afg. 122 Ill. App. 507. Exemption from liability for injury "resulting from any poison or infection" held an exemption from liability only where resultant injury was proximately caused in manner specified, and did not relieve insurer from liability for death due to septicaemia but of which accidental injury was the proximate cause. Cary v. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 127 Wis. 67, 106 N. W. 1055.

72. Exemption from liability for death "resulting, either directly or indirectly, wholly or in part, from bodily infirmity or disease of any kind," held not to apply to bodily infirmity or disease, such as septicaemia, resulting solely from the accident. Cary v. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 127 Wis. 67, 106 N. W. 1055. Evidence held to justify finding that plaintiff was not afflicted with diabetes when he applied for and received policy, and that disease which developed subsequent to accident was attributable to it and that gangrene and amputation necessitated thereby were wholly the result of the accident. Jiroch v. Travelers' Ins. Co. [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 461, 108 N. W. 728.

73. Company held not liable for loss of resulting from certain specified diseases,[75] or for injuries occurring on any railroad right of way.[76] Injuries or death due to sunstroke[77] or blood poisoning[78] are often specifically insured against.

The insurer is, of course, not liable for accidents occurring after the policy has, by its terms, expired.[79]

Burglary insurance.—Whether or not the insurer is liable for specific losses is to be determined from the terms of the policy.[80] Burglary policies frequently cover damage to vaults, premises, furniture, and fixtures resulting from an attempt to enter such vaults.[81] Liability for money stolen from safes is sometimes limited to cases where they are entered by the use of tools or explosives directly thereupon.[82] eye due to a blow struck by another, it not being necessary for company to show that person striking insured had a specific intention to inflict the particular character of injury which might flow from the assault. Travelers' Protective Ass'n v. Weil [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 159, 91 S. W. 886. Not liable for injuries resulting from being hit with brick thrown by aggressor in difficulty in which insured became engaged, though insured was without fault. Washington v. Union Casualty & Surety Co., 115 Mo. App. 627, 91 S. W. 988. Evidence held to show that shooting of deceased was direct result of assault committed by him on third person and that injuries from which he died were intentionally inflicted. Gaines v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 111 App. Div. 386, 97 N. Y. S. 836.

74. Evidence held to show that insured came to his death as direct result of assault committed by him on third person who shot him. Gaines v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 111 App. Div. 386, 97 N. Y. S. 836.

75. Where policy provided that "no disability shall constitute a claim for accident, nor for injury, sickness, or disability which results from or is attributable to orchitis," held that no indemnity could be recovered thorough disability due to orchitis whether it resulted originally from an accident or not. Sweeney v. National Relief Assur. Ass'n, 101 N. Y. S. 797.

76. "Right of way" held to mean roadbed and not to include right of way outside of roadbed. Starr v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 41 Wash. 199, 83 P. 113.

77. Unless the context or some other special considerations require a different meaning, the term "sunstroke" will not be construed as applying only to an effect produced by the heat of the sun, but it denotes a condition produced by any heat, solar or artificial, and provision authorizing recovery for loss of time due to sunstroke authorizes recovery for loss of time due to exposure to furnace heat. Continental Casualty Co. v. Johnson [Kan.] 85 P. 545. Provision that sunstroke "shall be deemed to be due to external, violent, and purely accidental causes" does not preclude a recovery for injuries due to heat other than that of the sun, such as the heat of a furnace, the one being as much in the nature of an accident as the other. Id. Evidence that insured had previously received payment for a similar affliction under a like policy issued by same company upon the basis of its being an ordinary sickness held not to show different interpretation by the parties. Id. Fact that jury found that overwork was a contributing cause of insured's ailment held not to preclude recovery under clause providing for an indemnity for loss of time due "solely" to sunstroke. Id.

78. Policy held to cover death from septicaemia only when resulting from external, violent, and accidental means, so that there was no liability where insured died of septicaemia resulting from operation for appendicitis. Herdic v. Maryland Casualty Co., 146 F. 396. Where physician broke bottle and cut his finger while preparing medicine for syphilitic patient and blood poison was caused by wound coming in contact with virus, held that company was liable under rider extending policy so as to cover septic wounds "caused by accident while performing any operation pertaining to the business of the insured," the word "operation" meaning treatment pertaining to the business of the insured. Central Acc. Ins. Co. v. Rembe, 220 Ill. 151, 77 N. E. 123, afg. 122 Ill. App. 507. Where health policy provided for indemnity for disability resulting from blood poisoning, further provisions that policy should not apply to any disease or illness resulting from injury or from other diseases, etc., held inoperative as to blood poisoning since they removed from operation of policy every possible condition under which it could occur. Jones v. Pennsylvania Casualty Co., 140 N. C. 262, 52 S. E. 578.

79. Policy insuring against accidents occurring within one year from 12 o'clock noon of Dec. 11, 1902, held not to cover accident occurring Dec. 11, 1903, at 4:30 o'clock p. m. Matthews v. Continental Casualty Co. [Ark.] 93 S. W. 55.

80. Where item one of rider specifically insured jewelry and money, held that insured was entitled to recover for its loss though it was stolen from a safe and though rider also contained a blank for insurance of property in safes in which blanks for amount of insurance and premium were not filled. Casner v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co., 116 Mo. App. 354, 91 S. W. 1001.

81. Insurer held not liable for damages to vault, furniture, and fixtures resulting from fact that someone broke into bank and built fire on floor, there being nothing to show that there was any attempt to enter vault or that fire was built for that purpose. Mt. Eden Bank v. Ocean Acc. & Guarantee Co. [Ky.] 96 S. W. 450.

82. Evidence held to justify submission of case to jury on issue as to whether safe

Employers' liability insurance.[83]—The actual payment by the insured of a judgment against him is generally made a condition precedent to liability on the part of the insurer.[84]

Fire insurance.[85]—What property is covered by the policy is a question of intention to be arrived at by a construction of the contract in accordance with the general rules of interpretation previously stated.[86] The construction of particular policies will be found in the note.[87] A policy of insurance upon a building is an

83. See 6 C. L. 102.

84. Policy held a contract to indemnify insured against loss notwithstanding agreement to defend actions brought against him, so that no valid claim existed against insurer until judgment against insured had been paid by him, and hence insurer could not be held liable as garnishee in action by employe against insured. Allen v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 881, afg. 137 F. 136. Policy held contract of indemnity. Kennedy v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [Minn.] 110 N. W. 97. Provision that no action shall lie "unless it shall be brought by the insured himself to reimburse him for loss actually sustained and paid by him in satisfaction of a judgment within 60 days from date of such judgment and after trial of the issue" held to mean simply that judgment must have been paid and satisfied within 60 days from date of entry, and when so paid or satisfied the loss is actually sustained. Id. Execution and delivery of promissory notes by insured for amount of judgment and their acceptance in payment of judgment and the satisfaction of the judgment by the judgment creditor held sufficient in absence of showing of bad faith. Id. Insurer held liable for interest on amount of policy only from date when insured paid judgment recovered against him by employe. Henderson v. Maryland Casualty Co., 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 398. Policy held to make it a condition precedent to liability of company that insured must first pay judgment against him so that where total amount of judgment recovered against him, including costs and interest, exceeded stipulated limit of liability there could be no liability on the part of the company in excess of the limit for interest on the judgment until the judgment had been paid. Munro v. Maryland Casualty Co., 48 Misc. 183, 96 N. Y. S. 705. Where policy limited liability to a specified sum, held that a further provision that if any suit was brought against insured "the company will defend against such proceeding in the name and on behalf of the assured, or settle the same at its own cost, unless it shall elect to pay the insured the indemnity provided for," did not make the insurer liable for taxable costs of action against insured and interest thereon where judgment with interest was in excess of the limit of liability. Id. Company held not liable for interest accruing on verdict as result of its alleged delay in prosecuting an appeal, if not appearing that delay was unreasonable or that insured objected to it. Id.

87. Provisions of two policies held consistent, clear, and unambiguous, and to contemplate the use and occupancy of the building as a normal school and dwelling and make the same a condition precedent to the acceptance and continuation of the risk. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Buchanan [C. C. A.] 141 F. 877. Condition held broken and policy avoided where at time of loss building was used for temporary storage of library and portion of personal effects of teacher formerly living therein, but its use for school purposes had been absolutely suspended for an indefinite time, and no one was living there and it was not the abode of any one temporarily absent. Id. Policy insuring buildings marked with certain numbers on a specified plan, and providing that it should cover additions, alterations, and repairs, held not to cover a building not numbered on the plan and constructed and in use before the policy was issued. Arlington Co. v. Empire City Fire Ins. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 772. Term "machinery" held to include boiler, pipes, and fittings in laundry in which steam was used to provide heat for drying purposes, etc., as well as for motive power. Tubbs v. Mechanics' Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 324. Building used in part as store and in part as dwelling held not covered by policy insuring a dwelling house. Bowdtich v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc. [Mass.] 79 N. E. 788. Policy covering lumber, etc., "contained in their yards" held to cover lumber in shed located in yard. American Ins. Co. v. Meyers, 118 Ill. App. 484. Policy held to cover only lumber in yards or sheds in yards, and not that in sawmill buildings and additions. Ferguson v. Lumbermen's Ins. Co. [Wash.] 88 P. 128. Though "space clause" whereby insured warrants the maintenance of a designated clear space around the premises is void as a warranty because not authorized by statutes prescribing standard form of policy, it may contain effective language limiting the general descriptive language of the policy. Wild Rice Lumber Co. v. Royal Ins. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 871. Language of space clause held to clearly show that parties did not understand that lumber piled within 200 feet of mill was insured, though there was no such provision in policy. Id. Evidence held to justify finding that policy covering lumber in "mill sheds" referred to sheds at some distance from mill. Wolverine Lumber Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 642, 108 N. W. 1088. Boiler and connected parts, being in building which was on leased ground and hence to be regarded as personalty, held covered by clause insuring personalty even if regarded as fixtures. Tubbs v. Mechanics' Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 324. Particularly true where engine was of portable type which could readily be removed without injury to realty. Id. Fixtures and utensils of slaughterhouse conducted by plaintiff and used in wholesale insurance upon the building itself and not upon the materials of which it is composed.[88]

meat business, and dressed beef therein, held not covered by policy on "farm products, farm implements, and carriages and live stock on premises." Geraghty v. Washtenaw Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mich.] 108 N. W. 1102. Addition referred to in policy as containing insured property held "used as a livery and sale stable" where it was used in part for storage of sleighs and as place of occasional sale of carriages and sleighs, though also used in part as a repair and paint shop. Bickford v. Aetna Ins. Co. [Me.] 63 A. 552. Policy insuring household goods, etc., "the property of the assured or that of any member of his family," held not to cover piano held by insured under a lease. Swift v. Teutonia Ins. Co., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 253. Agreement held to amount to sale and delivery of glass so that vendor could not recover on policy covering property "sold but not delivered." Burke v. Continental Ins. Co., 184 N. Y. 77, 570, 76 N. E. 1086. Where vendor of glass held it as bailee of vendee under agreement expressly providing that vendor should not be liable for loss by fire, held that he was not entitled to recover under fire policy covering property held by him "in trust." Id.

Property held by insured as warehousemen, etc.: Policy indemnifying transportation companies "and other owners as interest may appear" against loss by fire of certain described property contained in specified warehouses, including certain claims thereon, whether "their own, or in their custody as warehousemen," etc., held to insure the property in the custody of the companies, and not to be limited to their interest or liability in respect to it, or an insurance of so much of the property as they might select. Kellner v. Fire Ass'n [Wis.] 106 N. W. 1060. Construction not changed by further provision that "the companies named herein as the assured (although they may not be liable for any loss) shall, after a loss, give notice to said assurer who was insured thereby and said notice shall be conclusive upon the assurer as to who, in addition to said companies, was so insured," which operated only to bind insurance company by such notice as to who were owners of property destroyed, and did not give transportation companies power to cut off any right acquired by owners of property covered by insurance clause. Id. Policy held undertaking to indemnify all classes of owners of property in which transportation company had special interest, and hence included every person embraced in class so that owners had right, when loss occurred, to adopt acts of their agent, the transportation company, and thereby secure the benefit resulting from policy as though it had expressly been issued to them, and having done so could sue thereon where company refused to do so. Id. Where transportation company, in pursuance of long standing arrangement, permitted consignee of goods to leave them in its warehouse without charge until sold when it delivered them to purchasers, held that it held them for him "either as warehouseman, forwarders, carriers, or otherwise," within meaning of policy. Id.

Additions: Policy covering personalty in a certain building and "addition" held to cover property on upper floors of separate building connected with larger main building by a platform supported by posts and reached by a runway and from which doors opened into each building, erected at same time as buildings and constantly used in connection with them, there being no other structure to which term addition could apply. Bickford v. Aetna Ins. Co. [Me.] 63 A. 552. Contention that property in such building could not have been covered because established rate thereon was higher than upon main building held untenable since that fact was not known to insured and hence could not affect his rights. Id. Policy on building "and its additions adjoining and communicating, including foundations, occupied as a laundry," held to cover boiler house situated about four feet distant from main building and connected therewith by steam pipe conveying power for engine in latter, a partially completed platform and overhead arch, and a sidewalk. Guthrie Laundry Co. v. Northern Assur. Co. [Okl.] 87 P. 649. Planing mill held an addition to and a part of sawmill building, though there was a space of 18 inches between them, where they communicated directly with each other, lumber was passed from the sawmill directly into the planing mill, a short stepladder extended from the floor of the former to the second floor of the latter, and a large belt covered by a box communicated from one to the other, and hence lumber therein was not covered by policy which excluded lumber in sawmill building and additions thereto from the risk. Ferguson v. Lumbermen's Ins. Co. [Wash.] 88 P. 128.

88. Where owners of clubhouse procured from insurer a permit to make alterations and repairs to cover the building on of a new kitchen to take the place of the old one then attached to and forming a part of said building, and pursuant thereto old kitchen was detached and removed to a point 100 yards from building and was there destroyed by fire at a time when its final disposition had not been determined upon, held that insurer was not liable for the loss. Evanston Golf Club v. Home Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 95 S. W. 980.

89. Where the fire occurs in the property insured and an explosion takes place therein during the progress of the fire, the effects of which are covered by the policy, and such explosion is a mere incident of the preceding fire, the latter is treated as the efficient cause and the whole loss is within the risk insured, though policy expressly excludes liability for loss by explosion. Hall v. National Fire Ins. Co., 115 Tenn. 513, 92 S. W. 402. Company held not liable for damage to goods caused solely by explosion in neighboring building as a result of a fire therein, where fire did not reach building in which such goods were located. Id. Where plaintiff made prima facie case of loss by fire and there was no or in case the building or any part thereof falls except as a result of fire.[90] The participation by a corporation in incendiarism by a stockholder or officer, or its consent thereto, bars a recovery.[91]

The insurer is responsible for losses occasioned by a risk insured against though directly contributed to by the negligence or carelessness of the insured or his agent.[92]

Life insurance.[93]—Statutes in some states prohibit the insuring of persons under a specified age.[94] The insurer is frequently exempted from liability in case insured dies by his own hand or commits suicide[95] while sane or insane.[96] By statute in some states suicide is no defense unless it is shown to the satisfaction of the court or jury trying the case that the insured contemplated suicide at the time he made his application for the policy, and any provision in the policy to the contrary is declared to be void.[97] Such statutes have been held to leave the parties free to contract respecting the classification of the risks and the amount of insurance which shall be provided for each, so long as they do not thereby indirectly but substantially make suicide a defense to an action on the policy, and, with that limitation, not to invalidate a provision for the payment of a smaller sum than otherwise in case of suicide.[98] evidence that explosion of gasoline can or stove did any damage in itself, held that court properly refused to direct verdict for defendant on ground that damages resulting from fire and from explosion were not apportioned. Walker v. Western Underwriters' Ass'n, 142 Mich. 162, 12 Det. Leg. N. 659, 105 N. W. 597.

90. Answers to points construing provision approved in view of uncontradicted evidence that fall of buildings was not caused by fire but was due to inherent weakness or defects, that fire was not caused by explosion, and that it originated after fall of buildings. Foster v. Home Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 307.

91. Evidence that fire was deliberately and purposely caused by act of president of corporation held admissible for purpose of showing that building was burned with consent of other stockholders where all the stock except one share was owned by his family and there was evidence that he had control, management, and disposition of property the same as if he had the title, and in view of action of other stockholders. Meily Co. v. London & L. Fire Ins. Co., 142 F. 873, afd. [C. C. A.] 148 F. 683. Evidence held to justify submission of question whether fire was caused by willful act of president under circumstances which would make his act a defense. Id. Instruction held not, in view of other instructions, objectionable as giving jury impression that independent act of president of corporation in setting fire would bar recovery. Id. Inadvertent references to president as the plaintiff held not prejudicial. Id. Instruction that plaintiff could not recover if jury found that president had control, management, and power of disposition of property the same as if he had the title, or if there was an understanding among the stockholders that he should burn the property in order that they might collect the insurance, held proper. Id. Evidence held to justify charge authorizing jury to take into consideration fact that fire started in three different places at once. Id. Evidence held sufficient to warrant verdict for defendant. Id.

92. German Ins. Co. v. Goodfriend [Ky.] 97 S. W. 1098. Evidence held not to show negligence on part of insured or his clerk in causing fire or in failing to extinguish it. Id.

93. See 6 C. L. 105.

94. Statute prohibiting the insuring of persons under 15 held not to render void a policy issued on life of person 14 years old, but having attached thereto a memorandum to the effect that company would not assume any risk on account of insured's death until he had arrived at age of 15 and had been examined and examination approved by medical director. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Miller [Neb.] 106 N. W. 229.

95. A provision that if insured within one year from the issuance of the policy dies by his own act or hand, whether sane or insane, the company shall not be liable for any greater sum than the premiums is valid. Thaxton v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 419. "Die by his own act or hand" refers to suicide only and does not include a killing by accident, even though the act of the insured may be the unintended means of causing death. Id. Evidence held insufficient to overcome presumption that insured, who was found dead with a gunshot wound in his side, did not commit suicide. Id. Evidence held sufficient to show suicide. Felix v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. [Pa.] 64 A. 903. Evidence held insufficient to authorize court to disturb finding against suicide. Equitable Life Ins. Co. v. Hebert [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 1023.

96. Provision that policy should be void if insured should die by his own hand "whether sane or insane" held to cover every case of suicide, regardless of his mental condition. Moore v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. [Mass.] 78 N. E. 488. Evidence held to show suicide. Id.

97. Mo. Rev. St. 1899, § 7896, is applicable to insurance against loss of life by external, violent, and accidental means because that

Sprinkler insurance.—Policies insuring against the accidental discharge of automatic sprinkler systems frequently exempt the company from loss due to cyclones,[99] and confine the risk insured against to leakages or discharges in that part of the building occupied by the insured.[1]

Title insurance.[2]—Whether or not the insured is guaranteed a legal title is to be determined from a construction of the policy.[3] One suing on a policy guarantying him against loss or damage which he may sustain by reason of defects of title or specified liens or incumbrances must show some loss or damage before he can recover thereon.[4]

Tornado insurance.—Policies of tornado insurance sometimes exempt the company from liability for loss to buildings having board roofs.[5]

Reformation of policy for mistake.[6]—If, by reason of a mutual mistake of fact,[7] or because of the fraud of the company or its agent,[8] the policy fails to state includes suicide while insane. Whitfield v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 144 F. 356.

98. Being in derogation of the common law in restraint of freedom to contract, and subversive of sound morality in that it permits recovery for suicide while sane, should receive restrictive rather than an expansive construction. Whitfield v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 144 F. 356. Provision in accident policy in which principal sum was $5,000 that only $500 should be paid in case of suicide, held not to show purpose to evade the statute but to be valid. Id.

99. "Cyclone" held to refer to that character of windstorm distinguished by its concentrated force and violence, so resistless as to make it especially destructive in its narrow pathway to property like buildings and not to be confined to storms characterized by high winds rotating around a center of low atmospheric pressure, and this center moving onward with greater or less velocity. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Finch [C. C. A.] 147 F. 388.

1. Risk insured against held confined to discharges or leakages from that part of the system "erected in or on that portion of the building occupied by the assured," so that he was not entitled to recover for loss due to leakage on an upper floor occupied by another tenant though water found its way down through intervening floors and injured his property. Bottomley v. Royal Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 73, 76 N. E. 463.

2. See 6 C. L. 105.

3. Testator, who owned half interest in mortgage, gave entire estate to widow for life with remainder to children in equal parts. Plaintiff acquired interests of two of the children in the mortgage by assignment and obtained from defendant policy guarantying him from loss due to existing defects in title or liens or incumbrances. Held that policy did not in terms or by implication guaranty to plaintiff a legal title to specified assigned interest, and he was not entitled to recover because legal title was in executrix or receiver of decedent's estate. Banes v. New Jersey Title Guarantee & Trust Co. [C. C. A.] 142 F. 957.

4. Banes v. New Jersey Title Guarantee & Trust Co. [C. C. A.] 142 F. 957. Testator, who owned half interest in mortgage, gave his entire estate to wife for life with remainder to seven children. Plaintiff acquired interest of two of the children by assignment and obtained from defendant a policy guarantying him against loss due to existing defects in title or liens or incumbrances. Held that no loss was shown by proof that the receiver of testator's estate had collected the portion of the mortgage belonging to the estate and had satisfied it to that extent, plaintiff's right being transferred to fund in receiver's hands and it not appearing that fund had been impaired or was in danger of diminution. Id.

5. Policy insuring all property "except buildings provided with board roofs" held to cover building with a roof part board and part shingled. Kennedy v. Agricultural Ins. Co. [S. D.] 110 N. W. 116.

6. See 6 C. L. 105.

7. In suit to reform policy for mistake and to recover thereon, petition must allege that mistake was mutual. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Brannon [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 527, 91 S. W. 614. It is not essential that both parties agree that a mistake was made, question whether there was a mutual mistake being for court or jury on the evidence. Id. Where rider permitted $1,500 "total concurrent insurance, including this policy," and policy was itself for that amount and contained provision that it should be void in case other insurance should be taken out without company's consent, held that provisions of contract as to concurrent insurance were ambiguous, and, in absence of fraud or laches, policy was subject to reformation and enforcement as reformed in a proper action. Kelly v. Citizens' Mut. Fire Ass'n, 96 Minn. 477, 105 N. W. 675. Evidence held to justify finding that actual contract was to permit other concurrent insurance and that provision in rider limiting total concurrent insurance to a sum equal to the amount of the policy sued on was inserted by mistake. Id.

8. The fraud of an agent having authority to negotiate for insurance and to issue and deliver the policy, in misstating in the policy any fact essential to its validity, is chargeable to the company. Allegations as to fraud held sufficient. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Brannon [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 527, 91 S. W. 614. Statement of agent to plaintiff when policy was issued that it was all right and would stand in any court held relevant on question of plaintiff's negligence in failing to read policy. Id. Evidence that agent told plaintiff when policy was deliv-

the contract as actually agreed upon, it may be reformed in a court of equity and a recovery had thereon as reformed. So too, a policy may be reformed by inserting provisions inadvertently omitted.[9] Reformation may be had for a mistake of law where the insured is led into it through reliance on the representations of the insurer's agent.[10]

§ 11. The beneficiary and the insured.[11]—The general rules of construction previously stated apply in determining who are the beneficiaries under the policy.[12] The person named in the application as the beneficiary will be regarded as such where none is named in the policy.[13] A statute providing that a policy in favor of a married woman shall inure to her separate use and benefit and that of her children gives them an inchoate interest only.[14] Where the policy is payable to the wife and children and one or more of them dies before the insured, the whole interest goes to the survivors.[15] The company is sometimes given the option to pay the proceeds of the policy to any person appearing to be equitably entitled thereto by reason of having incurred expense on behalf of the insured.[16] A provision that payment to any relative of the insured belonging to a designated class will discharge the company, while valid, does not operate to make the person actually receiving the money thereunder the beneficiary, but is merely an appointment by the parties of a person who may collect the amount due for the benefit of the person ultimately entitled thereto.[17] A fire policy payable to the estate of a deceased person is not void for ered that it was all right and would stand in any court held not objectionable as mere conclusion or expression of opinion. Id. If there was a mutual agreement between agent and plaintiff to insure property in certain cabin, and by error, mistake, or fraud, agent described property as being located elsewhere, held that company would be bound, it not being necessary to enable plaintiff to have policy reformed and to recover thereon that agent intended to write policy to cover property in cabin or in some other building. Id.

9. Where agents had authority to issue vacancy permits, and were accustomed to do so for plaintiff at his request and to attach them to his policies to which they had access without first submitting them to him and without charge, held that where agents agreed to issue permit on expiration of one in force, but failed, through inattention or oversight, to do so, after loss, policy would be reformed by inserting such a permit. Mississippi Fire Ass'n v. Stein [Miss.] 41 So. 66.

10. Where agent and insured both intended that policy should cover only that part of the cotton in a certain warehouse which was held by insured on storage for farmers and not all the cotton therein, and insured relied on representations of agent that it covered only that part of the cotton so intended to be covered, held that it would be reformed so as to correspond with the intention and agreement. Phoenix Assur. Co. v. Boyett [Ark.] 90 S. W. 284. Fact that original mistake was made several years before issuance of policy in suit when that kind of insurance first came into use in the locality held immaterial. Id.

11. See 6 C. L. 106.

12. See § 7, ante. Policy payable to wife "in trust for herself and their children" held to include insured's children by a former wife. Lehman v. Lehman [Pa.] 64 A. 598, afg. 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 60. Policy provided that company agreed with "assured, his executors, administrators, and assigns" to pay the amount thereof to his "legal representatives." Assured was unmarried. Held that words "legal representatives" meant executors and administrators and not next of kin. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Kansas City Nat. Bank [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 195. Heirs and next of kin held not real beneficiaries under fire policy payable to the estate of a decedent. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Prude [Ala.] 40 So. 322.

15. Doty v. Dickey [Ky.] 96 S. W. 54[illegible].

16. Where policy provided that it should be payable to executors, administrators, or assigns, held that further provision that company might make payment to any relative of insured, or to any other person appearing to be equitably entitled thereto by reason of having incurred expense for burial of insured or otherwise, merely gave insurer option to make payment to such persons if it so desired, and hence it was under no legal obligation to make payment to one who had paid funeral expenses to an amount equaling that of the policy. Ferretti v. Prudential Ins. Co., 49 Misc. 489, 97 N. Y. S. 1007. Where policy provided that company might pay amount due thereon to any person appearing to it to be equitably entitled thereto by reason of having incurred expense on behalf of the insured or for her burial, and company promised by its authorized officer to pay undertaker the expense of burying insured, held that company was estopped, in action by such undertaker for such services, to deny that it had exercised its option to make such payment to it. uncertainty.[18] In the absence of a charter provision to the contrary, membership in a mutual company commences only with the taking out of a policy and lasts only during the policy period.[19] The beneficiary is bound by representations made by the insured for the purpose of obtaining the policy and is subject to the consequence of his knowledge of their falsity.[20]

In the absence of a provision in the contract to the contrary,[21] the beneficiary in an ordinary life policy has a vested interest therein[22] of which he cannot be deprived without his consent.[23] He is, however, only entitled to the fruits of the contract and cannot recover damages for wrongs inflicted on the insured by the company through a breach of its contract with him.[24] The insured's wife is not deprived of her vested interest in policies in which she is named as beneficiary

Same held true as to company organized under Laws 1854, p. 421, c. 278, § 3, providing that every person who shall at any time become interested in said company by insuring therein, and also his heirs, etc., continuing to be insured therein, shall be deemed members thereof during the terms specified in their respective policies and no longer. Id.

20. Stands in no better position than insured and hence his previous admissions in regard to matters so represented are not hearsay as to her. Hews v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 850.

21. The rule that the beneficiary has a vested interest in the policy precluding its assignment without his consent has no application where it authorizes a change of beneficiaries. Aldrich v. Brinker, 143 F. 563. Where policy payable to insured's wife provided that insured might assign it or change beneficiary, held that wife had no vested interest therein notwithstanding St. 1903, § 654, providing that policy payable to married woman shall be her separate property free from claims of insured's creditors, and insured could assign it to insurer as collateral for loan without her consent. Crice v. Illinois Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 92 S. W. 560. Same held true of policy in mutual company though its charter provided that policy should be for benefit of wife, children, etc., and should not be liable for insured's debts. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Twyman, 28 Ky. L. R. 1153, 92 S. W. 335. Accident policy held not to authorize insured to release company from liability to beneficiary for death indemnity and hence receipt given by insured for week's indemnity releasing company from any further liability to him or beneficiary growing out of a certain injury did not preclude latter from recovering death indemnity on insured's subsequent death as a result of such injury. Graham v. Union Casualty & Surety Co. [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 614. Where insured to whom policy had been assigned by beneficiary, assigned it to plaintiffs on condition that he reserved the right to change the beneficiaries, held that plaintiffs acquired no vested interest in it or its proceeds, so that, where he subsequently exercised such right with the consent of the company, their interest in the policy was defeated and they were not entitled to its proceeds. Ogletree v. Ogletree [Ga.] 55 S. E. 954.

22. In old line policy. Blum v. New York Life Ins. Co., 197 Mo. 513, 95 S. W. 317. Acquires entire property interest in contract the moment the policy is executed and delivered. Lanier v. Eastern Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 54 S. E. 786. The terms of the policy constitute a contract of the company to pay the specified amount to the beneficiary, and create direct legal obligations between him and the insurer. Id. Beneficiary held entitled to recover on policy if premiums had been paid and policy was otherwise in force, unless company could show that it had been lawfully surrendered with her consent or that insured had duly and legally exercised right to change beneficiary. Id. Where beneficiary proved issuance of policy for her benefit, the possession of it by her, the removal of it from her possession without her knowledge, the payment of premiums, the death of the insured, and the waiver of proofs of death, held that she made prima facie case and was not required to establish the affirmative facts in issue presented by company as to whether it had obtained possession of policy fraudulently. Id.

23. Blum v. New York Life Ins. Co., 197 Mo. 513, 95 S. W. 317. Where beneficiary under policy stipulating that there could be no change of beneficiary without her consent released all her interest present and prospective to the insured, held that he thereby became the sole and absolute owner and holder of the policy. Ogletree v. Ogletree [Ga.] 55 S. E. 954. The concurrence of the beneficiaries is a condition precedent to valid action on the part of the insured in the nature of treating a contract of life insurance as rescinded and basing thereon a suit for recovery of premiums paid; nor can a suit, without the concurrence of the beneficiaries, be based upon the wrongful refusal of the company to receive further premiums or continue the policy in force. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Penn, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S. 97.

24. Cannot recover damages resulting from fact that company made illegal assessments upon insured, failed to set apart a by her subsequent divorce.[25] Statutes in some states authorize a change of beneficiaries in such case.[26] Her interest being her individual property is not affected by a contract releasing all claims to any of her husband's property arising out of the marriage relation.[27] Where the assured has done all that is required of him in order to change the beneficiary and the company has consented to the change, it will be treated as accomplished though the assured dies before the formal indorsement of change on the policy by the company.[28]

Rights of employe under employer's liability policy.[29]—Where the policy indemnifies the insured against loss actually sustained and paid, an employe recovering judgment against him for an injury within the terms of the policy cannot recover the amount thereof from the insurer.[30]

Rights of mortgagees, creditors, trustees, etc., under loss payable clauses.[31]—While the insertion of a clause making the loss payable to a third person does not make the latter a party to the contract,[32] yet it gives him an interest in the policy of which he cannot be deprived without his consent.[33] In the absence of a provision to the contrary,[34] any act of the insured which would avoid the policy reserve fund, did not place him in particular class, etc., right of action, if any, being in insured's personal representatives for benefit of his estate. Price v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 102 Md. 683, 62 A. 1040.

25. Wife held to have acquired vested interest in endowment policy, payable to her in case insured did not live until by its terms it was payable to him unless she predeceased him, which was not divested by her subsequent divorce. Wallace v. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co., 97 Minn. 27, 106 N. W. 84.

26. Rev. St. 1899, § 7895, providing that, where policy is payable to insured's wife and she procures a divorce before his death, he may change the beneficiary, cannot be given retrospective operation so as to deprive beneficiary under old line policy of vested rights acquired under previously existing laws. Blum v. New York Life Ins. Co., 197 Mo. 513, 95 S. W. 317. Statute applies only where the wife is the sole beneficiary and not where the policy is payable to children in event of her death before that of the insured. Id.

27. Such interest was her individual property so that it was not affected by contract between her and her husband whereby he agreed that certain property might be awarded her as alimony, and she agreed to relinquish all claims to any of his property arising out of relation of husband and wife. Wallace v. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co., 97 Minn. 27, 106 N. W. 84.

28. Where policy provided that insured might "at any time" change beneficiary by written notice to company accompanied by the policy, held that company thereby gave its consent beforehand, it appearing that it had been accustomed to treat change as accomplished when it received notice and policy and to regard indorsement as a mere ministerial act. Freund v. Freund, 117 Ill. App. 565.

29. See 6 C. L. 108.

30. Where policy provided that no action should lie against company thereon unless brought by the insured for loss or expense actually sustained and paid in money by him after actual trial of the issue, nor unless such action should be brought within 90 days after such payment, held that where judgment was recovered against insured by employe but it could not be collected because of insured's insolvency, employe could not recover amount thereof from insurer, though latter had defended action against insured as it had a right to do under the policy. Beyer v. International Aluminum Co., 101 N. Y. S. 83.

32. German Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, Wilson & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 798, 92 S. W. 1068.

33. After creditor, to whom loss was made payable unconditionally, had commenced an action on the policy, insurer paid to the clerk of court the amount of premiums paid on the policy and sought to avoid it for reasons set up in answer. Insured received the money from the clerk without the creditor's knowledge or consent. Held that creditor was not deprived of his interest in the policy or his right to prosecute the action. German Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, Wilson & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 798, 92 S. W. 1068. Insured could not, after loss, by an assignment of his claim defeat the rights of payees under loss payable clause. Id. Where the loss is payable to a mortgagee as his interest may appear, the company is not relieved from liability to him by paying the loss to the mortgagor without the mortgagee's consent. Mortgage clause is notice to company of mortgagee's rights. Ebensburg Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 341.

34. Where mortgage clause provided that interest of mortgagee was not to be affected by any act or neglect of the mortgagor or owner of the premises, held that the mortgagees were not bound to give notice and proofs of loss. Adams v. Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins Co., 115 Mo. App. 21, 90 S. W. 747. Policy was made payable to mortgagee as his interest might appear and it was further provided that as to his interest insurance should not be invalidated by foreclosure proceedings nor by any change in title or ownership of property. Loss occurred after mortgagee had purchased at foreclosure sale but before he had received deed from as to him will ordinarily prevent a recovery by a mortgagee to whom the loss is made payable as his interest may appear.[35] It has, however, been held that fraudulent representations and concealments on the part of the mortgagor in procuring insurance payable to the mortgagee will not avoid the policy as to the latter where he is ignorant of the fraud.[36] Mortgage clauses sometimes require the mortgagee to notify the insurer of any change of ownership.[37] The amount of the mortgagee's recovery in case of a loss is limited to the damage to his interest in the premises as mortgagee.[38] The mortgage is not necessarily merged in the legal title on the subsequent conveyance of the property to the mortgagee.[39]

The rights of a trustee in a policy made payable to him as such are extinguished by foreclosure of the trust deed.[40]

Insurance by bailee or agent.[41]

§ 12. Policy value in cash or loans and right to share in surplus before loss.[42] —Agency to make a policy loan contract is sufficiently shown by a stipulation of counsel that it was executed by both parties and was ratified by the company's vice-president, or was entered into at his suggestion.[43] On failure of the insured to pay a loan the company has no right to forfeit or cancel the policy on any basis which will deprive him of any part of its cash surrender value over and above the amount of the debt.[44]

referee. Held that his interest as mortgagee continued until delivery of deed and hence he was entitled to recover to extent of damage to his interest. Uhlfelder v. Palatine Ins. Co., 111 App. Div. 57, 97 N. Y. S. 499, rvg. 44 Misc. 153, 89 N. Y. S. 792. Clause was attached to policy making loss payable to mortgagee as his interest might appear. Policy provided that it should be void for change in interest, title, or possession, without company's consent indorsed thereon, and also that if, with consent of company, an interest under policy should exist in favor of a mortgagee "the conditions hereinbefore contained shall apply in the manner expressed in such provisions and conditions of insurance relating to such interests as shall be written upon, attached, or appended hereto." Held that rights of mortgagee were not affected by act of owner in selling premises where condition as to change of title was not written upon, attached, or appended to provision by which mortgagee's interest in the policy was created. Edge v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. [S. D.] 105 N. W. 281.

35. Where policy was forfeited by commencement of foreclosure proceedings without written consent of insurer, held that mortgagee to whom loss was payable as his interest might appear, had no greater rights than the insured. Woodard v. German-American Ins. Co., 128 Wis. 1, 106 N. W. 681.

36. Mortgagor is not in any sense the agent of the mortgagee in procuring insurance on the mortgaged premises for the benefit of the mortgagee as his interest may appear and in accordance with an agreement so to do. Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Boland, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 325.

37. Acquisition of legal title by mortgagee through quitclaim deed from mortgagor held not such a change. Fort Scott Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Palatine Ins. Co. [Kan.] 86 P. 142.

38. Where mortgagee had, before fire, disposed of two-thirds of his interest under his bid, he was only entitled to recover one-third of the actual damage. Uhlfelder v. Palatine Ins. Co., 111 App. Div. 57, 97 N. Y. S. 499, rvg. 44 Misc. 153, 89 N. Y. S. 792.

39. Merger takes place or not as the mortgagee may desire or his interest may require. Fort Scott Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Palatine Ins. Co. [Kan.] 86 P. 142. Where mortgage was secured in part by policy issued to mortgagor and made payable to mortgagee, held that mortgage was not merged in the legal title subsequently conveyed to the mortgagee as security for the mortgage debt so as to relieve the insurer from liability to the mortgagee on a subsequent loss. Id.

40. Plaintiff executed trust deed of realty to defendant to secure loan to third person and procured a fire policy on building making loss payable to defendant as trustee. Deed was foreclosed and property sold to complainant in foreclosure suit, leaving deficiency for which judgment was entered. Held that, on subsequent destruction of the building, plaintiff was entitled to proceeds of policy paid before expiration of period of redemption, the foreclosure having put an end to the contract evidenced by the deed of trust and of all rights thereunder, and defendant, being no longer trustee, could only receive money as plaintiff's agent. Rawson v. Bethesda Baptist Church, 221 Ill. 216, 77 N. E. 560. Plaintiff's insurable interest was not extinguished by foreclosure since he was entitled to possession during period of redemption. Id. Foreclosure operated to extinguish lien of trust deed and hence purchaser had no lien on fund. Id. Where draft for proceeds was payable jointly to plaintiff's trustees and to defendant, indorsement thereof by plaintiff's trustees and delivery to defendant held not to amount to a payment to him by trustees so as to preclude plaintiff from recovering same from him. Id.

The legal title to the assets of a mutual company is in the corporation, but the equitable right thereto and real beneficiary interest therein is in the members, and the corporate property belongs to them after the corporate purposes are exhausted.[45] In case the company is wound up the net assets constitute a fund for distribution between the then members according to their respective contributions to the company's treasury, and the same is true in regard to distributions of surplus other than following a dissolution.[46] A member's right to any particular part of the surplus is, however, to be determined solely by the terms of his contract.[47] He cannot maintain an equitable suit against the company for an accounting and discovery solely because of an alleged breach of contract as to the distribution of the surplus where there is no trust or fiduciary relation between the parties and no necessity for adjusting complicated or mutual accounts,[48] and this is particularly true where the statute prohibits the appointment of a receiver or an accounting unless the attorney general makes the application therefor or approves the same.[49]

43. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Mills [Fla.] 41 So. 603.

44. Assignment of policy to company as collateral security for loan held not to give such right, but remedy in such case was by resort to court of equity to have surrender value determined in accordance with St. 1903, § 653, any excess thereof over the amount of the debt to be paid to the insured or used in purchasing paid up insurance at his election. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Twyman, 28 Ky. L. R. 1153, 92 S. W. 335. Cash surrender value is to be ascertained as of date when loan became enforceable in method provided by §§ 653, 659, for estimating the value of the reserve of life policies, any "dividends" in which policy was entitled to participate in addition to the reserve being taken into consideration. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Twyman [Ky.] 97 S. W. 391. Where it was shown that instead of exercising option to cancel the company opened up negotiations looking to a new loan which were still pending when insured died, held that beneficiary was entitled to recover amount of policy less amount of indebtedness. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Mills [Fla.] 41 So. 603. Evidence held to justify charge based on assumption that loan value did not constitute entire value of policy. Id.

45. Corporation owns property but members own the corporation. Huber v. Martin, 127 Wis. 412, 105 N. W. 1031, 1135. In absence of charter provision to the contrary, policy holders, as regards rights and remedies, are stockholders therein the same as owners of stock in a stock corporation. Id. Are both insurers and insured, and in former capacity are entitled to share in losses and profits of the business on the basis of a partnership except in so far as policy or charter provides otherwise. Id.

46. Huber v. Martin, 127 Wis. 412, 105 N. W. 1031, 1135. Existing policy holders are the only legitimate distributees and are entitled to whole. Id. Supposed common-law rule that, upon termination of corporation, its debts become extinguished, its realty reverts to the grantor, and its personalty goes to the sovereign, if it ever existed, is obsolete except as to purely public corporations. Id. Surplus belongs equitably to the policy holders who contributed to it in the proportion in which they contributed to it. United States Life Ins. Co. v. Spinks [Ky.] 96 S. W. 889.

47. Interests of policy holder being strictly contractual where contract does not contemplate a management of the business by him. or give him the right to dictate the amount of the dividend to be declared from the surplus, or to question the result after the exercise of the discretion of the managers in that regard, he cannot maintain a suit in equity against it for an accounting and the appointment of a receiver on the ground of mismanagement and the misappropriation of funds by officers. Brown v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 142 F. 835. Where charter provided that after payment of interest on stock and that earnings over and above dividends, losses, and expenses should be accumulated and it and policy provided that policy holder should be entitled to participate in distribution of surplus according to such principles and methods as might be adopted by the company, held not to require distribution of entire net surplus above legal reserve to policy holders but only an equitable proportion thereof to be determined by officers in exercise of their discretion, their determination being prima facie equitable. Id. Policy holder has no interest in surplus until it is equitably apportioned and there is no trust relation, so that he cannot maintain suit in equity for an accounting on ground that discretion has been abused where there has been a distribution. Id. Policy merely entitling insured to "participation in profits," and charter as to distribution of surplus, held not to require distribution of entire net surplus above legal reserve. Buford v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 93 N. Y. S. 152.

48. Brown v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 142 F. 835. Rights and liabilities of company and holder of policy entitling him to share in surplus after payment of losses and expenses and accumulation of legal reserve are purely contractual, the relation being one of debtor and creditor, and not a trust or fiduciary relation. Id.

49. N. Y. Laws 1892, p. 1958, c. 690, § 56. Brown v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 142 F. 835. Whether officers should have credited greater portion of surplus as dividends upon

§ 13. Options and privileges under policy.[50]—Life policies frequently provide that, on default in the payment of premiums after a specified number of premiums have been paid,[51] the insured's share of the reserve fund shall be applied to the purchase of extended insurance from the date of the lapse[52] provided he is not then indebted to the company,[53] or that he shall be entitled to a paid up policy on a written request therefor in such amount as any excess of reserve over his indebtedness to the company will purchase,[54] or that he shall be given a paid up policy for a specified sum unless he elects within a certain time to take term or extended insurance in lieu thereof,[55] or that the insurance shall be continued in force for a specified period from the due date of the unpaid premium.[56] Statutes in some states provide that under such circumstances the insured's proportionate share of the surplus, including dividend additions,[57] or the net value of the policy at the time of default,[58] outstanding policies, and, if so, how much, held to necessarily involve an accounting. Buford v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 98 N. Y. S. 152.

50. See 6 C. L. 110.

51. Acceptance by company of part of second premium in cash and a note for balance, which was not paid at maturity, held not such a payment as to entitle insured to extended insurance on basis of two payments, particularly where clause relied on was made applicable only if there was no indebtedness to the company. Bank of Commerce v. New York Life Ins. Co., 125 Ga. 552, 54 S. E. 643. Quoted words in provision in note that policy should be void if it was not paid at maturity "except as otherwise provided in the policy itself," held not to change construction. Id. After paying one premium on term policy insured exchanged it for regular life policy as he had a right to do under its provisions. Latter policy provided that after payment of three full years' premiums insured should, in case of lapse for nonpayment, be entitled to extended insurance. Insured paid two premiums under second policy but failed to pay third. Held that the two policies did not constitute one continuing contract but that each was a separate contract and insured was not entitled to extended insurance. McGuire v. Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. S. 891.

52. Evidence held to show that policy was antedated at request of insured and that it was mutual intention that yearly terms should commence and end on Nov. 11th instead of Jan. 15th, though policy was issued on latter date, and hence default for nonpayment of premiums and consequent lapse occurred on Nov. 11th, and period of extended insurance was to be calculated from that date. Johnson v. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 950. Anniversary of policy being on Nov. 11th, and it having lapsed on that date, held that it was not entitled to participate in fund set apart by directors in previous January for payment of dividends on all participating policies which should be "continued in force on their anniversaries" in that calendar year, and a certain part of which was apportioned to it. Id. Settlement of interest charge on premium loan made at time of payment of premium cannot, in the absence of fraud or mistake, be opened up after the insured's death, several years later, for purpose of adding to the term of insurance. Id.

53. Insured held not entitled to extended insurance where he failed to repay loan. Jagoe v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 96 S. W. 598.

54. Provision held unavailing where it did not appear that any request was made, or that there was such an excess of reserve as would have purchased paid up insurance for time extending beyond insured's death. Bank of Commerce v. New York Life Ins. Co., 125 Ga. 552, 54 S. E. 643. Policy and note given for loan thereon construed, and held that, on lapse of policy after loan was made for failure to pay premium, company was required to make immediate settlement, was bound to use total amount of reserve, less amount due on note at time of lapse, in purchasing nonparticipating policy, and had no right to make arbitrary deductions from the reserve or to deduct therefrom a sum sufficient to carry the policy to the maturity of the loan. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Barnett's Adm'r [Ky.] 96 S. W. 1120.

55. Provision for paid up insurance held to have gone into effect automatically so that on his death within specified period, without having exercised option, his representative could not make election for him or recover more than amount of paid up policy. Michigan Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Mayfield's Adm'r, 28 Ky. L. R. 825. 90 S. W. 607. In absence of election by insured to take term insurance and surrender of policy within time prescribed, held that beneficiary was only entitled to proceeds of paid up policy. Sugg v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. [Tenn.] 94 S. W. 936.

56. Policy provided that premiums should be paid annually on June 1st, that one month's grace should be allowed during which policy should remain in force, and also that, after policy had been in force a year, if it should lapse for nonpayment of premiums company would continue insurance in force "a period of 60 days from the due date of such premium, as specified on the first page hereof." Held that 60-day period commenced to run on June 1st and not from expiration of 30 days' grace. Grattan v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 821.

57. Under N. Y. Laws 1892, p. 1869, c. 690, § 88, the proportionate share of the surplus, including dividend additions, of a policy lapsed for nonpayment of premiums after having been in force for three years must be applied to the payment of extended in-shall be used in the purchase of extended insurance. There is a conflict of authority as to whether time is of the essence of a provision requiring the surrender of the policy within a specified time in order that the insured may be entitled to a paid up policy.[59]

§ 14. Assignments and transfers of benefits or insurance. Life insurance.[60] —There is a conflict of authority as to the validity of an assignment of a life policy to one having no insurable interest in the life of the insured,[61] but all courts unite in holding such assignments void where the transaction is a mere wager.[62]

Where choses in action are made assignable by statute a provision in the policy that it shall not be assignable is ineffectual.[63] Since the beneficiary has a vested interest in the policy,[64] it cannot ordinarily be assigned without his consent,[65] but surance, unless policy holder elects to take paid up insurance therefor. United States Life Ins. Co. v. Spinks [Ky.] 96 S. W. 889. The words "dividend additions" as used in that act refer to that part of the premiums charged which was "loaded" onto the premium in excess of its share of expenses and losses sustained. Id. Such additions and the earnings thereon, which constitute the "surplus," must be valued and applied in purchasing extended insurance in the same way that the "reserve" of the policy is required to be valued and applied for that purpose. Id. The company must keep accurate accounts with policy holders as classes, failing which no presumptions will be indulged in its favor in the matter of valuing and applying surplus or dividend additions to lapsed policies. Id. Is not optional with directorate of company whether it will declare dividends from so-called surplus or to what extent they will do so. Id. Held that application of "dividend additions" as required would have extended policy until after insured's death so that company was liable for full amount of policy. Id.

58. Under Rev. St. 1899, §§ 5856, 5868, on default after payment of two annual premiums. Capp v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co., 117 Mo. App. 532, 94 S. W. 734. Attempt to declare policy void held ineffectual, and hence insured was not entitled to recover damages by reason thereof. Id. Insured is not deprived of right to extended insurance by failure to demand, within 60 days after the beginning of the extended insurance, a paid up policy as authorized by § 5857. Id.

59. Time held not of the essence of provision requiring surrender within 6 months so that insured was entitled to paid up policies where he surrendered one policy 5 days, and other 18 days, after expiration of six months, a surrender within a reasonable time being all that was necessary. Lenon v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [Ark.] 98 S. W. 117.

61. Arkansas: One may assign policy on his own life, payable to his administrator or assigns, to one having no insurable interest. Matlock v. Bledsoe [Ark.] 90 S. W. 848.

Georgia: One has the right to procure insurance on his own life and assign the policy to another, who has no insurable interest in the life insured, provided it is not done by way of cover for a wager policy, there being no limitation on right of assignment conferred by Code 1895, § 2116. Rylander v. Allen, 125 Ga. 206, 53 S. E. 1032.

Kentucky: To make the sale or assignment valid as between the parties the assignee or purchaser must be related to the insured in such degree as would authorize him to take out insurance on the life of the assignor or vendor, or he must be a creditor, and, if a creditor, he can only participate in the proceeds of the policy to the extent of the indebtedness the policy was sold or assigned to secure. Bramblett v. Hargis' Ex'r [Ky.] 94 S. W. 20. This rule is equally applicable in the case of paid up policies. Id. Where policies were taken out by insured on his own life for express purpose of assigning them to one having no insurable interest under agreement that assignee was to pay insured a specified sum for them and to pay premiums, held that both assignment and policies were void and insured's administrator could not recover on them. Bromley's Adm'r v. Washington Life Ins. Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 1300, 92 S. W. 17.

Kansas: It is against public policy to permit one without insurable interest in the life of another to obtain insurance thereon, either directly or by assignment. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Elison, 72 Kan. 199, 83 P. 410. An assignment of one-half interest in a policy to one in consideration of the payment of the premiums by the assignee as they accrue renders the policy uncollectible both as to the beneficiary and the assignee. Id.

Ohio: Only those having an insurable interest in the life of the insured can become beneficiaries under a policy either by assignment or otherwise. Evans v. Moore, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 123.

Vermont: Policy taken out by insured on his own life and thereafter assigned to one having no insurable interest is not wagering policy though taken out for purpose of such assignment. Harrison's Adm'r v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 78 Vt. 473, 63 A. 321.

this rule has no application where a change of beneficiaries is expressly authorized.[66] Policies payable to the insured, his executors or assigns, are assets in his hands belonging to himself alone, and he has the legal right to transfer them with or without consideration,[67] provided such transfer is not in fraud of his creditors,[68] or to pledge them as security for an existing debt.[69] The company assenting to a transfer is not affected by the fact that it is fraudulent as to creditors unless it has knowledge of the fraud or is in possession of such facts as would have put a prudent person upon such inquiry as would have discovered it.[70] The usual rules as to the sufficiency of the consideration for an assignment apply.[71]

Title passes by a verbal sale or gift accompanied by delivery.[72] An assignment for which the consideration has been paid is valid, though not delivered, except as to subsequent purchasers in good faith and for value.[73] So too, an agreement to assign made in good faith and while solvent, the consideration therefor being paid, gives the party with whom it is made an equitable lien on the policy, and a subsequent formal assignment to him will be upheld as against the assignor's trustee in bankruptcy, though made after the assignor becomes insolvent and within four consent, that it should stand as security for other indebtedness. Aldrich v. Brinker, 143 F. 563.

66. Provision in charter that policy should be for benefit of wife, children, etc., of insured and should not be liable for his debts, being in meaning and effect the same as St. 1903, §§ 654, 655, held not to interfere with the right of the insured to change the beneficiary or assign the policy where that right is reserved in policy, and hence assignment to company as collateral security for loan was valid. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Twyman, 28 Ky. L. R. 1153, 92 S. W. 335. Where policy payable to insured's wife provided that insured might at any time assign it with assent of company or change beneficiary before assignment, held that wife had no vested interest therein notwithstanding St. 1903, § 654, providing that policy payable to married woman shall be her separate property free from claims of insured's creditors, and insured could assign it to company as collateral for loan without her consent. Crice v. Illinois Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 92 S. W. 560. Insured held also to have had right, without her consent, to surrender policy for cancellation in payment of loan, he having received difference between loan and cash surrender value in cash, and settlement on that basis was valid as to her in absence of fraud. Administrator of one insured by policy payable to his executors, administrators, or assigns held not entitled to recover on it against will and interest of one claiming under valid assignment thereof. Harrison's Adm'r v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 78 Vt. 473, 63 A. 321. Assignment held not void for want of consideration in absence of showing that it was not a gift. Id. Provision that insurer would pay amount of life policy on "proof of interest (if assigned or held as security)" and of insured's death held to show an intention to make policies assignable. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Kansas City Nat. Bank [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 195. Evidence held insufficient to show that policy was given to plaintiff by insured in consideration of marriage or otherwise, and hence she was only entitled to recover thereon as administratrix of his estate and not individually. Baker v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 111 App. Div. 500, 97 N. Y. S. 1088.

69. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Kansas City Nat. Bank [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 195. Evidence held to support finding that policy was assigned as security for debt. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Kansas City Nat. Bank [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 195. Possession of note executed by insured and of policies payable to his executors and administrators raises presumption that policies were held as collateral security for note. Id. Stockholders of defunct bank held not entitled to recover on policies assigned to it as collateral security, but sole surviving director and trustee entitled to possession of fund as trustee for shareholders. 71. Love and affection held sufficient consideration to support assignment by children to father. Doty v. Dickey [Ky.] 96 S. W. 544. Agreement of assignee to become insured's wife held good consideration for assignment except as against prior creditors or an assignee for value. Howe v. Hagan, 110 App. Div. 392, 97 N. Y. S. 86. Persons claiming under prior assignment held entitled to show by her and her letters that she was already married to another person when assignment was made. Id.

73. Where defendants loaned insured bonds, etc., relying on his promise to assign life policy to them as collateral, which months prior to his bankruptcy.[74] Where the legal title to policies payable to insured's children is by order of court transferred to him and by him to a loan company for the purpose of keeping them alive for the benefit of the children, the equitable title remains in the children and the proceeds do not become assets of the insured's estate on his death.[75]

An assignment absolute in form may be shown by extrinsic evidence to have been made as security, in which event it will be valid only to the extent of the indebtedness secured.[76] But where a written assignment is complete in itself and there is no evidence of fraud or mistake, it cannot be shown by parol that the assignment was special and limited to a particular purpose and that the policy was to revest in the assignors when such purpose was accomplished.[77]

One to whom a policy is pledged or assigned as security for a loan is only entitled to so much of the proceeds as will reimburse him for the amount of the loan and the amount advanced by him on account of the policy with interest on both,[78] the beneficiary being entitled, in such case, to any balance remaining after the debt is paid.[79] A policy pledged to secure a particular debt cannot be held to secure other debts due the pledgee.[80] The right to redeem from a pledge cannot be held to have been lost by laches or to have been waived or abandoned by the pledgor so long as it is recognized by the pledgee and pledgor as still existing.[81] The fact that limitations have run against the debt is not a bar to the enforcement of the security.[82] Whether on default by the insured in the payment of the premiums the assignee is entitled to apply for and receive a paid up policy which the company is, by its contract, required to issue in such case, depends on the terms of the assignment.[83]

Married women may ordinarily assign policies in which they are named as beneficiaries.[84] Statutes in some states, however, require the written consent of

78. Note, absolute conveyance of policy, and assignment of policy with defeasance clause by terms of which assignor was entitled to have policy reassigned on payment of note, held to show that policy was merely pledged to secure payment of note and not sold. Daly v. Spiller, 222 Ill. 421, 78 N. E. 782, afg. 119 Ill. App. 272. In view of fact that debt secured was much larger than paid up policy which assignee received in lieu thereof on default in payment of premiums by insured, that amount of policy could never have been increased, that more than a year had elapsed since any part of the debt had been paid, and that insured subsequently died without paying any part of it, held that assignee was justified in treating policy as so much money in its hands without attempting to sell it as pledged property. Du Brutz v. Bank of Visalia [Cal. App.] 87 P. 467.

79. Beneficiary joining in assignment to bank held only entitled to such balance, particularly in view of Civ. Code, § 3054, giving bank general lien on property of customer in its hands for any balance due it. Du Brutz v. Bank of Visalia [Cal. App.] 87 P. 467. Beneficiary has no right to policy or its proceeds until he tenders the amount of the debt. Id.

80. Bramblett v. Hargis' Ex'r [Ky.] 94 S. W. 20. Assignee held not entitled to recover on policy on theory that at time of the assignment he was a creditor of the insured where he rested his claim wholly on ground that it passed to him under a certain contract into the making of which such indebtedness did not enter and with which it had nothing to do. the insured to such assignments.[85] A subsequent reconciliation agreement avoids an assignment by a wife to her husband of her interest in a policy on his life as a part of the consideration for a separation agreement.[86]

Life policies having an actual surrender value pass to the insured's trustee in bankruptcy.[87]

Fire insurance.[88]—Policies frequently provide that they shall be void if assigned before loss unless otherwise provided by agreement indorsed thereon or added thereto.[89] It is not necessary to use the blank form of assignment printed on the back of a policy.[90] Where the statute makes all contracts for the payment of money assignable by indorsement, a policy may be so assigned after loss notwithstanding a provision therein to the contrary.[91] An oral assignment after loss is ordinarily valid.[92] An agreement by a debtor to carry a specified amount of insurance as a protection of the claim of his creditor and which provides that he thereby assigns that amount of insurance to him as collateral security for the debt is not an assignment of the policies in praesenti but a mere executory agreement to create a lien upon a fund to arise in case of loss and collection from the insurer,[93] which, while enforceable inter partes, is not binding either upon the insurer or those claiming under the insured without notice thereof.[94] Where the property is conveyed and the policy assigned to the grantee with the company's consent, an allegation that the grantor had previously conveyed an equitable estate in the property to another will not defeat the grantee's right to recover thereon in the absence of evidence of such an outstanding interest as will defeat his legal title or a showing that any other person is in a position to recover the amount due on the policy.[95]

§ 15. Change or substitution of contract, or risk, or of conditions thereupon.[96] —Neither party may alter or modify the contract without the consent of the other,[97]

Dickey [Ky.] 96 S. W. 544. Policy is not assignable by married woman under first clause of Rev. St. § 3629, since that clause has relation to a married woman simply and without any qualifying words expressing the assignor's intention, and operates to fix upon such assignment a presumptive intention to make provision for a married woman and her children jointly. Reakirt v. Desuden, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 646. But an assignment to a wife and her assigns, with a reversion back to her husband in case of her prior death, creates an estate solely for her use and is valid under the second clause or exception of the statute. in assessment company provided that if any unexpected emergency should arise whereby mortuary and reserve funds should be exhausted "then, and in such case only," the insured should be liable for such further assessment, in addition to payments theretofore specified, as might be necessary to meet such emergency and maintain solvency of company, held that company had no power, either under the contract or the law, to increase rate of assessment except for the purposes and under the circumstances stated in the policy. Hicks v. Northwestern Aid Ass'n [Tenn.] 96 S. W. 962. Separation from policy and loss of slip containing three-fourths value clause held immaterial, loss being accidental, it being elsewhere stated in the policy that it applied, and the reply having admitted that it was a part of the contract contained in the policy. Where insured conveyed premises retaining vendor's lien and at the time told insurer's agent, who was present when contract of sale was made, that he could either cancel policy and return unearned premium or transfer policy to vendee and thus give vendor benefit of insurance for protection of his lien, and agent said that he preferred that transfer should be made, held that there was in effect an agreement that policy should continue in force, and it was enforceable against company on subsequent loss, though policy was not actually transferred and though it provided that it should be void if any change took place in interest, title, or possession unless otherwise provided by agreement indorsed thereon or attached thereto. Act of special agent, who issued policy, in modifying contract by indorsement on envelope containing policy so as to provide that premiums should be paid by deductions from wages for different months than those specified in policy and in order given by insured on his employer held binding on company. Hagins v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [S. C.] 55 S. E. 323. Where by-laws of mutual company conferred upon secretary power to consent in writing to mortgaging of insured dwelling or to increase of risk, held that he had authority to indorse on policy provision making loss payable to a mortgagee, notwithstanding further provisions that all policies must be approved by executive committee and all applications passed upon by them, and fact that no application was made to them to have mortgage clause attached. Adams v. Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 115 Mo. App. 21, 90 S. W. 747.

2. Shortly before premium became due agent offered beneficiary, who paid premiums, a new policy in exchange for old. Beneficiary desired to consult with others in regard to exchange and agent consented. Beneficiary contended that he had arranged with agent to collect premium on old policy from his employer and supposed this had been done and that neither he nor his employer had received notice that premium was due. After expiration of 30 days' of grace beneficiary received notice that old policy had lapsed for nonpayment. He then obtained certificate of good health of insured and paid premium for purpose of having policy reinstated, but company refused reinstatement and returned premium. Held, in action to compel reinstatement, that six weeks was not an unreasonable time to allow for consideration of matter of exchanging policies, and that, under circumstances, company should not be allowed to both forfeit old policy and withdraw new one, and that insured was entitled to latter on performing conditions of exchange. Renewals made by an agent are binding on the company if he acts within the actual or apparent scope of his authority.[7] Unless otherwise expressed, a renewal will be construed to be subject to the terms and conditions contained in the original policy.[8] A new and independent contract taking the place of one which has expired is not controlled, as to the property covered, by a judicial interpretation of the latter.[9]

§ 16. Rescission, forfeiture, cancellation, and avoidance. A. By agreement.[10] Fire insurance.—Fire policies generally provide that they may be canceled at any time by the insured on their being returned to the company,[11] and by the insurer on giving a specified number of days' notice to the insured[12] and a return of the unearned premium.[13] In the absence of a provision as to the manner of giving notice, actual personal service must be had.[14] Independently of the right of cancellation reserved wholly changed its plan of business and new rates were based on new plan, insisted on payment at new rate though member expressed willingness to pay at old rate, gave no notice of assessment at old rate, notice being required by contract, and it did not even appear that assessment had been levied at old rate. Insurer held not entitled to cancel policy without a return of unearned premium, premium having been actually paid by giving note to agent for the amount of which he accounted to company. Buckley v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 112 App. Div. 451, 98 N. Y. S. 622. Evidence held to show agreement between insured and agent that policy should be canceled immediately on its receipt by latter so that insured could not contend that cancellation was unauthorized and without effect because unearned premium was not returned at time of such cancellation. Ragley Lumber Co. v. Insurance Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 94 S. W. 185.

by the policy, there may be an immediate cancellation by agreement,[15] provided the minds of the parties meet.[16] Such agreement may be shown by acts and conduct as well as by direct words.[17] If a proposition for cancellation by such an agreement is made by letter and a reply by letter is relied on as an acceptance completing the agreement, such reply takes effect from the time it is sent.[18] Unless the specific right to cancel is retained by the insured,[19] he cannot effect a cancellation without the consent of the company or its duly authorized agent.[20]

The payment of previous assessments is generally a condition precedent to the right of a member of a mutual company to cancel his policy and withdraw.[21] An agreement by the insurer's agent, after giving notice of cancellation, to keep the policy in force until he can procure other insurance is binding on the company, if within the apparent scope of his authority and the insured has no notice of limitations thereon.[22] The subsequent assertion by the company of a claim on a premium note is not inconsistent with a claim of cancellation where the policy makes the insured liable, in case of a cancellation, for premiums actually earned.[23]

Life insurance.—Cancellation with the consent of the insured prevents a recovery by the beneficiary[24] but an unexercised option to do so on insured's failure to repay a loan does not.[25] A statement by the insured to the insurer's agent during the days of grace allowed for the payment of the premium that he does not intend to continue the policy does not work a termination of his rights thereunder.[26]

Price v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co., 102 Md. 683, 62 A. 1040.

25. Where it was shown that, on making loan to insured, company reserved option to cancel policy if it was not repaid on returning the cash surrender value, but instead of canceling it, and without making such payment, company opened up negotiations for a new loan, pending which insured died, held that beneficiary was entitled to recover amount of policy less indebtedness. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Mills [Fla.] 41 So. 603.

26. Being without consideration, it is not binding on him. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Taylor [C. C. A.] 142 F. 709, afg. 134 F. 932.

27. See 6 C. L. 117.

28. Policy forfeited for nonpayment of premiums. McDougald v. New York Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 674; Wells v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co. [Ark.] 98 S. W. 697. Evidence held insufficient to warrant finding that insured, who had been absent and unheard of for seven years, died before a specified any instalment thereof,[29] or any premium notes,[30] shall not be paid when due. Nonpayment of notes sometimes operates merely to suspend the insurance while they remain overdue and unpaid.[31] The date when the policy actually goes into effect determines the time when it may be forfeited for nonpayment of premiums.[32] A lapse for failure to pay premiums cannot be claimed where the insurer has sufficient funds for that purpose in its hands.[33]

In the case of fire policies some courts hold that where the insurance is for a gross sum and a single consideration the contract is entire, although the amount of insurance is distributed over several distinct items of property, and hence that a breach as to one item avoids the whole.[34] Others regard such a contract as sevdate, at which time policy lapsed for nonpayment of premiums. Spahr v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 4. Time is of the essence of the contract, and a failure to pay a premium when due works a forfeiture though the condition providing for such forfeiture be a condition subsequent, no affirmative act on the part of the insurer being necessary. Thompson v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 92 S. W. 1098. Contract held not an assurance for single year with privilege of renewal from year to year by paying annual premiums but an entire contract of assurance for at least five years, impliedly subject to forfeiture by failure to perform condition subsequent of payment of premiums as provided in contract taken as a whole. Provident Life Assur. Soc. v. Taylor [C. C. A.] 142 F. 709, afg. 134 F. 932.

29. Where the annual premium is payable in instalments, a failure to pay any instalment works a forfeiture. Thompson v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 92 S. W. 1098. Provision that in case of death the company would pay the amount of the policy "less the balance of the dues for the current year of the death of the insured," followed by a provision for forfeiture for failure to make payments when due, held not to deprive insurer of right to forfeit policy for nonpayment of instalment when due, but merely meant that, upon death of insured after paying all instalments when due, company might deduct any instalments for current year which were not yet due. Id.

30. Failure to pay notes given to agent for premium and by him indorsed to company held to avoid policy as provided in both policy and premium receipt. National Life Ins. Co. v. Reppond [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 829, 96 S. W. 778. Insured paid part of first premium in cash and gave notes for balance payable to agent, who indorsed them to company without recourse, and they were thereafter treated as belonging to it. Policy and receipt provided for forfeiture for nonpayment of premium notes when due. Held that failure to pay notes when due avoided policy even if amount of notes did not exceed amount of agent's commission and it was agreed that they were to be regarded as evidencing an indebtedness to him, the company never having received any of the premium in money and having no notice of any such agreement, and agent's commission on notes not being payable until they were paid in cash. Id.

31. Life: Provision in note that company should not be liable for loss by death "after this note is due and remains unpaid" held to operate merely to suspend insurance while note remained unpaid after maturity, and where death did not occur until after a valid tender of the amount due, payment at maturity being excused for failure to give notice, company was liable. Kavanaugh v. Security Trust & Life Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 96 S. W. 499. Rights of parties on nonpayment of notes given for part of premium held governed by provisions of such notes rather than those of the policy. Id.

Fire: Where premium note provided that if not paid at maturity whole amount of assessment should be deemed earned, and that contract should be null and void so long as note remained overdue and unpaid, and note was overdue at the time of the loss, held that attempt to pay it after the fire was too late to save the insurance. Driver v. Planters' Mut. Ins. Ass'n [Ark.] 93 S. W. 752.

32. Life: Policy held to have fixed time when insurance thereunder commenced to run as June 30, 1895, particularly when construed with application, so that, treating premium note as payment of premium for two years, it became subject to forfeiture at expiration of month of grace after June 30, 1897. McDougald v. New York Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 674. Claim that policy did not go into effect until after it was issued and that therefore payments were not due when they were made and last one was not due until after insured's death, held not supported by evidence, particularly in view of fact that for eight years payments had been made in accordance with terms of policy without any such contention. Smith v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 347.

Fire: Evidence held to show that application was made in November so that it was a mistake to make instalment notes for premium payable on the first of October of each year instead of on the first of November, and hence insured was entitled to recover for a loss occurring in October though he had not paid the note for that year and though policy provided that company should not be liable for any loss occurring while any instalment of the note remained due and unpaid. Home Ins. Co. v. Clements, 28 Ky. L. R. 953, 90 S. W. 973.

33. Policy running for one year with agreement to renew from year to year on payment of renewal premiums does not lapse upon failure to pay one of such premiums where company has fund in its hands erable so that a breach as to one item does not ordinarily affect the policy as to the others unless such an intention clearly appears,[35] or unless the contract is fraudulent or contrary to public policy, or the breach increases the risk as to the whole property.[36]

If the policy received by the insured is different from that contracted for, it is his duty to ascertain that fact within a reasonable time and return it for cancellation,[37] and he cannot at the same time hold the policy and refuse on that ground to pay premium notes given therefor.[38] If the agent fraudulently inserts false answers in the application though insured makes true ones, it is the duty of the insured on discovery of such fraud to notify the company thereof and to surrender his policy for cancellation.[39] In case he fails to do so he becomes a party to the agent's fraud and thereby forfeits his rights under the policy.[40] So too, if he desires to rescind because of his incapacity when the contract was made, he must do so within a reasonable time.[41] Where the contract is entire the beneficiary cannot affirm it in part and disaffirm it in part.[42] If the insurer desires to avoid the policy by reason of the fact that its agent is also the agent of the insured, it must act promptly upon discovering the facts.[43]

If the company, before the time for performance arrives, refuses to perform or declares its intention not to perform, the insured may either treat such conduct as a rescission and sue for the money already paid in by him,[44] or he may refuse assent and keep the contract alive in order that his beneficiary may profit by its terms in the event of his death.[45] The election once made is final.[46] In New York which by terms of policy is applicable to its extension. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Society v. King, 117 Ill. App. 556.

34. Sole effect of apportionment is to limit risk as to each of the items to the amount specified. Policy held entire. In re Millers' & Manuf'rs' Ins. Co. [Minn.] 106 N. W. 485.

35. Breach of warranty as to title and incumbrances held to avoid insurance as to barn only, and not to affect that on personalty. Donley v. Glens Falls Ins. Co., 184 N. Y. 107, 76 N. E. 914. Fact that warranties were in application held not to change rule, particularly where application provided that they should be same as if written on face of policy. Id. Provision that entire policy should be void in case of breach held to mean the entire policy so far as it related to subject of insurance affected by breach only. Id.

36. Breach of condition as to ownership held to avoid whole policy even under this rule, the stock and machinery being in buildings insured which were all on leased ground, and hence whatever increased risk as to buildings increased it as to rest of property destroyed. In re Millers' & Manufacturers' Ins. Co. [Minn.] 106 N. W. 485.

37. Hutchinson v. Palmer [Ala.] 40 So. 339.

38. Fact that policy did not contain provisions contracted for held no defense to action on note. Hutchinson v. Palmer [Ala.] 40 So. 339.

41. Policy issued upon application obtained while insured was so drunk as not to know its contents held voidable only so that such a defense was unavailing to prevent forfeiture where no facts were averred excusing failure of insured to have policy canceled or reformed. Lowenstein v. Franklin Life Ins. Co., 122 Ill. App. 632.

42. Cannot contend that part of it was not binding on insured because he was intoxicated when he signed application, and at same time seek to recover insurance. Lowenstein v. Franklin Life Ins. Co., 122 Ill. App. 632.

43. Delay held unreasonable. German Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, Wilson & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 798, 92 S. W. 1068.

44. Blakely v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co., 143 F. 619. Fact that member of mutual company and its president differed widely as to meaning of provision for assessments held not an anticipatory breach where neither party intended to refuse to be bound by the contract as he understood it. Id. In any event suit was premature when brought before larger sum had been demanded than plaintiff admitted was due. Id. Express renunciation is necessary, a mere denial of liability being insufficient. Kilsel v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1027. Letter stating that policy had lapsed for nonpayment of premiums, but that if insured persisted in making claim thereunder the company would require the performance of all conditions precedent as provided by the policy, held not a renunciation of the contract which would give rise to cause of action and start running of contract limitation. Id.

45. Blakely v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co., 143 F. 619.

46. Where elects to continue contract in force by tendering payment of amount lawfully due thereon, cannot thereafter rescind. Blakely v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co., 143 F. 619.

this rule is held not to apply to policies issued by mutual life companies.[47] In case the company makes performance of conditions by the insured impossible, it is chargeable with the sum it would have had to pay in case of performance.[48] In case it wrongfully cancels the policy the insured is entitled to recover the actual damages thereby sustained.[49]

Life policies frequently provide that, after they have been in force for a specified time,[50] they shall be incontestable[51] except for certain specified causes.[52] A provision making a policy incontestable from date of issue is void in so far as it attempts to preclude the company from setting up as a defense the fact that it was induced to enter into the contract by the fraudulent representations of the insured,[53] but a provision making it incontestable for fraud after the expiration of a specified time, not unreasonably short, is valid.[54] The incontestable clause does not preclude a defense that the policy is illegal.[55] Since the reinstatement of the policy after lapse is the making of a new contract, as to fraud or false representations in procuring it, the incontestable clause begins to run from the date of the reinstatement.[56]

(§ 16) C. Estoppel or waiver of right to cancel or avoid.[57]—Provisions and conditions in the policy which are for the benefit of the insurer may be waived

47. Where only promise made was to pay a sum of money on the death of the plaintiff, held that an allegation that the defendant wrongfully declared the contract void and forfeited, denied that plaintiff had any rights thereunder, and refused to continue said policy in force, did not show a breach entitling plaintiff, in his lifetime, to recover damages in an action at law, his remedy being in equity. Kelly v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. [N. Y.] 78 N. E. 584, rvg. 106 App. Div. 352, 94 N. Y. S. 601.

48. Where company refused to defend action against insured as required by employers' liability policy, held that insured could recover from it a sum paid in the prudent settlement thereof, though policy provided that insured should not settle any claim except at his own cost without the written consent of the insurer, and that no action should lie against the insurer unless brought by insured himself to reimburse him for loss actually sustained and paid by him in satisfaction of a judgment after trial of the issue. St. Louis Dressed Beef & Provision Co. v. Maryland Casualty Co., 201 U. S. 173, 50 Law. Ed. 712.

49. Policy was issued on assessment plan, each year's premiums representing actual current cost to association of carrying the risk. At time of cancellation insured was an invalid and could not obtain other insurance. Held that the measure of damages was the amount of the policy, less the cost of carrying it to maturity had it remained in force, all amounts entering into the calculation to be valued upon a 6 per cent. basis as of the date of the cancellation. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n v. Ferrenbach [C. C. A.] 144 F. 342.

50. Provision that if policy should have been "in continuous force" for a specified time it should be incontestable held to preclude company from defending on ground that it was not delivered and first premium paid while insured was in good health, which was a condition precedent to its taking effect, such condition being of no higher effect than any other warranty. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n v. Austin [C. C. A.] 142 F. 398, afg. 132 F. 555.

51. Incontestable clause held to preclude defense of fraudulent misrepresentations as to health. Kansas Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Whitehead [Ky.] 93 S. W. 609.

52. Provision that after three years, if the payments required should have been made when due, the policy should be incontestable held to mean only that it should be incontestable for causes other than nonpayment of premiums. Thompson v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 92 S. W. 1098.

53. Reagan v. Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 189 Mass. 555, 76 N. E. 217. Is either an implied exception as to fraud, or, if intended to cover it, provision is contrary to public policy to that extent, and in either case fraud inducing the making of the contract may be shown regardless of the fact that by the terms of the policy the entire contract is contained in it and the application. Id.

54. Reagan v. Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 189 Mass. 555, 76 N. E. 217. Clause precluding defense of fraud after two years held not void as contrary to public policy. Kansas Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Whitehead [Ky.] 93 S. W. 609.

55. Because taken out with intention of assigning it to one having no insurable interest, the incontestable clause being itself a part of the illegal contract. Bromley's Adm'r v. Washington Life Ins. Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 1300, 92 S. W. 17.

56. Where policy, which provided that it should be "indisputable after two years from its date of issue" provided premiums were duly paid, lapsed for nonpayment of premiums but was subsequently reinstated on insured furnishing a certificate of good health, held that insurer could take advantage of fraudulent representations in health certificate at any time within two years from the date of such reinstatement. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Galbraith, 115 Tenn. 471, 91 S. W. 204.

by it.[58] So too, the insured may waive provisions or conditions inserted for his benefit,[59] but the company cannot claim a waiver because of conduct induced by its own false representations.[60] Where the insured for a valuable consideration sells and assigns a policy and the company pays the same to the assignee, he is estopped as against the company to attack the validity of the assignment on the ground that the assignee has no insurable interest.[61]

A waiver is the intentional relinquishment of a known right.[62] It may be the express abandonment of a right[63] or may be implied from acts and conduct inconsistent with its continued assertion.[64] Slight evidence of the waiver of a forfeiture is sufficient.[65] In order that misrepresentations may work an estoppel they must be as to existing facts[66] and the other party must have relied thereon to his prejudice.[67]

59. Fire insurance: Held to have waived return of unearned premium as a condition of cancellation. Ragley Lumber Co. v. Insurance Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 94 S. W. 185. Return of policy by insured to agents after receiving notice of cancellation held not a waiver of provision requiring return of unearned premium as condition precedent to cancellation, where premium was not actually returned. Buckley v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 112 App. Div. 451, 98 N. Y. S. 622.

Life insurance: Statement by insured to agent during days of grace that he did not intend to continue the insurance, being without consideration, held not binding on him and not to constitute a waiver of the grace or a termination of his rights under the contract. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Taylor [C. C. A.] 142 F. 709, afg. 134 F. 932. Company failed to pay endowment when due but returned policy to insured with request that he hold it until money could be raised by assessment of members, and informed him that it would notify him when it was ready to pay. Subsequently it induced him to continue to pay premiums by false representations that it was necessary to prevent forfeiture. Held that company was estopped to contend that insured had waived right to endowment by paying premiums, it being presumed that payments made for several years were all made by reason of same representations. Hopkins v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co., 41 Wash. 592, 83 P. 1019.

60. Insured held not to have waived right to endowment by continued payment of premiums after it became payable where he sent in policy for cancellation at proper time but company returned it with request that he would keep it until it had raised amount by assessment of members, and where company on his subsequent demands for payment represented that amount had not yet been raised, and where he was induced to continue to pay premiums by false representations that it was necessary in order to prevent forfeiture, he being old and inexperienced and having relied on such representations. Hopkins v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co., 41 Wash. 592, 83 P. 1019.

Is essentially a matter of intention, and to establish it there must be some declaration or act from which the insured might reasonably infer that the insurer did not mean to insist upon a right which because of a change of position induced thereby it would be inequitable to enforce. Shay v. Phoenix Benefit Ass'n, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 527.

63. Letter of agent in regard to cancellation of policy held not susceptible of construction as a waiver of breach of condition against increase of hazard, even though, if it were a waiver, it could be deemed to be one in writing annexed to the policy. Ruffner Bros. v. Dutchess Ins. Co. [W. Va.] 53 S. E. 943.

64. Polk v. Western Assur. Co., 114 Mo. App. 514, 90 S. W. 397.

65. Forfeitures are not favored in the law and courts are always prompt to seize hold of any circumstances to indicate an election to waive a forfeiture, or an agreement to do so, on which the party has relied and acted. Graham v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co., 72 N. J. Law, 298, 62 A. 681.

66. Statement by clerk having no authority to waive provision avoiding policy for change of ownership that he was "going to fix it all right" held not to estop company from relying on breach. Kompa v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 425.

67. Letter of insurer to one to whom it might at its option pay amount of policy, though it was under no legal obligation to do so, promising to pay it to him, held not to estop it from thereafter paying it to representatives who were primarily entitled to it, plaintiff having lost nothing in reliance thereon. Ferreth v. Prudential Ins. Co., 49 Misc. 489, 97 N. Y. S. 1007. Nor was let-

Any acts, declarations, course of dealing or conduct on the part of the insurer leading the insured to believe that a strict performance of the terms and conditions of the policy will not be insisted upon will preclude it from thereafter claiming a forfeiture for failure to strictly perform,[68] provided it acts with full knowledge of

68. Fire insurance: Insured may always show waiver of conditions or a course of conduct on the part of the insurer which gave him just and reasonable ground to infer that a forfeiture would not be exacted. Gish v. Insurance Co. [Okl.] 87 P. 869. Allegations in regard to reinsurance and the obtaining of a vacancy permit from reinsurer held insufficient to show estoppel to deny that insurance was for term of three years, there being no allegations showing that company misled plaintiff or that he did or failed to do anything in reliance on its conduct or representations. Delaware Ins. Co. v. Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 330. Objection that applicant for surplus line insurance misrepresented that two certain admitted companies were on the risk held waived where no questions were asked in regard to what other companies were on risk until after application had been accepted, company delivered policy after notice of facts, received notice of loss and list of companies on risk in which names of companies did not appear, asked for proofs, promised to pay promptly on their receipt, and received and retained proofs. Hirsch v. Fidelitas Societe Anonyme D'Assurances & De Reassurances, 99 N. Y. S. 517. Evidence held to warrant submission of question of waiver of breach of warranty as to ownership and of iron-safe clause to jury. Continental Ins. Co. v. Cummings [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 279, 95 S. W. 48. Breach of provision as to keeping gasoline on the premises held waived where adjusting and supervising agent had knowledge of breach but company gave no intimation of its intention to consider policies terminated but retained premium and allowed plaintiff to rest on implied assurance that policies still remained in full force and effect, though policy provided that no officer or agent could waive its provisions unless waiver was in writing and attached thereto. Arnold v. American Ins. Co., 148 Cal. 660, 84 P. 182. Payment of premium on day of parol renewal of policy held waived where agent was accustomed to charge insured with amount of premiums and collect same at his convenience. German Ins. Co. v. Goodfriend [Ky.] 97 S. W. 1098. Payment of premium on day when it was due held waived by acts and conduct of agent in accepting overdue premiums, informing insured that premium might be paid after it became due, etc. Home Ins. Co. v. Ballew [Ky.] 96 S. W. 878.

Life insurance: Insured may always show a waiver of conditions or a course of conduct on the part of the insurer from which it might justly and reasonably be concluded that a forfeiture would not be exacted. Graham v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co., 72 N. J. Law, 298, 62 A. 681. Evidence held to justify submission of question whether company intended to waive forfeiture for nonpayment of premium note when due to jury. Id. Letter written after premium note became due held to amount to agreement that if it was paid policy should not be forfeited, and hence to be a recognition of continued existence of policy and an election to waive forfeiture. Id. Agent's assurance to insured that he need not pay instalment of premium when due and crediting payment thereof on books held waiver of forfeiture for nonpayment. Crowder v. Continental Casualty Co., 115 Mo. App. 535, 91 S. W. 1016. Company waives right to insist on a forfeiture for delay in payment of premiums if by its course of conduct it leads the insured to believe that they will be accepted after the appointed day. Morgan v. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co., 42 Wash. 10, 84 P. 412. Policy provided that premiums should be paid quarterly on or before first of certain months, but were afterwards made payable monthly. During nine months preceding death of insured all premiums had been paid after 19th. Insured died on 13th of month for which premium had not been paid. Held that right of forfeiture for nonpayment on 1st was waived though policy provided that acceptance of premium after it was due should be regarded as an act of courtesy only and not as a waiver. Instruction approved. Id. No place was specified for payment of premiums and it was customary for collector to call for them weekly. After last payment he failed to call again, and when plaintiff inquired reason why informed him that he had been instructed not to call any more. Plaintiff then tendered premium to company's superintendent, who refused to receive it, claiming that policy had lapsed. Held that company was estopped to claim forfeiture for nonpayment. Carey v. Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 100 N. Y. S. 289. A course of dealing under which company accepts overdue premiums while insured is in good health does not require it to accept overdue premiums tendered after his death. Thompson v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. [Tenn.] 92 S. W. 1098. Mere indulgencies in payment do not constitute a waiver of the condition of forfeiture for failure to pay when due. Id. Evidence held insufficient to show an habitual course of dealing between the parties such as would justify insured in believing that company would not insist on forfeiture for nonpayment of premiums when due. Id. Evidence held not to show that previous premiums had been received after they were due and to be insufficient to show waiver of forfeiture for nonpayment on time. Suess v. Imperial Life Ins. Co., 193 Mo. 564, 91 S. W. 1041. Where agent was authorized to accept premiums within 30 days after they became due provided insured was alive and in sound health, fact that he received single overdue premium for which he gave receipt reciting that acceptance of past due premium should be regarded as an act of grace and not as a precedent or a waiver of the conditions of the policy, held not to constitute a course of the facts.[69] The knowledge of the company's agent[70] acquired while acting within the scope of his authority[71] and while transacting the business of his principal[72] is imputed to it,[73] and his acts, if within the general scope of his authority,[74] and his conduct leading insured to believe that he might delay payment of subsequent premiums. Kennedy v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 116 La. 66, 40 So. 533. Acceptance of past due premiums upon such conditions and when insured was in good health held not to authorize assumption that it would accept overdue premiums in future when insured was in bad health or dead. Id. Where policy provided that it should not take effect until first premium was paid, held that it could not be said to be past due because not paid upon day which policy bore date. Id. Where policy provided that nonpayment of premiums when due should terminate company's liability, except that policy might be reinstated during insured's lifetime at any time within 12 months from date of lapse, by payment of all past due premiums and fine of 10 per cent., held that fact that company had previously accepted past due premiums was not a waiver of right to insist on payment when due and did not estop it to claim forfeiture where premium was overdue at insured's death. Northwestern Nat. Life Ins. Co. v. Brooker, 120 Ill. App. 301.

69. Credit insurance: Fact that adjuster, without knowledge of breach of warranty, stated that company owed holder of bond of indemnity against losses by failure of debtors to pay about a certain sum and asked him what he would take for cash, held not a waiver of breach where insured stated he would not accept less than full amount. Baer v. American Credit Indem. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 672.

Fire insurance: Evidence as to what was said by agent at time nonwaiver agreement was signed held inadmissible to show waiver of forfeiture for breach of condition against incumbrances where neither he nor company knew of the breach at that time. Weddington v. Piedmont Fire Ins. Co. [N. C.] 54 S. E. 271. Could be no implied ratification of custom of agents by company where there was no evidence showing that it had notice thereof or facts from which notice could be legitimately inferred. American Assur. Ass'n v. Hardiman, 124 Ga. 379, 52 S. E. 536.

Life insurance: One seeking to establish waiver must show that the person whose acts are relied on had knowledge of the essential facts necessary to enable a person of ordinary prudence and judgment to act understandingly. Germania Life Ins. Co. v. Lauer [Ky.] 97 S. W. 363. Acceptance of premium by agent with knowledge that insured was sick held not a waiver of provision that policy should not take effect unless premium was paid during continued good health of insured where agent did not know nature of illness or that insured was in dying condition, etc., it being manifest that he would not have accepted it had he known insured's condition. Id. Receipt and deposit of check for amount of premium note held not a waiver of forfeiture for nonpayment when due where insurer had no knowledge that, at time of its receipt, insured was dead. Franklin Life Ins. Co. v. McAfee, 28 Ky. L. R. 676, 90 S. W. 216. Company held chargeable with knowledge that it had another outstanding policy on insured's life so that fact that owing to its method of bookkeeping it had no actual knowledge did not prevent waiver of prohibition against other insurance by receipt of premiums. Monahan v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [Md.] 63 A. 211.

70. Persons obtaining fire insurance for plaintiff through defendant's agents held not the agents of defendant in the matter but mere brokers so that their knowledge of the real interest of plaintiff in insured property could not be deemed information binding on defendant, or estop it, particularly as policy provided that no one unless duly authorized in writing should be deemed insurer's agent. Wisotzkey v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 112 App. Div. 596, 98 N. Y. S. 763. Knowledge of one of firm of local agents as to incumbrances held knowledge of company, though it was not communicated to partner who took application and issued policy. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Stogner [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 260, 98 S. W. 218.

71. Rule that if insured truly answers questions and examiner records them falsely such falsity will not avoid the policy applies only when information is given to agent acting within scope of his authority. Butler v. Michigan Mut. Life Ins. Co., 184 N. Y. 337, 77 N. E. 398, rvg. 93 App. Div. 619, 87 N. Y. S. 1129.

72. Knowledge of agent as to ownership of property acquired several years before the issuance of the policy in suit and at the time of the issuance of other policies held not imputable to defendant where it did not appear that agent was at that time defendant's agent or that the former policies were issued by defendant. Continental Ins. Co. v. Cummings [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 279, 95 S. W. 48.

73. Life insurance: It being within scope of agency to collect premiums, held that knowledge of agent when he did so that insured was not in good health when policy was delivered was knowledge of company. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Willis [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 560.

Fire insurance: Knowledge of adjusting and supervising agent as to presence of gasoline on premises. Arnold v. American Ins. Co., 148 Cal. 660, 84 P. 182.

False representations due to fault of company or agent: In order to defeat recovery upon the ground that the insured made misrepresentations as to the risk in his application, it is incumbent upon the company to show that the misrepresentations were his and not mistakes or misrepresentations of its own. Hewey v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 100 Me. 523, 62 A. 600. When company or its agent undertakes to fill in an application from a previous application or statement by the insured, it will be held to the strictest adherence to the terms of such application or statement made. Id. Where applicant signed application in blank declarations and representations made while transacting the business of his principal and within the scope of the agency, are deemed those of the company,[75] any with understanding that answers to questions should be filled in from information contained in former application, held that he would be bound by second application if agent filled it in in accordance with the terms of the first one, but would not be bound if agent put in answers not in first one or put them in differently. Id. Answers in second application held not such necessary inferences from those in first as to be regarded as a statement of the applicant and therefore binding on him. Id. Company held estopped to forfeit fire policy for false representation as to ownership superinduced by agent authorized to solicit insurance and write application and who had knowledge of the facts. Security Mut. Ins. Co. v. Woodson & Co. [Ark.] 95 S. W. 481. In absence of showing that insured agreed that solicitor should be his agent in filling out application for life policy, held that it would be presumed that he was company's agent and that it was proper to show that insured gave true answers to questions and that agent inserted false ones through design or inadvertence. Williams v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 109 App. Div. 843, 96 N. Y. S. 823. Where insured made false answers to questions asked by medical examiner, held that fact that he disclosed true state of his health and physical condition to a soliciting agent, who was not authorized to effect insurance or issue policies, was no answer to defense of breach of warranty. Butler v. Michigan Mut. Life Ins. Co., 184 N. Y. 337, 77 N. E. 398, rvg. 93 App. Div. 619, 87 N. Y. S. 1129. Application was made part of fire policy and both application and policy warranted answers to be true and policy provided that it should be void if any statements in application should be untrue and that no agent should be deemed to have waived provisions unless waiver was in writing and attached to policy. Application was made out by insurer's agent and forwarded to insured's agent to be signed if correct. Held that it was duty of latter to examine it and see that answers were correct, and policy was void where answer as to incumbrances was untrue though insurer's agent knew that it was false. Deming Inv. Co. v. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co., 16 Okl. 1, 83 P. 918. Fact that application for life policy was filled in by agent and that insured signed without reading it held no defense to breach of warranty where it did not appear that she was unable to read, it being her duty to use reasonable diligence to see that answers were correct. Rinker v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 214 Pa. 608, 64 A. 82. Since inspection after delivery would have shown fraud which would have been her duty to disclose to company, she must be regarded as having knowledge of it. Id. Application for bond of indemnity against losses by failure of debtors to pay warranted that it had been made, prepared, and written by applicant or his own proper agent. It was in fact prepared by soliciting agent of company whose name did not appear on bond and who had no right to fix insurance or to issue the policy. There was no provision that application should be filled out by company's agent and questions did not require technical knowledge or experience. Held that knowledge of agent that warranties were false was not imputed to company and it was not estopped to assert breach of warranty as a defense. Baer v. American Credit Indemnity Co., 101 N. Y. S. 672.

74. Fire insurance: Company can, by its agents, waive forfeiture for nonpayment of premiums when due. Home Ins. Co. v. Ballew [Ky.] 96 S. W. 878. Evidence held to sustain finding that agent had authority to waive forfeiture for failure to pay note when due and provision requiring indorsement of transfer on policy. Queen of Arkansas Ins. Co. v. Cooper-Cryer Co. [Ark.] 98 S. W. 694. Waiver of iron-safe clause by agent who solicited, issued, and countersigned policy held binding on company. Riley v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 117 Mo. App. 229, 92 S. W. 1147. Verbal consent of agent taking application and issuing policy to the taking out of other insurance waives the provision of the policy requiring written consent indorsed on the policy. Gorton v. Milwaukee Mechanics' Ins. Co., 115 Mo. App. 69, 90 S. W. 747. Where policy had been fully complied with by insured, held that fact that secretary had no authority to indorse mortgage clause on policy would be no defense in an action thereon by the mortgagee. Adams v. Farmers Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 115 Mo. App. 21, 90 S. W. 747. From mere fact that one delivered a policy in the preparation or execution of which he did not participate and is not shown to have been authorized to participate, it cannot be inferred that he had authority to modify the contract or to waive any of its covenants or stipulations. Shackelford v. Indemnity Fire Ins. Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 771. Where company is discharged from liability under the provisions of policy, responsibility will not reattach by waiver without proof of authority in party whose act of waiver is relied on. Kompa v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 425. Clerks in office of local agent held not to have authority to waive provision requiring indorsement of change of ownership on policy and not to have been shown to stand in such a relation to company that their declarations or undertakings could operate as an estoppel. Id.

Life insurance: Applicant paid premium and received receipt providing for return of premium if application was not accepted. Insurer sent a different policy than one applied for, which applicant refused to accept. Thereafter agent wrote him that he had been advised that company had reconsidered application and would issue policy covering full amount from the start on the plan applied for. Held that bill alleging such facts and that insured relied on agent's letter and considered his life insured set up facts constituting an estoppel on the part of the company to deny the issuance of a policy, though none was actually delivered because applicant was sick when agent received it. New York Life Ins. Co. v. McIntosh [Miss.] 41 So. 381. Allegation that limitations thereon being ineffectual unless brought to the knowledge of the insured.[76] There is, however, a line of authorities holding that where the waiver relied on is an act of an agent of the insurer it must be shown that the agent had express authority from the insurer to make the waiver, or that the insurer subsequently, with knowledge of the facts, ratified the unauthorized acts of the agent,[77] which facts may be shown by proof of such acts and circumstances as would necessarily result in that conclusion.[78] There is a conflict of authority as to the effect of limitations in the policy as to who may waive its conditions[79] and of provisions that when assignee of policy offered to pay premium he was informed by a "duly authorized agent" of the company that it had granted extended insurance to the insured as provided in policy, and promised to notify assignee if insurance had not been extended but failed to do so, and that assignee had relied thereon, etc., held that demurrer based on theory that allegations contravened provision that contract could only be varied by certain specified officers in writing was improperly sustained. Sugg v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. [Tenn.] 94 S. W. 936. Agent having authority to issue policies and collect premiums held to have authority to waive payment of premiums when due. Crowder v. Continental Casualty Co., 115 Mo. App. 535, 91 S. W. 1016. Manager of company for two states held such an agent as had authority to waive provision that policy should not become effectual unless first premium was paid during continued good health of insured. Germania Life Ins. Co. v. Lauer [Ky.] 97 S. W. 363. Where declaration alleged that agent solicited insured to take out policy, that as a special inducement he represented to him that company allowed 30 days of grace in payment of premiums, that company authorized agent to make such representation and to hold out such inducement, and that policy was taken out on the faith of them, held that it was not demurrable on ground that it appeared therefrom that second annual premium had not been paid when due where it showed that insured had died after the expiration of a year but within 13 months from time when first premium was paid. Boyd v. Fidelity Mut. Life Co. [Miss.] 41 So. 268. Applicant gave notes for first premium to local agent who sent application to company. Company sent agent different policy from that applied for and directed him to submit it to applicant for acceptance but not to deliver it until applicant had signed amended application. Agent wrote applicant that his policy had arrived and that he would deliver it to him on day when first note was due. Applicant died in the meantime without knowledge of the facts. Held that company was estopped to deny that applicant was insured in accordance with terms and conditions of application. Kimbro v. New York Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 1025.

75. Letter tending to show waiver of payment of premium as a condition precedent to taking effect of policy held to amount merely to statement that agents had paid principal a premium for plaintiff and a demand on her for reimbursement, and hence not binding on company. Shoemaker v. Commercial Union Assur. Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 316. Principal will not be heard to deny the truth of the representations of his agent with respect to the matter which is the subject of such agency. Rule applies though agency is of a special or limited character. Kimbro v. New York Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 1025. Representations that application had been accepted and policy issued in accordance therewith. Id.

76. Instructions not to write insurance on property of insolvent or financially crippled debtors will not avoid policy written on such prohibited risk unless it be shown that insured had knowledge of such inhibition. German Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, Wilson & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 798, 92 S. W. 1068.

77. Deming Inv. Co. v. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co., 16 Okl. 1, 83 P. 918; Gish v. Insurance Co. [Okl.] 87 P. 869.

78. Gish v. Insurance Co. [Okl.] 87 P. 869. Question whether insurer had waived breach of iron-safe clause by ratifying acts of adjuster and agent in requiring insured to furnish duplicate invoices, etc., and by receipt and retention of premium after the fire, held for the jury. Id.

Limitation Held To Prevent Waiver. Life insurance: Custom of mere local collecting agent of insurer to collect premiums every two weeks instead of weekly as required by policy held not to prevent a forfeiture where it was neither authorized nor ratified by the insurer, and policy provided that agents were not authorized to alter or discharge contracts, waive forfeitures, or receive premiums in arrears beyond time provided in policy. American Assur. Ass'n v. Hardiman, 124 Ga. 379, 52 S. E. 536. Acceptance by general agent of amount due on premium note after maturity held not a waiver of forfeiture for nonpayment where policy provided that only certain specified officers of the company had power to extend time for paying premiums. Bank of Commerce v. New York Life Ins. Co., 125 Ga. 552, 54 S. E. 643. Where policy provided that agents were not authorized to make, alter, or discharge contracts, or waive forfeitures, or receive premiums more than four weeks in arrears, held that proof of agreement by district superintendent that premiums need not be paid during strike was insufficient to show waiver of forfeiture for nonpayment, in absence of showing that he had authority to make agreement or that company ratified his acts. Murphy v. Prudential Ins. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 560.

Fire insurance: One dealing with a local agent authorized to issue policies and collect premiums is required to take notice that by their terms the scope of his authority does not include the power orally to change all waivers and modifications must be in writing and attached to the policy.[80] The insurer may by its conduct estop itself to deny the authority of one assuming to act for it[81] and may waive limitations on the agent's authority contained in the policy.[82]

the clause of the contracts relating to vacancies but that any modification or alteration thereof can only be made with written or printed assent of the insurer. Harris v. North American Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 361, 77 N. E. 493. Since agent had no authority to assure insured that company would not insist on strict compliance with provision as to vacancy, held that he could not, under doctrine of waiver, either by assent in words or by his conduct alter or surrender rights of company in that regard under the policy. Id. Fact that president of mutual company, which was authorized by statute to insure only farm property, knew, when he took application and issued policy, that insured wanted insurance on property in slaughterhouse and subsequent receipt of premiums, held not to estop company to claim that such property was not covered thereby, the insured as a member of a mutual company being chargeable with knowledge of its powers, and a copy of the charter and by-laws being contained in the policy. Geraghty v. Washtenaw Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 634, 108 N. W. 1102. Fact that after loss insured complied with request of member of board of directors to attend meeting of board in another city and was put to expense in so doing and was there examined as to the loss, held not a waiver of provision that association would not be liable for loss resulting from open fire within 50 feet from building, directors having, under by-laws, no right to adjust loss or waive conditions until they met together as a board. Draper v. Oswego County Fire Relief Ass'n, 101 N. Y. S. 168.

Limitation Held Not To Prevent Waiver. Accident Insurance: Agent clothed with power of soliciting insurance, delivering policies, and collecting premiums, is general agent of the company and not the agent of the insured, and has power to waive forfeitures and conditions of the policy notwithstanding a provision therein that no agent has such power. Continental Casualty Co. v. Johnson, 119 Ill. App. 93. Failure to pay premium when due held wholly the fault of the agent who refused to receive it when tendered so that company could not base forfeiture thereon. Id.

80. See, also, post this section.

Limitation held to prevent waiver: Where fire policy provided that it should be void unless otherwise provided by agreement indorsed thereon or attached thereto, if, with insured's knowledge, foreclosure proceedings were commenced, held that after execution of the policy neither knowledge of foreclosure proceedings after the commencement thereof coming to the agent, silence on his part, nor failure to return unearned premium, amounted to a waiver of forfeiture in the absence of the agreement provided by the policy indorsed thereon or added thereto. Woodard v. German American Ins. Co., 128 Wis. 1, 106 N. W. 681.

Limitation held not to prevent waiver: Agent having power to, and who did, solicit insurance, take applications, deliver policies, and collect premiums, held to stand in such a relation to the company that his action in waiving condition in employer's liability policy as to payment of further premium than that expressed in the policy by written agreement attached to the policy, prior to delivery of policy and payment of premium, was binding on company to extent that it could not recover any additional premium, though policy provided that no provision thereof could be waived or altered except by written consent of general manager. London Guaranty & Acc. Co. v. Hartman, 122 Ill. App. 315.

81. Company held estopped to deny agency of person to whom premiums were paid to receive them. Courtney v. Fidelity Mut. Aid Ass'n [Mo. App.] 94 S. W. 768. Company held estopped by course of dealing to deny authority of clerk to promise undertaker that it would reimburse him for burying insured, it having an option to make such an agreement under the policy. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 121 Ill. App. 257.

82. Provision that no person unless duly authorized in writing shall be deemed the agent of the insurer may be waived by mutual consent. Helbig v. Citizens Ins. Co., 120 Ill. App. 58. Testimony of special agent that he was verbally authorized to cancel policy, and as to efforts made by him to procure policy pursuant to such authority, held admissible where there was evidence tending to show that plaintiff waived such provision by his conduct. Id.

83. Fire insurance: What is not known cannot be waived. In re Millers' & Manufacturers' Ins. Co. [Minn.] 106 N. W. 485. Knowledge will not be presumed from mere fact that policy was issued without inquiry on theory that company itself procured all information it considered important. Id.

Life insurance: Answer to question requiring names of physicians who had treated insured and certificate of examining physician held not to have given company knowledge of facts or to have shown that answer was incomplete so as to make issuance of policy a waiver of breach of warranty resulting from incomplete answer. National Life Ins. Co. v. Reppond [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 829, 96 S. W. 778. Fact that agent was informed that applicant had fits held not to charge him with knowledge that such fits were epileptic, or to prevent avoidance of policy for fraud in failing to disclose that fact. Thompson v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. S. 1006.

Employers' liability insurance: Fact that plaintiff had other policies issued by same company at higher rate of premium which were still in force and which permitted use of explosives held not to operate as notice to the company that plain-the company[84] or its agent of facts rendering it void at its inception, it cannot avail itself of them as a defense to an action thereon,[85] and this is generally held to be true notwithstanding restrictions in the policy prescribing a particular mode in which its terms may be waived or limiting the authority to waive to particular persons,[86] though there seems to be some conflict of authority in this regard.[87] In tiff would use explosives relying on the policy in suit for indemnity where such use was contrary to express terms of latter, and hence other policies were not admissible to show that company knew that plaintiff would use explosives. Columbian Exposition Salvage Co. v. Union Casualty & Surety Co., 220 Ill. 172, 77 N. E. 128.

Tornado insurance: Where at time policy was issued by defendant it was carrying other insurance on plaintiff's property under a contract of reinsurance, held that it was estopped to avoid policy because of the existence of other insurance without written permission. Kennedy v. Agricultural Ins. Co. [S. D.] 110 N. W. 116.

84. Fire insurance. In re Millers' & Manufacturers' Ins. Co. [Minn.] 106 N. W. 485; Porter v. Insurance Co., 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 75. Having accepted premium to take risk of indemnifying insured against loss, it is incompatible for insurer to attach condition which will from beginning relieve him from that risk. Ohio Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Vogel [Ind.] 76 N. E. 977. Provision that if the building insured was occupied by a tenant the policy should be void. Id. Provision as to ownership. Wisotzkey v. Niagara Fire Ins. Co., 112 App. Div. 599, 98 N. Y. S. 760. Vacancy and fact that it will remain vacant for more than time allowed by policy. New York Mut. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co., 110 App. Div. 760, 97 N. Y. S. 436. Existence of chattel mortgage. Hirsch v. Fidelitas Societe Anonyme D'Assurances & De Reassurances, 99 N. Y. S. 517. Provision as to other insurance where insured obtained policy from agent after informing him that he wanted it so that he could procure another policy in another company conforming thereto and agent made no objection. Polk v. Western Assur. Co., 114 Mo. App. 514, 90 S. W. 397. Knowledge that mill could not be operated in severe winter weather on account of lack of power held to prevent forfeiture under provision that policy should be void for nonoperation. Waukau Mill. Co. v. Citizens' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 937.

85. Fire insurance: As to state of title. Porter v. Insurance Co., 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 75. As to ownership of property. Pearlstine v. Phoenix Ins. Co. [S. C.] 54 S. E. 372. Knowledge of soliciting agent authorized to take applications and entrusted with policy for delivery to insured that applicant is carrying other insurance. Kelly v. Citizens' Mut. Fire Ass'n, 96 Minn. 477, 105 N. W. 675. Where general local agent knew that building was vacant and would remain so for longer period than allowed by policy. New York Mut. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co., 170 App. Div. 760, 97 N. Y. S. 436. Fact that agent was also acting as renting agent of plaintiff held immaterial. Id. Where plaintiff told defendant's agent that he wanted property insured for $7,000, and latter told him that he would try to get it for him and thereupon wrote out applications for policies issued by defendant for $4,000, and at same time and as part of same transaction undertook to get remaining $3,000, which he subsequently did in other companies, held that defendant would be held to have waived condition prohibiting concurrent insurance and was estopped to set up breach as a defense. Wensel v. Property Mut. Ins. Ass'n, 129 Iowa, 295, 105 N. W. 522.

Life insurance: That insured was not in sound health. Thompson v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. S. 1006. As to false representations and warranties as to use of intoxicants. Fludd v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. [S. C.] 55 S. E. 762. Where agents procured application to be made and policy to be issued with knowledge of insured's intemperate habits, held that company could not avoid policy for fraud because of false representations in that regard in the answer. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Bockting [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 524. Company affected with the knowledge of its agent and thus knowing the existence of a cause of forfeiture at the inception of the contract is estopped to assert such forfeiture by accepting the premium and delivering the policy as a valid contract of insurance. Doyle v. Hill [S. C.] 55 S. E. 446. In action against insured on premium note striking out evidence tending to show that medical examiner inserted false answer in application, though insured gave true one, offered for purpose of showing failure of consideration, held harmless. Id.

86. Fire insurance: Existence of such facts and the knowledge of the agent may be proved by parol though the policy expressly provides that no officer or agent shall have power to waive any of its conditions except by written indorsement thereon. Pearlstine v. Phoenix Ins. Co. [S. C.] 54 S. E. 372. Estoppel may be proved by parol, notwithstanding clauses providing that no waiver shall be effective unless indorsed in writing on the policy at the home office of the company. People's Fire Ins. Co. v. Goyne [Ark.] 96 S. W. 365. Company may be estopped by the conduct of its agent acting within the apparent scope of his authority from availing itself of a false answer to a material question or other breach of warranty or violation of the provisions of the application or warranty, though policy or application provides that company shall not be bound by any such conduct or representation of its agent. As to ownership, location, and occupancy of buildings. Id. Local agents vested with authority to make contracts of insurance, countersign, issue, and deliver policies, and receive premiums, stand in the place of the company in dealing with applicants for policies, and may waive stipulations which purport to be essential to the validity of the contract, regardless of limitations. Rudd v. American Guaranorder to render this rule operative, however, the issuing of the policy with such knowledge must be inconsistent with an intention to enforce its provisions as written.[88] Knowledge of an intention to violate the policy in the future cannot be relied on for the purpose of showing an estoppel.[89] So too, notice of an intention to do something which the policy provides shall not be done without the company's consent will not estop the company from avoiding the policy where it is done without such consent, though it fails to object at the time.[90] There is a line of tee Fund Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 237. Iron-safe clause held waived where policy was issued and premium accepted after insured told agent that it was impossible for him to comply therewith, and that he would take the insurance only if compliance was excused, and agent in effect told him that company would waive stipulation and that he need not comply with it. Id. Where evidence showed that agents knew that plainitiff was not the owner of the property insured but that policy was intended to protect him for loans, advances, and indorsements, held that company was estopped to deny liability on ground that insured's interest was not truly stated, though policy provided that no agent should have power to waive any provision or condition unless policy provided otherwise, and then only by agreement indorsed thereon or added thereto. Wisotzkey v. Niagara Fire Ins. Co., 112 App. Div. 599, 98 N. Y. S. 760.

Accident insurance: Where the local agent has actual knowledge of the falsity of a statement made by the insured in his application and forwards the application upon which the policy is issued, the knowledge of the agent is the knowledge of the company, and the false statement will not avoid the contract, though policy provides that no notice or knowledge of the agent shall be held to effect a waiver or change in the contract. Fishbate v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 140 N. C. 589, 53 S. E. 354. As to physical and mental condition of applicant. Id.

87. Where application provided that no statement or declaration made to any agent, examiner, or other person, and not contained in application, should be considered as having been made to or brought to the notice of the company, or as charging it with any liability by reason thereof, held that, where question in application whether insured had ever had a severe surgical operation was answered in the negative and such answer was false though warranted true, evidence that insured had told the truth to the agent who filled out the application was inadmissible. Rinker v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 214 Pa. 608, 64 A. 82. Knowledge of agent at time he wrote policy that insured did not own property in fee held not to operate as waiver of forfeiture on that ground. Beddall v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 600. Where application for semi-tontine policy provided that no statements, etc., of agent should bind company unless reduced to writing and presented to company with application, and policy issued pursuant thereto provided that agents were not authorized to waive forfeitures or to make, alter, or discharge contracts, and insured accepted and retained policy for 11 years without complaint, held that application and policy constituted contract and absolutely determined rights of parties, all prior negotiations and agreements being merged therein, regardless of alleged special contract in regard to dividends delivered to insured by subagent which was in fact a mere prospectus. Langdon v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 914.

88. Where house was occupied by owner when policy was issued, held that provision that policy should be void if premises should become vacant or unoccupied, and that it should be suspended during such vacancy and company should not be liable for loss occurring in the meantime, was not waived by reason of the fact that the policy was issued upon an application showing that the insured's title was a sheriff's certificate issued pursuant to an execution sale and that he would not get a deed for some months and hence had no right to possession or control. Chismore v. Anchor Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 230. Fact that agent issued policy with knowledge as to store, building, and stock, and that insured did not keep an iron safe, held not a waiver of clause requiring insured to keep books at night and when store was not open for business in fireproof safe "or in some secure place not exposed to a fire which would destroy the" building. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co. v. Knerr, 72 Kan. 385, 83 P. 611. Where policy was issued on new building in process of construction, which, at the time of its destruction, had never been occupied as a dwelling, held that provision that it should be void in case of vacancy for more than a specified time without the written consent of the company referred only to future use of building, so that it was not waived because agent knew that building was unoccupied when policy was issued, either of his own knowledge or by reason of communications of insured. Harris v. North American Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 361, 77 N. E. 493.

89. Knowledge of soliciting agent. Wensel v. Property Mut. Ins. Ass'n, 129 Iowa, 295, 105 N. W. 522.

90. Has right to infer that policy holder intends to obtain consent to the act before it is done. Weddington v. Piedmont Fire Ins. Co. [N. C.] 54 S. E. 271. Letter of president of company refusing to make loan to insured and wishing him "success in his undertaking" held not a waiver of right to avoid policy for incumbering property without company's consent, even if company could be deemed to have had notice of insured's intention to mortgage property which it had not. Id. Instructions held not open to objection that they permitted jury to find waiver if they found that before issuance of policy in suit insured declared his intention of procuring other insurance. Polk cases which hold that a waiver of the provisions of the policy or an estoppel to enforce them cannot be shown by proof of parol contemporaneous agreements with the agent or of his knowledge at the time the policy was issued of facts which are in plain violation of its express terms,[91] particularly where the policy provides that no agent shall have authority to waive any of its terms or provisions except in writing indorsed thereon or attached thereto.[92] Still other courts hold that, while waiver cannot rest alone on an agent's prior knowledge or understanding which is inconsistent with the writing afterwards made,[93] evidence of such prior knowledge is admissible to connect with and aid in the proof that his acts after the execution of the contract were with knowledge that the insured was violating its conditions.[94] It has also been held that in the absence of fraud or deceit the insured cannot show that he understood or was told by the agent that the promised indemnity should be construed to include a risk excluded by the express terms of the written policy.[95]

v. Western Assur. Co., 114 Mo. App. 514, 90 S. W. 397.

91. Rule that an unambiguous written contract cannot be altered or contradicted by parol evidence, in the absence of fraud or mutual mistake of fact, applies to contracts of insurance. Deming Inv. Co. v. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co., 16 Okl. 1, 83 P. 918; Gish v. Insurance Co. [Okl.] 87 P. 869. Where policy provided that insurance should cover a certain building while used and occupied as a normal school and dwelling and that it should be inoperative if and when not so used or occupied, held that in the absence of fraud or mistake parol evidence was inadmissible to show that the building was not so used and occupied when the policy was issued and that the agent knew that fact and hence that the company was estopped to set up breach of condition as a defense. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Buchanan [C. C. A.] 141 F. 877. Iowa Code 1897, §§ 1749, 1750, prohibiting limitations on agent's power by provisions in the contract, etc., held not to change the rule. Id. Inadmissible in action on policy to show that company is estopped to enforce provision in premium notes making provision in policy for 30 days' grace in payment of premiums inapplicable by reason of statement by agent to insured before notes were given. Lefler v. New York Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 814. Knowledge of company that property was vacant and idle when policy was issued held not a waiver of provision that it should be void if property remained idle for more than 30 days at any one time without permission of company, there being no proof of agreement to waive or that company gave plaintiff permission to leave property idle except upon compliance with provisions of policy. Kentucky Vermillion Min. & C. Co. v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 695. Held that parol evidence was inadmissible to show understanding at time it was issued that it could remain vacant provided watchman was employed, for purpose of showing waiver. Id. Where policy described building as dwelling house when in fact it was occupied in part as a store, evidence that defendant's agent through whom policy was obtained had maps in his office showing the character of the building was inadmissible as contradicting the written contract. Bowditch v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Co. [Mass.] 79 N. E. 788.

92. Such a provision is reasonable and valid and is measure of agent's authority, and when expressed in policy insured is presumed to have notice thereof and is bound thereby. Gish v. Insurance Co. [Okl.] 87 P. 869. Company held not estopped to claim forfeiture for breach of iron-safe clause by reason of the fact that company's agents knew when they issued the policy and received the premium that insured had no safe and would not keep his books in one as required, and told him that such provision would not be insisted upon and parol evidence was inadmissible to show such facts. Id. Waiver by acts and conduct cannot be shown where contract contains such a limitation. Deming Inv. Co. v. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co., 16 Okl. 1, 83 P. 918. Right to forfeit for failure to truly state insured's interest held not waived by fact that agent who filled out application knew true condition of his title. Id.

93. Since, in the absence of fraud or mistake, prior negotiations and understandings cannot be shown to contradict the terms of the written contract. Riley v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 117 Mo. App. 229, 92 S. W. 1147.

94. Riley v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 117 Mo. App. 229, 92 S. W. 1147. Where agent was informed by insured when he issued policy that he would not comply with iron-safe clause and knew on day before fire that he was not doing so, but, instead of objecting or taking steps to procure a forfeiture, he solicited additional insurance, held that forfeiture was waived. Instruction approved. Id.

95. Where policy expressly provided that insured was only entitled to one-tenth of the indemnity for loss of time due to hernia accidentally produced, held that testimony of insured that agent told him that such provision applied only to hernia existing when the policy was issued or at the time of the accident was inadmissible. Kelsey v. Continental Casualty Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 221. Plaintiff's claim held not one of waiver but an attempt to establish a different contract by parol. Id. Contract held not one partly in writing and partly in parol, such contracts being never upheld when oral part

The unconditional[96] acceptance of premiums with knowledge of a breach of a condition avoiding the policy precludes the company from defending on that ground,[97] unless the insured is liable therefor in any event.[98] An attempt to return such premiums after loss is ineffectual to relieve the company from liability.[99] Some courts hold that a breach of condition is waived by the failure of the insurer to return the premium and claim a forfeiture within a reasonable time after knowledge of the facts,[1] while others require an affirmative act in addition thereto.[2] serves merely to eliminate or destroy effect of writing. Id. Where policy and application plainly excluded from the risk lumber in sawmill building and additions held that parol evidence was inadmissible to show that the agent of the company, when the application was made and the policy issued, stated to the plaintiff that the policy was an "unlimited policy," meaning that it covered lumber in mill and adjoining buildings as well as that in the yards, and that he would not have taken it but for such statements. Ferguson v. Lumbermen's Ins. Co. [Wash.] 88 P. 128.

96. Acceptance of amount due on note after its maturity held not a waiver of forfeiture for nonpayment where it clearly appeared that money was being "held in suspense" pending the furnishing of a health certificate by the insured upon an invitation by the company to reinstate the policy where certificate was never furnished. Bank of Commerce v. New York Life Ins. Co., 125 Ga. 552, 54 S. E. 643.

97. Tornado insurance: Right to forfeit for vacancy waived where insurer after loss canceled policy and retained premium up to and including time of loss. Farmers' & Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Bodge [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1004.

Life insurance: Acceptance of renewal note by company after default in payment of original premium note and subsequent indorsement and transfer of renewal note to third person held waiver of provision that policy should be ipso facto forfeited by nonpayment of premium note when due, so that fact that renewal took place after maturity was no defense to an action by the indorsee. Neal v. Gray, 124 Ga. 510, 52 S. E. 622. Even though agent had no authority to waive forfeiture for nonpayment of premium note at maturity and to accept renewal note, held that the acquiescence of company in renewal and its receipt of renewal note and transfer of it by indorsement operated as such waiver. Id. Continued collection of premiums with knowledge that insured was insane held waiver of provision that no obligation should be assumed unless insured was in good health when policy was delivered. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Willis [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 560. Receipt of 41 premiums held waiver of provision that policy should be void if there was in force another policy on same life issued by same company, in absence of indorsement permitting it. Monahan v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [Md.] 63 A. 211. Lapse for nonpayment waived by subsequent receipt of premiums. McNicholas v. Prudential Ins. Co., 191 Mass. 304, 77 N. E. 756. Acceptance of application and premiums by company's agent and superintendent with knowledge that insured was keeping house of ill fame held waiver of breach of warranty as to occupation where application was solicited by agent. Perry v. Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 143 Mich. 290, 12 Det. Leg. N. 978, 106 N. W. 860. Question of knowledge held for jury. Id. Where policy issued to person 14 years old provided that insurer would not assume any risk thereunder until insured reached age of 15 and had passed medical examination, held that receipt and retention of premium after insured arrived at age of 15 without insisting on medical examination was, in absence of fraud, a waiver thereof, particularly where it appeared that insured would have been accepted if examined. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Miller [Neb.] 106 N. W. 229. Company held not entitled to contend that insured did not rightfully become a member, where it had received premiums regularly upon the policy from its inception. Maher v. Empire Life Ins. Co., 110 App. Div. 723, 96 N. Y. S. 496. Having received premiums for more than three years, company held estopped by Rev. St. § 3626 from making a defense on the ground of false statements in the application. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Gilligan, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 397.

Health insurance: Nonpayment of monthly instalment of premium when due held waived, where agent, with knowledge of facts, received instalments subsequently becoming due, and transmitted them to company which received them without objection. Shay v. Phoenix Benefit Ass'n, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 527.

98. Where health policy, though furnishing no indemnity for loss due to tuberculosis, entitled insured to indemnity against accident and insurable disease even if he had tuberculosis, receipt of advance premium was not a waiver of right to refuse to pay loss due to tuberculosis. Conroy v. Equitable Acc. Co., 27 R. I. 467, 63 A. 356.

99. Where company was estopped by receipt of premiums to avoid policy because insured had other insurance in same company. Monahan v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [Md.] 63 A. 211.

1. In order to rescind the company must seasonably return premiums received. Paragraph of answer held insufficient. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Bockting [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 524. Violation of condition does not render policy void, though it so declares, but only voidable at the election of the insurer, and it will be confined to election to treat it as valid made by retaining premium. Ohio Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Vogel [Ind.] 76 N. E. 977. Contract is not ipso facto rendered void by breach of the conditions upon which it issues, or by fraud on the part of the insured, but voidable only at the election of the insurer. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Bockting

A failure to return unearned premiums will not estop the insurer from relying on a forfeiture where the policy provides for their return in such case only on surrender of the policy.[3]

The delivery of the policy is a waiver of the payment of the first premium in advance,[4] and the extension of credit to the insured precludes a subsequent objection that the premium was not paid in cash.[5]

If the insurer issues a policy upon an uncompleted application he cannot afterwards avoid it on the ground that the answers therein were not full and complete.[6] Thus, where upon the face of the application a question appears to be not answered at all or to be imperfectly answered, and the company issues a policy without further inquiry, it thereby waives the want or imperfection in the answer and renders the omission to answer more fully immaterial,[7] but the waiver in such case extends only to that part of the inquiry which is unanswered and does not preclude a forfeiture for breach of warranty where the answer so far as it goes is false.[8]

Some courts hold that if there is no written application and the insured has an insurable interest in the property, acts in good faith, and makes no actual misrepresentation or concealment of his interest, and the company issues the policy, and accepts and retains the premium without making any inquiry concerning it, it will be presumed to have knowledge of the condition of his title and to assure the property with such knowledge.[9] Others hold that, unless the insured has been mis-

[Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 524. Motion for judgment notwithstanding verdict for plaintiff held properly overruled though jury specially found that insured made false representations where there was no special finding that insurer elected to rescind or returned premiums. Id.

2. The insurer is not bound to tender back the amount of the premiums voluntarily paid to it before it has knowledge of the breach of a condition precedent rendering the policy void from its inception, as a condition precedent to availing itself thereof as a defense in an action on the policy. In re Millers' & Manufacturers' Ins. Co. [Minn.] 106 N. W. 485. Failure to make tender not a waiver, though insured may recover premiums. Id. May defend on ground of fraud or misrepresentation without previous tender. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Whayne's Adm'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 1049. Failure to return premium paid upon receipt of policy held not a waiver of right of company to forfeit policy for noncompliance of insured with its positive terms. Kentucky Vermillion Min. & C. Co. v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 695. Where policy covered property while contained in a specified building and not elsewhere, held that contract was terminated by the removal of the property and could regain its vitality only from some affirmative act by or on behalf of the company equivalent to the making of a new contract. Shackelford v. Indemnity Fire Ins. Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 771. Mere fact that it was charged through agent with knowledge of removal after it had taken place and remained quiescent was insufficient to revive its liability. Id. Where by laws of association, which were part of contract, provided that it should not "be liable" for any loss resulting from any open fire within 50 feet of the building, held that such a fire resulting in loss of building destroyed contract and ipso facto ended all liability thereon so that it could not thereafter be the subject of an implied waiver. Draper v. Oswego County Fire Relief Ass'n, 101 N. Y. S. 168.

3. Weddington v. Piedmont Fire Ins. Co. [N. C.] 54 S. E. 271; Kompa v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 425.

4. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Ass'n v. Meyer, 118 Ill. 155.

5. See, also, § 8, ante. Company having given credit by giving due bill. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Ass'n v. Meyer, 118 Ill. App. 155. Due bill for premium and policy having been executed at same time are to be construed as one contract. Id. Evidence held to show that notes for first premium were taken with company's knowledge and consent so that it could not thereafter object that premium was not paid in cash. Kimbro v. New York Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 1025. Where application stated amount paid by insured and company issued policy and act of agent in accepting notes for first premium was held binding on it, held that fact that notes were for sum slightly less than sum due was immaterial, it being presumed that difference was waived. Kilborn v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 861. There being no provision in policy making actual payment of premium in cash a condition precedent to its taking effect, held that delivery of policy by general agent on receipt of part of premium and insured's promise to pay balance in future was waiver of payment of total premium in cash. Green v. Star Fire Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 586, 77 N. E. 649.

6. Hanrahan v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 72 N. J. Law, 504, 63 A 280.

7. Imperfections in or want of answers as to previous losses, etc., waived. Security Mut. Ins. Co. v. Berry [Ark.] 98 S. W. 693.

8. Hanrahan v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 72 N. J. Law, 504, 63 A. 280.

led by some act of the insurer, he is in such case bound by the conditions found in the policy which he has accepted and retained without objection.[10]

An insurer who has assumed a particular position with reference to a loss being within the terms of the policy cannot thereafter assume an inconsistent one to the prejudice of the insured.[11]

Waiver may be inferred from acts of the insurer which show either recognition or denial of liability exclusively on other grounds.[12] A refusal to accept a tender of premiums on a particular ground is a waiver of all other grounds.[13]

Requiring proofs of loss is a waiver of breaches of conditions known to the insurer,[14] but the retention of proofs voluntarily furnished is not.[15]

In the absence of an agreement to the contrary,[16] the adjustment of a loss with knowledge of the facts waives a forfeiture for a previous violation of the policy.[17]

9. See 6 C. L. 125, n. 88.

10. Provision that policy shall be void if insured is not sole and unconditional owner not waived by issuance of policy without application. In re Millers' & Manufacturers' Ins. Co. [Minn.] 106 N. W. 485. Policy held void because building was on leased ground where application was oral, nothing was said by either party as to title, and it did not appear that company or agent had any knowledge of the condition of the title, notwithstanding fact that insured never read policy and did not know of provision that it should be avoided if building was not on ground owned by him in fee simple. Wyandotte Brewing Co. v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 144 Mich. 440, 13 Det. Leg. N. 295, 108 N. W. 393.

11. Employers' liability insurance: Where company was informed of all the facts and voluntarily assumed control of action against insured for damages for injuries to minor employe, held that it was estopped, in the absence of understanding or agreement to the contrary, to assert that it was not liable under contract on ground that employe was a minor employed contrary to law. Tozer v. Ocean Acc. & Guarantee Corp. [Minn.] 109 N. W. 410. Where company assumed defense of action commenced against insured by void attachment proceedings and by appearing and pleading to the merits subjected her to the jurisdiction of the court, held that it thereby waived objection that liability for costs of such attachment was not within the terms of its policy. Myton v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 117 Mo. App. 442, 92 S. W. 1149. Action of company in taking control and dominion of action for damages against insured and keeping it until judgment was entered without notice to him that it did not consider itself liable under the policy, held such a construction of policy as to estop it from thereafter denying liability. Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. v. Chicago & B. M. Coal & Coke Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 962.

12. Shay v. Phoenix Benefit Ass'n, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 527. Forfeiture for breach of iron-safe clause held waived where there was no demand for books or inventory which insured was required to produce, company claimed incendiarism and demanded appraisement, and went to trial on answer charging insured with perjury and arson, and never pleaded breach until second trial of case after reversal. Carp v. Queen Ins. Co., 116 Mo. App. 528, 92 S. W. 1137. Refusal to pay a loss on a specified ground estops it from asserting other ground relieving it from liability of which it had full knowledge, after the insured has incurred expense and brought suit in the belief that the only objection is that stated. Shay v. Phoenix Ben. Ass'n, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 527.

13. Refusal to accept tender of premiums on ground that company was not liable because of forfeiture for their nonpayment held waiver of objection that amount tendered was too small. Graham v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co., 72 N. J. Law, 298, 62 A. 681.

14. Demanding further proofs of loss after knowledge that insured was not absolute and unconditional owner held waiver of provision requiring such ownership. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Enoch [Ark.] 96 S. W. 393. Instruction that requirement of amended proofs of loss by company or agents authorized to represent it in adjusting losses would not preclude it from relying on invalidity of policy by reason of requirement therein that property belonged to insured as unconditional and sole owner held erroneous and properly refused. Id.

15. Held not a waiver of forfeiture for commencement of foreclosure proceedings. Woodard v. German American Ins. Co., 128 Wis. 1, 106 N. W. 681.

16. The acts of an adjuster while investigating the cause of the fire and the amount of loss sustained, made under a nonwaiver agreement, cannot be construed into a waiver by the company of the right to insist that the policy was void for noncompliance with the iron-safe clause. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co. v. Knerr, 72 Kan. 385, 83 P. 611. Breach of iron-safe clause held not waived by requesting production of other evidence to supply that destroyed by reason of such breach and by making examination thereof to determine amount of loss, where before insured was put to any inconvenience or expense in that connection he signed nonwaiver agreement. Phenix Ins. Co. v. Stahl, 72 Kan. 578, 83 P. 614.

17. Rudd v. American Guarantee Fund Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 237. Where agent testified that he had no knowledge of breach of iron-safe clause when he agreed on settlement, held error to instruct that settlement was waiver of breach without requiring a finding that, at the time it was made, agent had knowledge of the destruction of the books. Id. Cannot take advantage of breach of iron-safe clause

A nonwaiver agreement will not be extended beyond its plain terms.[18] Oral negotiations leading up to the making of the agreement cannot operate to vary or contradict its terms.[19] In the absence of a showing of fraud or mistake where the insured signs such an agreement, he will be conclusively presumed to know its contents.[20] He may, however, show that he was induced to sign it through the false and fraudulent representations of the company's adjuster.[21]

The cancellation of a policy is not a waiver of a previous breach of a condition or warranty therein, particularly when the company has the right to cancel at any time with or without cause.[22]

The waiver of one provision does not preclude reliance on the others,[23] and knowledge of the violation of a provision of a former policy is not a waiver of a similar provision in a subsequent one.[24]

(§ 16) D. Reinstatement.[25]—Life policies frequently provide that they may be revived within a specified time after a lapse for nonpayment of the premiums on the payment of all arrears and the furnishing of certain evidence of the good health of the insured.[26] Approval by certain officers of the company is sometimes required.[27] Where the insured does everything required of him to procure a reinthough it had no knowledge thereof if it might have ascertained facts upon inquiry and they were not fraudulently prevented from coming to its knowledge by insured. Instruction approved. German Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, Wilson & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 798, 92 S. W. 1068. The action to recover after adjustment is based upon a new and independent contract and not upon the policy, and the insurer can defeat it only by showing fraud or mistake in the adjustment. Id.

18. Held not to apply after adjustment of loss. German Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, Wilson & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 798, 92 S. W. 1068. An agreement that any action taken by the company in investigating and ascertaining the cause of the fire and the amount of the damage shall not create a waiver or invalidate any of the conditions of the policy does not prevent an adjustment of the loss with full knowledge of the fact and an agreement to pay the same from operating as a waiver of the right to forfeit the policy for previous violation of iron-safe clause. Rudd v. American Guarantee Fund Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 237.

19. Evidence that prior to execution of nonwaiver agreement adjuster told insured that if he would furnish certain information after signing the agreement the company would settle with him and pay his claim. Phenix Ins. Co. v. Stahl, 72 Kan. 578, 83 P. 614.

20. Is bound thereby whether he actually knows its contents or not. Weddington v. Piedmont Fire Ins. Co. [N. C.] 54 S. E. 271.

21. Agreement, being without consideration, can only be received in evidence for the purpose of determining the intention of the parties at the time of its execution, and insured may show circumstances under which it was signed. Gish v. Insurance Co. [Okl.] 87 P. 869.

22. Of condition against increase of hazard. Ruffner Bros. v. Dutchess Ins. Co. [W. Va.] 53 S. E. 943.

23. Waiver by insurer of right to cancel policy because of excessive use of intoxicants held not to preclude reliance on provision that policy should be void in event of insured's death as a result of the use of alcoholic stimulants, Lowenstein v. Franklin Life Ins. Co., 122 Ill. App. 632.

24. Second policy held not a continuation of a former one, though identical except as to dates, but a separate and independent one, so that evidence that company knew of violation of clause in first one, avoiding policy if property remained idle for 30 days was inadmissible to show waiver of similar provision in second one. Kentucky Vermillion Min. & C. Co. v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 695.

25. See 6 C. L. 130.

26. Where insured was in bad health when tender of overdue premium was made, held that policy could not be revived without consent of insurer. American Assur. Ass'n v. Hardiman, 124 Ga. 379, 52 S. E. 536. Policy held to give insured absolute right to reinstatement on compliance with specified conditions so that when he did so comply and submitted to required medical examination the company was bound to pass upon the matter within a reasonable time and notify him in case the result was unfavorable. Leonard v. Prudential Ins. Co., 128 Wis. 348, 107 N. W. 646. The company in such case held bound to act reasonably and fairly to the insured and to have no right to arbitrarily refuse to reinstate him or to act on information secretly obtained without giving him an opportunity to meet it. Id. It being the duty of company to act upon application for revival within a reasonable time, held that its silence for some two months after an apparently perfect case for revival was submitted to it, delay being due to its negligence and that of its agents, and no notice of rejection being given until after the death of the insured, estopped it from asserting a rejection against the beneficiary by reason of information secretly obtained without giving insured an opportunity to be heard. Id.

27. Provision that delinquent members might be reinstated "if approved by the statement, equity will regard the policy as reinstated though he dies before an actual reinstatement.[28] A revival or reinstatement is the making of a new contract.[29]

§ 17. Contracts of reinsurance and concurrent insurance. Reinsurance.[30]—Whether or not a reinsurer is liable for a loss depends upon the terms of the contract of reinsurance and not those of the original policy.[31] In the absence of a specific provision on the subject in the contract of reinsurance, the original contract controls in determining whether some specific act is necessary to effectuate a forfeiture.[32]

An agreement whereby an insurance company in consideration of a transfer to it of all the assets of a fraternal benefit society assumes all liability of the latter on certificates on which death has been reported and which remain unpaid, and its subsequent specific assumption of all liability on a specific certificate, authorizes the beneficiary named in the latter to enforce the same directly against it.[33] In the absence of a statute[34] or a provision in the contract to the contrary,[35] an agreement to reinsure all policies in good standing creates no liability in the reinsurer on a policy which the original insurer has wrongfully attempted to forfeit, and hence is apparently not in good standing when the contract of reinsurance is made.[36] medical director and president," by giving reasonable assurances that they were in good health, held valid and to make approval a condition precedent to reinstatement. Instruction held erroneous. Lane v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 54 S. E. 854. Provision held not to make approval a mere ministerial act but that it involved the exercise of judgment and discretion, and hence insured could not recover damages for refusal to reinstate him and cancellation of policy in absence of showing that approval had been fraudulently or arbitrarily withheld. Id.

28. Evidence held to show that insured had done everything required of him, it being presumed that application contained satisfactory evidence of good health in absence of showing to the contrary. Wichman v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 695.

29. Date of reinstatement held date of issue within meaning of incontestable clause so that insurer could defend on ground of false representations in health certificate on which reinstatement was based at any time within 2 years from date of reinstatement. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Galbraith, 115 Tenn. 471, 91 S. W. 204.

30. See 6 C. L. 130.

31. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Aachen & M. Fire Ins. Co. [Cal. App.] 84 P. 253. Subject-matter of reinsurance held to have been certain wheat while contained in a specified warehouse and not the risk assumed by the original insurer, and hence reinsurer was not liable where wheat was in different building when destroyed regardless of whether original insurer was or not. Id. Subsequent provision that policy was "subject to the same risks, valuations, conditions, and adjustments as or may be taken by the reinsured" held not to defeat the express provisions of the contract that the wheat was insured only while contained in the warehouse. Id.

32. In absence of specific provision in contract of reinsurance for forfeiture for nonpayment of premiums, held that some affirmative act was necessary as required by original contract. Life policy. Brooks v. Conservative Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 106 N. W. 913.

33. Held a reinsurance directly to the several members of the society, and specifically a contract of reinsurance directly to plaintiff, which made plaintiff's certificate the contract of the reinsuring company and the measure of its liability to her. Cosmopolitan Life Ins. Ass'n v. Koegel, 104 Va. 619, 52 S. E. 166. Held also a contract for her benefit on which she could sue though a stranger to the consideration. Id.

34. Hurd's Rev. St. 1903, c. 73, par. 245, relating to transfers or reinsurance of risks by assessment companies, held to become a part of every contract of transfer and to require a transfer of all members actually in good standing except such as give notice of preference to be transferred to some other company, so that an attempt to tender to transferee company only such members as appeared to be in good standing on transferror's books and records would be invalid. Bolles v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n, 220 Ill. 400, 77 N. E. 198, rvg. 120 Ill. App. 242. Transferee company cannot rely on books of transferring company, but is bound at its peril to ascertain who of the members are in fact members in good standing of such company. Id.

35. Transferring company held to have attempted to transfer all its members in good standing without reference to their standing on its books and records, and hence such a member became, by virtue of contract of transfer, a member of the transferee company though he did not appear as member in good standing on the books. Bolles v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n, 220 Ill. 400, 77 N. E. 198, rvg. 120 Ill. App. 242. Such member was not bound, in absence of notice and where no requirements were made upon him by transferee, to notify latter of his claim to membership therein and to pay or offer to pay it such dues and assessments as might be required of him, in view of his original contract. Concurrent insurance.[37]—In the absence of a provision in the policy to the contrary, the procuring of additional insurance does not affect the validity of the contract.[38] Fire policies generally permit a certain amount of concurrent insurance[39] with a provision for the apportionment of the loss among all the insurers.[40] Similar provisions are sometimes found in accident policies.[41] A "standard guaranty to maintain eighty per cent insurance" does not entirely supersede a provision that the policy shall be void in case additional insurance shall be procured without the consent of the company, but at most impliedly gives permission to procure, or waives the provision against procuring, additional insurance only up to the amount specified.[42] Hence a policy containing both such provisions is avoided by procuring without consent additional insurance carrying the total insurance to a sum greater than the total value of the property.[43]

§ 18. The loss or benefits, its extent, and extent of liability therefor.[44]—Policies in mutual companies ordinarily only entitle the insured in case of loss to his proportionate share of the funds on hand available for the payment of losses.[45] Where the policy provides that the beneficiary shall be entitled to the proceeds of one assessment not exceeding a certain sum, he may recover the full amount of the insurance in the absence of a showing by the company that an assessment would have produced less, that being a matter of defense.[46]

Accident and health insurance.[47]—Accident policies frequently provide for an increased[48] or diminished[49] indemnity in case injuries or death results from cerof court, receivers of insolvent mutual company entered into agreement with defendant whereby latter agreed to reinsure all of its policies in good standing. In order to carry out contract actuaries appointed for that purpose prepared a list of such policies which was submitted to defendant as a basis of its contract. Previously thereto the insolvent company had wrongfully attempted to forfeit plaintiff's policy, and hence it did not appear in such list. Held that plaintiff could not maintain an action on policy against defendant. Kansas Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Whitehead [Ky.] 93 S. W. 609.

39. "$800 total concurrent insurance permitted, including this policy," held to authorize $800 in addition to amount of policy in which provision was contained. Western Assur. Co. v. Ferrell [Miss.] 40 So. 8. Where policy permitted concurrent insurance but provided that total insurance should at no time exceed three-fourths of the actual cash value of each item of property covered, held that an overvaluation in procuring concurrent insurance did not avoid policy where there was no intention to defraud. Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co. v. Waggener [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 8, 97 S. W. 541.

40. Where there was evidence tending to show that loss was in excess of amount of verdict, which was for full amount of policy, held that, if verdict was rendered without deducting from amount of loss the amount required to be deducted because of concurrent insurance, error was cured by remittitur of proper amount and supreme court could not reverse on ground that judgment was excessive, amount of recovery being question of fact. Western Underwriters Ass'n v. Hankins, 221 Ill. 304, 77 N. E. 447, afg. 122 Ill. App. 600. Where company, when it issued policy, was chargeable with knowledge that there was to be a specified amount of concurrent insurance on the building, held that the total amount of insurance and not merely the amount of defendant's policy was prima facie the value of the property for the purpose of determining defendant's pro rata share of the loss. Wensel v. Property Mut. Ins. Ass'n, 125 Iowa, 295, 105 N. W. 522. Code § 1742, providing that the amount stated in the policy is prima facie the insurable value of the property at the date of the policy, held not to change rule. Id.

41. Provision for apportionment of indemnity among insurers in case amount thereof was in excess of weekly wages of insured held to refer to weekly indemnity only, so that where insured lost hand he was entitled to recover total amount of lump sum which contract provided should be paid in such case, regardless of amount of his weekly wages or of whether he had other insurance. Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. v. Morrow [C. C. A.] 143 F. 750.

42. Conceding that guaranty clause imposes obligation to keep total amount of insurance equal to 80 per cent. of the changing actual value of the property covered. Woolford v. Phenix Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 233, 76 N. E. 722.

48. One who while attempting to board a tain specified causes. The duration of weekly indemnity is sometimes made to depend on the cause of the disability.[50] The insured can only recover the amount of indemnity due at the date of the writ.[51]

Employers' liability insurance.[52]—Where the insurer undertakes the defense of an action against the insured on a cause of action concededly within the terms of the policy, it is liable for costs which it makes a part of a consent judgment entered pursuant to a settlement made by it.[53]

Fire insurance.[54]—The insured in case of loss is ordinarily entitled to recover the amount of his actual damages[55] not exceeding the amount named in the policy.[56]

Valued policy laws[57] in many states make the insurer liable for the full amount of the insurance specified in the contract in case of a total loss.[58] A build-moving train seized hand rail of car but failed to hold it and fell on platform and was run over, held not injured while riding as a passenger in or on a public conveyance within a provision for double indemnity. Anable v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. [N. J. Law] 63 A. 92.

49. Policy held to provide for payment of but one-tenth of the indemnity for loss of time resulting wholly or in part from hernia accidentally produced. Instructions held erroneous. Kelsey v. Continental Casualty Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 221. Whether assault committed on insured, from effects of which he died, was committed with the sole purpose of robbery, within the meaning of exception to provision for diminished indemnity in certain cases, held for jury under the evidence. Weidner v. Standard Life & Acc. Ins. Co. [Wis.] 110 N. W. 246.

50. Provision of by-laws that, where disability was result of sickness, indemnity should not be paid for longer period than ten weeks held not unreasonable nor in conflict with provision in policy for indemnity at a specified rate per month during illness (Courtney v. Fidelity Mut. Aid Ass'n [Mo. App.] 94 S. W. 768), nor in conflict with Rev. St. 1899, § 7903, requiring policies issued by assessment company to specify the exact amount which it promises to pay on happening of contingency insured against (Id.).

55. Evidence as to value of personalty destroyed held to support the verdict. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Wintersmith [Ky.] 98 S. W. 987. Findings as to value and damage held sustained by evidence. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Herpolsheimer [Neb.] 109 N. W. 160. Evidence as to damages sustained held insufficient to sustain verdict for plaintiff. British American Ins. Co. v. Columbian Optical Co. [Neb.] 108 N. W. 130. Objection that there was no evidence to go to jury on question of value of personalty destroyed held untenable where sworn proofs of loss were introduced and insured testified that statement of values therein was correct, and there was no objection to competency of such evidence on ground that it was not directed to market value and no cross-examination to show that it was not so directed. Bruger v. Princeton & St. M. Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 95. Where there was evidence from which jury might find that plaintiff lost in the fire the articles scheduled in proofs of loss, held that the fact that it might be difficult or impossible for jury to arrive at its actual cash value would not authorize direction of verdict for defendant. Walker v. Western Underwriters' Ass'n, 142 Mich. 162, 12 Det. Leg. N. 659, 105 N. W. 597. Instructions held prejudicially erroneous as giving jury to understand that there was evidence in the case that property was worth more than value fixed in proofs of loss, in view of absence of definite testimony as to value. Id.

56. Instruction held not misleading as authorizing a recovery of more than two-thirds of the value of certain provisions, which was limit of company's liability. Bruger v. Princeton & St. M. Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 95.

58. Kentucky: Three-fourths value clause held applicable to personalty only and not to real estate under express provisions of St. 1903, § 700. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Wintersmith [Ky.] 98 S. W. 987.

Louisiana: Section 2 of Act No. 135, p. 209, of 1900, is merely complemental of § 1, and, the two sections considered together, the act must be held to relate exclusively to policies covering property which is immovable by nature. Melancon v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 116 La. 324, 40 So. 718.

Missouri: Rev. St. 1899, §§ 7969, 7970, provide that in the event of the total loss of an insured building by fire the measure of damages shall be the amount of the policy less only the depreciation in value during the interim between the issuance of the policy and the time of the loss, and require the insurer to show the amount of such depreciation. Stevens v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 684. Where defendant fails to make showing as to depreciation, measure of loss is conclusively fixed at amount of policy. Id. Section 7969 held applicable to builder's policy, the builder having contracting is a total loss when it has lost its identity and specific character as such, and by means of the fire and as a result thereof has become so far disintegrated that it can no longer be properly designated as a building, though some part of it may remain standing.[59] It is also sometimes provided that the insurer cannot question the value of the property as fixed in the policy,[60] or that the amount therein stated shall be prima facie the insurable value of the property at the date of the policy.[61]

§ 19. Notice, claim, and proof of loss.[62]—As a general rule notice[63] and proof of loss[64] containing the information required by the policy[65] must be given by the ed to turn over completed building and his interest being one in the land. King v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 195 Mo. 290, 92 S. W. 892.

Washington: Mutual fire companies held to be exempted from operation of valued policy statute by Laws 1903, p. 150, c. 97, § 12. Davis v. Pioneer Mut. Ins. Ass'n [Wash.] 87 P. 829.

59. Instruction approved. Stevens v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 684. Policy of insurance on a building is an insurance upon the building as such and not upon the materials of which it is composed. Id. Evidence held to sustain finding of total loss. Id.

60. Rev. St. 1899, § 7979, providing that no company shall take a risk at a ratio greater than three-fourths of the value of the property insured, and when taken its value shall not be questioned in any proceeding, applies to losses under policies covering personalty as well as those covering realty. Stevens v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 684. Statute renders policy on chattels valued only in so far as it precludes company from denying that their value when policy was written was other than one-third more than the amount of the insurance thereon, and does not require payment of full amount of policy when loss is shown to have been only partial. 63. Accident insurance: Notification by company's agent in writing at beneficiary's request within time required held sufficient notice of death. Crowder v. Continental Casualty Co., 115 Mo. App. 535, 91 S. W. 1016.

Burglary insurance: Policy held avoided by failure to give immediate notice of loss to insurer and police. Katzenstein v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 48 Misc. 496, 96 N. Y. S. 183.

64. Fire insurance: Furnishing proofs by insured as required by Iowa Code Supp. 1902, § 1742a, is a condition precedent to right of action to recover for loss, unless waived. American Cereal Co. v. Western Assur. Co., 148 F. 77. Act No. 105 of 1898, p. 151, § 22, prescribing use of fire policies conforming to New York standard form, is not in conflict with, and hence is not repealed by, the valued policy law (Act No. 135, p. 209, of 1900), in so far as form of policy prescribed requires insured to furnish preliminary proof of loss and to furnish insurer with information as to character, situation, and value of the property destroyed or damaged. Melancon v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 116 La. 324, 40 So. 718. Policy held to require both notice of loss and sworn statement. Glazer v. Home Ins. Co., 113 App. Div. 235, 98 N. Y. S. 979 Sworn statement required by standard policy held not a condition precedent to insured's right to sue on policy. Pub. St. 1901, c. 170, §§ 7, 9, 18, construed. Gleason v. Canterbury Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 73 N. H. 583, 64 A. 187. Provision requiring insured to furnish, within 60 days after fire, a sworn statement stating, among other things, the cash value of the property and the amount of the loss, held a reasonable one as to time and insured was bound to comply therewith in the absence of a showing of circumstances excusing delay. Davis v. Pioneer Mut. Ins. Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 829. Failure of insured to make required statement held wholly due to his own negligence, he being familiar with the insurance business. Id. Requested instruction that insured could not recover unless she had furnished sworn statement as required by policy, unless company had waived same, held improperly refused. Levy v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co., 58 W. Va. 546, 52 S. E. 449.

65. Accident insurance: Plaintiff held not required to furnish by way of preliminary proofs of death and the cause thereof more than would be necessary to make out a prima facie case in an action on the policy, and hence company could not require him to furnish affidavits of persons having personal knowledge of injuries resulting in death. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. v. Fielding [Colo.] 83 P. 1013.

Fire insurance: Notice required by Pub. St. 1901, c. 170, § 6, is sufficient if it is in writing and informs insurer of a loss or damage by fire under the policy without more specifically specifying property lost or damaged. Gleason v. Canterbury Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 73 N. H. 583, 64 A. 187. Policy covered property in possession of carriers as warehousemen, etc., and provided that in case of loss they should, although not liable for any loss, notify insurer who was insured thereby, which notice should be conclusive as to that fact on insurer. Insured notified insurer of fire and submitted an itemized statement of articles destroyed in form of two schedules, former containing those articles which insured claimed were included and latter those articles and names of the owners which might have been included and in regard to which there was a dispute. Held sufficient notice and proof of loss to entitle owner named in latter list to recover. Kellner v. Fire Ass'n [Wis.] 106 N. W. 1060. Letter not sworn to and not containing information required, while sufficient as notice of loss, held insufficient as such sworn statement, both notice and statement being necessary. Glazer v. Home Ins. Co., 113 App. Div. 235, 98 N. Y. S. 979. Sworn statements held insufficient for failure to state the cash value of the property at the time of the fire as re-insured or the beneficiary, as the case may be,[66] within the time prescribed.[67] A notice by the insured's wife as his agent ex necessitate is sufficient.[68] It is often held that, in the absence of a provision in the contract to the contrary, a failure to furnish notice or proofs within the time prescribed will not work a forfeiture but will merely postpone the right to sue.[69]

Immediate notice means notice within a reasonable time, what is a reasonable time depending upon the facts and circumstances of each case.[70] Proof of mailing a notice properly addressed and stamped is prima facie proof of the giving of notice.[71] Formal proofs of loss have been held unnecessary in case of the total loss of a building worth more than the amount named in the policy where the company has been promptly notified of the loss and has inspected the premises.[72]

False swearing.[73] Fire insurance.—In the absence of a provision to the contrary false and fraudulent representations in the proofs of loss do not render the policy void.[74] In order that fraud or false swearing may avoid the policy under a provision to that effect, it must be intentional or the result of a reckless disregard of the truth.[75] A provision that false swearing on the part of the insured shall quired by the policy. Davis v. Pioneer Mut. Ins. Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 829.

66. Fire insurance: Iowa Code Supp. 1902. § 1742a, relating to furnishing proofs of loss for loss or damage to personalty by the "assured," held to supersede provisions of policy in that regard. American Cereal Co. v. Western Assur. Co., 148 F. 77. Where policy insured I. Co. on certain property, held that such company was the "insured" though loss was payable to another company as its interest might appear. Id. Allegation in proofs attached to petition that party named in policy as insured was sole owner of property, subject to lien thereon in favor of plaintiff, to whom loss was made payable as its interest might appear, but that such party neglected and refused to make proofs and therefore plaintiff made same, held not sufficient to show excuse for failure of "insured" to furnish them. Id.

Life insurance: Where person signing proofs of death claimed proceeds in such proofs as executor, they were not rendered defective by failure to add word "executor" after his signature, the oath being a personal one. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Ass'n v. March, 118 Ill. App. 261.

67. Accident insurance: Immediate notice of accident held a condition precedent to right of beneficiary to recover amount stipulated to be paid in case of resulting death. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Max [C. C. A.] 142 F. 653, rvg. 130 F. 985.

Fire insurance: Furnishing of a sworn statement such as was required by the policy and within the time therein specified held a condition precedent to suit thereon. Davis v. Pioneer Mut. Ins. Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 829.

Health insurance: Where policy provided for notice to company within 10 days from "termination of the disability," held that notice given during disability was in time. Reynolds v. Maryland Casualty Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 456.

68. If wife is left in charge of property and when loss occurs, her husband, from circumstances of his situation, cannot be reached so as to enable him to make proofs of loss, wife may do so by implied authority as his agent ex necessitate. Evans v. Crawford County Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 952.

69. Accident insurance. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. v. Fielding [Colo.] 83 P. 1013. Fact that policy provided for forfeiture for failure to furnish proofs of death within specified time, but not for failure to give immediate notice of loss, held to indicate that no forfeiture was intended in latter case. Id.

75. A mere innocent mistake will not. Requested instructions properly refused. Virginia Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Hogue [Va.] 54 S. E. 8. After loss only moral fraud, as distinguished from legal fraud, can render the policy void. Id. Insured's property was under control of husband and she furnished proofs without stating whether she knew the facts of her own knowledge, and at her examination under oath agent agreed that husband might answer such questions as she could not provided she accepted his statements as her own. Held that company had notice that her answers were based on information derived from others, and hence she did not forfeit right to recover because husband avoid the policy does not apply to false swearing on the part of an agent ex necessitate, unless the insured ratifies his acts with knowledge of the facts,[78] such ratification being necessary to render him responsible therefor.[77] A preponderance of the evidence is sufficient to sustain a charge of fraud or false swearing provided the proof is clear and strong enough to preponderate over the general presumption that men are honest and do not ordinarily commit fraud or act in bad faith.[78] It has been held that intentional false swearing will prevent a recovery regardless of whether the insured derived an advantage prejudicial to the defendant therefrom.[79] False swearing as to the damage to property covered by one policy does not affect the liability of the insurer on another separate policy covering different property.[80]

Examination under oath.[81]—Fire policies generally provide that after loss the insured shall submit to examination under oath as often as required.[82] A demand that the insured submit to such an examination must fix a time and place therefor, and designate an officer authorized by law to administer oaths before whom it shall take place.[83] A written demand supersedes all former oral ones.[84]

made false statements which she adopted in the belief that they were true. Id. Requested instructions properly refused as failing to draw distinction between mere untrue statement and a fraudulent one. Id. Instruction held not objectionable as assuming that proofs and deposition of plaintiff were merely made on information, there being evidence showing that fact. Id. Contradictory or untrue statements held not to warrant direction of verdict for defendant if made in good faith and without intent to defraud. Walker v. Western Underwriters' Ass'n, 142 Mich. 162, 12 Det. Leg. N. 659, 105 N. W. 597. Evidence held to sustain finding that insured gave his honest judgment and opinion as to value. Helm v. Anchor Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 605. Willful false swearing cannot be predicated on claim for retail price of goods for freight, drayage, washing, setting up, etc., where such claim is made in good faith on advice of counsel regularly employed to advise and assist in making proofs of loss. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Herpolsheimer [Neb.] 109 N. W. 160. Policy not avoided for including in proofs damage to piano, the title to which was in another, where insured acted in good faith believing he had title and withdrew all claim therefor at trial on being advised that he had not. Swift v. Teutonia Ins. Co., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 253. Evidence held to sustain finding that stock was worth substantially the amount stated in proofs of loss at time of its destruction. Nerger v. Equitable Fire Ass'n [S. D.] 107 N. W. 531.

76. By wife having implied authority to make proofs of loss by reason of her husband's absence. Evans v. Crawford County Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 952. Husband who acts reasonably and in good faith to enforce policy according to proofs furnished by wife as his agent ex necessitate does not thereby become party to deceit or participant in her fraud by ratification merely because he has knowledge of the claim of the insurer. Id. No ratification as matter of law in such case by taking up litigation already commenced by wife in absence of showing of bad faith. Id.

77. Since such agent has no apparent authority beyond that necessary to effect the object of his implied appointment. Evans v. Crawford County Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 952. Evidence held not to show ratification. Id.

78. May be shown by facts and circumstances which would lead a reasonable man to conclusion that fraud exists. Instructions approved. Virginia Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Hogue [Va.] 54 S. E. 8. Clear and satisfactory proof in cases involving fraud or false swearing may be defined to be a preponderance of evidence sufficient to overcome the presumption of innocence of moral turpitude or crime. Instructions approved. Id.

79. Meyer v. Home Ins. Co., 127 Wis. 293, 106 N. W. 1087. Word "fraud" held to have been used in connection with "false swearing" so as to cover frauds otherwise committed and did not require showing of prejudice as in case of action for deceit. Id. Instruction held erroneous and not cured by finding that amount of insurance exceeded the loss, since false swearing forfeited entire policy. Id.

80. Where company issued two policies, one on store building and other on meat and corn contained therein, each of which provided that policy should be void in case of any fraud or false swearing by the insured. Williams v. Virginia State Ins. Co. [Va.] 55 S. E. 680.

fit of the insurer, may be waived by it.[86] Waiver may be inferred from acts and conduct of the company inconsistent with an intention to insist on a strict performance.[87] Defects in or objections to notice or proofs are waived by a failure to disclose them to the insured within a reasonable time.[88] Written notice is waived by acting on knowledge otherwise acquired.[89] A failure to furnish proofs[90] and defects in proofs furnished[91] are waived by a distinct denial of liability on other grounds, but if the insurer has no notice, express or implied, or any claim of loss until suit is brought, it may answer both that there was in fact no loss and that the claimants never gave any notice of the alleged loss pursuant to the terms of the policy.[92] It has also been held that such a denial is not a waiver of proofs when made after the insurer has already been discharged for failure to furnish them in time.[93]

Proofs are waived by proceedings looking to an adjustment of the loss,[94] or by an agreement to pay a specified sum after examination,[95] or by an unqualified

Instruction approved. Spring Garden Ins. Co. v. Whayland [Md.] 64 A. 925. Waiver held to include waiver of right to rely on defense that insured had not furnished list of undamaged property, if such list formed a part of the required proofs. Id.

Life insurance: Where proofs are delivered in apt time and are received and retained until time fixed by policy for payment without objection. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Ass'n v. March, 118 Ill. App. 261. Objection as to form of proofs held waived where they were made on blanks supplied by company in July and no objection was made thereto until the filing of an answer in a suit on the policy against the company in the following November denying liability. Thaxton v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 419.

89. Fire insurance: Right to object that notice of loss was not in writing as required by statute held waived where defendant knew of loss within time prescribed, and within that time entered upon an adjustment of the loss and made a payment on account thereof. Gleason v. Canterbury Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 73 N. H. 583, 64 A. 187.

99. Accident insurance. Continental Casualty Co. v. Buchtel [Neb.] 105 N. W. 707.

Fire insurance: Denial of any liability. Security Mut. Ins. Co. v. Woodson & Co. [Ark.] 95 S. W. 481. By denial of liability and refusal to pay on ground that insured burned the property. Planters' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hamilton [Ark.] 90 S. W. 283; Phoenix Assur. Co. v. Boyett [Ark.] 90 S. W. 284. By denial of liability by alleging breach of iron-safe clause in answer. Parker & Co. v. Continental Ins. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 717. By denial on ground of unauthorized additional insurance. Kennedy v. Agricultural Ins. Co. [S. D.] 110 N. W. 116. Filing of proofs held unnecessary where company denied existence of any contract of insurance at insured's death and on that ground declined to furnish blank proofs on request. Lanier v. Eastern Ins. Co. [N. C.] 54 S. E. 786.

91. Fire insurance. Phoenix Assur. Co. v. Boyett [Ark.] 90 S. W. 284. Denial by adjuster after investigation. Ohio Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Vogel [Ind.] 76 N. E. 977. By basing refusal to pay on ground that fire was of incendiary origin. Spring Garden Ins. Co. v. Whayland [Md.] 64 A. 925.

92. Accident insurance. Western Travelers' Acc. Ass'n v. Tomson [Neb.] 105 N. W. 293, modifying syllabus, 103 N. W. 695.

93. Accident insurance: Where no notice was given until 139 days after accident and 67 days after insured's death, failure to give immediate notice of accident held not waived by letter of agent denying liability on other grounds, since company had already been discharged by default and hence situation of beneficiary was not thereby changed in any manner detrimental to her rights. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Nax [C. C. A.] 142 F. 653, rvg. 130 F. 985. By unconditional offer after inspection to pay specified sum in settlement, no question being raised as to liability, and subsequent attempt to procure appraisal. Western Underwriters' Ass'n v. Hankins, 221 Ill. 304, 77 N. E. 447, afg. 122 Ill. App. 600.

94. Fire insurance: Where company joins in arbitration and sets up an award as a defense. Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. Parker, 119 Ill. App. 126.

95. Fire insurance: By agreement between adjuster and insured as to amount of admission after the expiration of the time for furnishing them that the property is a total loss,[96] but not by an unaccepted offer of settlement[97] or by the mere retention of a notice of loss without notifying the insured that formal proofs required by the policy must be furnished in addition thereto.[98] Where, however, the company undertakes to inform the insured what it is necessary to do in order to have his loss adjusted, it owes him the duty to inform him correctly, and if it fails to do so it thereby waives the requirements of the policy in that regard.[99] Failure to furnish proofs in time is waived by a subsequent agreement to pay on their being furnished.[1] A failure to object to proofs until shortly before the expiration of the time limit entitles the insured to a further reasonable time to furnish them.[2] Where proofs are required to be made on blanks to be furnished by the company, they are waived by a failure to furnish blanks after an offer of any information required.[3] So too, a failure to furnish them until after the time limited for making proofs is a waiver of the limitation.[4] It has been held that where a fire policy is severable and the insurer waives proofs as to one item by admitting liability for a total loss, the insured is entitled to judgment for the amount so admitted to be due without prejudice to his right to prosecute his claim for the balance on furnishing proofs as to it.[5]

The acts of the insurer's agent within the general scope of his authority are binding on it,[6] and knowledge acquired by him while engaged in its business will be imputed to it.[7]

§ 20. Adjustment and arbitration.[8]—Permitting the recovery of the amount loss and subsequent ratification thereof by general agent. Green v. Star Fire Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 586, 77 N. E. 649. Where special agent sent by company for that purpose examined property, made estimates of damage, and agreed upon amount of loss with mortgagee whose debt was secured by mortgage on insured property and by the policy. Fort Scott Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Palatine Ins. Co. [Kan.] 86 P. 142.

96. Fire insurance. Melancon v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 116 La. 324, 40 So. 718.

97. Fire insurance. Glazer v. Home Ins. Co., 96 N. Y. S. 1099; Id. 48 Misc. 515, 96 N. Y. S. 136. Fact that, after receipt of required notice of loss and before expiration of time within which sworn proofs were required to be furnished, adjuster offered to settle for specified sum, which offer was immediately refused, held not to show waiver, there being no further negotiations. Glazer v. Home Ins. Co., 113 App. Div. 235, 98 N. Y. S. 979.

98. Fire insurance. Glazer v. Home Ins. Co., 96 N. Y. S. 1099; Id., 48 Misc. 515, 96 N. Y. S. 136.

99. Fire insurance: Proofs held waived where insured was misled by act of company's officer into belief that he had done all that company required of him, and proof showed that officer knew that he had been misled and company failed to inform him, on inquiry, in what respect he had failed to comply with policy. Sidebotham v. Merchants Fire Ass'n, 41 Wash. 436, 83 P. 1028. Letter referring insured to policy for information in regard to what it was necessary for him to do held insufficient to inform him in what respect company claimed he had failed to comply with contract. Id.

1. Fire insurance. Melancon v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 116 La. 324, 40 So. 718.

2. Fire insurance: Where insured furnished proof 12 days after loss and insurer made no objection thereto until a day or two before the expiration of the 60 days allowed for furnishing the proof, held that insured was entitled to further reasonable time after notice of the alleged defects in proof to complete same. Planters' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hamilton [Ark.] 90 S. W. 283.

3, 4. Accident insurance: Continental Casualty Co. v. Buchtel [Neb.] 105 N. W. 707.

5. Policy covering both immovables and movables and made up of distinct items held severable. Melancon v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 116 La. 324, 40 So. 718.

6. Adjuster has authority to waive preliminary proofs. Ohio Farmers' Ins. Co. v. Vogel [Ind.] 76 N. E. 977. Agent held a general one having authority to receive proofs of loss, adjust losses, etc., so that his acts amounting to waiver of proofs were binding on company. Green v. Star Fire Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 586, 77 N. E. 649. Letter of agent held not an attempt to speak for company except as to rejection of claim, grounds of rejection being stated merely as agent's personal surmise. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Nax [C. C. A.] 142 F. 653, rvg. 130 F. 985.

7. Where after being notified of fire company sent general agent to insured, who, after insured had at his request furnished him a detailed statement of loss and damage, informed him that there were no other papers for him to make out but that he would himself attend to the rest, held that condition requiring proofs of loss was waived and company was estopped to contend that waiver was not binding on it because not in writing as required by policy. Bernhard v. Rochester German Ins. Co. [Conn.] 65 A. 134.

agreed upon on an adjustment of the loss pursuant to the terms of the policy is not permitting recovery on an accord.[9] An adjustment made by the insured and the company's agent is evidence of the value of the goods destroyed and prima facie proof of the amount due.[10] One employed by the insured for the sole purpose of estimating and appraising the loss cannot recover for services rendered in adjusting it.[11]

Fire policies generally provide that, in case of a disagreement as to the amount of loss and damage,[12] it shall be determined by an appraisal or arbitration[13] by disinterested appraisers.[14] Whether the umpire or third appraiser can act where there has been no disagreement between the appraisers appointed by the insured and the insurer depends upon the terms of the policy or the submission.[15] A provision making an award by appraisers, when appraisal has been required, a condition precedent to an action on the policy is valid and precludes recovery in the absence of a showing of performance thereof or an excuse for nonperformance.[16] Whether an arbitration[17] or an award is a condition precedent is to be determined from a

8. See 6 C. L. 138.

9. Where policy provides for an adjustment, act of insurer's agent in adjusting loss is but a carrying out of the contract. Rudd v. American Guarantee Fund Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 237.

10. Proofs of loss held a part of the adjustment and admissible as evidence of the amount of the loss in an action on the policy by one to whom it was made payable unconditionally. German Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, Wilson & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 798, 92 S. W. 1068. Adjustment fixing amount of loss is prima facie evidence of the amount. Instruction approved. Id.

11. Evidence held to show that plaintiff was employed by defendant only to estimate and appraise fire loss. McCormack v. Herboth, 115 Mo. App. 193, 91 S. W. 164. Testimony as to reasonable value of services in adjusting loss held incompetent. Id. Testimony that plaintiff represented insured at adjustment of loss held incompetent as a mere conclusion, he having testified as to no facts warranting such conclusion. Id.

12. After amount of loss has been fixed by agreement there is nothing left for arbitration, and stipulation for reference to arbitrators has no further force. Green v. Star Fire Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 586, 77 N. E. 649. Where the valued policy law conclusively fixes the measure of recovery at the amount of the policy in the event of a total loss, there can, in such case, be no disagreement as to the amount of the loss, and hence the arbitration clause is inoperative under such circumstances. Stevens v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 684.

13. Provisions requiring submission of amount of loss and damage to arbitration are reasonable and valid. Stevens v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 684.

14. All of the referees provided for in the standard policy must be disinterested men both in sense of being without pecuniary interest and also in sense of being competent, impartial, fair, and open minded, and substantially indifferent in thought and feeling between the parties, and without bias or partisanship either way. Young v. Aetna Ins. Co. [Me.] 64 A. 584. Award will be set aside where it appears that even one of them was not thus disinterested. Id. Unexplained refusal by referee nominated by company to agree upon one living in vicinity of property as third referee is unreasonable and is evidence of want of requisite disinterestedness, and when coupled with explanation that it is because company objects thereto shows disqualifying partisanship. Id. Evidence held to warrant submission of question as to whether person selected by company was a fair and impartial appraiser, and to warrant finding that award should not stand. Seibert Bros. & Co. v. Germania Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 106 N. W. 507.

15. Award by umpire and one appraiser held void. Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. Parker, 119 Ill. App. 126. Agreement for appraisal held to authorize umpire to act in case of disagreement only, so that umpire and one appraiser could not make valid award as to any items which both appraisers had not considered before withdrawal of one of them and as to which there had been no disagreement between them. Seibert Bros. & Co. v. Germania Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 106 N. W. 507.

16. Grady v. Home F. & M. Ins. Co., 27 R. I. 435, 63 A. 173. Agreement is one relating to preliminary matter and hence is valid, particularly in view of provision therefor in standard policy. Id. Stipulation that company should be liable only for such amount as should be determined by agreement of parties or by appraisers to be selected in specified manner, and making such determination a condition precedent to action by insured on policy, held valid, it not being a restriction on right of insured to enforce his rights by the usual legal proceedings in the ordinary tribunals within the meaning of Rev. Codes 1899, § 3925. Leu v. Commercial Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [N. D.] 107 N. W. 59.

17. A mere agreement to arbitrate does not prevent a suit at law in the absence of a further agreement which either in express terms or by a proper construction makes the award a condition precedent to the right of action. Chadwick v. Phoenix Acc. & Sick Ben. Ass'n, 143 Mich. 481, 13 Det. Leg. N. 50, 106 N. W. 1122. Policy held to make arbitration a condition precedent to right of ac-construction of the policy.[18] There may be a verbal submission independently of the provisions of the policy.[19] An acceptance by the company of the insured's repudiation of an award under such a submission does not preclude it from insisting on an appraisement in accordance with the terms of the policy.[20]

It is the duty of both parties to act in good faith and make a fair effort to carry out the provisions for arbitration and accomplish their object.[21] Some courts hold that it is the duty of the company to take the initial step.[22] In case of the failure of an appraisal through the fault of either party[23] or of the appraiser selected by him,[24] the other is thereby excused from compliance with the conditions of the policy in that regard. As a general rule, on the failure of an attempted appraisal without the fault of the insured, he may immediately sue on the policy without a resubmission,[25] though some courts hold a resubmission necessary where an arbitration is made a condition precedent to suit.[20]

tion, so that insured could not recover where he refused to participate in appraisal when requested to do so. Stevens v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 684. Provision for an appraisement is a matter relating to a mere detail of proof as to the amount to be recovered and does not touch the fundamental right of recovery. Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia v. Appel, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 41.

18. As a general rule an award is held not to be a condition prerequisite to the maintenance of an action, notwithstanding a provision that the loss shall not be payable until a specified time after an award and that no action shall be maintained on the policy until after a compliance by the insured with all the requirements thereof. Bernhard v. Rochester German Ins. Co. [Conn.] 65 A. 134. Appraisal and award held not conditions precedent. Concordia Fire Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 121 Ill. App. 35. Contract held to make award condition precedent. Grady v. Home F. & M. Ins. Co., 27 R. I. 435, 63 A. 173.

19. Upon the issue as to whether there was a verbal submission between plaintiff and defendant and an award of arbitrators pursuant thereto, held that written award of appraisers to whom plaintiff and another company having a policy covering same loss had submitted their differences in writing, and to which defendant claimed to be a party under the alleged oral submission, was admissible, there being evidence tending to prove oral submission. Levy v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co., 58 W. Va. 546, 52 S. E. 449. After its admission plaintiff would be entitled to introduce any evidence tending to show that it was not an award as between him and the defendant, or to which defendant was a party. Id. Instruction that such award could not be considered in ascertaining amount of loss held misleading. Id.

20. Requested instruction improperly refused. Levy v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co., 58 W. Va. 546, 52 S. E. 449.

21. Where award is not condition precedent. Bernhard v. Rochester German Ins. Co. [Conn.] 65 A. 134.

22. Waives provision by failing to appoint an arbitrator and requests insured to do likewise. Nerger v. Equitable Fire Ass'n [S. D.] 107 N. W. 531.

23. Where arbitration failed because of unjustifiable and arbitrary refusal of referee chosen by company to act in selection of umpire, held that refusal of company to join in selection of new referees at insured's request was waiver of its right under policy to have loss determined by arbitration. O'Rourke v. German Ins. Co. [Minn.] 109 N. W. 401. Fact that building had been repaired in the meantime held not to have justified company in refusing. Id. Where appraisers are duly appointed and proceed with the work, the power of the contracting parties in that behalf becomes functus officio, and the arbitrary withdrawal thereafter of the appraiser representing the company and the refusal of the company to name a new appraiser renders the appraisement condition impossible and relieves the assured of its performance, and does not give to the company the right to demand a resubmission, and the loss thereafter becomes a fact to be proved like any other fact. Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia v. Appel, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 41.

24. Acts and conduct of an appraiser selected by the insurer which prevent an appraisal or an award will be treated as a waiver of provision requiring an appraisal. Western Underwriters' Ass'n v. Hankins, 221 Ill. 304, 77 N. E. 447, afg. 122 Ill. App. 600. Umpire selected by appraisers declined to act and appraiser selected by insured tried to get appraiser selected by company to select another umpire. Subsequently company's appraiser privately induced umpire to act but insured's appraiser then refused to consent to his selection and attempted to secure selection of another person but without success. Held that insured's appraiser was justified, under the circumstances, in refusing to act with umpire, and company would be deemed to have waived appraisal. Id.

25. Where award is not condition precedent some courts hold that if neither party is to blame for failure the insured need proceed no further but may sue at once (Bernhard v. Rochester German Ins. Co. [Conn.] 65 A. 134), and others that the right to sue arises only on his failure to secure an award after he has taken all reasonable and proper steps to accomplish that result, whether through an original submission or another or others (Id.). Difference is merely as to what shall be deemed a fair effort to secure an award. Id. Where no award was ever made owing to disagreements between the appraisers without fault on their part or that of either party to the submission, and insured continued until repudiation of liability

After an award has been made and published, neither party can revoke the submission without the consent of the other.[27] The award is invalid unless in conformity to the submission.[28]

The appraisers must exercise their best judgment in making an award.[29] Every reasonable intendment and presumption is in favor of an award,[30] and matters which in no way affect its merits will be disregarded.[31] At law the award is conclusive as to questions of fact except in the case of fraud, misconduct, or mistake apparent on the face of the award or the submission, or where the arbitrators have refused or neglected to take into consideration a matter submitted to them,[32] and their decision is final even in equity except in cases of accident or mistake, or corruption or misconduct.[33] A failure on the part of the insured to establish that an appraisal was fraudulent does not preclude him from recovering the amount of the award.[34]

by the company to suggest means to break the deadlock between the appraisers or bring about a compromise, held that he was entitled to sue on the policy without an award, notwithstanding provisions that loss was not payable until 60 days after award, and forbidding suit on policy until after compliance with all the requirements thereof. Id. Failure without fault on the part of the insured of an attempt to adjust loss by an appraisal does not prevent him from recovering on the policy the amount of loss sustained by him. Fact that award is invalid because not in conformity to the submission. Home Ins. Co. v. Schiff's Sons [Md.] 64 A. 63. Where award was void because made by one appraiser and umpire without notice to other appraiser and in absence of disagreement, held that insured was not bound to take steps to secure another appraisement but could sue at once to have award set aside and recover on policy, award not being a condition precedent. Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. Parker, 119 Ill. App. 126.

26. An ineffectual attempt to procure an arbitration which fails without the fault of either party is not a compliance with the condition, but the insured must comply with the company's request for a resubmission before he can recover on the policy. Award not in conformity to agreement. Grady v. Home Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 27 R. I. 435, 63 A. 173.

27. Levy v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co., 58 W. Va. 546, 52 S. E. 449.

28. Home Ins. Co. v. Schiff's Sons [Md.] 64 A. 63. Where new appraisal agreement entered into by the parties after the loss provided that appraisers appointed by them should select a third person who should "act as umpire on matters of difference only," held that such third person was not entitled to act as a third appraiser or to form one of a majority of three to render an award of the entire loss, but was an umpire in the strict sense of the term and could only act upon and decide matters on which appraisers failed to agree, and hence where it appeared that appraisers had agreed as to loss on all items except two, award covering all items signed by one appraiser and umpire only and not by other appraiser was void. Id. Fact that new agreement provided in general terms that appraisement was to be made in accordance with terms and conditions of policy held not to change rule though under policy provisions third person would have been merely a third appraiser, specific definition of his character and duties controlling general one. Id.

29. Instruction that it was their duty to give just and fair award held not misleading because law requires only that they exercise their best judgment. Seibert Bros. & Co. v. Germania Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 106 N. W. 507.

30. In the absence of a showing to the contrary it will be presumed that an umpire was rightly and properly appointed. Kaplan v. Niagara Fire Ins. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 65 A. 188.

31. Will not be set aside because umpire was present while appraisers were making their estimates of amount of loss and damage where insured was advised of manner in which work was being done, and award was made fairly and in good faith, the irregularity having in no way affected the merits of the award. Tyblewski v. Svea Fire & Life Assur. Co., 220 Ill. 436, 77 N. E. 196. Books of accounts were shown to one of the appraisers who stated that he would not stand for them They were not presented to umpire and appraisers while acting together. Umpire and appraisers visited place where fire occurred and had before them a schedule prepared by insured showing property claimed to have been destroyed or damaged and heard insured's statements. Held that award would not be set aside for failure to examine books. Id. In an action involving the validity of an award in which the umpire has taken no part, his qualifications for his office are immaterial. Kaplan v. Niagara Fire Ins. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 65 A. 188.

32. Cannot be impeached for erroneous judgment upon facts nor for the omission of items of account which are within the terms of the submission. Kaplan v. Niagara Fire Ins. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 65 A. 188. Cannot show omission of one of the items in controversy by parol where it is within terms of submission and no refusal to appraise it or other misconduct is shown. Id. Award held on its face to purport to include all goods specified in submission, whether destroyed or damaged. Id.

33. Kaplan v. Niagara Fire Ins. Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 65 A. 188. Award made by one appraiser and umpire without notice to

Provisions for appraisal may be waived.[35] Repudiation of all liability by the company excuses further effort on the part of the insured to comply therewith.[36] A ratification of the award by the insured precludes him from subsequently attacking it.[37]

§ 21. Option to pay loss or restore property.[38]

§ 22. Payment of loss or benefits and adjustment of interests in proceeds.[39]—A parol agreement by the beneficiary to hold the proceeds of a policy in trust for another must be established by clear and convincing evidence.[40] A policy payable to the insured, his executors, administrators, or assigns, is, after his death, assets of his estate if not legally transferred during his lifetime.[41] A valid release precludes a further recovery on the policy,[42] but a release obtained through the fraud of the company[43] or its agent[44] may be repudiated. The payment of a less sum is no consideration for the release of a liquidated demand.[45] An unexecuted accord is no bar to an action on the original undertaking.[46]

Widow held not only person interested in proceeds of life policy payable to estate so as to estop executor by her act in attempting to release claim, since, if she took under the will, the proceeds were subject to payment of debts, and if not her rights were not exclusive, since under Code, § 3313, such moneys are to be disposed of like other property left by deceased, and under § 1805 they inure to the separate benefit of his wife and children. Raven v. Prudential Ins. Co., 129 Iowa, 725, 106 N. W. 198.

42. Release held bar to further indemnity for sickness from which plaintiff was suffering regardless of fact that he and the agent whom he procured to sign it for him were illiterate, there being no fraud shown. Conroy v. Equitable Acc. Co., 27 R. I. 467, 63 A. 356.

43. Where company represented to beneficiary that policy was void or voidable because of false statements or warranties in application when in fact no such defense existed by reason of fact that copy of application was not attached to policy, held that she could repudiate release executed by her for nominal consideration and in reliance on such representations. Id. Instructions approved. Id. Instruction in action to recover balance that one of the things to be proved was that agent had not paid insured more than amount alleged held not misleading as tending to lead jury to believe that payment by checks and through agent was not payment. Id. Evidence held to sustain finding that agent fraudulently concealed nature of receipt from beneficiary and that she supposed payment to be one on account. McNicholas v. Prudential Life Ins. Co., 191 Mass. 304, 77 N. E. 756. Payment of less sum being no consideration for discharge of

The proceeds of life policies to a specified amount are frequently exempted from liability for insured's debts.[47]

The assured's interest in an unmatured life policy cannot be reached by attachment unless the policy has, at the time the attachment is issued, a cash surrender value.[48] A suit in equity may be maintained to compel the surrender of a life policy by the insured to the end that a lien acquired by a previous attachment may be enforced, provided such lien cannot be enforced until there has been an actual surrender.[49] A suit in equity in the nature of a creditors' bill to subject endowment policies, payable to insured in case he lives to a certain date, and to certain named beneficiaries in case he does not, and having a cash surrender value, to the payment of a judgment against the insured can only be maintained on a showing that the conditions exist under which a court of equity may, at the instance of a creditor, annul voluntary arrangements entered into between his debtor and third persons.[50] The interest of the insured in an endowment policy payable to him or his assigns on a specified date, or to a named beneficiary in the event of his prior death, is an interest the value of which can be ascertained by sale, appraisal, or by any means liquidated amount due on policy, held that plaintiff was not bound to return amount thereof before seeking to have settlement set aside on ground of fraud. Crowder v. Continental Casualty Co., 115 Mo. App. 535, 91 S. W. 1016.

46. Adjustment agreement whereby company agreed to pay amount claimed by insured in proofs of loss and insured to accept same in full satisfaction, no dispute having arisen, held without consideration and hence, until executed by payment of the money, it was revocable by either party and no bar to filing of subsequent proof of loss covering items alleged to have been omitted from original proofs, or to action on policy for full amount claimed, though company subsequently tendered amount agreed upon. Manley v. Vermont Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 78 Vt. 331, 62 A. 1020.

47. Mississippi: Ann. Code 1892, § 1965, providing that proceeds of life policies not exceeding $5,000, payable to executor or administrator of insured, shall inure to his heirs or legatees free from liability for his debts, and § 1896, providing that exemptions shall be allowed in favor of residents of state only, construed, and held that exemption depends on residence of insured, and, where he was a resident of the state, legatees were entitled to proceeds of policy though they were nonresidents. Borodofski v. Feld [Miss.] 40 So. 816. Policy for $1,000 prima facie belongs to heirs and they have prima facie right to sue thereon, and if there are other policies which together with one in suit aggregate more than $5,000, that is a matter of defense. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Hartfield [Miss.] 40 So. 21.

New York: Under Laws 1896, p. 220, c. 272, § 22, where policy on life of her husband is payable to married woman, she is entitled to proceeds as her separate property free from claims of his creditors or representatives, except that where the premium actually paid annually out of the husband's property exceeds $500, that portion of the insurance purchased by such excess is primarily liable for his debts. In re Thompson, 184 N. Y. 36, 76 N. E. 870, rvg. 102 App. Div. 617, 92 N. Y. S. 1147. Amount purchased by excess premiums is not assets of the estate but is a special fund created by statute for benefit of creditors and upon which a lien is imposed for amount of their claims. Id. Is liable only for deficiency arising after all the assets of the estate have been applied upon the debts, the surplus, if any, belonging to the widow. Id. The surrogate has no jurisdiction of proceeding by a creditor to compel wife as executrix to account therefor, but proper procedure is by a representative action to establish and enforce the lien after the assets of the estate have been exhausted and the amount necessary to pay the balance of the husband's debts has been ascertained by a decree of the surrogate. Id.

48. In action to compel surrender of policy to end that lien acquired by attachment might be enforced, allegation in complaint that policy had a cash surrender value held a mere conclusion of law. Marks v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 109 App. Div. 675, 96 N. Y. S. 551.

49. Marks v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 109 App. Div. 675, 96 N. Y. S. 551. Complaint held defective in failing to allege that surrender was necessary, or to allege facts from which that fact could be inferred. Id. Complaint held defective in failing to show that there was anything due or payable by the insurance company on the policy when the action was commenced. Id. Or that plaintiff had requested a surrender of the policy, or that defendants had refused to surrender it. Id.

50. Insured cannot be compelled to surrender policies to company and accept value thereof, though insured has right to change beneficiaries without their consent, in absence of showing that when policies were issued or assigned to beneficiaries insured was insolvent, or that indebtedness sought to be enforced was in existence, or that insured was indebted to other parties, or that policies were taken out or assigned with view to future indebtedness, or that transaction was otherwise fraudulent as to creditors. National Bank of Commerce v. Appel Clothing Co. [Colo.] 83 P. 965.

within the ordinary procedure of the court, and hence one which may be reached by equitable trustee process under the Massachusetts statute.[51] The liability of a domestic company upon a life policy held by a citizen and resident of another state is property within the state where the company is organized such as to give jurisdiction to its courts to enter a decree in the nature of a judgment in rem against it.[52]

§ 23. Subrogation and other secondary rights of the insurer.[53]—In the absence of an express covenant in a fire policy requiring the insured to assign to the company any claims he may have against anyone whose negligence or fault may have caused the loss, no subrogation can be demanded until the company has paid the loss,[54] and the insured may settle with and release the negligent party as to damage other than that insured against without affecting his remedy against the insurer.[55] If, however, the insured recovers from such party his whole loss, he cannot sue the insurer.[56] Where the insured is expressly required to assign all claims he may have against anyone whom the insurer may claim caused the loss, an agreement whereby he releases a third person from liability for any loss caused by him relieves the company from any liability for a loss so caused.[57] Mortgage clauses frequently provide that the company shall be subrogated to any rights of the mortgagee on payment to him of any sum.[58] The insurer's rights in such case are not affected by the subsequent acquisition of the legal title to the property by the mortgagee,[59] but a voluntary release by the mortgagee of any of his rights releases the company from liability to that extent.[60]

On paying the full amount of a life policy to one holding an assignment thereof as security only, the company, without any formal assignment of the claim, becomes subrogated to all the rights of such assignee as against any claim by a subsequent assignee of the policy, and is entitled to have the amount paid the first assignee under his assignment deducted from the claim of the second.[61] Such right

52. Liability of Massachusetts company upon policy held by citizen and resident of another state is property within the former state, and hence insured's interest may be reached by suit in equity in nature of an equitable trustee process brought under Rev. Laws c. 159, § 3, cl. 7. Biggert v. Straub [Mass.] 78 N. E. 770.

53. See 6 C. L. 142.

54. Farmers' Alliance Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Vallie [Colo.] 83 P. 962. In an action by the insurer against a railroad company for recovery of the amount paid on a policy covering a building destroyed by fire through the alleged negligence of the railroad company, an averment that the owner of the property had complied with all the conditions of the insurance contract is a proper averment, it being necessary for plaintiff to allege and prove that payment was not a voluntary one but was made under legal compulsion. Home Ins. Co. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 4 Ohio N. P. [N. S.] 373.

55. Settlement with railroad company held not to preclude recovery on policy where there was no evidence in record that plaintiff was reimbursed for whole loss sustained. Farmers' Alliance Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Vallie [Colo.] 83 P. 962.

56. Farmers' Alliance Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Vallie [Colo.] 83 P. 962.

57. Held that contract by member with railroad company relieving it from liability for any fire loss caused by it invalidated the policy in event of a loss so caused, since member thereby put itself in position where it could not comply with subrogation clause. Downs Farmers' Warehouse Ass'n v. Pioneer Mut. Ins. Ass'n, 41 Wash. 372, 83 P. 423.

58. Payment or tender to mortgagee held condition precedent to subrogation. Affidavit of defense insufficient. Ebensburg Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 341.

59. Fort Scott Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Palatine Ins. Co. [Kan.] 86 P. 142.

60. Mortgage clause provided that rights of mortgagee should not be affected by any acts of mortgagor invalidating the policy, and that when company should make payment to mortgagee and claim that no right to recover existed in favor of mortgagor it should be subrogated to all rights of mortgagee under all securities held as collateral to mortgage debt. Mortgagor procured additional insurance and increased risk, thereby avoiding policy as to him, and after loss assigned such additional insurance to mortgagee. Held that company was entitled to benefit and advantage of such insurance, and if mortgagee voluntarily released her right to it company was thereby released from liability to her of subrogation is at least equitable matter of defense to an action at law upon the policy by the second assignee, and under the statute it can, and hence should, be interposed in such action, and therefore is not ground for subsequent relief in equity against the judgment therein.[62]

§ 24. Remedies and procedure. A. Rights of action and defenses and parties.[63]—In the absence of a statute to the contrary a domestic company may be sued in any county in which it has a resident agent and transacts its corporate business.[64]

Equity will not entertain jurisdiction of an action on a policy where complainant has an adequate remedy at law.[65] It may entertain a bill to enjoin the prosecution of an action at law previously commenced on a policy and to cancel the policy though the grounds alleged could be urged as a defense to such action.[66] Where it takes jurisdiction for one purpose, it will retain it for the purpose of closing up all controversy between the parties incident to the subject-matter and meting out complete justice.[67] The fact that fraud is alleged as a defense in an action on a policy does not make an issue cognizable only in equity,[68] nor does a statute authorizing the insurer to institute proceedings to vacate a policy for false representations contained in the application deprive the plaintiff in an action on a policy of the right to a jury trial, though the company sets up such false representations as a defense.[69]

Where the company refuses to issue a paid up policy in accordance with its contract, the insured may compel it to do so by a suit in equity for specific performance.[70] In case this is not done and no paid up policy is issued, the beneficiary may, on the death of the insured, maintain an action at law for the amount of the paid up insurance.[71]

62. Judgment is conclusive as to all defenses which could have been made but were not, and equity cannot thereaftef afford relief because of them. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Tremblay [Me.] 65 A. 22. If claim was before court but was not considered or was erroneously disallowed, or if justice was not done, remedy is by petition for review of that action. Id.

63. See 6 C. L. 142.

64. Domestic corporation chartered as a mutual protection association under 1 Code Laws 1902, § 1912, et seq., held a resident of county in which it maintained agent and transacted corporate business, and court of that county had jurisdiction of suit against it under Code Proc. § 146, though its principal office was elsewhere. McGrath v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 54 S. E. 218. Action on fire policy is within Code Proc. § 146, and must be brought in county where defendant resides, and hence defendant cannot be sued in county in which it has no agent. Nixon v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 54 S. E. 657. Question relates to jurisdiction of subject-matter, and hence right to change of venue is not waived by an appearance and answer to the merits. McGrath v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 54 S. E. 218; Nixon v. Piedmont Mut. Ins. Co. [S. C.] 54 S. E. 657.

65. Bill alleging that company refused to pay fire policy because of false representations in the application as to incumbrances, that false representations were made through mistake and because complainant did not understand English perfectly, etc., and praying that the loss sustained by destruction of the property be ascertained and that defendant be decreed to pay its share thereof, held demurrable for failure to state a case within jurisdiction of equity, complainant having an adequate remedy at law by action on the policy. Rupert v. Patron's Mut. Life Ins. Co. [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 568, 108 N. W. 968.

66. For fraud in application and because insured committed suicide, which avoided policy. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Blain, 144 Mich. 218, 13 Det. Leg. N. 145, 107 N. W. 877. Evidence as to suicide held to justify decree for complainant. Id.

67. Where takes jurisdiction for purpose of setting aside award of appraisers. Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. Parker, 119 Ill. App. 126.

68. Fludd v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. [S. C.] 55 S. E. 762. All the rights which company could maintain in action for cancellation for false representations are available as a defense alleging forfeiture in an action on the policy, and hence it is proper to refuse to refer issues so raised to master. Id.

69. Civ. Code 1902, § 1826, authorizing life insurance companies to institute proceedings to vacate policies within two years from the date of the policy, the action being a strictly legal one. Fludd v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. [S. C.] 55 S. E. 762.

70. Where insured entitled to it under

The holder of two policies in the same company covering the same property on each of which he has a cause of action may bring a separate action on each.[72]

Insured may recover on an account stated without proof of antecedent matters on proof of an agreement to pay a fixed sum as the company's share of the loss.[73] Where nothing remains to be done but to pay over the amount of loss agreed upon, recovery may be had under the common counts.[74] In the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary, assumpsit cannot be maintained upon a policy under seal.[75] The company may in a proper case interplead several claimants.[76]

The insurer may contest plaintiff's title to the policy by showing a valid outstanding assignment.[77] The pendency of an action for one class of benefits is no defense to an action for another class whether plaintiff is only entitled to recover the latter or is entitled to one or the other at her election.[78] The insurer cannot plead ultra vires as a defense where the contract has been fully performed by the other party.[79]

Parties.[80]—All persons whose rights will be affected by the decree must be made defendants.[81] The policy holders or their representative must be joined in an action to compel distribution of the surplus,[82] but the officers and directors of the company are not necessary parties where the plaintiff accepts the surplus as appearing on the company's statement as the sum in which he claims to be entitled to participate.[83] Where the policy stipulates on its face the person to whom the loss

72. Where he does so in state court and amounts sued for in each is less than $2,000, actions are not removable to federal court, though aggregate amount exceeds that sum. Holmes & Co. v. U. S. Fire Ins. Co., 142 F. 863.

73. Fire insurance. Manchester Fire Assur. Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 120 Ill. App. 535.

74. Evidence held to show agreement by company to pay insured fixed sum as its pro rata share of amount of loss as fixed by adjusters. Fire insurance. Manchester Fire Assur. Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 120 Ill. App. 535.

75. Unless there is a subsequent agreement founded upon a new consideration to pay the debt or perform the contract, or its terms are varied by a subsequent simple contract, or by other proceedings constituting an abandonment or waiver of the provisions of the sealed instrument. Health and accident. Conroy v. Equitable Acc. Co., 27 R. I. 467, 63 A. 356. Where objection is not apparent on face of pleadings it can only be raised by motion for nonsuit. Id. Is not waived by submitting case to jury but may be taken advantage of at any stage of the trial. Id.

78. Pendency of suit for funeral expenses held no defense to action for sick benefits. Health insurance. Courtney v. Fidelity Mut. Aid Ass'n [Mo. App.] 94 S. W. 768.

79. Where mutual company made policy issued to member payable to mortgagee, held that it could not plead ultra vires in an action thereon by the latter, though charter gave it no such power. Adams v. Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 115 Mo. App. 21, 90 S. W. 747.

80. See 6 C. L. 143.

81. Rights of conflicting claimants to life policy assigned as collateral to secure performance of contract cannot be finally adjudicated as between themselves and the insurance company and company restrained from recognizing claims of some of them until court has acquired complete jurisdiction over all the parties to the controversy so that the rights of all of them may be finally determined. Winegardner v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 118 Ill. App. 251. Not where one of them is a nonresident and has possession of policy in foreign state so that process cannot be served on him except by publication. Id. Employe of railway company obtained judgment against it in action for injuries. Action was defended in its name by a casualty company which had issued to it an employer's liability policy covering its liability in that case. Subsequently railway company became insolvent. Held that the railway company's receiver was an indispensable party to a suit in equity by the employe to compel the casualty company to pay to him the amount for which it was liable to the railway company under its policy, since otherwise casualty company would not be protected against legal liability of a judgment against it in favor of receiver, and hence suit could not be maintained until court had acquired jurisdiction of him. Moore v. Maryland Casualty Co., 73 N. H. 518, 63 A. 490.

is payable, such person may sue alone and recover the entire loss, neither the assured nor his legal representatives being necessary parties.[84] The assent of the mortgagee, to whom a policy is payable as his interest may appear, to the prosecution of an action thereon by the mortgagor is sufficient to entitle the latter to maintain it.[85] Persons to whom a right of action accrues jointly may unite in a single suit thereon.[86] A provision that a foreign corporation which has not procured a certificate authorizing it to do business in the state cannot recover on contracts made therein does not preclude it from enforcing a policy of fire insurance on its property in the state.[87]

Limitations.[88]—An action on the policy cannot, of course, be maintained before the time when the loss is by its terms made payable,[89] unless such provision is waived.[90]

There is a conflict of authority as to the validity of contract limitations. Some courts hold them to be contrary to public policy if for a less period than that fixed by the statute of limitations,[91] and others hold them valid if reasonable.[92] The matter is regulated by statute in some states.[93] Such a limitation does not apply to the suing out of a writ of error to review a judgment on the policy.[94] Contract limitations do not begin to run until a cause of action accrues.[95] Where the policy provides that the action must be brought within a specified time next after the fire, the limitation begins to run from the time the fire breaks out and not from the date of its extinguishment.[96] Neither the filing of the common counts,[97] nor the submission of the amount of loss to arbitration,[98] suspends the running of such limitations.

Issuance of draft payable to plaintiff and his tenant, both of whom claimed proceeds of policy, held not to have created a fund for the payment of the loss or a new liability on the company's part so as to relieve plaintiff from necessity of suing within time fixed by the policy, the draft not operating as an equitable assignment and plaintiff having refused to accept it. Id. Provision limiting the time within which a suit can be brought to six months after fire is valid in the absence of circumstances indicating that the effect of the limitation upon the insured is harsh and oppressive. Laws 1892 p. 1485, c. 677, § 26, relating to computation of time, construed. Ryer v. Prudential Ins. Co., 185 N. Y. 6, 77 N. E. 727, rvg. 110 App. Div. 897, 95 N. Y. S. 1158.

The company may waive contract limitations or estop itself from relying thereon,[99] but such waiver or estoppel cannot be carried beyond the effect which the party claiming its benefit reasonably gave, or should have given, to the acts creating it, and may operate merely to temporarily suspend the running of such limitation.[1]

North Carolina: Under Revisal 1905, § 4809, time for commencing action cannot be limited to less than one year after accrual of cause of action, or to less than six months from time a nonsuit is taken in an action brought upon the policy within the time originally prescribed. insurance duly admitted service of process in action against foreign company as authorized by Laws 1892, p. 1945, c. 690, § 30, held that company could not contend that service was irregular because not made personally upon the superintendent. Appelbaum v. Star Fire Ins. Co., 100 N. Y. S. 747.

North Carolina: Revisal 1905, § 4750, requires service of legal process on any foreign company, licensed to do business in state, to be made by leaving same with insurance commissioner, and provides that no other service shall be valid. Parker & Co. v. Continental Ins. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 717.

Washington: Service of writ of garnishment on soliciting agent of foreign company living in county where action was brought held to give court jurisdiction, the method provided by Bal. Ann. Codes & St. § 2818, for securing jurisdiction over foreign companies, not being exclusive in view of §§ 4875, 4854, 5297, as amended, and constitutional provision that foreign corporations shall not be allowed to do business on more favorable terms than domestic ones. Tatum v. Niagara Fire Ins. Co. [Wash.] 86 P. 660.

4. See 6 C. L. 145.

5. Complaint in action against company which had assumed and agreed to pay liability of another company on certificate or policy of insurance held a sufficient declaration in assumpsit as against demurrer. Cosmopolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Koegel, 104 Va. 619, 52 S. E. 166. Complaint in action on alleged oral contract showing that company was a mutual one and alleging that company agreed to insure plaintiff's property in consideration of her paying any amount assessed against her in proportion to amount of her insurance for benefit of any member sustaining a loss, and that she performed all the conditions of the contract to be performed by her, held to sufficiently show the premium she was to pay. Posey County Fire Ass'n v. Hogan [Ind. App.] 77 N. E. 670. Plea that company was not liable because of nonpayment of premium note held insufficient on demurrer where it set up that plaintiff was to pay same at such time and in such sums as the board of directors might require, and failed to show that board had ever made requisition on plaintiff for any payment. Farmers & Threshers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Koons, 120 Ill. App. 303. Allegations of complaint held equivalent to statement that required proofs of loss had been furnished more than 60 days before commencement of action, in absence of demurrer or specific objection. Nerger v. Equitable Fire Ass'n [S. D.] 107 N. W. 531. The statement in an action before a justice of the peace must advise the defendant of the nature of the plaintiff's demand and furnish a sufficient basis for the plea of former adjudication. Widman v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 115 Mo. App. 342, 91 S. W. 1003. Failure to state consideration for policy held not fatal after verdict. Id. Failure to allege that policy was in force at time of fire held not fatal after verdict, that fact being inferable from allegations that there was balance due under policy, and giving number and date of issuance of policy and the date of the fire. Id. Statement held to sufficiently allege that liability accrued two months before suit was brought, as required by Rev. St. 1899, § 8005. Id.

Must plead facts and not conclusions: Allegations as to knowledge that insured was endangering his life by use of intoxicants held mere conclusions. Lowensteln v. Franklin Life Ins. Co., 122 Ill. App. 632. Allegation "that plaintiff had no insurable interest in the life insured" held conclusion. American Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Mead [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 526. Denial that proof of death of insured was furnished to, or received by, insured within 30 days thereafter as required under terms of policy, held mere conclusion, the language of the policy not being set out. Continental Casualty Co. v. Waters [Ky.] 97 S. W. 1103. Allegation that policy insured plaintiff, to whom loss was payable as its interest might appear, as well as owner of property, held conclusion of law, that being a fact to be determined from the policy. American Cereal Co. v. Western Assur. Co., 148 F. 77. It is not sufficient to allege generally that a particular condition has been waived, but such facts must be alleged as will, if taken to be true, be sufficient to establish the waiver. Allegations held insufficient to show waiver of proofs of loss. Glazer v. Home Ins. Co., 96 N. Y. S. 1099; Id., 48 Misc. 515, 96 N. Y. S. 136; Glazer v. Home Ins. Co., 113 App. Div. 235, 98 N. Y. S. 979.

Must be definite and certain: Plea seeking to avoid liability because of nonpayment of premium notes held contradictory and uncertain. Farmers' & Threshers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Koons, 120 Ill. App. 303. Allegation that injury resulting in death of insured was caused by accidental falling of scalding water into his ear held to sufficiently show that death was caused by external violent and accidental means, rendering unnecessary a further specific allegation to that effect. Driskell v. U. S. Health & Acc. Ins. Co., 117 Mo. App. 362, 93 S. W. 880. Allegation that insured died "from the effects of said accidental injury" 11 days thereafter held in effect an averment that the injury was the direct and not a remote cause of death, and equivalent to an allegation that death resulted solely from the injury. Id. In action by assignee of life policy, allegations in answer as to prior assignment to defendant held sufficiently definite to authorize proof of such an assignment as collateral, in absence of motion to make more definite and certain. Howe v. Hagan, 110 App. Div. 392, 97 N. Y. S. 86.

6. Where plaintiff alleged as reason why policy was not forfeited for failure to pay premium when due that insurance in fact began at a later date than that named in policy, and hence that first premium paid for insurance until date subsequent to the fire, held that amendment setting up facts showing waiver was not a departure. Home Ins. Co. v. Ballew [Ky.] 96 S. W. 878. Where statement of claim, in action on policy covering building and necessity of verification.[9] A special form of declaration is prescribed by the statutes of some states.[10] The policy is sometimes required to be filed.[11] It is not necessary to make the original or a copy of the policy a part of the complaint in an action to recover premiums paid on a policy claimed to have been void ab initio.[12] An affirmative allegation to the effect that certain facts did not exist is equivalent to a denial that they did exist.[13]

A cause of action against the company for failure to distribute the surplus cannot be joined with one by the attorney general against individual officers and directors for losses due to their negligence.[14]

The complaint must allege facts showing a loss within the terms of the policy[15] and that the plaintiffs are entitled to the proceeds thereof,[16] but need not allege household furniture, claimed full amount of policy without specifying amount of loss on each item, amendment so as to make it formally declare that both building and personalty had been destroyed held not to have introduced new cause of action and to have been properly allowed. Chulek v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 435. Where defendant pleaded false warranty that insured had not within 15 years been under care of any physician, while proof was of warranty that last attendance by a physician was 15 years before, held that plea could be amended on appeal if necessary, plaintiff not having been misled. Hanrahan v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 72 N. J. Law, 504, 63 A. 280.

7. Where letter was filed with petition in order to show a denial of liability and a consequent waiver of proofs of loss, and petition alleged that company knew of and consented through its agent to a sale of the property and a transfer of the policy, held that statements in the letter that person consenting to such transfer was not company's agent could not be considered against the petition on demurrer. Gragg v. Home Ins. Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 988, 90 S. W. 1045.

8. Life policy, payable to insured's representatives or assigns, was issued to resident of Vermont, was by him assigned to another resident of that state, who, after insured's death, moved to New York and commenced action thereon in courts of that state. Held that defendant was entitled to file supplemental answer in that action setting up the fact that insured's administrator had, since its commencement, recovered judgment on same policy in courts of Vermont, and that court of latter state had held that assignment was no defense to action by administrator but that he was entitled to recover on policy and hold proceeds in trust for assignee. Gleason v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 113 App. Div. 186, 98 N. Y. S. 991.

9. In absence of verified plea denying execution of policy or a verification of general issue, execution and delivery of policy and fact that it went into effect at that time must be taken as admitted. Helbig v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 120 Ill. App. 58.

10. Code 1887, § 3251, held applicable to action on certificate or policy issued by so called fraternal benefit association against insurance company which had reinsured its risks. Cosmopolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Koegel, 104 Va. 619, 52 S. E. 166. Certificate held a policy of insurance within the meaning of this section. Id.

11. Must be filed in action brought before a justice of the peace, unless a sufficient excuse for failure to do so is shown. Fact that policy is in defendant's possession held sufficient excuse. Widman v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 115 Mo. App. 342, 91 S. W. 1003. Failure to file it does not so wholly deprive the justice of jurisdiction as to make void any judgment rendered by him. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 3853, is ground for motion to dismiss, but instrument may be filed before jury is sworn or the trial begun. Id.

12. It is not necessary to make the original or a copy of the contract a part of the complaint in an action to recover premiums paid on a policy on the theory that it was void ab initio, the contract not being the foundation of the action. American Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Mead [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 526.

13. Allegations of answer in action on accident policy held to fairly deny allegations of complaint that death of insured came within the terms of the policy, and to present an issue on which it was necessary for plaintiff to give evidence before she could recover. Cilley v. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 109 App. Div. 394, 96 N. Y. S. 282.

14. People v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 101 N. Y. S. 354.

15. Where policy covers building while occupied as a dwelling house and furniture while in a specified house, complaint must allege that building was so occupied at time of fire and that furniture was in such house. Arnold v. American Ins. Co., 148 Cal. 660, 84 P. 182. Failure to do so is not cured by verdict and judgment, but objection may be made at any time. Id. Failure to allege that house was occupied as a dwelling house at the time of the fire held not cured by allegation of answer that a large part of the furniture had been removed therefrom at that time. Id. Count held to sufficiently allege that property was located at time of fire as described in policy. Potomac Ins. Co. v. Atwood, 118 Ill. App. 349. Complaint held not to allege specifically or by fair intendment that insured property was destroyed or injured by fire. Krank v. Continental Ins. Co., 50 Misc. 144, 100 N. Y. S. 399. In action on accident policy insuring "against the effects of bodily injury caused solely by external, violent, and accidental means," held necessary for plaintiff to allege that death of insured was so caused. Cilley v. Preferred that the loss was not occasioned by excepted causes.[17] Fraud and mistake must be pleaded if relied on.[18] Where the statute requires the policy to be in writing the petition is not demurrable for failure to allege whether it was in writing or not.[19] Where a petition seeks to reform a policy and also to recover thereon, the allegations must be sufficient for both purposes.[20] A petition for reformation should set forth the policy itself and should also show the particular mistake, or the fraud and mistake complained of, and how it occurred.[21]

Plaintiff must plead the performance of all conditions precedent, or a waiver thereof by the insurer.[22] A general allegation of performance is sufficient in most states.[23] There is a conflict of authority as to whether waiver may be shown under an allegation of performance.[24] The failure to observe conditions subsequent being a matter of defense, plaintiff need not allege compliance therewith,[25] but noncompliance must be specially pleaded if relied on.[26] There is a conflict of authority as to the necessity of pleading an estoppel.[27]

The defenses that membership in the defendant company was not rightfully Acc. Ins. Co., 109 App. Div. 394, 96 N. Y. S 282.

16. Must allege that plaintiffs are the beneficial owners of the proceeds of the policy, or facts showing that they are. Complaint in action on fire policy payable to estate of a decedent averring only that plaintiffs are heirs and next of kin of such decedent and are the real beneficiaries held insufficient. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Prude [Ala.] 40 So. 322.

17. Where policy insured against all direct loss or damage by fire, allegation that premises were burned is sufficient. Scottish Nat. Ins. Co. v. Adams, 122 Ill. App. 471.

18. In the absence of an allegation of fraud or mistake on the part of the agent in filling out answers in the application, parol evidence thereof is inadmissible. Rinker v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 214 Pa. 608, 64 A. 82.

19, 20. Delaware Ins. Co. v. Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 330.

21. Petition held insufficient. Delaware Ins. Co. v. Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 330.

22. Performance of condition in iron-safe clause held a condition precedent. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co. v. Knerr, 72 Kan. 385, 83 P. 611. Where policy makes a determination of amount of loss by agreement or appraisement a condition precedent to a right of action thereon, must allege that the amount has been so determined, or show that provision has been waived or otherwise rendered inoperative. Leu v. Commercial Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [N. D.] 107 N. W. 59. Furnishing of proofs of loss by insured or their waiver must be alleged. American Cereal Co. v. Western Assur. Co., 148 F. 77.

23. General allegation as to compliance with provisions requiring notice and proofs of loss held sufficient on demurrer, in view of Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 341, 373. Home Ins. Co. v. Gagen [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 927. Though determination of amount of loss by agreement or appraisement is a condition precedent to action on policy, it is not such a one as may be alleged in general form provided in Rev. Codes 1899, § 5286, the award being a necessary element of the cause of action and not the action of plaintiff but of third persons. Leu v. Commercial Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [N. D.] 107 N. W. 59.

24. Held permissible. Rudd v. American Guarantee Fund Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 237; Carp v. Queen Ins. Co., 116 Mo. App. 528, 92 S. W. 1137. Permitting plaintiff to prove waiver without pleading it, though an exception to the general rule, held not to deprive company of its property without due process of law, or to deny it the equal protection of the laws. Suess v. Imperial Life Ins. Co., 193 Mo. 564, 91 S. W. 1041.

Held not permissible. Napier v. Bankers' Life Ins. Co., 51 Misc. 283, 100 N. Y. S. 1072; Glazer v. Home Ins. Co., 113 App. Div. 235, 98 N. Y. S. 979. Plaintiff having pleaded payment of premium and court having instructed that payment must be established before plaintiff could recover, held that verdict was not authorized by proof of waiver or postponement of time of payment. Shoemaker v. Commercial Union Assur. Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 316.

25. Fire policy construed and held that appraisal and award were not necessary conditions precedent to suit so that plaintiff was not required to allege compliance therewith, but noncompliance was a matter of defense to be averred and proven by defendant if relied on. Concordia Fire Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 121 Ill. App. 35. Violations of conditions as to ownership and as to other insurance are matters of defense to be pleaded by the company if relied on. Allegations as to them in complaint held surplusage. Scottish Nat. Ins. Co. v. Adams, 122 Ill. App. 471. Nonobservance of condition requiring occupancy held a matter of defense not available unless specially pleaded. Home Ins. Co. v. Gagen [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 927.

26. Fact that insured has other insurance which, with policy sued on, exceeds insurable value of property as fixed therein held a matter of defense to be pleaded. Western Assur. Co. v. Ferrell [Miss.] 40 So. 8.

27. All acts, representations and conduct relied on as an estoppel must be specially pleaded. Deming Inv. Co. v. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co. 16 Okl. 1, 83 P. 918. An estoppel in pais need not be pleaded. Estoppel to contend that proofs of loss were insufficient.

obtained,[28] and that the injuries causing insured's death left no visible marks on his body,[29] must be specially pleaded if relied on. Where an election to rescind and a return of premiums are necessary in order to avoid the policy for breach of conditions and false representations, they must be alleged.[30]

Allegations which are admitted by the pleadings of the opposite party need not be proven.[31] Allegations not denied are taken as admitted.[32] A general denial puts in issue all the allegations to which it is directed[33] and renders admissible all facts which directly tend to disprove any one or more of the averments of the complaint or to show that plaintiff never had a cause of action.[34] The necessity for a reply depends on the statutes of the various states.[35]

Variance.[36]—Immaterial variances will be disregarded.[37]

Practice.[38]—Only defects apparent on the face of the pleading can be raised by demurrer.[39] Defects may be cured by averments in the pleading of the opposite party.[40] Dilatory defenses are waived by pleading the general issue.[41] A party suing on one theory cannot recover on a different one.[42]

28. Maher v. Empire Life Ins. Co., 110 App. Div. 723, 96 N. Y. S. 496.

29. Instruction that there could be no recovery if insured came to his death from injuries leaving no visible mark on his body properly refused where absence was not specially pleaded. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Ayers, 119 Ill. App. 402.

30. Paragraph held insufficient. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Bockting [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 524.

31. Where answers in application were admitted by answer, instruction setting out questions held erroneous for omitting them Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Whayne's Adm'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 1049. Insurer held not entitled to object to quantum of proof of death where death was admitted in answer. Thaxton v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 419. Admission by defendant of allegations in statement that insured had performed all things on his part to be fulfilled precluded objection that policy was inadmissible until it had been proved that first premium had been paid during lifetime and good health of insured, which was condition precedent to its going into effect. Fidelity Title & Trust Co. v. Illinois Life Ins. Co., 213 Pa. 415, 63 A. 51.

32. Failure to instruct on question of waiver held not error where answer did not traverse facts alleged in petition as constituting waiver. German Ins. Co. v. Goodfriend [Ky.] 97 S. W. 1098.

33. Where performance of conditions precedent is pleaded, puts in issue the performance of all such conditions. Shawnee Fire Ins. Co. v. Knerr, 72 Kan. 385, 83 P. 611.

34. Defendant, in action by receiver of foreign mutual company to recover assessment levied according to terms of policy, may avail himself of defense that contract is unenforceable because company failed to procure permit to do business in state under a plea of the general issue and without special notice. Swing v. Cameron [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 419, 108 N. W. 506. Under Code § 3615, proof of custom or usage as to meaning of terms in policy is inadmissible under a general denial. Tubbs v. Mechanics' Ins Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 324.

35. Where breach of condition subsequent making policy void for keeping gasoline on the premises is alleged in the answer, plaintiff may show waiver without further pleading. Arnold v. American Ins. Co., 148 Cal. 660, 84 P. 182. Where answer set up false representations as a defense, held that no reply was necessary in order to permit proof that agent knew facts when policy was issued. 1 Revisal, §§ 485-503. Fishblate v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 140 N. C. 589, 53 S. E. 354.

36. See 6 C. L. 148.

37. Variance between allegations that injuries were received by being thrown against walls and floor of car and objects therein, and proof that they resulted from being thrown against the outside of the car while insured was attempting to board it while it was in motion, held immaterial. Continental Casualty Co. v. Hunt, 28 Ky. L. R. 1006, 90 S. W. 1056.

38. See 6 C. L. 148.

39. Plea that contract is ultra vires on the part of association cannot be urged on demurrer to a petition for recovery of assessment, as the contract is not on its face beyond the scope of the power of the corporation by which it was made, but a proper showing to support the application of such doctrine must be made by the defendant by way of answer. Stone v. C. D. & T. Traction Co., 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 104.

40. Defects in petition in failing to allege that injuries were received through external and violent and purely accidental cause, which solely and independently of all other causes necessarily resulted in his death, and in failing to allege that there were external visible contusions on insured's body, held cured by answer denying such facts. Continental Casualty Co. v. Hunt, 28 Ky. L. R. 1006, 90 S. W. 1056. In action for recovery for death under accident policy containing the provision that the company insures against death resulting from injuries alone, the judgment against the company will not be reversed for failure to allege in the petition that death was caused solely by the accident, where the answer affirmatively alleged another cause, thereby presenting that issue. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Leibus, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 201.

(§ 24) C. Evidence, questions of law and fact, instructions. Presumptions and burden of proof.[43]—The presumption is against suicide and the burden is on the party seeking to establish it.[44] Plaintiff ordinarily has the burden of showing a loss within the terms of the policy[45] and a waiver of the right to forfeit the policy for nonpayment of premiums.[46] The burden of showing a complete cancellation before loss[47] that an assignment absolute in form was made as security only,[48] or that an assignment valid on its face is in derogation of existing rights,[49] is on the party asserting it. The burden of proving fraud and false warranties,[50] breaches of conditions,[51] misrepresentations,[52] that false representations were material,[53] nonpayment of premiums,[54] the happening of conditions authorizing an increase of assessments,[55] and that the loss was due to excepted causes,[56] is generally

41. Even if provisions for arbitration and award were to be regarded as conditions precedent, held that failure of plaintiff to allege performance could only be taken advantage of by demurrer or special plea. Concordia Fire Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 121 Ill. App. 35.

42. Evidence showing conclusively that policy had lapsed for nonpayment of premiums, held that plaintiff was not entitled to recover as an alternative the paid up value of the policy where she never consented to accept same but insisted that she was entitled to full amount of policy, and statement of claim demanded full amount and case was tried on that theory. Battin v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 473.

43. See 6 C. L. 148.

44. Thaxton v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 419. Will not be presumed from death in unknown manner, but presumption is against suicide. Equitable Life Ins. Co. v. Hebert [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 1023.

45. In an action on an accident policy the burden is on the plaintiff to show that the death of the insured was caused by external violence and by accidental means. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. v. Fielding [Colo.] 83 P. 1013. Prima facie case is made out within this rule by establishing death by unexplained violent external means, since law does not presume suicide, murder, or intentional injury. Id. The burden is on one seeking to recover on a life policy to establish that insured is dead and that he died before policy lapsed for nonpayment of premium. Spahr v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 4. Where building is insured as a dwelling house, burden is on insured to show that it was dwelling house. Harris v. North American Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 361, 77 N. E. 493.

46. Where plaintiff sued on policy alleging that it was in full force and binding at insured's death, defendant in its answer denied this and alleged forfeiture for nonpayment of premium note when due, and plaintiff replied admitting nonpayment, but alleging waiver. Held that burden was on plaintiff to prove waiver and that policy was in force at insured's death. Franklin Life Ins. Co. v. McAfee, 28 Ky. L. R. 676, 90 S. W. 216.

47. By agreement for immediate cancellation independently of contract provisions. Home Ins. Co. v. Chattachoochee Lumber Co [Ga.] 55 S. E. 11. Where company relies on cancellation it has burden of showing that cancellation was requested, or that company had given five days' notice of cancellation as required by policy. National Fire Ins. Co. v. Three States Lumber Co., 119 Ill. App. 67.

48. Reinhardt v. Marks' Adm'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 32.

49. Vested rights as beneficiary under previous policies for which those in suit were substituted. Baker v. Baker, 110 App. Div. 660, 97 N. Y. S. 455. Presumption that policies issued to named beneficiary created a vested interest in him, of which he could not be deprived without his consent, held not to prevail over presumption that company acted legally in issuing new policies in lieu thereof payable to different beneficiary, in absence of evidence to contrary. Baker v. Baker, 110 App. Div. 660, 97 N. Y. S. 455. Mere fact that after death of original beneficiary insured sent certificate to company requesting that plaintiff be substituted as beneficiary held insufficient to show vested interest in latter, where such certificate did not in itself effect a change of beneficiary but company had a right to determine on insured's death whether person therein named was properly designated, and where there was no evidence that original policies, which were lost, did not authorize insured to change beneficiaries at will. 56. Where by-laws exempted insurer from liability where debility was caused by bron-on the defendant. Some courts place the burden of proving compliance with promissory warranties on the plaintiff.[57] When a life policy shows on its face a degree of relationship not such as to give the beneficiary an insurable interest, the burden is on such beneficiary to show that he had some pecuniary interest entitling him to procure the insurance.[58]

Evidence.[59]—The usual rules of evidence apply,[60] including those as to the admission of expert[61] and opinion evidence,[62] secondary evidence,[63] hearsay,[64] and the declarations and admissions of agents[65] and of the parties in interest.[66]

chitis and evidence showed that insured suffered from senile bronchitis and catarrhal condition of the stomach and duodenum, held that burden was on insured to show that, as alleged in the answer, the debility was caused by bronchitis. 62. Owner of property may testify as to its value without further showing as to competency. Tubbs v. Mechanics' Ins. Co. [Iowa] 108 N. W. 324. In action by receiver against defendants as members of a copartnership to collect assessment, defendants held improperly allowed to state their opinions as to the existence of a copartnership. Swing v. Rose [Ohio] 79 N. E. 757.

63. Duplicate list of articles lost and damaged and testimony as to their value held admissible, where agent to whom original was given refused to return it because it was in company's possession. Spring Garden Ins. Co. v. Whayland [Md.] 64 A. 925. Where defendant failed to produce, after notice, the original policy which had been sent to it with proofs of death, or one which could be identified as the original, held that copy made by plaintiff's attorney was admissible. Carr v. Prudential Ins. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 158. Substantial copy of application made for former policy held inadmissible where there was no excuse offered for not producing original except that it was out of the jurisdiction of the court. Bruger v. Princeton & St. Marie Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 95.

64. Life Insurance. Evidence held inadmissible: Evidence as to association of companies which exchanged information as to applicants offered for purpose of showing that insurer knew the truth as to matters alleged to have been misrepresented. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Whayne's Adm'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 1049. Census returns of Ireland on issue as to insured's age, particularly where they were unreliable, irreconcilable, and at variance one with another. Maher v. Empire Life Ins. Co., 110 App. Div. 723, 96 N. Y. S. 496. Statement in proofs of death as to date of insured's birth as an admission against beneficiary's interest where statement on its face showed that it was a mere repetition of what insured had said. Id.

Fire Insurance: Inventory and appraisement made by agents of insured ex parte and not under oath held not admissible as proof of facts therein stated. Melancon v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 116 La. 324, 40 So. 718.

65. Fire Insurance. Evidence held inadmissible: Ex parte statements of agent not part of res gestae on issue of payment of premium. Helbig v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 120 Ill. App. 58.

Life Insurance. Evidence held inadmissible: On issue as to making of contract, statements of agent that he had written insurance for deceased. Torpey v. National Life Ins. Co. [Ky.] 92 S. W. 982. General statements of agent as to his authority, as as to what his duties and powers were, and that he could not modify or issue policies. Carr v. Prudential Ins. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 158.

66. Life Insurance: Defendant's admissions that assignment of policy was made as security only held admissible as evidence of that fact, though plaintiff, having made him his witness, could not use them to impeach him. Gould v. Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 99 N. Y. S. 833. Previous admissions of insured as to his diseased condition and intemperate habits held admissible on issue as to breach of warranties, they not being hearsay as against beneficiary since she stood in no better position than insured. Hews v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 850. Previous admissions of insured as to his diseased condition and intemperate habits held not too remote. Id. Writing in which medical witness had written down statements of insured made at time he examined him for another company long before policy in suit was issued held inadmissible on issue of fraud. Holden v. Prudential Life Ins. Co., 191 Mass. 153, 77 N. E. 309. Proof of statement of assignor that assignment had been made as security for particular debt held inadmissible against assignee, in ab-

The policy is ordinarily admissible in actions thereon,[67] in actions for the recovery of premiums,[68] and actions by agents to recover their commissions for obtaining the insurance.[69] Parol evidence is inadmissible to contradict or vary the terms of the policy,[70] but is admissible to explain ambiguities.[71] Proofs of death are admissible as admissions against interest and are prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated,[72] though the plaintiff may ordinarily contradict them.[73] They may be admitted for the sole purpose of determining whether they comply with the requirements of the policy in that regard,[74] in which case they are in evidence and sence of showing that it had been made in latter's presence or that he knew that it had been made. Reinhardt v. Marks' Adm'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 32.

Fire insurance: Letter written by insured to company, after controversy had arisen between appraisers in regard to umpire in which he insisted on appointment of disinterested appraisers, held admissible as tending to show that insured was not refusing to submit question of loss to appraisal as required by policy. Western Underwriters' Ass'n v. Hankins, 221 Ill. 304, 77 N. E. 447, afg. 122 Ill. App. 600. Telegram of company to agent directing him to receive no premium on policy "which you report cancelled" and entry of cancellation on records held inadmissible as being self-serving, ex parte statements. Helbig v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 120 Ill. App. 58. Declarations and admissions of insured after loss that part of the destroyed property belonged to persons other than those named in loss payable clause and that policy was to be taken out to protect their interest held inadmissible. German Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, Wilson & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 798, 92 S. W. 1068. Statements in suppressed deposition inadmissible in any event in absence of evidence that insured made them, that they were correctly written down, and that insured signed them. Id.

67. Where statement of claim alleged that copy of policy filed was a true one and that insured had performed all conditions, and affidavit admitted the issuing of the policy and alleged fraudulent misrepresentations, but failed to deny that policy was the contract of insurance and the entire contract, and supplemental affidavit merely alleged that affiant did not know that copy of application was not filed with copy of policy, held that policy was admissible though not accompanied by application and though its absence was not accounted for, notwithstanding printed notice on policy directing attention to copy of policy inside. Fidelity Title & Trust Co. v. Illinois Life Ins. Co., 213 Pa. 415, 63 A. 51.

68. Printed slip attached to employers' liability policy and providing for flat premium and not inconsistent with application held admissible as part of policy, the burden being upon the company to show why it was of no effect. London Guaranty & Acc. Co. v. Hartman, 122 Ill. App. 315. When it was challenged, held proper for insured to show by oral evidence how it came to be attached to policy. Id.

69. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Rilling, 121 Ill. App. 169.

70. As to admissibility of parol evidence to show estoppel see § 16, ante. Where policy of title insurance did not, either expressly or by implication, guaranty a legal title, parol evidence held inadmissible to show circumstances under which it was issued and that insurance of legal title was demanded, and that deeds of assignment of mortgage were drawn by defendant's directions. Banes v. New Jersey Title Guarantee & Trust Co. [C. C. A.] 142 F. 957.

71. Where the language used is equivocal or susceptible of varying or conflicting interpretations, parol evidence of the facts and circumstances surrounding its execution is admissible to show the intention and understanding of the parties. Admissible to explain and apply writing where it does not vary it. American Ins. Co. v. Meyers, 118 Ill. App. 484. Acts and statements of agent when he solicited insurance and examined property held admissible on question whether policy covering lumber in yards covered lumber in sheds in yards. Id. Where policy of reinsurance covered wheat in a "warehouse," held that there was a latent ambiguity and parol evidence was admissible to show that warehouse referred to was one designated as such on maps and in rate books on which policy was based, and that policy did not cover wheat in building therein designated as an "elevator" for property in which the rate was higher. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Aachen & M. Fire Ins. Co. [Cal. App.] 84 P. 253. To show what were "mill sheds" and "sheds adjoining mill building" and whether there were mill sheds under which cars could be placed. Wolverine Lumber Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 642, 108 N. W. 1088.

72. Proofs showing suicide where suicide is relied on as a defense. Felix v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. [Pa.] 64 A. 903. Certificates of death held admissible under Comp. Laws § 4617, to show cause of death, they not being privileged matter under § 10,181, relating to testimony of physicians. Krapp v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 143 Mich. 369, 12 Det. Leg. N. 1032, 106 N. W. 1107. Where policy provided that proofs of death should be evidence in behalf of company of facts therein stated, held that proofs showing that insured died of consumption were admissible on issue as to false statements in application as to insured's health, as being in nature of admissions, though not conclusive. Id.

73. Plaintiff held properly permitted to contradict statements made over her signature in "claimant's certificate," a part of the proofs of death, which was solicited by company's agent who wrote the answers therein. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Hummer [Colo.] 84 P. 61.

74. May postpone comparison of the statements therein contained with those in may be considered for that purpose only.[75] Official reports as to the cause of death are inadmissible unless required by statute.[76] Unaccepted offers of compromise are inadmissible.[77]

Cases dealing with the admissibility of particular evidence to show whether there was a binding contract,[78] an agent's authority,[79] the cause of the loss,[80] false representations and breaches of warranty,[81] suicide,[82] waiver and estoppel,[83] an assignment of the policy,[84] and the death of the insured,[85] will be found in the notes.

the application until they are offered for that purpose by the defendant. Baldi v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 213; Rondinella v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 223.

75. Defendant cannot, where he fails to offer them or any other evidence, base motion for nonsuit and for binding instructions, on ground that they, in connection with application, show breach of warranty. Baldi v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 213. Company is not thereby deprived of benefit of provision that proofs shall be evidence of facts therein stated in behalf of, but not against, it. Id.

76. Undertaker's report as to cause of death held incompetent. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Meyer, 118 Ill. App. 155. Offer of certified copy of entire record of county clerk as to cause of death, including reports of both physician and undertaker, held properly rejected. Id.

77. Admission of letter held error. Continental Ins. Co. v. Cummings [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 279, 95 S. W. 48.

78. Evidence that plaintiff did not regard policy as executed, binding contract, that he refused to accept it as such, that he had not paid premium and had promised to surrender policy, held admissible. Helbig v. Citizens Ins. Co., 120 Ill. App. 58.

79. Evidence as to manner of issuing previous similar policies tending to show approval by general agents of action of local agents in issuing policy declared on held admissible on issue of local agent's authority and to show abrogation of rule that only general agents had authority to issue such policies. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Stogner [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 260, 98 S. W. 218.

80. Accident insurance: Statement of insured as to cause of accident from which he died held not so remote as to render it inadmissible as part of res gestae. Starr v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 41 Wash. 199, 83 P. 113.

Life insurance: Nonexperts may testify that relatives of insured died of consumption. Krapp v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 143 Mich. 369, 12 Det. Leg. N. 1032, 106 N. W. 1107. Testimony of attending physician as to cause of death held admissible, though he was not present when death occurred. Chadwick v. Phoenix Acc. & Sick Ben. Ass'n, 143 Mich. 481, 13 Det. Leg. N. 50, 106 N. W. 1122.

Lightning insurance: Where certain calves were not killed immediately but died after storm during which lightning struck in pasture, held that testimony of plaintiff as to their actions and symptoms after storm was admissible on issue as to whether loss was occasioned by lightning. Freeman v. Farmers' Mut. Fire & Lightning Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 225.

81. Life insurance: Witness held properly allowed to state that insured had told him cause of brother's death, it appearing that he had stated in application that he did not know it, but not what insured told him was cause. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Ass'n v. Meyer, 118 Ill. App. 155. Evidence tending to show that insured had been rejected by one company because medical director regarded application with suspicion because not taken by regular agent held admissible as tending to show whether he believed that he had not been rejected in good faith because of sugar in his urine, and hence as bearing on question whether in his subsequent representations in regard to that matter he was actuated by a fraudulent or innocent motive. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Whayne's Adm'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 1049. Where court admitted evidence as to whether there are drugs which will temporarily remove or destroy trace of sugar in urine, should have admitted all offered on both sides. Id. Entries in memorandum book of insured as to amount of insurance carried held self-serving declarations. Id. Descriptions of physical appearance of insured held admissible to rebut testimony of defendant that he appeared to be in unsound health and that his general appearance showed indications of excessive use of intoxicants. Paquette v. Prudential Ins. Co. [Mass.] 79 N. E. 250. Report of examining physician held admissible on issue as to truth of warranties as to health. Perry v. Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 143 Mich. 290, 12 Det. Leg. N. 978, 106 N. W. 860. Where sole defense was breach of warranty that no proposal to insure insured's life had been declined, held error to exclude prior application to another company, subscribed with insured's name, for lack of identification of the subscriber with the insured, identity of names being presumptive of identity of persons, although it would not have established the defense in the absence of proof of failure to receive the policy or that the proposal had been declined. Spiegel v. Empire Life Ins. Co., 96 N. Y. S. 201.

Fire insurance: On an issue as to whether insured did or did not knowingly make false statements as to values he may himself testify as to his intent or motive. That he had no intention or purpose to mislead or deceive defendant. Helm v. Anchor Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 605. Where evidence showed that at time of issuing policy agent was informed that plaintiff did not intend to occupy house until arrangements had been made for supplying it with water, and that he knew that this could not be done until a date which was subsequent to the fire, held that evidence as to laying of water pipes in street by town and as to digging of trenches for pipes on plaintiff's land, etc., was not

A provision waiving statutory provisions prohibiting physicians from disclosing matters communicated to them by their patients is valid,[86] and the waiver extends to those claiming under the insured.[87]

An unqualified admission of a party against his interest does not preclude sending the issue involved to the jury where there is credible evidence fairly conflicting therewith.[88] The jury is not obliged to rely solely on the opinion of the witnesses as to the value of the property but may in connection therewith use and be guided by their own general knowledge and judgment.[89]

In an action on a fire policy the introduction of the policy and the proofs of loss makes out a prima facie case.[90]

Questions of law and fact.[91]—Whether insured is dead,[92] the truth or falsity of representations[93] and their materiality,[94] whether death was caused by external, violent, and accidental means,[95] the issue of proximate cause,[96] whether there has been irrelevant. Harris v. North American Ins. Co., 190 Mass. 361, 77 N. E. 493. Evidence that property on farm owned by insured's wife and worked by him had been burned and that he had stated that fires were of incendiary origin and that some of them were set by persons having a grudge against him, held admissible as tending to show falsity of warranty that insured had no reason to fear incendiarism. Donley v. Glens Falls Ins. Co., 184 N. Y. 107, 76 N. E. 914, rvg. 100 App. Div. 69, 91 N. Y. S. 302.

82. Evidence that insured, shortly before his death, spoke hopefully of his business prospects held admissible. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Whayne's Adm'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 1049.

83. Employers' liability insurance: Question whether insured understood that claim for damages previously prosecuted against him by employe was within the terms of the policy, held proper, insured's understanding being material on question as to whether company was estopped to deny liability by reason of its conduct in defending former action. Tozer v. Ocean Acc. & Guaranty Corp. [Minn.] 109 N. W. 410.

Life insurance: Question and answer as to what local assistant superintendent said to plaintiff about the company paying the policy held proper on issue as to waiver of contract limitation. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Hummer [Colo.] 84 P. 61. Testimony of plaintiff's counsel as to conversation with defendant's superintendent, who had not testified, which related facts from which waiver might be implied, held admissible. Id. Permitting plaintiff to show that she had been at expense in furnishing further proof demanded by defendant after it was in possession of proofs showing that insured died of consumption held proper, evidence being admissible on issue as to waiver of warranty as to health. Id. Evidence as to association of companies which exchanged information as to applicants, offered to show that insurer knew that applicant had been rejected by other companies held inadmissible in absence of showing that such companies belonged to the association. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Whayne's Adm'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 1049. Where agent testified that he had no regular time for sending in money collected for premiums, held that question as to whether company objected as to time when he made reports and sent remittances was proper, defendant refusing to state that it was making no defense because money was not sent in on time. Crowder v. Continental Casualty Co., 115 Mo. App. 535, 91 S. W. 1016. Also proper as tending to show that company was not giving strict enforcement to prompt collection of premiums as they became due. Id.

Fire insurance: General reputation as to ownership of property is admissible to prove knowledge of agent on issue of waiver of false representations in regard thereto (Continental Ins. Co. v. Cummings [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 279, 95 S. W. 48), but the impression, opinion, information, or understanding of any particular individual or limited number of individuals is not (Id.). Admission of latter class of evidence held prejudicial where evidence on the issue was sharply conflicting. Id.

84. Evidence of conversation between insured and plaintiffs shortly after loss in which insured recognized that loss was payable to plaintiffs and directed them to collect it and apply amount collected on his indebtedness to them held admissible. German Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, Wilson & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 798, 92 S. W. 1068.

85. On issue as to death of insured who had been absent for more than seven years, mortality tables held properly excluded, the precise expectancy of life of a man of 26 years, insured's age, not being material. Heagany v. National Union, 143 Mich. 186, 12 Det. Leg. N. 943, 106 N. W. 700.

86, 87. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Willis [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 560.

88. Admission of plaintiff that he informed company's representatives that insurance previously taken out had expired. Requested instruction properly refused. Bruger v. Princeton & St. Marie Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Wis.] 109 N. W. 95.

89. Instruction held proper. Helm v. Anchor Fire Ins. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 605.

a substantial compliance with the iron-safe clause,[97] what is a reasonable time,[98] whether there has been a total loss,[99] incendiarism,[1] waiver,[2] and who was to blame for the failure of an appraisal,[3] have been held to be questions for the jury under conflicting evidence. Where the evidence is undisputed that a state of facts existed which was not disclosed in the application, and that the application was substantially untrue, and it further appears from the undisputed evidence that according to the usual course of business the application would have been refused had the true facts been stated, the court should peremptorily instruct the jury to find for the defendant on the policy.[4]

5. Whether the answers in a written application are complete. Security Mut. Ins. Co. v. Berry [Ark.] 98 S. W. 693. Meaning of words "building" and "machinery." Tubbs v. Mechanics' Ins. Co. [Iowa] 103 N. W. 324.

6. See 6 C. L. 155.

7. Should be considered in connection with the case presented. Instruction that life policy was good during life of order for payment of premiums given by insured on his employer held not objectionable for failure to state that it might be forfeited through fault of insured, only question being whether it had been forfeited by changes in date of payment made by insurer's agent. Hagins v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [S. C.] 55 S. E. 323. Requested instructions on issue as to whether loss was caused by wind or lightning held properly refused in view of those previously given. Home Ins. Co. v. Gagen [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 927. Instruction held erroneous as omitting reference to defense of breach of iron-safe clause and permitting recovery on finding of facts not contested. Rudd v. American Guarantee Fund Mut. Fire Ins. Co. [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 237. Defendant in action on accident policy held not entitled to an instruction limiting the amount of recovery to $1,000 instead of $5,000, if jury found that death was due to unnecessary exposure to obvious risk of injury or danger where no defense of that character was interposed by the answer and there was no evidence in the record calling for it, in the absence of such a defense being pleaded. Starr v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 1119. Where several policies were applied for and issued in two sets, and evidence was such that jury might have found for insurer on one set and insured on the other, instruction grouping all the policies in one sum and compelling jury to find whole sum for insured, if it found for him at all, held erroneous. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Whayne's Adm'r [Ky.] 93 S. W. 1049. Where proof indicated that only a few articles of no appreciable value belonged to third person, held that court did not err in failing to instruct that there could be no recovery as to them. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Wintersmith [Ky.] 98 S. W. 987.

8. Instruction that insured could not recover in any event for insurance on property which he did not own held improper where insured had an insurable interest though he was not the absolute owner. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Enoch [Ark.] 96 S. W. 393.

9. Where court charged generally that the plaintiff must show that death resulted from the accident alone, and also charged that the burden was on the defendant to show the specific cause of death to have been other than the accident, apparent inconsistency held not of such a character as to require reversal. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Leibus, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 201.

10. Use of word "proximate" cause of death in the sense of "sole" cause, when taken in connection with other qualifying and restrictive words in the same connection, held to render the instruction confusing or erroneous to an extent requiring a reversal of the judgment. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Leibus, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 201.

confined to that asked for in the pleadings.[12] Where the insurer does not seek in its pleadings to recover unpaid instalments of premium, a judgment for plaintiff in an action on the policy does not bar a subsequent recovery thereof.[13] Though the probate court alone has authority to distribute the proceeds of a policy in the hands of an administrator to those entitled thereto, it cannot award the fund to one whose claim has been adversely passed upon by a court of general jurisdiction to which it has been properly submitted.[14]

Interest, costs, and penalties.[15]—Interest ordinarily runs from the date when the loss becomes payable.[16] An assessment company which merely collects assessments and disburses them in payment of matured claims is not liable for interest on assessments recovered by a policy holder on rescission of the contract for a breach.[17]

Statutes in some states provide for the allowance by the court or jury of a ten per cent penalty and a reasonable attorney's fee in actions on insurance contracts, where it appears from the evidence that the company has vexatiously refused to pay the loss sued for[18] or interposes a frivolous defense.[19] The contracts of mutual companies sometimes authorize the recovery of attorney's fees when it becomes necessary to collect assessments by suit.[20]

Wensel v. Property Mut. Ins. Ass'n, 129 Iowa, 295, 105 N. W. 522. Fact that policy provided that where appraisal was required award of appraisers must be furnished to company before loss became payable held not to prevent recovery of interest from date when loss would have been payable had there been no appraisal, where attempted appraisal was void because award was not in conformity to submission. Home Ins. Co. v. Schiff's Sons [Md.] 64 A. 63. Interest may be recovered on amount fixed upon settlement of account and ascertaining balance. R. S. c. 74, § 2. Manchester Fire Assur. Co. v. § 1. Right to interest and demands bearing interest.[25]—Generally speaking, one who uses or detains the money of another without his consent must pay interest thereon during the period of such use or detention.[26] So also, interest is allowed in many cases out of considerations of equity and natural justice, as where one is entitled to the payment of money which owing to unavoidable causes he cannot obtain.[27] Ordinarily it is not recoverable on a special liability created by a statute which is silent on the subject of interest.[28] Taxes being mere statutory impositions do not bear interest at common law;[29] but the rule is otherwise in the case of a taxpayer who by his own voluntary action obstructs the collection of the public revenue and retains money which he ought to pay over as taxes.[30] A municipal corporation is liable for interest on money wrongfully obtained and illegally withheld.[31] In Maryland the allowance of interest is discretionary with the court or jury except in cases of contracts in writing to pay money on a day certain or where the money claimed has been actually used.[32] A plaintiff in ejectment should be allowed interest only so far as it is necessary to complete indemnity.[33]

It may rest in contract express[34] or implied.[35]—Money which by agreement of Rogers v. Ogden Bldg. & Sav. Ass'n [Utah] 83 P. 754. Where plaintiff refused defendant's offer to pay all the creditors of a debtor 50% of their claims but later agreed to accept it, he was entitled to interest from the date of notification of acceptance. Williams Shoe Co. v. C. Gotzian & Co., 130 Iowa, 710, 107 N. W. 807. Contractor held entitled to interest on contract price due after substantial performance and acceptance of work. Bauer v. Hindley, 222 Ill. 319, 78 N. E. 626. Where value of wheat sold was due on demand, interest was recoverable from that time under B. & C. Comp. § 4595, allowing interest on money after it becomes due. Savage v. Salem Mills Co. [Or.] 85 P. 69. In an action for the price of logs, a verdict in accordance with the court's charge could not have included interest. Hence interest from commencement of action was properly added thereto. Hurst v. Webster Mfg. Co., 128 Wis. 342, 107 N. W. 666. In suit to declare absolute conveyances to operate as mortgages and for redemption, though defendant denied plaintiff's claim and was defeated, she was nevertheless entitled to interest on the amount found due her less costs from date of final judgment until payment thereof or foreclosure ordered in case of nonpayment. Wadleigh v. Phelps [Cal.] 87 P. 93.

Not recoverable: Owner at all times admitting liability in a specified sum to materialmen and holding sum subject to order of court held not liable for interest thereon. Fall v. Nichols [Tex. Civ. for interest on liquidated claims in cases of unreasonable and vexatious delay in payment.[42]

An account stated bears interest,[43] and so does one for goods sold on a definite term of credit after it becomes due.[44] In cases of annuities the allowance of interest on arrears is discretionary in the absence of agreement.[45] A creditor in an action to recover a stockholder's liability may recover interest on his claim from the time of filing suit.[46] Ordinarily, interest is the sole measure of damages for failure to pay money when due.[47]

Interest from the date of injury may be allowed in torts[48] where property is converted or wrongfully detained[49] or its value unlawfully diminished.[50]

Verdicts.[51]—By statute in Illinois, interest on a verdict from the time of its rendition to the time of entry of judgment is to be included in and made a part of the judgment.[52]

Interest ceases with the cessation or tender of the debt or obligation.[53]—A tender must be made to one having authority to receive payment.[54] An offer made dependent upon performance by the creditor of a binding condition precedent to, or concurrent with, performance by the debtor will stop the running of interest.[55]

Compound interest[56] is not allowable unless contracted for,[57] and partial pay-

Code 1904, p. 1812), allowing compound interest on loans made to individuals by order of court unless principal is paid when due. Roller v. Paul [Va.] 55 S. E. 558.

ments on interest bearing obligations should be so applied as not to compound the interest accrued.[58]

§ 2. Rate and computation.[59]—The statutes of many states contain regulations as to the rate and computation of interest[60] in addition to the ordinary usury laws.[61] The Massachusetts or United States rule of computing interest is commonly used.[62] When a town buys the property of a water company under the Massachusetts statute, interest is computed on the company's investment as increased or diminished by expenditures or income for each year.[63] A trustee voluntarily using the money of the beneficiary at a profit must account to him for the legal rate of interest.[64] In the case of insolvency of a trust company, the rate of interest on deposits or other demands, and the period for which it should be computed, will depend upon the character of the obligations outstanding.[65]

58. Where partial payments are made on interest bearing notes and renewal notes are subsequently taken, it is proper to calculate interest on the amount of the original notes up to the time of the first renewal or payment, apply the payment to the discharge of the interest first and then on the principal, and add unpaid interest to the amount of the renewal notes allowing interest on the whole amount of such notes. Bramblett v Deposit Bank of Carlisle, 28 Ky. L. R. 1228 92 S. W. 283. In calculating interest on notes on which usurious interest was paid in advance, it was proper to reduce the face of the notes by the amount of the usury and interest thereon and compute interest on the balance at the legal rate from the date of maturity of the notes, and this did not result in the payment of interest twice. Id. A warehouse company advanced money to certain shippers of tobacco to enable them to purchase the same and sold the tobacco for them, small sales being made nearly every week. Held the company could not charge interest on each loan until a sale was made, credit the shippers with the proceeds thereof, and treat the balance as a new principal, but interest should be allowed on the loans at 6 per cent. and the shippers should have the same rate of interest on the proceeds of the sales from their date. Farmers' & Shippers' Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Head, 29 Ky. L. R. 328, 93 S. W. 17.

60. A note being silent as to interest after maturity, an express statute will control as to the rate. Eight per cent. under Civ. Code Mont. § 2585, as amended by Laws 1899, p. 125, prescribing eight per cent. on all money due in absence of express contract. Bank v. Doherty, 42 Wash. 317, 84 P. 872. Under Kirby's Dig. § 5388, the interest due at the time of rendition of judgment on a contract becomes a part of the judgment, and the entire amount bears interest thereafter at the rate specified in the contract. Morris v. Carr, 77 Ark. 228, 91 S. W. 187. Mills' Ann. St. Colo. § 2252, allowing interest at the rate of eight per cent. from the time a sum of money becomes due, when there is no agreement as to the rate, is mandatory as to all demands within its provisions (City of Denver v. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 69), and the court cannot, as in equity cases, consider plaintiff's laches in bringing suit (Id.). Action at law to recover for labor and materials. Interest should be allowed from date of demand of payment. Id.

62. Subtracting from principal and interest at time of payment only when payment exceeds the interest. Rev. Civ. Code, § 1150, subd. 3, is consistent with this rule. Northwestern Mortg. Trust Co. v. Ellis [S. D.] 108 N. W. 22. Note dated December 10, 1890, contained indorsements of payments, the last one being on December 11, 1893, which payments exceeded the interest due at that time. Held error to direct verdict for principal and interest from December 10, 1893, there being no evidence that the payments were all payments of interest for the preceding three years. Dunlap v. Kelley, 115 Mo. App. 510, 92 S. W. 140.

63. Where a town bought the property under the provisions of St. 1887, p. 715, c. 157, § 6, the company's investment as increased or diminished by the excess of expenditures over the income, or vice versa, in any year, was the basis for computing interest for the next year, and so on up to the time of taking. Inhabitants of Tisbury v. Vineyard Haven Water Co. [Mass.] 79 N. E. 256.

64. Claimants not estopped as against a trustee to contend for more than the going rate of interest, by reason of their noninterference with the trustee's use of the money, where trustee made more than the going rate. Union Trust Co. v. Preston Nat. Bank, 144 Mich. 106, 13 Det. Leg. N. 144. 107 N. W. 1109.

65. Depositors who held special interest contracts held entitled to interest at rate therein specified from last payment of interest to date of appointment of receiver, and thereafter upon respective balances up to date of final payment of principal at legal rate. People v. Merchants' Trust Co., 101 N. Y. S. 255. Those holding no such contracts entitled to legal rate on respective balances from appointment of receiver to final payment of principal. Id. Holders of certificates of deposit held entitled to rates specified therein to date of appointment of receiver and thereafter at legal rate up to final payment. Id. A certain depositor held entitled to interest only on balances which would have been due to him had he accepted certain instalments of principal when they were paid to creditors by the receiver. Id.

The agreement of the parties will control as to the time from which interest is to be computed.[66] In the absence of contract the question is often dependent upon circumstances,[67] though the general rule is that interest is allowable as a legal incident of a debt from the day of default whenever the debtor knows the sum he is to pay and when he is to pay it.[68] Hence, unless the time of payment is definitely fixed,[69] or except in certain cases of insolvency,[70] it is often held that interest will not run until after demand of payment;[71] but under a statute allowing interest after demand, any intimation to the debtor that payment is desired is sufficient.[72] By custom in Pennsylvania, a book account for goods sold bears interest after six months from sale and delivery.[73] In the absence of proof of either contract or custom concerning the time of payment, the vendor is entitled to interest from the date of delivery.[74] Legacies do not bear interest until payable.[75] Interest on a terest on their credit balances from date of appointment of receiver to date of final payment at legal rate. Id. Rule given for determination of respective balances. Id.

66. Where construction contract expressly waived suits of all kinds until final estimate and railroad company fraudulently delayed giving contractor a certificate of completion, interest could not begin to run until suit could be brought. Fruin-Bambrick Const. Co. v. Ft. Smith & W. R. Co., 140 F. 465. Where a stipulation in a note as to interest does not fairly disclose that interest is to run from date, and can be applied to the period after maturity and without it the same rate would not be given by law, the note should be construed as drawing interest only from maturity. Promise to pay "$60 for value received, Int. at 8 per cent. per annum." Dunlap v. Kelley, 115 Mo. App. 610, 92 S. W. 140.

67. In an action to compel a purchaser of land to accept title and pay the price, defendant should be required to pay interest only from date of judgment, where he had reasonable ground to defend the suit. Fluker v. De Grange, 117 La. 331, 41 So. 591. Where for 54 years the state neglected to collect rents under a lease of water rights, an assignee of the lease was liable for interest on each payment of rent as it became due only from the time he began to use the water and not from the time of the first default. People v. Freeman, 110 App. Div. 605, 97 N. Y. S. 343. Where vendor of land repudiated the sale by refusing to deliver the deed after payment of price, the purchaser was entitled to interest from date of payment and not merely from the date on which he was entitled to a deed. Lewis v. Williams [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 86, 91 S. W. 247. In an action by an abutting owner for damages resulting from the operation of a railroad, an award of past or rental damages may be made up to the date of trial, and interest computed on that sum only from date of trial to date of judgment. Kerr v. New York El. R. Co., 49 Misc. 331, 96 N. Y. S. 1021.

68. A beneficial association is not chargeable with interest on claims for sick benefits prior to the date of demand upon it. Dary v. Providence Police Ass'n, 27 R. I. 377, 62 A. 513. Interest allowable only from date of decree for a sum certain in favor of estate of wife against estate of husband, where prior thereto the debt was uncertain and unliquidated and decree was entered in conformity with holding of appellate court that plaintiff was entitled to such sum without any provision as to interest. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Gittings [Md.] 62 A. 1033.

69. A claim being payable immediately after settlement, it draws interest from such time without any demand. Dunnett v. Gibson, 78 Vt. 439, 63 A. 141. Where goods are sold on a definite term of credit, interest runs from the time the account becomes due without any demand unless there is a dispute as to the amount or deductions to be adjusted. Harding, Whitman & Co. v. York Knitting Mills, 142 F. 228.

70. Appointment of temporary receivers for trust company and assumption of possession by state obviates necessity of formal demand by depositors for deposits. People v. Merchants' Trust Co., 101 N. Y. S. 255.

71. Where there is no agreement to pay interest, a demand must be shown before interest can be allowed. Broker failing to make demand entitled to interest from commencement of suit only. Warren Commission & Inv. Co. v. Hull Real Estate Co., 120 Mo. App. 432, 96 S. W. 1038.

72. A letter requesting plaintiff to send a man to O. K. the bills held a sufficient demand within Rev. St. 1899, § 3705, allowing interest on mature accounts after demand. Jonesboro, etc., R. Co. v. United Iron Works Co., 117 Mo. App. 152, 94 S. W. 726.

73. Kamber v. Becker, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 266.

74. McCarthy v. Nixon Grocery Co. [Ga.] 56 S. E. 72. Code 1863, § 2030, provided that "all accounts of merchants," etc., "which by custom become due at the end of the year, bear interest from that time upon the amount actually due whenever ascertained." Acts 1873, p. 22, added the words "all others" after the word "mechanics." This, however, still left the words "which by custom," etc., as qualifying the classes of accounts previously mentioned. Id. Sections 3550, 2885, Civ. Code 1895, are not in conflict. Id. Ruling in eighth headnote of Adkins v. Hutchins, 79 Ga. 261, 4 S. E. 887, superseded so far as conflicting with above rule. Id.

demand for work performed or materials furnished runs from the time the contract price becomes due,[76] regardless of a wrongful withholding of a certificate of completion.[77] In Louisiana, while an adjudicatee at public auction is not required to pay interest on the cash portion of the purchase price of land where there is a prima facie defect in the title tendered until the date of judgment affirming it,[78] he is nevertheless held liable for interest on the credit portion represented by notes from the date of the adjudication,[79] unless he relieves himself of such liability by depositing the price as provided by statute.[80] When a garnishee is indebted to the principal defendant upon a demand where interest would be recoverable only as damages for breach of contract, interest does not accrue during the pendency of the trustee process.[81]

§ 3. Remedies and procedure to recover interest.[82]—Where interest is allowed by statute it is not necessary to assert it in the bill of particulars,[83] and in many states, where it is the legal consequence of the debt, without express stipulation, it may be recovered though not demanded in the complaint.[84] The jury is competent to assess interest if any is allowable without the aid of an expert accountant.[85] Instructions on the subject of interest must conform to the pleadings.[86] If a verdict calls for a sum certain with interest at a specified rate from a given date, the court may properly compute the interest and render judgment including it.[87]

Niagara v. Talbot, 110 App. Div. 519, 96 N. Y. S. 976. A bequest for life of the interest on a sum to be set apart within six years entitles the legatee, until such sum is set apart, to such proportion of the income of the entire estate as such sum bears to the value of the estate. Id. In Connecticut the general rule is that pecuniary legacies for the payment of which no time is fixed bear interest after one year from the death of the testator, the legacies not being payable until that time. Will held not to require payment of interest by trustee until one year from death of testator. Redfield v. Marvin, 78 Conn. 704, 63 A. 120. See, also, Wills, 6 C. L. 1880.

St. 1895, art. 3102, relative to interest on open accounts, did not apply. Guffy Petroleum Co. v. Hamill [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 475, 94 S. W. 458. Under Civ. Code, § 3278, allowing every person entitled to damages, certain or capable of being made certain by calculation from a particular day, interest from that day, in an action for services rendered, interest held properly allowed from last day of employment both under a contract for a definite salary and on recovery of reasonable value of services. Mullenary v. Burton [Cal. App.] 84 P. 159.

77. Contractor held entitled to interest on balance due from time when certificate of completion should reasonably have been given him. Fruin-Bambrick Const. Co. v. Ft. Smith & W. R. Co., 140 F. 465. Where a contractor's certificate was wrongfully withheld, the contractor was entitled to interest on his claim after 30 days from the time of acceptance of the work according to the terms of the contract, and interest was not postponed until 30 days after filing the claim with the comptroller notwithstanding § 261 of the city charter providing that no action shall be commenced against the city until 30 days after presentation of the claim to the comptroller. Where property seized by the collector for violation of the revenue laws is returned to claimant and bond given therefor after attachment in forfeiture proceedings, a notice to the sureties of such proceedings is not necessary.[91]

The statutory remedy given for the wrongful seizure of property in the enforcement of the revenue laws is exclusive.[92] An action for the recovery of illegal taxes assessed and collected must be timely brought,[93] and all conditions precedent, as appeal to the commissioner for a refund thereof, must be complied with.[94] One cannot recover taxes paid which were in fact due though the manner of assessing and collecting the same was unauthorized.[95] An officer is not liable for an unlawful seizure made upon reasonable and probable cause[96] where the property is returned intact,[97] and the fact that the court rendering judgment for the claimant fails to make the statutory certificate of probable cause does not deprive him of such defense.[98] A collector acting within the limits of his duties is not liable for injury to one's business and reputation by a seizure of his property for violation of the revenue laws though condemnation proceedings fail.[99] While congress may make the violation of a regulation duly prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue a penal offense, it must be done by specific act and not left to inference.[1]

§ 2. The tax on liquors and tobacco.[2]—Concealment of the name and brand is not a violation of the Federal statute prohibiting the shipment of liquors under an erroneous name.[3] One who "sells or offers for sale" malt liquors is liable for the

91. The proviso to § 3459 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2281) is only applicable where the bond is given before the attachment. United States v. 59,650 Cigars [C. C. A.] 146 F. 130.

92. Action of replevin will not lie to recover property seised and sold by the collector. Allen v. Sheridan, 145 F. 963.

93. Since no action will lie without a decision of the commissioner on an appeal for a refund unless he fails to make a decision within six months, the two-year period of limitation under Rev. St. § 3227 does not commence to run until the expiration of such period. Schwarzchild & Sulzberger Co. v. Rucker, 143 F. 656.

94. Rev. St. § 3226 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2088), does not require an appeal to the commissioner to refund the tax paid where the commissioner passed upon the merits of the case on an application for the abatement of the assessment. Schwarzchild & Sulzberger Co. v. Rucker, 143 F. 656.

95. Attempted recovery of the collector. Schafer v. Craft, 144 F. 907.

96. Where the defendant collector acted under direction of the commissioner, based upon information received from special agents which justified a suspicion, the court is warranted in charging the jury as a matter of law that there was probable cause. Agnew v. Haymes [C. C. A.] 141 F. 631.

97. Rev. St. § 989 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 702), providing that "when recovery is had in any suit or proceeding against a collector * * * for an act done by him * * * and the court certifies that there was probable cause for the act * * * no execution shall issue against such collector, but the amount shall be collected from the government," is not inconsistent with and does not repeal § 970 relieving the officer, where he acts upon reasonable cause and the property is returned intact. Agnew v. Haymes [C. C. A.] 141 F. 631.

98. Failure to make certificate as prescribed by Rev. St. § 970 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 702). Agnew v. Haymes [C. C. A.] 141 F. 631.

1. Violation of the rule prohibiting the concealment of stamps, marks, and brands on casks and packages of distilled spirits held not a penal offense. United States v. Sandefuhr, 145 F. 49.

2. See 6 C. L. 161.

3. Section 3449, Rev. St. (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2277), applies solely to shipments of special tax imposed upon dealers therein,[4] and this liability extends to commission merchants, though not to commercial brokers.[5] An assessment of the tax upon distilled spirits may be based upon an estimate, and a voluntary correction of a manifest error in the estimate does not invalidate the assessment.[6] The loss of liquors while in the possession of the revenue officers does not relieve the sureties on the distiller's bond from their liability for unpaid taxes,[7] but the sureties on the warehouse bond being primarily liable where the loss occurs in the warehouse,[8] they cannot be held in the first instance.[9] The proceeds of a forfeiture sale belongs to the government and cannot be applied to the payment of taxes due on the spirits[10] at the instance of the sureties on the distiller's bond.[11] Distilled spirits may be forfeited for misconduct of the distiller though the tax has been paid thereon,[12] and such forfeiture includes the tax.[13] One need not be both a rectifier and wholesale dealer to come within the statute requiring a book entry to be kept of all outgoing spirits and data relating thereto,[14] and in a prosecution for failure to keep such book the indictment need not allege to whom the liquor was sold,[15] nor the amount thereof in wine gallons.[16] Since the statute requires the tax to be paid by the distiller, another party paying the same has no standing to recover the tax of the government.[17] In actions to recover unpaid taxes, the general rule prohibiting the pleading of mere conclusions of law is applicable,[18] and since the assessment of internal revenue taxes is a quasi judicial function, the introduction of the assessment list makes a prima facie case.[19] The courts will take judicial notice of instructions, rules, and regulations duly prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.[20] Since the Act of April 12, 1902, gave an absolute right of tax rebate in the cases prescribed therein, the provision empowering the commissioner to prescribe rules for carrying it into effect does not authorize a rule making it an absolute prerequisite to recovery that the proofs submitted by the claimant be "satisfactory" to the commissioner.[21] The interest recoverable on delinquent taxes is not

5. An express company took orders from persons desiring beer and forwarded the same to breweries, which were filled and shipped to the express agent, the price being charged to the company. Stored until called for. Sometimes unrequested orders were sent in and delivered to those subsequently applying therefor. Express company returned and were credited with unsold beer. 17. Must proceed against the distiller. Harkins v. Williard [C. C. A.] 146 F. 703.

18. An allegation in an answer to a suit on the distiller's bond to recover unpaid taxes that the assessment was "erroneous, unjust, and had no basis of fact to sustain the same" states a mere conclusion of law. United States v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 144 F. 866.

19. Western Exp. Co. v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 28.

a penalty and hence not barred by the five year statute of limitation relating thereto.[22] In prosecutions for the violation of internal revenue laws the general rules of criminal procedure are largely applicable.[23]

§ 3. Oleomargarine Act, August 2, 1886.[24]—An information for the forfeiture of an oleomargarine plant substantially in the words of the act is sufficient.[25] The general penalty prescribed for the nonpayment of revenue taxes is not applicable to the special taxes imposed by the Oleomargarine Act.[26] In an action to recover back taxes alleged to be excessive as based upon an erroneous finding that the oleomargarine sold by plaintiff contained coloring matter, plaintiff has the burden of disproving such fact.[27]

§ 4. War Revenue Acts, June 13, 1898, and March 2, 1901.[28]—A company engaged in the production and sale of natural gas and which incidentally pipes it from the point of production to the place of consumption is not engaged in transportation so as to render it taxable under the War Revenue Act;[29] and, moreover, the taxable excess contemplated by that act is that which grows out of the transportation business exclusively.[30]

The stamp act requiring certain documents, papers, etc., to be stamped does not render invalid oral contracts which if in writing would require stamps,[31] nor does the absence of stamps from a document render it inadmissible as evidence in the state courts.[32]

The legacy tax.—The Internal Revenue Department has prescribed special rules for the assessment of annuities and bequests of incomes.[33] Since the legacy tax did not attach until a year after the death of the testator, estates of decedents dying within the year prior to the repeal of the act are not taxable.[34] A contingent legacy[35] is not taxable until it becomes vested in actual possession and enjoyment;[36]

26. Rev. St. § 3176 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2068), is not applicable to the collection of the special taxes imposed by the Oleomargarine Act, Aug. 2, 1886, c. 840, 24 Stat. 209 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2228), being omitted from those enumerated in § 3. Schafer v. Craft, 144 F. 907.

31. An oral contract of insurance renewal held not invalid because of Act June 13, 1898, 30 Stat. 452, § 7 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2292). King v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 195 Mo. 290, 92 S. W. 892.

32. Contract of sale of real estate. Phillips v. Hazen [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1096.

33. Where a specific sum is to be paid semi-annually to a designated beneficiary from trust funds and the income thereof, the bequest is taxable as an annuity and not as a bequest of income under the "regulations and instructions" of the department. Peck v. Kinney [C. C. A.] 143 F. 76.

34. Only taxes due and payable being saved by the repealing statute. McCoach v. Philadelphia Trust, Safe Deposit & Ins. Co. [C. C. A.] 142 F. 120.

35. A provision that the named sum shall be held in trust until the legatee shall arrive at his majority, "when the said sum * * * shall be his and shall be paid to him accordingly," etc., held contingent.

however, if the legatee is to have the income in the meantime, such present beneficial interest is taxable[37] if its value can be ascertained with reasonable certainty.[38] Legacies are not taxable until they come into actual possession and enjoyment,[39] and hence reversionary interests are not subject thereto until the termination of the precedent estate;[40] and, further, any method of assessment which tends to diminish the precedent estate is unauthorized,[41] and the use of the mortality tables to determine its value is error where there are other contingencies than death which may terminate the precedent estate.[42] While the legality of the use of mortality tables to ascertain the present value of life estates is questioned, it is error where the duration of such estate has been made certain by the death of the tenant.[43] Where legatees were to receive only the income from their respective shares until they attained certain ages which were not reached until after the repeal of the legacy act, only the amount actually received in excess of $10,000 is taxable;[44] and, in computing such amount, allowance made by the probate court for support pending the settlement of the estate cannot be included.[45] The personal estate of a testate is not subject to a legacy tax as an entirety for life because a fixed annuity for life is to be paid from the income thereof.[46] The legacy tax, being an ad valorem tax, is not "imposed" within the saving clause of the repealing act until assessed, which can be done only when the distributive share of the legatee has been fully ascertained.[47] Illegal taxes can only be recovered back when involuntarily paid[48] under protest,[49] notwithstanding the act authorizing the commissioner of internal revenue to make allowance for internal revenue stamps in "any manner wrongfully collected."[50] Illegal taxes paid under a mutual mistake of fact may be recovered.[51] One recovering taxes illegally exacted is entitled to interest thereon.[52]

Shanley v. Herold, 141 F. 423; Herold v. Shanley [C. C. A.] 146 F. 20.

36. Contingent upon the legatee attaining his majority. Shanley v. Herold, 141 F. 423; Herold v. Shanley [C. C. A.] 146 F. 20.

37. Where the legatee is to receive the income until he reaches a certain age, the tax will be computed upon the amount he will receive before attaining that age if his life expectancy extends beyond such period. Shanley v. Herold, 141 F. 423.

38. Where the children were to receive one-fourth of the income of certain trust property until the widow died or remarried, when the property was to vest absolutely, there being no method of determining when, if ever, the widow was to remarry, the income is not taxable. Shanley v. Herold, 141 F. 423.

39. Though technically vested. Disston v. McClain [C. C. A.] 147 F. 114.

40. Where a testator left his estate in trust until the death or remarriage of his widow, when it was to go to his sons, such reversionary interest, not being "absolutely vested in possession and enjoyment," was not taxable. Shanley v. Herold, 141 F. 423; Herold v. Shanley [C. C. A.] 146 F. 20.

41. Herold v. Shanley [C. C. A.] 146 F. 20.

47. Hence where the act was repealed before the settlement of disputed claims against the estate, no tax can be collected. United States v. Marion Trust Co. [C. C. A.] 143 F. 301.

48. The fact that a vessel departing for a foreign port without clearance papers was liable under Rev. Stat. § 4197 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2840) and that such papers could not be obtained without presentation of stamped manifests of cargoes, does not render the purchase without protest of stamps for such purpose involuntary. United States v. New York & Cuba Mail S. S. Co., 200 U. S. 488, 50 Law. Ed. 569. Where executors paying a legacy tax on a life estate under protest were ignorant of the death of the life tenant, thus terminating the life estate, the payment was not voluntary so as to preclude a recovery. Kahn v. Herold, 147 F. 575.

49. A protest that the tax was illegal and invalid and had been illegally and improperly assessed, followed by a statement that it was paid only to avoid penalties, is sufficient, especially where there was a mutual mistake of fact. Kahn v. Herold, 147 F. 575.

50. Act May 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 177, c. 393, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2276). United States v. New York & Cuba Mail S. S. Co., 200 U. S. 488, 50 Law. Ed. 569.

Cannot be maintained by one who has an interest in the subject of the controversy or who denies title in one of the claimants, or lends aid to another in establishing his claim. Id. Defendant in action on promissory note who had procured appointment of administrator with a view to having him claim the note because of the invalidity of a transfer of all of decedent's property, including the note to plaintiff, held not neutral, being interested as heir. Id. Must be mere stakeholder without any right of his own to be litigated. Defendant not entitled to file interpleader because another broker also claimed commission for selling land. Hartsook v. Chrissman, 114 Mo. App. 558, 90 S. W. 116. Where complaint against G and L alleged conversion of oil by G and that L asserted claim to it, G having delivered the oil to L on demand therefor and execution of bond, G was not entitled to protection as stakeholder, not occupying an impartial position. Trammell v. Guffey Petroleum Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 492, 94 S. W. 134.

60. Where a corporation sold all its property to another, a trust company with which was deposited the consideration and which was required to distribute it among the stockholders of the selling corporation, held not guilty of bad faith in informing the stockholders, who had already received what was thought to be their full share, of the existence of a further fund to which a bank claimed title by reason of being the holder of certain unissued treasury stock. Little v St. Louis Union Trust Co., 197 Mo. 281, 94 S. W. 890. Will not lie where complainant is obliged to admit, or where it appears that as to either of the defendants he is a tort feasor. Not where complainant must admit conversion of checks. Rauch v. Ft. Dearborn Nat. Bank, 223 Ill. 507, 79 N. E. 273. Insurance companies did not in their answer in nature of bill of interpleader admit fraud by merely alleging that plaintiff claimed that they were guilty of fraud in transferring certain policies. Nixon v. Malone [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 715, 95 S. W. 577. 61. Where checks were wrongfully transferred to R, who indorsed them to complainant, who in turn received the money from the drawee banks who were thereafter sued thereon by the owners who claimed that the indorsements were forgeries, and the drawee banks called upon complainant for repayment, while R contended that the indorsements were valid, complainant could not compel the other parties to interplead. Rauch v. Ft. Dearborn Nat. Bank, 223 Ill. 507, 79 N. E. 273. Defendant in action for commissions for sale of land held not entitled to interpleader because another broker claimed a commission on the same sale, each claim being based upon a distinct contract alleged to have been made between claimant and defendant. Olsen v. Moran, 50 Misc. 655, 99 N. Y. S. 338.

62. To entitle one to maintain a bill of interpleader he must be a mere disinterested stakeholder or trustee, impartial in so far as his conduct may influence the judgment to be ultimately rendered, and he must act in good faith and have reasonable cause for a real doubt as to which of the claimants is entitled to the fund. Little v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 197 Mo. 281, 94 S. W. 890. Trust company required to distribute a fund among stockholders of a selling corporation held to have reasonable cause for doubt as to whether holder of unissued stock was entitled to portion of fund. Id. One is entitled to file a bill of interpleader when he holds a fund or has a duty which he is ready and willing to pay or discharge, and defendants are claiming the same fund or duty, he being a mere disinterested stakeholder willing to abide by the judgment of the court as between the claimants and unable to determine to which he owes the debt or duty. Nixon v. Malone [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 715, 95 S. W. 577. Insurance companies held entitled to file answer in nature of bill of interpleader where it was sought to subject proceeds of certain policies to payment of any judgment that might be recovered in a suit. Id.; Nixon v. Malone [Tex.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 278, 490, 98 S. W. 380. Not by contractor to call in one who furnished material to subcontractor where claim was clearly due the latter, who also claimed more than contractor admitted due. Mosier v. Kurchoff, 101 N. Y. S. 643. A drawee bank cannot demand that the drawer be made defendant and required to litigate with a bona fide holder the right to the amount called for by a check. Loan & Sav. Bank v. Farm-

his own he has created a double demand,[63] or incurred an independent liability to one of the claimants,[64] or instigated a contest for the fund in his possession,[65] nor where the effect would be to restrain a suit by one defendant against another in contract and compel him to sue complainant in tort.[66] It is immaterial whether the conflicting claims have all ripened into suits,[67] or whether the different claimants can adjust their differences in the one pending action.[68] Ordinarily the bill is maintainable only where the fund or property is claimed by hostile parties under adverse titles derived from a common source,[69] but an exception to this rule is presented in the case of a finder of personal property claimed by different persons.[70] The bill may be maintained though the claims are dependent only upon questions of law provided there is a sufficient doubt and hazzard.[71] The stakeholder's mere defending of suit by one of the claimants does not destroy indifferenee,[72] and if interpleader be brought before final judgment, it is sustainable,[73] at least where the law court was without jurisdiction of interpleader,[74] and providing the other claimant has been subjected to no added burden in asserting his claim.[75] In such a case, however, the law costs may be imposed on the stakeholder.[76]

Under a blended system of law and equity a defendant may set up as defensive pleading facts entitling him to this remedy.[77]

Statutory proceedings.[78]—The granting of an order of interpleader does not necessarily involve the exercise of equity jurisdiction.[79]

64. Where in action against estate of insured it was sought to subject the proceeds of certain insurance policies payable to insured himself and plaintiff contended that the beneficiaries had been changed with intent to defraud creditors, the insurance companies by indorsing on the policies a change in the name of the beneficiaries in good faith, as required by the policies, did not incur an independent liability to the new beneficiaries. 70. Bailee of finder held entitled to maintain bill in equity on ground of inadequacy of remedy at law, since he might be harassed by different lawsuits. Lavelle v. Belliu [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 200. Where finder of $500 bill announced to plaintiff, his bailee, his intention to convert it to his own use, plaintiff was bound to retain it until the ownership could be determined. Id.

71. Question of law sufficiently serious to entitle trust company to interpleader for determination of right of a bank to a certain fund as holder of certain unissued stock of a corporation whose property was sold to another corporation. Little v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., 197 Mo. 281, 94 S. W. 890.

of the fact that one claimant resides in another county.[81] The bill must set out the particular facts upon which the right to relief is based.[82] A subsequent pleading in an already pending action may be treated as an original bill of interpleader provided it contains the necessary averments.[83] The defendants may voluntarily join issue as between themselves before trial of the action of interpleader so as to render unnecessary an order of court directing issues to be made thereafter.[84] An answer in the nature of a bill of interpleader praying no relief except by judgment at the end of the trial need not be verified.[85]

Discharge.[86]

Further proceedings.[87]—After the discharge of complainant the case ordinarily proceeds to trial as between the claimants.[88] Issues of fact in cases of interpleader are properly cognizable in equity.[89]

Statutory interpleaders.[90]—A defendant who moves for interpleader must state facts in his affidavit sufficient to throw a real doubt upon the right of plaintiff to recover.[91]

Costs.[92]—Upon his discharge complainant is ordinarily entitled to costs out of the fund held by him;[93] but not so where he institutes an unnecessary suit.[94]

Matters relating to the Federal internal revenue laws,[1] and the sale of liquor to Indians,[2] are treated elsewhere.

§ 1. Control of liquor traffic; validity of statutes and ordinances.[3]—No one has a natural or inherent right to sell intoxicating liquors,[4] nor is their sale as a beverage a privilege guarantied to the citizens of the United States.[5] Hence, the state may, under its police power, regulate, restrict,[6] or prohibit,[7] the sale thereof, provided it does not thereby interfere with interstate commerce.[8] The Federal

4. Harrison v. People, 222 Ill. 150, 78 N. E. 52; State v. Seebold, 192 Mo. 720, 91 S. W. 491; City of Joplin v. Jacobs, 119 Mo. App. 134, 96 S. W. 219; State v. Corron, 73 N. H. 434, 62 A. 1044. Retailing intoxicating liquors is not a privilege which the citizen could exercise as a right, and a statute prohibiting or curtailing that occupation is not a violation of the 14th Amendment of the Fed. Const., but after a license is issued, all licensees similarly situated are entitled to equal privileges as licensees. Meehan v. Jersey City Com'rs [N. J. Law] 64 A. 689.
5. State v. Richardson [Or.] 85 P. 225.
6. Harrison v. People, 222 Ill. 150, 78 N. E. 52. It is a privilege only, to which the state may annex any condition it sees fit, or it may prohibit sales altogether. City of Joplin v. Jacobs, 119 Mo. App. 134, 96 S. W. 219. May forbid or merely license sale. State v. Corron, 73 N. H. 434, 62 A. 1044. Right of ownership in intoxicants is subject to such regulation or restriction as is necessary to protection of public. Cain v. Allen [Ind.] 79 N. E. 201. Extent to which regulations or restraints may be carried is within sound discretion of legislature, except as it may be restrained by some constitutional fundamental law. Id. May regulate or restrict traffic under police power. Commonwealth v. McCann, 29 Ky. L. R. 707, 94 S. W. 645. Right to regulate is within police power and is practically limitless. Meehan v. Jersey City Com'rs [N. J. Law] 64 A. 689. Restrictions may be imposed which might be obnoxious as an illegal restraint of trade if applied to other pursuits. State v. Calloway [Idaho] 84 P. 27. No person has a vested constitutional right to retail intoxicants. City of New Orleans v. Smythe, 116 La. 685, 41 So. 33. State law regulating or prohibiting the selling, or keeping for sale, of intoxicating liquors, is a legal exercise of police power and is not in contravention of 14th amendment to Fed. Const. State v. Frederickson [Me.] 63 A. 535. Licensee cannot object to any conditions which have been attached to the grant of the privilege. State v. Corron, 73 N. H. 434, 62 A. 1044.
7. Within any designated locality. State v. Piner [N. C.] 53 S. E. 305. Prohibitory law (Pub. St. 1901, c. 112), held in force generally in license towns, except in so far as it is rendered inapplicable by special license legislation. State v. Langdon [N. H.] 64 A. 1099. Statute prohibiting sale in a district where sale has theretofore been lawful is not unconstitutional as depriving dealer of his property without due process of law, in that he is deprived of the use of property theretofore used in the carrying on of such business as well as the business itself. Clark v. Tower [Md.] 65 A. 3.
8. See, also, Commerce, 7 C. L. 667. Interstate commerce is not subject to local option laws of state into which liquor is brought by a carrier. Adams Exp. Co. v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 904, 96 S. W. 593. Where liquor is ordered at a point without the state and shipped C. O. D. by express to the purchaser at a point within a local option district and purchaser there pays C. O. D. charges and express charges, local option laws do not apply. Id. Transaction held not to be interstate commerce. Adams Exp. Co. v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 224, 92 S. W. 932. Act prohibiting sale of wines within a certain county, without a license, excepting wines made within county, will not be construed as an attempt to regulate interstate commerce and hence void, but will be construed so as to allow the sales of wines, irrespective of place where manufactured, without a license. Glover v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 592. Liquor dealer without state has right to there receive orders for liquors and ship them C. O. D. to persons in Iowa, since sale in such statutes permit the police powers of a state to be applied to liquors, which have been shipped into such state as an article of interstate commerce, after they have reached the end of the shipment and have been delivered to the consignee.[9] Irrespective of the statute, liquors brought from another state are subject to state taxation after reaching their destination and while held in the state for sale in the original packages.[10] It is competent for the legislature, in the absence of constitutional restriction, to prohibit the sale of liquor within a certain territory, and it may also prohibit sales within territory within the state lying within a designated distance of a point without the state.[11] case is not within state, and state has no power to prohibit such sale as so doing would infringe interstate commerce clause of U. S. Const. State v. Bernstein, 129 Iowa, 520, 105 N. W. 1015. Liquors shipped from one state into another are not subject to seizure in latter, on ground that they are intended for unlawful sale, until after they have been delivered to the consignee, as statutes authorizing such seizure are in derogation of the Federal Constitution regulating interstate commerce. Arrival at town of residence of consignee does not terminate transportation by an express company, as latter is bound to deliver personally or at consignee's residence. State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 101 Me. 430, 64 A. 812. Laws 1905, p. 379, c. 159, prohibiting soliciting of orders for sale of intoxicants in local option territory, held unconstitutional. Ex parte Massey [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 706, 92 S. W. 1086. Statute or ordinance requiring a license by one who sells beer in original packages which are shipped to him from other states, he being the purchaser from brewer, and delivering from his own warehouse, does not impose a restraint on interstate commerce. City of Mobile v. Phillips [Ala.] 40 So. 826.

9. Act Aug. 8, 1890, c. 728 (26 St. 313), in effect provides that it shall lose its character as interstate commerce upon the completion of delivery under the contract of interstate shipment and before sale in the original packages. Meyer, Jossen & Co. v. Mobile, 147 F. 843. Hence, city ordinance imposing license tax on dealers in such liquors is valid, provided it is enacted as a police regulation in the exercise of the police powers of the city and not merely as a revenue measure. Id. Any doubt will be resolved in favor of the law being within the police power, and unless it clearly appears on face of ordinance that its purpose was to exact a tax, it will be regarded as imposing a license for regulation. Id. Ordinance imposing license tax on dealers in beer held one enacted as police regulation in exercise of powers conferred on city by charter. Id. Liquors shipped into one state from another do not become subject to former's police regulations until delivered to the consignee. Samuel Westheimer & Sons v. Habinck [Iowa] 109 N. W. 189. Code 1896, § 5087, which makes it an offense to solicit an order for liquor to be shipped into a district where the sale of liquor is prohibited, is unconstitutional so far as it applies to residents of another state who solicit orders for liquors to be shipped from without the state to a person within such district, Wilson Act having no application to such a case. Moog v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 166.

10. Ordinance imposing license tax on dealers in beer valid as to beer brought from another state and sold in original packages. Meyer, Jossen & Co. v. Mobile, 147 F. 843.

11. Clark v. Tower [Md.] 65 A. 3.

12. Police jury has power to license sale of liquors and to regulate the business, but it has no power to prohibit their sale since the legislature has vested that power in the voters. State v. Police Jury, 116 La. 767, 41 So. 85. Charter provision authorizing city council to prohibit and suppress tippling houses, saloons, and dramshops, held not to confer power to enact an ordinance making it a criminal offense to solicit and receive orders for liquor within the city. Town of Homer v. Brown, 117 La. 425, 41 So. 711.

13. Municipal corporation has no inherent power to grant licenses or to exact license fees, but must derive all its authority from the state, and the power must be a direct grant and cannot be taken by implication. Wells v. Torrey, 144 Mich. 689, 13 Det. Leg. N. 378, 108 N. W. 423. Power to issue licenses and the term for which they may be issued, only such as is conferred by the legislature. City of Albion v. Boldt [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 430, 108 N. W. 703. Charter provision authorizing prohibition of illegal sales, held not to authorize ordinance making it unlawful for any railroad or express company, or any other person, to deliver any package of liquor without first paying into the city treasury a certain sum as a license. Southern Exp. Co. v. Rose Co., 124 Ga. 581, 53 S. E. 185. City charter, giving council power "to suppress, regulate, and prohibit" the sale of intoxicants, held to give it no power to license sale. Pacific University v. Johnson, 47 Or. 448, 84 P. 704. Under Laws 1903, c. 5363, city of Tampa has authority to impose license tax. Lachman v. Walker [Fla.] 42 So. 461. Acts Ky. 1871-72, c. 976, authorizing the District of Highlands to license the sale of liquors, is not repealed by Ky. St. 1903, § 4203. Commonwealth v. Petri, 28 Ky. L. R. 940, 90 S. W. 987. City council of Atlantic City has power to license inns and taverns. Conover v. Atlantic City [N. J. Err. & App.] 64 A. 146.

14. Charter power to regulate saloons justifies penal ordinances prescribing the hours when they shall open and close. City charter held to authorize passage of certain or-intoxicants depends upon the provisions of their charters and the general statutes regulating the subject.

§ 2. Local option laws.[15]—State constitutions[16] and statutes frequently provide for the submission to popular vote of the question whether or not the sale of liquor shall be allowed in the various subdivisions of the state[17] on the filing of a petition for that purpose,[18] signed by a certain number of qualified electors,[19] whose signatures are sometimes required to be acknowledged before an officer authorized to administer oaths.[20] Petitioners whose signatures have been obtained intelligently and without fraud, and have not been erased before presentation, ordinarily cannot withdraw their names from the petition after it has been filed without leave of court for good cause shown.[21]

Where the right to vote is inaugurated by petition, the election is a special one,[22] and hence all the statutory requirements as to proclamations, orders, or other dinance. State v. Calloway [Idaho] 84 P. 27. Rev. St. § 5508, giving to cities of second class exclusive power to license, regulate, or suppress dramshops, operates to except from the operation of a state law the cities of that class, and the subsequent enactment of a general state law, prohibiting Sunday sales, does not operate to repeal an ordinance of a city allowing sale on Sunday between certain hours. State v. Binswanger [Mo. App.] 98 S. W. 103. Person selling within hours during which sale was permitted held not liable to conviction for selling goods on Sunday, under Rev. St. 1899, § 2243. Id.

15. See 6 C. L. 170.

16. Constitutional guaranty of local option to a county cannot be abrogated by the legislature by any provision in a charter subsequently granted to a city in such county, and hence local option law, adopted by county, controls provisions of city charter giving right to regulate sale of liquor, whether charter is granted before or after adoption of local option. Ex parte Elliott [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 257, 91 S. W. 570.

17. Local option law (Laws 1905, p. 41, c. 2), does not violate Const. art. 2, § 1, providing that all elections shall be free and equal (State v. Richardson [Or.] 85 P. 225), or Const. art. 1, § 20, prohibiting the granting of privileges or immunities to any citizen, or class of citizens, which shall not, upon the same terms, belong equally to all citizens (Id.), or Const. art. 4, § 20, requiring every act to embrace but one subject, expressed in its title (Id.). Orders made by judges for elections under the Brannock law are not the judgments or orders of the court, and hence are not within the rule that one judge will not undertake to review the orders or judgments of another judge of the same court. Fulton v. Columbus, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 358.

18. Petition must request the submission of the four questions prescribed by statute. Kennedy v. Warner, 51 Misc. 362, 100 N. Y. S. 616.

19. Petition for an election, under the Brannock law, which is legally insufficient in this regard, cannot take precedence over a legal petition, covering overlapping territory, properly filed before the insufficient petition is made sufficient. Petition not signed by sufficient number of electors. Fulton v. Columbus, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 358. Fact that names of all the petitioners are not on one paper is immaterial, if signatures are properly acknowledged. In re Cipperley, 50 Misc. 266, 100 N. Y. S. 473. An order for a local option election, which recites that the election has been asked for "by the requisite number of electors," to wit, not less than one-third of the qualified electors, as shown by the transcripts of the poll lists, and return of the county canvassers, is sufficient, and need not state the number of petitioners or the number of electors voting at last election. Attorney General v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 143 Mich. 366, 12 Det. Leg. N. 1017, 106 N. W. 1113. Will be presumed in criminal prosecution that petition was signed by requisite number, where board of supervisors have so found. People v. Hamilton, 143 Mich. 1, 12 Det. Leg. N. 897, 106 N. W. 275. An order of the county court reciting that a petition for the submission of the local option law was signed by over one-tenth of the qualified electors of the county is sufficient, though the statute requires that it shall be signed by at least one-tenth of the electors authorized to vote for members of the legislature, since all electors are authorized to vote for the members of the legislature. State v. Foreman [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 269.

20. Under Laws 1896, p. 57, c. 112, § 16, signing and acknowledgment are both essential, and conditions precedent to valid submission. Kennedy v. Warner, 51 Misc. 362, 100 N. Y. S. 616. Requirement as to acknowledgment is to be read in connection with statutory construction law (Laws 1892, p. 1488, c. 677, § 15), and Laws 1896, p. 611, c. 547, § 255, relating to acknowledgments of conveyances, and Code Civ. Proc. § 937. Id. Petition held insufficient where there was no certificate of acknowledgment, but merely a statement after some of the signatures, "Subscribed and sworn to before me," etc. Id. Certificate of justice, that the "above named persons" appeared before him and signed petition in his presence, held insufficient, as not showing an acknowledgment. Jackson v. Seeber, 50 Misc. 479, 100 N. Y. S. 563.

21. Held that names would not be stricken for reason that boys and old men residing in proposed prohibition district could buy whiskey in state of Missouri, that fact means of giving notice, are mandatory and must be complied with in order to give it validity.[23] So, too, all statutory provisions in regard to putting the law into effect must be complied with.[24] The territorial limits within which the law may be put in force,[25] the manner of ordering,[26] the giving of notice of[27] and time of holding the election,[28] and the manner[29] and place of voting,[30] are governed entirely by statute. A resubmission is sometimes provided for where the matter has not been properly submitted the first time.[31] Provision is generally made for a con-having been known to petitoners when they signed. Clark v. Daniel, 77 Ark. 122, 91 S. W. 9.

22, 23. Marsden v. Harlocker [Or.] 85 P. 328.

24. If election was not conducted in accordance with statutory requirements, it is void and not merely voidable, and all proceedings had under and by virtue thereof are void, and may be questioned directly or collaterally. Chenowith v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 695, 96 S. W. 19.

25. Laws 1905, p. 41, c. 2, makes county utmost limit and precinct smallest territory in which law may be put in operation, and a majority vote in entire county in favor of prohibition prevents sale of intoxicante in any precinct, though majority of electors in such precinct may have voted against law. State v. Richardson [Or.] 85 P. 225. So, too, prohibition must be enforced in precinct where majority vote favors it, though majority vote in other parts of territory in which question is submitted oppose it. Id. Law can be put in operation only by a vote of the people and extends only to the limits of the territorial subdivision adopting it. Cross v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 218, 94 S. W. 1015. School districts cannot be combined for the purpose of holding election in the combined district. Anderson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 92 S. W. 39.

26. Under Laws Mich. 1899 (Act No. 183), the resolution of the board of supervisors, directing the submission of the adoption of the local option law to the electors, is a conclusive determination that the necessary steps have been taken to give it jurisdiction. Attorney General v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 143 Mich. 366, 12 Det. Leg. N. 1017, 106 N. W. 1113. Statutory requirement that supervisors shall find by the adoption of a resolution that petition was signed by requisite number of electors is complied with by a resolution ordering the election to be held where the preamble of such resolution recites that the petition has been signed by the requisite number of electors. People v. Hamilton, 143 Mich. 1, 12 Det. Leg. N. 897, 106 N. W. 275. Laws 1905, p. 41, c. 2, §§ 1, 3, 6, 12, 14, construed and held that after county clerk has examined petition for an election, it is duty of county court to inspect petition and to examine its records to see whether application complies with act, and, if it does, to then order an election, which order is a condition precedent to a valid election. Marsden v. Harlocker [Or.] 85 P. 328. Where court did not meet in regular or special session, nor assemble at time and place prescribed by law, held that memorandum signed by members purporting to authorize election was not an order within accepted meaning of term, and election held pursuant thereto was void. Id. County judge and county commissioner, not having assembled at a time prescribed by law or by order of court, held that they did not compose county court for transaction of county business, and hence could not make valid order authorizing the calling of an election, and their attempt to do so was void. State v. Rhodes [Or.] 85 P. 332.

27. Must show that notice was given and posted as required by law. Brooks v. Ellis [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 967, 98 S. W. 936. Local option law as to notices held not repealed by the Terrell Law (Laws 1903, c. 101), so that election held pursuant to notice given thereunder was valid. Parks v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 96 S. W. 328. Notice published four successive times in a weekly paper, the last publication being more than ten days prior to the election, held sufficient. State v Dobbins, 116 Mo. App. 29, 92 S. W. 136.

28. Under Acts 1899, requiring question of local option to be presented to voters at next annual township election after petition, an order directing submission at election to be held on certain date, it being the day for the annual election, need not recite that such day is the day set for such annual election. Attorney General v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 143 Mich. 366, 12 Det. Leg. N. 1017, 106 N. W. 1113. Acts Gen. Assembly 1903, p. 288, c. 233, prohibits holding of election within 90 days of any city, county, or general election, and mandamus will not lie to compel holding election contrary to terms of such provision. State v. Raleigh [N. C.] 55 S. E. 145. Act also requires election to be held in same year in which petition therefor is filed, and hence mandamus will not be granted to compel holding of election during subsequent year. Id.

29. Use of carbon copy outfit held to destroy secrecy of ballot and render votes illegal. Jackson v. Washington, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 453. Failure of presiding judge of election district to write his name on the ballot precludes the counting of ballots not so endorsed. Brigance v. Horlock [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 62, 97 S. W. 1060.

30. The fact that an election under the Beal law is general, the result affecting the entire community alike, does not furnish warrant for the casting of his ballot by a voter in some other ward than the one in which he resides, and a ballot so cast is an illegal ballot. Jackson v. Washington, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 453.

31. Laws 1896, p. 57, c. 112, § 16, provides for resubmission to special town meeting in case, for any reason except failure to file petition, four propositions required to be submitted shall not have been properly sub-test by persons interested,[32] in which case one charged with a violation of the law cannot defend on a ground which goes to the validity of the election and which was reviewable by a contest.[33] The validity of an election cannot be inquired into by certiorari.[34] Where the original submission is invalid for want of a sufficient petition, the remedy is not by mandamus[35] nor by a resubmission,[36] but an individual may maintain a suit to enjoin proceedings under the election to the prejudice of his rights.[37] The fact that illegal votes are cast or that the votes are not properly counted does not ordinarily vitiate the election, but the remedy is by a contest.[38]

The manner of putting the law in force in case the election results in favor of prohibition is wholly statutory and varies in the different states. Publication in a newspaper is sometimes provided for.[39] In some states the county court is required to make an order declaring the result of the vote and absolutely prohibiting the sale of intoxicants within the prescribed limits.[40] In others a certified copy of the result is required to be filed in the office of the licensing officer and made the basis of his action in issuing or refusing to issue licenses.[41] The county court is some-mitted. In re Burrell, 50 Misc. 261, 100 N. Y. S. 470. Submission of four questions is not complete until vote is canvassed and result ascertained. Id. Resubmission will not be ordered for irregularities in canvassing votes where reasonable inference from all affidavits is that proper canvass would not have affected the result. Id. Where recanvass of votes is impossible, owing to fact that boxes were not locked, application for order directing special town meeting for purpose of resubmission is proper remedy. Id. Numbering of questions on voting machine held proper and legal and not misleading. In re Cipperley, 50 Misc. 266, 100 N. Y. S. 473. Serving of refreshments to voters, within prohibited limits, for purpose of influencing votes, held not to have invalidated election, or to require resubmission. Id. Fact that business interests of town will be injured, unless sale of liquors is permitted, is no ground for resubmission. Id. Is a condition precedent to resubmission that legal petition requesting original submission was presented, and hence question whether original petition was signed and acknowledged, according to law, cannot be raised on application for resubmission. Id.

32. Interest of liquor sellers in the result of a Beal Law election is not of such a character as to entitle them to be made parties to a suit contesting an election which resulted, on the face of the returns, in favor of the sale of liquors. Jackson v. Washington, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 453. Where a review is desired of proceedings under the Jones Local Option Law (98 O. L. 68), the qualified elector who feels aggrieved should appear as plaintiff and the mayor of the municipality in question as the defendant in error. In re The Jones Local Option Law, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 574.

33. Cannot defend on ground that election was void because of some irregularity in conducting it, but may do so on ground that county court had no jurisdiction to order election or that statute under which it was held was invalid, since such matters cannot be reached by a contest. Cole v. Com. [Ky.] 98 S. W. 1002.

36. To special town meeting. Kennedy v. Warner, 51 Misc. 362, 100 N. Y. S. 616.

37. Owner of building, leasing it with provision that lessee might cancel lease if local option election should result in negative vote, held entitled to injunction, though he did not sue in behalf of himself and all others interested. Kennedy v. Warner, 51 Misc. 362, 100 N. Y. S. 616.

38. Bordwell v. State, 77 Ark. 161, 91 S. W. 555.

39. Under Sayles' Rev. Civ. St. § 3391, requiring notice to be published four times in a paper designated by the county judge, publication three times in a paper so designated and a subsequent publication in another paper with his permission is insufficient. Chenowith v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 695, 96 S. W. 19. State held entitled to rely on local option law which went into effect under election of 1903, though another election had been held in 1905 previous to alleged sale by defendant, where it appeared that law adopted at last election had not been published, and it did not even appear that it had been put into operation. Givens v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 361, 91 S. W. 1090. Where publication is enjoined, publication immediately after dissolution of injunction is sufficient. Riggs v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 293, 97 S. W. 482.

40. Laws 1905, c. 2, § 10, does not violate Const. art. 4, § 23, subd. 3, prohibiting special legislation regulating practice in courts (State v. Richardson [Or.] 85 P. 225), or Const. art. 7, §§ 1, 12, fixing jurisdiction of county court (Id.). Provision of Const. art. 7, § 12, vesting county court with such other powers and duties as may be prescribed by law, requires court to discharge duties imposed upon it by § 10 of the act. Id. Declaration of the result of vote and interdiction of sale of liquors is a ministerial act, in discharge of which court exercises neither judgment nor discretion, and hence mandamus lies to compel performance. Id.

41. County treasurer has no authority to look behind copy of statement of result filed with him pursuant to Laws 1896, p. 57, c. 112, § 16. In re Tinkcom, 50 Misc. 250, 100 N. Y. S. 467. On certiorari to review his times authorized to grant licenses if the majority of votes cast are for licenses.[42] An order of the county court revoking an order prohibiting the sale of liquor in a certain territory is self-executing and remains in force until set aside or superseded, and hence is not suspended by an appeal therefrom.[43] Clerical errors in an order declaring the result of the election are immaterial.[44] It is generally provided that after the adoption of prohibition, a second election cannot be held for a specified time.[45]

There is a conflict of authority as to the effect of the adoption of the local option law on the general laws relating to the sale of intoxicants.[46]

As a general rule the local option law continues in force in a new county organized from territory forming a part of an old county in which it is in force,[47] and in the territory comprised in a municipality which has adopted it, though subsequently annexed to a municipality which has not.[48]

§ 3. Licenses and license taxes.[49]—The authority of municipal corporations to require licenses is treated in a prior section.[50] As a general rule the licensing authorities may exercise a reasonable discretion in granting or refusing a license.[51] action in refusing to issue certificate he will not be compelled to make a part of his return a certified copy of the report of the votes cast, § 28 only requiring him to include copies of papers on which his action is based. Id.

42. Under Kirby's Dig. § 5120, its jurisdiction to grant licenses depends upon the actual result of the election and not upon the act of the county board of election commissioners in laying the returns of the election before it, and hence it is not deprived of jurisdiction by board's failure to do so. Bordwell v. State, 77 Ark. 161, 91 S. W. 555.

43. Bordwell v. State, 77 Ark. 161, 91 S. W. 555.

44. Fact that order recites that the election was held on the 16th instead of the 15th, the true date, the proceedings in other respects being regular, will not invalidate the election. Luck v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 358, 97 S. W. 1049.

45. Election cannot be held in a commissioners precinct, composed of two justices precincts, within two years after an election in one of said precincts which resulted in favor of the adoption of local option Ex parte Randall [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 459, 98 S. W. 870. An election, held under the Brannock law, within a part of the territory which formerly constituted a municipal corporation in which a Beal law election was held, before it was annexed to another muicipality, and within two years of the date of such Beal law election, is invalid. In re Davis, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 417.

46. Georgia: One illegally selling liquor in county where selling thereof is altogether prohibited cannot properly be indicted for the statutory offense of selling without a license. Moore v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 327.

Texas: Where the local option law has been adopted in a specified territory, it supersedes all other statutory provisions in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquors. Cross v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 218, 94 S. W. 1015. Operates as a repeal of all laws in conflict with it and also their penalties, and exempts from punishment all persons who may have offended against the provisions of the repealed laws. Long v. Green & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 110, 95 S. W. 79. Suspends law prohibiting sales to minors, and hence one cannot be convicted of selling liquor to minors in local option territory. Dean v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 314, 92 S. W. 38. Hence, in such territory, an indictment simply charging a sale to a minor is insufficient, since the violation is of the local option law and not the statute prohibiting a sale to a minor. Tompkins v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 766, 90 S. W. 1019. Does not, however, suspend law prohibiting the "giving" of liquor to minors since two are not inconsistent. Deisher v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 680, 96 S. W. 28. There being no statute authorizing license for selling malt liquors in local option precinct, one cannot be convicted under an indictment charging sale thereof without license where record shows that sale, if any, was in such a precinct. Hail v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 90 S. W. 503.

Virginia: General statutory provisions prohibiting unlawful sale of liquor, and imposing a penalty for so doing, are applicable in local option territory as well as elsewhere. Fletcher v. Com. [Va.] 56 S. W. 149.

47. Under express provisions of Acts 1905, p. 46, authorizing organization of new counties, held that the local prohibition law prevailing in Dooly County immediately became in full force and effect in Crisp County when latter was organized from territory embraced in former, and hence there could be no legal sale of liquor therein until law was changed. Moore v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 327; Parker v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 329. Court will take judicial notice that before organization of latter its territory was part of former. Id.

50. See § 1, ante.

51. Where ordinance authorizes issuing

The contents of the petition or application for a license,[52] the amount of the license tax and the manner of determining[53] and collecting it,[54] whether separate licenses for sales at wholesale and at retail[55] and for each place where sales are made[56] are required, whether a dealer must have both a city and a county[57] or a city and a of a license on certain conditions, licensing officers cannot arbitrarily refuse same, nor discriminate between persons, places, and regulations pertaining to the business, without reasonable grounds therefor; but unless expressly restricted by the ordinance, they may exercise a reasonable discretion. Harrison v. People, 222 Ill. 150, 78 N. E. 52. Licensing authorities exercise a sound discretion in granting or refusing an application, and may in their discretion refuse to license though no remonstrance is made. In re Jorgensen [Neb.] 106 N. W. 462. The power should not be exercised arbitrarily but it will be presumed that the action taken was in good faith and for right motives. Id.

52. Fact that names of proposed sureties on the bond proposed to be given by the licensee are omitted from the petition does not deprive court of power to issue the license, a bond with sufficient sureties being in fact presented. In re Matthew's License, 213 Pa. 269, 62 A. 837, afg. 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 384. Fact that spaces left in printed form of application for names of sureties were not filled in held not a fatal defect, but one of form only which was curable by amendment, where on same sheet with petition was a bond duly executed by applicant and his sureties, and motion to amend was accompanied by affidavit that names were omitted by mistake. Oberfell's License, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 68. Act April 24, 1901 (P. L. 102), requiring certificate relating to financial standing of any person who is surety upon more than one liquor dealer's bond, requires such certificate to be made by the surety himself and not that it be made a part of the petition for a license. Fourney's License, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 71. Even if Act March 31, 1856, § 9 (P. L. 200), providing that a place to be licensed as an hotel must have certain accommodations for travelers, were still in force, held that it would not be necessary to allege that it had such accommodations in the petition for the license. Knoblauch's License, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 323.

53. State commissioner of excise caused to be made enumeration of inhabitants of certain city, certified result to county treasurer and increased amount of excise tax because of increased population. Relators paid increased tax, but stated in writing that they paid increase under protest. Held that payment was not made under mistake of fact. People v. Cullinan, 111 App. Div. 32, 97 N. Y. S. 194. Certificate by commissioner to treasurer did not compel payment of increased tax unless statute authorized enumeration. Id. Acts of commissioner of excise in procuring an enumeration of inhabitants of certain district, certifying result to county treasurer, and increasing amount of excise tax, held not such a final determination of rights of persons paying increased tax as to entitle them to common-law writ of certiorari to review same. Id.

Social club which sells liquor to its members is not "conducting the business of a drinking saloon or bar room." State v. New Orleans Chess, Checkers & Whist Club, 116 La. 46, 40 So. 526. Amount of license fee to be paid by such a club for privilege of selling liquors is to be determined by gross sale of intoxicating liquors and not gross bar sales, which include items other than liquors. Id. Under Act 171 of 1898, a tax collector, if dissatisfied with the sworn statement of the officers of the club as to the amount of sales during the preceding year, must traverse such affidavit promptly and cannot afterwards maintain a suit for fees of preceding years on the ground that such affidavit did not disclose the full amount of the sales. Id. License tax of $500 held not unreasonable or oppressive. Lachman v. Walker [Fla.] 42 So. 41. Ordinance requiring one desiring to engage in saloon business to procure and pay certain sum for a license held a police regulation and not a revenue measure and hence to require only a majority vote. Wells v. Torrey, 144 Mich. 689, 13 Det. Leg. N. 378, 108 N. W. 423.

54. St. 1903, §§ 4241, 4260, 4263, 4267, construed and held that revenue agents have no authority to institute actions to recover unpaid license fees from brewers unless directed by the auditor to do so. Commonwealth v. Central Consumers' Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 1363, 91 S. W. 711. County court has no jurisdiction of action by state to recover unpaid license fees from brewery. Id. Under St. 1903, § 4260, revenue agent has power, independent of auditor, to cause license tax to be listed for taxation, and may institute proper proceedings in county court to have omitted license tax listed. Id. Prayer for general relief held to entitle revenue agent to judgment requiring listing of license fees for taxation, though agent was not entitled to recover fees in such proceeding as prayed. Id. County treasurer held not entitled to commission on money collected for liquor license during the period intervening between the Act of March 9, 1901, and Laws 1905, c. 60, § 11. Hubbell v. Bernalillo County Com'rs [N. M.] 86 P. 430.

55. Charter of Mobile, § 43 (Acts 1901, p. 2374), does not exempt one who has a license to sell at retail from procuring additional license for sales of beer by the barrel. City of Mobile v. Phillips [Ala.] 40 So. 826.

56. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 4224, a foreign corporation engaged in selling beer must have a license for each place at which it sells same, and cannot establish agency at a town or city and send out wagons to other towns and cities and make sales and deliver in such other towns without license for such towns. Jung Brewing Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 98 S. W. 307.

57. Provisions of Montgomery City Charter, § 20, exempting persons procuring a license from city from paying any tax or license to county, was repealed by Gen. Acts state license,[58] and the right to correct errors in the license,[59] depend upon the statutes of the various states. It is frequently provided that licenses may only be granted on the petition[60] or recommendation,[61] or with the consent, of a certain proportion of the property owners within a specified distance of the place where the business is to be carried on,[62] or that they may not be granted over the remonstrance 1903, p. 184. Gaston v. O'Neal [Ala.] 41 So. 742. A prosecution under Rev. St. 1870, § 910, charging defendant with selling without a license fails where defendant produces a license in due form either from the parish or municipality. State v. Lewis, 116 La. 762, 41 So. 63.

58. Under Rev. St. 1870, § 1212, providing that persons paying a license fee to a municipal corporation for the privilege of selling liquors shall also pay a license fee to the state, a person who sells without a municipal license in violation of an ordinance requiring such payment is not exempt from paying the state license tax. State v. White, 115 La. 779, 40 So. 44.

59. Where by mutual mistake premises were described by wrong number in liquor tax certificate held that special term could not, on hearing of order to show cause why certificate should not be amended, order an amendment nunc pro tunc on filing of a new application and bond containing a correct description, where commissioner of excise opposed such a course. In re Littleton, 113 App. Div. 471, 99 N. Y. S. 417.

60. Under Laws 1905, c. 71, in towns having population of less than 100, license or renewal thereof can be granted only on petition of 20 freeholders. State v. Settles [Mont.] 87 P. 445. Under a statute requiring petition signed by a specified number of freeholders, where the qualification of the signers is put in issue by a remonstrance, the burden of proving such qualification is on the applicant. Swibart v. Hansen [Neb.] 107 N. W. 862. When county court charged with the duty of issuing licenses fraudulently finds that the petition is signed by the requisite number of taxpayers, when as a fact it is not, equity will in a direct proceeding set aside their judgment granting the license, though it would not do so if they were without fraud merely mistaken as to the existence of such jurisdictional fact. Burkharth v. Stephens, 117 Mo. App. 425, 94 S. W. 720.

61. Under Inn and Tavern Act 1846. § 45, persons who have recommended any other application for a license cannot, during the year during which the license granted pursuant to their recommendation is in force, recommend the granting of a license which is to be operative in whole or in part during the term of the first license. Cope v. Common Council of Somers [N. J. Law] 64 A. 156. Under Rev. Code 1852, as amended 1893, c. 53, requiring an applicant for license to present a petition with certain recommendations and that each person signing it must either himself have read it or had it read to him, a petition signed by more than the requisite number, some of whom have neither read it nor heard it read, is insufficient, though signed by the statutory number who have read or heard it read. In re Veasey [Del.] 63 A. 801.

62. Purchaser of property from owner who has consented to maintenance of saloon within 50 feet of his property does not take property subject to such consent, but new statement of consent signed by him must be filed by saloonkeeper at beginning of next tax year. Code § 2448, construed. Conway v. District Ct. Fayette County [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1074. Under charter of city of New Orleans (Act No. 99, p. 224, of 1904), council cannot grant privilege of opening any bar room except upon the written consent of a majority of the bona fide "property owners" within 300 feet thereof. State v. New Orleans, 117 La. 715, 42 So. 245. Statute is remedial, and hence mode of proceeding may be changed, and change may have retroactive effect. Id. Where application was refused and applicant allowed five years to elapse before filing mandamus proceedings to compel council to issue permit, and such act was passed in meantime, held that its provisions and not those of the act in effect when application was made controlled in determining the sufficiency of the consent. Id. Is duty of city engineer to ascertain whether list has required number of signatures within prescribed limit, but his certificate is not conclusive on the question. Id. Ordinance requiring consent of a majority of the householders within a designated distance of the proposed location is not unconstitutional. City of New Orleans v. Smythe, 116 La. 685, 41 So. 33. Laws 1896, c. 112, § 17, require written consent of two-thirds of the owners of buildings used exclusively for residence purposes, the nearest entrance to which is within 200 feet of the nearest entrance to the premises in which liquor traffic is to be carried on. In re Bullard, 113 App. Div. 159, 98 N. Y. S. 1011. Consent by husband of owner of building without her knowledge or authority held insufficient. Id. Evidence held to show that necessary number of consents had not been obtained. Id. Revocation affirmed without costs owing to fact that state and property owners failed to investigate validity and sufficiency of consents filed by first owner of premises and thereby suffered subsequent purchaser to be misled to his prejudice by appearances. Id. Owner means person having legal title, and hence consent of owner of fee is sufficient without that of life tenant. In re Clement, 101 N. Y. S. 447. Building held to be counted as one building only, though occupied as double house, half of it being owned by husband and other half by wife. Id. Status at time of application for certificate held controlling. Id. Fact that second deputy commissioner of excise, without consulting legal department and without full knowledge of facts, stated when application was made that house was to be counted as two, held not binding upon department and not to estop commissioner of the majority of the legal voters of the territory affected,[63] or that the consent of a town is necessary to the granting of a license for the sale of intoxicants within a specified distance of its borders.[64] It is sometimes provided that a place cannot be licensed as a hotel unless it has certain specified accommodations for travelers.[65] The applicant may be required to show that he is a person of respectable character and standing[66] or to take oath that he will not knowingly permit gambling on the premises.[67] One remonstrating against the issuance of a license on the ground that the applicant has sold liquor to minors during the previous year has the burden of proving that fact.[68] The required license fee or tax must be paid.[69] A li-from instituting proceeding to cancel certificate on ground that sufficient number of consents had not been obtained. Id. Back door to residence not accessible to street is not an entrance within meaning of statute. McDougal v. Malaghan, 184 N. Y. 253, 77 N. E. 12.

63. Indiana: Acts 1895 (p. 251, c. 127, § 9), as amended by Act Feb. 15, 1905 (Acts 1905, p. 7, c. 6), prohibiting county commissioners from granting license when remonstrance signed by majority of voters of township is filed, and authorizing blanket remonstrance, held constitutional. Cain v. Allen [Ind.] 79 N. E. 201. Remonstrance will be construed as a remonstrance against each application for license thereafter filed and the applicant is entitled to an opportunity to controvert the legal sufficiency thereof. Id. The commissioners have no jurisdiction, except on a hearing of an application for a license, to enter an order on such a remonstrance to the effect that they will not issue a license to any person for two years. Id. The remonstrance may be signed by the voters, by attorney thereunto authorized in writing. Id. One who has signed a remonstrance has no right to withdraw his name after the beginning of the first day of the three days preceding the term at which it is presented and to be acted on. Id. Vote cast at the last preceding November election is basis of determining number of voters when the application is to sell in a town and without the limits of an incorporated city, and when the application is for a license to sell in a ward of a city, last preceding general city election, and it must be a majority of votes cast for candidate receiving highest number of votes. Kunkle v. Abell [Ind.] 79 N. E. 753. On application filed subsequent to the term of the commissioners at which the remonstrance is filed, applicant is entitled to hearing as to the sufficiency of the remonstrance, and is not precluded by previous ex parte adjudication by the commissioners that the remonstrance is signed by requisite number of voters, etc. Id. Ex parte finding that remonstrance is signed by a majority of the legal voters is inadmissible against an applicant, and the burden is on the remonstrators to show that it is so signed. Jones v. Alexander [Ind.] 79 N. E. 368. All remonstrances, designated as such by the statute, must be so filed as to come before the board of commissioners, from whose action on an application an appeal may be taken to circuit court, and a remonstrance cannot be filed originally in circuit court on appeal. Sanasack v. Ader [Ind. App.] 78 N. E. 675; Id. [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 457. Remonstrance was filed against particular applicant pursuant to Burns' Ann. St. § 7283-i, and application denied. Pending an appeal, Act of 1905 was passed, and remonstrance against granting license to any applicant was filed pursuant to its provisions, which was determined by county board to be sufficient. Held that circuit court properly permitted filing of so called supplemental remonstrance showing such facts, and dismissed application without determining whether or not the original remonstrance against the applicant individually was sufficient. Id. Applicant under such circumstances has no rights referable to conditions when he presented original application, but court was bound by conditions properly shown to exist at time of hearing, and state of facts, which would constitute defense to application before board, will defeat it in circuit court. Id.

Kentucky: When a protest is made to the granting of a license, the county court should make an order defining the neighborhood, and then the burden is on the commonwealth to show that those who protest are a majority of the legal voters of the neighborhood so defined. Guinn v. Cumberland County Court, 28 Ky. L. R. 759, 90 S. W. 274. Protest not being by the statute required to be in writing may be made by the voter orally in court; but, if a writing is offered, the burden is on the commonwealth to show that it was signed by the persons by whom it purports to be signed and that they are legal voters in the neighborhood. Id. In determining whether or not a majority of the voters of a neighborhood are against the granting of a license, the court should count as remonstrators persons who, subsequent to signing a petition for the granting of a license, have signed a remonstrance. Simpson v. Com. [Ky.] 97 S. W. 404.

64. Under Laws 1905, c. 36, § 20, must procure consent to issuance of license to sell within two miles, and license issued without it is of no legal effect. Devanny v. Hanson [W. Va.] 53 S. E. 603.

65. Act March 31, 1856, § 9 (P. L. 200), providing that in order that a hotel may be granted a license as such it must have for the exclusive use of travelers at least four bedrooms and eight beds, held repealed by Act May 13, 1887 (P. L. 108). Knoblauch's License, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 323.

66. Burden is on him to show such facts when denied by remonstrance. Brinkworth v. Shembeck [Neb.] 108 N. W. 150.

67. Shannon's Code, §§ 993, 6781, makes cense cannot ordinarily be granted for the sale of liquor in local option territory.[70] The number of licenses which may be issued in certain territory is sometimes limited.[71] Municipalities frequently prescribe limits outside of which no licenses may be issued.[72] As a general rule a license in proper form cannot be collaterally impeached.[73]

A license is a mere privilege[74] which will be strictly construed.[75] As a general rule more than one saloon cannot be run under a single license.[76] Where a license is granted to two named persons who are partners and one of them sells out his interest to the other, the latter may continue the business individually under the same license.[77] If the license is transferable and has value it is property and is liable for the licensee's debts.[78]

The state cannot in a civil action recover the license fee from one who has sold liquor without a license.[79] In order to recover back a license tax claimed to have been illegally exacted, the plaintiff must show that the defendant had no authority to impose the tax, that it actually received the money, and that the payment was not voluntarily made.[80]

Appeal and review.[81]—The right to a review of the proceedings of the licensing authorities granting or refusing the license and the manner of obtaining it,[82] violation of such oath perjury. State v. Wilson, 115 Tenn. 725, 91 S. W. 195.

68. In re MacRae [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1020.

69. Acts 1906, p. 430, fixing the license fee for retailing and vending liquors in Irwin County is not unconstitutional. Glover v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 592. Kirby's Dig., §§ 6881, 6882, requiring persons selling liquors to take out a license and providing a penalty for selling same without having first paid the tax required by the act of which they are a part, requires a payment for the procurement of a valid license, and hence a payment will not protect from the prescribed penalty after the license issued therefor has been annulled, nor will the subsequent issuance of a second license to him during the year, and after the annulment of the first, without another payment. Alexander v. State, 77 Ark. 294, 91 S. W. 181.

70. No officer or tribunal has power to lawfully grant or issue a license to a brewer to establish a depot or agency for the sale of beer by wholesale or otherwise in such territory. Hager v. Jung Brew. Co., 29 Ky. L. R. 176, 92 S. W. 573.

71. Laws 1901, p. 107, c. 101, limiting the number of licenses to be issued in places bordering on the "patrol limits" in all cities of a certain class, is unconstitutional as being in contravention of Const. art. 4, § 36, in that it is evidently intended to apply only to one city, since but one city in the specified class has patrol limits. State v. Schraps, 97 Minn. 62, 106 N. W. 106.

72. Under Comp. Laws, § 3107, authorizing cities to regulate and prescribe by ordinance the location of saloons, they may establish saloon limits and prohibit the issuing of licenses outside thereof. Johnson v. Common Council of Bessemer, 143 Mich. 313, 12 Det. Leg. N. 981, 106 N. W. 852. Such an ordinance is not void because it does not provide a penalty for its violation, since council has power to approve bonds which must state where the liquor business is to be conducted, and can refuse to approve bonds as to places not in the limits. Id.

73. If issued by municipality with general powers to regulate and license such business cannot be collaterally impeached in criminal prosecution by evidence tending to show that powers of corporation had been divested by parochial election in favor of prohibition. State v. Lewis, 116 La. 762, 41 So. 63.

76. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1903, c. 43, and Chicago city ordinances, even though they are in same building and rooms are connected by doors, openings, or stairways. City of Chicago v. Malkan, 119 Ill. App. 542. Evidence that collector told licensee that he could run two in same building held inadmissible, since he could not bind city by utterance of legal opinion. Id.

78. Where ordinance under which it was issued provided for its transfer upon observance of formalities about which there was no practical difficulty, and it had marketable value, held that receiver was entitled to it. Deggender v. Seattle Brew. & Malting Co., 41 Wash. 385, 83 P. 898.

79. Tax imposed by St. 1903, § 4224, on business of keeping hotel with privilege of selling liquor, since there can be no indebtedness to state on part of one who has not applied for and procured a license. Commonwealth v. Central Hotel Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 829, 90 S. W. 565.

80. Must show that he paid it under compulsion, it not being enough to show a payment under protest. Town of Phoebus v. Manhattan Social Club [Va.] 52 S. E. 839.

81. See 6 C. L. 178.

82. Applicant whose application is denied by board of commissioners may appeal and the procedure on appeal,[83] is regulated by statute and varies in the different states. An appeal from a decision granting a petition for a license ordinarily operates as a stay of all proceedings, and a license should not be issued until it is determined.[84]

Bonds.[85]—Whether a surety company may act as surety on a liquor dealer's bond depends upon the statutes of the various states.[86]

Transfer of licenses.[87]—A license is a personal privilege and cannot be assigned by the licensee except when authorized by the legislature and then only in the mode prescribed by the statute.[88] A transfer under certain specified restrictions and conditions is generally provided for.[89] A resolution of a board of excise commissioners, transferring a license to one of their number who voted for it and whose vote was necessary to the adoption of the resolution, will be set aside on certiorari.[90] to circuit court from their decision. Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7280, and Acts 1905, c. 6, § 9 construed. Lanham v. Woods [Ind.] 79 N. E. 376. See, also, Sanasack v. Ader [Ind. App.] 78 N. E. 675; Id. [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 457. County court in granting license acts judicially, and from its decision there is no appeal but it can be reviewed only by certiorari. Burkharth v. Stephens, 117 Mo. App. 425, 94 S. W. 720. Hence, if it appears from the face of the record that the proceedings were regular, there can be no interference; but where the county court fraudulently and collusively decided that a petition for a license was signed by the requisite number of taxpayers resident in the neighborhood and fraudulently made up the record of their proceedings in such a way that certiorari would not show such fact, equity will set aside the judgment of the court granting the license. Id.

83. On appeal to circuit court from dismissal of application, answer was filed by one of the signers of a blanket remonstance and he was considered as only adversary party. Held that on appeal by him from an order granting license he would not be permitted to assign error on behalf of other signers of the remonstrance. Miller v. Givens [Ind. App.] 78 N. E. 1067. On appeal from order of county court refusing to grant license, commonwealth should be made the appellee, making the court the appellee being insufficient. Guinn v. Cumberland County Court, 28 Ky. L. R. 759, 90 S. W. 274. On appeal from decision of board of supervisors that a petition of consent to sale of liquors is sufficient, the notice of appeal may be served on person who actually deposited petition with county auditor, though he was acting merely as an agent or attorney for others. In re Intoxicating Liquors, 129 Iowa, 434, 105 N. W. 702. Any written statement or pleading apprising court that a citizen of the county appears and objects to, or denies the sufficiency of, the statement of consent, is sufficient. Id. General denial held to sufficiently allege citizenship of appellant. Id. On appeal from order granting license, court may by order require licensing board to furnish certified transcript of evidence adduced before it, upon payment by appellant of reasonable fees therefor. State v. Omaha Fire & Police Com'rs [Neb.] 108 N. W. 122. Peremptory mandamus to compel board to reduce evidence to writing and file same in its office is not necessary. Id. Board is not bound by stipulation of parties providing method of taking and transcribing evidence not prescribed by statute, and will not be compelled by mandamus to reduce same to writing in manner stipulated without payment of extra expense. Id. Remonstrator appealing from order of village board of trustees granting a license can require board to file certified transcript of the evidence with the court to which appeal is taken, but cannot by mandamus compel the filing of such transcript when it is not alleged that he has appealed or intends to, merely alleging that he has given notice of appeal being insufficient. State v. McGuire [Neb.] 105 N. W. 471. Appeal may be taken though transcript is not filed. Id. Where record plainly shows that court has not proceeded according to law, but has refused license for reason which law does not recognize as valid, its action stands on no legal basis and it is duty of appellate court to correct it. Knoblauch's License, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 323.

84. Appeal from decision of board of county commissioners. Pallidy v. Beatty, 15 Okl. 626, 83 P. 428. In case a license is issued pending the appeal, mandamus will lie to compel its revocation. Id. Application for mandamus in such case is not to control judicial discretion, but to compel performance of duty imposed by law. Id.

86. Under Sayles' Ann. St. 1897, art. 733, bond signed by company is sufficient, though Laws 1901, c. 136, requires that such bonds shall be signed by two sureties. Taggart v. Hillman [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 273, 93 S. W. 245; Taggart v. Graham [Tex. Civ. App.] 93 S. W. 246.

90. Treeftz v. Lambertville Excise Com'rs [N. J. Law] 62 A. 1004.

Revocation, cancellation, and surrender.[91]—A license is not a contract or a vested right but a mere permit which may ordinarily be revoked at any time.[92] In New York one who pays the license tax imposed by law and receives a liquor tax certificate thereby acquires a property right of which he cannot be deprived without due process of law.[93] In New Jersey a hotel license cannot be revoked except for statutory cause or on the ground of fraud.[94] Statutes and ordinances generally provide for revocation in case the licensee violates any provisions of the law relating to the sale of intoxicants,[95] and prescribe the necessary procedure[96] and the

92. Is merely a permit accepted with the burden of being subject to the imposition of future legislative control, and legislature may change, revoke, or annul it, though a license fee has been paid therefor. Sanasack v. Ader [Ind. App.] 78 N. E. 675. Licensee is bound by any conditions which are attached to the permission. State v. Corron, 73 N. H. 434, 62 A. 1044. Is mere privilege or permit subject to revocation for cause by the power granting it, or to such conditions as it may see fit to impose. State v. Seebold, 192 Mo. 720, 91 S. W. 491. Since licensee's personal property rights are not affected by revocation of license, he cannot question constitutionality of law under which it is revoked. Id. Revocation of license is not punishment and hence Rev. St. 1899, § 3021, authorizing excise commissioner to revoke licenses in cities of certain size for violations of law, is not a local or special law in violation of Const. art. 4, § 53, on theory that it inflicts different punishments for same offense in same locality. Id.

93. Tax imposed by Laws 1896, p. 45, c. 112. People v. Flynn, 110 App. Div. 279, 96 N. Y. S. 655, rvg. 48 Misc. 159, 96 N. Y. S. 653. Laws 1905, p. 1862, c. 697, in so far as it directs special deputy commissioner of excise to revoke certificate issued before its passage to one intending to carry on liquor traffic in connection with a hotel, without notice to the holder or giving him opportunity to be heard, is unconstitutional as depriving him of his property without due process of law. Id.

94. Vanaman v. Adams [N. J. Law] 65 204.

95. Laws 1905, p. 1862, c. 697, providing for cancellation of liquor tax certificate issued to one operating saloon in connection with hotel on finding that building does not comply with law regulating hotels, and that building superintendent shall cause all partitions forming bedrooms therein to be removed, held not to authorize removal of partitions without a judgment or order of a competent judicial authority. Born v. Hopper, 110 App. Div. 218, 96 N. Y. S. 671. Where special deputy excise commissioner had revoked certificate, but did not threaten and was not directed to do anything further, held that he would not be enjoined from taking possession and depriving proprietor of certificate regardless of constitutionality of such act. Id. Under Act May 13, 1887, § 7 (P. L. 108), it is mandatory upon court to revoke license upon proof being made that party holding it has violated any law of the state relating to sale of liquors. Arnold's License, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 93. Where petition alleged that licensee sold liquor in three different buildings, one of which was not on or connected with licensed premises, held that dismissal of petition was error. Id. Under Rev. St. 1898, §§ 1558, 1559, council is required to revoke license on proof of allegations of complaint charging violation of any ordinance passed pursuant to law, word "order" in § 1558 not referring solely to orders prohibiting sales to certain persons authorized to be given by § 1554, and hence license should have been revoked for violation of ordinance requiring saloons to close at midnight. State v. Curtis [Wis.] 110 N. W. 189.

96. Under Rev. Laws, § 2677, and Pub. Acts 1903, c. 99, conviction of licensed dealer of violating any provisions of laws relating to sale of liquors, authorizes the revocation of his license by county commissioners without giving him notice or an opportunity to be heard in opposition to such proposed revocation, nor does Rev. Laws, § 2658, authorize an appeal from their action. Appeal of Londry [Conn.] 63 A. 293. Rev. St. 1899, § 3019, creating office of excise commissioner in cities of a certain size, § 3021, authorizing commissioner to revoke license of dramshop keeper violating any provision of the laws governing dramshops, and § 3011, providing that any dramshop keeper selling liquor on Sunday shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine and shall forfeit his license, construed, and held that commissioner of such a city has authority to revoke license for selling liquor on Sunday, which in no way depends on forfeiture or penalty which might be imposed on such an offender outside the city under § 3011. State v. Seebold, 192 Mo. 720, 91 S. W. 491. Section 3021 is not to be construed as authorizing such revocation only under the same circumstances and in the same manner in which licenses may be forfeited under § 3011, and after a trial and conviction, for the purpose of harmonizing the two sections, they having no connection with each other, and the legislature having intended to clothe commissioner with full and exclusive authority to revoke licenses in such cities. Id. Petition for cancellation of liquor tax certificate for failure to file consents required by Laws 1896, c. 112, § 17, held sufficient to confer jurisdiction and authorize taking of proof under § 28, subd. 2, though allegations were based on information and belief, where manner in which the action of the officers passing on the matter may be reviewed.[97] Similar provisions are frequently found in the license itself[98] or are expressly made a part of the agreement under which it is issued.[99] The reversal on appeal of an order revoking a prohibitory order operates to set aside licenses granted after the making of the order appealed from.[1] The licensee may be enjoined from selling liquor pending the proceeding for revocation.[2] Certiorari will not lie to review acts of the officers ordering the revocation which are not judicial in their nature and have no relation to judicial functions.[3] Mandamus will lie to compel the common sources of information were disclosed, and particular reference made thereto, and proof was presented in or with petition of existence of facts prima facie entitling petitioner to relief demanded. In re Clement, 101 N. Y. S. 683. In proceedings for cancellation of certificate, court may order reference under general provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1015, though provision for reference in such cases in subd. 2, § 28, of Liquor Tax Law (Laws 1896, c. 112, p. 69, as amended by Laws 1903, c. 486, p. 1125), was stricken out by Laws 1905, p. 1737, c. 680, subd. 3. In re Lawson, 109 App. Div. 195, 96 N. Y. S. 33; In re Cullinan, 109 App. Div. 816, 96 N. Y. S. 751. Provision that on presentation of petition and answer raising material issues "the said justice, judge, or court shall hear the proofs of the parties," etc., does not require proofs to be taken in open court. In re Cullinan, 109 App. Div. 816, 96 N. Y. S. 751. Proceeding by state commissioner of excise to revoke certificate is summary in its nature and no stay should be granted at defendant's instance on his appeal from an order of revocation at least until the coming in of the referee's report. Cullinan v. Devito, 99 N. Y. S. 976. Since delay defeats intention of statute, held that referee would be directed to proceed with hearings from day to day and to terminate same by specified date. Cullinan v. Sabating, 49 Misc. 442, 99 N. Y. S. 977. Under Act May 13, 1887, § 7 (P. L. 108), where petition for revocation of license for violation of law is presented to court which alleges all the jurisdictional facts and is duly verified, court has no discretionary power to refuse to hear case. Arnold's License, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 93. Provisions of Milwaukee city charter giving city power to "license, regulate, and restrain" those engaged in saloon business, held not to give it power to provide by ordinance how a license to sell intoxicants might be revoked and to confer power of revocation on district court, Rev. St. 1898, §§ 1558, 1559, providing for revocation by common council upon complaint and notice to the party, being applicable to all municipalities, and the remedy thereby provided being exclusive. Ordinance held void. State v. Milwaukee [Wis.] 109 N. W. 421. Complaint alleging that saloonkeeper sold liquor on premises after 12 o'clock midnight on certain date, held not to charge violation of ordinance requiring closing of saloons between hours of 12 o'clock midnight and 5 o'clock A. M. State v. Curtis [Wis.] 110 N. W. 189. Defect held not to justify dismissal of complaint in absence of objection, where both answer and proofs showed clear violation of ordinance, in view of Rev. St. 1898, § 4706, providing that proceedings, etc., shall not be abated for any error or mistake, etc., where person and proceeding may be rightly understood by court. Id.

97. Rev. Laws, § 2658, does not authorize appeal from action of county commissioners in revoking license of one convicted of violating liquor laws. Appeal of Londry [Conn.] 63 A. 293. On refusal of court of quarter sessions to grant rule to show cause why license should not be revoked, remedy is by appeal to superior court under Act May 5, 1899, § 7 (P. L. 248), and not by mandamus. Arnold's License, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 93. Ball. Ann. Codes & St. §§ 2934, 2935 construed, and held that mayor and city council have discretion as to revocation of licenses which is final and conclusive, and superior court has no jurisdiction to review their action. State v. Superior Ct. [Wash.] 87 P. 818.

98. Where license itself and city ordinance provided that it might be revoked by mayor for any violation of ordinances, and licensee kept open on Sunday in violation of ordinance, held that mayor had authority to revoke license. Anderson v. Galesburg, 118 Ill. App. 525. Where licensee was notified that mayor had revoked his license, held that he was chargeable with notice that ordinance required mayor to report revocation to next meeting of council, and that it would be required to confirm or reject the revocation, and he was not entitled to be notified that the matter would be so reported. Id.

99. Where condition that licensee would not sell on Sunday was broken, held that his right to sell liquor ceased and he could not complain that license was revoked by county court on complaint being filed with it, and after an investigation as stipulated in the agreement, there being no procedure specially prescribed by law for the enforcement of such agreements. Belt v. Paul, 77 Ark. 211, 91 S. W. 301.

1. Licenses granted by county court before appeal was taken. Licensees stand in position of persons without licenses. Bordwell v. State, 77 Ark. 161, 91 S. W. 555.

2. Defendant enjoined from trafficking in liquors under her certificate pending determination of proceeding to revoke it. Laws 1896, c. 112, p. 69. Cullinan v. Sabating, 49 Misc. 442, 99 N. Y. S. 977.

3. Since under Laws 1905, p. 1862, c. 697, acts of superintendent of buildings in inspecting hotels and reporting whether they comply with laws and of state deputy commissioner of excise in revoking liquor tax certificate in case he reports that they do not, are not judicial in their nature and have no relation to judicial functions, they council of a city to revoke a license in a case where, upon complaint duly made, the facts requiring such revocation are established beyond dispute.[4] Whether or not the licensee is entitled to a return of any part of the license fee on the revocation of his license is to be determined by the provisions of the statute or ordinance under which it was issued.[5] Provision is sometimes made for the surrender of the license by the licensee and the return of a part of the license tax.[6]

§ 4. Regulation of traffic.[7]—The sale of liquor within a specified distance from any church[8] or state hospital[9] is sometimes prohibited. Provision is generally made for the granting of permits to pharmacists to sell intoxicants in places where the sale is otherwise prohibited.[10]

A club which is a mere subterfuge for the evasion of the liquor laws will be dissolved on a proper proceeding being instituted for that purpose.[11] The violation of regulations as a crime is treated in a subsequent section.[12] cannot be reviewed by certiorori. In re Leverant, 110 App. Div. 371, 97 N. Y. S. 272.

4. Certiorari not a complete and adequate remedy where council dismisses proceedings when it should have revoked license. State v. Curtis [Wis.] 110 N. W. 189.

5. County court made order revoking prohibition order and issued license to defendant. On appeal to circuit court, revocation order was set aside and original prohibition order declared to be in full force. Subsequently county court again revoked prohibition order on a new petition. Held that judgment of circuit court operated as a revocation of defendant's license, which was not reinstated by subsequent revocation of prohibition order, and, as he was not entitled to return of money paid therefor, county court had no power to credit him therewith and issue a new license to him without further payment of the tax prescribed by law, the payment of which is made a condition precedent to the granting of a license by Kirby's Dig. § 5122, and new license so issued was void. Alexander v. State, 77 Ark. 294, 91 S. W. 181. Ordinance providing that no portion of money paid for license should be refunded, held to preclude recovery of any portion of license fee by licensee whose license was rightfully revoked for causes specified in license and ordinances referred to therein, viz. the violation of ordinances. Anderson v. Galesburg, 118 Ill. App. 525.

6. Where, on application for cancellation of certificate, an order directing a reference was affirmed, held that subsequent order directing discontinuance of proceeding and surrender of certificate would be reversed where it did not appear that it was made by consent, or whether holder of certificate agreed to waive his right to a rebate or consented to order on understanding that he should be entitled to legal rebate. In re Faber, 101 N. Y. S. 429.

7. See 6 C. L. 183.

8. Transfer of license to location within 200 feet of church in which religious services were regularly conducted set aside. Henkel v. Hoy [N. J. Law] 64 A. 960. A building wherein certain persons meet periodically for Bible study and also for secular instruction in the tenets of a certain faith, also in part occupied as a dwelling, and also in part for storage purposes, is not a church within the meaning of P. L. 1905, c. 21, prohibiting the licensing of a saloon to be within 200 feet of a church. George v. Elizabeth Excise Com'rs [N. J. Law] 63 A. 870.

9. Laws 1897, p. 225, c. 312, prohibited trafficking in liquor within half mile of building or "premises" of any state hospital. Laws 1905, p. 145, c. 104, added words "or lands" after word "premises." Held that words "lands" and "premises" are synonymous, and it having been stipulated that previous to passage of latter act defendant had legally sold liquor at certain place, sale continued to be legal thereafter whether within half mile of buildings of hospital, or of contiguous land owned and used by it. In re Cullinan, 113 App. Div. 485, 99 N. Y. S. 974.

10. Granting of permit to pharmacist under Iowa Code is a judicial act reposed in district court and not a mere ministerial or administrative duty of the clerk. State v. Brown [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1011. Real permit is order of court granting it and not certificate issued by clerk pursuant to § 2392, and clerk executing such certificate has no right to change or modify order, and his act in so doing will not protect pharmacist. Id. Where order provided that permit was to continue three years, held that certificate containing no limitation as to time except that right to sell was to continue so long as defendant's certificate of registration as a pharmacist was in effect, or until permit was otherwise revoked, was no protection to defendant after three years. Id. Under Code, §§ 2387-2392, a particular description of place where liquor is to be sold in petition and notice of application, is essential to give court jurisdiction to grant a permit, nor has court power to grant permit to sell without specifying the particular place at which sales are to be made. Muncey v. Collins [Iowa] 106 N. W. 262.

11. On quo warranto by attorney general. State v. Meramec Rod & Gun Club [Mo. App.] 98 S. W. 815. State v. Rose Hill Pastime Athletic Club [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 978. Act Feb. 23, 1898, authorizing revocation of the charter of an incorporated social club which is being conducted in evasion of the laws with reference to the licensing and sale of liquors, is not repealed by act of April 16, 1903, or the act of May 21, 1903 (Acts 1902-4, c. 270). Eureka Club v. Com. [Va.] 54 S. E. 470.

Dispensary system.[13]—The operation of a dispensary for the sale of liquors is the exercise of a franchise, and the right to do so must be derived under authority granted by the state.[14] The manner of putting the system in force[15] and of choosing a dispenser[16] is governed by statute. The prescribed method of appropriating the proceeds of a dispensary does not give the designated beneficiaries a vested right, and hence may be changed by the legislature at any time.[17] Persons acting as dispensary commissioners under color of a law subsequently declared unconstitutional are not personally liable for liquor purchased by them in that capacity.[18]

§ 5. Action for penalties.[19]—Statutes sometimes provide for civil actions in the name of the state to recover penalties for the violation of municipal ordinances regulating the sale of intoxicants.[20]

The sum named in a bond running to the state and conditioned on the adherence by the licensee to the terms of his license and the statute under which it is granted will ordinarily be treated as liquidated damages and not as a penalty.[21] Where the purpose of giving the state a civil action on the bond for the violation of the statutes relating to the sale of intoxicants is compensation and not punishment, the prior conviction of the licensee is not essential to the maintenance of the suit, and his previous acquittal is not a defense;[22] but the determination of the proper authorities, in a proceeding to cancel his license, that he has violated the law, he having had notice and an opportunity to be heard, is res adjudicata in an action on the bond, both as to him and his sureties.[23]

§ 6. Criminal prosecutions. A. Offenses and responsibility therefor in general.[24]—The selling,[25] giving away,[26] or procuring for another,[27] of intoxicating

12. See § 6, post.

13. See 6 C. L. 183.

14. City of Uniontown v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 814. Hence quo warranto will lie against municipal corporation which usurps exercise of such a franchise, it being a person within meaning of Code 1896, § 3420, relating to quo warranto. Id. Notice of intention to apply for enactment of Local Acts 1903, p. 5, establishing liquor dispensary in certain city, held to sufficiently indicate substance of proposed law to satisfy requirements of Const. § 106. Id. An act authorizing the establishment of dispensaries in the "towns" of a county authorizes the establishment in a city of such county. City of Smithville v. Lee County Dispensary Com'rs, 125 Ga. 559, 54 S. E. 539.

15. Statutory provisions relating to notice of elections on question of establishment of dispensaries must be complied with. Croxton v. Truesdel [S. C.] 56 S. E. 45.

16. Mayor of a town cannot maintain mandamus proceedings to compel establishment of a dispensary therein, since under Gen. Acts 1898-99, p. 110, such right is one which must be enforced in name of town. Rose v. Lampley [Ala.] 41 So. 521.

17. Dispensary established by a town is not a contract but a privilege, and legislature may at any time it sees fit use the proceeds for any purpose it chooses. Crocker v. Moore, 140 N. C. 429, 53 S. E. 229.

18. Mistake is one of law, and both parties have equal opportunity to know that law is invalid, there being no fraud or misrepresentations and defendants not having promised to pay for liquor. Schloss v. McIntyre [Ala.] 41 So. 11.

19. See 6 C. L. 187.

20. Action under 2 Mills' Ann. St. § 4433, held a civil action, so that defects consisting of fact that it was brought in name of people of state to use of certain town instead of in name of people, and that it was not alleged to whom illegal sales charged therein were made, were cured by trial to the merits. Creighton v. People [Colo.] 83 P. 1057. Defects held harmless in any event, there being no surprise and defendant not being deprived of any defense, and the judgment having appropriated the recovery to the use provided by Id. § 4435. Id.

21. It being practically impossible to ascertain damages resulting to state from breach. State v. Corron, 73 N. H. 434, 62 A. 1044.

22. Acquittal in criminal prosecution for selling liquor to habitual drunkard held no defense. State v. Corron, 73 N. H. 434, 62 A. 1044.

23. Determination of excise commissioners. State v. Corron, 73 N. H. 434, 62 A. 1044.

24. See 6 C. L. 188.

25. One purchasing for himself or another does not violate law against selling. Hiers v. State [Fla.] 41 So. 881. Fact that defendant assisted in collecting money to pay charges on whiskey shipped to third person C. O. D. and which was divided among those contributing held not to make him the seller of the same. Hilterbrand v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 91 S. W. 587. Defendant stated to another that latter could have some liquor, which such other stated was in express office addressed to defendant if he could get it, and such other thereupon forged defend-liquors[28] without a license[29] or in violation of local option[30] or other prohibitory ant's name to an order and paid C. O. D. charges and got liquor. Defendant did not own the whiskey and had not ordered it shipped to him. Held no sale by defendant. Boyd v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 404, 92 S. W. 845. State alleging sale must show beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant either delivered whiskey or placed it where the purchaser could get it, or received money for it, where it appears purchaser took it from a place on the premises where he found it. Isom v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 431, 95 S. W. 518. Evidence that defendant owned whiskey which was in a wagon and that another person took some of it and left some money under wagon, not showing that defendant got money or that there was any previous agreement between parties that sale should be made in that manner, held insufficient to show sale. Lane v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 882, 92 S. W. 839. Sale is not complete if there is anything left to be done by seller, and hence soliciting order in local option territory and accepting payment therefor, liquor to be shipped from outside point, does not alone constitute a sale, it not being proven the liquor was set apart or shipped. Commonwealth v. McDermott, 29 Ky. L. R. 752, 96 S. W. 475. Consignee of C. O. D. express package who gives order to another, who pays charges and takes liquor, is guilty of making sale. Bennett v. State, 87 Miss. 803, 40 So. 554; Jackson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 572, 91 S. W. 574; McNeely v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 516, 92 S. W. 419; Caton v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 95 S. W. 540; McElroy v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 424, 95 S. W. 539; Parks v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 96 S. W. 328. Consignee of C. O. D. package, who in local option district receives from another part of money with which to pay charges and in consideration thereof delivers part of whiskey to him, is guilty of making sale. Hutchinson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 90 S. W. 178.

Place of sale: Where liquors are ordered from a point outside local option district and order is accepted there by vendor and goods shipped to purchaser, carrier is agent of the purchaser and sale is deemed to have been made at place of shipment; but if seller keeps an agent in district, who takes orders and transmits them and collects pay and attends to returning empty bottles, principal is guilty of violation of the law. George Wiedmann Brew. Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 96 S. W. 834. Where one within local option district orders liquor from one without and latter consigns it to him by express, delivering it to express company at point outside local option territory, seller extending credit to purchaser, sale is not within local option territory. McDermott v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 750, 96 S. W. 474. Evidence that defendant had whiskey in the local option territory, that another applied to him to purchase a specified quantity, that defendant took such whiskey and with prospective purchaser went out of local option district and there delivered it and received price, shows a sale in local option territory. Merritt v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 184, 92 S. W. 911. Where agent in local option territory takes order subject to acceptance by his principal outside of such territory, and under agreement that if accepted liquor was to become property of purchaser when delivered to carrier for transportation to him and that carrier was to be his agent, held that there is no sale in local option territory, though order is accepted and liquor delivered. Ex parte Massey [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 706, 92 S. W. 1086. Order for liquor given to dealer outside local option district and shipment by him to purchaser within district by express, express company to collect price and express charges, is not sale in district. Hirsch v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 96 S. W. 40. Where agent of liquor dealer ships liquor to person in local option territory which was not ordered by consignee and express agent in the local option territory delivers it to the consignee and collects the C. O. D. charges and turns them over to agent of consignor, agent shipping liquor is guilty of a sale in local option territory. Weil v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 90 S. W. 644. Where defendant conducted licensed saloon in S. county and there filled orders for liquor transmitted to him from C. county over the telephone, and it did not appear where delivery was to be made, held that sales were made in S. county, it being presumed that delivery was to be made there, and defendant neither sold nor contracted to sell liquor in C. county though he paid rent of telephone and placed it at the disposal of the public. Moore v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 327. Telephone Company in such case is the agent of the purchaser. Id. Evidence held to show that sale was made in the county and state when the prosecution was had. State v. Gilson, 114 Mo. App. 652, 90 S. W. 400. Under a license to sell liquors, a dealer may ship it by a carrier or by his own conveyance to customers beyond the county in which he is licensed on orders received in the regular course of business, or on orders obtained outside the county through a solicitor, the sale in such case being regarded as made at the dealer's place of business, though the price is to be collected by the carrier on delivery. Commonwealth v. Guja, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 58. But when a dealer's agent takes orders in another county and fills them by delivering liquor furnished him by his employer in the county in which the latter is licensed, the sale is regarded as being made in the county where the order is taken and the liquor delivered and is in violation of law. Id. Sale held made by defendant with whom purchasers dealt solely, and to whom beer was shipped, though cases, etc., were labeled by brewery with customers' names. Id.

Consideration: Evidence that alleged purchaser gave to defendant, in exchange for liquor, metal checks with words 50 cents stamped thereon and that such checks were redeemable in money, is sufficient to show a sale. Duke v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 170. Word "sale" as used in Act Feb. 26, 1877 (Acts 1877, p. 335), prohibiting sale on certain island, is to be construed in the sense of any contract for the transfer thereof from one person to another for a valuable consideration, it not being essential that the transfer should be for a money consideration. James v. State, 124 Ga. 72, 52 S. E. 295. Where one gives liquor to another on his promise to pay for it at some future time, either in money or property, there is a sale, though purchaser has failed to pay as promised. Cook v. State, 124 Ga. 653, 53 S. E. 104. Is not necessary to conviction to show that defendant made any profit on sale. Oxford v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 303, 97 S. W. 484; Polk v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 302, 97 S. W. 467.

laws,[31] or keeping the same for sale in violation of law,[32] the soliciting of orders,[33]

Sales through employes or agents: Where one is sought to be convicted for a sale made by his employe, it must be shown that the latter was acting for him and with his consent or at his direction. Evidence held insufficient to connect defendant with sale. Sweeney v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 262, 91 S. W. 575. Evidence held to justify finding that clerk was authorized to make sales in question. State v. Sederstrom [Minn.] 109 N. W. 113. Proof of sale by defendant's wife will not support conviction, where there is no other evidence that she was acting for him, and he testifies that he did not authorize her to make sales and had forbidden her to do so. Bailey v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 105, 92 S. W. 545. One selling through agent is guilty of making sale, though he has no personal knowledge of particular sale charged. McGovern v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 369, 90 S. W. 502. Defendant may be found guilty on proof that sale was made for him by an agent and with his connivance. Morgan v. Com. [Ky.] 97 S. W. 411. A party can sell through an agent, or an agent can assist the principal in making the sale, in violation of the local option law, and both may be guilty. Fields v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 815, 98 S. W. 867.

Liability of agents: One may be convicted of making sale of liquor not belonging to him. Polk v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 302, 97 S. W. 467; Owens v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 685, 96 S. W. 31. Where one other than consignee of an express package impersonates consignee and signs for it and pays charges and then delivers it to another, he may be found guilty of making a sale. Ingram v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 856, 90 S. W. 1098. Agent selling in violation of law, though he acts without compensation. Hiers v. State [Fla.] 41 So. 881. Agent who with others consumes liquor belonging to his principal pursuant to an agreement by them to pay him their proportion of its value for the purpose of compensating owner, and receives money therefor, makes sale. Nixon v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 315, 97 S. W. 703. Where dealer outside state ships whiskey C. O. D. by express to one who has not ordered it and who does not know the consignor, and then notifies him of the fact, and he obtains same from express company on payment of charges, held that company is guilty of making sale. Adams Exp. Co. v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 224, 92 S. W. 932; Id., 29 Ky. L. R. 947, 96 S. W. 1104. Where agent of express company delivers liquor to one to whom it has been shipped by dealer outside of local option territory and collects C. O. D. charges thereon, there is a presumption of sale by company, and burden is on it to show that it was ordered by consignee, and hence that it was acting as agent for purchaser. American Exp. Co. v. Com. [Ky.] 97 S. W. 807.

Agent of purchaser not liable: One who merely acts as agent for another in procuring liquor and paying therefor cannot be convicted of making a sale. Mitchell v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 951; Hiers v. State [Fla.] 41 So. 881; Golightly v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 591, 90 S. W. 26; Dupree v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 91 S. W. 578; Givens v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 361, 91 S. W. 1090; Winslow v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 98 S. W. 241. Where evidence showed that F. agreed to chip in to pay for whiskey which had been shipped C. O. D. to third persons, and gave defendant money to pay for quart, and that defendant procured same from such persons and delivered it to F, held that defendant was F's agent. Short v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 312, 91 S. W. 1087. Rule is otherwise where it appears that the simulated agency is merely a subterfuge to cover a sale by the defendant. Smith v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 499. Question whether defendant acted for seller or purchaser is for the jury. Reynolds v. State [Fla.] 42 So. 373. Where evidence shows that defendant received money from another, who requested defendant to procure him some liquor and shortly thereafter defendant delivered to the other some liquor, burden is on defendant to show that he was acting as agent for purchaser, and, in absence of any evidence that he was acting as buyer's agent, jury would be authorized to find that sale was made by defendant. Gaskins v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 1045.

Evidence held to show sale in violation of the local option law. Young v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 90 S. W. 1017; Renfro v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 91 S. W. 576; Roberson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 264, 91 S. W. 578; Hays v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 91 S. W. 585; O'Neal v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 548, 92 S. W. 417; Oxford v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 229, 94 S. W. 463; Teasley v. State, 124 Ga. 794, 53 S. E. 102; Hestand v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 1315, 92 S. W. 12. Evidence that witness signed order for whiskey in drug store and immediately received and paid for it. Brunson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 91 S. W. 582. That transaction was sale and not a loan. Choran v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 508, 92 S. W. 422. Where prosecutor had paid money and whiskey had been delivered to him by defendant, held that title had passed and sale was complete. Smith v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 91 S. W. 592.

26. A simple gift of liquor to others than minors is not unlawful, Code, § 2382, making gifts illegal only when their purpose is to evade law by subterfuge or indirect dealing intended to conceal unlawful sales. State v. Bernstein, 129 Iowa, 520, 105 N. W. 1015 Hence, giving away of samples in soliciting the keeping of a liquor nuisance,[34] or the violation of the laws relating to the keep-legitimate orders is not unlawful. Id. Where traveling salesman for liquor house gave away samples of his goods, about a teaspoonful in each instance, in "dry" territory for the purpose of being tasted by prospective customers, held that he was guilty of giving away intoxicating liquor as a beverage. Capple v. Ohio, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 339. Gift is not a violation of Texas local option statute. Chenowith v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 695, 96 S. W. 19.

27. Where defendant bought beer with fund contributed by himself and another and when it arrived latter took his share, held that defendant was not guilty of procuring malt liquor for another in violation of Acts 1883-84, p. 1116, c. 598, he having no interest in beer or its sale either as principal or as agent of the seller. Ball v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 1344, 91 S. W. 1123.

28. Definition of intoxicating liquor in charge held not sufficiently accurate. Thompson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 175, 97 S. W. 316. Is a liquor "intended for use as a beverage or capable of being so used, which contains alcohol either obtained by fermentation or distillation, in such proportion that it will produce intoxication when taken in such quantities as may practically be drunk." Walker v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 385, 98 S. W. 265. Must be of sufficient alcoholic body to produce intoxication if drunk in reasonable quantities. Potts v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 477. Intoxicating properties of liquids do not depend on name used, or name under which they are sold, but the test is whether such liquid drank in reasonable quantities, such as the stomach will hold, will make drunk or intoxicate. James v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 881, 91 S. W. 227. Evidence held to show that liquid known as "Frosty" was an intoxicant. Id. Evidence held insufficient to show that "Frosty" sold by defendant, was intoxicating. Bird v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 322, 91 S. W. 791. Evidence held to sustain finding that beverage was intoxicating. State v. Sederstrom [Minn.] 109 N. W. 113; Steinkuhler v. State [Neb.] 109 N. W. 395. Is immaterial whether liquors, declared by Rev. St. c. 40, § 29, to be intoxicating, are so in fact. State v. Frederickson, 101 Me. 37, 63 A. 535. Statute does not violate state or Federal constitution. Id.

29. Intoxicating liquor cannot be sold for any purpose without a license. Stelle v. State, 77 Ark. 441, 92 S. W. 530. Evidence showing that "Peruna" is intoxicating, that it was used as a beverage, and that defendand sold it without a license, held to warrant a conviction, even though he sold it thinking in good faith that it was to be used as a medicine. Id. Under Kirby's Dig. §§ 5140-5141, it is sufficient to convict defendant of keepinig a blind tiger if the proof shows that he had control of the premises at the time of the unlawful sale, and it is not necessary that his control should have been habitual or permanent. Henry v. State, 77 Ark. 453, 92 S. W. 405. Ordinance prohibiting sale without license held applicable to bona fide restaurant keeper who sold liquors only to customers to be served with meals, and drunk on premises. Scanlon v. Denver [Colo.] 88 P. 156. Held that ordinance prohibited druggist, who was also a physician, and who did not have a permit, from selling liquor to one representing that he wanted it for medicinal purposes. Braisted v. People [Colo.] 88 P. 150. Ordinance held to apply to grocer who sold in packages, the contents not to be drunk on the premises. City of Chicago v. Slack, 121 Ill. App. 131. Provision of Act No. 171, p. 414, § 13, of 1898, are broad enough to cover any place or establishment where intoxicants are sold to be drunk on the premises including sales to boarders and visitors. State v. White, 115 La. 779, 40 So. 44. Right to sell intoxicating liquors is not a natural privilege, but is a calling which no one has right to pursue without first obtaining a license or permit from the proper authorities, and hence the sale of liquors without a license is unlawful, even in the absence of a statute so declaring. State v. Ingram, 118 Mo. App. 323, 94 S. W. 790. Druggists may be prosecuted for a violation of the dram shop act, though they have a merchant's license. State v. Heibel, 116 Mo. App. 43, 90 S. W. 758. Sale after surrender of certificate for cancellation and rebate pursuant to Laws 1896, p. 67, c. 112, § 25, is violation of Id. § 31, p. 73, prohibiting sale by any person who has not paid tax and obtained and posted certificate. Cullinan v. Garfinkle, 99 N. Y. S. 1119. Proprietor of billiard hall who had no certificate and whose employes took orders for liquor and filled same by procuring liquor from licensed bar in same building without extra charge for service, and without informing purchasers of the facts, held to have thereby violated § 31. Id. Where ordinance provided that no person should sell liquors "in less quantities than a gallon" without having obtained a license, and in subsequent section provided for punishment of person selling liquors without having obtained license, held that words quoted were necessarily incorporated in last section, and hence no offense was committed by selling more than gallon in same transaction. Wong Sing v. Independence, 47 Or. 231, 83 P. 387. Acts 1899, p. 309, c. 161, making it an offense to sell without a license, held not repealed by Acts 1899, p. 1051, c. 432, § 15, designed to raise revenue which prohibits the carrying on of certain businesses or occupations, including saloon business, without a license, since two are not inconsistent. McCampbell v. State [Tenn.] 93 S. W. 100.

30. Evidence that the liquor sold was mixed with another substance so that it was suitable for use as a medicine, but not as a beverage, does not show a violation of the law. Kincaid v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 92 S. W. 415. Where statement of facts on appeal did not show that local option law was in force in county, held that conviction could not be sustained. Young v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 91 S. W. 589. Evidence held insufficient to connect defendant with sale. Randell v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 308, 90 S. W. 1012.

31. Act Dec. 12, 1882 (Acts 1882-83, p. 234), ing and storing of liquor[35] in territory where the sale of intoxicants is prohibited, the sale of liquor within a certain distance of any school[36] or church,[37] the giving[38] or selling of liquor to minors[39] or intoxicated persons,[40] its sale[41] or the keep-prohibiting sale of vinous, spirituous, or malt liquors in Wilcox County, is valid to that extent though unconstitutional in other particulars. Davis v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 663. Word "Sale" in the title of Act Feb. 26, 1877 (Acts 1877, p. 335), is sufficient to support a provision prohibiting the "bartering" for liquor, and word "prohibit" to authorize a provision for the imposition of a penalty on one who makes a sale in violation of the prohibition. James v. State, 124 Ga. 72, 52 S. E. 295. Title of Laws 1901, p. 416, c. 232, "An act relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors," is broad enough to cover the prohibition of unlawful sales. State v. Kleinfield, 72 Kan 674, 83 P. 831. Each sale constitutes a separate offense though made to the same party within a short space of time. State v. Bursaw [Kan.] 87 P. 183.

32. Evidence held to justify finding that liquors belonged to, and were kept by, defendant with intent and for purpose of unlawfully selling them. Steinkuhler v. State [Neb.] 109 N. W. 395. One having control of liquors may be convicted though they are owned by another. State v. Suiter, 78 Vt. 391, 63 A. 182. Is not necessary to a conviction to show that defendant had ever made any sales. Id.

33. Code 1896, § 5087, held void as interfering with interstate commerce in so far as it applies to residents of another state who solicit orders for liquors to be shipped from outside state. Moog v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 166. Kirby's Dig. § 5133, does not make it an offense to advertise whiskey in paper published in prescribed territory. Carter v. State [Ark.] 98 S. W. 704. Where defendant conducted licensed saloon in S. County and there filled orders transmitted to him over the telephone from C. County, in which sale of intoxicants was prohibited, held that he did not thereby violate Pen. Code 1895, § 428, as amended by Act Dec. 9, 1897 (Acts 1897, p. 39), forbidding any person to "sell, contract to sell, take orders for, or solicit personally or by agent," the sale of intoxicants in any county where sale is prohibited, though he paid rent of telephone in C. county over which orders were transmitted and placed it at disposal of the public, it not appearing where deliveries were to be made. Moore v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 327. Laws 1905, p. 379, c. 159, held unconstitutional as in excess of power conferred on legislature by Const. art. 16, § 20. (Ex parte Massey [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 706, 92 S. W. 1086), and also as violating commerce clause of Federal constitution (Id.). Evidence held insufficient to show soliciting of order in local option district. Bruce v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 92 S. W. 1092. Evidence held to sustain a conviction. Graves v. State [Ga.] 56 S. E. 72.

34. Instruction that accused would be guilty if it was found that illegal sales were made by his clerk held proper in view of Code, § 2401. State v. O'Malley [Iowa] 109 N W. 491. On a charge of keeping and maintaining a liquor nuisance, proof of actual sales is unnecessary. State v. De Moss [Kan.] 85 P. 937. Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction. Id. The enumeration of liquors declared to be intoxicating, contained in Rev. St. Me. c. 29, § 40, is an enumeration of "intoxicating liquors" as used in Rev. St. Me. c. 22, § 1, and hence a place where any of the liquors named in c. 29 are sold is a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors and constitutes a nuisance. State v. Frederickson, 101 Me. 37, 63 A. 535. The maintenance of an unlicensed saloon is not a "public nuisance" as defined by Rev. St. Mo. 1899, § 2239, unless it annoys or injures a portion of the inhabitants of the state. State v. Ingram, 118 Mo. App. 323, 94 S. W. 790.

35. Gen. Laws 29th Leg. p. 91, c. 64, regulating occupation of keeping or storing liquor in local option territory, and prohibiting liquor so stored from being drunk on premises, held not unconstitutional as beyond power conferred on legislature by Const. art. 16, § 20 (Ex parte Massey [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 703, 92 S. W. 1083), or as being a local or special law (Id.), or as denying citizens the equal protection of the laws (Id.).

36. Local Acts Mich. 1905, p. 1157, held not to violate state or Federal constitution. White v. Bracelin, 144 Mich. 322, 13 Det. Leg. N. 156, 107 N. W. 1055. Acts 1901, c. 360, created a new corporation for the inhabitants and territory of South Pittsburg, so that Laws 1899, c. 221, prohibiting the sale of liquor within four miles of any school house in any town thereafter incorporated, became applicable thereto. Erwin v. State [Tenn.] 93 S. W. 73.

37. Act March 8, 1879 (Acts 1879, p. 33), as amended by Act March 26, 1883 (Acts 1883, p. 192), and Act March 21, 1881 (Acts 1881, p. 140), as amended by Act Feb. 20, 1883 (Acts 1883, p. 53), when construed together held to prohibit manufacturers of whiskey from selling same within three miles of any church or educational institution. Salmon v. State [Ark.] 98 S. W. 702.

38. Gen. St. 1901, § 2481, when construed in connection with other provisions of prohibitory law, held to have reference only to gifts properly so called, so that conviction upon information drawn thereunder cannot be sustained by proof of sale to minor. State v. Fletcher [Kan.] 87 P. 729. Under Code 1899, c. 32, § 16, providing that if any person, except a parent to his child, gives liquor to a minor, he shall be guilty, etc., one who in the presence of the father of a minor and with the father's consent allows the minor to drink liquor belonging to him is not guilty of giving liquor to the minor. State v. Hammons [W. Va.] 53 S. E. 630.

39. Sale to a minor, whether notice be given or not, is prohibited by Rev. Laws 1905, and violation thereof is made a public offense. §§ 1534, 1519, 1521, construed. State v. Stroschein [Minn.] 109 N. W. 235. Fact that greater penalty may be imposed under § 1519 where no notice is given, than under ing open of places where it is sold on certain days,[42] or at certain hours,[43] permit-

§ 1559 when notice is given, does not indicate intention to abolish offense of selling to minors where no notice is given. Id. Penalty provided by Rev. Laws 1905, § 1519, applies to violations of § 1534, prohibiting sales to minors, etc. Id. Immaterial under Rev. Laws 1905, § 1534, for what purpose liquor was sold to minor, and hence allegation that it was to be drunk on the premises is unnecessary. Id. Laws 1903, p. 88, c. 95, § 15, as amended by Laws 1905, p. 450, c. 49, § 9, prohibiting sale, delivery, or giving away of liquor to certain classes of persons, applies only to licensees. State v. Langdon [N. H.] 64 A. 1099. An employer of a minor is not a person having the "management and control" of the minor, so as to authorize the employer to give permission for the sale of liquor to the minor so as to exempt the seller from prosecution for selling to a minor. Tony v. State, 144 Ala. 87, 40 So. 388. Proof that sale was made to person under twenty-one years of age makes out a prima facie case for state, and conceding that marriage of person to whom sale was made would remove bar of prohibition of sale, it was incumbent on defendant to show that such person was married. State v. Mulhern [Iowa] 106 N. W. 267. Holder of a permit for sale of liquors must, before filing a request for liquor presented by a person unknown to him, require an identification of persons presenting request by some person known to seller that purchaser is not a minor, and such identification is required in each instance that a sale is made, an identification on the occasion of a previous sale being insufficient. Id. Where minor was sent to procure beer for third person who furnished ticket to pay for it and defendant knew that fact when he sold it, held that there was not a sale to a minor within Pen. Code, § 290, subd. 3. People v. Hartstein, 49 Misc. 336, 99 N. Y. S. 272. Where liquor is delivered to a minor who is acting as agent for an adult, and it is in fact delivered to and consumed by the adult, and it is known to seller that it is intended so to be consumed, there is no sale to minor, but if the agency is not known to seller it is sale to minor, as is the case where sale is made under belief that it is for an adult, when in fact it was for minor's own use. In re MacRae [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1020. In a prosecution for selling to a minor, evidence of a sale to a minor of a bottle of whiskey which he carried to another of full age for whom he had purchased it, the minor not having disclosed to defendant that he was acting for another, will sustain a conviction. Tony v. State, 144 Ala. 87, 40 So. 388. Evidence by one who purchased for another that he asked for whiskey, and paid for whiskey, is sufficient to sustain a conviction for selling whiskey, though the bottle was wrapped so that witness could not see the contents. Id. Defendant at the request of a minor ordered beer for him from a dealer. Beer was shipped C. O. D. by dealer to minor who took it from carrier and paid charges thereon and put it in defendant's cold-storage warehouse, and got beer and drank it at various times, and paid defendant for storing it. Held neither a sale nor a gift by defendant to a minor. Potts v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 92, 96 S. W. 1084. Where defendant and another contributed money for purchase of liquor and when it came defendant procured it from the express office and gave the other the amount for which he paid, held that there was no sale by defendant. Dean v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 314, 92 S. W. 38. Owner may be convicted though sale was made by his bartender without his knowledge or consent and against his direction. State v. Constatine [Wash.] 86 P. 384.

40. Intoxication, within meaning of Code 1906, § 928, is such a mental condition, due to the use of liquor, as attracts the observation of, or becomes known to others, or gives them reason to believe the person is intoxicated. State v. Nethken [W. Va.] 55 S. E. 742. State must prove as a part of its case that defendant is a licensed seller. Id.

41. Election day: Word "day" as used in election law, § 79, means whole day of 24 hours on which election is held, without regard to hours during which polls are required to be open. Aimo v. People, 122 Ill. App. 398.

Sunday: Const. § 61, providing that the legislature shall provide a law whereby the voters of various municipal subdivisions of the state may determine whether liquor may be sold therein, does not deprive the legislature of power to regulate the sale of liquor in municipalities which have not voted under the local option law, and hence it can prohibit sales on Sunday. Commonwealth v. McCann, 29 Ky. L. R. 707, 94 S. W. 645. Fact that St. 1903, § 1303, makes keeping of a saloon open on Sunday and the making of a sale on that day separate offenses, and also makes each separate sale an offense for which prosecution may be instituted, does not render it unconstitutional. Id. Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 27, § 385, making it an offense to sell liquor on Sunday anywhere in the state, held not repealed by Acts 1886, c. 383, p. 615, prohibiting sale in Anne Arundel County with certain exceptions. Flood v. State, 103 Md. 692, 63 A. 684. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 5508, giving to cities of second class exclusive power to restrain, regulate, tax, or suppress dramshops, the enactment of an ordinance granting permission for the sale on Sunday of intoxicating liquors supersedes and suspends, in such city, the operation of Rev. St. 1899, § 3011, prohibiting such sales. State v. Kessels, 120 Mo. App. 233, 96 S. W. 494. Evidence that the sale was made by the defendant's barkeeper shows presumptively authority, and consent of the defendant. City of Liberty v. Moran [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 948. The manager of a saloon, who was present in the saloon and saw certain persons employed as bartenders selling liquor, is privileged from answering questions in regard to such facts before a grand jury on the ground that his answers would incriminate him, since he must have been equally guilty. Ex parte Merrell [Tex. Cr. App.] 95 S. W. 1047.

Legal holidays: Under Laws 1905, c. 169, § 579, it is unlawful to sell intoxicating ting persons other than the proprietor and members of his family in the room where liquor is sold during the hours when its sale is prohibited,[44] and the failure to so arrange doors and windows that an unobstructed view of the interior of the room may be had at such times,[45] or at all times,[46] permitting music in saloons,[47] permitting women to remain in saloons or to drink therein,[48] and the taking of intoxiliquors on Labor Day, it being made a legal holiday by Acts 1905, p. 196, c. 118. State v. Shelton [Ind. App.] 77 N. E. 1052.

42. Election day: One may be convicted of violating St. 1903, § 2565, where he opened the storeroom where the liquor was usually kept for sale though he did not attempt or intend to make any sales, nor is it material that he keeps other kinds of goods for sale in the room so opened. Mallon v. Com. [Ky.] 98 S. W. 315. Evidence that the chief executive officers of the city had told defendant that he could keep his saloon open, provided he closed the front door, held inadmissible, since law prohibits the keeping the saloon open and it is an offense irrespective of whether defendant acts willfully in so doing. Cranfill v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 404, 92 S. W. 846.

Sunday: Ordinance prohibiting saloons from being opened on Sunday, from being lighted in the evening of Sundays, from maintaining screens or curtains, etc., held not ultra vires the powers conferred by Act April 8, 1902, on excise commissioners, nor void as being unreasonable. Croker v. Camden Excise Com'rs [N. J. Law] 63 A. 901. Excise commissioners are in no sense a department or committee of city council, and hence charter provisions relative to publication of city ordinances have no application to ordinances of such commission. Derive their power direct from the legislature. Id. Sunday law held not to contravene local option section of constitution. Bennett v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 515, 92 S. W. 415.

43. One who took liquor from his saloon into an adjoining restaurant and there gave it to one who had previously solicited a sale to him, held to have violated ordinance prohibiting "selling or disposing" of liquors during certain hours. City of Jerseyville v. Becker, 117 Ill. App. 86. Prohibiting saloonkeeper from keeping place open from 12 o'clock midnight until 6 a. m. and on Sunday does not deprive him of his property without due process of law. State v. Calloway, 11 Idaho, 719, 84 P. 27. Ordinance held merely a restraint upon the business and a regulation thereof and in no wise to contemplate its destruction. Id. One who locks door of his saloon at ten o'clock and thereafter remains therein, even for a short time, for the purpose of counting up his cash, is guilty of violating Code, § 2448, par. 9, prohibiting keeping open of saloon after that hour. Lingelbach v. Hobson, 130 Iowa, 488, 107 N. W. 168.

44. Such a provision held reasonable and valid, and not repugnant to general laws of the state. State v. Calloway, 11 Idaho, 719, 84 P. 27. Purpose for which person is admitted during prohibited hours is immaterial. Id. Ordinance being equally applicable to all dealers in intoxicating liquors, and the classification being natural, practical, and reasonable, it is not invalid as class legislation. Id. Not rendered invalid because wholesale dealers are classed with retail ones. Id. Object of ordinance held to be to prohibit sale during specified hours. Id. Title of ordinance held to express its object and purpose and to be sufficiently comprehensive to include all its provisions. Id. Does not abridge privileges and immunities of citizens, right to sell liquor at retail not being inherent right of citizens. Id. Where defendant's saloon was open on Sunday and both he and his bartender were there, and customer came in and bought beer, held that he was properly convicted of admitting to room where liquors were sold persons other than members of his family on Sunday, though he did not personally escort customer into the room. People v. Rand, 100 N. Y. S. 174.

45. Burns' Rev. St. § 7283, requiring that places where liquors are sold shall have doors and windows so that a view of the interior may be had on days when the sale of liquor is prohibited, has no application to a cold-storage warehouse from which the manufacturer sells to retailers. Teegarden v. State [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 211. In a prosecution for not removing screens and curtains so as to give a view of the interior of a saloon on Sunday, instruction that the screens and curtains need not be entirely removed, if their arrangement permitted a fair view of the interior, held not erroneous. People v. Smith [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 714, 108 N. W. 1072. Legislature has power to impose restrictions on one class of liquor dealers which it does not impose on others, such as requiring them to remove all obstructions to a view of their places of business, where such restriction applies to all dealers similarly situated, and they are classified with some regard to the differences in the conditions under which the sales are to be made. Meehan v. Jersey City Excise. Com'rs [N. J. Law] 64 A. 689.

46. Under Comp. St. c. 50, § 29, obstructions to view of interior of saloon, no matter where placed, whether at windows or doors or some distance from them, are unlawful. In re MacRae [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1020.

47. Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 7283b, providing that "no devices for amusements or music of any kind or character" shall be permitted in room where liquor is sold, does not make it unlawful to keep a music box in such room where it is not used to furnish music or amusement. Collins v. State [Ind. App.] 78 N. E. 851.

48. Ordinance prohibiting women from going into a saloon or from drinking therein, providing that it shall be a defense to show that female was of good repute and at the time sober and had consent of guardian, parent, or husband, to go there, held not unreasonable or oppressive. Commonwealth v. Price, 29 Ky. L. R. 593, 94 S. W. 32. Cities of the third class held to have no cants into polling places,[49] are frequently made criminal offenses. The sale or furnishing of liquor to another in Indian Territory is absolutely prohibited.[50]

Wholesalers[51] and manufacturers[52] and druggists making sales for medicinal purposes[53] are sometimes exempted from the operation of the license laws, and manufacturers[54] and bona fide clubs[55] from the operation of the local option or prohibition laws. Druggists are sometimes prohibited from making sales except upon a physician's prescription,[56] or on the affidavit of the purchaser that the liquor is to be used for medicinal purposes,[57] or to sell liquor to be drunk on the premises.[58] power to enact an ordinance prohibiting the sale, by a licensed dramshop keeper, of liquor to women. City of Joplin v. Jacobs, 119 Mo. App. 134, 96 S. W. 219.

49. Provision in an act entitled "An Act to Regulate Elections," prohibiting taking intoxicating liquors into a polling place, held not unconstitutional as not being within the purview of the title of the act. State v. Johnson [N. J. Law] 63 A. 12.

50. One who solicits order in Indian Territory and sends it to dealer out of territory who accepts it and ships the liquor into territory where price is collected by agent who took order is guilty of making a sale within the purview of the Act of Congress. Taylor v. U. S. [Ind. T.] 98 S. W. 123.

51. Statute prohibiting sale without a license, and providing that its provisions shall not apply to "any person engaged in any business as a wholesale dealer who does not sell in less quantities than four gallons at a time," does not prohibit sale by an unlicensed dealer to a consumer of liquors in quantities of four gallons or more. State v. Bock [Ind.] 79 N. E. 493.

52. Ordinance prohibiting keeping liquors for sale, not excepting from its operations domestic wines, which may under the state laws be lawfully sold, held invalid. Duren v. Stephens [Ga.] 54 S. E. 1045. Tex. Rev. Civ. St. 1895, art. 5060i, providing that provisions of previous sections requiring liquor dealers to procure license, give bond, and pay tax, shall not apply to wines produced from grapes grown in the state while in hands of producers or manufacturers thereof, held not unconstitutional as denying the equal protection of the laws (Cox v. State, 202 U. S. 446, 50 Law. Ed. 1099), or as abridging the privileges or immunities of citizens (Id.). Acts 1902, p. 98, No. 90, § 21, permitting sale, without a license, of wine and cider manufactured within the state, while prohibiting sale of same products manufactured in another state without a license, held in contravention of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution guaranteeing the equal protection of the laws. State v. Hazelton, 78 Vt. 467, 63 A. 305. Statute is not void throughout, but exceptions will be extended to all manufacturers. Id.

53. The presumption is that every intoxicating liquor sold without a license is in violation of law, but a druggist selling a medicine possessing intoxicating qualities, if taken in sufficient quantities, is not guilty of selling without a license unless it is shown that he sold it to be drunk as a beverage and not as medicine. Goode v. State, 87 Miss. 495, 40 So. 12. Words quoted in Crimes Act N. J. 1898, § 66, prohibiting sale of liquor without a license "except such as shall be compounded and intended to be used as a medicine," held to relate only to the compositions mentioned in such section, and hence druggists selling whiskey violates act, though he intends it to be used as medicine. State v. Terry [N. J. Err. & App.] 64 A. 113.

54. Under Acts Ky. 1904, c. 76, only manufacturers manufacturing in a local option district are exempted from the prohibition of sales and even then their sales must be in quantities of five gallons or more and their own manufacture, manufacturers without such district being prohibited from selling their own manufacture therein in any quantity. New South Brewing & Ice Co. v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 873, 96 S. W. 835. Acts 1902, p. 92, prohibiting sale of intoxicating liquors, including cider, but excepting sales "by the barrel by farmers who raise sufficient apples to make the cider which they sell," is not in contravention of Const. c. 1, art. 7, which prohibits class legislation, since the word farmers would be construed to include any person owning land on which there are trees producing apples. State v. Hazelton, 78 Vt. 467, 63 A. 305.

55. Sale by managers of alleged social club to non-members held illegal, particularly where it appeared that operations of club were a clear evasion of the law, and it appeared to have been organized for that purpose, and its chief purpose was sale of liquors. Creighton v. People [Colo.] 83 P. 1057. Where an incorporated club was run under the direction and control of defendant, he is guilty of a violation of the local option law for a sale made by the club in accordance with the system established by defendant, though he was not present at the time the sale was made. Purchaser waited on himself. Feige v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 425, 95 S. W. 506. Evidence held to show that a distribution of beer through the agency of a so-called club was a mere device or subterfuge for the sale of beer by the club and sufficient to sustain a conviction of violation of the local option law. Id. Evidence held to show a sale of beer by a so called "steward" of a club in violation of the local option law. Adkins v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 95 S. W. 506. Evidence that defendant organized a so-called club, that he purchased liquor for its members and kept the same for them in a cold storage warehouse where it was delivered to the "members" and in some instances drunk on the premises by them, held to justify a verdict finding him guilty of violating the Texas local option law. Walker v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 216, 94 S. W. 230.

Unless knowledge or a specific intent is an essential element of the crime,[59] good faith or the absence of an intention to violate the law is ordinarily no defense,[60] though the contrary has been held in regard to a mistake of fact.[61]

As in other cases, one cannot be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense.[62] Identity of offenses is necessary to sustain the plea of second jeopardy.[63]

(§ 6) B. Indictment and prosecution.—The jurisdiction[64] of the various courts is fixed by statute.[65]

56. Sale by druggist for medicinal purposes and actually used by sick person for medicinal purposes, made on the prescription of a reputable physician, held not unlawful because of the fact that the physician was not licensed to practice medicine in state. De Tarr v. State [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 897. Statute prohibiting a druggist from selling intoxicating liquors without a prescription is violated by compounding and selling a medicine containing whiskey. State v. Sharpe, 119 Mo. App. 386, 95 S. W. 298. Prescription by physician which does not recite that "it is given and is necessary for medicinal use" is insufficient to authorize a sale by a licensed druggist. State v. McManus, 78 Vt. 433, 62 A. 1013.

57. Gen. St. 1905, § 3737, requiring druggists having a permit to sell only on affidavit of the purchaser, is mandatory, and a sale without such affidavit, even though for medical purposes, is unlawful. State v. Gregory [Kan.] 87 P. 370.

58. Druggist, though not a licensed pharmacist, who sells liquors to be drunk on the premises, is guilty of violating Rev. St. Mo. § 899, § 3051. State v. Chipp [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 236. In a prosecution under a statute providing that any druggist who "suffers intoxicating liquor to be drunk at his place of business shall be guilty," etc., it is not error to refuse an instruction that required the state to show that defendant consented to the drinking. Id.

59. That defendant, in a prosecution for selling to a minor in good faith, believed that the purchaser was of full age, precludes finding him guilty. People v. Bronner [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 492, 103 N. W. 672. In order to convict one charged with giving liquor to minor without his parent's consent, the state must show that defendant knew that plaintiff was a minor. Ferguson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 572, 95 S. W. 111. One who knows that purchaser is minor, or has such information from appearance of minor or otherwise as would lead prudent man to believe that he was a minor, and which if followed by inquiry would bring home to him knowledge of purchaser's minority, is guilty of knowingly selling to a minor. State v. Constantine [Wash.] 86 P. 384. Seller is not absolutely bound to know age of purchaser but is bound to all reasonable means to ascertain the fact, and if after exercising such precaution he honestly believes purchaser to be over twenty-one years of age, he should not be found guilty. State v. Fahey [Del.] 65 A. 260.

60. Belief that liquor sold to minors is for use of adult held no defense to charge of selling to minor where he was in fact purchasing for himself and so used it. In re MacRae [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1020. It is no defense to a prosecution for making an unlawful sale of liquor to show that defendant did not intend to violate the law, this being one of the offenses from which the law implies the unlawful intent from the doing of the act prohibited. State v. Piner [N. C.] 53 S. E. 305. On prosecution for violating occupation tax law in not procuring license to pursue occupation of retail liquor dealer, fact that defendant arranged with another to pay tax and believed he had done so held no defense, statute requiring posting of license and authorizing dismissal of prosecutions on payment of tax. Meroney v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 883, 92 S. W. 844.

61. In a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquor without a license it is a good defense to show that defendant did not know that the liquor sold was intoxicating, and that he in good faith thought it was not. State v. Powell [N. C.] 53 S. E. 515. Where defendant sells in local option district a concoction that he does not believe was and had a right to believe was not an intoxicant, under a mistake of fact, he should not be found guilty. Walker v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 451, 98 S. W. 843.

62. Where indictment in the first count charges a violation of Rev. St. Ohio 1905, § 4364-20b, in keeping a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors, and in the second count charges a violation of Rev. St. 1905, § 6942, which also forbids the keeping of a place for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, and the evidence discloses that defendant kept but one place during the time alleged in the indictment, a conviction under either count bars a punishment under the other, nor is defendant's right waived by failure to move that the state elect on which count it will stand. Weaver v. State, 74 Ohio St. 53, 77 N. E. 273.

63. Where a sale of a bottle of whiskey to each of two persons occurs at the same time there are two separate sales, and on a prosecution for one defendant cannot plead a previous conviction. Harris v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 270, 97 S. W. 704.

64. See 6 C. L. 193.

65. Rhode Island: Offense of keeping and maintaining liquor nuisance in violation of Gen. Laws, c. 92, is without the jurisdiction of the district court to try and determine, nor can it on finding that defendant is probably guilty certify case to supreme court for determination of question of constitutionality of statute under which prosecution is had. State v. Collins, 27 R. I. 419, 62 A. 1010.

Vermont: City court of St. Albans has no jurisdiction of prosecution for furnishing Limitations.—The prosecution must, of course, be instituted within the time fixed by the statute of limitations.[66]

Indictment, information, or complaint.[67]—An indictment must charge but one crime, and must be direct and certain as regards the crime charged,[68] but need not set forth the details of the transaction complained of.[69] The averments must be clear and direct and not argumentative.[70] In charging a statutory crime it is sufficient to follow the language of the statute.[71] Where an exception is so engrafted in the enacting clause of a statute that the offense cannot be described without meeting and negativing it, it must be alleged that the defendant is not within the excepted class;[72] but where the exceptions and provisos appear in distinct or subsequent clauses, negation is not necessary.[73] It is not necessary to allege that liquor contrary to law. State v. Shappy [Vt.] 65 A. 78.

66. Prosecution for selling without a license is controlled by Code, § 577, and not § 3889, and hence may be instituted at any time within two years. Quillen v. Com. [Va.] 54 S. E. 333.

67. See 6 C. L. 193.

68. B. & C. Comp. §§ 1308, 1306. Wong Sing v. Independence, 47 Or. 231, 83 P. 387. Complaint in justice court takes place and performs service of indictment and is to be construed in same manner. B. & C. Comp. § 2265. Id. Where ordinance prohibited sale of "any spirituous, malt, or vinous liquors" without a license, and provided that every sale should be a distinct offense, held that complaint accusing defendant of selling "spirituous and malt liquors, or spirituous or malt liquors," was bad. Id. Where ordinance prohibited sale in less quantities than a gallon without a license, held that complaint failing to allege that quantity sold was less than amount specified failed to state facts sufficient to constitute a crime. Id. Under an ordinance which prohibits the selling, giving away, or disposing of liquor on Sunday, an information charging that defendant sold, gave away, and otherwise disposed of intoxicating liquor, is not bad for duplicity. It charges but one offense and the state cannot be required to elect whether it will prosecute for a sale or a gift. City of Liberty v. Moran [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 948. Prohibitory law being in force generally in license towns except in so far as rendered inapplicable by special license legislation, indictment charging unlawful delivery of liquor contrary to provisions of Laws 1903, c. 95, §§ 15, 17, as amended by Laws 1905, c. 49, held bad for uncertainty in failing to allege that defendant was licensed to engage in liquor traffic, it being doubtful whether he was charged under the license or the prohibitory statute, to latter of which a less penalty is attached. State v. Langdon [N. H.] 64 A. 1099. Mere allegation that city had accepted license statute insufficient. Id. Information charging defendant in one count with having given several different persons liquor on election day charges commission of several different offenses and should be quashed. Thweatt v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 391, 95 S. W. 517. Information in prosecution for giving away liquor on election day charging that on that day election was held in subdivision of a county, but not alleging that an election was held in the county, is defective as not showing that election was a legal one, an election in a territorial subdivision less than a county being unauthorized. Id.

69. Under Laws 1905, c. 346, an indictment held to charge defendant with soliciting the sale of spirituous liquors without license, since statute may be violated by a solicitation either as principal or as agent of another. State v. Braun, 96 Minn. 521, 105 N. W. 975. An information charging defendant with keeping liquors for sale contrary to law need not allege how they were kept for sale. State v. Suiter, 78 Vt. 391, 63 A. 182.

70. Allegations in indictment for aiding in maintenance of nuisance as to fact that nuisance was maintained held insufficient. State v. Worden, 27 R. I. 484, 63 A. 486.

71. Information charging violation of Gen. St. 1901, § 2489, making it an offense for owner of building knowingly to permit it to be used in maintaining liquor nuisance. State v. Brooks [Kan.] 85 P. 1013.

72. Where an information charges both keeping a place open and selling, the exception of the statute is sufficiently negatived as to the first charge by stating that the place was "not a drug store," but is not negatived as to the second charge if it is not added that the accused is not "a regular druggist." Oberer v. State, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 93. Where statute prohibits sale on election days except in certain cases, an information should negative the existence of the exceptions as that it was not sold on the prescription of a physician. Thweatt v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 391, 95 S. W. 517.

73. In a prosecution for selling without a license is not necessary to negative that the sale was one of domestic wine. Sowell v. State [Ga.] 54 S. E. 916. Where a statute in one clause prohibits keeping for sale of liquors except as authorized by the act and a subsequent clause declares that act shall not apply to certain sales of cider and native wine. State v. Paige, 78 Vt. 286, 62 A. 1017. Where keeping of liquors for sale or sale thereof within state is itself unlawful unless the party is specially authorized to sell the same, such authority need not be negatived. State v. Brown [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1011. Indictment for keeping liquor nuisance need not allege that defendant the offense was knowingly committed[74] unless knowledge is an essential element of the crime.[75] An indictment charging a sale of whiskey sufficiently alleges a sale of intoxicating liquor.[76] On a prosecution for selling without a license, the indictment or accusation must negative the possession of a license.[77] Where a statute denounces several distinct offenses, an indictment thereunder need allege the elements of but one.[78] An indictment for aiding in the maintenance of a liquor nuisance must allege the existence of such nuisance.[79] An indictment for violation of the local option law must show the adoption of the law in the territory where the offense is alleged to have been committed[80] and a sale in such territory.[81] An indictment for making a sale by an agent should charge a sale by the defendant.[82] As a general rule it is not necessary to give the name of the persons to whom the unlawful sale was made,[83] though there seems to be some conflict of authority in this regard,[84] nor to allege the precise consideration moving to the seller.[85] On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor for sale it is not necessary to allege what kind kept the place with intent to keep or sell liquors contrary to law, or that he intended to sell the liquors contrary to law. Code, § 2424. Id.

74. Affidavit charging a violation of the Beal Law (Rev. St. §§ 4364-20), in that defendant kept in place where intoxicating liquors were sold, purchased, or given away, need not aver that such place was "knowingly" kept. Page v. State, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 581.

75. Indictment held to sufficiently allege that defendant knew that person to whom he gave liquor was a minor. Ferguson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 572, 95 S. W. 111.

76. In a prosecution for violating the local option law where the indictment charges a sale of "whiskey," it is not necessary to allege that whiskey is an intoxicating liquor. Rutherford v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 90 S. W. 172. Indictment for violation of local option law charging sale of "one package of whiskey" held sufficient, intoxicating liquor and whiskey being synonymous. Wilcoxson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 33, 91 S. W. 581. Instruction that if defendant unlawfully sold "intoxicating liquor" as charged he was guilty, held to apply the facts to indictment charging sale of "one package of whiskey," the terms whiskey and intoxicating liquor being synonymous. Id.

77. Unless sale was made in county in which sale is prohibited altogether, it is not necessary to allege that it was made within limits of an incorporated town or city which was authorized to issue a license, since Pen. Code, § 433, makes it unlawful to sell anywhere without a license. Shuler v. State, 125 Ga. 778, 54 S. E. 689.

78. Election Law, § 79, providing that no intoxicating liquor shall be sold or given away at retail and that no saloon shall be open on election day, charges three separate offenses, and hence information need not allege that saloon was place where intoxicants were sold or given away at retail. Aimo v. People, 122 Ill. App. 398.

79. Under Gen. Laws, c. 92, § 5, an indictment charging one with aiding another to maintain a nuisance by letting to or allowing another to use a building under his control for illegal sale of liquor must not only charge a letting for the prohibited purpose but that place was thereafter actually used for illegal sale of liquors. Inferential allegations of such illegal use held insufficient. State v. Worden, 27 R. I. 484, 63 A. 486.

80. Indictment alleging that voters had determined that sale should be prohibited and that the commissioner's court had made an order prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor in said county held not defective in not alleging that commissioner's court had declared result of election, since such fact is implied from the allegations set forth. Stephens v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 292, 97 S. W. 483.

81. Emmons v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 1044.

82. Indictment charging that M for S sold, etc., is insufficient; it should charge that the defendant made the sale, as under Code, c. 32, § 17, principal is responsible for sale made by his agent. State v. Mayo [W. Va.] 53 S. E. 416.

83. Accusation on prosecution for selling without license. Shuler v. State, 125 Ga. 778, 54 S. E. 689. Prosecution under Act Cong. March 1, 1895, prohibiting the sale of liquor to any person in the Indian Territory. Parmenter v. U. S. [Ind. T.] 98 S. W. 340. Violation of dramshop law. State v. Heibel, 116 Mo. App. 43, 90 S. W. 758. Making unlawful sale. Fletcher v. Com. [Va.] 56 S. E. 149.

84. Information or indictment charging sale in violation of Rev. St. 1903, § 4364-20a et seq, should specify the name of the person to whom the sale was made or that it was unknown where such is the fact. State v. Ridgway, 73 Ohio St. 31, 76 N. E. 95.

85. Sale without license. Shuler v. State, 125 Ga. 778, 54 S. E. 689. Indictment under Pol. Code 1895, § 1548, and Pen. Code 1895, § 451, averring that accused "did sell and barter for valuable consideration" liquors of the character referred to in said sections, held sufficiently definite as to the consideration. Taylor v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 474. An indictment under a statute which makes "it unlawful to, sell * * * for a valuable consideration" which charges that the defendant "did unlawfully sell," held sufficient though it did not charge that sale was for

of liquor was kept.[86] Statutes in some states provide that in prosecutions under municipal ordinances it shall be sufficient to state the number of the section and the title of the ordinance violated, together with the date of its passage.[87] The fact that the complaint is in the form prescribed by the ordinance alleged to have been violated does not preclude defendant from attacking its sufficiency nor prevent the court from construing the law applicable thereto.[88] Documents used by the grand jury as evidence need not be attached to or returned with the indictment, in the absence of a statute to the contrary.[89]

Variance.[90]—If the sale is charged to have been made to a named person, the proof must support the allegation.[91] An allegation of a sale to two or more persons jointly is not supported by proof of a sale to one of them only.[92] An allegation of a sale by defendant is supported by proof of a sale by his agent.[93] Unless time is an essential ingredient of the offense,[94] it need not ordinarily be shown to have been committed on the precise day alleged,[95] provided it appears to have been committed before the finding of the indictment[96] and after the statute on which the prosecution is based went into effect.[97]

Trial.[97a]—Where the evidence shows several separate offenses, the state will be required to elect on which it will rely.[98] Statutes in some states provide for the appointment of special prosecuting officers.[99]

Evidence.[1]—The court takes judicial notice of the fact that whiskey[2] and wine[3] a valuable consideration, since there must be a valuable consideration to constitute a sale. Howell v. State, 124 Ga. 698, 52 S. E. 649.

86. State v. Paige, 78 Vt. 286, 62 A. 1017.

87. Complaint alleging that defendant violated § 1 of an ordinance passed and approved on a specified day, in that on a specified day he sold, etc., certain intoxicating liquors, he not being a druggist or pharmacist lawfully permitted to do so not having a license from the town, held to sufficiently state the offense in view of Mills' Ann. St. § 4436. Braisted v. People [Colo.] 88 P. 150. Defendant being charged with violating § 1, held that it was not necessary to allege that § 7 had been amended. Id.

88. Wong Sing v. Independence, 47 Or. 231, 83 P. 387.

89. On prosecution of druggist for maintaining liquor nuisance, it is not necessary under Code, § 5276, to attach to indictment written requests for the sale of liquor obtained by the county attorney from the county auditor, which were used by county attorney in examining witnesses before grand jury but were not placed in evidence. State v. Mulhern [Iowa] 106 N. W. 267.

90. See 6 C. L. 196, n 4-11.

91. Evidence of unlawful sale to agent with notice that he was purchasing for his principal will not support allegation of a sale to the agent. Barlow v. State [Ga.] 56 S. E. 131. Proof of sale to one who was acting as agent for an undisclosed principal will support a conviction under an indictment charging sale to the person acting as agent. Oxford v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 303, 97 S. W. 484.

92. State v. Williams [S. D.] 107 N. W. 830; O'Shennessey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 423, 96 S. W. 790.

93. Selling or giving away on Sunday. City of Liberty v. Moran [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 948.

94. Under an information charging a sale on a certain date, evidence of a sale on a different date held inadmissible. Harding v. Com. [Va.] 52 S. E. 832.

95. Sale without license. People v. Dieterich, 142 Mich. 527, 12 Det. Leg. N. 798, 105 N. W. 1112. Time is not a material ingredient of the crime of maintaining nuisance and a conviction may be had on evidence of sales at any time within three years prior to the indictment. State v. Moore [Iowa] 106 N. W. 268.

96. New trial granted though evidence was sufficient to support finding of illegal sale within statute of limitations, where evidence did not show whether date of sale was prior or subsequent to finding of indictment. Bragg v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 232. Evidence as to transaction prior to date of indictment does not warrant conviction. Vaughan v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 93 S. W. 741.

97. On prosecution for violation of local option law, instruction authorizing a verdict of guilty in case jury found sale by defendant at any time within two years preceding the indictment is erroneous where it appears that law went into effect less than two years preceding the finding of the indictment. Rutherford v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 90 S. W. 172.

97a. See 6 C. L. 200.

98. On prosecution for maintaining a liquor nuisance in a certain building on a certain lot, where evidence showed sales in each of two separate buildings on the lot described, state should be required to elect at close of its case as to which building it will claim the unlawful sales to have been made in. State v. Poull [N. D.] 105 N. W. 717.

are intoxicating, and of what constitutes a glass of beer, as to quantity,[4] but not that beer is intoxicating.[5]

The burden is on the state to establish every essential element of the crime charged.[6] On a prosecution for violation of the local option law, its adoption must be shown.[7] Where proof of a sale raises a presumption that it is unlawful, the burden is on the seller to prove the contrary.[8] One claiming exemption from the general prohibitions of a statute by reason of a special privilege not granted in the enacting clause must establish every fact on which such privilege rests.[9] Possession of intoxicating liquor is sometimes made prima facie evidence that it is being kept for sale in violation of law,[10] and proof of the delivery of liquor and of the receipt of money therefor prima facie evidence of ownership.[11] In some states where a sale is shown it is presumed to be unlawful.[12] Evidence that the defendant has paid the internal revenue tax required of retail liquor dealers is generally admissible,[13] and the possession of a Federal license is sometimes made prima facie evidence of guilt.[14]

99. Title of prohibitory law (Laws 1885, p. 243, c. 149, § 11), held broad enough to cover provision for appointment of assistants to attorney general to prosecute offenses against it in certain cases. State v. Brooks [Kan.] 85 P. 1013.

1. See 6 C. L. 197.

2. Wilcoxson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 33, 91 S. W. 581.

3. State v. Piner [N. C.] 53 S. E. 305.

4. Allegation that quantity sold to minor was less than five gallons held not rendered uncertain by further allegation that it consisted of eight glasses. State v. Stroschein [Minn.] 109 N. W. 235.

5. Lager beer. Potts v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 477.

6. To establish beyond a reasonable doubt that liquors alleged to have been kept for sale in violation of law were intoxicating. Instruction held not misleading in view of other instructions. Steinkuhler v. State [Neb.] 109 N. W. 395. Evidence that defendant sold a liquor which he called "lager beer" is insufficient to sustain a conviction. Potts v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 477. Where sale is claimed to have been made by defendant's agent, burden is on state to show affirmatively such relation between defendant and person selling as would make the act of the seller the act of defendant. Robinson v. State, 125 Ga. 31, 53 S. E. 766.

7. See 6 C. L. 196, n 15. On appeal where record does not show adoption of law in county where prosecution was had, the supreme court cannot take judicial notice of that fact. Allen v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 450, 98 S. W. 869. Agreement by defendant that local option law was in force in county held to render failure to prove it immaterial. Hestand v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 1315, 92 S. W. 12. State need not show notice of election was given, failure to give it being matter of defense. State v. Foreman [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 269. Unless county judge makes a certificate to effect that law has been properly published, state must prove each and every initiatory step requisite to its adoption, including the posting of notices of the election, but if judge makes such certificate the burden is on the defense to show that such proceedings were not had. McGovern v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 369, 90 S. W. 502. Is not error to admit evidence of two elections where it appears that only last was so conducted as to put in force prohibitory provisions of the law. Stephens v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 694, 96 S. W. 7. If information charges two elections, state may introduce evidence of either having been in favor of prohibition. Riggs v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 683, 96 S. W. 25.

8. State v. O'Malley [Iowa] 109 N. W. 491.

9. Druggist claiming exemption from law prohibiting sale without license. State v. Terry [N. J. Err. & App.] 64 A. 113. Where an ordinance declares that it shall be unlawful to permit female in a saloon or to drink therein, but that it shall be a defense to a prosecution thereunder to show that woman is of good repute and has consent of her parent, guardian, or husband to visit the saloon, burden is on accused to show that case falls within facts constituting a defense. Commonwealth v. Price, 29 Ky. L. R. 593, 94 S. W. 32.

10. In prosecution under Comp. St. 1903, c. 50, § 20, possession of such liquors by accused is presumptive evidence of guilt in district court as well as before examining magistrate, unless accused shall satisfactorily account for and explain the possession thereof and that they were not kept for an unlawful purpose. Instructions approved. Steinkuhler v. State [Neb.] 109 N. W. 395. One to whom a carrier delivered liquor without payment of the freight charges and the next day took them back to its depot because of the nonpayment of freight, where it was seized, does not have such possession as gives rise to the unlawful intent. O'Neill v. State [Neb.] 107 N. W. 119.

11. Laws 1901, c. 4930, may be rebutted. Hiers v. State [Fla.] 41 So. 881.

12. Burden is on the seller to prove the contrary. Prosecution for keeping liquor

The usual rules of criminal evidence apply,[15] including those as to the admissibility of opinion evidence,[16] the admissions of the defendant,[17] and the declarations of third persons.[18] Evidence of other offenses than the one charged is not generally admissible[19] unless part of a common scheme[20] or system.[21] On a prosecution for nuisance. State v. O'Malley [Iowa] 109 N. W. 491.

13. Under Code 1896, § 5086, may show by parol that defendant has Federal license. Davis v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 663. On prosecution for selling in prohibition district, records of the U. S. Internal Revenue office for such territory are admissible to show that defendant paid a Federal tax as a retail seller. Since Federal authorities cannot be compelled to produce original record nor authenticate a copy, record may be proven by a copy, supported by testimony that it is a true copy. State v. Nippert [Kan.] 86 P. 478; State v. Schaeffer [Kan.] 86 P. 477.

14. Under Kirby's Dig. § 5144, where one charged with selling liquor unlawfully is proved to have had a Federal liquor license in his house or building, such license is made "prima facie evidence of the guilt of the party owning or controlling the house." Winton v. State, 77 Ark. 143, 91 S. W. 7. Where there was a conflict in evidence as to whether defendant was the owner or controller of boat at time when whiskey was sold and license was found there, held that it was error to instruct that, if defendant had revenue license at time he was charged with selling liquor, it was prima facie evidence of his guilt, and that they should convict him unless he showed that he did not sell any liquor. Id. Statute extends to all cases of unlawful selling of liquor where it is shown that defendant was, at the time of the sale, either the owner or controller of the house where the revenue license was kept or found. Id. Under St. 1903, § 2557b, possession of Federal special tax stamp authorizing sale of intoxicants or having same stuck up at place of business in territory where sale is forbidden by local option law is prima facie evidence of guilt. Hestand v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 1315, 92 S. W. 12. Since one engaged in sale of malt liquors is required to have Federal license regardless of their intoxicating qualities, charge on Pen. Code 1895, art. 407a, is improper in any case where accusation is for sale of malt liquors, intoxicating quality of which is in dispute. Thompson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 175, 97 S. W. 316. Where prosecution is for sale of whiskey and license is for sale of spirituous liquors, instruction is properly given. Magee v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 383, 98 S. W. 245. Evidence that defendant had taken out internal revenue license held admissible. Park v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 98 S. W. 243.

15. See Indictment and Prosecution, 8 C. L. 189.

16. On prosecution for selling in local option district where witness testified that he did not know or have any way of knowing what was in package, liquor having been in a package, held error to permit him to testify that in his opinion package contained whiskey. McNeely v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 516, 92 S. W. 419. Opinion of witness as to whether witness was intoxicated held inadmissible. Henderson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 570, 91 S. W. 569.

17. Evidence that the wife of a certain person had brought suit against defendant to recover damages caused by intoxication of her husband on liquors sold by defendant and that he had settled the suit is inadmissible as an admission of an unlawful sale. State v. Campbell, 129 Iowa, 154, 105 N. W. 395.

18. In a prosecution for carrying liquor into polling place, testimony of one who was present that another who was drinking the liquor stated in defendant's hearing that it was "good beer" is admissible since, if defendant did not deny it was beer, such fact is a circumstance for the consideration of the jury. State v. Johnson [N. J. Law] 63 A. 12. In a prosecution under the Beal Law of a physician as an aider and abettor in the sale of liquor in dry town, in that he gave prescriptions to parties for liquor which was purchased at the drug store, declaration by purchaser to druggist as to what he wanted liquor for is incompetent when made in the absence of the physician. Garrison v. State, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 277. Evidence of conversation between witness and third person, in absence of accused, in which one told the other that they could get whiskey from defendant and they agreed to get a quart, and that one gave the other his half of the price, held admissible in view of evidence that defendant had proposed arrangement and had accepted money with knowledge of facts. Hays v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 91 S. W. 585. Declarations of third persons as to intoxicating quality of liquor brought home to defendant are admissible if made before sale for which he is prosecuted, but not if made after his indictment. Henderson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 570, 91 S. W. 569.

19. In a prosecution for "giving away liquor to induce trade" alleged to have been committed in a certain place, it is error to receive evidence of gifts at other places, or of shipments to persons in such place by wholesale house for whom defendant was salesman, it not being shown that shipments were on sales made by him. Stanley v. State [Miss.] 42 So. 284. Evidence of sales at another time and place and to a different person is inadmissible where no connection is shown between two transactions. Swalm v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 321, 91 S. W. 575. On prosecution for selling in violation of local option law, evidence that defendant had purchased and received whiskey prior to time of alleged sale is inadmissible where defendant does not testify that he did not have any whiskey. Harris v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 815, 98 S. W. 842.

20. On prosecution for selling without a license, evidence of sales other than that selling without a license, the state is not required to confine the proof to the exact date named in the indictment, but may show other sales on and prior to the date of the sale in question.[22] Evidence tending to show subsequent sales is admissible in rebuttal of evidence that no liquor had been kept on the premises.[23] Evidence of a former conviction is inadmissible except on the question of credibility.[24] Liquor and paraphernalia used in its sale, found on the premises, and the testimony of the officers finding it, is admissible regardless of the legality of the search or the warrant under which it was made.[25] Evidence that defendant refused to make other illegal sales is inadmissible.[26] On a prosecution for making an unlawful sale, evidence that it is customary for certain persons to keep liquor for their own use and to give it to their employes is immaterial.[27] Cases dealing with the admissibility of particular evidence to show the adoption of local option laws,[28] the sale,[29] that an alleged nuisance was run by the defendant,[30] the knowledge of the defendant that his premises were being used in maintaining a liquor nuisance,[31] or that the liquor sold by him was intoxicating[32] on the issue as to whether liquor sold was in-charged is admissible where it appears that they were made in pursuance of a general scheme to sell without a license and tend to establish existence of such a plan on the part of defendant. State v. Peterson [Minn.] 108 N. W. 6.

21. On prosecution for selling in violation of local option law, evidence of way another sale was made is admissible for purpose of showing the system or subterfuge resorted to by defendant in making sales where it appears that such method was followed in the making of sale charged. Stovall v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 299, 97 S. W. 92. But evidence of dissimilar transactions is not. Lane v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 882, 92 S. W. 839.

22. State v. Sederstrom [Minn.] 109 N. W. 113.

23. State v. Sederstrom [Minn.] 109 N. W. 113. On prosecution for keeping liquor for sale without a license, evidence of keeping it for sale after date alleged and before the finding of the indictment. State v. Kennard [N. H.] 65 A. 376.

24. Instruction authorizing jury to consider former conviction in determining whether defendant was kind of man who would keep violating statute held prejudicially erroneous. People v. Myers, 101 N. Y. S. 291.

25. State v. Suiter, 78 Vt. 391, 63 A. 182.

26. That others had tried to buy of defendant and been refused. Smart v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 694, 92 S. W. 810. Evidence of another minor that he was in saloon at time sale was made to complaining witness and that defendant refused to sell to him because he was a minor. Cross v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 218, 94 S. W. 1015.

27. Evidence as to such custom among mill owners, particularly where defendant is not shown to be one. Ward v. State [Fla.] 40 So. 177.

28. Evidence held admissible: On prosecution for selling without a license, record of town meeting of town in which sale was made showing that vote was adverse to licensing sale. State v. Bollenbach [Minn.] 108 N. W. 3.

29. On prosecution for unlawful selling, evidence that defendant kept liquors on storage for others which they could and did call for as they wished held immaterial. Donald v. State [Miss.] 41 So. 4. On prosecution for keeping liquor nuisance, evidence that witness while outside building furnished money to another to purchase liquor, that latter took money, went into defendant's store, and soon returned with bottle of liquor, held admissible as tending to show that intoxicating liquor was kept and sold in defendant's place of business. State v. O'Malley [Iowa] 109 N. W. 491.

Evidence held admissible: On prosecution for violating the local option law, that there was a quantity of liquor in bottles, like that it is claimed defendant sold, concealed on defendant's premises. King v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 488. Books of express agent held admissible to show delivery of C. O. D. package of whiskey to witness on order of defendant, agent having testified that they were correctly kept. Jackson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 572, 91 S. W. 574.

Held inadmissible: On prosecution for selling in violation of the local option law, evidence that there were a number of empty beer bottles in defendant's place of business. O'Shennessey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 423, 96 S. W. 790.

30. An application for gas to be used at place where nuisance is claimed to have been kept, signed by defendant, is admissible. State v. Schaeffer [Kan.] 86 P. 477.

31. On a prosecution under Gen. St. 1901, § 2489, against owner of building for knowingly permitting its use in maintaining liquor nuisance, state, after introducing sufficient evidence to justify a finding that it was so used, may then, as tending to bring knowledge of that fact home to defendant, show that it had general reputation in community of being used for that purpose. State v. Brooks [Kan.] 85 P. 1018.

32. In prosecution for violating local option law, evidence that accused had been previously notified by county attorney that liquor he was charged with selling was intoxicating held admissible on issue of his mistake of fact. Henderson v. State [Tex.

toxicating,[33] and as to whether the person to whom the sale was made was a minor,[34] will be found in the notes.

Instructions.[35]—Defendant's theory of the case should be submitted if supported by the evidence.[36] It is not necessary to define a sale where a sale is conclusively shown.[37] Instructions should not assume the existence of facts[38] unless they are admitted or undisputed.[39] Instructions having no bearing on the issues should not be given.[40] It is not error to refuse to give an instruction relating to a crime for which the defendant is not on trial.[41]

Punishment.[42]—The punishment which may be inflicted is regulated entirely by statute.[43]

In some states where, upon a hearing, there is probable cause to suspect that one has sold liquors without a license, he may be required to give bond for the observance of the revenue laws.[44] Fines and costs imposed for maintaining a liquor nuisance are sometimes made a lien on the premises occupied, though belonging to a third person, provided they are so occupied with his consent or acquiescence.[45]

Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 570, 91 S. W. 569. Evidence that defendant had previously been convicted for sale made subsequent to one on which he was then being tried and that he continued to run his place as before is inadmissible. Id.

33. Held admissible: On prosecution for violating local option law, evidence of the effect on other witnesses of drinking same kind of bitters is admissible. McRoberts v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 532, 92 S. W. 804.

Held inadmissible: On prosecution for violating local option law, evidence that prosecuting witness drank six bottles of the liquor in absence of showing that witness was not intoxicated. Henderson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 570, 91 S. W. 569. Testimony that witness had bought some intoxicating liquor from defendant and that it did not taste like that the prosecuting witness had bought but was much stronger, there being no standard of comparison and the two liquors not being shown to be of same character. Swalm v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 321, 91 S. W. 575.

34. One who knows or has seen the minor may testify that he did not appear to be twenty-one years of age. Ferguson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 572, 95 S. W. 111.

35. See 6 C. L. 201, n 75 et seq.

36. Refusal of request held not error in view of instructions given. Gibson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 144, 97 S. W. 468. Defendant in a prosecution for violating the local option law is entitled to a request in accordance with the evidence introduced in his behalf, though contradicted. Harper v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 98 S. W. 839.

37. Stephens v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 694, 96 S. W. 7.

38. On prosecution for violating local option law, instruction held erroneous as assuming sale by defendant. Brookman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 146, 96 S. W. 928.

39. Charge that sale of liquors had been prohibited in certain county since certain date held proper where evidence showed that fact and there was no contest over the issue. Roberson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 264, 91 S. W. 578.

40. On prosecution for selling intoxicants without certificate, where sole question was whether sale had been made, reference to vote of town against sale held prejudicial error. People v. Myers, 101 N. Y. S. 291. Instruction authorizing conviction if jury found that defendant was agent of third person and sold liquor as such agent held erroneous where evidence did not raise issue as to such agency. Harris v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct Rep. 256, 91 S. W. 590.

41. Instruction dealing with sale without license properly refused where prosecution was for keeping liquors for sale in violation of law. Steinkuhler v. State [Neb.] 109 N. W. 395.

42. See 6 C. L. 203. n 88 et seq.

43. Under Acts 1902-4, c. 148, in a prosecution for selling without a license, the court may impose both a fine and imprisonment as a penalty. Quillen v. Com. [Va.] 54 S. E. 333. One convicted of selling without license may be imprisoned in county jail with direction that he be worked on public roads, nor is a sentence for a period less than maximum fixed by statute a cruel and unusual punishment. State v. Farrington [N. C.] 53 S. E. 954.

44. Under Act Feb. 29th, 1892 (Acts 1891-92, c. 510), §§ 7, 8, county judge sitting in court after an indictment charging the defendant with selling liquor without a license has been presented may require bond. Anderson v. Com. [Va.] 54 S. E. 305. Where bond appeared on its face to have been executed in compromise of pending prosecution, principal and surety held to be estopped to deny validity and regularity of proceedings resulting in its execution. Id. Provision of § 8 authorizing issuance of scire facias on bond if it is forfeited held not to exclude other remedies or forms of action thereon. Id.

45. Under Rev. Codes, § 7610, providing that all fines assessed against any person convicted of maintaining a liquor nuisance shall be a lien against the property where

§ 7. Summary proceedings.[46]—Since intoxicating liquors are property, the owner can be deprived of them only by methods constituting due process of law.[47] Provision is sometimes made for the seizure and destruction of liquor kept in or slipped into any prohibition state or district to be sold contrary to law,[48] and for the seizure and sale of certain classes of conveyances transporting contraband liquor at night.[49] In Maine liquors properly purchased for a city or town liquor agency, and in the possession of a duly appointed and qualified liquor agent, are not subject to forfeiture.[50] A search and seizure warrant must definitely and clearly describe the premises to be searched.[51] In some states no warrant may be issued to search a dwelling house, occupied as such, unless some part of it is used as an inn or shop or for purposes of traffic, or unless the magistrate issuing it is satisfied by evidence presented to him, and so alleges in the warrant, that liquor is kept there intended for sale in the state, contrary to law.[52] The proper remedy for one unlawfully arrested, and whose vessels and fixtures are about to be seized for alleged unlawful sale of intoxicants, is by a petition in error or a suit against the officials and their bondsmen for damages, or for a writ of habeas corpus, and not in an action for an injunction.[53]

§ 8. Abatement of traffic as a nuisance; injunction.[54]—In some states the unlawful sale was made, if such use was permitted by the owner, lien of a judgment against property cannot be enforced against the owner, he not having been the defendant in the criminal action, without an action against him to establish the lien and foreclose. Larson v. Christiansen [N. D.] 106 N. W. 51. To charge the premises of a third person it must appear that the unlawful use continued after he had notice. Id.

46. See 6 C. L. 203.

47. Constitute property even if kept within territory wherein sale has been prohibited under the local option statutes, and hence statute which authorizes their seizure in local option territory without providing any method for condemning them or for the judicial determination of whether they are kept for an unlawful purpose is unconstitutional. Beavers v. Goodwin [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 429, 90 S. W. 930.

48. Under Kirby's Dig. § 5137, where distiller ships liquor into prohibition district to be there sold by his agent in quantities of more than five gallons at a time, as he has a right to do, and agent, in violation of his instruction and in violation of law, sells in less quantities, liquor in his possession is subject to confiscation and destruction. Osborne v. State, 77 Ark. 439, 92 S. W. 406. Proceeding is one in rem, liquor being contraband and subject to destruction when being used, no matter by whom, contrary to law. Id. Proceedings under Act 1899, p. 11, is a civil and not a criminal proceeding, and hence appeal will lie at instance of state. White v. State [Ark.] 98 S. W. 377. Rev. St. 1883, c. 27, § 31, as amended by Rev. St. 1903, c. 29, § 39, is unconstitutional in so far as it applies to interstate shipments. State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 101 Me. 430, 64 A. 812.

49. Under Cr. Code, § 694, horse and wagon of one who did not know that it was to be used for such purpose, and who did not consent thereto, is not subject to seizure and confiscation. Moody v. McKinney [S. C.] 63 S. E. 543. One in actual possession of liquors bought for himself and others, and procured for an unlawful traffic, is not beyond police power of state, merely because they are in course of transportation by purchaser in his own private vehicle from a point without to a place within state, but liquors and the conveyance may be confiscated as being engaged in unlawful enterprise. Jaro v. Holstein, 73 S. C. 111, 52 S. E. 870.

50. Liquors so purchased which have been taken by virtue of a search and liquor process and libeled, if not intended for sale in violation of law, are not forfeitable, although casks and vessels containing them are not marked in accordance with Rev. St. c. 29, § 34, nor are they subject to forfeiture, though intended for unlawful sale, if casks or vessels are at all times conspicuously marked with name of municipality owning them, or its agent. State v. Intoxicating Liquors & Vessels, 101 Me. 161, 63 A. 666.

51. Complaint and warrant must be construed together and if descriptive words are perfectly clear and designate the place to be searched that is all the constitution and law requires. State v. Comolli, 101 Me. 47, 63 A. 326. Description held sufficient. Id.

52. Rev. St. c. 29, § 62. State v. Comolli, 101 Me. 47, 63 A. 326. Warrant need not allege that it is used in part as an inn or shop for sale of liquors where it recites that magistrate issuing it is satisfied by evidence presented to him that intoxicating liquor is kept in such dwelling for purpose of unlawful sale. Id.

53. Under the "Jones Law." Schmidt v. Brennan, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 239. In suit for injunction, court of equity will not undertake to determine in advance whether or not vessels and fixtures are being used for the unlawful sale of liquor as alleged by municipal officers who are about to seize and destroy them under authority found in 98 Ohio Laws, p. 12. Id.

court may, on conviction of one charged with maintaining a place where liquor is unlawfully sold, abate such place unless the defendant gives bond not to make illegal sales and to pay all fines imposed.[55] Places where intoxicants are unlawfully sold are frequently declared to be nuisances which may be abated by injunction.[56] In some states any citizen may maintain a suit for that purpose.[57] The jurisdiction of the various courts is regulated by statute.[58] In some states the discovery of liquor on the premises is made presumptive evidence that it was kept for illegal sale.[59] Provision is sometimes made for the taxing of an attorney's fee as costs in plaintiff's favor if he is successful.[60] The violation of such an injunction is, of course, a contempt.[61]

§ 9. Civil liabilities for injuries resulting from sale.[62]—In some states a person selling liquor to another is liable in damages for injuries received by him while intoxicated.[63] In others he is liable in damages to certain persons injured in person, property, or means of support, by reason of the intoxication of the person to whom the sale is made.[64] A notice not to sell to such person is a necessary prerequisite in

54. See 6 C. L. 204.

55. Under Rev. St. 1905, § 6942, it is error to order abatement of defendant's saloon without giving him an opportunity to give a bond. Weaver v. State, 74 Ohio St. 53, 77 N. E. 273.

56. Under Code, § 2448, keeping and storing intoxicating liquors in warehouse, to be sold in saloon in city where stored, constitutes liquor nuisance. Bell v. Thompson [Iowa] 106 N. W. 949. In a suit to enjoin maintenance of nuisance, it is not error to refuse to direct "the effectual closing of the building" in which unlawful sales are carried on, where it does not appear that defendant is owner of building. Stahl v. Weston [Iowa] 106 N. W. 206. Evidence held to show that both tenant and owner of store maintained liquor nuisance and an order for injunction abating it properly issued. McCracken v. Miller, 129 Iowa, 623, 106 N. W. 4.

57. Under Code 1899, c. 32, § 24, one who is a resident of the county may maintain such suit, though he be not a "citizen" in technical sense of that word. Devanney v. Hanson [W. Va.] 53 S. E. 603.

58. Under Code, §§ 2405-6, judge of district court has power to issue an injunction in vacation. Young v. Preston [Iowa] 108 N. W. 463.

59. Code, § 2427. Bohstedt v. Teufel [Iowa] 106 N. W. 513; McCracken v. Miller, 129 Iowa, 623, 106 N. W. 4. But such finding is not sufficient evidence to support charge of making an unlawful sale, and hence will not support charge of contempt in violating injunction prohibiting an unlawful sale. State v. Thompson, 130 Iowa, 227, 106 N. W. 515.

60. Attorney's fee of $25 must be taxed as costs in plaintiff's favor if he is successful, whether suit is instituted in name of state or by a private individual. Code, § 2406. Plank v. Hertha [Iowa] 109 N. W. 732. Under Code, § 2429, court is required to allow attorney prosecuting suit by individual a reasonable sum for his services. Id. Plaintiff is entitled to have statutory fee taxed as costs even if attorney is paid by others. Id. Plaintiff held estopped to deny that certain person was his attorney and to have so recognized his appearance and adopted the proceeding as to entitle him to have fee taxed. Id. Where plaintiff was successful, but appealed from order refusing to tax attorney's fee as costs, held that supreme court had no authority to tax attorney's fee for services rendered on appeal. Id.

61. See, also, Contempt, 7 C. L. 746. Laws 1903, c. 338, authorizing issuance of injunction and fixing punishment of any person guilty of contempt for violating it, held not unconstitutional, because object is not expressed in title, nor as entrenching on inherent power of courts to punish contempt. State v. Thomas [Kan.] 86 P. 499. Court may institute contempt proceedings on an affidavit based on information and belief, and in such proceeding will take judicial notice that injunction was issued. Id. Defendant is not entitled to jury trial. Id.

62. See 6 C. L. 204.

63. In an action under Neb. statute it is not necessary to show that intoxication of plaintiff was primary cause of injury, but it is sufficient if it is shown to have been a contributing or assisting cause. Wiese v. Gerndorf [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1025. Fact of sale may be proven by circumstances, direct proof not being necessary. Id. Action cannot be maintained on bond for an assault by dealer not caused by intoxication of plaintiff. Andresen v. Jetter [Neb.] 107 N. W. 789.

64. Illinois: Dealer is liable if liquor sold materially contributed or assisted in producing condition. Danley v. Hibbard, 222 Ill. 88, 78 N. E. 39. Under Hurd's St. 1899, c. 43, widow may recover damages for sale of liquor to adult son which results in his habitual drunkenness and pauperism requiring her to support him, she being by law bound to support him. Id. If sale is made after notice, jury may award exemplary damages. Id. Wife of one who has become an habitual drunkard may maintain a joint and several action against several dramshop keepers where it appears that each sold liquor to husband which resulted in loss to plaintiff in causing him to neglect his busisome states.[65] One selling liquor to a minor, except on a written order therefor by his parent, is sometimes made liable in damages[66] or for a specified penalty.[67]

Provision is sometimes made for an action on a liquor dealer's bond by any person aggrieved by a breach thereof.[68] Neither the licensee nor his sureties are liable on the bond for the acts of an assignee of the license,[69] nor in the absence of a statute to the contrary, for acts committed before it is filed.[70] Such bonds are sometimes conditioned that the dealer shall pay all damages sustained by any person ness, thus impairing plaintiff's support. Earp v. Lilly, 120 Ill. App. 123. Fact that some of the defendants had sold to husband for a longer time than others does not affect their joint liability. Id. Jury may award punitive damages where it appears that the sales were made with knowledge that defendant was an habitual drunkard. Id.

Indiana: Under Burns' Ann. St. § 7288, dealer is liable personally, and on his bonds, for injuries sustained by a person to whom he has sold liquors in violation of law, for injuries caused by intoxication resulting from such sale, and fact that sale was made by defendant's agent does not relieve him of liability. State v. Terheide [Ind.] 78 N. E. 195. Is not liable for assault on intoxicated person by one to whom it is not shown that he made sale, nor where no connection is shown between sale to injured party and assault. Id.

Iowa: Under Code, § 2418, giving wife right of action for damages to her property or means of support, in consequence of the intoxication of her husband by reason of wrongful sale of liquor to him by defendant, evidence that several years prior to acts complained of husband was addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating liquors is inadmissible. Mathre v. Devendorf, 130 Iowa, 107, 106 N. W. 366. Plaintiff is entitled to recover for "only what she has been deprived of by defendant's acts;" and hence an instruction that if plaintiff had not received the support she was entitled to she could recover is erroneous. Id. Defendant may show that wife had commenced an action against another dealer covering same time and had recovered damages but not that another action is pending. Id. That intoxication of husband prevented him from securing or holding a permanent position during time in question is admissible. Mathre v. Story City Drug Co., 130 Iowa, 111, 106 N. W. 368. Under §§ 1539, 2418, each member of a copartnership is liable for damages sustained by reason of sale by either member of the firm in the course of partnership business. Id.

Kansas: Gen. St. 1901, § 2465, authorizes a recovery for both proximate and remote injuries, and hence wife may recover for loss of support due to confinement of husband in penitentiary as a result of a murder committed by him while intoxicated. Zibold v. Reneer [Kan.] 85 P. 290. Where petition alleged that husband committed a homicide while intoxicated, was convicted of murder in first degree and sentenced to death and confinement in penitentiary until his execution, held that allegation that he was convicted of murder in first degree was not, as a matter of law, equivalent to an allegation that he was not intoxicated when he committed the homicide. Id.

Michigan: Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 5398, no action lies against one who sold liquor to a decedent where sale and use of liquor sold did not contribute to intoxication which caused his death. Johnson v. Johnson [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 655, 108 N. W. 1011. In an action for damages for death of plaintiff's husband, caused by unlawful sale of liquor to him, evidence of plaintiff's condition and her dependence on husband for support is admissible. Martin v. Fisher, 143 Mich. 462, 13 Det. Leg. N. 8, 107 N. W. 86.

65. Under Rev. St. 1892, § 4358, as amended by Act April 25, 1898, action may be maintained against liquor seller if notice has been given to him, though no notice has been given to the owner of the building in which the sale is alleged to have been made. Graham v. Cooley, 73 Ohio St. 127, 76 N. E. 397.

66. Under Comp. Laws § 5398, providing that anyone selling to minor shall be liable to father or mother for damages therefor, except a druggist upon the written request of a parent, a druggist who makes a sale on an order purporting to be signed by the minor's parent, but which in fact is a forgery, is liable. Bailey v. Briggs, 143 Mich. 303, 12 Det. Leg. N. 982, 106 N. W. 863. Evidence that minor had been intoxicated prior thereto, and that plaintiff knew of it, is admissible in mitigation of damages. Id.

67. Where defense is that sale was made in good faith believing minor to be of full age, proof must show not only that seller believed him to be of full age, but that there were reasonable grounds for such belief. Creel v. Cordon [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 108, 98 S. W. 387.

68. Married woman can sue on bond for penalties prescribed in case of a sale to husband, after notice to saloonkeeper that husband is an habitual drunkard, without joining husband as a party plaintiff. Burlew v. Schiller [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 357, 92 S. W. 814. Mother can maintain a suit for selling to minor after a suit instituted by father has been abated by his death, nor is she estopped because she objected to the abatement and asked to be substituted as party plaintiff. Brooks v. Ellis [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 967, 98 S. W. 936.

69. Allen v. Houck & Dieter Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 996, 92 S. W. 993.

70. Though filed for purpose of procuring a license actually issued before the doing of the acts which would have constituted a breach if done after bond was filed, since license was unlawful before bond was by reason of his selling liquor.[71] The burden is on defendant to support his plea of good faith.[72] The usual rules of evidence apply.[73]

The owner of a saloon does not owe to his patrons the same care that is due to the patrons of a hotel or railroad, and is not liable for an assault committed on a patron by his agent acting without the scope of his employment.[74]

§ 10. Property rights in and contracts relating to intoxicants.[75]—One who sells intoxicating liquor in violation of law cannot ordinarily recover the purchase price.[76] Recovery may be had for sales made in a foreign state if lawful where made, notwithstanding the prohibitory law of the state where delivery takes place, provided they were not made with intent to violate the laws of the latter state or to enable the purchaser to do so.[77] In states where prohibition is the rule, the burden is on one seeking to recover the price of liquor sold therein to show that the sales were lawful.[78] The presumption that the law of a foreign state is similar to that of the forum does not obtain if it would result in a forfeiture.[79] Statutes in some states provide for the recovery of money paid for liquor sold in violation of law.[80]

§ 11. Drunkenness as an offense.[81]

71. Where bond given by dramshopkeeper provided that he should pay to all persons all damages they might sustain either in person or property or means of support by reason of his selling liquor, and statute under which it was given that it might be sued upon for the use of any person so injured, held that minor children of one killed by reason of liquor so sold had right of action on bond, and it was immaterial so far as they were concerned that their mother was unsuccessful in previous action thereon, and hence record in such case was inadmissible. Strong v. People, 119 Ill. App. 79. Evidence held to justify refusal to give peremptory instruction for defendants. Id.

72. Farr v. Waterman [Tex. Civ. App.] 95 S. W. 65.

73. In an action on bond for selling to a minor, it is error to permit defendant to testify that he had never before been charged with selling to a minor and that he was very cautious not to do so. Farr v. Waterman [Tex. Civ. App.] 95 S. W. 65.

76. Sale without license. Goldman v. Goodrum, 77 Ark. 580, 92 S. W. 865. One who sells to another liquors which purchaser intends to sell illegally cannot recover therefor, and it is immaterial whether seller had any knowledge for what purpose liquors were purchased. Heintz v. Le Page, 100 Me. 542, 62 A. 605. Is intoxicating if its composition is such that it is practicable to commonly and ordinarily drink it as a beverage, and to drink it in such quantities as to produce intoxication. Id.

77. Where orders for liquor were accepted by plaintiff at its place of business in Missouri, held that sales were made in that state though purchaser resided in Iowa and liquor was shipped to him there, and hence transactions were interstate commerce to which Iowa prohibitory law did not apply. Samuel Westheimer & Sons v. Habinck [Iowa] 109 N. W. 189. Sale held made in Missouri though liquor was first shipped to one of plaintiff's customers in Iowa, but never delivered, and was thereafter reshipped to defendant. Id. Contract for sale of liquor made in another state is enforceable in Iowa though it would not have been if made in that state. Bowlin Liquor Co. v. Brandenburg, 130 Iowa, 220, 106 N. W. 497. Where a salesman takes an order in Iowa for liquors to be sold by Minnesota seller, which order is subject to approval by salesman's principal, order having been approved and shipped to the purchaser, contract is made in Minnesota and may be enforced in Iowa. Id.

79. Where it would preclude recovery for liquor sold. Samuel Westheimer & Sons v. Habinck [Iowa] 109 N. W. 189.

80. Code, § 2423. Hamilton v. Schlitz Brew. Co., 129 Iowa, 172, 105 N. W. 438. Resident of Iowa who has paid brewer for beer sold to him under contract of sale made in Wisconsin cannot recover amount so paid, since sale is not unlawful nor within purview of statute. Id. Question of where sale takes place, goods being ordered from seller and shipped by him from another state, is to be determined by intention of parties as to when and where title passes to the purchaser. Id. Fact that a seller of liquor in shipping to purchaser in another state takes bill of lading in his own name raises prima facie presumption that title is not to pass until delivery by carrier to consignee, and that sale was made in state of consignee's residence, but this presumption may be rebutted by evidence of intention of parties and that vendor in so doing acted as bailee of purchaser. Id. Intention is question for jury. Id.

JOINT ADVENTURES.[82]

A joint adventure is a combination of two or more persons in a single enterprise.[83] Like other contracts the agreement should receive a reasonable construction.[84] A joint agreement to enter into contracts for municipal and government work includes such work in general and is not limited to contracts for sewers and drains,[85] nor to such contracts as are signed by all the parties to the venture.[86] A party to a joint enterprise is entitled to use his best judgment for the protection of the property and interests involved.[87] While joint adventurers are not partners unless clothed with an agency to act on behalf of each other and there is community of property,[88] they are nevertheless required to exercise good faith in connection with their joint dealings.[89] Under an agreement for the sale of land by which the time of payment of an installment is made of the essence of the contract, one joint purchaser is not, as against the other, bound to make the payment so as to save the forfeiture,[90] and, on failure of payment, either party is at liberty to make a new contract of purchase and exclude the other from its benefits.[91]

Upon a breach by one party the other may have a cause of action for damages incident thereto and also one for contribution to the expense necessarily incurred in the undertaking.[92] The ultimate agreement of the parties controls as to division of profits.[93] That one has a right to a certain share of the profits does not give him the right to such share of any gross amount received in the adventure.[94] After the termination of an adventure the court should, upon a proper application being made, direct a general accounting between the parties so that the business may be finally wound up in one proceeding.[95] Where, however the transactions are few and simple,

83. Evidence held to show a joint adventure for the purchase, development, and sale of real estate to be managed by certain trustees. Berg v. Mead, 100 N. Y. S. 792. In an action against defendant for fraud in connection with the purchase of realty, owing to defendant's secret agreement with the vendor, evidence held to require submission to the jury of question whether the parties purchased jointly or whether plaintiff purchased on his own account. Paddock v. Bray [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 383, 88 S. W. 419.

84. Contract by which defendant was to buy in at execution sale land in which plaintiff had an interest construed, and held defendant had the right in a certain contingency to bid for the property for himself, and, in view of the subsequent actions of the parties, was deemed to have done so. Gloeckner v. Kittlaus, 192 Mo. 477, 91 S. W. 126. Held, though the contract was not clear on the point, it contemplated that defendant should be repaid the money advanced and should receive in addition a specified portion of the property. Id. 88. Brotherton v. Gilchrist, 144 Mich. 274, 13 Det. Leg. N. 150, 107 N. W. 890. That defendant referred to himself as a "silent partner" and announced his purpose of paying outstanding accounts held not sufficient to charge him. Id. See Partnership, 6 C. L. 911.

89. Where one of two joint purchasers of land had a secret agreement by which a portion of the price was returned to him, he was bound to pay back to his partner the latter's share. Jordan v. Markham, 130 Iowa, 546, 107 N. W. 613.

Defendant held not guilty of breach in not procuring the issue of the stock to himself so that plaintiff could have possession in order to make sales. Id.

93. Written agreement as to division of profits from sale of real estate held to supersede a prior oral one and plaintiff could not share in profits of a particular sale to which it referred in any other manner than that specified therein. Keilich v. Blum, 214 Pa. 54, 63 A. 453.

and the venture has closed so that nothing remains but to pay over to one of the parties his share of the proceeds, an action at law may be maintained for the amount due.[96] A bill to compel an accounting for profits must show that the enterprise has reached a completion at a profit, or is being currently operated at a profit, or managed in fraud of complainant's rights.[97] Complainant must show performance on his part.[98] An illegal contract will not be enforced.[99] If a syndicate agreement is materially modified without the consent of a party thereto, he is no longer bound thereby.[100]

JOINT STOCK COMPANIES.[1]

A joint stock company is a partnership with a capital divided into shares so as to be transferable without the express consent of all the copartners.[2] Joint stock companies differ from ordinary partnerships in that death of a member or the transfer of his interest does not dissolve the association;[3] and one member has no general power to bind his comembers by disposing of property or incurring indebtedness.[4] Hence, while these associations may be controlled to some extent by the principles applicable to general partnerships, they cannot be entirely governed thereby.[5] Organizations of this kind are legal at common law,[6] and under the constitution and statutes of Idaho, provided they do not have or exercise any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships.[7] The members may as between themselves confer upon the association the attributes of a corporation without giving it any organized corporate form,[8] but a shareholder

3. Spotswood v. Morris [Idaho] 85 P. 1094.

4. Spotswood v. Morris [Idaho] 85 P. 1094. Held, under the articles of incorporation, the vice-president or secretary had no authority to list real estate of the association with a broker for sale. Id. Plaintiff failed to show that association ever authorized such listing or ratified the same. Id.

5, 6. Spotswood v. Morris [Idaho] 85 P. 1094.

7. Spotswood v. Morris [Idaho] 85 P. 1094. Under Const. §§ 2, 16, art. 11, an unincorporated association may be formed for the purchase of a single tract of real estate, title to be taken in a trustee, and the agreement may provide that death of a member shall not work a dissolution of the association and that members or officers shall not sell or dispose of property without concurrence of the shareholders. Id. Such association was neither a corporation nor a general partnership. Id. Limitation of agency of members results from lack of right of delectus personae and is not an incident of the association not possessed by a partnership. Id. Even if association exercised privileges not possessed by individuals or partnerships, § 2, art. 11, of the Constitution does not apply since it is not operating under any special law as therein prohibited, and the command in said section is directed exclusively to the legislature to provide a general law for its organization. Id.

8. Where agreement provided that death should not work a dissolution except at election of a stockholder, if it was intended to give the association the attributes of a will nevertheless be entitled to maintain a bill for an accounting if trustees should refuse or fail to divide accrued or net profits.[9] Where a transferee of stock calls upon the seller to repurchase it under an agreement between the parties and arrangements are made for a settlement as of a certain date, he will not be permitted to select a later date for settlement,[10] and profits earned thereafter will belong to the seller.[11] Though the members are partners and may be held liable as such for firm debts, they may legally have contracts so drawn as to restrict liability to the assets of the association.[12] A member may be held liable for debts of the company notwithstanding his attempted withdrawal therefrom if subsequently he participates in its affairs or otherwise holds himself out as a member;[13] but one who has withdrawn from the company as authorized by its by-laws is not liable for debts subsequently incurred, though he is unable to procure a transfer of the stock on the association books to his purchaser.[14] A statute making it a misdemeanor for a corporation to do business in the state without filing a statement is ordinarily not applicable to joint stock companies.[15]

20. A special judge of the municipal court of the city of Stillwater, elected at the November election for the term commencing on the second Tuesday of the following April, has until the commencement of the term to qualify as such officer, though the city charter provides that "any officer who shall refuse or neglect for 10 days after notice of his election or appointment to enter upon the discharge of the duties of his office shall be deemed to have vacated his office." State v. Jack [Minn.] 108 N. W. 10.

in the wrong office,[21] or that a bond is not recorded within the statutory period, will ordinarily not render the office vacant.[22] A judge having been duly elected and qualified, it is not competent for the legislature to annul the election without cause and designate some one else to fill the office.[23] The length of a term will depend upon constitutional provisions in force up to and including election day, and not upon such as may be adopted on that day.[24] Constitutional directions as to appointments and elections to fill vacancies must be complied with.[25] Justices of inferior courts not of record are removable in New York by such courts as may be prescribed by law.[26]

The acts of a de facto judge[27] are generally held valid[28] and not subject to collateral attack.[29]

Salaries[30] and fees are generally fixed by statute.[31] The salary attaches to the 21. That county judge filed oath with county clerk instead of in office of clerk of circuit court, as required by Rev. St. 1898, § 2442, did not render office vacant. State v. Bunnell [Wis.] 110 N. W. 177.

22. Not fatal that bond was not recorded until three months after it was executed and filed, though statute required recording before filing. State v. Bunnell [Wis.] 110 N. W. 177.

23. Laws 1905, p. 154, c. 91, §§ 1, 2, providing that all county judges theretofore appointed to fill vacancies should continue in office until January, 1906, could not extend the right of an appointee to hold the office to the prejudice of one who had been duly elected, and who had qualified as county judge before the act went into effect, to fill an unexpired term ending January 1, 1906. State v. Bunnell [Wis.] 110 N. W. 177. Repeal of the law June 6, 1905, would also seem to defeat the appointee's claim. Id.

24. Const. art. 4, § 7, was in force as to all its provisions until the close of the election on November 7, 1905, and a person elected on that day to succeed himself as probate judge was elected for only three years from the expiration of the term which he was already holding. State v. Pattison 73 Ohio St. 305, 76 N. E. 946. Section 2 of the amendment to the Constitution, now designated as article 17, providing that the term of office of a probate judge shall be four years, applies only to such persons as shall be elected to such office as provided in § 1 of such amendment. Id.

25. Upon the establishment of a new judicial district or the creation of a new judgeship in an old district a "vacancy" occurs within the meaning of Const. § 152, requiring that a vacancy in an elective office must be filled at the next ensuing election covering the territory in which the officer is to be voted for if the vacancy has existed for three months and the unexpired term does not end at such election, and the legislature had no power to order a special election of a new judge. Yates v. McDonald, 29 Ky. L. R. 1056, 96 S. W. 865.

26. The court of special sessions of the city of New York is an "inferior court not of record" within Const. art. 6, § 17, providing for the removal of justices of such courts by such courts as may be prescribed by law, and the omission of the word "not" by Laws 1895, p. 683, c. 880, amending Code Crim. Proc. § 11, should be regarded as a mere scrivener's error. In re Deuel, 101 N. Y. S. 1037. The supreme court of the county of New York has power to remove a justice of the court of special sessions for cause. Const. art. 6, § 17; Laws 1895, p. 1283, c. 601. Id., 112 App. Div. 99, 98 N. Y. S. 297.

27. See 6 C. L. 210. One who claims to act as judge pro tem of a city court by virtue of an appointment filed in a public office, and who is recognized by litigants, the officers of the court, and others as judge pro tem, is a de facto judge. Briggs v. Voss [Kan.] 85 P. 571.

28. Rev. St. 1899, § 1679, provides for the election of a special judge by the attorneys present when a judge shall be unable to hold court and fail to procure another judge. Held, where a judge died during term and the attorneys elected a special judge, he became a judge de facto and his acts during the term were valid, irrespective of whether there was a vacancy which should be filled by the governor. 30. See 6 C. L. 210.

31. The salary of justices of the supreme court of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, was $5,000, being the salary fixed by the appropriation act for the year ending June 30, 1892, though the appropriation for the next year was a lump sum insufficient to pay more than the former salary, in view of the appropriation of March 2, 1895 (28 St. at L. 851, c. 187), to pay as a deficiency for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, a sum representing the difference between the compensation theretofore received and $5,000 per year. James v. U. S., 202 U. S. 401, 50 Law. Ed. 1079. Under Const. art. 18, § 7, and the law carrying it into effect, a probate judge must account to the county for all fees received by him for services rendered by virtue of his office over and above his actual and necessary expenses (Rhea v. Washington County Com'rs [Idaho] 88 P. 89), but under § 2438, Rev. St. 1887, he may retain any gratuity received by him over the statutory fee of $5 for solemnizing a marriage (Id.). Rev. St. 1899, § 2597, providing for the payment of a fee to a special judge in criminal office, not to the incumbent.[32] The constitution of Connecticut does not prohibit an increase of judicial salaries by legislation so as to affect judges in office when the law is enacted.[33] Federal judges may resign on full pay after reaching the age of seventy.[34]

§ 2. Special, substitute, and assistant judges.[35]—Statutes generally provide for the election or appointment of a special judge when the regular judge is absent or disqualified,[36] or for the calling in of another judge, or an attorney, to preside.[37] In Oklahoma the supreme court or chief justice thereof may appoint another judge upon any notice that may be received that a change of judge has been granted in a lower court.[38] Under the Missouri statute a circuit judge need not state the reasons why he is unable to try a case before he can call in another judge.[39] In the courts, applies also to special judges in the St. Louis court of criminal correction. Constitution and statutes considered. State v. Wilder, 198 Mo. 166, 95 S. W. 910. Under section 546 of the Revised Statutes, probate judges are entitled to receive six cents for each one hundred words of orders entered on the journal. Under the same section they are not entitled to thirty-five cents for each certificate under the seal of the court to the copies of the certificate of the medical witness and of his findings in the case as required by section 705. State v. Adams, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 513.

32. Under Const. art. 6, § 6, declaring that the legislature may provide for the election of more than one judge in the circuit including Saginaw county, and that such judge or judges, in addition to the salary provided by the constitution, shall receive from counties "such additional salary" as may "from time to time be fixed" by the board of supervisors; and Pub. Acts 1889, p. 79, No. 75 (Comp. Laws, § 279), providing for two judges in the circuit including Saginaw county, and that in case of illness or inability of either judge the business assigned to him shall be done by the other, the salaries provided for in the constitution are to be fixed in advance, and the board of supervisors of Saginaw county had no authority to allow one of the judges extra compensation for services performed by him during the illness of the other. Beach v. Kent, 142 Mich. 347, 12 Det. Leg. N. 747, 105 N. W. 867.

33. Laws 1905, p. 410, c. 213, increasing the salaries of members of the supreme court of errors and of the superior court, and going into effect from date of passage, does not violate art. 24 of the amendments to the constitution prohibiting extra compensation to public officers and providing that neither the general assembly nor any county, city, etc., shall increase the compensation of any public officer or employe to take effect during the continuance in office of any person whose salary might be increased thereby, such amendment prohibiting an increase only by grant other than legislation. McGovern v. Mitchell, 78 Conn. 536, 63 A. 433.

34. The supreme court of the District of Columbia is a "court of the United States" within U. S. Rev. St. § 714. U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 578, providing for full pay to judges seventy years of age who resign after having held their commissions for ten years. James v. U. S., 202 U. S. 401, 50 Law. Ed. 1079.

35. See 6 C. L. 210.

36. Rev. St. 1899, §§ 1679, 1681, providing for the election of a special judge and in case of his failure or inability to act then for the election of another, do not authorize the election of a special judge during the absence of a judge who has been called in from another district under § 1678 for disqualification of the regular judge so as to authorize the special judge to set aside an order made by the judge called in. Bower v. Daniel, 198 Mo. 289, 95 S. W. 347. Under Rev. St. 1895, art. 1071, the attorneys present could elect a special judge on the first day of the term where the regular judge was absent, the statute not providing that it could be done until some succeeding day. Cox v. Oliver [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 790, 95 S. W. 596. Where after reversal of the judgment of a special judge agreed upon by the parties, and his refusal to serve farther, the governor appointed a judge of another district, under Sayles' Rev. St. 1897, art. 1069, to try the case, the latter judge had jurisdiction, the regular judge being disqualified. Sovereign Camp of Woodmen v. Boehme [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 847 Under Const. 1874, art. 7, §§ 32, 34, and 36, providing that whenever the judge of the county or probate court may be disqualified the governor may appoint a special judge, the governor may appoint a special judge of a court of common pleas to try a case in which the judge of that court is disqualified. Beauman v. Wells, Fargo & Co. Exp., 77 Ark. 152, 91 S. W. 13. Record held to sufficiently disclose authority of such special judge to preside. Id.

37. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 1839, a judge from whom a change of venue is taken may, in his discretion, call an attorney to act as special judge instead of calling a regular judge. Juliana v. State [Ind.] 79 N. E. 359.

38. Act Cong. Dec. 31, 1893, c. 5, 28 St. 21. Barbe v. Territory, 16 Okl. 562, 86 P. 61. While the Territorial Legislature could make proper provision for the orderly transmission of notice to the clerk of the supreme court when an order for change of judge was granted, such provision was not a restriction upon the authority of the supreme court or chief justice thereof to act upon other notice. Id.

39. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 1678, providing absence of constitutional restrictions the legislature has power to permit judges to interchange duties and hold court for each other.[40] A party may waive his right to object that a special judge was improperly appointed.[41]

Ordinarily, when judges interchange districts, each has power to perform all the duties imposed on a judge in the district over which he has been requested to preside.[42] In Alabama the statutes provide for a supernumerary judge,[43] and one holding a regular term may designate a day for holding an adjourned term and may preside at the adjourned term so fixed by him.[44] Where uncompleted business is referred to the judge of another district during the absence of the regular judge, the substitute judge may exercise the functions of a judge in chambers in connection with such business within his own district.[45] A judge of another circuit called in to try a case owing to disqualification of the regular judge is not deprived of jurisdiction on account of the expiration of his term of office where he is re-elected to succeed himself;[46] nor is a substitute judge necessarily disqualified because he may not have authority to try similar cases in his own district.[47] A second special judge duly appointed or elected may finish business not completed by the first.[48] The authority of a special judge appointed to act during the disability of the regular judge continues during such disability[49] and terminates with it.[50] A that when "for any cause" he is unable to hold court he may call another judge. Dauwalter v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 115 Mo. App. 577, 92 S. W. 516.

40. Sess. Laws 1899, p. 171, c. 91, authorizing county judges to interchange, is not unconstitutional because Const. art. 6, § 12, provides that district judges may hold court for each other, and § 22 relating to county judges grants no such privilege. Prudential Ins. Co. v. Hummer [Colo.] 84 P. 61. Municipal Court Act of New York, Laws 1902, p. 1494, § 12, and Laws 1904, p. 1429, c. 598, providing for such rotation of justices in that court that each justice shall sit in at least five other districts after sitting in his own district for one month, do not deny the equal protection of the laws, though when passed there was but one borough that had as many as six districts. Sakolski v. Schenkel, 50 Misc. 151, 98 N. Y. S. 190. The laws are authorized by Const. art. 6, § 17, providing that district court justices may be elected in cities in such manner and with such powers as shall be prescribed by law. Id.

41. By appearance before special judge and, after change of venue, demurring to complaint, excepting to ruling and filing answer to merits. Whitesell v. Strickler [Ind.] 78 N. E. 845.

42. Under Const. art. 5, § 11, providing that district judges may interchange districts when expedient and may do so when required by law, a judge assigned to try cases in another district had authority to try a case the indictment in which was returned while he was holding court, though the governor in appointing him had not designated such case as one of those to be tried, whatever construction may be insisted upon under Act June 19, 1897 (Acts 25th Leg. [Sp. Sess.] p. 39; Wilson's Supp. Code Cr. Proc. 1897-1900, p. 105, art. 610c). Miller v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 35, 91 S. W. 582.

43. The act creating the office of supernumerary judge is constitutional. Sims v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 413.

44. Whatley v. State, 144 Ala. 68, 39 So. 1014. Acts 1898, pp. 236, 237, §§ 1, 2, are sufficient in themselves to confer the power conceding that the other sections of the act are unconstitutional. Id.

45. Under Comp. Laws, § 2573, declaring that district judges may each exercise the functions of judges in chambers at any point in the state, he could extend the time for preparation of a statement on motion for a new trial without an affidavit that the trial judge was still absent, notwithstanding § 197 of the Practice Act (Comp. Laws, § 3292), providing that the time may be extended by the court or the judge before whom the case was tried, and court rule 43, providing that no judge except the one having charge of the cause shall do anything required to be done in a cause or proceeding unless absence or inability of the trial judge be shown by affidavit. Twaddle v. Winters [Nev.] 85 P. 280.

46. Could make nunc pro tunc entry of judgment and sentence in criminal case and extend time for filing bill of exceptions. State v. Gordon, 196 Mo. 185, 95 S. W. 420.

47. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 2597, a judge called to try a criminal case held not disqualified because he could not try criminal cases in the circuit over which he presided. State v. McCarver, 194 Mo. 717, 92 S. W. 684.

48. Could hear and determine motion for new trial where first special judge was called away after verdict. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Voliva [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 501, 91 S. W. 354. Upon the resignation of a special judge elected by the bar, another special judge duly elected may hold the balance of the term. Cox v. Oliver [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 790, 95 S. W. 595.

49. Not limited to term at which he was appointed. Warner v. Ford Lumber & Mfg. Co., 29 Ky. L. R. 527, 93 S. W. 650.

50. Where not appointed to try a special special judge being only a substitute, it is not contemplated that both the regular and the special judges should hold court in the same county or district at the same time.[51]

§ 3. Powers, duties, and liabilities.[52]—One circuit judge cannot review, reverse, or modify an order of another unless it is administrative in character.[53] In New York a justice of the appellate division of the supreme court cannot exercise any of the powers of a justice of the supreme court other than those of a justice at chambers and those pertaining to the appellate court of which he is a member.[54] In Alabama the probate judge, and not the probate court, has power to hear or grant a petition for a writ of habeas corpus when a person has been confined for a felony.[55] In Texas the regular district judge alone has power to create a special term of court.[56] The provision of the constitution of Pennsylvania exempting judges from the imposition of nonjudicial duties applies only to judges of the supreme court.[57] A mandate from an appellate court directing a judge to forthwith secure the services of another judge, or show cause on a day named, operates to stay all his action in the case until entry of remittitur on the judgment of the appellate court.[58] An official judicial signature should be by name and not initials.[59]

Powers during vacation or at chambers[60] or after term of office.[61]—Powers in chambers or out of term are derived from statute[62] and generally extend to inter-case but merely during illness of regular judge. Hall Com. Co. v. Crook & Co., 87 Miss. 445, 40 So. 1006.

51. Bedford v. Stone [Tex. Civ. App.] 95 S. W. 1086. But since in this case defendant had no defense whatever to the suit, and the judgment of the special judge was clearly correct, the error was harmless. Id.

52. See 6 C. L. 211.

53. Orders held not conflicting. Lockwood v. Lockwood, 73 S. C. 18, 52 S. E. 735.

54. Under Const. art. 6, § 2, and Code Civ. Proc. § 222. Owasco Lake Cemetery v. Teller, 110 App. Div. 450, 96 N. Y. S. 985; Williamson v. Randolph, 111 App. Div. 539, 97 N. Y. S. 949. Where a justice before whom an issue of fact was tried filed an opinion but no decision was signed or judgment entered within 20 days after the final adjournment of the term and the judge was designated as justice of the appellate division for a term of five years, he could not enter judgment and an order restoring the action for retrial was proper. Id. Parties cannot by consent confer upon a justice of the appellate division power to hold a special term of the supreme court for the hearing of motions and to enter an order such as an order of reference on a motion there pending. Owasco Lake Cemetery v. Teller, 110 App. Div. 450, 96 N. Y. S. 985. A justice, who after the trial of a cause becomes a member of the appellate division, cannot thereafter decide a motion for a nonsuit reserved at the trial. Milliman v. New York, etc., R. Co., 109 App. Div. 139, 95 N. Y. S. 1097. Where a justice refuses to settle and sign a formal decision in the supreme court because of his designation to the appellate division, plaintiff has an absolute right to a new trial without terms or conditions. Williamson v. Randolph, 185 N. Y. 603, 78 N. E. 545.

55. Code 1896, §§ 3372, 4817. Carwile v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 1024.

56. That judge who had been of counsel made an order setting the case for trial at a special term called by himself was not a tenable objection. McAllen v. Raphael [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 760.

57. It is the duty of judges of courts of common pleas to appoint members of county tax boards. Commonwealth v. Collier, 213 Pa. 138, 62 A. 567.

58. Noel v. Smith, 2 Cal. App. 158, 83 P. 167. Where before remittitur had been filed in the superior court the judge made an order with reference to certain motions in the case, such order constituted a technical contempt. Id.

59. Allowance of an order at chambers by "W. B. S." held bad. Conery v. His Creditors, 115 La. 807, 40 So. 173.

60. See 6 C. L. 211.

61. See 2 C. L. 579; 6 C. L. 210.

62. By § 260, Civil Code (Cobbey's Ann. St. 1903, § 1239), a judge of the district court at chambers is given jurisdiction to enforce obedience of an injunction or restraining order whether the same was allowed by the court or by a judge thereof, but he has no jurisdiction to punish a violation of such order, as a criminal offense, by imprisonment. Back v. State [Neb.] 106 N. W. 787. Under Acts 1894-95, p. 831, conferring upon the circuit court of Jefferson county the same jurisdiction "now conferred on courts of chancery," and providing that the chancery rules of practice shall apply, the judge of the circuit court of Jefferson county has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver in vacation. Ensley Development Co. v. Powell [Ala.] 40 So. 137. A district judge at chambers has power to dissolve a restraining order granted by a probate judge under the provisions of Civil Code, § 239, as amended. Hurd v. Atchison, etc., R. Co. [Kan.] 84 P. 553. Judge could not sign bill of exceptions in vacation after adjournment of court

locutory and provisional orders,[63] but not to matters affecting the merits.[64] Power to do an act "in vacation within 30 days" after term will not extend into a new term beginning less than thirty days after the old.[65] Power to "enter" a judgment does not imply power to "render" one.[66] A judge in vacation has no power to summarily issue a mandatory injunction except in extreme cases where irreparable injury is threatened;[67] and a peremptory writ of mandamus issued in vacation on the petition only is void.[68] In Illinois it requires a majority of the judges of a judicial circuit to dispense with a jury for a term of court by an order in vacation.[69]

By statute, a judge who has tried a case may settle a bill of exceptions or case made after his term of office expires.[70] A succeeding judge may modify administrative, as distinguished from final, orders made by his predecessor,[71] and may cause a case to be placed upon its appropriate calendar.[72] Upon the death of a Federal judge after rendition of verdict in a criminal case, his successor has power to hear and determine a motion for a new trial on the merits where he is satisfied that he can fairly pass upon the motion,[73] and he may also pass sentence if there is sufficient evidence in the record to enable him to fairly and intelligently exercise his discretion.[74] In a contest in the orphans' court of New Jersey, a succeeding judge may use evidence previously taken in open court and reproduced from stenographer's notes.[75] without order of court or agreement of counsel required by statute. Meyer v. Alverson [Ala.] 39 So. 984.

63. Under Code, §§ 2405, 2406, 4356, 4357, a judge has jurisdiction in vacation to issue a temporary writ of injunction against a liquor nuisance, whether the proceeding is brought by the county attorney or a citizen. Young v. Preston [Iowa] 108 N. W. 463. Under Rev. St. 1892, § 1196, a circuit judge has full power either in term time or in vacation to stay an execution issued from and returnable to the circuit court in cases at law. Barnett v. Hickson [Fla.] 41 So. 606. Under Rev. St. 1892, § 2913, an order for the issuance of a commission to take the testimony of absent witnesses may be made by the judge either in term or in vacation on application of defendant in a criminal case. Clements v. State [Fla.] 40 So. 432. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 3951, the circuit judge in vacation may remand to a justice of the peace an action of unlawful detainer originally brought before the justice and certified by him to the circuit court. South St. Joseph Town Co. v. Scott, 115 Mo. App. 16, 90 S. W. 727.

64. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 168, in a default case, testimony must be taken by the court or referee, and a judge in chambers in one county cannot hear testimony and render judgment in a default case pending in another county. Hotchkiss v. First National Bank [Colo.] 85 P. 1007. A judge has no authority acting outside of court to alter a judgment previously duly rendered in open court. O'Brophy v. Era Gold Min. Co. [Colo.] 85 P. 679.

65. Signing bills of exceptions. Hoover v. Saunders, 104 Va. 783, 52 S. E. 657.

66. Rev. St. 1901, par. 1442, providing that a judgment may be "entered" in vacation, does not justify the "rendition" of a judgment in vacation and outside the district in which the case was tried. Meade v. Scribner [Ariz.] 85 P. 729.

67. Could not on petition alone compel issuance of license to brewer to establish an agency. Hager v. New South Brew. Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 895, 90 S. W. 608.

69. Hurd's Rev. St. 1903, c. 37, § 79. Newlin v. People, 221 Ill. 166, 77 N. E. 529.

70. Rev. St. 1898, § 3290, does not violate Const. art. 8, § 5, limiting the term of office of district judges to four years. Larkin v. Saltair Beach Co. [Utah] 83 P. 686. Where within the time fixed by the trial judge for settling a case-made, his successor orders another extension and provides therein that within a definite time the trial judge shall settle and sign the case-made, the trial judge may settle and sign within such time. Stanton v. Barnes, 72 Kan. 541, 84 P. 116. Evidence held to show that no time had been fixed for settling and signing a case-made when the term of office of the trial judge expired. State v. Lewis, 72 Kan. 234, 83 P. 619.

71. An order allowing time to answer after default but which does not authorize judgment for plaintiff on failure to answer within the prescribed time is an administrative and not a final order, and, not involving the merits, a succeeding circuit judge has power to modify it by permitting an answer to be filed after a second default. Kaylor v. Hiller, 72 S. C. 433, 52 S. E. 120.

74. United States v. Meldrum, 146 F. 390.

75. Where trial judge resigned it was not necessary to try case de novo. In re Nolan's Will [N. J. Eq.] 63 A. 618.

Immunities and exemptions.[76]—Judicial officers are not civilly liable for judicial acts within the jurisdiction of the court,[77] and while they may be held liable for acts outside the jurisdiction, this does not mean jurisdiction dependent upon the existence of facts to be determined by them from evidence adduced, but jurisdiction as a matter of law.[78]

Disability to practice or hold other office.[79]—In New York, a justice of the court of special sessions is disqualified to hold any other public office or carry on any other business.[80]

§ 4. Disqualification in particular cases.[81]—A judge is not required to vacate the bench merely because a friend of his boasts of his influence over him.[82] Though the disqualification of a judge deprives him of authority to render judgment in a court, it does not take from the court jurisdiction of a cause properly brought in the county.[83] There is a conflict as to the status of a judgment rendered by a disqualified judge,[84] and as to the extent to which disqualifications can be waived.[85]

Interest and kinship.[86]—Mere interest in the question at issue as distinguished from interest in the cause does not disqualify.[87] Relationship to a party within a certain degree is a disqualification in most states.[88] In Texas a judge is disqualified when related to either of the parties by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree.[89] In Louisiana, when a judge recuses himself for interest, he is required to appoint a judge of an adjoining district to try the case.[90] Disqualification may be waived when the statute so provides.[91]

76. See 6 C. L. 212.

77. And the reason and policy of the rule apply with equal force against the maintenance of an action alleging an act to have been negligently or corruptly done. MacBride v. Gould, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 469.

78. Therefore a finding by a judge that the evidence established one year's residence of the plaintiff within the state, in a divorce trial, will not be inquired into in an action against such judge on the ground that such finding was erroneous and therefore no right or jurisdiction existed to grant the divorce. MacBride v. Gould, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 469.

80. Or practicing as attorney or counselor at law. Laws 1895, p. 1294, c. 601, § 25, is constitutional. In re Deuel, 112 App. Div. 99, 98 N. Y. S. 297.

81. See 6 C. L. 212.

82. Not where brother-in-law of judge boasted that he could influence judge's decision in election contest. Browning v. Lovett, 29 Ky. L. R. 692, 94 S. W. 661.

83. So as to authorize prohibition. Dakan v. Superior Ct. of Santa Cruz County [Cal. App.] 82 P. 1129.

84. Rev. St. 1837, c. 43, § 24, provides that no justice of the peace shall sit in any case where he is related to either party within the fourth degree. Kirby's Dig. § 4571, provides that where a justice of the peace "is of near relation" to one party the other may have a change of venue. Held relationship of the justice to one of the parties did not avoid his judgment but was merely a ground for change of venue. Morrow v. Watts [Ark.] 95 S. W. 988, and authority cited.

85. Objection to jurisdiction of a justice of the peace on the ground of his relationship to one of the parties held waived where the statute provided that disqualification on such ground could be waived by consent and the question was not raised until after judgment and appeal to the circuit court. Morrow v. Watts [Ark.] 95 S. W. 988.

86. See 6 C. L. 212.

87. Under Const. art. 5, § 11, and Rev. St. 1895, art. 1068, disqualifying a judge in a cause wherein he is interested, though the judge was a taxpayer, he was not disqualified in a suit to restrain the collection of city taxes where judgment therein could in no manner affect him. Nalle v. Austin [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 660, 93 S. W. 141.

88. A register of wills with whom a petition for review is filed, who is the great-uncle of the wife of one of the petitioners for review, is disqualified to hear the petition. Layton v. Jacobs [Del.] 62 A. 691.

89. Where great-grandmother of plaintiff's wife, who was interested in the case, and of the judge who tried it, were one and the same person, the judge was disqualified by relationship within the third degree. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Looney [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 46, 95 S. W. 691. Where the damages recovered would be community property, plaintiff's wife, though not mentioned in the pleadings, was a party within the statute disqualifying a judge related to either party. Id.

90. That a judge had advised the police jury that it was authorized to build a courthouse, while showing that he had formed an opinion, did not indicate any personal interest in the matter, and where he stated that he had no reason for his recusation, he could appoint a lawyer having the qualification of a judge of his court. Murphy v. Police Jury of St. Mary, 116 La. 939, 41 So. 216.

91. Cause determined by supreme court of errors, though all the justices of that

Disqualification because of having been counsel [92] disables a judge to sit in the case,[93] and he having been consulted, the extent of his knowledge of the facts or the probable effect upon his mind is immaterial.[94]

Bias and prejudice.[95]—Public confidence in our judicial system and courts of justice demands, even when there is no statute, that causes be tried by unprejudiced and unbiased judges.[96] The employment by a mayor of detectives to obtain testimony for use in a prosecution for liquor selling, and the payment of such detectives by the mayor for the services so rendered, does not disqualify the mayor from sitting at the trial of the case.[97]

Procedure and trial of fact of disqualification.[98]—The objection must be made promptly,[99] and the party who seeks to disqualify a judge has the burden of presenting facts showing disqualification,[1] legal conclusions being nugatory.[2] A judge who sits upon the return of a motion should refer it to the trial judge if it can be entertained only by him.[3] In California, the judge whose bias is alleged must himself hear and determine the motion for a change of judge,[4] and his own affidavit stating facts disproving bias may be used in opposition to the motion.[5] In some states the mere filing of an affidavit of prejudice disqualifies a judge in certain cases,[6] and a declaration in open court by a judge so disqualified of his intention to court and all but two of the judges of the superior court were interested, but the disqualification was waived by stipulation in open court as authorized by Gen. St. 1902, § 498. McGovern v. Mitchell, 78 Conn. 536, 63 A. 433.

92. See 6 C. L. 213.

93. Could not settle bill of exceptions without consent of parties. State v. Bradley, 194 Mo. 166, 92 S. W. 464. The fact that the regular judge appeared to some extent as counsel for the successful party is not ground for reversing the judgment where on the agreed statement of facts no other result is possible than the verdict directed. McAllen v. Raphael [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 760.

94. Criminal case. Juliana v. State [Ind.] 79 N. E. 359.

95. See 6 C. L. 213.

96. Day v. Day [Idaho] 86 P. 531. Const. § 18, art. 1, is self-executing, and the legislature, by failing to provide by proper legislation that prejudice of a judge is cause for change of venue, cannot nullify its provisions and thus compel the trial of a cause before a prejudiced judge. Id.

97. Nor is he disqualified by opinions he may entertain regarding the offense. Garrison v. State, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 277.

98. See 6 C. L. 213.

99. Where relators failed during a full term to apply for election of a special judge to settle bill of exceptions on account of the regular judge having been of counsel, mandamus would not thereafter lie to compel the judge to extend the time for filing. State v. Bradley, 194 Mo. 166, 92 S. W. 464. Affidavit too late where not filed until after demurrer to ruling charging accused with contempt, and after accused had moved to strike out parts thereof, had obtained continuances, etc. French v. Com. [Ky.] 97 S. W. 427. But a judge being disqualified by reason of relationship, it was immaterial that the objection was not made until the making of a motion for a new trial. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Looney [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 46, 95 S. W. 691.

1. Change of venue. Dakan v. Superior Ct. of Santa Cruz County [Cal. App.] 82 P. 1129. An affidavit that the judge has shown great partiality and favoritism to the attorney in opposition to the interests of defendant is insufficient. Id. Affidavit merely showing belief that judge disliked affiant because of his failure to bring about a reconciliation held insufficient. French v. Com. [Ky.] 97 S. W. 427. Averment in cross petition that the chancellor was disqualified to take charge of assignment proceedings because "a party to said suit and interested therein" held insufficient, it not appearing from the pleadings that he was a party and it not being shown how he was interested. Metcalfe v. Merchants' & Planters' Bank [Miss.] 41 So. 377. That 16 years before the judge, as district attorney, had caused defendant and others to be convicted for battery and later had laid the facts before the governor for his information on passing on petition for pardon held not to require change of judge. Hoyt v. Zumwalt [Cal.] 86 P. 600. After defendant's motion for a change of venue the court could not merely, on plaintiff's affidavit and without hearing other proof, find the judge of another division disqualified. Leslie v. Chase & Son Mercantile Co. [Mo.] 98 S. W. 523.

3. Motion for resettlement of case on appeal. Henry v. Interurban St. R. Co., 100 N. Y. S. 811.

4, 5. Hoyt v. Zumwalt [Cal.] 86 P. 600.

6. The object of § 550, Rev. St. 1892, is to secure the attendance of a judge of the court of common pleas of another subdivision when the judges of the subdivision in which the case is pending are disqualified, and an affidavit filed for that purpose is of no effect unless it alleges the disqualification of all the judges of the latter subdivision. Wolfe proceed with the trial, notwithstanding the filing of the affidavit, is sufficient ground for a proceeding in mandamus and injunction.[7] In Louisiana no appeal lies from an order recusing a judge.[8]

§ 1. Definition, nature, and classification of judgments.[13]—A judgment is the decision or sentence of the law given by a court of justice or other competent tribunal as the result of proceedings instituted therein for the redress of an injury,[14] and is the final determination and adjudication of the controversy or proceeding.[15] Hence it follows that a finding of facts or a declaration of the rights of the parties are not final judgments.[16] There must be a sentence of the court that the parties have the rights to which they are found to be entitled.[17]

Judgments on offer, consent, stipulation, or confession.[18]

Defaults and office judgments.[19]—Strictly speaking, a judgment by default cannot be taken after issue is joined.[20]

Final and interlocutory judgments.[21]—The word "final" is used of a judgment in several senses, and when used in any qualified sense, that fact must be kept clearly in mind.[22] A judgment which terminates and completely disposes of the action is final, regardless of the further action of the court,[23] hence it follows that unless an action is severed there can be but one final judgment in an action.[24]

Judgments in personam and in rem.[25]—A judgment in personam is one against the person; a judgment in rem one against the property.[26]

§ 2. Requisites. A. In general.[27]—In order to have a valid judgment, the court must have jurisdiction of the cause of action and the subject-matter thereof,[28] and, except in actions in rem, of all necessary[29] parties.[30] Personal service within

Partition decree, ordering sale of land of persons not parties, held void as to such persons. Suburban Co. v. Turner's Adm'r [Va.] 54 S. E. 29. Where a case is tried on the theory that the defendants compose a voluntary joint stock company and that service must be made upon each defendant to give jurisdiction, a judgment against unserved defendants is erroneous. Spotswood v. Dernham [Idaho] 85 P. 1108. Gen. St. p. 2336, § 2, is valid so far as authorizing plaintiff to proceed to judg-

the jurisdiction of the court or an appearance is essential to a judgment in personam,[31] a judgment against a nonresident not so served or appearing being effective only as to property attached in the action,[32] though in some states, where the judgment is based on substituted service, it is sufficient if the complaint or affidavit on which publication is based describes the property of defendant within the state,[33] and this fact must affirmatively appear on the record.[34] It follows that there must be a legal service of valid process,[35] or its equivalent, i. e., an authorized appearance,[36] though mere irregularities therein will not render the judgment void.[37] One being legally served but not appearing, irregularities in the method of taking the judgment does not render the latter void.[38] There must have been a formal commencement of a suit or action by one of the methods prescribed by law,[39] hence it is essential to the validity of the judgment that proper pleadings be filed,[40] and, the court being one of record, that such pleadings are in writing.[41]

ment against one of two joint debtors on his being properly brought into court, though invalid so far as authorizing judgment against the defendant not so brought in. Sayre & Fisher Co. v. Griefen [N. J. Law] 62 A. 993. A judgment cannot be rendered against one who has not been summoned and against whom relief is not asked in the pleadings, though there is a verbal agreement that if judgment should go against defendant he should recover against such person, and a verdict is rendered against him. Watt v. Parlin & Orendorff Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 510, 98 S. W. 428.

31. Bank of Horton v. Knox [Iowa] 109 N. W. 201; Clark v. Wells, 27 S. Ct. 43. Default personal judgment. Lutcher v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 182, 95 S. W. 572. A personal judgment, rendered in an action for money only in a state court, against a nonresident of the state who was served by a publication of summons without personal service of process within the state, and who did not appear in the action, is without any validity. Judgment foreclosing second mortgage given to secure sureties on a purchase-money note held not to bar an action on the note to establish the personal liability of the maker, there being no recital in the decree, nor showing otherwise that in the foreclosure suit personal service was had on the maker. Hunter v. Porter [Iowa] 109 N. W. 283.

32. May v. Getty, 140 N. C. 310, 53 S. E. 75. In cases of attachment where no personal service is sought the levy takes the place of service. Albright-Prior Co. v. Pacific Selling Co. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 251. Seizure of property or effects within the jurisdiction is essential. Id. In the absence of consent or of property in the state, which by attachment or otherwise has become the subject or object of the action, nothing short of service of a summons upon the defendant within the state on his appearance in the action will give to a court the jurisdiction requisite to sustain a personal judgment against a nonresident of the state or a foreign corporation. Cella Commission Co. v. Bohlinger [C. C. A.] 147 F. 419.

35. Judgment in action to quiet title held void as to those not named in the published summons, and who are not personally served and who do not appear in the action. Skjelbred v. Southard [N. D.] 108 N. W. 487. Decree foreclosing a tax lien and confiscating property without actual or legal notice to the owner, rendered by a court previous to the formal entering of any suit or action by one of the methods prescribed by law, is absolutely void. Klenk v. Byrne, 143 F. 1008. Where in an action to recover land a third person intervened and defendant did not appear and no citation was served upon defendant notifying him of the intervention, a judgment against defendant in favor of the intervener is void. Barrett v. McKinney [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 258, 93 S. W. 240.

36. A judgment against a corporation on a stipulation between plaintiff and an attorney claiming to represent the corporation, but employed by one having no authority, is void. Tabor v. Bank of Leadville [Colo.] 83 P. 1060. The effect of a general appearance is to waive the want of personal jurisdiction under personal service, and changes the action into one in personam. Luetzke v. Roberts [Wis.] 109 N. W. 949.

37. Mere irregularity of service or in the form of the notice given by a summons does not, however, render a judgment of a court of general jurisdiction void so as to be subject to collateral attack. Bail v. Hartman [Ariz.] 83 P. 358.

38. Where defendant was duly served but did not appear and the court unlawfully appointed an attorney to represent him, a judgment rendered by agreement between such attorney and plaintiff is merely voidable. Barrett v. McKinney [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 258, 93 S. W. 240.

39. Decree foreclosing tax lien. Klenk v. Byrne, 143 F. 1008.

Where plaintiff claimed to be appointed trustee by a foreign court and defendant denied the allegation, held he must not only produce the judgment appointing him but must prove such pleadings and proceedings as empowered the court to render judgment. Swing v. St. Louis Refrigerator & Wooden Gutter Co. [Ark.] 93 S. W. 978. A judgment following a declaration seeking to combine in one count a declaration in

There must be competent parties[41a] and in determining this question, the court will reject descriptive words of surplusage.[42] Failure of the pleadings to show that a party is a corporation does not render the judgment void.[43] There is a conflict as to whether or not the failure of the complaint to state a cause of action renders the judgment void.[44] There must also be an order for the judgment,[45] and a verdict[46] or findings[47] covering every material issue made by the pleadings. There is no prescribed form for a conclusion of law.[48] A mistrial will not support a judgment.[49] Where a cause is dismissed a judgment subsequently entered therein without notice is void.[50] The cause must be tried at a time fixed by law for holding court.[51] A judgment rendered by a de facto judge is valid.[52] On a motion to set aside a judgment entered on the report of a referee on the ground of his insanity, the test is whether he was able to comprehend the nature of the act and its relations, effects, and legal consequences, without regard to his sanity on other subjects,[53] and is determined as of the date on which the decision was signed and notice given to the party entitled to it.[54] A judgment against several parties may be valid as to one though void as to the others.[55] The validity of the judgment is not affected by irregularities in proceedings to enforce the same.[56] replevin with one in assumpsit for the balance due on a promissory note, and adjudging plaintiff entitled to the possession of the property taken on the writ and to judgment for the balance due on the note held void. Knowles & Son v. Cavanaugh, 144 Mich. 260, 13 Det. Leg. N. 238, 107 N. W. 1073.

41. Tinn v. U. S. Dist. Attorney, 148 Cal. 773, 84 P. 152. A written consent of one admitted to citizenship that the order admitting him be set aside for fraud, filed in support of an oral motion to that effect, cannot be considered a complaint. Id.

54. Schoenberg & Co. v. Ulman, 99 N. Y. S. 650.

Evidence: An adjudication of lunacy entered on such day is prima facie evidence of insanity and casts the burden on the party alleging sanity. Schoenberg & Co. v. Ulman Co., 99 N. Y. S. 650. Evidence of business men for whom he transacted professional matters on such date as to facts they observed and conversations with him, and even their opinions as to his sanity, is admissible. Id.

55. Judgment against defendant held valid as against him, though it wrongfully included judgment against sureties on his replevin bond. Stephens v. Davis [Ala.] 39 So. 831.

56. The validity of a judgment under which a sale of land is made is not affected by a variance between the report of the appraisers and the commissioner's report of sale. Machen v. Bernheim, 29 Ky. L. R. 427, 93 S. W. 621. It is no ground for setting aside a judgment under which land is sold

(§ 2) B. Conformity to process, pleading, proof and verdict or findings.[57]—No judgment or decree can be entered in the absence of pleadings on which to found the same.[58] A judgment must conform to the process in the action[59] and, except where the rule has been changed by statute,[60] unless the issues are changed by agreement[61] or by a consent decree, the judgment must conform to the pleadings,[62] though in equity and in some of the code states the demand of the plaintiff that the bond for the purchase price is defective; this, at most, only affects the validity of the sale. Id.

58. Duress extending time for getting timber off an infant's lands and making rebate of purchase-money held void. Lilly v. Claypool [W. Va.] 53 S. E. 22.

59. A judgment rendered against J. M. Peters on process issued against him is void as against M. J. Peters. Watt v. Parlin & Orendorff Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 154, 98 S. W. 428.

60. Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 274, 1205, where a plaintiff pleads a joint liability against several defendants, but proved a several liability against one of them only, held he was entitled to judgment against him. Lawton v. Partridge, 111 App. Div. 8, 97 N. Y. S. 516.

61. Under a stipulation that if defendant's demurrer was overruled, plaintiff's recovery should be limited to a certain sum to be paid to plaintiff's attorney or the clerk of the court, where the demurrer is overruled and defendant elected to stand on his answer, held proper to render judgment for the amount stipulated. Grouse v. Moody, 130 Iowa, 320, 106 N. W. 757.

62. Roden v. Helm, 192 Mo. 71, 90 S. W. 798. Judgment held not to conform to pleadings where declaration set out instrument sued on. Id. Personal judgment held unwarranted where complaint failed to demand same. Kervan v. Hellman, 110 App. Div. 655, 97 N. Y. S. 55. Where in an action for rent for the month of May, defendant pleaded payment to May 1st, held insufficient to warrant a judgment for defendant though payment is proved. Manhattan Leasing Co. v. Weill, 98 N. Y. S. 686. Pleadings demanding a return of pledged stock or an accounting held not to sustain a money judgment. Hebblethwaite v. Flint, 101 N. Y. S. 43. Where plaintiff sued to recover specific deposits and the court found that they had been paid but that defendant owed plaintiff for other deposits, held not to warrant a judgment for plaintiff. Boothe v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 47 Or. 299, 83 P. 785. A complaint for board furnished, labor done, and the value of broom brush will not support a judgment for team hired or gasoline furnished. Cannon v. McKenzie [Cal. App.] 85 P. 130. In an equitable action to enjoin a trespass, judgment that defendants were "possessed of the premises in question and the entirety thereof" held unauthorized by the issues. Country Club Land Ass'n v. Lohbauer, 97 N. Y. S. 11. A plaintiff cannot recover on a cause of action not only not alleged, but destructive of his judicial allegations and evidence in the particular suit. Lazarus v. Friedrichs, 117 La. 711, 42 So. 230. One failing to ask in his pleadings for the foreclosure of an equitable lien is not entitled thereto even though the evidence is sufficient to warrant such relief. Harris v. Cain [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 327, 91 S. W. 866. Where ejected passenger based his claim to damages upon the tender of a cash fare, held he could not recover, the evidence showing that he possessed a ticket. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Riney [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 804, 92 S. W. 54. Where in a suit to recover against a firm the action is dismissed as against one of the partners, a judgment cannot be rendered against the other member. King v. Monitor Drill Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 315, 92 S. W. 1046. In personal injury action, held there could be no recovery for doctor's fees or loss of time in excess of the amount claimed in the petition therefor. Smoot v. Kansas City, 194 Mo. 513, 92 S. W. 363. Action for damages for negligent blasting held not to warrant judgment as for a nuisance. Hoyne v. Slattery, 49 Misc. 260, 97 N. Y. S. 352. Where in an action on an insurance policy, insurer did not ask for a recovery of an unpaid premium, held failure of the court to give credit for such premium in the judgment for plaintiff was not error. Home Ins. Co. v. Ballew, 29 Ky. L. R. 1059, 96 S. W. 878. Findings by the court outside the issues made by the pleadings are mere nullities and will not sustain a judgment. Boothe v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 47 Or. 299, 83 P. 785. A judgment for more than is asked in complaint is erroneous. Moore v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 117 Mo. App. 384, 93 S. W. 869. Complaint asking for amendment of judgment for clerical or other error held not to warrant amendment distributing certain dividends. Chester v. Buffalo Car Mfg. Co., 183 N. Y. 425, 76 N. E. 480. Where an action is brought to recover "damages to real property and trespass in taking * * * and converting mortgaged property," a recovery should not be permitted without an amendment of the complaint for an impairment of plaintiff's mortgage security, though the evidence shows such a cause of action. Jackson v. Brandon Realty Co., 100 N. Y. S. 1005. Where a counterclaim for a certain amount includes two items, and only one of such items is specified, and there is no evidence of any damage under such specified item, judgment is authorized for no more than the balance between the total amount claimed and the amount claimed on such item. Garrett & Co. v. Josey [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 824, 97 S. W. 139. A decree ordering sale of the land and timber and division of the proceeds is not authorized by the pleadings in a suit by the grantees of land against the grantees of the standing timber to quiet title to the premises and restrain the removal of the timber on the ground that a reasonable time for removal of the timber has expired, though there is a general prayer in his petition does not necessarily limit the court in the judgment which it may render; it is the case made by the pleadings and the facts proven and not the prayer of the pleader which measure the relief that the court may award.[63] A judgment will be sustained by a declaration containing one good count which the record affirmatively shows is the basis of the judgment.[64] Nonconformity between the pleadings and the judgment cannot be cured by the amendment of the pleadings after the rendition of judgment.[65] A judgment proceeding upon inconsistent theories is not maintainable.[66] A court will not decide academic questions.[67] The relief awarded must not be for a greater amount than is claimed in the summons.[68] for relief. Liston v. Chapman & Dewey Land Co., 77 Ark. 116, 91 S. W. 27. The complaint in an action on a note alleged that by a separate instrument defendant waived the right to claim any homestead or other exemptions. The judgment for the plaintiff recited that as against the judgment and executions thereon there were no exemptions of real or personal property. Held that the recital was sufficient, though it did not follow the averments of the complaint. Story Mercantile Co. v. McClellan [Ala.] 40 So. 123. Where the petition in an action is framed upon the theory that an alleged accident caused an injury, and the proof offered by the plaintiff corresponds to the allegations of the petition and is repugnant to the theory of an aggravation of an existing infirmity, the defendant is entitled to have the plaintiff confined in his recovery to the scope of his allegation and proof. Where the issue raised by the pleadings was whether or not the accident caused hernia, proof that plaintiff had hernia prior to the accident constitutes a complete defense. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Boswell, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 413. In an action to recover for putting in a well for defendant, held proper not to allow defendant credits, though plaintiff admitted that he had run up an account with defendant for that amount where defendant failed to plead either offset or credit, or in reconvention, and it did not appear whether the items were incurred wholly under the contract with reference to the well. Hahl v. Deutsch [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 901, 94 S. W. 443. Where petition alleged that note sued on provided for a 10% attorney's fee if placed in the hands of an attorney for collection, that note had been placed in the hands of plaintiff's attorney for collection and prayed for 10% on the amount of the principal and interest as attorney's fees, held to warrant the award of such 10%. Ellis v. National City Bank of Waco [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 892, 94 S. W. 437. Where a judgment allowing certain claims against a decedent's estate was sought to be vacated solely on the ground that the claims were barred by limitations and it was not alleged that the claimant and deceased were sureties on the original indebtedness only, and that claimant had paid the entire indebtedness as surety, held error to set aside original judgment and award the claimant only one-half of the amount so paid, on the theory that he was only entitled, as a co-surety, to contribution in that amount. Smart v. Panther [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 448, 95 S. W. 679. A judgment for plaintiff in an action for specific performance of the contract of defendant village for the purchase of land for opening a street cannot be sustained on the ground of neglect or refusal of defendant to levy a local assessment for the improvement; the complaint presenting no such issue, but the theory of the action being that there could be no local assessments. Theall v. Port Chester, 110 App. Div. 776, 97 N. Y. S. 442. Where petition in an election contest attacked the vote on the ground that the voter had not paid his poll tax, the court had no authority to declare his vote illegal because the voter lived in another precinct. Bigham v. Clubb [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 479, 95 S. W. 675.

63. Hardy v. Ladow, 72 Kan. 174, 83 P. 401. An allegation in a complaint that the value of timber removed from plaintiff's land was $150, and a prayer for relief in the same amount, held not to preclude the court from giving any appropriate relief. Davis v. Wall [N. C.] 55 S. E. 350. Where petition prayed for cancellation of instrument and for general relief, held proper to reform instrument. Id. In an action for an accounting, if a balance is found in favor of defendant, judgment may be rendered in his favor, although his answer contains no demand for an affirmative judgment. Consolidated Fruit Jar Co. v. Wisner, 110 App. Div. 99, 97 N. Y. S. 52.

64. Where complaint contained two counts, one for specific performance and one for damages, a judgment for damages only must be considered as resting on the second count. Grau v. Grau [Ind. App.] 77 N. E. 816.

65. King v. Monitor Drill Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 315, 92 S. W. 1046.

66. Meyer v. Page, 112 App. Div. 625, 98 N. Y. S. 739. Where the pleadings and the evidence show that a certain verbal contract was either for a contingent fee or for promoting an organization, held a judgment based on both theories was unsustainable. Lazarus v. Friedrichs, 117 La. 711, 42 So. 230.

67. In probating will, court will not determine validity of conditional, alternative dispositions of the remainder. In re Mount's Will, 107 App. Div. 1, 95 N. Y. S. 490. A board and its officer not being parties to a record, the court should not undertake to define the officer's powers. Logan v. Childs [Fla.] 41 So. 197.

68. Foreclosure decree for an amount larger than that stated in the summons held unsustainable. Berentz v. Belmont Oil Min. Co., 148 Cal. 577, 84 P. 47. In an action for the recovery of money only in case of default by the defendant, judgment can be rendered for no greater sum than is indorsed upon the summons. Elmen v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Neb.] 105 N. W. 987.

The judgment must also be supported by the proof[69] and must conform to the verdict[70] or finding.[71] This rule of conformity is subject to the right of the court

Defendants not having sought nor made any proof as to attorney's fees or other expenses, held error to allow them such items as a set-off. Galt v. Provan [Iowa] 108 N. W. 760. A judgment for defendant on a counterclaim for improper work cannot be sustained in the absence of any evidence as to the amount of damages. Simon v. Danziger, 98 N. Y. S. 674. Where in an action to establish a claim against a decedent, the creditor neither alleged nor proved that the heirs of the decedent had received any part of his estate, the court was only authorized to render a judgment against the administrator to be levied on the assets in his hands as such; the liability of the heirs being expressly limited by Ky. St. 1903, § 2088, to the extent of the assets received. Cline v. Waters, 28 Ky. L. R. 679, 90 S. W. 231. Where in an action against two persons as partners for conversion there was no evidence that one of them was a member of the firm, or that he had any connection with the conversion or that there was any such firm as that designated, held error to render judgment against him and against the firm named. Crawford v. Masters, 140 N. C. 205, 52 S. E. 663. Verdict being in favor of defendant, it is proper to render judgment in his favor. Main & Co. v. Galloway [Ala.] 39 So. 770. Where verdict is against two joint tort feasors, a judgment against one only is erroneous. McMahon v. Hetchhetchy, etc., R. Co., 2 Cal. App. 400, 84 P. 350. In ejectment judgment must conform to the verdict in designating the extent of recovery and must be rendered for the premises described in the complaint. Crawford v. Masters, 140 N. C. 205, 52 S. E. 663. Finding showing that the jury intended to give plaintiff the entire value of the horse in controversy, on the assumption that title and possession would remain in defendant, held not to warrant judgment for plaintiff for the entire value of the horse and the right to its possession. Romano v. Boyd, 97 N. Y. S. 994. Where in condemnation proceedings the jury awarded defendant a certain sum as damages held court was not justified in rendering judgment for such sum with interest from the date of the occupation. Butte Electric R. Co. v. Mathews [Mont.] 87 P. 460. In an action against the principal and surety on a bond, a verdict for plaintiff against the surety and against the principal in favor of the surety is sufficient to sustain a judgment for plaintiff against both; a finding against the principal being implied from the verdict against the surety. O'Donnell, 109 App. Div. 700, 96 N. Y. S. 493. Where findings show a technical breach of the contract but fail to show the damage sustained, held sufficient to support a judgment for nominal damages. Hotel Co. v. Merchants' Ice & Fuel Co., 41 Wash. 620, 84 P. 402. A judgment in a suit by a minority stockholder, adjudging that certain property belonged to the corporation, held unsupported by the findings. Steinfeld v. Zeckendorf [Ariz.] 86 P. 7. Where a note sued on stipulated that it should be collectible without relief from appraisement laws, a finding containing the statement that the amount due was without relief was essential before a judgment containing such stipulation could be rendered. Polley v. Pogue [Ind. App.] 78 N. E. 1051. Where in a case tried to the court it finds that if plaintiff's testimony in an action for injuries is true, he is entitled to recover $2,500, and, if it is not true, he is not entitled to recover at all, a judgment for $1,000 cannot be sustained. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Black [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 553, 93 S. W. 1071. Where court found that defendant had the absolute prescriptive right to divert water from an irrigation ditch, held it could not decree that the right should only be exercised upon giving certain notice. Wutchumna Water Co. v. Ragle, 148 Cal. 759, 84 P. 162. Where in an action for services the only question litigated was the question of the authority of defendant's agent to employ plaintiff and the court found in plaintiff's favor on such question, held error to give him judgment for only half his claim. Ross v. New Endicott Co., 50 Misc. 650, 98 N. Y. S. 758. Where cross petition is sufficient to support a decree for specific performance, a general finding in favor of the cross petitioner is sufficient to support a decree for specific performance. Jordan v. Jackson [Neb.] 106 N. W. 999. Where by codicil a certain bequest was to be paid to the five children of a deceased daughter of the testator and a portion was paid to the daughter of a deceased sixth child of such daughter, in an action to recover the same a finding that the money was paid under the belief that the defendant was entitled to it as a child of the deceased son is insufficient to sustain a judgment for plaintiffs as there is no

to amend the verdict for irregularities appearing on its face,[72] to render a judgment non obstante,[73] and to disregard a verdict contrary to law.[74] The judgment in a joint action must be for or against all of the plaintiffs or defendants or none of them,[75] but the rule does not apply to actions against persons jointly and severally liable.[76]

Judgment non obstante.[77]—The rule allowing the trial court to render a judgment non obstante veredicto when the evidence is conclusive in favor of one of the parties is in force in most[78] but not all[79] of the states. The remedy is only available after a verdict has been reached[80] and it conclusively[81] appears that such verdict is contrary to the evidence[82] and that there is a reasonable probability that the defects in the proof or pleadings can be remedied at another trial.[83] The evidence being conflicting, a judgment non obstante will not be granted[84] even though the verdict be against the weight of the evidence.[85] A motion for judgment on answers to special interrogatories notwithstanding the general verdict can only be sustained when the antagonism between such answers and the general verdict is beyond the possibility of being removed or reconciled by any evidence legitimately admissible under the issues in the case.[86] Failure to answer special interrogatories material to the conclusions reached in the general verdict is not ground for rendering judgment non obstante,[87] nor is the fact that the general and special verdicts are inconsistent, the general verdict being in fact warranted by law.[88] The

And a further finding that it does not appear that plaintiffs had any knowledge or belief as to whether the father of defendant was living at the time the codicil was executed, and hence one of the five children mentioned, is insufficient to support the judgment as it does not show an excusable error of fact. motion for a judgment non obstante should be made before the rendition of judgment and a motion and grounds for a new trial have been entered.[89] The motion being granted, it is proper practice for the trial court to render final judgment in favor of the party entitled thereto.[90] The motion being erroneously denied, judgment may be directed by an appellate court on appeal.[91]

§ 3. Arrest of judgment.[92]—The grounds for, the procedure on, and the effect of a motion for an arrest of judgment are treated elsewhere.[93]

§ 4. Rendition, entry, and docketing.[94]—The judgment whenever made must be by order of the court,[95] and the duty of the clerk is simply to record this order.[96] The judgment may, under the common-law procedure, be formally entered in a so-called judgment book kept by the clerk, orally announced by the court, or in the form of an order signed by the presiding judge finally disposing of the case.[97] Statutes generally fix the time within which a motion for judgment must be made.[98] In New York, where the decision upon a trial by the court directs an interlocutory judgment and the party afterwards becomes entitled to a final judgment, application for the latter may be made as on motion.[99] While it is essential that the judgment be rendered within the time authorized by law,[1] still it is not generally deemed essential that it be rendered during the term, a judgment rendered in vacation being in most states deemed valid,[2] though a few courts hold such a judgment void,[3] but even in such courts a decree rendered after the term will be upheld, in the absence of a showing that the court was not in session by adjournment from the term.[4] In some states statutes provide for the rendition of the

Id. In those states where the courts are declared to be always open for the transaction of court business and where special terms may be called at any time by the court for the trial of causes, a judgment rendered when the court is not regularly in session for the trial of contested cases is not void but merely erroneous. Lockard v. Lockard [S. D.] 110 N. W. 104.

3. Rev. St. 1901, par. 1442, providing that a judgment may be "entered" in vacation, judgment during a subsequent term.[5] Generally, where time is given in which to file briefs, the time within which judgment must be filed runs from the submission of such briefs.[6] Where a proceeding properly triable at term is brought on at chambers and the complaint is defective, the better practice is to transmit an appropriate order to the clerk to be extended into judgment in term if the complaint is not amended.[7] Premature entry of judgment renders the same merely voidable.[8]

The practice of preparing entries for the court to sign and enter of record is proper.[9] There is no impropriety for a judge of a lower court to file a written opinion in a case.[10] The memorandum made by the judge on his calendar is neither a judgment nor the entry thereof.[11] While in the absence of statutory provisions the judge need not generally sign the judgment,[12] still in some states, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, a judgment must be signed by the judge during the term of rendition.[13]

Form and contents.[14]—A judgment in favor of or against a firm in their firm name,[15] or in favor of or against a person by his surname alone,[16] or by a name in which an initial letter is used instead of his Christian name,[17] is not void but is merely irregular. A judgment decreeing specific relief with respect to realty must specifically describe the land, and, while it is the better practice to so describe the land in the pleadings and judgment that it may be identified by the commissioner executing the judgment and by persons interested without reference to any other paper or record, still, if it can be identified from the description given, the judgment is not void.[18] In a county court of North Dakota the final decree consists of the findings of fact, conclusions of law, and statements of the relief awarded, and all these should be embodied in one document signed by the judge and filed.[19] In New York, where it is shown upon oath and without controversy that defendant has converted to his own use money received by him in a fiduciary capacity, plaintiff is entitled to have the judgment recite that defendant

Auditor General, 143 Mich. 240, 12 Det. Leg. N. 947, 106 N. W. 890), and in such a case it will not be set aside even on a direct attack in the absence of a showing that appearance was entered and objection made within the five-day period (Id.).

is subject to arrest and imprisonment.[20] In Texas the failure of a judgment against a husband and wife to specifically authorize execution against the wife's separate property does not invalidate it or prevent satisfaction thereof out of such property.[21] It is in accordance with the ancient practice in equity courts for the court to make special findings of the facts in issue and recite the same in its decree, and this is still practiced in some states.[22] Where a referee has made and delivered his report, the duty of settling a decree devolves upon the court at special term and not upon the referee.[23]

Entry, docketing and recording.[24]—Courts of record speak only through their records. The law requires records to be made of their proceedings and that they be signed.[25] That a judgment or decree was pronounced avails nothing if it be not spread upon the minutes of the court required to be kept for that purpose.[26] Failure of the clerk to enter up the decree until after the expiration of the term does not affect its validity.[27] A motion for a new trial does not operate as a stay in the entry of judgment unless an order to that effect is procured and served.[28] There being an appearance and defense bonds are not generally required before entry of judgment.[29] In New York there is no limitation of time for docketing a deficiency judgment.[30] For some purposes an entry of judgment will relate back to the time when it was actually ordered, but not for all, and especially not for the purpose of an appeal.[31] The record imports verity,[32] and docket entries are presumed to have been authorized by the court.[33] In order to be effective for the purpose of a lien a judgment must be properly indexed,[34] though as against a third person having actual notice this requisite is immaterial.[35] The first or Christian name of a defendant in a judgment must appear in the judgment index for the protection of an innocent purchaser who is not bound to look beyond it for judgment liens against his vendor, but this rule must have a reasonable construction.[36] Ordinarily the clerk, when entering a judgment of record, should follow the memorandum made by the judge on his calendar not only with reference to the substance thereof but also as to date.[37] In some states a notice of entry is required, and in such cases the copy of the judgment must be substantially correct.[38] The court may set aside erroneous entry of judgment by the clerk.[39]

Nunc pro tunc entries.[40]—Judgment having been actually rendered by the court, but owing to the misprision of the clerk has not been entered[41] or has been erroneously entered,[42] the court of rendition has the inherent power, even after the expiration of the term of rendition[43] or after the judgment has become final,[44] and after the taking of an appeal,[45] to correct the record so as to make it recite the truth. 42. The record of a judgment may be corrected so as to speak the truth even after the expiration of the term at which it was rendered. Martindale v. Battey [Kan.] 84 P. 527. Clerical omissions and mistakes may be corrected at any time. Name of adopting parent in order of adoption. Cubitt v. Cubitt [Kan.] 86 P. 475.

43. Williams v. Ulmer, 73 S. C. 579, 53 S. E. 999. Where court by granting a new trial in effect vacated a judgment improperly entered, held it had the power at a subsequent term to correct its record by a nunc pro tunc order so as to show such vacation in terms. Evans v. Freeman, 140 F. 419.

44. Court established by Code 1894-95, p. 1227, has power to correct clerical errors in its judgments even after they have become final by the expiration of 30 days. Story Mercantile Co. v. McClellan [Ala.] 40 So. 123. Nunc pro tunc entry of judgment at subsequent term held proper. Smith v. Wofford [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 815, 97 S. W. 143.

45. If the record as made of a judgment does not show the date of actual entry, the trial court on motion, even after an attempted appeal, has the power and it is its duty to correct it, on a showing as to the actual date when entry was made, to show such date. Hoffman-Bruner Granite Co. v. Stark [Iowa] 108 N. W. 329.

46. Error in giving plaintiff judgment for more than he is entitled to on the averments of the petition held a clerical misprision to be corrected by the trial court. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Boyd, 29 Ky. L. R. 598, 94 S. W. 35. A failure of the court to act on its incorrect action can never authorize a nunc pro tunc entry. Story Mercantile Co. v. McClellan [Ala.] 40 So. 123. A clerical error in a decree rendered out of term, in that the date of a Congressional Act was given as 1901 instead of 1891, may be corrected at the next regular term under Code Civ. Proc. subsec. 85. United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrigation Co. [N. M.] 85 P. 393. Where a judgment was rendered affecting real estate the court could, upon motion of the judgment creditor, correct the description thereof at a succeeding term. Eisman v. Whalen [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 514. Distribution of certain dividends held not a clerical or other error within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 723, authorizing amendment of judgment therefor. Chester v. Buffalo Car Mfg. Co., 183 N. Y. 425, 76 N. E. 480. Altering decree so as to order a sale of other lands than those described in the complaint held not a mere clerical error. Williams v. Ulmer, 73 S. C. 579, 53 S. E. 999. Misnomer of adopting parent in order of adoption held a clerical mistake. Cubitt v. Cubitt [Kan.] 86 P. 475. Where in an action on an assessment for street improvement it appeared on the face of the papers that the city engineer's estimate was too large and hence erroneous, and consequently judgment was too large, held error could have been corrected as a clerical misprision on motion. Lindsey v. Brawner, 29 Ky. L. R. 1236, 97 S. W. 1. A court may at subsequent terms set right mere forms in its judgments by correcting misprisions of its clerk or mere clerical errors so as to make the record conform to the truth. In making such corrections the judge's docket or the clerk's minutes or other records pertaining to the cause may be used, but not extraneous testimony. McGourin v. De Funiak Springs [Fla.] 42 So. 187.

47. Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 721-724, held a nunc pro tunc entry of an order of reference was proper in order to uphold a judgment entered upon a report of a referee, the first order of reference being void but the parties having gone to trial upon the assumption that it was valid. Owasco Lake Cemetery v. Teller, 110 App. Div. 450, 96 N. Y. S. 985.

same operative as of the date of its rendition,[49] still it can give retroactive operation and effect to the judgment it records only in the furtherance of justice, and such can never be its office and effect where it would operate to deprive a party of a substantial right.[50] In order to be entitled to an entry nunc pro tunc the party must show that the entry of judgment, on account of clerical errors, does not conform to the judgment intended by the court.[51] The right to a nunc pro tunc entry may become barred by time.[52] Mere recitals in the journal entry will not have the effect of a nunc pro tunc entry.[53] The amendment of a clerical misprision in the judgment does not constitute the latter a new and different judgment from the one originally entered.[54] While some courts hold that an amendment may be based on any satisfactory evidence,[55] the weight of authority supports the view that amendment must be based on authority contained in the record.[56]

Contents of judgment roll.[57]—An order permitting an amendment of a complaint and refusing a continuance is properly a part of the judgment roll.[58] Under a statute providing among other specified papers that each paper on file and a copy of each order which in any way involves the merits or affects the judgment shall be included in the judgment roll, affidavits and notice of motion for reference are not a part of the roll.[59]

Filing transcripts in other courts or offices.[60]—A transcripted judgment has for the purposes of lien and execution the same effect as a judgment originally rendered by and entered in the court to which it is transferred.[61] In this connection an abstract is not equivalent to a transcript.[62] Generally the judgment of an inferior court must be transcribed to the court of general jurisdiction in the same county before a transcript can be filed in another county.[63] To be effective

53. Recital in journal entry that decree was rendered on October 24, 1904, held not to have the effect of a nunc pro tunc entry nor control over a previous recital stating that on November 4, 1904, the cause came on for hearing and the court found for the plaintiff. Eldridge & Higgins Co. v. Barrere, 74 Ohio St. 389, 78 N. E. 516.

54. Correction of name of party. Fox v. Stubenrauch, 2 Cal. App. 88, 83 P. 82.

55. Satisfactory parol evidence is sufficient to authorize nunc pro tunc entry. Liddell v. Bodenheimer, Landau & Co. [Ark.] 95 S. W. 475. In order to warrant the correction the proof must be clear and satisfactory, but it need not be founded upon any record, memorandum, or other writing. Martindale v. Battey [Kan.] 84 P. 527. A district court has power to correct the entry of a judgment so as to cause it to speak the truth, after the expiration of the term at which it was rendered and upon the personal knowledge of the judge of what took place in court at the time of its rendition. Christisen v. Bartlett [Kan.] 84 P. 530.

56. Where there is no minute or memorandum on the court's docket, the clerk's minute book, or the files in the case supporting a nunc pro tunc entry of an extension of time for filing a bill of exceptions, court cannot make such entry. State v. Ryan, 115 Mo. App. 414, 90 S. W. 418. The general rule is that evidence dehors the record is inadmissible on a motion to enter a judgment nunc pro tunc. Story Mercantile Co. v. Under the statutes of most states, where a judgment of an inferior court is transcribed to a superior court, the power of the inferior court to issue execution is terminated and the superior court may thereafter order the issuance of execution as upon judgments originally rendered and entered therein. Rev. Codes 1899, §§ 6717, 5498, so construed. Id.

62. The filing of an abstract of the judgment prepared in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 897, in the office of a county auditor, is insufficient to entitle plaintiff to the benefits of § 710 which contemplates a transcript or copy of the judgment. Erkson v. Parker [Cal. App.] 84 P. 437.

the register is sometimes required to show the name of the owner of the judgment.[64] It is essential that the judgment debtor must be correctly described and in this connection one Christian name is important.[65] In New York a transcribed judgment becomes a lien from the time the statutory notice is indexed and recorded.[66]

§ 5. Occasion and propriety of amending, opening, vacating, or restraining enforcement. A. Before finality.[67]—During the term[68] or until the judgment has become a finality,[69] the court has the inherent,[70] exclusive,[71] plenary[72] power in the exercise of its discretion[73] to vacate, alter, revise, or amend[74] the judgment for clerical or judicial errors,[75] and unless abused an exercise of this

63. Under Code § 273, the filing of a transcript of a judgment of a superior court in the district court of another county, without having filed a transcript in the district court of the same county, is insufficient to create a lien on real estate in the county where it is filed. Drahos v. Kopesky [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1021.

64. Registration of a judgment in the probate court under Code 1896, § 1920, must state the name of the owner of the judgment or it is invalid. Jefferson County Sav. Bank v. Miller [Ala.] 40 So. 513.

65. A transcript of a judgment of a justice of the peace rendered in an action against Mrs. Wm. Rogers, whose first name is unknown, filed in the office of the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county wherein such judgment was rendered, does not constitute such judgment a lien on the lands of Lucy Rogers, although she may in fact be Mrs. Wm. Rogers. Uihlein v. Gladieux, 74 Ohio St. 232, 78 N. E. 363.

A trial court has the power at any time previous to the end of the trial to correct errors theretofore committed by him in the progress of the cause, and to this end his power to alter, amend, or set aside the judgment rendered by him exists until the expiration of the term of rendition. Wells v. Moore [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 1003, 93 S. W. 220.

69. First Nat. Bank v. Kromer, 126 Wis. 436, 105 N. W. 823. So long as the proceedings are in fieri, court may amend record so as to show overruling of motion for separate trial and exception thereto, though record is made up and trial passed. Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey [Ind.] 76 N. E. 529. Proceedings held in fieri until motion for a new trial was filed. Id. Pending motion for a new trial court held to have power to modify judgment. Guinan v. Donnell [Mo.] 98 S. W. 478. Where a mistake is made in the date of the return and answer days of a summons, the same may be amended by the district court even after objections to the jurisdiction of the court are pending based upon that particular defect. Barker Co. v. Central West Inv. Co. [Neb.] 105 N. W. 985. An interlocutory order or ruling may be reversed and vacated at a subsequent term by the same court without compliance with the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1612 et seq., relating to the vacation and modification of judgments and final orders at a term subsequent to the one of rendition. Godfrey v. Cunningham [Neb.] 109 N. W. 765. Where motion for judgment was continued but the clerk erroneously entered judgment before the date to which the motion was continued, held the court had authority on the date fixed in the order of continuance to set aside such judgment and re-enter the judgment as of that date. Fink v. Herrick, 28 Ky. L. R. 763, 90 S. W. 268.

Judgment set aside where return of officer was ambiguous and the evidence conclusively showed that no service was had upon one defendant. Jackson v. Tenney [Okl.] 87 P. 867. Vacation of default judgment for defective proof of service and vacation of second judgment based on a new proof of service on the ground of lack of jurisdiction in the clerk held not to deprive court of jurisdiction to enter judgment on application to it and competent proof that service was made as stated in the return. First Nat. Bank v. Kromer, 126 Wis. 436, 105 N. W. 823; Hews v. Hews [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 482, 108 N. W. 694. During term or while proceedings are in fieri, court may modify order vacating decree. A consent order may be modified or vacated where it does not express the real intent of the parties, and this though the mistake be unilateral. Id.

75. Where a dismissal on the merits is erroneously entered instead of a nonsuit, it is proper to move to correct the record. Freedman v. Sirota, 109 App. Div. 874, 96 N. Y. S. 812. Improper entry of judgment. Evans v. Freeman, 140 F. 419. Judgment for defendant, in a suit brought by C & Son, a corporation, that defendant recover of "C & B, composing the firm of C & Son," though technically incorrect, is susceptible of amendment at any time under Rev. Code 1892, § discretion will not be reversed on appeal.[76] Where an appeal is taken the trial court may correct its judgment as to an error in the amount thereof at any time prior to the action of the appellate court upon the judgment.[77] It follows that irregularities or informalities in the judgment should be remedied on motion in the trial court,[78] and do not constitute reversible error.[79] In North Dakota the word "term" as applied to the district court is deemed to have lost its common law meaning, hence it follows that such court may amend or set aside the judgment after the term of rendition.[80] In some states the jurisdiction of inferior courts in this matter,[81] and the period of finality of their judgments,[82] are regulated by statutes.

(§ 5) B. Right to relief after the judgment has become final, as by the expiration of the term of rendition or of the statutory extension thereof.[83]—In the absence of statutes,[84] and except as to matters of form,[85] a judgment cannot be vacated, altered, or amended after it has become a finality,[86] unless it is void[87] or was pro-

May set aside an improvident judgment. Livesley v. Johnston, 47 Or. 193, 82 P. 854. Where a general verdict was directed for defendant but on a motion for a new trial defendant admitted certain indebtedness, held proper to reform judgment so as to allow plaintiff amount so admitted to be due. Alabama Oil & Pipe Line Co. v. Sun Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 973, 90 S. W. 202. Held proper for court during term to vacate judgment for plaintiff and reinstate defendant's plea. Phillips v. Phillips, 124 Ga. 912, 53 S. E. 457. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 663, the superior court may vacate one of its judgments where it is not supported by the findings of fact and enter the proper judgment. Ballerino v. Superior Ct. of Los Angeles County, 2 Cal. App. 759, 84 P. 225. Where through an erroneous calculation judgment is rendered for a lesser amount than the evidence clearly showed the party entitled to, it may be corrected on motion. Evidence showed 16 weeks' salary due at $30 per week, but through a mistake of calculation only $450 was demanded in the summons, for which amount judgment was rendered. Held that plaintiff's motion to increase the judgment should have been allowed. Kemp v. Tonnele Co., 99 N. Y. S. 885.

76. Dedrick v. Charrier [N. D.] 108 N. W. 38. Unless an abuse of discretion of the trial court in setting aside an interlocutory order is shown, an appellate court will not interfere therewith. Godfrey v. Cunningham [Neb.] 109 N. W. 765. A trial judge vacating a judgment must do so only upon good grounds. A belief that further evidence might be obtained is not sufficient to authorize the vacation of a judgment under Municipal Court Act, Laws 1902, p. 1563, c. 580, § 254. Ellenbogen v. Martin, 99 N. Y. S. 463.

81. New York: The municipal court of the City of New York has no authority to vacate a judgment for nonservice of summons where the defendant has not appeared. Diehl v. Steele, 49 Misc. 456, 97 N. Y. S. 1024. Appropriate remedy is by appeal. Municipal Court Act, Laws 1902, p. 1578, c. 580, § 311, construed. Id.

82. A municipal court judge has no jurisdiction to vacate a judgment not rendered upon default where the motion to vacate was not made within five days from the rendition of judgment. So held as to judgment entered after court had lost jurisdiction of the cause by lapse of time. Municipal Court Act, Laws 1902, p. 1563, c. 580, § 254, construed. Quinn v. Schneider, 50 Misc. 630, 98 N. Y. S. 657.

86. Cannot amend judgment after expiration of the term of rendition. So held on an application for a nunc pro tunc entry of an order made in the cause. Liddell v. Bodenheimer, Landau & Co. [Ark.] 95 S. W. 475. The judgment of the supreme court becomes final with the close of the term during which it was rendered and that court cannot thereafter modify or enlarge such judgment. Collins v. Hawkins, 77 Ark. 101, 91 S. W. 26. The judgment of the court established by Acts 1894-95, p. 1227, becomes, under such act, final in 30 days, and the court cannot after such time correct any judicial errors in it and cannot set it aside unless it is void on its face. Story Mercantile Co. v. McClellan [Ala.] 40 So. 123. Motion to vacate on the ground of insufficient cured by the fraud[88] of an adverse party[89] or by accident[90] or mistake of fact,[91] or unless the vacation or modification is ordered by an appellate court.[92] In many states the rule has been enlarged by statutes providing for the vacation of a judgment, and especially a default judgment,[93] taken against a party through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. Fraud in the procurement of a judgment does not render the judgment void but only voidable and is ineffective unless taken advantage of by motion or a proceeding in equity.[94] That the judg-service denied where motion was filed more than three years after the expiration of the term of rendition. Heffernan v. Ragsdale [Mo.] 97 S. W. 890. The district court cannot, after the adjournment of the term at which a judgment is entered, amend the same by changing the award of coste to one of the parties, except for some reason mentioned in Code Civ. Proc. § 602, as ground for vacating or modifying a judgment. Meade Plumbing, Heating & Lighting Co. v. Irwin [Neb.] 109 N. W. 391. A decree made in a suit brought to enforce the liens of judgments and a deed of trust, fixing the amounts and priorities of the liens, decreeing payment thereof, and directing a sale of the debtor's land on default of payment, is final and conclusive as to the amounts of the debts after the expiration of the term at which it is pronounced, and an answer praying the elimination of usury from one of the debts so adjudicated cannot be received thereafter. Barbour v. Tompkins, 58 W. Va. 572, 52 S. E. 707. Where a judgment of a superior court had become final, no appeal having been taken therefrom, and had been so adjudged by the supreme court by ordering the cancellation of a lis pendens filed thereafter, the superior court was without jurisdiction to thereafter entertain a motion to reinstate the cause or try it anew. State v. Washington Dredging & Imp. Co. [Wash.] 86 P. 936.

McClellan [Ala.] 40 So. 123. Rev. St. 1887, § 4229, does not alter rule. Kerns v. Morgan, 11 Idaho, 572, 83 P. 954. Superior court may set aside void judgment after term of rendition, Huffman v. Huffman, 47 Or. 610, 86 P. 593. A decree can only be vacated after entry term when void for want of jurisdiction. Krieger v. Krieger, 121 Ill. App. 11. An absolutely void judgment may be stricken from the record on motion at any time and may be collaterally assailed. Lord v. Dowling Co. [Fla.] 42 So. 585. Where a judgment is void so far as it directs foreclosure of an alleged lien, the court has jurisdiction to modify it by striking out the part that is invalid. Stark Bros. v. Royce [Wash.] 87 P. 340. A judgment which is entirely outside of the issues in the case and upon a matter not submitted to the court for its determination is a nullity and may be vacated and set aside at any time on motion of a party or any person affected thereby. Anglea v. McMaster [Okl.] 87 P. 660. Judgment on question of waiver of homestead exemption held not void on its face and part of it could not be struck out by the court after it had become a finality. Story Mercantile Co. v. McClellan [Ala.] 40 So. 123. Where a decree of divorce is void for want of jurisdiction, it will be set aside after the death of the party who procured it by fraud. Rodgers v. Nichols, 15 Okl. 579, 83 P. 923. In a direct proceeding to set aside a decree of divorce, where the evidence clearly and conclusively shows that no service either actual or constructive was had upon the defendant, the decree will be set aside as void. District court has inherent power to vacate a judgment procured by means of proceedings which are in effect fraudulent. Gilbreath v. Teufel [N. D.] 107 N. W. 49. County court may vacate its decrees for fraud more than one year after knowledge of the judgment. Parsons v. Balson [Wis.] 109 N. W. 136. Under Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, § 4760, must be fraud to authorize vacation. Williamson v. Williamson, 15 Okl. 680, 83 P. 718. Court having jurisdiction, held error to set aside decree more than six months after rendition, no fraud being alleged. Probate decree. Camplin v. Jackson, 34 Colo. 447, 83 P. 1017. What constitutes fraud, see post next subdivision.

89. Jordan v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 929, 94 S. W. 398. A decree of divorce will be annulled upon the ground of fraud and imposition practiced upon the court or adverse party. Rodgers v. Nichols, 15 Okl. 579, 83 P. 923. Fraud of coplaintiffs held not to warrant setting aside of judgment in favor of defendant. De Garcia v. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 336, 90 S. W. 670. Where a widow in an action for the death of her husband joined minor children without their knowledge or consent, no matter how fraudulent her conduct as against the children, the judgment against defendant could not be set aside where it had no knowledge of the fraud. Taylor v. San Antonio Gas & Elec. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 344, 93 S. W. 674.

90. Jordan v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 929, 94 S. W. 398. What constitutes accident, see post next subdivision.

91. Wood v. Stewart [Ark.] 98 S. W. 711. What constitutes mistake, see post next subdivision.

92. Appellate court may on appeal amend or modify judgment. So held as to the appellate term. Municipal Court Act, Laws 1902, p. 1578, c. 580, § 310, construed. Ostrom v. Sapolsky, 49 Misc. 610, 96 N. Y. S. 1070. See Appeal and Review, 7 C. L. 128.

94. A judgment rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction and regular upon its face is to be deemed conclusive until it is

ment is irregular[95] or erroneous[96] is no ground for setting it aside except on appeal.[97] In Georgia, however, an irregularity in the judgment apparent on the face of the record may be corrected after the expiration of the term and irregular judgments may be made perfect.[98] Where a decree settled on a referee's decision does not contain all that is decided by the referee, the remedy is to amend by motion and not to vacate.[99] Relief should be sought in the court of rendition and not in that of another jurisdiction.[1] The power to set aside and annul judgments procured by fraud is lodged in courts of superior general jurisdiction which are invested with the power to grant relief in equity or chancery cases;[2] and in those duly set aside, either on motion in the court of rendition or in an equitable proceeding. Civ. Code 1895, § 3511, referring to the discharge of executors and administrators, does not alter the rule. Summerlin v. Floyd, 124 Ga. 980, 53 S. E. 452. The construction to be placed upon Civ. Code 1895, § 3511, providing that a discharge obtained by an administrator "by means of any fraud practiced on the heirs or ordinary is void and may be set aside on motion and proof of the fraud," is that, while the judgment of the court of ordinary discharging an administrator is open to attack on the ground that it was fraudulently procured, it is to be deemed "void" only when in a proceeding to set it aside the proof shows it was secured by practicing a fraud upon the heirs at law or upon the ordinary. Read in connection with the context the term "void" is to be understood as the equivalent of "voidable." Id.

95. Surviving heirs of adopting parent held not entitled to have order of adoption set aside for irregularities. Cubitt v. Cubitt [Kan.] 86 P. 475. A judgment entered by default extending beyond the scope of the pleadings is irregular rather than erroneous. May be corrected on motion. Stark Bros. v. Royce [Wash.] 87 P. 340. On a motion to set aside a judgment against a principal and surety, the principal cannot take advantage of an irregularity in the judgment against the surety. The surety, a corporation, was dissolved before rendition of judgment. Schoenberg & Co. v. Ulman, 99 N. Y. S. 650.

Because based on a erroneous ruling. Martindale v. Battey [Kan.] 84 P. 527. Allowance of counsel fees in divorce decree. Van Dyke v. Van Dyke, 125 Ga. 491, 54 S. E. 537. Erroneous decree is valid until set aside by a court of competent jurisdiction. Rankin v. Schofield [Ark.] 98 S. W. 674. So held where an action was irregularly proceeded in against the heir of a defendant dying pending suit. Process was served on the heir who made no appearance. Judgment was rendered against her. City of Louisville v. Hughes [Ky.] 97 S. W. 1096. Where judgment followed finding, held motion to modify it for reasons going to the correctness of the finding and the sufficiency of the evidence to support the same would be denied. Nichols & Shepard Co. v. Berning [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 776. A proceeding cannot be maintained to set aside or vacate a decree based on an allegation of fact which was in issue and was determined in the trial which resulted in such decree. City of Lincoln v. Lincoln St. R. Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 317. A judgment entered for amounts actually due and also for an amount not due at the time of the commencement of the action, but due when the declaration was filed and when the judgment was entered, held merely irregular or erroneous. Lord v. Dowling Co. [Fla.] 42 So. 585. A voidable, irregular, or erroneous judgment must be moved against in time by motion to vacate or by proper appellate proceedings, and, if no such step is taken within the prescribed time, the judgment becomes an absolute verity and passes beyond the control of the court. Id. Code Civ. Proc. tit. 3, c. 11, providing for the vacation of judgments for irregularity or error in fact, does not authorize the vacation of a municipal court judgment by that court upon the ground of irregularity or error in fact. Barron v. Feist, 101 N. Y. S. 72. Where it appears from the judgment roll that judgment was rendered after the introduction and consideration of evidence, upon motion of plaintiff, an error not apparent on the face of the record cannot be reached by motion to vacate. Must be corrected by appeal or a motion for a new trial. Worth v. Emerson [Cal. App.] 85 P. 664.

99. Union Bag & Paper Co. v. Allen Bros. Co., 94 App. Div. 595, 88 N. Y. S. 368.

1. A Federal court cannot revise or set aside a final decree rendered by a state court which had jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter of the suit, upon the ground that the decree was obtained by fraud, when the injured party has had an opportunity to apply to the state court to revise the decree. Strand v. Griffith [C. C. A.] 144 F. 828. The bankruptcy court deciding a question over which it and the state courts have concurrent jurisdiction, an aggrieved party's remedy is by appeal and not by motion in the state court. Fees of sheriff levying on property of a debtor of one who is afterwards declared a bankrupt. Johnson v. Woodend, 44 Misc. 524, 90 N. Y. S. 43.

courts wherein the distinction between legal and equitable forms of action is preserved, the court has no power in a proceeding at law, by motion or petition, to vacate a judgment rendered at a previous term,[3] but in such cases the remedy to set aside or enjoin the execution of judgments at law wrongfully or fraudulently obtained is by bill in equity.[4]

Where one moves to open or set aside the judgment, the court should weigh the evidence and its discretion will not be reversed unless an abuse of discretion is shown,[5] and, though the evidence be conflicting, the court is not bound to send the case to the jury to determine the weight of the evidence and the credibility of the witnesses.[6] The discretion vested in courts to open judgments is a "legal discretion," not mere personal choice, a discretion to be exercised in discerning the course prescribed by law which must be followed when ascertained.[7] Except in the case of judgments void for want of jurisdiction,[8] relief will be denied if the applicant has been guilty of unexcused[9] negligence or laches,[10]

3, 4. O'Connor v. O'Connor [C. C. A.] 142 F. 449.

5. Augustine v. Wolf [Pa.] 64 A. 777. The rule that a refusal of the lower court to open a judgment will only be reversed where there was an abuse of discretion does not prevent a reversal where the evidence in favor of the application strongly preponderates and the lower court's opinion was not based on the whole case but upon a fact not in itself a bar. Ripple v. Succop, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 638. Superior court will not interfere with the refusal of the lower court to open a judgment on a bond where the only question is one of fact as to credits allowed and the evidence was carefully considered and no error is manifest. St. James Bldg. & L. Ass'n v. Kelly, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 470. In an action to open judgment, while a mere conflict of evidence is not generally sufficient, it should be opened where the party seeking shows a defense by a preponderance of evidence sufficient to sustain a verdict in his favor. Augustine v. Wolf, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 336. Where forgery is charged there is no inflexible rule which requires the court to open judgment. Id.

8. The rule as to laches never operates as against a judgment void for want of jurisdiction. Davis v. Preston, 129 Iowa, 670, 106 N. W. 151.

9. Applicant must be without fault or negligence. Jordan v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 929, 94 S. W. 398. One who knowingly neglects to appear and defend action held not entitled to have judgment vacated. Williamson v. Williamson, 15 Okl. 680, 83 P. 718. Where owing to sickness one failed to file a plea of personal privilege to be sued in the county of his residence, held default judgment would be set aside. Mistrot Bros. & Co. v. Wilson [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 314, 91 S. W. 870. Default set aside where plaintiff's attorneys failed to notify defendant's attorney of overruling of motion to make complaint more specific, defendant's attorney residing at a distance. Douglas v. Badger State Mine, 41 Wash. 266, 83 P. 178. Unexpected detention of counsel in Europe where he had gone to obtain evidence held to warrant opening default. Marchesini v. Scaccianoce, 110 App. Div. 130, 96 N. Y. S. 1095. A client who fails to repudiate the authority of an attorney who assumes to represent him cannot, when unsuccessful in his suit, allege as a ground for vacating the judgment that the attorney who conducted the trial had no authority. Bacon v. Mitchell [N. D.] 106 N. W. 129. Where defendant left city when he was aware that his case was about to come on the day calendar, and paid no attention to a letter written him by his attorney, and he could have been informed within an hour by telegraph that the cause was coming on for trial, held proper to refuse to open default. Iron Clad Mfg. Co. v. Steffen, 100 N. Y. S. 196. A judgment against a garnishee for want of appearance will be opened on a showing that the nonappearance was due to oversight and that the garnishee has no money or goods of the defendant, especially where the sheriff's return does not show an attachment of goods or moneys in his hands, and plaintiff has failed to comply with the rules of court as to service of interrogations and notice of rule on the garnishee. McFadden v. Millerstown Deposit Bk., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 583. Where judgment in action for conspiracy was reversed and new trial had, and plaintiff during the progress of the trial refused to proceed and judgment was entered for defendant, held judgment would not be set aside so as to allow plaintiff to bring in another party as defendant where plaintiff knew prior to the commencement of the action that such person was the most active participator in the conspiracy complained of. Lederer v. Adler, 101 N. Y. S. 53.

10. Eleven years' delay held to bar right to have judgment erroneously entered for want of an affidavit of defense vacated. Johnson v. Frothingham, 214 Pa. 523, 63 A. 823. Where a sheriff permitted three months to elapse before moving to set aside a default and judgment entered thereon, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to deny his motion, though failure to act sooner was due to the cares and pressure of official business. Lewis v. Cunningham [Ariz.] 85 P. 244. Where a mortgagor attempting to open a judgment on the ground of a tender delayed two years from the time of tender to the entry of judgment and for and in this connection an attorney's mistake of judgment as to the law[11] or negligence[12] is likewise fatal; but mere delay in making application to open judgment is not always sufficient ground for refusing to open judgment when rights of third parties are not affected,[13] nor is it always the legal equivalent of laches to take effect as an estoppel.[14] Except in the case of a judgment void for want of jurisdiction,[15] the petition must show that petitioner has a meritorious defense[16] and that another trial will probably produce a different result.[17] Clerical errors and omissions in the record may be corrected at any time.[18]

Courts of equity.[19]—A court of general equity jurisdiction[20] has the inherent, discretionary power to set aside or enjoin the enforcement of a judgment rendered in an action at law, for fraud in the procurement of the decree[21] unaccompanied by unexcused[22] negligence,[23] or laches,[24] or fault,[25] on the part of him who invokes the 11. Bacon v. Mitchell [N. D.] 106 N. W. 129.

12. Ignorance of facts which he ought to have known. Bacon v. Mitchell [N. D.] 106 N. W. 129. Negligence of defendant's attorney in failing to answer is no ground for setting aside a default judgment. United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrigation Co. [N. M.] 85 P. 393. Opening of default denied where attorney filed an affidavit stating that he would probably be engaged in another case at the time of trial but the court refused to adjourn, it actually appearing that he was not engaged in the other trial at the time. Turtel v. Greenwald, 96 N. Y. S. 1074; One's attorney having full knowledge of all the facts connected with the action and consenting to the judgment, he cannot have the same set aside for mistake, surprise, or excusable neglect. Dixon v. Floyd, 73 S. C. 202, 53 S. E. 167.

13. Attempt to open judgment for fraud. Augustine v. Wolf, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 336.

15. Judgment void for want of service. Skjelbred v. Southard [N. D.] 108 N. W. 487.

16. Plea of limitations held not good cause for setting aside judgment based on service by publication. Rev. St. 1895, art. 1375, construed. Polk v. Herndon [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 397, 93 S. W. 531. The mere setting out of the record of a complaint and a denial by answer with judgment against defendant and a showing that he was a minor and that no guardian was appointed does not show a defense on the merits in addition to an avoiding irregularity. Code, §§ 4049, 4096. Reints v. Engle, 130 Iowa, 726, 107 N. W. 947.

17. A judgment rendered on report of a referee should not be vacated because of the subsequent amendment of a stipulation introduced in the case to prove certain facts by striking out certain words therein, where there was no evidence that the words stricken out had any material bearing on the issues between the parties. Cullin v. Alvord, 109 App. Div. 918, 96 N. Y. S. 494.

20. The equitable jurisdiction of the probate court over claims against the estates of decedents does not extend to setting aside a decree for fraud after the lapse of the entry term. Beavers v. Rennels, 122 Ill. App. 483. The court of claims has equitable powers with reference to subjects committed to its jurisdiction by the Tucker Act, and hence may correct a mistake occurring in a former judicial proceeding which would have materially affected the judgment had it been known, and court having jurisdiction in the first action having lost jurisdiction of the case. Le More & Co.'s Case, 39 Ct. Cl. 484.

21. Collusive agreement between attorneys. Estudillo v. Security Loan & Trust Co. [Cal.] 87 P. 19. Notwithstanding the well settled rule that the judgment, when sued upon in another state, cannot be impeached or attacked for fraud by any plea known to the common-law system of pleading, it is equally clear that upon sufficient allegation and proof defendant is entitled, in a court of equity, to enjoin the plaintiff from suing upon or enforcing his judgment. Levin v. Gladstein [N. C.] 55 S. E. 371. Code, § 4091, provides for a new trial on application by petition within one year, where the final judgment or order was obtained by fraud practiced in obtaining the same. Held that where the fraud is not discovered within the year, equity has jurisdiction to grant a new trial. Graves v. Graves [Iowa] 109 N. W. 707. A bill in equity, which attacks and seeks to set aside a decree rendered in another suit as a cloud on the title to complainant's land, which does not allege that the decree attacked was obtained by fraud under such circumstances as will give jurisdiction to a court of equity, or that complainant's title was equitable, or that the lands were wild and uncultivated, or that he was in possession of them, shows no ground for equitable relief. Ropes v. Goldman [Fla.] 42 So. 322. What constitutes fraud, see next subdivision.

22. Where defendant's attorney became ill and wrongly told defendant that he would be well enough to attend to the case but that it would have to go over to the next term, held judgment rendered at former term would be set aside. Kirk v. Gover, 29 Ky. L. R. 1046, 96 S. W. 824.

23. Must be fraud, accident, or mistake, unmixed with any fraud or negligence on the part of the petitioner. Knight v. Hollings, 73 N. H. 495, 63 A. 38. Failure to use ordinary diligence to make or attempt to remedy, or his attorney.[20] The remedy cannot be utilized for the correction of errors or irregularities,[27] to correct or modify the judgment,[28] nor where the petitioner had or has an adequate legal remedy.[29] Where it would be proper for a court of law to grant a new trial, if the application had been made while that court had the power, it is equally proper for a court of equity to do so, if the application is made when the court of law has no means of granting such a trial;[30] but a court of

make a defense will bar relief in equity. Bankers' Union of the World v. Landis [Neb.] 106 N. W. 973. Evidence held insufficient to show that complainant was free from negligence. Collier v. Parish [Ala.] 41 So. 772. Equity will not grant relief unless, without any neglect or default on his part, the petitioner was prevented by fraud or accident, or the act of the opposite party, from availing himself of the defense. Valley City Desk Co. v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 143 Mich. 468, 13 Det. Leg. N. 39, 106 N. W. 1125. A court of equity will not assume jurisdiction to set aside a judgment of a court of law of competent jurisdiction on the ground that it is contrary to equity unless the defendant in the judgment was ignorant of the fact in question pending suit. Id. One failing to defend scire facias proceedings to revive a judgment cannot subsequently obtain relief in equity on the ground that the original judgment was obtained by fraud. McCormick v. McCormick [Md.] 65 A. 64. Bill for a new trial in an ejectment suit alleging that at the time of the trial complainants were not able to take an appeal on account of their poverty and ignorance, and that they had since the trial discovered a deed of gift to the premises, executed some fifteen years before, stated no facts justifying the court in granting a new trial at law. Rosenbaum v. Scott [Miss.] 40 So. 485. Where, in an action at law, process was by mistake served on defendant's daughter instead of on defendant, though defendant had notice of the service or the same day and failed to appear, and judgment was entered against defendant, equity has jurisdiction to set aside the judgment. Wilcke v. Duross, 144 Mich. 242, 13 Det. Leg. N. 227, 107 N. W. 907.

24. Two years' delay held not to bar suit to set aside judgment for fraud. Estudillo v. Security Loan & Trust Co. [Cal.] 87 P. 19. Three years' delay held to bar equitable relief. Field v. Jordan, 124 Ga. 685, 52 S. E. 885. Six years' delay held to bar suit to cancel decree confirming a tax title. Flannigan v. Chapman & Dewey Land Co. [C. C. A.] 144 F. 371. Delay of twelve and one-half years held to bar relief against probate decree. Knight v. Hollings, 73 N. H. 495, 63 A. 38. Seventeen years' delay held to bar suit to set aside divorce decree, former wife having remarried and conveyed property in reliance on decree. Buffington v. Carty, 195 Mo. 490, 93 S. W. 779.

25. Failure of assignee of principal debtor to intervene in garnishment proceedings held to bar right to have enforcement of judgment enjoined. Fry v. Radzinski, 219 Ill. 526, 76 N. E. 694. Must be fraud, accident, or mistake, unmixed with any fraud or negligence on the part of the petitioner. Knight v. Hollings, 73 N. H. 495, 63 A. 38.

26. Where attorney relied on opposing parties' statements that land had been enclosed with a fence for ten years, and consented to the entry of judgment on opposing parties' pleas of limitation, held judgment would not be set aside. Gilbert v. Cooper [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 376, 95 S. W. 753. Failure of counsel to file statement of facts on appeal. Avocato v. Dell'Ara [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 794, 91 S. W. 830. Where the law of a foreign country was not proved, the fact that if it had been proved the judgment would have been different, held no ground for equitable relief. Id. Mistake or unskillfulness of an attorney will not warrant equitable relief. Donovan v. Miller [Idaho] 88 P. 82. The fact that the advice of his attorney was erroneous will not warrant equitable relief. Id.

27. Gorman v. Bonner [Ark.] 97 S. W. 282. Equity will not relieve against mere mistakes of law. Donovan v. Miller [Idaho] 88 P. 82. Errors reviewable on appeal are not ground for setting aside judgment. Avocato v. Dell'Ara [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 794, 91 S. W. 830. No exception having been taken to the decree, equity will not set it aside for mere errors apparent on the face of the record. Decree unsupported by verdict. Booth & Co. v. Mohr & Sons, 125 Ga. 472, 54 S. E. 147. Where, under the general rules of the common law or by express provision of statute, the existence of some particular fact must be established at the trial to enable the court having cognizance of such cases to pronounce judgment in favor of one party or the other, an erroneous conclusion of the court in respect thereof is merely an error in the course of the trial, and not a jurisdictional defect. Flannigan v. Chapman & Dewey Land Co. [C. C. A.] 144 F. 371.

28. Beavers v. Rennels, 122 Ill. App. 483.

29. Failure of assignee of principal debtor to intervene in garnishment proceedings held bar to right to have enforcement of judgment enjoined. Fry v. Radzinski, 219 Ill. 526, 76 N. E. 694. Equity will not interfere because defenses existed which might have been, but were not, interposed (Hoskins v. Nichols, 48 Misc. 465, 96 N. Y. S. 926), or where the party had a remedy by appeal but failed to do so (Id.). A summary motion to be supported by affidavits is not an adequate remedy. Studillo v. Security Loan & Trust Co. [Cal.] 87 P. 19. An injunction will not lie to enjoin the collection of a justice's judgment where the complainant has an adequate remedy by way of appeal. Lasher v. Annunziata, 119 Ill. App. 653. An injunction will not issue, restraining the collection of a judgment of the justice of the peace where defendant failed to appeal, in the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, to prevent such appeal. Grossman v. Davis, 117 Ill. App. 354. In an equitable proceeding, remedy of party to vacate or modify the judgment for fraud or mistake in its procurement held complete at law by proceedings instituted for that purpose in the court in which it was rendered. Wood v. Stewart [Ark.] 98 S. W. 711.

equity will only grant such relief in case of newly discovered evidence, surprise, or fraud, or where a party is deprived of the means of defense by circumstances beyond his control.[31] A court of equity will not interfere with the enforcement of judgments at law unless the complainant has an equitable defense of which he could not avail himself at law,[32] or had a good defense at law which he was prevented from availing himself of by fraud, or accident, unmixed with negligence of himself or agents.[33] The effect of the Code procedure has modified and, to a large extent, rendered obsolete the ancient jurisdiction of equity over judgments at law. The rule now generally is that parties must litigate the whole controversy in one action, and a defendant who has an equitable defense to an action at law is not now without remedy against such action, for he can interpose such defense by answer or counterclaim, and, if necessary, have the case transferred to the chancery court. If he fails to do this, and allows judgment at law to go against him, he may find his defenses have been cut off by such judgment, and that he is without a remedy either in law or equity.[34] To obtain relief the petitioner must himself do equity,[35] and it must appear that it will be contrary to equity and good conscience to deny the petition.[36] While generally a suit to set aside will not lie where the judgment

Wilson [Ind.] 76 N. E. 748. Statute of limitations held a meritorious defense. Goode v. Marvin, 142 Mich. 518, 12 Det. Leg. N. 786, 105 N. W. 1112. Failure to interpose a defense is no ground for relief in equity. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Tremblay [Me.] 65 A. 22. Want of consideration in a contract (Donovan v. Miller [Idaho] 88 P. 82), or that it was against public policy (Id.), will not warrant a court of equity in enjoining the collection of a judgment at law where the defendant through the negligence of his attorneys fails to set up such defenses (Id.). A judgment will not be enjoined merely because the process or the service thereof, in the action in which it was entered, was insufficient to give jurisdiction of the person of defendant therein. 2 Starr & C. Ann. St. 1896, p. 2144, c. 69, § 7, considered. Young v. Deneen, 220 Ill. 350, 77 N. E. 193. Equity will interfere to restrain the collection of a judgment entered in an action at law wherein the plaintiff procured or was responsible for a false return of process, provided that the defendant in such action had a good and sufficient defense thereto. Emerson v. Gray [Del.] 63 A. 768. Married woman held to have no right to enjoin enforcement of a judgment rendered in a suit in which she alleged, but failed to prove, her disability. Beasley v. Robson, 117 La. 584, 42 So. 147. Where judgment is obtained against an administrator by collusion with him, or owing to his failure to use due diligence in defending the action, chancery will relieve the heirs unless it was for a valid and subsisting claim. Patteson v. Carter [Ala.] 41 So. 133.

34. Gorman v. Bonner [Ark.] 97 S. W. 282. In those states where equitable defenses may be interposed in actions at law, the failure to interpose such a defense in an action at law is no ground for relief in equity. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Tremblay [Me.] 65 A. 22. So held where a life insurance company paid the amount of the policy to an assignee of the policy for security, and failed to assert its right by subrogation to the rights of such assignee as against the claim of a subsequent assignee. 35. Where the judgment debtor admits the validity of part of the indebtedness sued on, he will be required to pay such portion as condition precedent to the granting of equitable relief. Kirk v. Gover, 29 Ky. L. R. 1046, 96 S. W. 824. The ability of certain mortgagors to pay the amount found due on an accounting held not a condition to their right to maintain a suit to vacate a foreclosure decree collusively and fraudulently entered for an amount largely in excess of that due. Estudillo v. Security Loan & Trust Co. [Cal.] 87 P. 19.

36. In order to obtain the exercise of the equitable power to set aside a decree, there must be some substantial ground, such as fraud, accident, or mistake, which renders it against conscience to execute the decree they attack. Wright v. Hollings, 73 N. H. 495, 63 A. 38. Injunction held not to lie against enforcement of a judgment, the remedy being in effect to enforce an agreement which was a fraud on a third person and the court. Wood v. Stewart [Ark.] 98 S. W. 711. Judgment against an insane person set aside where summons was served on such insane person, is absolutely void,[37] still it has been held that a judgment rendered without jurisdiction may be set aside in equity.[38] When the court entering the decree had jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter of the suit, and persons who are not parties to the suit and who have dealt with the subject-matter of the suit in good faith, relying upon the decree, have acquired interests in the subject-matter of the suit, the court will not set aside the decree and thereby divest and destroy their interests in the subject-matter of the suit.[39] An infant has a right to file by his next friend or guardian, at any time during his minority,[40] or within the period allowed after reaching majority for the prosecution of a writ of error,[41] an original bill to impeach a decree either for fraud or for error apparent upon the face of the proceedings,[42] and which existed at the time of the entry of the decree,[43] without asking for a rehearing or filing a bill of review.[44]

Meyers, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 472. Failure of guardian ad litem of infant in probate proceedings to object to illegal probate of will disinheriting his ward held a constructive fraud upon the latter and authorized the setting aside of the probate decree. Parsons v. Balson [Wis.] 109 N. W. 136. Evidence that owner of the land had paid the taxes for the three years preceding the confirmation of the tax title does not warrant the setting aside of the decree of confirmation. Boynton v. Ashabranner, 75 Ark. 415, 91 S. W. 20. Where jury found that plaintiffs and their agents by false statements induced the court to render the judgment it did, held judgment would be set aside. Cowan v. Brett [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 776, 97 S. W. 330. The intentional act of a city in assessing property owners for the paving of a street which a railroad company was legally bound, under a contract with the city, to pave, constituted such fraud on the property owners as would justify the court in vacating a judgment for such assessment at a subsequent term. City of Chicago v. Newberry Library, 224 Ill. 330, 79 N. E. 666. Mere false swearing or perjury on the trial is insufficient to warrant setting the judgment aside unless accompanied by fraud extrinsic or collateral to the matter involved in the original case sufficient to justify the conclusion that but for such fraud the result would have been different. Graves v. Graves [Iowa] 109 N. W. 707. When the issues are clearly defined by the pleadings and no deceit is practiced which misleads a party as to the character of the proofs intended to be offered, an action will not lie to vacate a judgment on the ground that it was obtained by fraud or perjury. Gen. St. 1894, § 5434, construed. Bisseberg v. Ree [Minn.] 109 N. W. 1115. Evidence that plaintiff had told a third party to tell defendant that the cause had been to the questions examined and determined in the action.[47] The fraud must be proven, it cannot be inferred.[48] Cases in which the facts are deemed to show surprise,[49] accident, and mistake,[50] as the terms are used here, are shown in the notes.

(§ 5) D. Procedure to amend, open, vacate or enjoin. Time for application.[51]—Application must be seasonably made[52] and within the statutory time.[53] In order continued, and that defendant relying on the notification did not appear at the trial in person or by attorney, was sufficient to justify the setting aside of the judgment on the ground of fraud and mistake. Jordan v. Brown [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 929, 94 S. W. 398. Where heirs of a decedent agreed that the personal property of the estate should be sold to pay the decedent's debts and the real estate divided among themselves, and a few of the heirs subsequently procured the appointment of an administrator and induced him to bring a settlement suit that they might themselves acquire title to the land, held judgment would be set aside as procured by fraud. May v. Vaughn, 28 Ky. L. R. 1088, 91 S. W. 273. Where judgment is obtained against an administrator by collusion with him, or owing to his failure to use due diligence in defending the action, chancery will relieve the heirs unless it was for a valid and subsisting claim. Patteson v. Carter [Ala.] 41 So. 133. Failure to carry out promises which were made to procure a consent decree is not such fraud as to impeach the decree though the promisor did not intend to fulfill them when he made them. Divorce action dismissed on a promise of the defendant to give the custody of a minor child to the complainant except during one day of the week which was violated. Krieger v. Krieger, 120 Ill. App. 634. The mere fact that the administrator overestimated the widow's interest in an action to sell real estate to pay debts does not constitute fraud, accident, or mistake, authorizing a modification of the decree ordering the sale which allowed the widow a certain portion of the proceeds. Beavers v. Rennels, 122 Ill. App. 483.

47. Donovan v. Miller [Idaho] 88 P. 82. Equity will not relieve on the grounds that the judgment was obtained by perjury. Hoskins v. Nichols, 48 Misc. 465, 96 N. Y. S. 926. Suit in equity to set aside probate of will and distribution decree. Goodrich v. Ferris, 145 F. 844.

Contra: That the decree was obtained by false testimony will be a ground for setting it aside in equity (Avocato v. Dell' Ara [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 794, 91 S. W. 830), the parties having exercised due diligence (Id.). Failure to obtain rebuttal testimony held to bar relief. Id.

49. Disregard of service of summons by "business agent" of corporation held to warrant opening default judgment against corporation on the ground of surprise. Roberts v. Wilson [Cal. App.] 84 P. 216. Where parties could not by the use of reasonable diligence have discovered that a certain marriage was illegal owing to the wife having another husband living, held default judgment would be set aside. Wellinger v. Wellinger [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 214.

50. An error of fact to warrant a court in setting aside an order of dismissal entered at a prior term must be such as would have precluded such order had it been known. The fact that plaintiff's attorney's death was unknown to the court dismissing an action for want of prosecution is insufficient since it might still have been dismissed on the ground of negligence in procuring another attorney. Green v. Union El. R. Co., 118 Ill. App. 1. One knowingly failing to contest the probate of a will, held decree admitting will to probate was not the result of accident, mistake, or any unforeseen cause within the meaning of Gen. Laws 1896, c. 251, § 2. Seward v. Johnson, 27 R. I. 396, 62 A. 569. Mislaying summons and complaint held to warrant opening default judgment. Appelbaum v. Star Fire Ins. Co., 100 N. Y. S. 747. Where one failed to take ordinary precautions as to his defense, held default judgment would not be set aside on the ground that he was in the hospital at the time the judgment was taken against him. Iowa Saving & Loan Ass'n v. Kent [Iowa] 109 N. W. 773. Failure to answer because of the failure of the clerk to keep the declaration in the files of the case and to make an entry of filing in the register as required by the court rules is such error of fact as will warrant the vacating of a default judgment at subsequent term. Proc. § 473, motion to annul must be made within six months after the rendition of judgment. Tinn v. U. S. Dist. Attorney, 148 Cal. 773, 84 P. 152. Where a motion to annul an order admitting an alien to citizenship was made more than three years after the original order, the appearance of the naturalized citizen and his consent to the granting of the motion will not give the court jurisdiction; Code Civ. Proc. § 473, authorizing a motion to set aside a judgment only within six months after its rendition. Id. Code Civ. Proc. § 473, allowing one year within which to move to set aside a judgment not based on personal service held not affected as to the length of time allowed by the amendment of § 939. Fox v. Townsend, 2 Cal. App. 193, 83 P. 272. Under Civ. Code 1895, § 3764, judgment discharging administrator cannot be set aside at the instance of adult heirs unless they attack it by a proceeding commenced within three years from the date of its rendition. Summerlin v. Floyd, 124 Ga. 980, 53 S. E. 452. Eleven years' delay held to bar relief. Id. A judgment apparently valid on its face and rendered in an action wherein the

to toll the statute limiting the time within which a direct attack may be made on the judgment, there must not only have been fraud in obtaining the judgment, but it must have been coupled with such concealment of the fraud as to prevent the attacking party from ascertaining the fraud by the use of reasonable diligence.[54] In order to avoid the effect of a statute providing that a motion to vacate a final judgment for irregularity shall not be heard after one year from the filing of the judgment roll, a clear case of fraud must be shown.[55] Infants are generally allowed to make application within a short time after reaching majority.[56]

Parties.[57]—Persons who are not parties nor privies and do not, upon the record, appear to be affected, will not be heard upon a motion to vacate a judgment,[58] even though they might have become parties to the action.[59] In order to institute such proceedings one must have a real interest in the controversy;[60] that he was a party to the original action is not of itself sufficient.[61] A party interested in property affected by a judgment or to be affected by it, though not a party to the record, may move to vacate and set aside the judgment vacated therein.[62] That one is the court had jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter cannot be set aside and vacated as void after the expiration of the statutory time for taking an appeal or for making a motion to vacate. Lockard v. Lockard [S. D.] 110 N. W. 104. Under Municipal Court Act (Laws 1902, p. 1563, c. 580, § 254), an application to vacate or modify a judgment rendered by the court upon a trial without a jury must be made within five days after the rendition of judgment. Barron v. Feist, 101 N. Y. S. 72. A motion to insert in the judgment a clause providing that defendant was liable to arrest and imprisonment on execution held a motion to amend or modify. Ostrom v. Sapolsky, 49 Misc. 610, 96 N. Y. S. 1070. The only power conferred on a municipal court justice to vacate, amend, or modify a judgment rendered by him is given by Municipal Court Act [Laws 1902, p. 1563, c. 580, § 254] (Ryan v. Brown, 99 N. Y. S. 868), and a motion to "correct" is a motion to amend within this act and must be made within the statutory time (Id.). Five days. Id. Under Municipal Court Act (Laws 1902, p. 1563, c. 580, § 254), a motion for an order to amend a judgment by striking therefrom an allowance of costs must be made within five days after the rendition of judgment. Lissner v. Dochtermann, 49 Misc. 624, 97 N. Y. S. 230. Where plaintiff fails to prove a cause of action in excess of a tender and judgment is nevertheless rendered for him, the municipal court after the expiration of five days has no power to correct the error by amending the judgment so as to make it a judgment in favor of defendant for costs. Municipal Court Act (Laws 1902, p. 1563, c. 580, § 254), construed. Lackner v. American Clothing Co., 112 App. Div. 438, 98 N. Y. S. 376. Proper method of relief in such cases is by suit in equity. Id. Code Civ. Proc. § 724, authorizing the vacation of a judgment within a year for causes arising from the mistake of "the party seeking the relief," has no application to a motion for the vacation of a municipal court judgment which was entered by the mistake of the trial judge and was not the result of error of either party. Barron v. Feist, 101 N. Y. S. 72. The above statute does not apply to a motion to set aside a judgment for an irregularity in entering it due to an inadvertent mistake of the court. Id. The motion to vacate a judgment after term, contemplated by Rev. St. 1899, § 795, providing that a judgment shall not be set aside for irregularity except on motion filed within three years after the term in which the judgment was rendered, does not apply where the defective service relied on in the motion is not an irregularity upon the record proper. Heffernan v. Ragsdale [Mo.] 97 S. W. 890. successful party does not deprive him of the right to institute such proceedings.[63] So also, where the judgment fails to conform to the verdict, the party in whose favor the court erred may have the judgment corrected.[64] The judgment being void for want of service on one of the defendants, it is proper to set it aside although it appears that such defendant had no further interest in the subject-matter of the suit.[65] Fraud being alleged all the parties thereto must be made parties to the attack.[66]

Modes and manner of procedure.[67]—A final judgment can be vacated and set aside only on some proceeding authorized by law.[68] Besides error and appeal,[69] the common-law remedies were on the law side error coram nobis and audita querela and later a motion during term to vacate; and on the chancery side by bill of review or other bill appropriate to the case.[70] The judgment being void, certiorari may be employed.[71] The remedy of a party seeking to prevent the execution of a decree because of matters outside of, though related to, the case in which the decree was rendered, is by petition filed in the pending cause for a restraining order, or an order to suspend proceedings in the cause.[72] Statutory methods must be followed.[73] A motion to set aside or strike off a judgment must be on the ground of irregularity appearing on the face of the record.[74] A motion to open the judgment is an appeal to the equitable power of the court to let the defendant into a defense.[75] The court may of its own motion strike from its records judgments void for want of jurisdiction.[76] If an erroneous judgment is entered, the remedy is by a motion to modify.[77] A consent decree cannot be impeached for fraud on a mere motion, but an original bill in the nature of a bill of review is necessary.[78] A proceeding to vacate a judgment is not like an action or law suit in the first instance, and where the court is entirely without jurisdiction except as it obtains it from the action of estate, though he was made a party to the action in which such decree was rendered. Ford v. Kimble, 41 Wash. 573, 84 P. 414.

Proc. § 405, providing that civil actions shall be commenced by filing a complaint, a proceeding to annul an order admitting an alien to citizenship in which no complaint is filed cannot be considered as an equity action to set aside the order. Tinn v. U. S. Dist. Attorney, 148 Cal. 773, 84 P. 152. the litigants acting under authority of law, but in the vacation proceedings the parties are already before the court, the subject-matter of the controversy is in the custody of the court, and the parties to the action are in a measure presumed to have knowledge of the standing of the case;[79] consequently, the fact that an application to vacate a judgment is made by motion instead of by petition as required by statute does not render a judgment of vacation made thereon void for want of jurisdiction.[80] The Illinois statutory proceeding in place of the writ of error coram nobis is deemed a new suit at law, independent of the proceeding in which the judgment sought to be set aside was rendered.[81] A proceeding to correct a judgment may be joined with one to revive it.[82]

Pleadings and practice.[83]—Statutes generally prescribe the method to be pursued.[84] In other than very exceptional cases, a motion to vacate and set aside a judgment should be made in the action in which the judgment was rendered,[85] and generally a suit to set aside must be brought in the court which rendered the judgment.[86] The failure of a party to proceed in the proper court is frequently held not ground for a dismissal of his complaint, but the same should be transferred to the proper court.[87] One suing to set aside a judgment must in his pleading set up facts sufficient to enable the court to determine the issues presented in the original action and render such judgment as will be an effective substitute for the one set aside.[88] The petition should set forth a meritorious defense to the action.[89] The allegations of the petition must not be mere conclusions of law,[90] hence, except in a few exceptional cases[91] where fraud is relied on, the facts

Hoefer v. Sawtelle [Wash.] 85 P. 853. The general averment of a petition to set aside a judgment that it was against a person under disability without the averment of any fact to show the disability is unavailing. Machen v. Allegation that one has a good and valid defense is a mere conclusion of law. Bankers' Union of the World v. Lan-constituting the fraud must be alleged.[92] While the petition should generally be verified,[93] it has been held that the answer in an action to set aside a judgment on the ground that it was procured by false and fraudulent testimony of one of defendant's witnesses need not be verified,[94] and it may be filed and presented by an attorney.[95] An answer filed in connection with an application to open a judgment rendered on service by publication must be full and complete as a pleading by the defendant in the cause.[96] It need not present a defense coextensive with the entire demand or with every demand of the petition, but whatever defense it proposes must be complete and perfect in the sense of fully overcoming the portions of the plaintiff's claim against which it is directed,[97] and it must subvert sufficient of the cause of action set forth in the petition to make it worthy of consideration in the doing of substantial justice between the parties.[98] Statutory provisions prohibiting the addition of new causes of action by amendment have no application to a motion to set aside a judgment[99] and the latter is amendable by the addition of grounds other than those taken in the original motion.[1] The construction of various pleadings is shown in the notes.[2] Unless an appearance is entered,[3] notice is generally deemed essential,[4] statutes of some states requiring the service of a copy of the motion upon the opposite party.[5]

2. A motion to set aside a judgment establishing a railroad lien held to raise the objection that one company made a party was not brought into court in any manner, and that another company served with process was not made a party to the action. Little Rock Trust Co. v. Southern Missouri, etc., R. Co., 195 Mo. 669, 93 S. W. 944.

3. One appearing without objection at the hearing of a motion to modify cannot thereafter object that the order modifying the judgment was invalid for want of notice. Stark Bros. v. Royce [Wash.] 87 P. 340.

4. A judgment cannot be vacated or altered even during the term of rendition, except upon notice to the parties. Allowance of claims in probate proceedings. Ault v. Bradley, 191 Mo. 709, 90 S. W. 775. Purchase at a sale under a judgment valid on its face held not affected by a subsequent vacation of the judgment of which he had no notice. Heffernan v. Ragsdale [Mo.] 97 S. W. 890.

5. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 134, a motion to set aside a decree rendered out of term will not be entertained unless the same is filed and a copy served on the opposite party within 10 days after such decree is rendered, especially where the judgment is regular. United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irr. Co. [N. M.] 85 P. 393.

7. After verdict and judgment it will be presumed that facts necessary to support the judgment were proved and in all formal and technical matters the complaint will be treated as amended to conform to the facts. Michigan Home Colony Co. v. Tabor [C. C. A.] 141 F. 332. Where the judgment is regular on its face, it will be presumed that the court acted within its jurisdiction, although the only summons in the record is defective, there being nothing to show that another summons was not issued or that the defendant did not appear, etc. Snider v. Badere, 39 Wash. 130, 81 P. 302. Courts of general jurisdiction. Probate courts. Knight v. Hollings, 73 N. H. 495, 63 A. 38. It will be

are prima facie evidence thereof, and if the court had jurisdiction, so long as its decree stands, it must be conclusively presumed that all of the proceedings which culminated in the judgment were in due conformity with the requirements of the law.[9] The petitioner must prove that he was free from negligence,[10] and has a meritorious defense[11] which can be established by evidence on another trial.[12] There must be a clear showing of fraud in order to overcome the presumption that the judgment was properly obtained.[13] A modification being sought, the petitioner has the burden of proving the error.[14] While a judgment should not be opened upon the defendant's oath when contradicted by the oath of the plaintiff, yet where there are corroborative circumstances or circumstances from which inferences may be drawn corroborating the defendant, it is proper to open the judgment.[15] The evidence may consist of affidavits, depositions, or oral testimony,[16] and as a general rule counter affidavits may be submitted,[17] though if the application is required to show a meritorious defense, counter affidavits or countervailing evidence should not be received on that question although affidavits or oral evidence may be heard to controvert the alleged excuse for suffering the judgment to be taken.[18] While judgment should not be opened where defendant's oath is contradicted by plaintiff's oath, yet where there are circumstances corroborating the defendant it is proper to open it.[19] In the Illinois statutory proceeding in place of the writ of error coram nobis, presumed that testator was a resident of or had an estate in county in which proceedings were had. Id. Where the probate of a will is in common form, it will be presumed that there was no conflict. Id. Where it appears of record that a summons was duly issued by plaintiff's attorney as authorized by Mills' Ann. Code, § 33, and that the summons with proof of service was filed and returned into court, it was error to set aside a default judgment for lack of jurisdiction though another summons issued by the clerk had not been returned. Whitmore v. Gaston [Colo.] 85 P. 427.

8. Recitals of service held rebuttable. Francis v. Lilly's Ex'x [Ky.] 98 S. W. 996; Rodgers v. Nichols, 15 Okl. 579, 83 P. 923. Where judgment recited that defendants had been duly notified by publication and had defaulted, held it would be presumed that the court acted on competent evidence that the notice had been given. Harbert v. Durden, 116 Mo. App. 512, 92 S. W. 746. Where docket recited: "Judgment for plaintiff for," etc., held sufficient to warrant finding that there was an order for judgment. Washington Nat. Bank v. Williams, 190 Mass. 497, 77 N. E. 383. Where the return to a summons failed to show that it was served by one qualified to serve it, the recital of the judgment to the effect that defendant was "personally served" held not to conclusively show legal service. French v. Ajax Oil & Development Co. [Wash.] 87 P. 359. A recital in a judgment on a bond to dissolve the garnishment that a judgment had been rendered against the garnishee is not conclusive but may be rebutted on direct attack. Smith v. Kennedy, 125 Ga. 830, 54 S. E. 731. To warrant the setting aside of an order allowing certain claims against a decedent's estate because the claims were barred by limitations, mere proof of the claims themselves appearing on their face to be barred is insufficient, without evidence that the facts and circumstances which would have taken the claim out of the operation of the statute at the time it was allowed did not exist. Smart v. Panther [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 448, 95 S. W. 679. The entry of a default judgment reciting due service of process based on a return of service signed by one styling himself a deputy sheriff is not conclusive of the official character of the signer of the return, and the judgment may be avoided for want of jurisdiction where it is shown that the person making the return was not in fact a deputy sheriff and the process was not in fact served as recited by the return. it is proper to hear the proceedings on affidavits and counter affidavits.[20] Affidavits upon which a motion to vacate applies must state facts and the rule against hearsay evidence applies;[21] affidavits upon information and belief being generally insufficient.[22] An affidavit by an attorney must show why it was not made by the moving party.[23] Cases dealing with the sufficiency of the evidence are shown in the notes.[24]

Questions of law and fact.[25]—Whether there is sufficient evidence to authorize an amendment is a question of fact,[26] and the amendment being ordered and the record not revealing the fact whether the court acted on any further evidence than the verified application and the affidavit in support thereof, an appellate court will presume that the evidence was sufficient to warrant the amendment of the order.[27]

Judgment or order of vacation and extent and effect thereof.[28]—The imposition of conditions on opening the judgment is discretionary with the court.[29] In Illinois it is error to enjoin the collection of a judgment without requiring the statutory bond.[30] Generally a formal order is essential,[31] though pleading to issue will operate to set aside an office judgment.[32] A judge has no power out of court to modify a judgment duly rendered in open court.[33] An order granting a new trial is in effect an order vacating a judgment irregularly entered.[34] The court should only grant such relief as is consistent with the pleadings, facts, and nature of the proceeding.[35] An order setting aside a judgment should also set aside a sale thereunder.[36] That the judgment is rendered after the expiration of a statutory period is immaterial, the application having been seasonably made.[37]

29. Imposition of $50 attorney's fee held reasonable though statutory fee was $10. Redding v. Puget Sound Iron & Steel Works [Wash.] 87 P. 119. In setting aside a judgment under Rev. Codes 1899, § 5298, the court is vested with an extremely wide discretion as to the imposition of costs and terms, and, if no terms are allowed, such action is not necessarily an abuse of discretion. Olson v. Sargent County [N. D.] 107 N. W. 43. In an action at law, process was not served on defendant, but on her daughter by mistake. The same day defendant learned of the service, but failed to appear and make any objection, but after a levy on her real estate she sued to set aside the judgment. Held she was not entitled to costs in the trial court nor any greater costs than actual disbursements on an appeal by her. Wilcke v. Duross, 144 Mich. 242, 13 Det. Leg. N. 227, 107 N. W. 907. Where an attorney practiced an imposition on the court by answering "ready" on the call of the calendar for three successive days, and then absented himself and permitted a default judgment to be taken, such judgment should be opened only upon payment of costs, $25 fees to the opposing attorney, and the giving of an undertaking to pay any judgment which may be rendered against him. 35. Where, upon an original bill by infant parties, a decree restoring a lost deed is reversed, the court cannot proceed to adjudicate the question of title to the land between them and a purchaser under a decree in a suit subsequent to the suit restoring the deed, and between different parties, when the decree restoring the deed did not adjudicate the title to, or otherwise dispose of the land, and when the bill of the infants canno-

Appeal or review.[38]—The appealability of the order is largely statutory.[39] The Illinois statutory proceeding in place of the writ of error coram nobis is deemed a new suit at law, independent of the proceeding in which the judgment sought to be aside was rendered,[40] and the question whether a motion shows on its face any error in fact can only be reviewed by appeal or writ of error from the judgment rendered in the particular case upon proper assignments of error in the court of review.[41] In order to present to the appellate court the question as one of law, whether there is any evidence in the record to sustain the order or judgment of the lower court, it is necessary to submit such question to the lower court as one at law by demurring to the evidence or by some other mode that would call upon the trial court for a ruling upon that question.[42] The power of a court to amend its decree should be questioned upon the appeal from the decree so amended, and cannot be raised on an appeal from a subsequent decree confirming a master's report under such decree.[43]

§ 6. Construction, operation, and effect of judgment.[44]—Judgments are to be interpreted with reference to their language, the record, the pleadings, and the subject-matter of the suit.[45] A judgment which recites a general finding in favor of one party to an action is a finding in favor of that party upon every issue raised by the pleadings and supported by the evidence.[46] Surplusage may be disregarded.[47] Where the journal entry of judgment is complete it speaks for itself and be maintained for the purpose of removing a cloud upon the title to the land. Poling v. Poling [W. Va.] 55 S. E. 993.

36. In an action to set aside a judgment and a sale of land thereunder for fraud, the judgment should order that the judgment in question and the sale thereunder be set aside and the deed canceled, and that the parties are entitled to their proportionate interests in the land sold instead of adjudging that the land was purchased and held in trust for the parties entitled thereto. 45. Judgment forever barring and estopping plaintiffs from thereafter "instituting or prosecuting any action or proceeding against the defendant or the real estate described in the complaint" construed as referring solely to the case made by the pleadings and the subject-matter before the court. Gray v. Cohen [Cal. App.] 84 P. 444. A judgment for defendants against "C. & Son," the plaintiff, is good although not alleging that it is a corporation, this appearing in the declaration. Carrier v. Poulas, 87 Miss. 595, 40 So. 164. Judgment of justice of the peace reciting that he was a "justice of the peace in the city" held to mean a justice in the township in which the city is situated, under Rev. St. 1899, § 3805, making justices township officers. Carpenter v. Roth, 192 Mo. 658, 91 S. W. 540. A judgment awarding a certain sum of money "with interest thereon" held to be construed as allowing legal interest from the date of its rendition only. Mixer v. Mixer, 2 Cal. App. 227, 83 P. 273. Where a judgment entry recited that defendant demurred to the petition as amended, whereupon it was considered and adjudged by the court that the demurrers to the petition as amended be sustained, and, plaintiff declining to plead further, it was adjudged that the information be dismissed at petitioner's cost, held the entry showed a proper judgment sustaining the demurrer. State v. Kitchens [Ala.] 41 So. 871. Where judgment adjudged that taxes due city were to be deducted from fund which was to be distributed and city subsequently disclaimed the taxes, held no deduction should be made. Deering v. Schreyer, 185 N. Y. 560, 78 N. E. 75. Where in ejectment by a vendee at tax sale against tenants under the former owner there is nothing to show the relation of landlord and tenant between plaintiff and defendants a dismissal for want of notice is not an adjudication that the relation exists, though a notice is only required in such case. Carlson v. Curran, 42 Wash. 647, 85 P. 627. Where a judgment is inconsistent but the record reveals that a part of it is a nullity which renders it consistent, it will stand. Greenberg v. Stevens, 114 Ill. App. 483. Where judgment is rendered in favor of one partner against another for his interest in property alleged to have been acquired by use of partnership property, the court must have found that it was so acquired and that plaintiff had been denied his rights therein. Deaner v. O'Hara [Colo.] 85 P. 1123.

The rule applies that in cases of ambiguity introduced into the judgment roll by verbal changes, which either should have been made in additional places or not at all, the presumption in favor of the validity of affirmative action should prevail.[57] Defects in the pleadings may be cured by the judgment.[58] In Louisiana judgment in a petitory action may be taken as a title.[59]

§ 7. Collateral attack.[60] What is collateral.[61]—A collateral attack is an attempt to impeach a judgment in a proceeding not instituted for the express purpose of annulling, correcting, or modifying such judgment.[62]

The assertion of jurisdictional defenses as concerns the main action by a garnishee is not a collateral attack upon the judgment against the principal defendant. Tabor v. Bank of Leadville [Colo.] 83 P. 1060. An answer and petition in response to a petition for the distribution of an estate alleging that the will under which distribution is asked is a forgery and that the probate of the same was fraudulently obtained is a collateral attack on the judgment admitting the will to probate. In re Davis' Estate [Cal.] 86 P. 183. Where the court on the final settlement of an executor has directed the share of a nonresident heir to be paid to the other heirs of the decedent, a proceeding by such heir to vacate the order approving the executor's report and discharging the executor is not a collateral attack. Reizer v. Mertz, 223 Ill. 555, 79 N. E. 283. Where in trespass to try title plaintiff claimed under mesne conveyances from one to whom the land was awarded in partition as heir of the deceased owner, evidence of defendant, another heir, showing that the judgment of partition was a nullity constituted a collateral attack on the judgment and was inadmissible. Grounds.[63]—If the court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and, except in actions in rem, of the parties, its judgment in a judicial action[64] cannot be collaterally assailed by the parties or their privies.[65] The court having had no jurisdiction, its judgment may be collaterally attacked[66] at any time by any person who has not by his conduct estopped himself from questioning its validity,[67] though, being a court of general jurisdiction, want of jurisdiction must affirmatively appear on the face of the record.[68] The reason for this is that, as to a court of general jurisdiction, all jurisdictional facts as to which the record is silent will be presumed.[69] Want of which has been foreclosed by a decree of court on the ground that complainant, who was made a defendant in the foreclosure suit, was not legally served with process therein, and his right of redemption was therefore not cut off, is a collateral attack on the foreclosure decree. Cohen v. Portland Lodge No. 142, 144 F. 266. In trespass to try title an attack on the judgment under which the land was sold on execution is collateral, the action in which the judgment was rendered being in a different court though between the same parties. Parker v. Moody & Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 650. Where in an action to foreclose a trust deed defendant pleads a superior title under a prior judgment in the same court, and a codefendant, admitting the validity of plaintiff's cause of action, by way of cross petition attacks the defendant's alleged superior title for lack of jurisdiction in the court rendering it, the attack is direct and not collateral. Board of county commissioners. Brooks v. Morgan, 36 Ind. App. 672, 76 N. E. 331. The fact that an order directing payment of a widow's dower in the course of the administration on her husband's estate was made on the same day that the application was filed did not show that the order was granted without notice. Briggs v. Manning [Ark.] 97 S. W. 289. Where the affidavit and order for publication and the notice of publication were set out in full in the record, held judgment could not be collaterally assailed. Rose v. Davis, 140 N. C. 266, 52 S. E. 780. The judgment or decree of a court of general jurisdiction acting within the scope of its ordinary powers, and in pursuance of the course of the common law, is aided by a presumption that jurisdiction was regularly acquired as to both the subject-matter and the person, until the contrary appears. Cohen v. Portland Lodge No. 142, 144 F. 266. Where a default personal judgment recited citation by publication and the petition and process showed that defendant was a nonresident, held judgment could be collaterally attacked. Lutcher v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 149, 95 S. W. 572. Where judgment failed to show on its face that defendant was a married woman, held not void for nonjoinder of husband. Schnitger v. Rankin, 192 Mo. 35, 91 S. W. 122. Where the record of a judgment on a cross bill showed that it was rendered on the same day that the cross bill was filed, so that service could not have been had and that the persons against whom the judgment was rendered did not appear, held the judgment was subject to collateral attack. Bryson v. Boyce [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 651, 92 S. W. 820.

W. 770. Will be presumed that sufficient affidavit was filed to authorize service by publication. Stoneman v. Bilby [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 50. Presumed that some disposition was made of a party not mentioned in the judgment prior to its rendition. Dunn v. Taylor [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 669, 94 S. W. 347. Court of common pleas is a court of general jurisdiction over the subject-matter of laying out roads and recording returns. Central R. Co. v. Seabright [N. J. Err. & App.] 64 A. 131. Order to record and nonexistence of parallel roads presumed. Id. On collateral attack of proceedings of a board of public works in ordering the construction of a sidewalk, presumed that notice sufficiently described property. Dyer v. Woods [Ind.] 76 N. E. 624. Judgment distributing trust fund to an association on a use and trust specified in the decree, it will be presumed in support thereof that the society had power to accept the bequest and was a person competent to act as trustee. Kauffman v. Foster [Cal. App.] 86 P. 1103. In a proceeding to recover taxes by a city tax collector, where the defendant was properly served, a default judgment for taxes generally was not subject to collateral attack either on the ground that it did not appear that the judgment did not include state and county taxes, which the city collector could not recover, or because the suit was brought in the name of the state. Rankin v. Porter Real Estate Co. [Mo.] 97 S. W. 877. In order to collaterally attack a judgment of a court of general jurisdiction for want of jurisdiction, the facts showing the lack of jurisdiction must be alleged and proved. Demurrer overruled. McDevitt v. Connell [N. J. Eq.] 63 A. 504; Leman v. MacLennan, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 205.

70. If a default judgment recites a valid service, that controls the balance of the record, but where the judgment sets out the particular kind of citation made on defendant, the record, including at least the citation, return, and petition, may be consulted to support or destroy the recital in the judgment. Lutcher v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 149, 95 S. W. 572.

71. Card v. Finch [N. C.] 54 S. E. 1009.

72. The recitation in a judgment of jurisdictional facts, if not contradicted by the record, will be presumed to be true, and they cannot be denied or questioned in any collateral proceeding. Dunn v. Taylor [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 669, 94 S. W. 347. Recital that cause had been retained for further orders. State v. Settle [N. C.] 54 S. E. 445. Where judgment recited appearance of defendant, held it could not be shown that he was never served and did not appear. Plummer v. Wells & Co. [Ind. T.] 90 S. W. 303. Findings that court had jurisdiction of parties held not overcome by return of sheriff on summons showing that an infant purporting to have been served with process as a defendant was in fact a complainant. Teel v. Dunnihoo, 221 Ill. 471, 77 N. E. 906. In a collateral attack on a default judgment reciting that defendant, though legally cited by publication, had failed to appear, parol evidence showing the nonresidence of defendant was inadmissible. Lutcher v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 149, 95 S. W. 572. Where judgment recited that it appeared to the court's satisfaction that defendants had been duly summoned, etc., held it would be presumed on collateral attack that proof of valid service was regularly made apart from an alleged defective affidavit of service. County Bank of San Luis Obispo v. Jack, 148 Cal. 437, 83 P. 705. Where there was no affirmative statement in an affidavit of service on two defendants that but one copy of the complaint and summons was delivered to the two, held it would be presumed that a copy was properly delivered to each of the defendants. Id. Recital in judgment that required notice was "given to the defendants in conformity of law" raises the presumption of due service and of jurisdiction of the persons, in the absence of any inconsistent record or evidence. Wallace v. Adams [C. C. A.] 143 F. 716. Where decree recites due and legal notice, the mere absence from the judgment roll of proofs of notice which should have been included therein does not affirmatively establish that the court had no jurisdiction because the required notice was not given. Farmers' Union Ditch Co. v. Rio Grande Canal Co. [Colo.] 86 P. 1042. Where the record affirmatively recites that it appears to the court that defendant has been duly summoned, it will be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary, on collateral attack, that the court had evidence before it on which to base a finding in favor of its jurisdiction. Hearn v. Ayres, 77 Ark. 497, 92 S. W. 768. Under B. & C. Comp. Or. § 56, providing for service by publication where the affidavit upon which the order of the court or judge for such service is based contains evidence which tends to prove the requisite facts, the court's adjudication of its sufficiency is conclusive on collateral attack, although it might be erroneous and reversible on direct appeal for insufficiency of the evidence. Cohen v. Portland Lodge No. 142, 144 F. 266. An affidavit filed to obtain an order for service by publication un-such impeachment is not permissible if it involves a contradiction of the record,[73] but, where the record speaks, it imports verity and nothing to the contrary can be presumed in aid of jurisdiction,[74] and the same rule applies where nonjurisdictional facts are admitted by demurrer.[75] It will be readily seen that under this rule any judgment not containing evidence in its record of its own invalidity should never be termed void for the purposes of collateral attack, for whenever it is necessary to present proof aliunde to show its nullity it must necessarily be a voidable judgment.[76] While generally no presumption will be indulged in in favor of the jurisdiction of an inferior court, still it will be presumed that an officer of such court has done his duty,[77] hence, from taking action which presupposes a decision of the question of jurisdiction, a finding thereon is implied,[78] and in that case the judgment is unassailable unless the record shows affirmatively a lack of jurisdiction.[79]

der B. & C. Comp. Or. § 56, held sufficient to sustain the order made thereon upon a collateral attack on the decree for want of jurisdiction. Id.

73. Presumption in favor of the judgment is rebuttable unless rebutting it involves a contradiction of the record. Stoneman v Bilby [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 50. Judgment of court of competent jurisdiction held not subject to collateral attack by evidence aliunde the record. Davis v. Ragland [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 615, 93 S. W. 1099. The record or judgment roll may not be impeached for want of jurisdiction by the minutes and files of the court or by other extrinsic evidence. Ballarino v. Superior Ct. of Los Angeles County, 2 Cal. App. 759, 84 P. 225. The law precludes inquiry by evidence aliunde the record in a collateral attack upon a judgment of a domestic court of general jurisdiction, regular on its face, into any fact which the court rendering such judgment must have passed upon in proceeding to its rendition. Davis v. Ragland [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 615, 93 S. W. 1099. Parol evidence of the understanding of the parties to a suit for partition with respect to the line between them and that a material mistake was made by the commissioners in running the division line was inadmissible as varying the judgment. Id.

74. Cohen v. Portland Lodge No. 142, 144 F. 266. A judgment reciting proper service is not for that reason impervious to collateral attack where it clearly and affirmatively appears from the record itself that no service was made. State v. Wheeler [Wash.] 86 P. 394. Default judgment held not binding as to facts showing lack of jurisdiction, the question of jurisdiction not being litigated. In re McGarren's Estate, 112 App. Div. 503, 98 N. Y. S. 415. If record shows that recitals of jurisdictional facts are untrue, the judgment may be collaterally assailed. Reizer v. Mertz, 223 Ill. 555, 79 N. E. 283. When the recitals in the judgment are such as to demonstrate the impossibility of there having been jurisdiction of the person or subject-matter the judgment is void and subject to collateral attack. Dunn v. Taylor [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 669, 94 S. W. 347. A judgment for taxes showing on its face that it was against unknown owners of land, rendered prior to the passage of Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. art. 5232o, authorizing service by publication on unknown owners of land in proceedings to collect taxes, there being no provision for that purpose prior to that time, is void. Id. Where the judgment recited the filing of an affidavit for service by publication and the record showed an insufficient affidavit, held it would be inferred that the service by publication was based on the defective affidavit and the presumption that a sufficient affidavit had been filed was overcome. Stoneman v. Bilby [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 50. The presumptions which the law implies in support of the judgments of superior courts of general jurisdiction only arise with respect to jurisdictional facts concerning which the record is silent, and when it discloses the evidence upon which service by publication was had, and this was ineffectual for the purpose, it will not be presumed that other or different evidence was presented, but the judgment will be void and open to collateral attack. Johnson v. Hunter [C. C. A.] 147 F. 133.

75. Allegations in bill that no service or appearance was had being admitted by demurrer, it will not be presumed that court erroneously found that it had jurisdiction or that any officer of the court made a false return. Cohen v. Portland Lodge, No. 142, 140 F. 774.

76. Dunn v. Taylor [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 669, 94 S. W. 347. Such must be the case with a judgment fully reciting personal service which is not contradicted by the record when in fact there has been no such service. Id.

78, 79. Where an inferior tribunal to which the subject-matter is committed has necessarily passed on its jurisdiction by proceeding to act, a judgment roll showing that some notice was had and failing to show any defect therein is invulnerable, since the presumption concluding a jurisdiction decided then applies. Brooks v. Morgan, 36 Ind. App. 672, 76 N. E. 331. Where a court has passed on a defective service of process and held the same sufficient, the judgment is not subject to collateral attack, though the court be one of inferior jurisdiction. Meyer v. Wilson [Ind.]

ties is established, the same presumptions exist in favor of the regularity of the action of such court as exist in favor of the action of a court of general jurisdiction, and the judgment rendered by such inferior court in such case is not subject to collateral attack.[80] Fraud, unless perhaps when it goes to the jurisdiction of the court,[81] is not ground for a collateral attack.[82] An erroneous judgment,[83] or

Foreign judgment obtained by fraud may be collaterally attacked. In re Bergmann, 110 App. Div. 588, 97 N. Y. S. 346. Where an alleged incompetent was inveigled into an insane hospital and there incarcerated and a guardian appointed for her for the fraudulent purpose of obtaining possession of her property, she being in fact sane, held judgment could be attacked collaterally. Id. Where a county employs one to bring suit against it to declare void certain warrants and to enjoin it from paying and the holding bank from collecting the same, a decree obtained therein is invalid. Multnomah County v. White [Or.] 85 P. 78. Order approving an administrator's account and ordering final distribution cannot be reviewed or set aside in a suit on the administrator's bond unless it is impeached for fraud. McDonald v. People, 222 Ill. 325, 78 N. E. 609. Purchasers pendente lite cannot question the validity of a judgment unless they can show fraud or collusion, and in the absence of such a showing it is presumed that the court ascertained all the facts necessary to its jurisdiction. 82. Morris v. Sadler [Kan.] 88 P. 69. False and perjured testimony is no ground for collateral attack and it is immaterial that the alleged fraud was not discovered until long after the judgment by reason of the death of a person. El Capitan Land & Cattle Co. v. Lees [N. M.] 86 P. 924. Code Civ. Proc. Kan. § 575, permitting a direct attack upon the judgment, does not alter the rule. Id. In a collateral attack on a judgment, the judgment cannot be set aside for fraud in the procuring of a jury; the alleged fraud not appearing on the face of the judgment roll. Smith v. Vandepeer [Cal. App.] 85 P. 136. A judgment by a lower court in conformity with a permissible interpretation of an obscure or ambiguous mandate from an appellate court is not subject to collateral attack. Clark v. Parks [Neb.] 106 N. W. 770. Judgment cannot be collaterally attacked by a party to the suit in which it was rendered because of mistakes made by the court in construing the testimony. Ropes v. Goldman [Fla.] 42 So. 322. Where in a foreclosure suit an issue as to the metes and bounds of a certain lot is presented and determined, the decree cannot be collaterally attacked in confirmation proceedings for irregularity in the description. Medland v. Van Etten [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1022. An order vacating a judgment cannot be collaterally attacked on the ground that as to certain of the lands to which the judgment related there was no contest, and the judgment should therefore have been allowed to stand as to them, the order being at most erroneous only and reviewable only on appeal. State v. Washington Dredging & Improvement Co. [Wash.] 86 P. 936. A judgment in favor of a trustee in a deed of trust against an attaching creditor held conclusive against such creditor in a suit by one of the beneficiaries under the deed against the creditor and the trustee for alleged collusive diversion of the fund. Sawyer v. First Nat. Bank one voidable for mere irregularities of procedure,[84] cannot be collaterally attacked. That the statute of limitations had run against the cause of action is no basis for collateral attack.[85] A collateral attack may be made in a criminal case when its purpose is to punish a crime committed by means of the decree, judgment or record collaterally attacked.[86] The same general rules apply to foreign judgments[87] and to decisions of boards acting judicially.[88] In most states probate courts are regarded as courts of general jurisdiction.[89] Cases dealing with the weight and sufficiency of the evidence are shown in the notes.[90]

§ 8. Lien. When and to what it attaches.[91]—Until levy a judgment lien, while reaching all of the debtor's property, is not specific.[92] The lien covers all the real property[93] of the judgment debtor. It, however, only reaches the actual interest of the judgment debtor in such property.[94] A creditor of the party selected as the medium through whom a conveyance of land is made by a husband to his wife acquires no right, title, or interest in the land by virtue of a judgment existing against such medium, and it is immaterial that such conveyance was made by the husband to defraud his creditors.[95] A judgment is not a lien on property not subject to levy and sale on execution.[96] A duly recorded judgment against the owner of land exempt as a business homestead attaches as a lien on the land when it ceases to be such homestead, if at such time it is still the property of the judgment debtor.[97] Where a judgment in rem is obtained against a nonresident in an action by attachment, the docketing of such judgment does not extend the lien to the general property of the defendant.[98] As regards the lien of a judgment, an award in eminent domain proceedings is personal property.[99] The indexing and transcribing a judgment for the purposes of a lien is treated elsewhere.[1]

Duration of lien.[2]—The duration of the judgment lien is largely statutory.[3] At common law and under many, but not all,[4] statutory provisions, the lien of the judgment takes effect as of the first day of the term at which it is rendered,[5] and the term being adjourned, the first day of the term as here used means the first day upon which the court was present and ready to transact business.[6] There is a conflict as to whether the transcribing of a judgment extends its life.[7] A judg-

Probate court is one of general jurisdiction in all matters pertaining to the estate of deceased persons, and its orders and decrees made in the administration of an estate must upon collateral attack be presumed valid, unless the orders themselves or the record of the proceedings in which they were made affirmatively show want of authority in the court to make them. 3. Life of judgment is ten years under Rev. Codes 1899, § 5200, and § 6723, relating to the time within which execution may issue, does not control. Holton v. Schmarback [N. D.] 106 N. W. 36. Under Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 5132, a judgment ceases to be a lien on land of the judgment debtor at the expiration of five years from the date of its rendition, and this notwithstanding the judgment debtor's absence from the state. Heman v. Rinehart [Wash.] 87 P. 953. D. C. Code, § 1214 [31 Stat. at L. 1381, c. 854], giving a lien on judgments from the time they "shall be rendered," does not operate in favor of judgments rendered prior to its enactment. Ohio Nat. Bank v. Berlin, 26 App. D. C. 218.

4. Nebraska: The provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 509, relative to a judgment lien dating from the filing of a special mandate from the supreme court to the lower court, has exclusive reference to the special mandate required by § 594 in cases where the supreme court renders such judgment as the lower court should have rendered. Harvey v. Godding [Neb.] 109 N. W. 220.

ment lien does not generally abate upon the death of the judgment debtor,[8] though in some states it does upon his making a declaration of insolvency.[9] When the judgment becomes dormant the lien ceases to exist.[10] As a general rule a lien cannot be prolonged by an ancillary action.[11] The mere pendency of a restraining order does not always suspend the statute of limitations.[12]

Rank and priority of lien.[13]—The lien of the judgment may be given priority by the filing of a lis pendens,[14] or by the levy of execution.[15] A judgment creditor has a lien on his debtor's real estate, but he has no interest in it so as to make him a privy in estate with his debtor,[16] nor does he occupy the position of a purchaser under the recording acts.[17] The lien of a judgment for a tort committed by a corporation is superior to a mortgage lien previously given.[18] Cases determining the rank of the judgment lien with reference to other liens and rights are shown in the notes.[19]

8. Under Code 1896, §§ 1920-1922, as amended by Gen. Acts 1898-99, p. 34, giving a lien to the judgment creditor against the property of the judgment debtor for 10 years, on the recording of the judgment as provided by the act, the lien does not abate on the death of the judgment debtor within such time. Evans v. Silvey & Co., 144 Ala. 398, 42 So. 62. Where judgment is rendered against two and one dies, execution thereafter issued against both is valid against the survivor and keeps alive the judgment lien upon the survivor's lands. Dieboldt Brew. Co. v. Grabski, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 221.

9. Though Code 1896, §§ 1920-1922, as amended by Gen. Acts 1898-99, p. 34, gives a lien to the judgment debtor for 10 years on the recording of the judgment as provided by the act, the lien abates on the declaration of insolvency of the judgment debtor within that time. Evans v. Silvey & Co., 144 Ala. 398, 42 So. 62.

10. Harvey v. Godding [Neb.] 109 N. W. 220. A sale of real estate under an execution issued on a dormant judgment is void as to one who acquired title to the property from the judgment debtor during the life of the judgment lien. Id. See post, § 9, Suspension, Dormancy and Revival.

11. Under Laws 1897, p. 52, c. 39, providing that a judgment on a contract liability ceases to be a lien after the expiration of six years, the lien of such judgment cannot be continued for a longer period than six years by an ancillary action brought to remove fraudulent conveyances made to cover up property subject to execution. Meikle v. Cloquet [Wash.] 87 P. 841.

12. Where an order was granted restraining the collection of a judgment but no service was had on the defendant nor the proceeding prosecuted to determination, it was the duty of the judgment creditor after the expiration of a reasonable time to have applied for a dissolution of the order, and hence the mere pendency thereof did not suspend limitations in so far as it affected the lien of the judgment. Heman v. Rinehart [Wash.] 87 P. 953.

16. Though owner of land is estopped from asserting his title as against the grantee in a deed by a person having no title, a judgment creditor of the true owner has a lien superior to one claiming under the grantee in such deed. Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. Lewman, 124 Ga. 190, 52 S. E. 599.

17. A judgment creditor has no lien on land conveyed by unrecorded deed by the judgment debtor prior to the judgment. Foster v. Hobson [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1101.

18. A judgment recovered in an action against a water company for loss by fire because of inadequate water supply is in tort, though the contractual relations of defendant to the city be also set out. Guardian Trust & D. Co. v. Fisher, 200 U .S. 57, 50 Law. Ed. 367. Where a corporation places a mortgage on property and sells to another corporation subject thereto, a judgment lien for a tort of the latter in North Carolina is superior to the mortgage. The priority given by N. C. Code 1883, § 1255, is not limited to the property taken over by the latter. Id.

19. Equitable right to a conveyance of land held superior to the general lien of subsequent judgment creditors of the holder of the legal title. New York Water Co. v. Crow, 110 App. Div. 32, 96 N. Y. S. 899. In proceedings to determine priority of judgment over deed of trust, held evidence was insufficient to establish that the judgment debtor was induced to extend credit upon the defendant's fraudulent representations as to the debtor's solvency. Jones v. Levering, 116 Mo. App. 377, 91 S. W. 980. Where one defendant buys land while incumbered by three mortgages and two judgments and agrees to pay the mortgages and pays one of them, he is not entitled to enjoin a sheriff's sale of the land under execution issued

Mode of asserting lien.[20]—In a suit to foreclose a judgment lien on land, the judgment debtor, having conveyed the land subsequent to the recording of a proper abstract of the judgment, is not a necessary party.[21] The judgment in such a suit should award such relief as is consistent with the rights of all the parties.[22]

"Judicial mortgages." [24]

§ 9. Suspension, dormancy, and revival.[25]—A dormant judgment is without any generative vitality, to have efficiency it must be revived,[26] and hence such a judgment will not authorize the issuance of execution[27] nor will it support an action.[28] In the absence of a supersedeas, an appeal will not prolong the life of the judgment,[29] nor in some states will the issuance of an execution in the absence of required recordation.[30] The life of a judgment is generally regulated by statute[31] and cannot be affected by an agreement to which the judgment debtor is not a party.[32] Within the meaning of constitutional provisions the taking away of the right to revive a judgment has only to do with the remedy,[33] and a statute altering such right but leaving the judgment creditor a reasonable time within which to enforce the judgment is constitutional.[34] Upon the death of one of the members of a partnership in whose favor a judgment has been recovered, the judgment becomes dormant.[35]

In most states statutes prescribe the method of procedure for reviving a judgment.[36] A suit to revive a judgment is not a new suit but a continuation of the original one,[37] and hence a judgment can only be revived in the name of the orig-on such judgments subject to the two unpaid mortgages. Kuhn v. National Bank of Holton [Kan.] 87 P. 551.

22. A judgment debtor, after the recording of a proper abstract of the judgment, conveyed his land to a third person. The judgment creditor instituted a suit against the debtor and the third person to foreclose the judgment lien. Held that a judgment reciting the existence of the judgment against the debtor and foreclosing the lien was proper. McDowell v. Jones Lumber Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 465, 93 S. W. 476. A judgment debtor, after the recording of a proper abstract of the judgment, conveyed his land to a third person. The judgment creditor instituted a suit against the debtor and the third person to foreclose the judgment lien. Held that a judgment foreclosing the lien, except as to a specified number of acres to be designated by the third person as to his homestead, sufficiently protected the rights of the third person. 36. A judgment rendered on a contract entered into prior to the passage of Act 1897 (Laws 1897, p. 52, c. 39), providing for the revival of judgments, was capable of being revived either by a direct action at law inal judgment debtor,[38] though under the statutes of some states proceedings to revive a judgment should not be had in the name of an administrator except where the administrator has succeeded to the rights of the judgment creditor;[39] consequently in such states, where the judgment creditor assigns the judgment and dies, his assignee should proceed in his own name,[40] and it has been held sufficient if the plaintiff in an action of revival has any color of right or interest for himself or others.[41] A judgment against a decedent may be revived against the personal representative by an amicable scire facias as well as by writ,[42] though where a judgment debtor dies after the rendition of a judgment not awarding any personal relief, his administrator is not a necessary party to revivor proceedings.[43] The rules of procedure in original actions, so far as applicable, govern proceedings to revive,[44] consequently, statutory provisions providing that in actions against persons jointly indebted upon contract the plaintiff may proceed against the parties served unless the court otherwise directs are applicable to revivor proceedings.[45] Statutes generally provide the method of service upon minors.[46] Where a scire facias to revive a judgment erroneously states the amount of the judgment, the writ may be amended.[47] Where enforcement of the judgment is barred by lapse of time, revival proceedings can be taken only on notice and hearing.[48] In Nebraska an action for revivor after the expiration of one year may be maintained, either by a supplemental petition or by an original bill.[49] A failure of a guardian ad litem to file an answer in proceedings to revive a judgment against infant heirs of the judgment debtor is a mere irregularity.[50] On a scire facias to revive a judgment, matters only appropriate in a proceeding to open the original judgment cannot be set up as a defense.[51] The revival in a cause where judgment was rendered for plaintiff before the death of defendant will be considered that of the judgment and not of the action, though the notice and order are in terms for revival of the action.[52] A judgment on scire facias is not a new judgment but is a revival of the original judgment.[53] The premature revival of a judgment against the heirs of the judgment debtor is a mere irregularity.[54] Where notice to show cause why a judgment should not be revived is served, failure to defend gives the revived judgment no more efficacy than the original judgment possessed.[55] A judgment can be revived only by an order of court made in conformity with statutory requirements,[56] and while an order of revivor need not award execution,[57] still the entry should be that on the judgment or by a special proceeding authorized by 2 Hill's Ann. St. & Codes, §§ 262, 263. Melkle v. Cloquet [Wash.] 87 P. 841.

56. Giving a mortgage to pay the indebtedness represented by the judgment will not plaintiff have execution.[58] Where a motion upon affidavit and notice to revive a dormant judgment is before the judge on appeal from an improper refusal of the clerk to revive the judgment, it is optional with the judge to reverse and remand the case with directions, or to himself grant the motion and order execution to issue.[59]

§ 10. Assignment of judgment.[60]—Judgments are generally deemed assignable;[61] but a sale of a judgment does not amount to an equitable assignment of the cause of action upon which it is based, and hence on the reversal of the judgment the parties thereto are relegated to their respective rights and liabilities as they existed prior to the judgment.[62] The assignment of a judgment does not operate as an assignment of the personal privilege conferred by statute on the judgment creditor to compel a redemption of personal property of the debtor sold under execution,[63] and in such case the assignor is not entitled to sue to compel a redemption of such property.[64] In some states it is held that an assignment of a judgment does not vest the legal title in the assignee, but only an equitable interest.[65] The assignee of a satisfied judgment acquires no rights thereunder.[66] The doctrine of caveat emptor applies to the purchaser of a judgment,[67] and though there may be an express warranty,[68] still there is no implied warranty from the mere assignment of a judgment that it is valid and impregnable.[69] Except where fraudulent as to third parties, such as creditors, the consideration for the assignment is immaterial.[70] The transfer of a judgment does not bind the judgment debtor or third persons unless it has been notified to the debtor or it is clearly shown that he has knowledge of it.[71] Where there are two assignments of the same judgment, the first notified to the debtor will have priority.[72] Though the assignment of a judgment expressly appoints the assignee irrevocable attorney with power of substitution, such stipulation does not prevent the assignor from rescinding such authority unless coupled with an interest independent of compensation for the collection of the judgment.[73]

§ 11. Payment, discharge, and satisfaction.[74]—Unless the judgment is kept alive for the benefit of one of several judgment debtors paying the same, the judgment becomes extinguished by payment.[75] Where a judgment is paid by one of

75. Where none of the proceedings specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 709 were taken to keep a judgment alive for the benefit of one

the defendants and is assigned for his benefit, the right of the assignee is equitable in its nature and extends no farther than the right to use the judgment as security for the payment of the amounts properly due from the other judgment debtors.[76] It therefore would seem to be a right that can be exercised only after an affirmative showing to the court and a determination of the indebtedness of the other defendants,[77] and while no new suit is required, it is essential that application should in all cases be made to the court.[78] Where a judgment is rendered against two persons as joint obligors, a payment of the judgment by one of them extinguishes it,[79] and the remedy of the payor as against his joint obligor is based on an implied contract.[80] So also a judgment against several joint tort feasors being released as to one is released as to all, though the release contains a stipulation to the contrary,[81] but this rule does not apply to a mere agreement not to sue.[82] A whole or partial satisfaction of the judgment inures to the benefit of the judgment debtor as against a subsequent assignee of the judgment.[83] In most of the states where one suing as next friend of an infant is required to give a bond, he has authority to receive payment of the judgment which may be recovered and to satisfy the same.[84] A judgment is presumed to be paid after the lapse of twenty years from the time it was rendered, and such time having elapsed, the burden is on plaintiff to prove nonpayment,[85] but the rule is otherwise where twenty years has not elapsed,[86] though in such case all relevant facts and circumstances may be shown.[87] A levy of an execution upon real estate of the debtor is not prima facie satisfaction of the judgment.[88] The judgment creditor having received full satisfaction of the judgment, the judgment debtor is entitled, on motion, to have the same satisfied.[89] It is the duty of the court to order a judgment satisfied to the extent of money collected through attachment proceedings in the action.[90] In most states the entry of satisfaction by the clerk is deemed a ministerial act.[91] The satisfaction of a judgment entered through a mistake of fact may ordinarily be set aside on a motion based on affidavits made in the action;[92] but a docket entry of a justice of the peace showing satisfaction of the judgment in full cannot be contradicted by parol in an action by the plaintiff against the constable for failure to pay over the money.[93] If damages are claimed, or equitable relief is asked which cannot be had on motion, or disputed questions of fact on material issues arise, the court may compel the parties to resort to an action or hear the motion upon oral evidence as in the trial of cases.[94] A motion to set aside satisfaction is based upon the inherent right of courts to correct its records to conform to the facts.[95]

Restitution after reversal.—The petition in an action to recover back money paid under a judgment subsequently reversed must show that plaintiff is justly entitled to the funds in controversy.[96]

§ 12. Set-off.[97]—A judgment which has been unconditionally opened cannot be set off against an unopened judgment.[98] In order to defeat the right of the parties to offset judgments held against each other, an attorney's lien must be filed before such right to offset accrues.[99]

§ 13. Interest.[1]—Under the statutes of Arkansas the interest due at the time of the rendition of the judgment becomes a part of the judgment, and the amount of the judgment bears interest at the rate specified in the contract sued on.[2]

§ 14. Enforcement of judgment.[3]—Where a court has the authority to render a final judgment and cause the same to be executed, it has authority to make any necessary legal orders to carry such judgment into effect.[4] A court has no discretion to refuse to obey its own final judgments and decrees so long as they remain unopened, unreversed, and unimpeached.[5] When there is no perversion of justice or frustration of the decree, the court is without power to restrict a party's right to publish the fact that his claims have been sustained.[6] Executions, other final process, and creditors' suits are treated elsewhere.[7]

§ 15. Audita querela.[8]

§ 16. Actions on judgment; merger.[9]—The action must be brought within the period of limitations[10] existing at the time of the rendition of the judgment,[11]

unless a subsequent law is retroactive in character.[12] Within the meaning of such statutes a judgment for alimony is a judgment for a sum of money only.[13] Generally, so long as any portion of the action remains undisposed of, limitations do not start to run.[14] The right of action on a deficiency judgment entered after foreclosure sale accrues at the date the amount of the deficiency is ascertained and not at the time the foreclosure decree is made.[15] Within the meaning of statutes of limitation, an execution is issued when made out and signed by the clerk ready for the sheriff.[16] An appeal unless it suspends the judgment is no bar to an action thereon.[17] The judgment must be a subsisting obligation.[18] A judgment against an administrator in one state furnishes no cause of action against an administrator in another state so as to affect assets of the estate of the latter,[19] nor will such judgment support an action against one in his individual capacity whether as heir or devisee of the estate.[20] The assignee of a judgment becomes the real party in interest within the meaning of statutes requiring the real party in interest to sue in his own name.[21] An assignee of a part interest in the subject-matter of the action may sue on the judgment to recover the taxed costs in the action.[22] A mere change in the name of a court does not affect its prior judgments so as to prevent an action thereon.[23] Judgments of courts of general jurisdiction may be pleaded in general terms without alleging jurisdictional facts.[24] In an action on a judgment of a court of record in another state alleged to be in full force and effect, it is not necessary that the complaint should allege that no appeal from the judgment has ever been taken, nor that the time for appeal has expired.[25] The date of the judgment is a matter of description and the variance is fatal to the right of the plaintiff to recover.[26] In an action on a judgment, pleas of general denial, payment, and that the judgment was compromised and defendant released, are consistent.[27] Where judgment is obtained against one by an erroneous name but in a suit upon such judgment the correct name of the judgment debtor is asserted and

§ 1. Occasion for and nature of judicial sales.[33]—This topic excludes matters peculiar to special kinds of sales under order or process of court[34] and is confined to such matters of law as are common to judicial sales generally. A judicial sale is generally defined as one by authority of some competent tribunal by an officer authorized by law for the purpose;[35] and it has been held that a sale of land under a trust deed without resort to court when the statute permits such deeds to be foreclosed according to their terms, is a judicial sale.[36] In making a judicial sale the law regards the court as the vendor.[37]

§ 2. The petition, order, writ, or decree.[38]—A statute requiring a petition for the subjection of land to a demand of the plaintiff to describe it so that it may be identified does not require a description by metes and bounds,[39] but it is sufficient if the description is such that the parties desiring to purchase or purchasing the land can locate and identify it with reasonable certainty.[40]

A sale under a decree condemning specific property to be sold to obtain money to satisfy a claim or judgment is essentially a judicial sale (McGaugh v. Deposit Bank [Ala.] 40 So. 984), and the fact that the decree directs the procedure incident to sales under execution does not change its nature (Id.). A sale made under the process of a court by an officer appointed and commissioned to sell, which becomes absolute only on confirmation by the court, is in every essential respect a judicial sale. § 3. Levy, seizure, appraisal, and the like.[41]—An appraisement is generally required to be made on an actual view of the premises,[42] and the valuation of the property by appraisers is conclusive in the absence of fraud.[43] Lands constituting one body and used as a single tract ordinarily may, for judicial sale, be appraised together.[44]

§ 4. Notice and advertisements of sale.[45]—A statutory notice of sale on execution does not apply.[46] When a decree specifies the manner of notices, they must be published accordingly to make a valid sale.[47] In Nebraska it is held that publication in a newspaper for thirty days before sale requires insertion in all the regular issues of the paper preceding the sale of the notice.[48] The notice of sale is required to state the amount of money to be made by the sale under the Kentucky statute.[49]

§ 5. Sale and conduct of it and return.[50]—Where there is no statute the court may direct how the sale is to be conducted and by whom.[51] Unless required by statute or by terms of the decree, a master need not give bond or oath.[52]

§ 6. Confirmation and setting aside sales.[53]—Confirmation is a condition precedent to the completion of a sale,[54] and it is ordinarily the duty of the court, where a judicial sale is fairly conducted and is made in conformity with the decree, to ratify it,[55] but where the price bid is inadequate, the court is acting within its discretion in refusing to confirm the sale.[56] When a sale has been confirmed the reversal of the order of sale does not affect the sale,[57] and if the purchaser has conveyed to another the property cannot be recovered,[58] especially where those in possession are not made parties to the proceeding to effect that result.[59] An order expressly recognizing the validity of the sale may be sufficient as a confirmation,[60] and it has been held that an order of court directing that a deed be made is equivalent to a confirmation of a sale[61] and obviates a record recital of confirmation.[62] In opposing confirmation of a sale an attack upon the decree on which the sale was made, going to the merits of the case, cannot be made.[63]

Setting aside a sale.[64]—When the sale has been fraudulently conducted[65] or the order of sale procured by fraud, the court in the exercise of its equity jurisdiction may deny confirmation and set aside the sale;[66] but in the absence of fraud, irregularity, or misconduct affecting the validity of a judicial sale, the sale will not be set aside and confirmation refused to allow the bid of a purchaser to be advanced by another person,[67] nor on account of inadequacy of price unless the inadequacy be so gross as to shock the conscience or raise a presumption of fraud or unfairness.[68] It is held in Nebraska that the district courts of that state are vested with discretion to set aside a judicial sale for fraud or unfairness prejudicial to the rights of a party.[69] Nothing of substantial value having been received by one interested in property which has been the subject of a judicial sale, an offer to return the consideration received is not a prerequisite to setting aside the sale.[70] The judge who hears and decides a motion to set aside a sale may view the premises,[71] and such motion is not waived by later filing a motion to set aside interlocutory orders,[72] but both motions may be considered at the same time.[73] When the plaintiffs succeed in an action to set aside a judgment and sale thereunder for fraud, the decree should be that the judgment and sale be set aside and the deed cancelled.[74] The existence of tax liens on property sold at judicial sale is not ground for setting aside the sale.[75]

Costs.[76]

Proceedings on resale.[77]—One through whose default a resale is made necessary cannot complain of a requirement of a cash deposit to secure the transaction before being declared the successful bidder at the second sale.[78]

§ 7. Completion of sale; deeds, payments, and credits.[79]—The title to land sold at a judicial sale vests when the deed conveying the same is made,[80] and it will be presumed that the deed executed in consummation of a judicial sale followed the description of the land contained in the pleadings and judgment;[81] but when through oversight or neglect the description in the deed does not conform to that contained in the judgment and report of sale, the court may at any time permit its commissioner to correct the deed or make a new deed conforming to the judgment and report.[82] Ordinarily, statutes requiring the officer making a sale of real estate to execute a deed to the purchaser on compliance with the terms of sale are not applicable to judicial sales.[83] In some states a sale may be delayed when the rents and profits of the land subject to sale appear to be sufficient to discharge the liens in a reasonable time, but this does not permit a delay in violation of agreement.[84]

In Louisiana, rule to show cause is the proper procedure where a judicial sale has been made and its consummation is negligently delayed.[85] A purchaser who pays taxes against property sold at a judicial sale is entitled to credit for the sum paid.[86]

§ 8. Title and rights under sales and deed. A. Defects and collateral attack.[87]—Short statutes of limitation in Kansas operate to cure any defects in the title acquired at a judicial sale,[88] and retrospective validation of judicial sales is within the power of the legislature as to matters of procedure.[89] A sale under a judgment which is merely erroneous is not vulnerable to a collateral attack.[90] When the purchaser seeks relief from a judicial sale for defect of title, the burden is on him to show the defect.[91] After a sale of property under a decree of the chancery court and a confirmation thereof, it will not be set aside in a collateral proceeding unless the party seeking relief acquits himself of want of diligence in resisting confirmation.[92] Fraud will not be presumed in a judicial sale by a court of general jurisdiction in a case where it had jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the parties.[93] One interested in land sold at judicial sale is not estopped to assert the invalidity of the sale because of defects of which he had no knowledge when no reliance has been placed on his apparent acquiescence.[94] A sale under a judgment which is merely erroneous is valid when made to a stranger before it is set aside or reversed,[95] but a sale under a void judgment is void as a judicial sale.[96] In the absence of a governing statute, a sale conducted as prescribed in the decree is valid.[97] Mere irregularities in the appraisement are not, however, usually deemed fatal to the validity of a sale,[98] and, where no fraud is charged, objections to an appraisement must be made prior to a sale.[99] It will be presumed that the commissioner made the sale at the time and place directed by the judgment,[1] and neither the fact that the commissioner made his report of sale three days earlier than directed by the judgment,[2] nor that the report was not at the time recorded, affects the validity of the sale.[3] A conveyance by a guardian of ward's property indirectly to the guardian is not a nullity,[4] nor is a sale by a guardian officially to the guardian individually absolutely void.[5] Sale will not be avoided for misapplication of mesne rents and profits.[6]

(§ 8) B. Outstanding titles and interests.—The rule of caveat emptor[7] applies to judicial sales.[8] The deduction of an apparent prior lien in the appraisement of real estate for the purpose of a judicial sale is not conclusive as to the validity of such lien or the priority thereof,[9] but one who purchases at the sale without questioning the validity or priority of an apparent lien is estopped from thereafter so doing.[10] Likewise where the lien merged in the decree.[11] Where title to land is claimed through sale under a judgment, every presumption in favor of the judgment will be indulged when the land has been in the adverse and peaceful possession of bona fide owners for more than 20 years.[12] The Kentucky statute against champerty does not apply to judicial sales.[13] A judicial sale of land in litigation does not abate the suit.[14] The commissioner's deed can convey no more than the estate which the court has subject to sale,[15] and a sale under a decree in a personal action passes only such title as the parties thereto had at the time of the decree or sale.[16] A judicial sale free and clear of restrictions and incumbrances other than those specifically assumed is not binding on the purchaser when there are covenants in prior deeds of the property, unknown at the time of the sale, restricting the uses to which it may be put.[17] Where the purpose sought by a judicial proceeding is to expose real estate to public sale, the better practice is to make all persons who have any interest, contingent or otherwise, in the property parties to the action.[18]

(§ 8) C. Rights of parties under sale and in proceeds.[19]—Where a judicial sale passes title[20] a redemption, though abortive, will not reinstate the rights of junior judgment creditors bound by the decree and sale.[21] Where no crops have been planted at the time of rendition of decree of sale and the decree is silent as to the disposition of crops, the land may be sold and the crops conveyed to the purchaser.[22] Where the purchase is of a part of the title only and confirmation is delayed, the purchaser cannot be compelled to pay rent to the holders of the remainder of the title during the intervening period.[23] Where there is a deficiency in quantity of land sold, the purchaser's remedy, if any, is on an implied contract for money paid by mistake and not by way of subrogation to the lien which merged in the sale and

6. Fact that purchaser at foreclosure sale collected rent which accrued before the sale, and hence was payable to the estate of the deceased mortgagor, held no ground for setting aside the sale at the instance of a subsequently appointed administratrix, her remedy being an action against the tenant for rent unpaid, or, if the tenant had paid and the misapplication lay with the executor, against him. Bell v. Thompson, 147 Cal. 689, 82 P. 327. Special administratrix of mortgagor's estate held not entitled to have foreclosure sale set aside on ground that judgment of foreclosure against executor made counsel fees a lien on mortgaged property, where such fees would otherwise have been payable out of the general assets of the estate, and there was no contention that redemption was thereby interfered with. 22. Hence a tenant in possession of lands sold in partition proceedings was not entitled to complain that reservation of only was discharged by the proceeds.[24] The grantee of a purchaser at a judicial sale is not necessarily incompetent to prosecute an application for a writ of assistance to put him into possession,[25] and whether he shall be permitted to do so or not is a matter dependent on circumstances and resting largely in the discretion of the court;[26] but a purchaser is entitled to a writ of possession as against the debtor for whom he bought in where the debtor practiced fraud in procuring him to buy in.[27] The rule that a pledgee who is a trustee cannot become a purchaser of the pledge at his own sale thereof has no application to judicial sales.[28]

Rights in proceeds and on bid.[29]—The purchaser at a judicial sale becomes a party to the proceedings in which the sale is made,[30] is generally bound by his bid,[31] and may be compelled to perform what he has undertaken,[32] by motion in the same court in which the undertaking occurred,[33] but has no title till confirmation.[34] The right under the Louisiana code to suspend payment of the price does not necessarily imply a forfeiture of any part of the debt or its accessories,[35] and an adjudicatee at public auction who has been condemned to comply with the terms of the adjudication must pay interest on the credit portion of the price represented by notes.[36] The purchaser must either deposit the amount of his bid or pay interest thereon.[37] Insufficient service on defendants will ordinarily entitle a purchaser to be relieved from his bid.[38] The court will exercise its discretion in favor of a purchaser at a judicial sale to a greater degree than if the transaction had been only between the parties.[39] One holding the equity of redemption cannot be heard to complain that the purchaser at a judicial sale, who bids as trustee for the plaintiff, is not such trustee.[40] A purchaser refusing to make good his bid is liable on a resale being made for the difference between his bid and the amount for which the property is sold, in case of deficiency.[41] In some states special bond must be given before the proceeds will be paid over to a fiduciary.[42] where.[43] Equity jurisdiction as dependent upon the inadequacy of legal remedies or the existence of some principle of equity falls more properly under another topic,[44] and the articles on process[45] and appearance[46] should also be consulted in connection herewith.

§ 1. Definitions and distinctions.[47]—Jurisdiction is the power of a court to hear and determine a cause or question,[48] and is therefore not dependent upon the regularity of the exercise of that power or upon the correctness of the decision made.[49] Jurisdiction of the subject-matter is power to deal with the general subject involved in a controversy without reference to jurisdiction of a particular case.[50]

There is a clear distinction between want of jurisdiction and an erroneous exercise of it in a case where no cause of action is stated or proven,[51] and where a court is one of general jurisdiction, the fact that the venue is improperly laid is not always jurisdictional.[52] As to courts proceeding according to the course of the common law, an error, to be jurisdictional, must relate to either the person or the subject-matter;[53] as to other tribunals it may extend to clear errors of law.[54]

§ 2. Elements and extent in general.[55]—Essential to jurisdiction is a subject-

49. Camplin v. Jackson, 34 Colo. 447, 83 P. 1017. Held error for district court in direct proceeding to set aside as void a decree of the probate court having jurisdiction of parties and subject-matter where there was no fraud, though there may have been reversible error. Id. Necessarily includes power to decide wrong as well as right. Ex parte Moran [C. C. A.] 144 F. 594. The fact that a court misconstrues a pleading and renders judgment accordingly does not show want of jurisdiction. Error in considering allegations in defendant's answer a counterclaim could not be reviewed by certiorari. Davis v. Preston, 129 Iowa, 670, 105 N. W. 151. Where the existence of some particular fact must be established at the trial to enable the court to pronounce judgment one way or the other, an erroneous conclusion of the court in respect thereof is merely an error and not a jurisdictional defect. 51. Prohibition will not lie in the latter case. State v. Stobie, 194 Mo. 14, 92 S. W. 191. Where plaintiff in an action of which the court had no jurisdiction by amendment changed his cause to one of which the court had jurisdiction but failed to introduce any evidence in support thereof, a contention that defendant waived his objection to the jurisdiction of the court by failure to move for dismissal at the end of the case was untenable. Herald Square Cloak & Suit Co. v. Rocca, 48 Misc. 650, 96 N. Y. S. 189.

52. Court of general jurisdiction could not dismiss action to try title on ground that it had no jurisdiction, though venue was improperly laid because land was located in another county and defendant resided there. Wolf v. Willingham [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 718, 94 S. W. 362. Court could foreclose mortgage on land in another county where objection was not seasonably made. Snyder v. matter upon which adjudication is regularly invoked[56] in a competent form,[57] either against adversary parties or in respect to the subject-matter itself, which must be at least constructively in court.[58] Jurisdiction of the parties before the court is not affected by the absence of other proper or necessary parties.[59]

Jurisdiction to afford a particular kind of relief carries with it by implication power to do all things necessary to effectuate the purpose for which the jurisdiction was conferred;[60] but jurisdiction is not conferred by a statute which merely provides for the means and manner of exercising a jurisdiction conferred by other laws.[61] A constitutional grant of equity jurisdiction confers power to grant relief in all cases in which chancery could have granted relief under the established rules at the time the constitution was adopted.[62] Courts of equity having once acquired jurisdiction of a cause for a particular purpose will retain it for complete relief regardless of the existence of questions properly cognizable at law.[63]

56. See Process, 6 C. L. 1078; Appearance, 7 C. L. 251. A decree foreclosing a tax lien and confiscating property without actual or legal notice to the owner, rendered by a court previous to the formal entering of any action by any of the methods prescribed by law, is absolutely void for want of jurisdiction. Klenk v. Byrne, 143 F. 1008. Where the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter, irregularities in the manner of bringing suit which may be remedied by amendment are not jurisdictional. Contention that certain necessary parties were not made plaintiff. Franklin Union No. 4 v. People, 121 Ill. App. 647.

57. Facts necessary to jurisdiction of the subject-matter must be pleaded as well as proven. Failure of plaintiff in divorce suit to allege residence within state. Stansbury v. Stansbury, 118 Mo. App. 427, 94 S. W. 566. Judgment could not be rendered against one not summoned and against whom no relief was asked in pleadings though there had been a verbal agreement that if judgment should go against defendant he should recover against such person. Watt v. Parlin & Orendorff Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 154, 98 S. W. 428.

58. In order that a court may act directly upon property, the property must be within its territorial jurisdiction. Bunker v. Hanson [Minn.] 109 N. W. 827. Absentees can be brought into court on a demand for a money judgment only by an actual seizure of property in the suit in which the demand is made. A seizure in another suit is not sufficient. Levy v. Collins, 115 La. 204, 38 So. 966. Immaterial that claim is secured by privilege on property within jurisdiction. Id. A court of equity has no jurisdiction over a foreign corporation where the res with reference to which relief is sought is in another jurisdiction, and no decree can be made effective. American Fruit & Steamship Co. v. Dox, 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 155. When an attachment has been issued against a nonresident and executed by service of summons of garnishment, the court is without jurisdiction to render a judgment on the attachment until it appears from the answer of the garnishee that property of or a debt due defendant within the jurisdiction has been seized under the garnishment. Albright-Prior Co. v. Pacific Selling Co. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 251. District court has no jurisdiction of garnishment proceeding in which only $7.75 is attached in suit for that amount and $2,000 unliquidated damages, defendant being a nonresident and not brought before the court so that personal judgment may be rendered against it. Meek v. Houston Ice & Brew. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 761, 96 S. W. 937.

60. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4327, requiring the circuit court to award separate maintenance to a wife who has been abandoned by her husband without cause, the court has jurisdiction to award suit money to a wife who is without means. Behrle v. Behrle, 120 Mo. App. 677, 97 S. W. 1005. The orphan's court in proceedings to distribute the proceeds of a sale of real estate of a decedent among his heirs has jurisdiction to decide all questions necessary for such distribution. In re King's Estate [Pa.] 64 A. 324. Where an attorney claims a lien on money collected for his client, the supreme court has power to determine the whole question summarily on application by the client for payment. In re Klein, 101 N. Y. S. 663.

61. Not by a statute which provides that when a court or officer is given jurisdiction by the constitution or other laws all means to carry it into effect are also given, and that any suitable procedure may be adopted if any other course is not pointed out. The court or officer is merely enabled to exercise a jurisdiction otherwise created. Martin v. White [C. C. A.] 146 F. 461. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 187, court could not compel giving of information as to whereabouts of absent defendants. Union Collection Co. v. Superior Ct. of San Francisco [Cal.] 87 P. 1035.

62. Court could compel discovery only in cases where such relief could have been granted at time constitution was adopted. Union Collection Co. v. Superior Ct. of San Francisco [Cal.] 87 P. 1035.

63. See Equity, 7 C. L. 1323. Where court took jurisdiction of proceeding for sale of real estate to pay debts, it could retain the same for all relief necessary within scope of petition. State v. Settle [N. C.] 54 S. E. 445.

limit nor enlarge the constitutional jurisdiction of constitutional courts unless expressly authorized by the constitution,[65] but they may enlarge or restrict the jurisdiction of a court as fixed by the common law or by statute,[66] and they may enlarge its equity powers.[67] Where the constitution does not define the specific limits of an appellate jurisdiction, this may be abridged or extended by statute as public policy may require.[68] State statutes cannot directly enlarge or contract the jurisdiction of Federal courts.[69]

64. See 6 C. L. 269.

65. Cannot create an inferior appellate court designed to exercise the prerogative powers of the supreme court, although certiorari may lie to this new tribunal from the supreme court to review its proceedings. Acts 1906, p. 18, directing a justice of the supreme court to rehear the charges against policemen who have been suspended or dismissed, is void, because it is an attempt to confer upon a statutory tribunal the prerogative right of the supreme court to review by certiorari the proceedings of the municipal board. City of New Brunswick v. McCann [N. J. Law] 64 A. 159. Court and Practice Act 1905, p. 4, § 12, giving the superior court power to issue prerogative writs but also providing for appeal to the supreme court, does not violate Const. Amend. art. 12, giving the supreme court power to issue such writs and providing that inferior courts shall have such jurisdiction as shall be prescribed by law. Higgins v. Pawtucket Tax Assessors, 27 R. I. 401, 63 A. 34. The "remedial cases" in which the legislature is authorized by the constitution to confer original jurisdiction upon the supreme court include only those in which the remedy is afforded summarily through extraordinary writs, such as mandamus, quo warranto, etc. In re Lauritsen [Minn.] 109 N. W. 404. Rev. St. 1905, § 203, in so far as it attempts to confer upon the supreme court original jurisdiction in election contests, is unconstitutional. Id. When jurisdiction in cases remediable through extraordinary writs having a recognized technical use is conferred upon a court by the constitution, the jurisdiction is limited to cases which were determinable through such writs at the time the constitution was adopted. In re Lauritsen [Minn.] 109 N. W. 404. Legislature could not empower supreme court to grant mandamus to determine election contests. Id. The jurisdiction conferred upon the superior court by Const. art. 6, § 5, in cases of misdemeanor, must be exercised by it exclusively or not at all, and hence San Francisco Freeholder's Charter, § 2, attempting to confer upon the city police court "concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court" of certain misdemeanors, is unconstitutional. Robert v. Police Ct. of San Francisco, 148 Cal. 131, 82 P. 838. The words "concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court" could not be regarded as surplusage and the act construed to confer exclusive jurisdiction upon the police court. Id. The legislature cannot enlarge the scope of the original jurisdiction of the supreme court either directly by authorizing the primary consideration of cases not specified in the constitution, or indirectly by including such cases within its review power on appeal. In re Burnette [Kan.] 85 P. 575. The statute relating to appeals in disbarment cases being ambiguous should be construed not to authorize a trial de novo but merely to create a special method of bringing up such causes to be considered according to the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court. Id. Act approved February 27, 1903 (Sess. Laws 1903, p. 94), amending subd. 9, § 3841, Rev. St. 1887, granting to probate courts jurisdiction to enforce mechanics' and laborers' liens and mortgages and other liens on real property, is unconstitutional. Dewey v. Schreiber Implement Co. [Idaho] 85 P. 921. The legislature may enlarge the appellate jurisdiction of the district courts so as to embrace cases not otherwise appealable to any court. State v. Melies, 117 La. 656, 42 So. 199. The constitutional power to regulate the jurisdiction of the commissioners' court authorizes the legislature to make such jurisdiction dependent upon the approval of claims by the county auditor. Anderson v. Ashe [Tex.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 637, 90 S. W. 872. Acts 1905, p. 782, attempting to vest in a chancery court power to hear and determine election contests for nominations, violates Const. art. 7, § 1, limiting the jurisdiction of chancery courts to matters of equitable cognizance. Hester v. Bourland [Ark.] 95 S. W. 992. In view of the history of constitutional provisions in regard to the jurisdiction of circuit and chancery courts, Acts 1894-95, p. 881, conferring chancery jurisdiction on the circuit court of Jefferson County, is not unconstitutional. Ensley Development Co. v. Powell [Ala.] 40 So. 137.

71. A court of general jurisdiction may send its original process to any part of the state unless restricted by statute. Eager v. Eager [Neb.] 105 N. W. 636. Comp. St. 1903, c. 25, § 6, confers jurisdiction upon the district court of an action for divorce in any county in the state where the parties or one of them resides (Id.), and summons may issue from the county in which plaintiff resides and the action is commenced to any county where defendant resides (Id.). The agreement of 1833, between the representatives of the states of New Jersey and New York fixing the boundaries between these states and providing that the state of New York shall retain jurisdiction over the islands in the bay of New York, did not deprive the New Jersey courts of jurisdiction to decree a foreclosure sale of islands in the harbor of New York but within the New Jersey boundary. Cook v. Weigley [N. J. Eq.] 65 A. 196. Plea of privilege of connecting carrier having no line in the state held properly sustained, no facts being shown to give the court jurisdiction of such carrier. American Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Chandler [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 243, 93 S. W. 243. An action against a railway company for injuries inflicted outside the state may be brought in a county in the state through which the company operates its road, there being no proof that the law of the state where the accident occurred is different from that of Texas. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Gibson [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 153, 93 S. W. 469. Kirby's Dig. § 6776, localizing to the place of injury actions for the wounding and killing of stock by railroads, does not apply to causes of action arising outside the state. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. Ingram [Ark.] 97 S. W. 55. A citizen of one state may maintain a suit in the United States circuit court in another state to enjoin the unlawful diversion of water in the state where suit is brought which prevents its flowing to his lands in the state of his residence. Morris v. Bean, 146 F. 423.

72. Act March 3, 1905, c. 1419, § 3, 33 St. 988 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1905, p. 78), creating the Eastern division of the northern district of Alabama, limits the territorial jurisdiction of the court therein to the counties conposing the division. Kibbler v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. 147 F. 879. A foreign corporation which by the state laws can be sued only in counties wherein it does business is not suable in a Federal court in the state unless it does business in a county within the territorial jurisdiction of such court. Id. Though the statute makes a decree for money a lien upon the lands and tenements of the party against whom it is entered, such a decree is only operative within the territorial jurisdiction of the court entering it. Hollahan v. Sowers, 111 Ill. App. 263. Court in county where contract was made held to have jurisdiction of connecting carrier in action for wrongful ejection from train, under Code Civ. Proc. § 72, relative to venue. Southern R. Co. v. Cassell, 28 Ky. L. R. 1230, 92 S. W. 281. Act Feb. 28, 1901 (Acts 1900-01, p. 1854), creating the city court of Bessemer and giving such court jurisdiction of personal actions the causes of which arise within certain designated limits, whether the parties reside there or not, does not limit the jurisdiction to causes arising within such limits, but the court has also jurisdiction when either of the parties reside therein. Harris v. Alabama Great So. R. Co. [Ala.] 40 So. 267. Jurisdiction is not in its nature territorial, and hence in the absence of constitutional restrictions the legislature may confer upon a court jurisdiction of actions arising outside of the judicial district. Municipal court could try offense committed in county beyond city limits. State v. Dreger, 97 Minn. 221, 106 N. W. 904.

75. While a court cannot by its decree directly affect the legal title to lands situated in another state, yet, if all the parties interested are brought personally before it, its decree establishing their equities in the land becomes conclusive upon them, and thus in effect determines the title. Wife could maintain suit to quiet title to land set aside in divorce suit in another state. Fall v. Fall [Neb.] 106 N. W. 412. Courts of equity have jurisdiction to adjudicate the rights of parties to a contract respecting realty located in another state. White Star Min. Co. v. Hultberg [Ill.] 77 N. E. 327.

person,[76] though alienage or diversity of citizenship may often draw the case into the Federal courts.[77] Where statutory cause and residence coexist and the matrimonial domicile is in the state, a court therein has full jurisdiction to render a decree of divorce on constructive service.[78]

§ 6. Limitations resting in amount or value in controversy.[79]—The division of jurisdiction between courts is often accomplished by statutes fixing a maximum[80] or minimum[81] jurisdictional amount or value "involved,"[82] "demanded,"[83] "claim-

On the question of the jurisdiction of equity over suits affecting real property in another state or county, see exhaustive note to the case of Proctor v. Proctor [Ill.] 69 L. R. A. 673.

76. A court has jurisdiction to render a valid judgment in garnishment against a nonresident, though he is only temporarily within the state, if he is served with process therein and the principal debtor could have sued him there and the debt is attachable under the local law. Harris v. Balk, 198 U. S. 215, 49 Law. Ed. 1023. In Illinois a defendant cannot be sued out of the county of his residence except in local actions and personal actions at law where there are more than one defendant, in which case suit may be commenced where either of them resides. Plea to jurisdiction held good. Goldberg v. Harney, 122 Ill. App. 106.

77. See post, § 11B.

78. Where husband abandoned wife in state of marriage, she could have divorce in that state. State v. Morse [Utah] 87 P. 705. Where the marriage status is out of a state, a court therein cannot render such a judgment of divorce against a nonresident on constructive service alone as will be entitled to recognition in other states under the Federal constitution. Husband who wrongfully went to another state did not carry marriage relation with him so as to give interstate jurisdiction. Haddock v. Haddock, 201 U. S. 562, 50 Law. Ed. 867. Under P. L. 1902, p. 503, § 4, par. 1, giving the chancery court jurisdiction of a divorce suit for adultery in certain cases, mere residence in the state, of either party at the times specified, is enough to give the court jurisdiction of the subject-matter. Duke v. Duke [N. J. Eq.] 62 A. 466. Evidence held to show existence of the marriage state within the territorial jurisdiction of the court authorizing procedure against nonresident defendant in a divorce case. Id. By express provision of Rev. Laws, c. 152, § 5, jurisdiction in divorce is given by residence of libelant in the state for five years without regard to where the cause of divorce occurred. Franklin v. Franklin, 190 Mass. 349, 77 N. E. 48. Where one spouse abandons the other and the latter moves to and acquires a domicile in another state, substituted service of summons, in an action for divorce commenced by him in that state, gives the court thereof full jurisdiction so that its judgment will have extraterritorial effect. North v. North, 47 Misc. 180, 93 N. Y. S. 512.

Note: This case must be distinguished from the other New York cases where the abandoning spouse goes to another state, acquires a domicile there, and sues. North v. North, 93 N. Y. S. 512.

79. See 6 C. L. 273.

80. Under Const. art. 7, § 40, giving justices of the peace jurisdiction of suits to recover personal property where its value does not exceed $300, the real value and not the alleged value is controlling. Kaufman v. Kelley [Ark.] 95 S. W. 448. The amount of each separate demand or cause of action and not the aggregate of various causes which may be joined in one action determines the jurisdiction of the justice of the peace. Had jurisdiction, though aggregate amount of notes sued on exceeded jurisdiction. Brooks v. Hornberger [Ark.] 94 S. W. 708. The court of appeals, and not the supreme court, has jurisdiction where the amount in dispute exclusive of interest and costs does not exceed $4,500, in the absence of grounds conferring jurisdiction on the supreme court. McKinney v. Wright Lumber Co., 192 Mo. 32, 90 S. W. 726. District court has no jurisdiction of a set-off the amount of which exceeds $300. P. L. 1902, p. 368. Bowler v. Osborne [N. J. Law] 64 A. 697; Kienzle v. Gardner [N. J. Law] 63 A. 10. Instruction that jury might bring in verdict not to exceed $300, improper. Bowler v. Osborne [N. J. Law] 64 A. 697. County court has exclusive jurisdiction of money demand not exceeding $500. Waller v. Gray [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 194, 94 S. W. 1098. An action to recover $400 earnest money paid on a contract for the purchase of land is within the jurisdiction of the county court, though the price of the land was $4,000 and plaintiffs alleged that if title had been good they would have paid the balance and were still willing to do so. Davis v. Fant [Tex. Civ. App.] 93 S. W. 193. A justice court has no jurisdiction to foreclose a laborer's lien on eighteen miles of railroad, a locomotive and other property. Lewis v. Warren, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 890, 97 S. W. 104.

81. Under the constitution providing that the circuit court shall have jurisdiction in civil cases only when the matter in controversy exceeds $50, a complaint for $50 which does not claim interest states no cause of action in the city court which has only the same jurisdiction as that exercised by the circuit court. Reese v. Bessemer Plumbing & Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 42 So. 56. That the suit was for enforcement of a lien did not aid the jurisdiction as Code, § 2733, provides for the enforcement thereof in the circuit court only when the amount exceeds $50. Id. Where in an action to recover more than $100 due under a contract certain orders were offered in evidence only to show the different items of the claim, the circuit court had jurisdiction, though none of the orders exceeded in amount $100. St. Louis & S. W. R. Co. v. James [Ark.] 95 S. W. 804. Circuit court had jurisdiction to set aside judgment for less than $100 where real estate levied on under execution thereon exceeded such amount. Wilcke v. Duross, 144

Mich. 242, 13 Det. Leg. N. 227, 107 N. W. 907. Final orders of circuit court of appeals are appealable to supreme court only where matter in dispute exceeds in value $1,000. Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 50 Law. Ed. 963.

82. Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1903, c. 37, § 25, making final judgments of the appellate court in actions ex contractu involving less than $1,000, a judgment affirming a decree foreclosing a trust deed except in the matter of solicitor's fees of $150 allowed by the trial court is final as to the solicitor's fees, though the trust deed exceeded $1,000, and the supreme court has no jurisdiction to review the part of the judgment relating to solicitor's fees in the absence of a certificate of importance. McCagg v. Touhy, 220 Ill. 216, 77 N. E. 207. Before the right to appeal to the supreme court in an equity case attaches it must appear that there is involved in the controversy independent of all contingencies the amount of $1,000 exclusive of costs. The amount involved does not necessarily amount to $1,000 under a decree directing payment of $18 per month from a certain date. Kouka v. Kouka [Ill.] 77 N. E. 556. A suit by a judgment creditor to annul a judicial sale on the ground that there was no appraisement but a fraudulent combination to prevent competitive bidding is a petitory rather than a revocatory action, and the value of the property is the test of appellate jurisdiction. Moresi v. Coleman, 115 La. 792, 40 So. 168. Where a boundary suit involves the ownership of an intervening strip of property, the value of that property determines the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court. Gasquet v. Conway, 116 La. 709, 41 So. 44. Sections 3, 4, 5, and 6, pp. 225, 226, Act 136 of 1898, providing for the changing of boundaries of municipalities, are not void as conferring jurisdiction on the courts regardless of the amount in dispute and in violation of the constitution. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Vidalia, 117 La. 561, 42 So. 139. Appeal properly brought to supreme court where damages exceeding $2,000 were alleged and a law had been declared unconstitutional. Id. Motion to transfer appeal to court of appeal denied where notes sued on were for an amount within jurisdiction of supreme court. Parker & Co. v. Succession of Griffin, 117 La. 977, 42 So. 473. In a suit to enjoin the erection of a clubhouse in front of certain property, a mere allegation that the value of the combined properties was $3,500 and that the constructions would destroy the value of all the property bounded by certain streets held too indefinite and uncertain to authorize the supreme court to take jurisdiction. Krantz v. Noonan, 117 La. 94, 41 So. 364.

83. Where an amended petition reduced a claim to $500 but the prayer was sufficient to authorize interest, and the interest was such as was permitted by way of damages, the amount demanded exceeded $500 and the suit was within the jurisdiction of the district court. Waller v. Gray [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 194, 94 S. W. 1098. Where the notes sued on had two credits indorsed thereon reducing the amount sued for to less than $200, the justice court had jurisdiction. Watt v. Parlin & Orendorff Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 154, 98 S. W. 428.

84. Alabama: Jurisdictional test is amount claimed and not amount recovered. Where claim did not exceed $50, city court had no jurisdiction. Reese v. Bessemer Plumbing & Mfg. Co. [Ala.] 42 So. 56.

California: Where the amount claimed was in excess of $2,000, an appeal was properly taken to the supreme court which alone had jurisdiction. Const. art. 6, § 4. McAuley v. Tahoe Ice Co. [Cal. App.] 86 P. 912.

Florida: Claim against telegraph company for withholding money and thus causing plaintiff to go without food held to state a cause within the jurisdiction of the circuit court, though amount withheld was below the jurisdictional amount. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Wells, 50 Fla. 474, 39 So. 838.

North Carolina: Where jewelry intended for sale was carried by a passenger together with wearing apparel, his action for loss of the jewelry was in tort for negligence, and the claim for such loss being in excess of $50 was not within the jurisdiction of the justice of the peace. Brick v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 194.

85. Federal courts: The "amount in controversy" is that for which plaintiff sues in good faith, not that defended against by defendant. Where in ejectment plaintiff claimed the value of the land to be over $2,000, jurisdiction was not ousted because the answer disclaimed as to all except a tract worth less. Way v. Clay, 140 F. 352. In a suit for an injunction the amount involved is the value of the right sought to be protected or the object to be gained by the bill and not the sum that might be recovered in an action at law for damages already sustained, and complainant is not required to wait until the damages reach the jurisdictional amount. Board of Trade of Chicago v. Cella Commission Co. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 28. Where a carrier sought to restrain the scalping of nontransferable tickets, the value of the business sought to be protected determined the amount in controversy. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bitterman [C. C. A.] 144 F. 34. Suit to enjoin use of market quotations held to involve a sufficient amount where complainant realized $30,000 per year from right sought to be protected and defendant denied such right. Board of Trade of Chicago v. Cella Commission Co. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 28. Suit by railway company to restrain enforcement of penalties in excess of $2,000, and which involves also the right of the company to conduct interstate commerce unhampered by state regulations which right was found to be of the necessary jurisdictional value, held within jurisdiction of Federal circuit court, though origin of litigation may have been a dispute of some $146 demurrage. McNeill v. Southern R. Co., 202 U. S. 543, 50 Law. Ed. 1142. Where the United States contended on appeal that a claim for tobacco rebates was not sufficient in amount, the finding of the circuit court necessarily disposed of the proposition. United States v. Hyams [C. C. A.] 146 F. 15. In a suit concerning water rights, the thing in like[87] according as the terms of the various statutes provide. Whether or not such controversy is the right to the use of the water, and this exceeding in value $2,000 exclusive of interest and costs, a Federal court has jurisdiction. Morris v. Bean, 146 F. 423. Amount in controversy held sufficient where bill alleged that railroad commission had imposed a fine of $2,000 on each of two connecting carriers for having made charges on shipments in alleged violation of its order and that commission threatened to enforce its order with respect to future shipments. Railroad Commission v. Texas & P. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 144 F. 68. Where declaration contained common counts and a special count each stating the amount involved to be $5,000 and verdict was directed for more than $2,000, the jurisdictional amount sufficiently appeared. State Bank of Chicago v. Cox [C C. A.] 143 F. 91. Where a suit is brought in a Federal court to have street improvement certificates declared invalid, the amount of the certificates and not the value of complainant's land is the subject-matter of the action. Could not successfully contend that value of land was criterion of jurisdiction on theory that assessments constituted a cloud upon the title. Shewalter v. Lexington, 143 F. 161. Complainant could not, under the facts, sustain the jurisdiction of the court by claiming that the improvement ordinance immediately vested title to the street in the adjoining owners and that the subsequent appropriation of part of the property for a street was illegal. Id. The United States circuit court is without jurisdiction of an action to enforce payment of a number of claims against a corporation, all but one of which were assigned to plaintiff merely for collection and for the express purpose of enabling him to sue in such court where no single claim is sufficient to give the court jurisdiction. Woodside v. Vasey, 142 F. 617. That plaintiff had obtained a judgment on such claims in a state court for an amount exceeding $2,000 was immaterial. Id. Where one rightfully brings separate actions against the same defendant in a state court, the amount sued for in each being less than $2,000, the actions are not removable to the Federal court, though the aggregate amount sued for exceeds that sum. Holmes & Co. v. U. S. Fire Ins. Co., 142 F. 863. The fact that the actions were consolidated on defendant's motion for "taking proof and hearing" does not render the consolidated cause removable. Id. In suit for wrongful death of one person, complaint of several counts, each demanding $1,990, held not to show a demand sufficient to justify removal to Federal court. Nashville, etc., R. v. Hill [Ala.] 40 So. 612. The fact that a suit in a Federal court involves a Federal question does not give jurisdiction unless the jurisdictional amount is involved. Shewalter v. Lexington, 143 F. 161. A trustee or receiver in bankruptcy cannot remove a cause into a Federal court on the ground that it arises under the laws of the United States, unless it clearly appears that the jurisdictional amount is involved. Swofford v. Cornucopia Mines, 140 F. 957.

Indiana: Under Burns' Ann. St. 1905, § 1337f, the appellate court has no jurisdiction of an appeal in a case where the amount in controversy inclusive of interest and costs does not exceed $50 except as provided in § 8. Yakey v. Leich [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 926.

Indian Territory: The justice court has exclusive original jurisdiction of an action for use and occupation seeking judgment for $100 and costs. Act Cong. March 1, 1895, c. 145, 28 St. 696; Mansf. Dig. § 4026 (Ind. T. Ann. St. 1899, § 2706). District court without jurisdiction. Tally v. Kirk [Ind. T.] 97 S. W. 1027.

Kentucky: The court of appeals has no jurisdiction of an appeal from a judgment for plaintiff for $200 in an action for $200 in which defendant controverted only $171 of the claim, since the amount in controversy is less than $200. Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Mitchell Tea & Coffee Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 1200, 91 S. W. 261.

Michigan: Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 435, providing that chancery courts shall dismiss suits concerning property, with certain exceptions, where the matter in dispute shall not exceed $100, held, in so far as the office of a bill was to prevent a town treasurer from paying over money on a contract for the purchase of a road machine, it involved only $6.50, the amount of the tax which complainant had paid. Bartlett v. Austin & Western Co. [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 940, 110 N. W. 123. In so far as the object of the bill was to prevent the levy of a tax on land, the suit is within Pub. Acts 1903, p. 260, No. 183, § 1, prohibiting the entry of any decree to restrain proceedings taken by an officer of any township, etc., which may result in a tax upon property unless complainant's tax shall amount to $100, though the bill does not in terms pray a decree restraining such proceedings, and hence the court was without jurisdiction. Id.

Texas: Action on bond conditioned on payment of $2,000 legacy held within exclusive original jurisdiction of district court and not of probate court, the amount in controversy exclusive of interest exceeding $1,000. Hummel v. Del Greco [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 246, 90 S. W. 339. In a suit to restrain the wrongful taking of a chattel under color of an execution levied on an alleged invalid judgment, the value of the chattel and not the amount of the judgment determines the amount in controversy. Jesse French Piano & Organ Co. v. Clay [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 155, 90 S. W. 682. The amount of damages claimed for procuring the judgment and levying on the property is involved in the suit and must be considered. Id. In action by obligor on a bond against co-obligors for contribution, jurisdiction is determined by amount claimed from all defendants, and not by the share shown to be due from each. Jarvis v. Matson [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 314, 94 S. W. 1079.

86. Prior to the act of 1905, where an amount demanded in the municipal court of New York did not draw interest as a matter of right and did not exceed $500, the court had jurisdiction, but if an amount plus interest demandable as of right exceeded $500, the court was without jurisdiction. The fact that an amount demanded plus interest, if allowed, would exceed $500 did not necessaran amount shall be determined from the pleadings will depend largely upon the precise words of the statute.[88] In order that two or more claims may be united so as to make up the jurisdictional amount, they must belong to a class which under the statute will permit them to be properly joined in one suit.[89] If two counts are improperly joined and one of them is dismissed so as to leave a demand below the jurisdictional amount, the court cannot take cognizance of it[90] even though defendant fails to raise the question of misjoinder,[91] but jurisdiction having once attached, it will not be divested by the establishment of only a sum below the jurisdictional amount.[92] Parties will not, however, be permitted to purposely allege a fictitious amount in order to confer jurisdiction.[93] A plaintiff is not bound to sue for the full amount of his claim as previously presented to defendant in order to preserve the latter's right to appeal,[94] and failure to do so is not a fraud upon the ily oust the court of jurisdiction. Spitzer v. Korminsky, 49 Misc. 466, 97 N. Y. S. 1030. By express provision of Laws 1905, p. 1172, c. 513, the jurisdiction of the municipal court of New York city is extended to include a case for $500, interest and costs. Rappaport v. Feder, 50 Misc. 653, 99 N. Y. S. 385. An action filed January 11, 1904, for $999 for actual damages for negligent acts done in October, 1903, with legal interest thereon, is for more than $1,000, and hence not within the jurisdiction of the county court. Ft. Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Everett [Tex. Civ. App.] 95 S. W. 1085. An action under Rev. St. 1895, art. 4528, to recover for the killing of stock by trains irrespective of negligence, is within the jurisdiction of the county court, though the alleged value is $1,000 and interest is demanded from the time of loss, no interest being recoverable in such case until after judgment. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Earl [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 199, 95 S. W. 1086.

87. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 1674, giving the circuit court jurisdiction of an action for money when the "sum demanded, exclusive of interest and costs" exceeds $50, attorney's fees allowed by § 1140, in an action against a carrier under the statute, cannot be considered as a part of plaintiff's demand. Knight v. Quincy, etc., R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 311, 96 S. W. 716. Under the Oregon statute providing for attorney's fees as "part of the costs" in suits to foreclose miners' liens, the attorney's fee cannot be added to the amount of the lien so as to make the requisite amount to give a Federal court jurisdiction on removal. Swofford v. Cornucopia Mines of Oregon, 140 F. 957.

88. Amount in good faith demanded in petition and not amount recovered determines jurisdiction. Barnes v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 303, 95 S. W. 971; O'Neil v. Murray [Tex. Civ. App.] 94 S. W. 1090; Denver City Tramway Co. v. Norton [C. C. A.] 141 F. 599. In absence of plea that the sum claimed is fraudulently alleged. Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Grayson County Nat. Bank [Tex.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 678, 93 S. W. 431. In ejectment, where no special acts of damage are averred, the amount of damages laid in the ad damnum clause will not give the Federal court jurisdiction, the value of the land being insufficient. Way v. Clay, 140 F. 352. A court whose appellate jurisdiction depends upon the "amount in dispute" will not always be controlled by the amount claimed in the petition, but if the entire case is before it, it will examine the evidence and refuse to take jurisdiction if it clearly appears that the amount is below its jurisdiction. Vanderberg v. Kansas City Gas Co. [Mo.] 97 S. W. 908.

89. Barnes v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 303, 95 S. W. 971. An action on account consisting of two items, balances for price of articles sold at different times, does not include separate causes of action so as to deprive the court of jurisdiction as to one item because it is too small. Hasty v. Hampton Stave Co. [Ark.] 97 S. W. 675. Where two steers were struck by a locomotive at different times but within a few seconds of time there was only one cause of action and the amount involved was sufficient to give trial court jurisdiction. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ramsey [Ind. App.] 78 N. E. 669. Where several complainants are joined in a suit in equity merely for convenience and their demands are distinct, the demands cannot be aggregated for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction. Suit to enjoin obstruction of stream. Eaton v. Hoge [C. C. A.] 141 F. 64.

90. Joinder of tort and contract claims. Barnes v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 303, 95 S. W. 971.

91. There never having been any jurisdiction of subject-matter, it cannot be conferred by consent or waiver. Barnes v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 303, 95 S. W. 971.

92. Barnes v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 303, 95 S. W. 971; Braun & Ferguson Co. v. Paulson [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 564, 95 S. W. 617.

93. A claim for damages manifestly and preposterously inflated will not confer jurisdiction on the supreme court. Samuel Israelite Baptist Church v. Thomas, 117 La. 253, 41 So. 564. A counterclaim for expenses incurred by defendant in order to establish fraudulent acts by plaintiff in relation to his claim constitutes no predicate for the right of appeal. Where plaintiff's claim was so small that there could be no appeal to district court. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Jones [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 166, 95 S. W. 746. Mere failure to establish a claim necessary to make the jurisdictional amount is not a fraud on the jurisdiction of the court, there having been a bona fide attempt. Barnes v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 303, 95 S. W. 971.

appellate jurisdiction of the higher courts.[95] The jurisdiction of a court may sometimes be affected by amendment,[96] and under some statutes by a waiver of an excess of a demand over the jurisdictional amount.[97] Where a claim is within the jurisdiction of a court, the fact that defendant pleads in bar a settlement by delivery of property exceeding in value such jurisdiction does not deprive the court of power to inquire as to the fact of such settlement,[98] and the court has jurisdiction of a counterclaim in such case provided it does not exceed the jurisdictional amount.[99] The amount in controversy is immaterial where jurisdiction is dependent upon other considerations.[1]

§ 7. Limitations resting in character of subject-matter or object of action.[2]—Particularly with respect to courts below those of general original jurisdiction and in case of appeals is jurisdiction denied or conferred where the action involves the title to land,[3] a freehold,[4] constitutional questions[5] properly raised and passed

94, 95. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Jones [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 166, 95 S. W. 746.

96. In courts not of record it is permissible by amendment before trial to reduce the amount claimed so as to bring it within the jurisdiction of the court. Summons in justice's court amended by entry of credit on contract attached thereto. Smith v. Puett, 124 Ga. 921, 53 S. E. 457. Where a complaint in an action under a statute demands less than the jurisdictional amount but states facts which would have authorized a recovery at common law together with exemplary damages, plaintiff may file an amended petition based on the common law and therein demand exemplary damages so as to bring the case within the jurisdiction of the court. Knight v. Quincy, etc., R. Co., 120 Mo. App. 311, 96 S. W. 716. Amended petition against nonresident filed in vacation and without notice and reducing claim from $5,000 to $1,999 held to deprive defendant of right to remove cause to Federal court. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Campbell [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 484, 91 S. W. 312. In cases appealed from the justice to the county court the law provides that they shall be tried de novo, and the amount in controversy cannot be increased by amendment on appeal to an amount beyond the justice's jurisdiction. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 318, 98 S. W. 415. Error not cured by failure of county court to include in his charge the items which increased the amount beyond the jurisdiction of the justice. Id. Where county court rightfully obtained jurisdiction it could retain it notwithstanding amended complaint included interest as damages and thus raised amount prayed for to over $1,000. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Underwood [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 453.

97. The statutory waiver of an excess of a demand over $300 must be made by a defendant in his set-off. Statement in court not sufficient. Bowler v. Osborne [N. J. Law] 64 A. 697.

98. Where defendant sought no recovery. Eule v. Dorn [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 833, 92 S. W. 828.

99. That property exceeded in value $1,000 did not defeat jurisdiction of county court. Eule v. Dorn [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 833, 92 S. W. 828.

1. Under the constitution, district courts have authority to issue writs of injunction irrespective of the amount involved. Callaghan v. Tobin [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 131, 90 S. W. 328. District court has jurisdiction of mandamus proceedings to compel commissioners' court to enter orders directing drafts to be drawn for an amount previously allowed where there is no question as to the amount or validity of the claim, though its amount is less than $500. Denman v. Coffee [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 29, 888, 91 S. W. 800. In mandamus to compel a county auditor to sign a warrant, the amount thereof did not affect the jurisdiction of the district court where petitioner did not seek any judgment as to the amount or validity of his claim. Anderson v. Ashe [Tex.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 637, 90 S. W. 872. Where the district court had jurisdiction by reason of the suit being one to foreclose a mechanic's lien, it could retain it for the purpose of rendering judgment on the debt, though the lien was invalid and the claim was below the jurisdictional amount, no fraud being asserted. Sudduth v. Du Bose [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 329, 93 S. W. 235. Where an appeal is not taken from a judgment for money or personal property but from one refusing to restrain the collection of a judgment and to vacate it, the court of appeals has jurisdiction though the amount is less than $200. Cincinnati, etc., Packet Co. v. Malone & Co., 29 Ky. L. R. 44, 92 S. W. 306. Where suit to enforce unpaid subscriptions was brought by corporate creditors whose claims were large enough to give court jurisdiction, court had jurisdiction of demands of other creditors whose claims were not large enough to give jurisdiction in the first instance, since the fund sought to be subjected was a trust fund for the benefit of all the creditors who could join in the suit. Williams v. Chamberlain, 29 Ky. L. R. 606, 94 S. W. 29. An appeal from an order denying a motion to quash an execution issued upon a judgment for costs in a felony case is not within the jurisdiction of the supreme court where the amount of such judgment is not sufficiently large to confer jurisdiction, though the execution was issued in the name of the state. State v. Butler, 191 Mo. 201, 90 S. W. 378.

2. See 6 C. L. 279.

3. Where the relation of landlord and tenant does not exist and plaintiff's right to re-upon below,[6] saved for review[7] and assigned as error in the appellate court,[8] ques-cover rent depends entirely upon his title to the property, a justice of the peace has no jurisdiction. Minton v. Minton [Ark.] 98 S. W. 976. Under Act Cong. March 1, 1895, c. 145, § 4, 28 St. 696, the commissioners' court has jurisdiction of all matters, including a claim for damages for trespass to real estate, where plaintiff's demand does not exceed $100. Mansf. Dig. Ark. c. 91, does not apply. Choctaw, etc., R. Co. v. Loper Bros. [Ind. T.] 98 S. W. 150. The supreme court has jurisdiction of all suits "involving homestead exemptions" whether the issues be raised by the debtor or by his creditors. Suit held to involve homestead exemptions. People's Independent Rice Mill Co. v. Benoit, 117 La. 999, 42 So. 480. Title is involved when the necessary result of the judgment is that one party gains and the other loses a freehold. Barnes v. Stone, 198 Mo. 471, 95 S. W. 915. Suit to prevent resale of land bought at foreclosure, on ground that sale would cloud title, does not involve title. Id. Suit to enjoin sale of land under execution on ground that sale would cast cloud on title does not involve title. Payne v. Daviess County Sav. Ass'n, 198 Mo. 617, 96 S. W. 1016. Judgment must directly affect title. Lawson v. Hammond, 191 Mo. 522, 90 S. W. 431. The question as to the right to levy on realty is not sufficient to confer jurisdiction on ground that title to realty is involved. Lawson v. Hammond, 191 Mo. 522, 90 S. W. 431; Moore v. Stemmons, 192 Mo. 46, 90 S. W. 434; Stinson v. Cail, 163 Mo. 323, 63 S. W. 729, based on McAnaw v. Matthis, 129 Mo. 142, 31 S. W. 344, declared no longer to be authority for jurisdiction of the supreme court in such cases. Lawson v. Hammond, 191 Mo. 522, 90 S. W. 431. The supreme court has no jurisdiction where title is brought into the case only incidentally for the purpose of determining to whom money is to be paid. McKinney v. Wright Lumber Co., 192 Mo. 32, 90 S. W. 726. Supreme court has jurisdiction of appeal in proceedings to open a highway if a contest concerns the right to take private property for the road. State v. McCutchan, 119 Mo. App. 69, 96 S. W. 251. Court of appeals has no jurisdiction to issue writ of error in action to quiet title to land. Keimel v. Nine [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 635. Under the statute to quiet title (Rev. St. 1899, § 650), the jurisdiction of the court is limited to the quieting of title, and the court cannot order an accounting arising under a contract whereby the interests of the parties in the land were fixed. Howard v. Brown, 197 Mo. 36, 95 S. W. 191. An action to recover on a note given for the purchase price of land does not necessarily involve title to land and a justice of the peace has jurisdiction thereof. McPeters v. English [N. C.] 54 S. E. 417; Davis v. Evans [N. C.] 55 S. E. 344. Where a contract required the making of title to land by a certain date and the pleadings showed that it was not made if at all till later, the question of title was eliminated and it was not again drawn in issue by evidence which did not show that the contract was varied in that particular. Jaffe v. Ohlan, 97 N. Y. S. 296. The peacemakers' court of the Alleghany and Cattaraugus reservation has exclusive jurisdiction of questions between individual Indians involving the title to real estate on the reservation and the decision of the council of the Seneca Nation on appeal from the peacemakers' court is conclusive, so that the supreme court has no jurisdiction to restrain the peacemakers' court from carrying out its judgment and to declare fraudulent the deed of the successful party. Jones v. Gordon, 99 N. Y. S. 958. In summary proceedings by a tenant against subtenants to recover possession, the municipal court is not ousted of jurisdiction because the answer raises the question whether plaintiff's lease has been forfeited. Hollister v. Wohlfeil, 100 N. Y. S. 997.

4. A freehold is involved only where the necessary result of the decree or judgment is that one party gains or the other loses a freehold estate or where the title is so put in issue by the pleadings that the decision of the case necessarily involves the decision of such issue. In re Ross' Estate, 220 Ill. 142, 77 N. E. 126. To justify an appeal to the supreme court on the ground that a freehold is involved, a freehold must be involved in the questions to be determined on appeal. Hutchinson v. Spoehr, 221 Ill. 312, 77 N. E. 580. Where a freehold is involved in the original decree but is not the point assigned for error, the appeal should be to the appellate court. In re Ross' Estate, 220 Ill. 142, 77 N. E. 126.

Freehold involved: Bill in the nature of a bill of review which seeks to impeach a decree in partition ascertaining and declaring the title to a freehold estate. Crane v. Stafford, 117 Ill. App. 57. To remove tax deed as cloud upon title to realty. Glos v. Shedd, 118 Ill. App. 238. Contest of will disposing of real estate in manner different from that in which the property would have descended in case of intestacy. Gottmanshausen v. Wolfing, 224 Ill. 270, 79 N. E. 611. Suit for specific performance of contract for sale of freehold. Barnes v. Stone, 198 Mo. 471, 95 S. W. 915. A party in possession of a mining claim who has complied with the Federal laws relating thereto has a freehold estate, although he has failed to take out a patent and the legal title consequently remains in the United States. White Star Min. Co. v. Hultberg [Ill.] 77 N. E. 327. That land was located in another state was immaterial. Id. Where a tax deed was removed as a cloud upon the title to realty, appellant could not waive all questions as to the validity of the deed and raise only the questions of reimbursement to him and costs so as to confer jurisdiction upon the appellate court, on the theory that these questions were only matters of practice. Glos v. Shedd, 118 Ill. App. 238.

Freehold not involved: Where part of a street was taken for a private purpose but no part of appellant's property subject to the public easement was taken. Hoffman Bros. Brew. Co. v. Cicero, 223 Ill. 155, 79 N. E. 121. In suit to enjoin issuance of tax deed on ground that it will cloud title (Glos v. Sanitary Dist. of Chicago, 224 Ill. 272, 79 N. E. 562) or on ground that property belonged to plaintiff and that deed should issue to her tions of law decided erroneously or contrary to the court of last resort,[9] the construction of a statute,[10] taxes or revenue,[11] a penalty,[12] certain tort liabilities,[13] and (Bush v. Caldwell, 224 Ill. 93, 79 N. E. 434). In suit to restrain further issuance of executions on a judgment and to set aside certificate of sale. First Nat. Bank v. Gibson, 221 Ill. 295, 77 N. E. 562. Bill to have absolute deed declared mortgage and to redeem. Caraway v. Sly, 122 Ill. App. 648. Questions on appeal whether appellant's share in partition was subject to a lien and whether the lien was subject to an inchoate right of dower. Hutchinson v. Spoehr, 221 Ill. 312, 77 N. E. 580. Where the only effect of an order awarding a writ of mandamus was to compel a sale of real estate to satisfy a lien of an assessment for a street improvement. Murphy v. People, 221 Ill. 127, 77 N. E. 439. Where question was merely one of priority as between a lien claim and a claim for dower and homestead. Lidster v. Poole, 122 Ill. App. 227. The homestead right of a wife living with her husband on premises occupied by the two as a homestead is not a freehold so as to authorize an appeal to the supreme court. Taylor v. Taylor, 223 Ill. 423, 79 N. E. 139.

5. For constitutional questions in Federal practice, see post, § 11C.

Indiana: Cases appealed to the appellate court must be transferred to the supreme court for a determination of questions as to the constitutionality of statutes involved therein. Shelbyville Coal & Min. Co. v. McGlosson [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 562.

Louisiana: Supreme court held to have no jurisdiction of suit to recover taxes paid in error since the constitutionality or legality of the tax could not be considered after it had been paid. McCaleb v. Buras Levee Dist. Com'rs, 116 La. 942, 41 So. 217.

Missouri: Where appeal in prosecution for peddling without a license involved construction of revenue laws and interstate commerce clause of Federal constitution, the supreme court, and not the court of appeals, had jurisdiction. State v. Looney [Mo. App.] 96 S. W. 316. The fact that defendant alleges that the decision of his case by the court of appeals contravenes a prior decision of that court, and that its construction of statutes involved in the case violate the state and Federal constitutions, do not raise any constitutional or Federal questions so as to confer jurisdiction upon the supreme court. Sublette v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 198 Mo. 190, 95 S. W. 430. The supreme court has no jurisdiction of an appeal in a prosecution for a misdemeanor where no constitutional question is involved, but merely the construction of a statute. State v. McKee, 196 Mo. 106, 95 S. W. 401. Where a verdict was rendered by nine jurors as authorized by an instruction, an appeal on the ground that the instruction was not authorized by the state constitution raised a constitutional question of which the supreme court had jurisdiction. Logan v. Field, 192 Mo. 54, 90 S. W. 127. Constitutionality of a statute held still an open question, though it had been considered in a previous case where the case was pending in the Federal supreme court. O'Donnell v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 197 Mo. 110, 95 S. W. 196.

Virginia: Since Const. art. 6, § 88, providing that the supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction "in all cases involving the constitutionality of a law," does not of its own force confer jurisdiction, the judgment of the circuit court in determining the validity of an election as to the licensing of liquor is final as provided by Code 1904, § 586a, though the constitutionality of a law is involved. Hulvey v. Roberts [Va.] 55 S. E. 585.

6. The supreme court has no jurisdiction of an appeal on the ground that a statute has been declared unconstitutional unless it appears that the question was raised in the pleadings below and that a law has in fact been so declared, or that a holding to that effect was necessarily involved in the judgment. State v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co., 116 La. 189, 40 So. 630. Where the judgment may have been predicated upon another ground, it will not be assumed that a law was declared unconstitutional. Id. Failure to call the attention of the trial court, on a motion for a new trial, to constitutional questions urged at the trial is an abandonment of such questions, and an appeal cannot be sustained by reason thereof. State v. Grant, 194 Mo. 364, 92 S. W. 698.

7. See Saving Questions for Review, 6 C. L. 1385.

8. See Appeal and Review, 7 C. L. 128.

9. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 1337j, subd. 2, allowing a transfer of a case from the appellate to the supreme court on the ground that the opinion of the appellate court contravenes a prior ruling of the supreme court or that a new question of law is directly involved and was decided erroneously, the petition should show the particular decision of the supreme court contravened, or the particular new question of law involved and decided erroneously. American Quarries Co. v. Lay [Ind.] 76 N. E. 517. Petition for transfer "on account of error in the decision of the cause in the appellate court" held insufficient. Id. If the opinion of the appellate court contains a correct statement of the law as applied to the facts stated therein, a petition to transfer the cause to the supreme court on the ground that the court decided new questions of law erroneously will be denied, regardless of questions actually presented by the record. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission [Ind.] 78 N. E. 981.

10. Under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 1337h (Acts 1903, p. 280, c. 156), allowing an appeal to the supreme court from civil judgments of $50 or less when the proper construction of a statute is involved, the record must disclose a real controversy as to the meaning of a statute susceptible of an honest difference of opinion, and it is not sufficient to claim that the construction of a statute is involved. Hood v. Baker, 165 Ind. 562, 76 N. E. 243. An ordinance is not a "statute" within § 88 of the Practice Act, and a suit involving the validity of an ordinance is appealable to the appellate court and not to the supreme court, unless a construction of the constitution or a statute is also in-where any kind of equitable relief or cognizance is sought.[14] More often the statute simply provides what jurisdiction inferior courts shall have, impliedly excluding all else.[15] By statute such jurisdictions as those exercised by bankruptcy courts,[16] courts of probate and the like,[17] often become exclusive or at least primary.[18] Spevolved. People v. Harrison, 223 Ill. 550, 79 N. E. 164.

11. To authorize a direct appeal to the supreme court revenue must be directly involved, as where some authority authorized to assess or collect taxes is attempting to proceed under the law and questions arise between it and those from whom the taxes are demanded. City of Chicago v. Cook County, 224 Ill. 246, 79 N. E. 571. A suit by a city against a county for an accounting as to money alleged to be illegally retained as fees to the county clerk for extending taxes for a free library held not to involve revenue directly, there being no controversy between the city and the taxpayer. Id. Where in mandamus to compel a sale of realty to satisfy a street assessment the legality of the assessment, or the property owner's liability to pay, or the amount to be paid, was not in controversy, the case related to revenue only incidentally and could not be reviewed by the supreme court. Murphy v. People, 221 Ill. 127, 77 N. E. 439. Where the questions on appeal did not involve the validity of certain taxes and the amount claimed was less than $2,000, the supreme court was without jurisdiction. Page v. Thompson, 117 La. 274, 41 So. 571. A suit to recover from the United States for salvage of duties collected by the government on a cargo afterwards saved does not arise under the revenue laws so as to deny jurisdiction to the Federal district court under the Tucker act, because liability is founded on the assumption that the secretary of the treasury would have refunded the duties if the property had been destroyed. United States v. Cornell Steamboat Co., 202 U. S. 184, 50 Law. Ed. 984.

12. Pleadings construed most strongly against pleader held to set forth a cause of action for a penalty not cognizable in justice court. Atlanta, etc., R. Co. v. Shippen [Ga.] 55 S. E. 1031.

13. Complaint against a carrier stating that defendant violated the contract of carriage by doing certain things held to state a cause of action on contract within the jurisdiction of the municipal court, and not one for assault and battery, though the facts pleaded showed that an assault was committed. Busch v. Interborough Rapid Transit Co., 110 App. Div. 705, 96 N. Y. S. 747. An action to recover for loss of rent due to delay of work on a building occasioned by defendant's wrongfully filing a notice of mechanics' lien against the property is one for an "injury to property" within the definition given in Code Civ. Proc. § 3343 (10), so as to give the municipal court jurisdiction. Ghiglione v. Friedman, 100 N. Y. S. 1024. Under Municipal Court Act 1902, p. 1489, c. 580, § 1, subd. 14, the municipal court of New York has no jurisdiction of actions to recover for loss of society to husband or wife, but the "loss of society" referred to means intentional injury, and the court may award damages for loss of society resulting from mere negligence. Lyons v. New York City R. Co., 97 N. Y. S. 1033.

14. Justice of peace had no jurisdiction of a set-off which only equity could entertain. Cornett v. Ault, 124 Ga. 944, 53 S. E. 460. Under the constitution, the district court has original jurisdiction both at law and in equity, as well as certain appellate jurisdiction. Coleman v. Jaggers [Idaho] 85 P. 894. A court having jurisdiction over the estates of decedents, though having no general chancery powers, has authority to administer equity principles in the exercise of its jurisdiction. Wheeler v. Wheeler, 105 Ill. App. 48. The superior court has equitable jurisdiction formerly exercised by courts of equity unless limited by statute. State v. Settle [N. C.] 54 S. E. 445. Municipal court of New York city has no jurisdiction of equitable action by mortgagor to regain possession of chattels voluntarily surrendered by him to mortgagee. De Luca v. Archer Mfg. Co., 49 Misc. 645, 97 N. Y. S. 1026. An action for a deficiency on a chattel mortgage is not an action on the mortgage of which the court is denied jurisdiction by Laws 1902, p. 1533, c. 580, § 139, the liability arising as a matter of law. Wilcox v. Perez, 101 N. Y. S. 391. Is not powerless to grant an order of interpleader in a proper case on the ground that it is an exercise of equity jurisdiction. Englander v. Fleck, 101 N. Y. S. 125. Permitting defendant to show that he was led to make an absolute promise to pay a sum of money by false representations held not to involve any question of the assumption of equitable jurisdiction by the municipal court. Alexander v. Vidootzky, 49 Misc. 471, 97 N. Y. S. 992.

15. See post, § 9C.

16. The title to the property of a bankrupt becomes vested in the trustee when the latter's bond is confirmed by the court, and thereafter a state court has no jurisdiction to establish an equitable lien against the property regardless of whether it was in the possession of the trustee at the time the suit was instituted or in the possession of the sheriff under an attachment from a state court. Goodnough Mercantile Co. v. Galloway [Or.] 84 P. 1049.

17. District court has jurisdiction of action by widow to recover homestead left by deceased husband from which she was wrongfully ejected, and personal property connected therewith, together with damages for use and for mental distress and humiliation. Contention that probate court had jurisdiction was without merit. Cox v. Oliver [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 790, 95 S. W. 596. Where a vendor procured a rescission of his executory contract of sale, a claim by him for rents pending the action was not one against the estate of the deceased purchaser, and the district court had jurisdiction regardless of whether such estate had been closed in probate. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Texas Land & Mortg. Co. [Tex. Civ App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 183, 90 S. W. 197.

cial statutory or constitutional jurisdictions are limited to occasions and objects contemplated by the law creating them.[19]

Courts have no power to control or supervise legislative or official administrative discretion.[20]

§ 8. Limitations resting in character or capacity of parties litigant.[21]—In Indian Territory the court has no jurisdiction to issue a writ of quo warranto at the instance of a private relator.[22]

§ 9. Original jurisdiction. A. Exclusive, concurrent, and conflicting.[23]—When by reason of any of the statutes or rules discussed in the preceding sections only one court can act authoritatively, its jurisdiction is exclusive.[24] If two or more courts have jurisdiction either inherent or conferred, this jurisdiction is called concurrent.[25] When two courts of concurrent jurisdiction both assume to act, there is a conflict,[26] and the court which first acquired jurisdiction retains it to the exclusion of the other[27] and may restrain the litigants from interfering,[28] but may not ordi-

20. See Constitutional Law, 7 C. L. 691; Compare Elections, 7 C. L. 1230; Highways and Streets, 8 C. L. 40; Eminent Domain, 7 C. L. 1276; Municipal Corporations, 6 C. L. 714; Public Works and Improvements, 6 C. L. 1143. In the absence of statute, courts cannot interfere by injunction or otherwise with the exercise of governmental powers or functions. Circuit court could not restrain county court from ordering an election. Mann v. Mercer County Ct., 58 W. Va. 651, 52 S. E. 776.

21. See 4 C. L. 335.

22. The statute of 9 Anne, c. 20, authorizing the issuance of quo warranto at the instance of a private relator, was never in force in Indian Territory. Painter v. U. S. [Ind. T.] 98 S. W. 352.

23. See 6 C. L. 283.

24. See §§ 4 to 8, ante. A constitutional grant of jurisdiction to a particular court of certain matters does not of itself imply that such jurisdiction is to be exclusive. Legislature could empower superior court to issue prerogative writs, though supreme court had that power. Higgins v. Pawtucket Tax Assessors, 27 R. I. 401, 63 A. 34. The orphan's court has exclusive jurisdiction of the probate of a will and has general power to revise proceedings tainted with fraud, mistake, or illegality. Vincent v. Vincent [N. J. Eq.] 62 A. 700. The distribution of assets recovered by a trustee in bankruptcy in a state court is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal court of bankruptcy. Treseder v. Burgor [Wis.] 109 N. W. 957.

25. The superior courts of California have concurrent jurisdiction in matters of probate, but this does not mean that they have concurrent jurisdiction of every probate matter, but the legislature may prescribe which court shall exercise jurisdiction over a particular estate. Dungan v. Superior Ct, of Fresno County [Cal.] 84 P. 767.

Validity of statutes: Rev. St., § 6454, giving the probate court in certain counties concurrent jurisdiction with the common pleas in all misdemeanors and proceedings to prevent crime, is not unconstitutional for lack of uniform operation. Oberer v. State, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 93. Acts 1896-97, p. 802, creating the county court of Cleburne county, are not unconstitutional for conferring on the county court the same jurisdiction as that of the circuit courts. State v. Fuller [Ala.] 41 So. 990.

26. One not a party to an equity suit in a Federal court may apply to any court of competent jurisdiction to enforce his private rights, though they be the same as those involved in the suit first brought in the Federal court. That gas company had brought suit against state and city officers to restrain enforcement of statute lowering price of gas did not deprive state court of jurisdiction to restrain the company from shutting off gas supply from a consumer. Richman v. Consolidated Gas Co., 114 App. Div. 216, 100 N. Y. S. 81. Suit in Federal court was not in rem so as to give Federal court exclusive jurisdiction. Id. That a final decision by Federal supreme court on appeal from circuit court may first be had is no ground for refusing jurisdiction. Id. Where a temporary injunction was issued by the United States circuit court restraining a city, a gas commission, and the officers of the city and the state from enforcing a statute reducing the price which a gas company was authorized to charge consumers for gas, but as construed by that court did not affect consumers not made parties, the supreme court of the state could grant a temporary injunction restraining the gas company from shutting off the gas because of his refusal to pay the price fixed by the commission under the statute. Richman v. Consolidated Gas Co. [N. Y.] 78 N. E. 871, afg. 114 App. Div. 216, 100 N. Y. S. 81. Comity did not require such court to decline jurisdiction. Id.

27. Kastor v. Elliott, 77 Ark. 148, 91 S. W. 8; Whittier v. McFarland [Vt.] 65 A. 81. Though the statutory jurisdiction of the probate and chancery courts to sell property for partition is concurrent, the tribunal first acquiring jurisdiction is entitled to exercise it exclusive of the other. Finch v. Smith [Ala.] 41 So. 819. Where partition is sought in the probate court either in kind or by sale, the decree on final hearing is conclusive until reversed and excludes the jurisdiction of the chancery court in the absence of some special ground for the interposition narily control the other court.[29] Where similar proceedings are pending in courts of concurrent jurisdiction, the later proceeding should be stayed until the court which first acquired jurisdiction has disposed of the action before it.[30] A final judgment in a court of competent jurisdiction renders a similar suit res adjudicata in a court of concurrent jurisdiction.[31] While the states have no control of the primary disposition of public lands belonging to the United States, yet, when title passes from the government, state courts have jurisdiction to determine controversies between adverse claimants thereto.[32]

of equity. Id. The superior courts of California have concurrent jurisdiction in matters of probate. Where the estate of a nonresident decedent is in more than one county, the court in which application for letters is first made acquires exclusive jurisdiction of the estate. Dungan v. Superior Ct. of Fresno County [Cal.] 84 P. 767. The application is made when a proper petition is filed with the clerk. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1371-1379, and § 1295, construed. Id. In prohibition to prevent another court from subsequently assuming jurisdiction, the question whether decedent had any estate in the county where proceedings were first instituted cannot be raised. Id. Where one court placed a child in plaintiff's charge for the purpose of finding a home for her, another court could determine the question whether the child should remain at the home permanently, she being without the jurisdiction of the court of first instance. Louisiana Soc. for Prevention of Cruelty to Children v. Tyler, 116 La. 425, 40 So. 784. Filing of bill for injunction held improper where the matter was already in litigation in Federal court. Griffith v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. [Miss.] 40 So. 1011. A municipality represents its citizens in litigation as to matters in regard to which all citizens and taxpayers have a common interest, and where a city was a party to the litigation in the Federal court, it was improper for citizens of the city to file the bill in the state court. Id. The rule that prior possession of a res vests a court of concurrent jurisdiction with exclusive power to determine all matters relating thereto does not apply to a mere controversy, and so an ordinary action in a state court does not bar a subsequent action for the same relief in a Federal court or vice versa, even when the parties are the same. Richman v. Consolidated Gas Co., 114 App. Div. 216, 100 N. Y. S. 81. The rule that a levy of an attachment upon property places it within the custody of the court so as to prevent interference by another court applies to real as well as to personal property (Beardslee v. Ingraham, 183 N. Y. 441, 76 N. E. 476), and after a legal attachment by a Federal court of the property of a corporation a state court, in subsequent proceedings to dissolve the corporation, cannot enjoin the United States marshal from selling the property, nor enjoin further proceedings in the Federal court (Id., rvg. 106 App. Div. 506, 94 N. Y. S. 937). To give a court priority of jurisdiction over property, there must have been a valid seizure and actual control taken of the res. Levy on timber held not sufficient to give state court prior exclusive jurisdiction as against Federal court. Fountain v. 624 Pieces of Timber, 140 F. 381. Suit in state court against county treasurer to restrain payment of railroad bond coupons, there being no attempt to have court take possession of any funds, held no ground for refusal of Federal court to take jurisdiction of suit by coupon holder to enforce payment and an alleged trust. Board of Com'rs of Onslow County v. Tollman [C. C. A.] 145 F. 753. Under V. S. 2698, providing that at any time after granting a divorce the court may make further orders respecting the custody of children, the county court could determine the question of the custody of a child notwithstanding habeas corpus proceedings before a judge of the supreme court. Whittier v. McFarland [Vt.] 65 A. 81.

28. Where a Federal court has first acquired jurisdiction of a suit to determine rights in the waters of a stream, it is its right and duty to protect such jurisdiction from interference (Miller v. Rickey, 146 F. 574), and it will enjoin a defendant from prosecuting a later suit against complainant in a state court relating to the same subject-matter (Id.). A corporation organized by defendant, and to which he has pending the Federal suit conveyed his rights which are the subject of the litigation, takes the same subject to orders against its grantor and may also be enjoined from bringing suit in the state court. Id.

29. The fact that a court assumes jurisdiction of a cause already pending in a court of concurrent jurisdiction does not authorize interference by prohibition when there is a remedy by appeal. Objection must be taken by demurrer or answer as per Kirby's Dig. §§ 6093, 6096. Kastor v. Elliott, 77 Ark. 148, 91 S. W. 8.

30. Where a previous suit in the supreme court would completely cover all questions arising in the settlement of an executor's accounts in the surrogate court the accounting was stayed until the determination of the suit in the supreme court. In re Llado's Estate, 50 Misc. 227, 100 N. Y. S. 495. Where a Federal receiver sues on a claim in a state court having equity powers, the Federal court will not direct him to suspend the action to enable defendant to sue in equity therein to establish the right to a set-off merely because the two courts entertain different views on the right of set-off under the facts. Frees v. John Shields Const. Co., 145 F. 1020. See, also, Abatement and Revival, 7 C. L. 1; Stay of Proceedings, 6 C. L. 1550.

31. The jurisdiction of the United States circuit court in respect to customs duties is concurrent with that of the board of general appraisers created by Customs Act, June

While courts of equity have no power to control or stay proceedings in a foreign court, they may restrain persons within their own jurisdiction from the use of foreign tribunals as instruments of wrong and oppression.[33] State courts have no power to enjoin proceedings in the Federal courts,[34] and the power of Federal courts over suits in state courts is restricted by statute.[35] A court of concurrent jurisdiction ordinarily cannot review the judgments of another such court.[36]

(§ 9) B. Ancillary or assistant.[37]—Jurisdiction having attached to one court or being in the process of acquisition, other courts may exercise ancillary or assistant jurisdiction,[38] and the court of principal jurisdiction may also exercise it.[39] A court is without power to restrain or punish the violation of a decree of another court.[40] Protection of property in custodia legis must be sought in the court that has possession.[41]

(§ 9) C. General or inferior, limited and special jurisdiction.[42]—General jurisdiction is that which within the territorial bounds is not limited as to nature of subject-matter, amount in controversy, or character of parties.[43]

Statutes conferring jurisdiction upon inferior courts are strictly construed.[44] The jurisdiction of probate,[45] county,[46] justice,[47] city,[48] municipal,[49] and other

See, also, Former Adjudication, 7 C. L. 1750.

32. Wilcox v. Phillips [Mo.] 97 S. W. 886.

33. Where a will was probated in Washington and the widow had accepted full settlement, court in Washington could restrain her from prosecuting suit in Oregon for settlement of her rights. Rader v. Stubbiefield [Wash.] 86 P. 560.

34. Could not enjoin execution sale. Beardslee v. Ingraham, 183 N. Y. 411, 76 N. E. 476.

35. See post, § 11A, and see, also, Injunction, 8 C. L. 279.

36. The district courts of this state have concurrent jurisdiction only, and one of them cannot review by habeas corpus the judgment of another such court. Martin v. Dist. Ct. of Second Judicial Dist. [Colo.] 86 P. 82; People v. Dist. Ct. of Second Judicial Dist. [Colo.] 86 P. 87. One special term has no power to review the order of another special term. In re Cullinan, 109 App. Div. 816, 96 N. Y. S. 751.

37. See 6 C. L. 286.

38. A district court has no ancillary jurisdiction under the bankruptcy act to make a summary order on the application of the trustee of a bankrupt whose estate is being administered in another district requiring a person to turn over property to the trustee. In re Von Hartz [C. C. A.] 142 F. 726.

39. Where receivers have possession of property under a decree of a Federal court, such court may entertain jurisdiction of an ancillary bill filed by them to remove a cloud cast upon the title to such property by the claims of others with reference thereto. Where a city claimed that the franchises of certain street railway companies would expire on a certain date and threatened to take possession. Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 400, 50 Law. Ed. 801.

40. Could not restrain or punish violation of foreign injunction. Jarvis Adams Co. v. Knapp, 213 Pa. 567, 62 A. 1112.

41. Plaintiffs could not protect lien of attachment in Federal court by independent action in state court. Coffin v. Harris [N. C.] 54 S. E. 437.

42. See 6 C. L. 286.

43. Jurisdiction of an action for usurpation of office of road overseer falls within the general jurisdiction of the circuit court, not being expressly vested in any other court. State v. Sams [Ark.] 98 S. W. 955. The courts of Indian Territory have only common-law jurisdiction to grant writs of quo warranto. Painter v. U. S. [Ind. T.] 98 S. W. 352. The civil district court has jurisdiction of a complaint if it relates to a personal right, such as the right to be left alone. Schulman v. Whitaker, 117 La. 704, 42 So. 227. The original jurisdiction of the district court of an action to quiet title to real estate is not affected by the fact that incidental thereto there is involved the construction of a will. St. James Orphan Asylum v. Shelby [Neb.] 106 N. W. 604. The circuit court has jurisdiction in habeas corpus in the case of one committed for contempt by a common pleas judge who was without jurisdiction in the premises. Ex parte Froome Morris, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 212. Under the constitution of this state the district courts have original jurisdiction of all subjects over which jurisdiction has not been granted to some other court. Callaghan v. Tobin [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 269, 90 S. W. 328.

44. St. 1904, p. 448, c. 448, § 1, transferring the jurisdiction of the superior court over real actions to the land court, did not transfer to that court jurisdiction of a suit to remove a cloud from a title. First Congregational Soc. v. Metcalf [Mass.] 79 N. E. 343. The county courts are courts of limited jurisdiction drawing all their powers from special statutory enactment. Commonwealth v. Central Consumers' Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 1363, 91 S. W. 711. The law court in Maine is a creature of the statute and has no powers except such as are by statute conferred. Could not hear motion for new trial where evidence could not be produced because of death of stenographer. Morin v. Claflin, 100 Me. 271, 61 A. 782.

45. Alabama: The probate court has ju-inferior courts, varies with the statutes of the different states. A court of general risdiction of a suit for the partition of personal property held by tenants in common. Code 1896, § 3161. Colby-Hinkley Co. v. Jordan [Ala.] 41 So. 962. But where the only interest that the parties to a partition suit had to land was by virtue of a will, and such interest was only the right to a distributive share of the proceeds of a sale after a deduction on account of advancements, the probate court was without jurisdiction to adjust such matters in a statutory proceeding to sell the land for partition among joint owners. Greer v. Herren [Ala.] 41 So. 783.

Idaho: Probate courts have original jurisdiction in matters of probate and appointment of guardian, and may also determine civil cases where the amount claimed does not exceed $500 exclusive of interest. They have concurrent jurisdiction with justices of the peace in criminal cases. Dewey v. Schreiber Implement Co. [Idaho] 85 P. 921. The civil cases referred to do not include suits in equity, such as suits to foreclose liens or mortgages on real estate. Id. Act approved February 27, 1903 (Sess. Laws 1903, p. 94), amending Rev. St. 1887, § 3841, subd. 9, extending jurisdiction to enforcement of liens on real estate, held unconstitutional. Id. They have exclusive jurisdiction of the settlement of estates of decedents subject to appeal to the district court for review of any proceeding had therein. Abrams v. White, 11 Idaho, 497, 83 P. 602.

Illinois: While a probate court has incidental chancery powers in respect to estates within its jurisdiction, it has no general chancery powers and cannot determine the validity of collateral agreements between heirs and legatees executed after the death of the ancestor or adjust equities arising therefrom. Its sole province is to see that the will of the testator is executed in the manner therein provided. Teel v. Mills, 117 Ill. App. 97.

Kansas: Except as limited by statute, probate courts have the same power over the persons and estates of lunatics as that formerly possessed by courts of chancery under the common law. Foran v. Healy [Kan.] 86 P. 470.

Maine: Probate courts have special and limited jurisdiction only. Taber v. Douglass [Me.] 64 A. 653.

Massachusetts: Agreement whereby a widow was to be appointed administratrix and certain property rights were adjusted held not to oust probate court of jurisdiction of the estate of a decedent, such court having exclusive jurisdiction over the settlement of estates of decedents. Fletcher v. Fletcher, 191 Mass. 211, 77 N. E. 758.

Michigan: While a court of probate as a part of the administration of an intestate's estate may order the distribution of land to those apparently entitled to possession, it has no jurisdiction to adjudicate in respect to the extent of their title or the validity of the titles and interests of others. Rich v. Victoria Copper Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 147 F. 380.

Missouri: Probate courts cannot determine the conflicting claims of distributees and outside parties to funds in the hands of an administrator awaiting distribution. Could not determine claim of husband to surplus of proceeds of sale of land held by deceased wife for life remainder to husband subject to her debts. In re Winnegar's Estate, 118 Mo. App. 445, 94 S. W. 833. Has no jurisdiction of a claim the allowance of which requires the interposition of equity to set aside a contract between claimant and decedent. Ivie v. Ewing, 120 Mo. App. 124, 96 S. W. 481.

New Jersey: The orphan's court is a superior court of general jurisdiction in probate and other special cases and has the same authority over its decrees by inquiring into the authority of attorneys to appear as may be exercised by any court of general jurisdiction. Vincent v. Vincent [N. J. Eq.] 62 A. 700.

New York: The surrogate has no jurisdiction of a controversy between the surety of a temporary administrator and a third person alleged to have fraudulently obtained property of the estate from the temporary administrator. In re Weisell's Estate, 101 N. Y. S. 273. Has no general equity powers but has only such jurisdiction as is expressly or by necessary implication conferred by statute. In re Thompson, 184 N. Y. 36, 76 N. E. 870. Has no jurisdiction of an action in the nature of a creditors' bill to reach the part of the insurance on the life of a decedent in favor of his wife, the executrix, which was purchased with the part of the premium paid from the property in excess of $500 a year. Id., 185 N. Y. 574, 78 N. E. 74.

North Carolina: Where a petition for the sale of a decedent's real estate alleges that the purpose of the sale is to provide a fund to pay debts and preserve the personalty, the clerk has no power to order a sale under proceeding provided by Revisal 1905, § 68, but relief must be had in a court of general equity jurisdiction. State v. Settle [N. C.] 54 S. E. 445.

46. Kentucky: A county court has no jurisdiction of an action for money due from a corporation for unpaid license fees. Commonwealth v. Central Consumers' Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 1363, 91 S. W. 711. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 87, relating to sales of property assigned for creditors, and § 75, the county court of the county where the assignee qualifies, and not where the business is carried on, has jurisdiction to order a sale of the assigned estate. Lexington & Carter County Min. Co. v. Columbia Finance & Trust Co. [Ky.] 98 S. W. 332.

Tennessee: The jurisdiction of the county court to wind up estates as insolvent was not affected by Acts 1873, p. 100, c. 64 (Shannon's Code, §§ 4067, 6028), giving the county courts concurrent jurisdiction with the chancery and circuit courts to sell real estate of decedents. Key v. Harris [Tenn.] 92 S. W. 235. The quarterly county court has no power to bring a suit to prevent the misappropriation of public school funds or to charge such funds with counsel fees or expenses in the suit. State v. True [Tenn.] 95 S. W. 1028. Under Acts 1899, p. 293, c. 153, creating the office of county judge of Campbell county, and general provisions of the Code, the county judge succeeded to all jurisdiction sitting as an inferior court has only such powers as are conferred by statute.[50]

(§ 9) D. Original jurisdiction of courts of last resort.[51]—This includes the prerogative common-law jurisdiction necessary to the proper control and supervision of the courts below,[52] and in its more common sense includes such as the con-the powers of the monthly quorum court. Could accept resignation of justice of peace. Murray v. State, 115 Tenn. 303, 89 S. W. 101.

47. See Justices of the Peace, 6 C. L. 331.

48. Georgia: A city court has no jurisdiction to foreclose a mortgage on realty. Scott v. Hughes, 124 Ga. 1000, 53 S. E. 453.

Illinois: The city court has jurisdiction within the territorial limits of the city to entertain proceedings to foreclose mortgages and may acquire jurisdiction of the parties to such proceedings in the same manner as circuit courts. Service by publication outside corporate limits sufficient. Spitznagle v. Cobleigh, 120 Ill. App. 191.

Indiana: Under Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 3669, conferring upon city courts original and concurrent jurisdiction with justices of the peace and city mayors, a city court has no general equity jurisdiction and cannot set aside its own judgment for fraud. Steinmetz v. Hammond Co. [Ind.] 78 N. E. 628.

49. Minnesota: The municipal court of Minneapolis has no jurisdiction in forcible entry and detainer proceedings based upon breach of a lease to lands lying only partly within Hennepin county. Bunker v. Hanson [Minn.] 109 N. W. 829. Cause of action could not be split so as to make two suits and thus bring one of them within the limited jurisdiction of the court. Id.

New York: Under Municipal Court Act Laws 1902, p. 1488, c. 580, § 1, subd. 11, the municipal court, in an action to enforce a mechanic's lien, has no power to render judgment for foreclosure and sale, its jurisdiction being limited to the rendition of a personal judgment against defendant to be enforced by execution. Drall v. Gordon, 101 N. Y. S. 171. Cannot adjudge the priority of liens nor permit another lienor to be made a party and establish his lien. Id. Municipal courts are creatures of statute and have no jurisdiction except such as is specially conferred thereby. Weinstein v. Douglas, 107 N. Y. S. 251. The municipal court of New York city has jurisdiction of an action on a quasi contract. Devery v. Winton Motor Carriage Co., 49 Misc. 626, 97 N. Y. S. 392; Harrington v. New York, 40 Misc. 165, 81 N. Y. S. 667 and Goldstein v. Abramson, 86 N. Y. S. 30, have been overruled. Id. Having no equity powers, it cannot declare invalid an agreement by a city employe to waive compensation on being granted a leave of absence on the ground that such employe was ignorant of the language. Tepidino v. New York, 50 Misc. 324, 98 N. Y. S. 693. Has no power to enforce an attorney's lien. Van Der Beek v. Thomason, 50 Misc. 524, 99 N. Y. S. 538. Has no jurisdiction of an action to recover money paid under duress. Herald Square Cloak & Suit Co. v. Rocca, 48 Misc. 650, 96 N. Y. S. 189. A defense that it was understood when a contract was executed that it was to have no efficacy is a legal and not an equitable one, and so within the jurisdiction of the municipal court. Koehler & Co. v. Duggan, 49 Misc. 100, 96 N. Y. S. 1025. Under Municipal Court Act (Laws 1902, p. 1489, c. 580, § 1, subd. 14), giving the court jurisdiction of actions for personal injuries or loss of services excepting among other things loss of society to husband or wife, the "loss of society" mentioned refers only to actions founded on intentional injury to the consortium and the court may award damages for loss of society resulting from unintentional acts, such as mere negligence. Lyons v. New York City R. Co., 97 N. Y. S. 1033.

50. The district court sitting as a court of probate has only such powers as are conferred by statute either expressly or by necessary implication. Could not try title to real estate on application for its sale to pay debts. In re Tuohy's Estate [Mont.] 83 P. 486.

51. See 6 C. L. 289.

52. See, also, Appeal and Review, 7 C. L. 128; Mandamus, 6 C. L. 496; Prohibition, Writ of, 6 C. L. 1102; Quo Warranto, 6 C. L. 1190, etc.

The extraordinary supervisory jurisdiction of the supreme court will not be exercised on an application showing no injury beyond the ordinary delays of litigation. Murphy v. Police Jury of St. Mary Parish, 117 La. 355, 41 So. 647. The supreme court will assume jurisdiction of an original proceeding in certiorari to review a judgment claimed to deprive the election judge of one party of the joint custody of the registration lists and of his share of the official ballots. People v. District Ct. Second Judicial Dist. [Colo.] 84 P. 694. An appellate court will not require a useless application to a lower court as a condition precedent to the exercise of its original jurisdiction in mandamus to compel action on the part of the clerk of that court. Where lower court had previously decided that a suit could not be brought therein. State v. Woodbury [Kan.] 87 P. 701. Under Const. 1875, art. 6, § 12, as amended in 1884, relating to the power of the court of appeals and the supreme court to issue original writs, the St. Louis court of appeals has no supervisory control by prohibition or otherwise over inferior courts in cases which are appealable directly to the supreme court only. Where constitutional question was involved. State v. Nortoni [Mo.] 98 S. W. 554. Has such jurisdiction only in cases where its jurisdiction is co-ordinate with that of supreme court. Id. That petition for writ of prohibition did not disclose that constitutional questions were involved in lower court did not confer jurisdiction to grant the writ, and supreme court could prohibit court of appeals from hearing issues thereon. Id. The power of superintending control given to circuit courts is limited by the means afforded for its exercise, viz., the functions of the original writs stitution and statutes enumerate.[53] Except in these cases, their jurisdiction is appellate only.[54] Jurisdiction to grant injunctive relief pending an appeal is limited to cases where the appeal would be rendered ineffectual by a continuation of the acts complained of.[55]

§ 10. Appellate jurisdiction[56] depends upon the existence of a judgment or order of which the court below had jurisdiction[57] and which is subject to review independently of other judgments.[58] This jurisdiction varies in the different states,[59]

referred to in connection with the grant, all of which pertain only to mattere of jurisdiction. State v. Chittenden, 127 Wis. 468, 107 N. W. 500.

53. Arkansas: Supreme court has no original jurisdiction to issue writs of quo warranto to prevent usurpation of office of road overseer, this not being included within its powers as to such writs given by the constitution. State v. Sams [Ark.] 98 S. W. 955.

Colorado: Under Const. art. 6, § 3, giving the supreme court power to issue write of habeas corpus, injunction, and other remedial writs, and to hear and determine the same, such court has original jurisdiction of a suit by the state to enjoin a conspiracy to perpetrate an election fraud. People v. Tool [Colo.] 86 P. 224.

Kansas: By the constitution of this state the original jurisdiction of the supreme court is limited to proceedings in quo warranto, mandamus, and habeas corpus, and even in these matters some special reason must exist for invoking its powers or parties will be relegated to courts of general jurisdiction for relief. In re Burnette [Kan.] 85 P. 575. Where an action is brought by the state to nullify an incorporation and the corporation alone, and not its corporators or officers, is made defendant, the supreme court on decreeing the incorporation void and ousting the corporation from exercising corporate power may make such orders restraining the officers or others related to the corporation from acting by virtue of such relation as may be necessary to make the decree of ouster effective (State v. Inner Belt R. Co. [Kan.] 87 P. 696), but it has no jurisdiction to grant an injunction against another corporation or individual to protect the rights of a third person or corporation (Id.).

United States: A conflict between the authorities of the states of Louisiana and Mississippi, arising out of the enforcement of the oyster legislation of those states and involving a dispute respecting the true boundary line, is within the original jurisdiction of the supreme court of the United States. Louisiana v. Mississippi, 202 U. S. 1, 50 Law. Ed. 913.

Wisconsin: The original jurisdiction of the supreme court to protect the general interest and welfare of the state and its people by the use of prerogative or quasi prerogative writs will not be exercised except with reference to questions affecting the sovereignty of the state, its franchisee, prerogatives, or the liberties of the people. State v. Goff [Wis.] 109 N. W. 628. Where a proceeding in the supreme court to determine which of two candidates at a primary election was entitled to have his name placed on the ballot also involved abstract legal questions as to the proper construction of the primary law which were of interest to the whole state, the proceeding would be retained for the purpose of determining those questions only. Id.

54. Being without original equity jurisdiction, supreme court had no power to issue injunction restraining landowner from interfering with operation of a railroad pending condemnation. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Stevens, 143 Mich. 646, 13 Det. Leg. N. 86, 107 N. W. 436. Where a railroad entered defendant's property without authority under an invalid option which was set aside on appeal in a suit by the company to compel specific performance thereof, the supreme court had no jurisdiction to determine defendant's damages for the appropriation of the right of way. Const. art. 15, § 9, providing that the necessity and compensation for taking property for public use shall be ascertained by jury. Id. A constitutional jurisdiction which is solely appellate except the supervisory control of inferior courts and the original prerogative writs excludes power to supplant a lower judge disqualified by another judge. Substitute for Senate bill No. 71, eighth legislative assembly, held unconstitutional. In re Weston, 28 Mont. 207, 72 P. 512.

55. Appellant who had been enjoined from using defendant's premises as a passageway could not restrain defendant from interfering with the passageway pending appeal. Van Sicien v. Muir [Wash.] 87 P. 498.

56. See 6 C. L. 290.

57. Appellate jurisdiction of superior court depends upon jurisdiction of justice below. State v. Baskerville [N. C.] 53 S. E. 742. Where the foreclosure of a laborer's lien was clearly outside the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace, the county court on appeal had no jurisdiction to foreclose. Lewis v. Warren, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 890, 97 S. W. 104. Where city court had no jurisdiction of subject-matter of an action to set aside its judgment for fraud, circuit court could acquire none by appeal. Steinmetz v. Hammond Co. [Ind.] 78 N. E. 628. A complaint stating a cause of action in ejectment gives a justice of the peace no jurisdiction. Hence, he cannot confer jurisdiction upon the district court by certifying the case to it. State v. District Ct. of Fifth Judicial Dist. [Mont.] 83 P. 597.

58. See Appeal and Review, 7 C. L. 128. There being no law authorizing an appeal to the supreme or to the appellate court from an order of the railroad commission as to interlocking crossings, the supreme court cannot, on an appeal from such an order to the appellate court, order a transfer of the cause to itself on the ground that constitutional questions are presented especially where there are courts of intermediate appellate jurisdiction, and each statute must be consulted, since no general rule can be framed.[60] Whether the jurisdictional facts exist in the particular case and the tests thereof are considered in preceding sections.[61] In certain classes of cases courts of intermediate appeals for decision. Grand Rapids & S. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission [Ind.] 78 N. E. 981.

59. Colorado: The supreme court may review on certiorari a judgment in habeas corpus, whether such proceeding be considered civil or criminal, the judgment being in excess of the jurisdiction of the lower court. Martin v. District Ct. of Second Judicial Dist. [Colo.] 86 P. 82; People v. District Ct. of Second Judicial Dist. [Colo.] 86 P. 87.

Kansas: The appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court is limited under the constitution to expounding the law and correcting errors appearing on the record in the proceedings of inferior courts, whether such proceedings be presented by appeal or error. In re Burnette [Kan.] 85 P. 575.

Louisiana: The supreme court has no jurisdiction of an appeal in a mandamus suit to compel a district attorney to join in a suit not yet instituted to annul a municipal charter or to recuse himself so that a district attorney pro tem might be appointed. State v. Lancaster [La.] 42 So. 583. When the court of appeal by a judgment which is allowed to become final declines jurisdiction of a cause and orders it transferred to the supreme court, and this court finds that it is without jurisdiction, the cause will be stricken. State v. Yazoo, etc., R. Co., 116 La. 189, 40 So. 630.

New York: Under Municipal Court Act, Laws 1902, p. 1583, c. 580, § 326, requiring the appellate court to order a new trial when the judgment is contrary to the evidence, the appellate term may on appeal from a judgment of the municipal court review the facts to determine whether the verdict is contrary to the evidence, though there is no appeal from an order denying a new trial. Feuer v. Brooklyn, etc., R. Co., 49 Misc. 629, 97 N. Y. S. 293. There being no provision in the constitution for a review by the court of appeals of the decision of the supreme court in reviewing an apportionment of legislative districts, such court has only its general appellate jurisdiction and cannot review the denial of a writ of mandamus to compel election notices to be made according to the old apportionment where it does not appear that the order was not made in the exercise of discretion. Sherill v. O'Brien [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 7.

Virginia: The appellate court has no authority to file a mere advisory opinion touching extraneous questions expressed for the purpose of influencing future litigation. Interstate Coal & Iron Co. v. Clintwood Coal & Timber Co. [Va.] 54 S. E. 593.

60. Illinois: Under Hurd's Rev. St. 1903, pp. 776, 777, c. 42, §§ 204-209, relating to proceedings to determine the amount of contribution to be made by a district which is benefited by the enlargement of a drain of another district, and not providing for an appeal, the general statute as to appeals from the county court governs and an appeal not involving a franchise, a freehold, the revenue, or the construction of the constitution, should be taken to the appellate and not to the supreme court. Union Drainage Dist. No. 1 v. Drainage Dist. No. 1, 220 Ill. 104, 77 N. E. 98.

Indiana: An appeal from a judgment in a suit to review the action of the railroad commission in proceedings under the interlocking switch act, brought under Railroad Commission Act (Acts 1905, pp. 89, 90, c. 53), § 6, must be taken to the appellate court under the express provision of the statute. Grand Trunk Western R. Co. v. Hunt [Ind.] 78 N. E. 975. The appellate court has no jurisdiction of an appeal from an order of the railroad commission in a proceeding under Acts 1897, pp. 237, 239, c. 157 (Burns' Ann. St. 1901, §§ 5158a-5158h), authorizing a petition by one road to compel the use of an interlocking device at a crossing with another road. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission [Ind.] 78 N. E. 981. Where in the opinion of the Indiana appellate court a former case, decisive of the one at bar, should be overruled, the case will be transferred to the supreme court. State v. New, 36 Ind. App. 521, 76 N. E. 181. Jurisdiction on appeal in an action of mandate is in the supreme court. Funk v. State [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 635.

Ohio: Inasmuch as the rank of courts and the right of appeal is a matter regulated by statute, the fact of the concurrent jurisdiction of the probate and common pleas courts in certain matters does not require that an appeal from the probate court in any one of those matters should be to the circuit instead of the common pleas court. Oberer v. State of Ohio, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 93. The circuit court has jurisdiction to review an order by the common pleas made on appeal from the overruling by a justice of the peace of a motion to discharge an attachment. Nemit v. Vargo, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 97. Under Rev. St. 1892, § 6709, it also has jurisdiction to review on error an order of the court of common pleas made on appeal from the probate court removing a guardian for cause. North v. Smith, 73 Ohio St. 247, 76 N. E. 619.

Tennessee: When the county court proceeds in an equity cause "according to the forms of chancery," an appeal lies from its judgment directly to the supreme court. Shannon's Code, § 4907. Key v. Harris [Tenn.] 92 S. W. 235.

Minnesota: Chapter 397, p. 664, Laws 1901, is constitutional, and limits the right of appeal from the municipal court of Duluth to the district court. No appeal lies direct to the supreme court. Dahlsten v. Anderson [Minn.] 109 N. W. 697.

Wisconsin: The constitutional grant of appellate jurisdiction given to circuit courts does not include power to review the proceedings of an inferior tribunal on the merits by the use of a writ of certiorari. The use thereof relates to judicial authority to supervise inferior courts and jurisdictions. State v. Chittenden, 127 Wis. 468, 107 N. W. 500.

are given final jurisdiction and as to such it is exclusive of the courts of last resort.[62]

Jurisdiction to consider causes de novo on appeal and decide them on the law and the evidence according to the right of the case independent of the judgment and rulings of the lower court is original and not appellate.[63] A general constitutional appellate jurisdiction is distinct from the right of appeal in a given case[64] and can be exercised only after a legislative creation of the latter, either expressly or by necessary implication.[65] An appellate jurisdiction whose limits have not been prescribed by the constitution may be abridged or extended by statute as public policy may dictate.[66] The right of appeal being granted by the organic act of a territory, the repeal of a statute pursuant to which an appeal is taken does not deprive the appellate court of jurisdiction in the case.[67] A statute denying appellate jurisdiction of a cause which a lower court might have had original or appellate jurisdiction to try applies to the case made by the original petition and not to the case as actually tried.[68]

Appellate jurisdiction cannot be conferred by waiver or consent.[69] Where an appellate court is without jurisdiction of the subject-matter of an appeal, the only judgment it can render is one dismissing the appeal.[70]

§ 11. Federal jurisdiction. A. Generally.[71]—The Federal district courts have no general equity jurisdiction,[72] and a Federal court cannot consider equitable defenses in an action at law,[73] neither can jurisdiction to do so be conferred by consent or waiver.[74] Rights and remedies created by state statutes may be enforced and administered in the national courts if the statutory jurisdictional facts exist,[75] and providing they come within the general jurisdiction of such courts,[76] and

62. The supreme court, as at present constituted, has power to review questions of law involved in a judgment in proceedings to determine a boundary between towns, though Pub. St. 1901, c. 52, § 6, declares that the decision of the supreme court of the county shall be final in case of disagreement of the selectmen. Laws 1901, c. 78, §§ 2, 5. Town of Bath v. Haverhill, 73 N. H. 511, 63 A. 307.

63. Statute relating to appeals in disbarment cases held not to confer upon supreme court power to consider cause de novo. In re Burnette [Kan.] 85 P. 575. Supreme court after reversing judgment of disbarment could remand cause to trial court. Id.

68. Rev. St. 1895, art. 996, does not deprive supreme court of jurisdiction of a suit tried in the district court and appealed to the civil court of appeals where the original petition claimed an amount beyond the jurisdiction of the county court, though an amended petition on which the case was tried claimed a sum within the jurisdiction of such court. 74. That plaintiff filed replication to equitable defense did not confer jurisdiction. Levi v. Mathews [C. C. A.] 145 F. 152.

75. Such as diversity of citizenship, etc. Harrison v. Remington Paper Co. [C. C. A.] 140 F. 385. Since a railroad company in Louisiana has the right under the state constitution to proceed against the railroad commission to test the validity of a rule or order of the commission, foreign company may maintain a suit for the same purpose in a Federal court, the jurisdictional amount being involved. Railroad Commission v. Texas & P. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 144 F. 68. A state statute giving a tenant a right to maintain an action to remove a cloud upon the title to the leased premises will be given effect by the Federal courts. New York, etc., R. Co. v. New York, 145 F. 661.

76. Rev. Laws Mass. c. 159, § 3, cl. 7, giving the supreme and superior courts jurisdiction in equity of creditors' suits, is a statute enlarging the equitable jurisdiction of such courts rather than one merely enlarging equitable rights, and a Federal court is without jurisdiction of a suit thereunder. Ma-rights acquired under Federal laws may be enforced by state courts competent to enforce rights of a like character, unless congress has given the Federal courts exclusive jurisdiction.[77] A suit in equity dependent upon a former suit of which a Federal court had jurisdiction may be maintained in that court without diversity of citizenship or a Federal question either to aid, enjoin, or regulate the original suit,[78] or to restrain, avoid, explain, or enforce the judgment or decree therein,[79] or to enforce or adjudicate liens upon or claims to property in the custody of the court in the original suit,[80] but the pendency in a state or other court of an action in personam involving no issue of which the Federal court has acquired exclusive jurisdiction and no claim to or lien upon any specific property under the control of a Federal court of equity presents no ground to sustain a bill to stay the action.[81]

A Federal court has no jurisdiction of an action against a state brought by a citizen of another state,[82] nor can it issue any injunction to stay proceedings in a state court;[83] but this prohibition is inapplicable where it acts in aid of its own jurisdiction already rightfully acquired,[84] or where the state court is without jurisdiction.[85]

77. Laborers and materialmen could bring suit in state court in name of United States to enforce bond required by Act Cong. Aug. 13, 1894, c. 280, 28 Stat. 278 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 2523), to be given by contractors for the construction of public buildings. United States v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 78 Vt. 445, 63 A. 581. Under Kan. Civ. Code, § 23, providing that when plaintiff fails in an action otherwise than upon the merits he may commence a new action within one year, when the first action was prosecuted in a state court, a new action may be maintained in a Federal court. Harrison v. Remington Paper Co. [C. C. A.] 140 F. 385.

78. Campbell v. Golden Cycle Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 610.

79. Campbell v. Golden Cycle Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 610. A Federal court sitting in equity may by means of a dependent suit and by means of injunctions or writs of assistance enforce its decrees and protect titles made thereunder against relitigation in state or other courts of issues it has determined (Guardian Trust Co. v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 337), and against litigation of questions of which it has acquired and retained exclusive jurisdiction (Id.).

80. Campbell v. Golden Cycle Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 610. A dependent suit must be for one of the purposes specified, though after jurisdiction is acquired by means of such a suit the court may determine the entire controversy in a proper case. Id. Cannot be maintained to adjudicate the rights of persons not parties to or in privity with the original action, except where they claim an interest in property in the custody of the court. Id.

81. Guardian Trust Co. v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 337. An action in personam against purchaser at a foreclosure sale upon his alleged liability to pay a debt of the mortgagor is not an invasion of the exclusive jurisdiction of the court which rendered the decree reserving jurisdiction to determine the superiority of other liens to the lien of the mortgage, in a case in which the purchaser's liability for such a debt has not been litigated in the foreclosure suit. Id.

82. Suit to restrain state officers from enforcing by judicial proceedings a statute alleged to be unconstitutional is a suit against the state prohibited by eleventh amendment to Federal Constitution. Hutchinson v. Smith, 140 F. 982. In a Federal suit against state commissioners for an injunction, the jurisdiction of the court is so doubtful that a preliminary injunction will not be granted where the real purpose is to enforce a contract with the state according to complainant's interpretation thereof which is denied by defendants. Smith v. Alexander, 146 F. 106. A suit by railroad companies against a state railroad commission to enjoin the enforcement of illegal rates and fines imposed by it for past violation of its orders is not a suit against the state prohibited by the eleventh constitutional amendment. Railroad Commission of Louisiana v. Texas & P. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 144 F. 68.

83. Mississippi railroad commission is not a state court within the prohibition against enjoining proceedings in a state court. Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 27 S. Ct. 90. Application to commission for an order against a railway company was not a proceeding in a state court merely because the commission would require the aid of the state court in the enforcement of its order. 84. Railroad Commission of Louisiana v. Texas & P. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 144 F. 68; St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. v. Montana Min. Co., 148 F. 450. A party who has prosecuted an action in the Federal courts until judgment is finally rendered against him on appeal will not be permitted to render such judgment ineffectual by maintaining a new suit for the same purpose in a state court. Id. Injunction to restrain enforcement by railroad commission of illegal rates and fines for violation of its orders held not prohibited by Rev. St. § 720 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 581), prohibiting injunctions in Federal courts to Suits arising under the patent[86] and copyright laws[87] are within the jurisdiction of the United States courts.

The supreme court and circuit courts of appeals are each invested with the same power to issue writs of habeas corpus within their respective territorial appellate jurisdictions,[88] and this power extends to cases not reviewable in these courts by error or appeal.[89] No Federal question being involved and no diversity of citizenship alleged, a Federal court is without jurisdiction of an original proceeding in habeas corpus for the discharge of a state prisoner.[90] The jurisdiction of a Federal court to release on habeas corpus persons in the military service of the United States held in the custody of state authorities should be exercised only in cases of peculiar urgency.[91] The circuit court of appeals has no jurisdiction of an original and independent proceeding in habeas corpus[92] or certiorari,[93] and the circuit courts may issue mandamus only in aid of a jurisdiction already acquired.[94] A Federal court has power to enter judgment on an award of arbitrators.[95]

The United States courts in the territories, and the supreme court in reviewing their decisions, do not exercise a constitutional but a legislative jurisdiction conferred by congress.[96] The United States courts in the Indian Territory have juris-stay proceedings in a state court. Railroad Commission of Louisiana v. Texas & P. R. Co. [C. C. A.] 144 F. 68. Ancillary relief in a Federal court by way of injunction in aid of its former decree enjoining the collection of state taxes rendered in a suit in which jurisdiction of the state and its officers had been acquired is not forbidden, either as a suit against the state, or as an injunction to stay proceedings in a state court. Gunter v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 200 U. S. 273, 50 Law. Ed. 477. Question of adequate remedy at law was foreclosed by original decree and could not be urged against relief. Id. A Federal court is not prevented from granting an injunction restraining a party from making a wrongful use of an execution on a judgment in a state court for the purpose of defeating a trust sought to be established in the Federal court. Linton v. Safe Deposit & Title Guaranty Co., 147 F. 824.

85. Nonresident land owner not made party to condemnation proceedings could restrain the trespass. Colorado Eastern R. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 898.

86. If a suit involves the question of infringement of a patent, it is within the jurisdiction of the United States circuit court, though the ownership of the patent or other contract rights are also involved. Harrington v. Atlantic & Pacific Tel. Co., 143 F. 329. Where manager of a corporation transferred to it certain patents in violation of a trust under which they had been assigned to him by the owners, and corporation thereafter used the patents, a suit against him and the corporation arose under the patent laws. Id. The Federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction of suits for infringement of patents, whether brought against original patentees or others. Aberthaw Const. Co. v. Ransome [Mass.] 78 N. E. 485.

87. A suit the primary and controlling purpose of which is to enforce a right secured by the copyright laws which is being infringed is a suit under those laws and within the jurisdiction of the Federal circuit courts, although it incidentally involves the validity and effect of a contract through which complainant derives title. Wooster v. Crane & Co. [C. C. A.] 147 F. 515. Where in a suit to restrain the sale of complainant's copyrighted publications at less than the regular prices there was neither diversity of citizenship nor a claim for damages in the sum of $2,000, questions not arising out of the copyright law could not be considered. Scribner v. Straus [C. C. A.] 147 F. 28.

88. Ex parte Moran [C. C. A.] 144 F. 594. Power of supreme court to issue writ except in cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers or consuls, and those in which state is a party, is a part of its appellate jurisdiction. Id.

91. Not where prisoners contended that homicide was committed by them in discharge of Federal duty to apprehend deceased for larceny, but evidence was conflicting as to whether deceased refused to surrender. United States v. Lewis, 200 U. S. 1, 50 Law. Ed. 343.

92. Under court of appeals act it may issue the writ only when necessary for exercise of a jurisdiction already existing. Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 50 Law. Ed. 963.

93. Authority to issue as independent proceeding not given by court of appeals act where only question was whether an offense was within jurisdiction of Federal courts. Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 50 Law. Ed. 963.

94. Circuit court without jurisdiction of original action in mandamus to compel return of franchise tax collected under state law, though ground of relief is alleged violation of interstate commerce clause of Federal constitution. Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Hager, 27 S. Ct. 24.

95. Burrell v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 147 F. 44.

96. By virtue of sovereignty of nation and diction of an action of ejectment brought by an Indian allottee against one in possession of the allotment.[97] The circuit court special term of the supreme court of the District of Columbia has jurisdiction of an action against a railroad company for a violation of the so-called Federal "safety appliance acts" committed within the District.[98] The district court of Porto Rico sitting as a circuit court has no jurisdiction of a common-law action for a wrongful attachment.[99]

A Federal court has jurisdiction of a suit by citizens of other states to determine and award their shares in the estate of a decedent, no property having passed into the hands of an administrator or into the possession of a state court.[1]

A national bank receiver may sue in the Federal courts in actions at law regardless of the amount in controversy,[2] and in equity where the amount involved exceeds $500.[3]

A state court may entertain jurisdiction of a suit based on common-law rights relative to an interstate shipment of goods,[4] and such suit is not within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal courts by reason of the Interstate Commerce Act.[5] The fact that a vessel subject to mechanics' liens under a state statute may become subject to superior maritime liens by reason of being engaged in interstate commerce does not deprive the state courts of jurisdiction to enforce the statutory liens.[6] Under the statute admitting South Dakota into the Union and the constitution of that state, the state courts have no jurisdiction of actions involving the possession of Indian reservation lands.[7]

If a creditor has a justiciable demand and the requisite diversity of citizenship exists, his motive in seeking the jurisdiction of a Federal court is immaterial.[8] In order that the United States may become a party to a suit so as to confer Federal jurisdiction, it must have an interest in the suit.[9] The rule that the construction of the constitution or laws of a state by its supreme court is binding upon the Federal courts does not apply where such construction affects the jurisdiction of a Federal court.[10] Whether a state statute is strictly penal or so far remedial as to allow power to make rules respecting Federal territory. Wallace v. Adams [C. C. A.] 143 F. 716. Before accrual of vested rights congress may disregard or review their decisions, though they were final under the law as it stood when they were rendered. Id. Power of supreme court and circuit court of appeals exclusively legislative. Ex parte Moran [C. C. A.] 144 F. 594.

97. Wallace v. Adams [C. C. A.] 143 F. 716. The fact that the Dawes Commission and the secretary of state have exclusive jurisdiction to determine matters relating to the allotment of land and to issue certificates which are conclusive evidence of the right of the allottee to the land therein described does not deprive these courts of jurisdiction to grant equitable relief on account of legal error, fraud, or mistake. 5. By its terms the provisions of the act are in addition to common-law rights. Suit for overcharges. Halliday Mill. Co. v. Louisiana, etc., R. Co. [Ark.] 98 S. W. 374. A state court has jurisdiction of actions against carriers to recover overcharges for shipments provided the overcharges are not such as fall within the meaning of the Interstate Commerce Act. Where carrier failed to post schedules as required by the act, shipper could recover charge in excess of contract rate. Wabash R. Co. v. Sloop [Mo.] 98 S. W. 607.

9. The United States as plaintiff in a suit by materialmen on the bond of a contractor an action thereon in a Federal court is a question of general jurisprudence to be determined by that court without regard to local decisions.[11]

Court of claims.[12]—The court of claims has jurisdiction of claims against the United States founded on the constitution or any law of congress except claims for pensions,[13] and claims for unliquidated damages in cases not sounding in tort which could be enforced in a court of admiralty if the United States were suable.[14] It may entertain a suit for the reformation of a contract with the Federal government and for recovery thereon as reformed.[15]

(§ 11) B. As affected by diversity of citizenship.[16]—The circuit courts of the United States have original jurisdiction of controversies between citizens of the state where suit is brought and citizens of other states,[17] provided the requisite amount is involved.[18] All the parties on one side of the suit must have a citizenship different from that of any of the parties on the other side,[19] but the real matter in dispute should determine how the parties are to be arranged for jurisdictional purposes,[20] hence, if a defendant is not an indispensable party, although a proper one, complainant may, if he chooses, dismiss his bill as to him;[21] and the fact that a co-defendant to a partnership bill may derive an incidental benefit from the litigation does not of itself render him an indispensable co-complainant so as to defeat the jurisdiction.[22] That a citizen defendant against whom no cause of action is stated is joined for a public building is a mere nominal party whose presence cannot confer Federal jurisdiction. Burrell v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 147 F. 44.

10. United States v. Tully, 140 F. 899.

11. Malloy v. American Hide & Leather Co., 148 F. 482. The Massachusetts Employers' Liability act (Rev. Laws, c. 106, §§ 71-74), authorizing recovery for the death of an employee, is not a penal statute in such sense that an action based thereon may not be maintained in a Federal court. Id.

13. Tucker Act (Act March 3, 1887, c. 359, 24 St. 505 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 752, 753]) § 1. Circuit court held to have jurisdiction of claim for tobacco tax rebate, though it involved no contractual obligation. United States v. Hyams [C. C. A.] 146 F. 15.

14. A bill which is in effect a libel in personam for the salvage of duties paid over to the Federal government presents a claim which may properly be said to be one for unliquidated damages in a case "not sounding in tort" which could be enforced in a court of admiralty, if the United States were suable, so as to give jurisdiction thereof under the Tucker Act (24 St. 505, c. 359 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 752, 753]), and the Federal district court therefore had jurisdiction, its jurisdiction being concurrent up to $1,000. United States v. Cornell Steamboat Co., 202 U. S. 184, 50 Law. Ed. 987.

15. Under act March 3, 1887, c. 359, § 1 (24 St. 505, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 752), as against contention that court of claims has no equity jurisdiction. United States v. Milliken Imprinting Co., 202 U. S. 168, 50 Law. Ed. 980.

16. See 6 C. L. 298.

17. Where an action on a public contractor's bond was brought by a bank in the state of Washington, and the contractor was a resident of California and his surety a corporation organized under the laws of Connecticut, the requisite diversity of citizenship existed. Burrell v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 147 F. 44. Where two or more corporations consolidate under the laws of different states into one corporation, the stockholders of the old corporations becoming stockholders of the new, the new creature is deemed, for the purpose of Federal jurisdiction, a corporation of each of the states under whose laws it is so consolidated. Wasley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 147 F. 608. Railroad companies held to have consolidated as above and the new corporation could not have a cause removed to the Federal court on the ground of diversity of citizenship where suit was brought against it in a court of one of the states. Id.

18. See ante, § 6.

19. Court has no jurisdiction when one defendant is citizen of same state with plaintiff. Mirabile Corp. v. Purvis, 143 F. 920. Where a cause of action is stated against several defendants, one or more of whom are citizens of the same state as plaintiff, the fact that they all join in a petition for removal to a Federal court does not confer jurisdiction on that court on the ground of diversity of citizenship. Eastin v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 646, 92 S. W. 838.

20. One joint vendor who refused to join the others as complainant in suit for specific performance held properly made defendant where there was no dispute between her and the other defendant, but there was a dispute between her and the other vendors, though she was necessarily given a decree against her codefendant. Wood v. Deskins [C. C. A.] 141 F. 500.

21. In a suit by a lessee to set aside an invalid assessment against the property, the lessor is not an indispensable party and complainant may dismiss the bill as to him so as to give the court jurisdiction on the ground of diversity of citizenship. New York, etc., R. Co. v. New York, 145 F. 661.

22. Gaddie v. Mann, 147 F. 955. Where with a non-citizen does not prevent the Federal court from taking jurisdiction by removal.[23] The jurisdiction of the district court of Porto Rico extends to causes in which the parties on both sides are subjects of a foreign state.[24]

When the jurisdiction of the circuit court is based solely upon diversity of citizenship, the suit may be maintained in the district in which either the plaintiff or defendant resides,[25] but this relates only to suits between citizens of different states of the Union;[26] and so an alien, though a resident in a state, can maintain a suit against a citizen of the United States only in the district of defendant's residence where jurisdiction is founded solely on diversity of citizenship.[27]

A suit will not lie in a Federal court by an assignee to recover the contents of a promissory note or chose in action if the instrument is payable to bearer and is not made by any corporation, unless such suit might have been prosecuted if no transfer had been made.[28] But where a transaction constitutes in effect a direct delivery of a chose by defendant to plaintiff, the right of a mere go-between to have sued is immaterial.[29] In a suit in a Federal circuit court by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover money alleged to have been due the bankrupt at or prior to the adjudication, the citizenship of the trustee is immaterial provided the citizenship of the bankrupt and defendant is such that the former might have sued in a Federal court but for the bankruptcy proceedings.[30] Colorable transfers of property or arrangements of parties are not tolerated.[31] The motives of the parties to a trans-one partner commits acts which render the continuation of the partnership impossible, all the other partners are not required to join as complainants in a suit for dissolution; but such suit may be maintained by one joining the others as defendants, and the facts that the interest of other partners may be similar to his own and that they are citizens of the same state as the offending partner will not defeat the jurisdiction of a Federal court, complainant being a citizen of another state. 25. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Woodson County Com'rs [C. C. A.] 145 F. 144. An action cannot be maintained in a Federal court against a nonresident of the district over his objection when plaintiff is also a nonresident and jurisdiction is founded only on diversity of citizenship (Tice v. Hurley, 145 F. 391), though the court has jurisdiction of other defendants by reason of their residence within the district (Id.).

26. Miller v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 147 F. 771. Where jurisdiction is based solely on diversity of citizenship, a suit must be brought in a state of which plaintiff or defendant is a citizen and in the district therein of which he is an inhabitant or resident. Act Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, § 1, 25 St. 433 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508). Id.

27. Clause of judiciary act providing that where jurisdiction is based solely on diversity of citizenship suit shall be brought only in the district of the residence of either plaintiff or defendant relates only to suits between citizens of different states of the Union. Miller v. New York, etc., R. Co., 147 F. 771.

28. A suit to foreclose trust deeds is within the prohibition of the act of August 13, 1888 (25 St. 434, c. 866, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508), § 1, though bill also prays for cancellation of a release of the deeds to grantor in fraud of complainant's rights. Kolze v. Hoadley, 200 U. S. 76, 50 Law. Ed. 377.

29. That defendant's treasurer to whom a promissory note sued on was made payable was a citizen of the same state as defendant did not prevent a nonresident from suing on the note where the note was indorsed to plaintiff before delivery and the consideration was paid by plaintiff directly to defendant. Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 400, 50 Law. Ed. 801. An original beneficial owner can sue upon a note in a Federal court though an original but nominal payee by reason of his citizenship would have no such right. Kirven v. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 288.

30. Under Act July 1, 1898 (30 St. 552, c. 541, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3431), § 23. Bush v. Elliott, 202 U. S. 477, 50 Law. Ed. 1114.

31. Where partners organized a corporation for the purpose of getting their separate interests in the form of collateral and to prevent partnership affairs going into court in case of death, the transfer was not colorable and collusive for the purpose of bringing into the Federal court a suit to quiet title to land constituting but a small part of the property. Slaughter v. Mallet Land & Cattle Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 282. To establish a claim that a suit in a Federal court by a nonresident stockholder of a local corporation against a city and the corporation to enjoin the enforcement of an ordinance is in fraud of the jurisdiction of the court, it is not sufficient that the company would be benefited by complainant's success, or that its officers express a wish for his success, or that his counsel represented the company in a prior suit brought by it. An agreement

fer of property will, however, not be inquired into if the transferror retains no interest.[32] In suits ancillary to litigation already pending, the citizenship of the parties is immaterial.[33]

(§ 11) C. As affected by existence of Federal question.[34]—A Federal question exists whenever a Federal statute,[35] a treaty, or the Federal constitution[36] is to be con-

between complainant and the company pursuant to which the suit was brought must be shown either directly or inferentially. Mills v. Chicago, 143 F. 430.

32. The fact that property is assigned to enable a nonresident to bring suit in a Federal court does not prevent the attaching of jurisdiction where the vendor does not reserve any right to a reconveyance and plaintiff is the real party in interest. Cole v. Philadelphia & E. R. Co., 140 F. 944.

33. Where a Federal court once acquires jurisdiction by reason of diverse citizenship of a suit against a railway company and has appointed a receiver, it does not lose jurisdiction when other parties interested in the property intervene and are made parties, even though some of them be citizens of the same state with those whose interests in the property are adverse to the interveners. Cole v. Philadelphia & E. R. Co., 140 F. 944. A suit in equity in a Federal court to enjoin the further prosecution of actions at law pending therein and of which the court has jurisdiction by reason of diversity of citizenship, and to enable complainant to make his defense, is ancillary thereto and within the jurisdiction of the court regardless of the citizenship of parties joined as defendants. South Penn Oil Co. v. Calf Creek Oil & Gas Co., 140 F. 507. A suit on the equity side of a Federal court to set aside a judgment of dismissal entered on the law side of the same court is ancillary to the action at law and within the jurisdiction of the court without regard to the citizenship of the parties. O'Connor v. O'Connor, 146 F. 994.

Cross bills beween defendants in a Federal suit to determine rights in the waters of a stream of which the court has jurisdiction by reason of diversity of citizenship between complainant and defendants are ancillary to the original suit and within the court's jurisdiction without regard to the citizenship of the parties thereto. Miller v. Rickey, 146 F. 574; Ames Realty Co. v. Big Indian Min. Co., 146 F. 166. That some of the cross bills were not filed until after service upon the parties in a suit brought by defendant in a state court after institution of the original suit in the Federal court did not affect the jurisdiction of the Federal court. Miller v. Rickey, 146 F. 574. Where a Federal court has jurisdiction of a suit against several defendants and plaintiff's relief is granted, but the case is retained for a determination of matters arising on a cross bill and growing directly out of matters involved in the original suit, jurisdiction is still retained and is not affected by the citizenship of the parties to the cross bill. Suit against grantor and grantees to set aside a conveyance and cross bill by latter against former. Craig v. Dorr [C. C. A.] 145 F. 307.

35. Federal question involved: Contention on part of railway company in suit for infection of cattle that the statute pursuant to which certain quarantine regulations were made was unconstitutional, and if constitutional did not authorize the secretary of agriculture to make the rules in question. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. McKendree, 27 S. Ct. 153. Bill filed by holder of nonnegotiable note given by a bank which afterwards went into voluntary liquidation to exact stockholders' liability enforceable under Act June 30, 1876 (19 St. 63, c. 156, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3509), § 2. Wyman v. Wallace, 201 U. S. 230, 50 Law. Ed. 738.

Not involved: In ejectment, the mere fact that plaintiff's title is derived from an act of congress does not show a Federal question. Joy v. St. Louis, 201 U. S. 332, 50 Law. Ed. 776. A state suit for maliciously prosecuting a Federal trade mark suit does not in deciding for defendant imply that the trade mark suit was with probable cause; and if it did does not thereby raise a Federal question by withholding full faith and credit from the Federal decree which dismissed the trade mark suit on the merits, for a decree that there was no sufficient cause for the relief sought involves no decision that there was or was not probable cause. Burt v. Smith, 27 S. Ct. 37. The doctrine of the "Removal Cases" (115 U. S. 1, 5 Sup. Ct. 1113, 29 L. Ed. 319), that the fact that a corporation is created by act of congress makes a case arising under the laws of the United States should not be extended so as to apply to a defendant who is a mere servant of such corporation, and the circuit court has no jurisdiction of an action against an employer and an employee for the latter's negligence solely because the employer is a corporation created by act of congress. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Huber [Tex.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 642, 92 S. W. 832.

36. Federal question involved: Bill to restrain municipal construction of water system on ground that it would impair obligation of contract held by complainant with municipality. Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 200 U. S. 22, 50 Law. Ed. 353; Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. v. Columbus, 27 S. Ct. 83; City of Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co., 202 U. S. 453, 50 Law. Ed. 1102. Suit to enjoin state officers from exercising powers conferred on them by a state statute where the ground of suit was that the action of the officers violated complainant's property rights under the Federal constitution. Douglas Park Jockey Club v. Grainger, 146 F. 414. Suit to enjoin the enforcement of an ordinance requiring a street railroad company to carry passengers without pay, where it was alleged that the ordinance deprived the company of its property without due process of law. Chicago City R. Co. v. Chicago, 142 F. 844. Bill by telephone company to enjoin unreasonable maximum telephone rates fixed by city under authority conferred by the legislature, alleging that complainant would be deprived of property without due strued, or its effect or operation is involved, but not if the question is a local one[37] or involves only the state constitutions or statutes.[38] The suit must really and substantially involve a dispute as to the effect or construction of the constitution or some law or treaty of the United States,[39] and this must appear from plaintiff's statement of his own claim and cannot be aided by allegations as to defenses which might be interposed.[40] In addition to a Federal question, the jurisdictional amount must also be involved.[41]

(§ 11) D. Averments and objections as to jurisdiction.[42]—The jurisdictional fact of diversity of citizenship,[43] amount in controversy,[44] or existence of a Federal process of law, though it also averred as a legal conclusion that ordinance also violated state constitution prohibiting impairment of freedom of contract. Ozark-Bell Tel. Co. v. Springfield, 140 F. 666.

Not involved: Assertion of invalidity under Federal constitution of certain statutes and ordinances alleged to constitute cloud on title which bill seeks to remove. Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313, 50 Law. Ed. 1046. Averments that grantees of land from Spain and Mexico whose titles had been confirmed by the United States were deprived of their property without due process, and that contract obligations were impaired by certain state statutes and a city charter which conferred upon defendant city only such rights as might have been vested in the state. Id. Suit to enjoin diversion by municipality of funds collected by it under legislative sanction, for a specific object, on theory that such diversion may cause increased taxation and thus deprive taxpayers of property without due process of law. Owensboro Water Works Co. v. Owensboro, 200 U. S. 38, 50 Law. Ed. 361.

37. Local questions: In ejectment where plaintiff claimed title to certain land under a patent from the United States and certain acts of congress, but petition showed that real controversy was whether plaintiff was entitled to accretions formed long after issuance of patent and passage of the acts. Joy v. St. Louis, 201 U. S. 332, 50 Law. Ed. 776. Nature and extent of riparian rights and rights in percolating waters of grantees of land from Spain and Mexico whose titles had been confirmed by the United States. Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313, 50 Law. Ed. 1046. A defense in an action by a state to recover land, so far as based upon a Spanish grant involved no Federal question, where neither the validity of any treaty nor of the grant was challenged. O'Conor v. Texas, 202 U. S. 501, 50 Law. Ed. 1120. What facts constitute a common-law marriage. Keen v. Keen, 201 U. S. 319, 50 Law. Ed. 772.

38. Questions respecting the construction of state statutes on which title to land depended held not to present Federal question reviewable by supreme court on error to state court. O'Conor v. Texas, 202 U. S. 501, 50 Law. Ed. 1120.

39. Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313, 50 Law. Ed. 1046; Montana Catholic Missions v. Missoula County, 200 U. S. 118, 50 Law. Ed. 398. Complaint in action to recover state taxes paid on cattle kept by a Jesuit society on an Indian reservation held not to show the existence of any Federal question, either on the theory that the beneficial ownership of the cattle was in the Indians or that the government by appropriations or otherwise had made complainant its agent to carry out its obligations to the Indians. Montana Catholic Missions v. Missoula County, 200 U. S. 118, 50 Law. Ed. 398. Carrier sued for loss of goods could not inject Federal question into case so as to confer appellate jurisdiction upon United States supreme court by contending that plaintiff having accepted a bill of lading limiting defendant's liability he must be presumed to know that only a reduced rate would be charged pursuant to schedules filed with Interstate Commerce Commission, and that any other construction of the contract would violate the Federal constitution. Phoenix Powder Mfg. Co. v. Wabash R. Co., 196 Mo. 663, 94 S. W. 235. Contention that proceedings under Conn. Pub. Laws, §§ 3694, 3995, by a railway company to condemn shares of stock of owner who refused to agree to the terms of a purchase, violated due process of law clause of Federal constitution and impaired contract obligations held not so frivolous as to justify dismissal of error to state court. Offield v. New York, etc., R. Co., 27 S. Ct. 72. Question whether California legislature could ratify conveyances made by the city of Monterey of pueblo lands, and afterwards patented to plaintiff, held not so far unsubstantial as to justify dismissal. City of Monterey v. Jacks, 27 S. Ct. 67.

40. In suit to quiet title under Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 738, allegations that defendant's claims were based upon an erroneous construction of a treaty, certain acts of Congress, and the legislature of California, and the ordinances and charters of a city, did not give circuit court jurisdiction. Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313, 50 Law. Ed. 1046.

41. Shewalter v. Lexington, 143 F. 161. See ante, § 6.

42. See 6 C. L. 304.

43. Where in a suit against certain labor associations and its members to restrain a boycott the individual numbers were designated as citizens of the state, the naming of the associations as such and not as corporations was sufficient. Seattle Brew. & Malting Co. v. Hansen, 144 F. 1011. Allegation that plaintiff was "a resident of Washington and a citizen of Sweden" held to sufficiently allege plaintiff's alienage so as to sustain the jurisdiction of the circuit court, though Sweden was under a monarchial form of government, since the statement "citizen of Sweden" could refer only to plaintiff's nationality. Nichols Lumber Co. v. Franson, 27 S. Ct. 102.

question, must be distinctly alleged and not left to mere argument or inference. An averment of residence is not equivalent to one of citizenship,[45] but an allegation that plaintiff is a citizen of the United States and a resident of a certain state is a sufficient allegation of his citizenship in such state.[46] An amendment to show citizenship must allege its existence not only at the time the amendment is filed but also at the time the action was commenced.[47] The fact that a Federal question is involved must appear from a legal and logical statement of the facts such as is required in good pleading,[48] and it is not sufficient for a plaintiff to merely assert that the defense raises or will raise such question.[49] An allegation of jurisdictional facts is prima facie true and the burden is upon the opposing party both to allege and prove facts relied upon to defeat the jurisdiction.[50] A bill in equity filed in a Federal court and the issue of process thereon, and not the opinion or order of the court, determine the extent of the jurisdiction acquired.[51]

The removal of a cause does not preclude a defendant from challenging in the Federal court the jurisdiction of either the state or the Federal court over his person.[52] The right of a defendant to be sued only in the district of his residence when jurisdiction is founded only on diversity of citizenship is a personal privilege which he may waive[53] and does waive by removing a state action into the Federal court of another district,[54] but this rule is inapplicable where no personal jurisdiction is acquired in the state court and there is only a special appearance for the sole purpose of removal.[55] A defendant who is sued in his own state by a nonresident plaintiff cannot object to the jurisdiction of the court on the ground that a codefendant is being sued in a state other than that of his residence,[56] and the codefendant not being a necessary party, the fact that he is not served and does not appear does not affect the jurisdiction over defendant.[57]

44. Averments as to value of land held argumentative and to leave the court to make a calculation so as not to give jurisdiction. Dupree v. Leggette, 140 F. 776.

45. Averment of residence of plaintiff is not equivalent to averment of citizenship and does not give circuit court jurisdiction. Sanbo v. Union Pac. Coal Co. [C. C. A.] 140 F. 713.

46. Under fourteenth amendment to constitution. Clausen v. American Ice Co., 144 F. 723.

47. Sanbo v. Union Pac. Coal Co., 146 F. 80.

48. Where cause of action in ejectment did not show Federal question. Joy v. St. Louis, 201 U. S. 332, 50 Law. Ed. 776.

49. Not sufficient in ejectment to assert that construction of a patent and certain acts of Congress was in dispute where cause of action did not show a Federal question. Joy v. St. Louis, 201 U. S. 332, 50 Law. Ed. 776.

50. Gaddie v. Mann, 147 F. 955. Where complainant alleged citizenship in North Carolina and it was shown that he was a native of that state, had a family there, etc., evidence that he had been in Georgia in business, had taken part in a political meeting and voted at a party primary, held insufficient to defeat jurisdiction. Id. Proper allegation of plaintiff's citizenship can be controverted only by suitable pleading supported by proof. Every Evening Print. Co. v. Butler [C. C. A.] 144 F. 916. To justify the removal to a Federal court of a cause in which a citizen defendant against whom no cause of action is stated is joined with a noncitizen, defendant must allege facts showing a fraudulent joinder. Eastin v. Texas & P. R. Co. [Tex.] 92 S. W. 838.

Contra: Where jurisdictional facts are put in issue, the burden is upon the alleging party to prove them. Amount in controversy. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Shell, 143 F. 1004.

52. Davis v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 146 F. 403.

53. Morris v. Clark Const. Co., 140 F. 756. Jurisdiction on account of diversity of citizenship is conferred on the circuit court by the first part of Act March 3, 1887, c. 373, § 1, 24 St. 552 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 508), the second part relating merely to the place where the jurisdiction may be exercised and is a mere personal exemption granted to defendant which he may waive. Iowa Lillooet Gold Min. Co. v. Bliss, 144 F. 446. A defendant who appears generally in the circuit court without claiming the benefit of his privilege to be sued in the district of his residence thereby waives his exemption. Id.

54. Where plaintiff was alien and defendant a foreign corporation. Morris v. Clark Const. Co., 140 F. 756. Removal from state to national court or joinder of objection to district with general demurrer waives objection that suit is pending in wrong district. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Woodson County Com'rs [C. C. A.] 145 F. 144.

55. Applied on motion in Federal court to

Jurisdictional facts should be determined on an issue taken by plea with opportunity to both parties to adduce evidence in the regular way rather than on motion and ex parte affidavits.[58] In equity they may be put in issue by answer.[59]

§ 12. Federal appellate jurisdiction. A. Inquiry into jurisdiction.[60]—When it affirmatively appears that a subordinate Federal court has attemped to assume jurisdiction of a cause by removal from a state court without authority under any act of congress, orders of such court in furtherance of the removal will be reversed by the supreme court, and mandamus will be granted to compel such court to remand the cause.[61]

(§ 12) B. Appeals between Federal courts.[62]—An appeal lies directly to the supreme court in cases in which the jurisdiction of the circuit or district court is in issue,[63] or those involving the construction or application of the Federal constitution;[64] but if in addition to a constitutional question the case involves the construction of an act of congress,[65] or the jurisdiction of the lower court is grounded upon diversity of citizenship,[66] the jurisdiction of the supreme court is not exclusive but an appeal may be taken to the court of appeals. In certain private land claim cases an appeal is required to be taken directly to the United States supreme court if the decision is against the United States.[67]

quash writ of attachment issued in state court. Davis v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 146 F. 403.

56, 57. Schiffer v. Anderson [C. C. A.] 146 F. 457.

58. Diversity of citizenship. Gaddie v. Mann, 147 F. 955. Under the Kentucky practice the objection of a defendant to the maintenance of an action against him in a Federal court on the ground that neither he nor plaintiff is a resident of the district may be taken by demurrer where the facts appear on the face of the petition. Tice v. Hurley, 145 F. 391.

59. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Shell, 143 F. 1004.

60. See 6 C. L. 306.

61. Commonwealth v. Powers, 201 U. S. 1, 50 Law. Ed. 633.

62. See 6 C. L. 307.

63. Where a demurrer to a bill in the circuit court assigned as grounds want of jurisdiction as a Federal court because neither diversity of citizenship nor any Federal question was disclosed and also want of "jurisdiction" for lack of equity in the bill, a decree dismissing the bill "for want of jurisdiction" must be construed to refer to real jurisdictional grounds and an appeal lies to the supreme court and not to the circuit court. Crawford v. McCarthy [C. C. A.] 148 F. 198. The circuit court of appeals has no jurisdiction to review a decision of the circuit court to the effect that it has no jurisdiction of an action (Campbell v. Golden Cycle Min. Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 610), but it may review a judgment for defendant on the merits rendered after jurisdiction has been sustained (Id.). Decree of dismissal without more is a decree that the court has jurisdiction and is reviewable by circuit court of appeals. Id. Under Act March 3, 1891 (26 St. 826, c. 517, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 488), the supreme court, on a direct review of the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court, may consider the certificate of the latter court for the purpose of supplying the failure of the record to show when and how the question of jurisdiction was raised (Nichols Lumber Co. v. Franson, 27 S. Ct. 102), but may not consider statements therein for the purpose of supplying elements of decision which it could not properly consider in an action at law without a bill of exceptions (Id.). It is better practice, however, to make apparent on the record the fact that the question of jurisdiction was raised and the elements upon which the decision of the question was based. Id.

64. A constitutional question must be real and substantial to establish a right to a direct appeal to the supreme court. Harris v. Rosenberger [C. C. A.] 145 F. 449. After it has once been directly determined by this court, it is no longer real and substantial. Id.

65. Where a suit though not one of diversity of citizenship depends not only upon a constitutional question but also upon the proper construction of an act of congress, the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court is not exclusive (Harris v. Rosenberger [C. C. A.] 145 F. 449), but an appeal may be taken to the court of appeals (Id.).

66. Where the jurisdiction of the circuit court is grounded both upon diversity of citizenship and upon an independent constitutional question, the losing party may appeal to the circuit court of appeals and is not bound to resort directly to the supreme court. Mississippi R. Commission v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 27 S. Ct. 90. Where it was alleged that a state statute violated Federal constitution. Love v. Busch [C. C. A.] 142 F. 429.

67. The appeal required by the act of June 22, 1860 (12 St. 85, 87, c. 188), § 11, to be taken to the supreme court of the United States if the decree is against the United States, is "otherwise provided by law" within Act March 3, 1891 (26 St. 828, c. 517, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 550), § 6, making the circuit court of appeals the proper tribunal for review of final decisions of dis-

Judgments or decrees of the supreme court of the District of Columbia or of any of the territories of the United States in which is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States, may be reviewed by the supreme court without regard to the sum or value in dispute,[68] providing there is a matter in dispute measurable by some sum or value in money.[69] The supreme court may review the final judgments of the Federal district court of Porto Rico in cases where a right claimed under an act of congress is denied.[70] An appeal lies from the supreme court of Arizona to the Federal supreme court in a habeas corpus proceeding only when the decision involves the question of personal freedom.[71]

The circuit court of appeals now has jurisdiction to review an interlocutory order granting or continuing an injunction or appointing a receiver, though it would not have jurisdiction of a final decree in the cause.[72] It has power under the bankruptcy act to superintend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy.[73] It has jurisdiction to review judgments of the supreme court of the territory of New Mexico in cases of conviction of crime not capital,[74] but criminal cases are reviewable by writ of error and not by appeal.[75] No appeal lies from a final order of the court of appeals to the supreme court where there is no amount in controversy.[76]

trict court except, among other cases, "where it is otherwise provided by law." United States v. Dalcour, 27 S. Ct. 58.

68. A controversy as to the constitutional right of a territorial legislature to pass a specified law under the broad powers conferred by congress involves the validity of an authority exercised under the United States within Act March 3, 1885 (23 St. 443, c. 355, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 572), § 2, defining the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal supreme court over the supreme courts of the territories. Territory of New Mexico v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 27 S. Ct. 1. The validity of an authority exercised under the United States is not drawn in question so as to become the basis of an appeal by a contention which goes only to the manner in which it was exercised. That requisite formalities prescribed for plaintiff's dismissal from classified civil service were not complied with did not sustain error to court of appeals of District of Columbia under Code D. C. § 233. United States v. Taft, 27 S. Ct. 148. On appeal from the supreme court of a territory, the jurisdiction of the supreme court of the United States is limited to a determination of whether the findings of fact support the judgment, in the absence of exceptions duly taken to rulings on the admission or rejection of evidence. Herrick v. Boquillas Land & Cattle Co., 200 U. S. 96, 50 Law. Ed. 388.

69. No appeal or error lies unless there is a matter in dispute measurable by some sum or value in money. Both sections of the act of March 3, 1885, c. 355, 23 St. 443, apply to cases where there is a matter in dispute measurable by some sum or value in money, although the amount is immaterial under § 2. Albright v. New Mexico, 200 U. S. 9, 50 Law. Ed. 346. Some sum or value must be in dispute. Territory of New Mexico v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 27 S. Ct. 1. Right of consignor to have a consignment shipped by a common carrier is measurable in money. Id. Liability to a fine on judgment of ouster in quo warranto, or the effect of such judgment in subsequent litigation over the emoluments of the office, does not make the matter in dispute in the quo warranto proceedings measurable by some sum or value in money. Albright v. New Mexico, 200 U. S. 9, 50 Law. Ed. 346.

70. Ruling of United district court of Porto Rico that recovery in an action should not be limited by a provision in the Porto Rico Civil Code held not a denial of a right claimed under a United States law on theory that such provision became a law of the United States by reason of the act of April 12, 1900 (31 St. 77, c. 91), § 8, continuing local laws in force. Ortega v. Lara, 202 U. S. 339, 50 Law. Ed. 1055.

71. A determination on habeas corpus as to who is the proper custodian of a child is not a decision "involving the question of personal freedom" so as to authorize an appeal. Under Rev. St. § 1909. New York Foundling Hospital v. Gatti, 27 S. Ct. 53.

72. Act Apr. 14, 1906, c. 1627, 34 St. 116, amending § 7 of Act March 3, 1891, 26 St. 828 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 550). Where jurisdiction of circuit court was based entirely on existence of Federal question. Grainger v. Douglas Park Jockey Club [C. C. A.] 148 F. 513.

73. Question of validity of trust deed arising in bankruptcy proceedings in determining priority of claims held reviewable on petition to superintend and revise and not by appeal. Morgan v. First Nat. Bank [C. C. A.] 145 F. 466.

74, 75. Sena v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 147 F. 485.

76. Not from order of discharge on cer-

The general rule that the Federal courts have no jurisdiction of the subjects of divorce and alimony does not preclude an appeal under the statute relating to appeals from the supreme court of the Philippine Islands to review a decree denying divorce, alimony, and a division of the conjugal property.[78]

(§ 12) C. Control over state courts.[79]—Final judgments of the highest court of a state in which a decision in the suit could be had[80] where any title, right, privilege, or immunity is claimed under the constitution or statutes of the United States,[81] and the decision is against such rights specially set up and claimed,[82] may be reviewed by writ of error in the Federal supreme court.[83] The failure of a state court to pass upon a Federal question specially presented and relied upon does not defeat the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal supreme court if the necessary effect of the decision is to deny a Federal right, which, if recognized, would require a different judgment.[84] While the certificate of the state court may not import into the record a Federal question which in fact did not arise, it may serve to elucidate the determination of the existence of a Federal question.[85]

tiorari and habeas corpus. Whitney v. Dick, 202 U. S. 132, 50 Law. Ed. 963.

77. Hatch v. Curtin, 146 F. 200. And suit by adverse claimant of property against trustee in bankruptcy is expressly excluded by Bankruptcy Act where court would not have had jurisdiction if suit had been against bankrupt. Id.

78. Where alimony pendente lite and complainant's share of property amounted to over $25,000, appeal lay under act of July 1, 1902, § 10 (32 St. 691-695, c. 1369, U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1905, p. 154). De La Rama v. De La Rama, 201 U. S. 303, 50 Law. Ed. 765. Where in such case the correctness of the denial of alimony and of a separation of the property cannot be determined without passing upon the weight of the evidence on which divorce was refused, the supreme court will review such evidence where the appeal is taken from the whole case. Id.

80. An inferior state court is the final court of a state where a Federal question can be decided, and is therefore the court to which error must be directed from the Federal supreme court where the highest state court dismisses an appeal to it solely for want of jurisdiction, even though it also considers the question and declares it to be without merit. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hughes, 27 S. Ct. 162.

81. A party who insists that judgment cannot be rendered against him consistently with the statutes of the United States may be fairly held to assert a right and immunity under such statutes within Rev. St. § 709, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 575, providing for a writ of error from the Federal supreme court to the highest court of a state, though he may have a personal or affirmative right enforceable by direct action against his adversary. Contention that assignment of contract sued on was void under Federal statute. Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 50 Law. Ed. 348; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. McKendree, 27 S. Ct. 153. Suit by trustee in bankruptcy to recover assets under bankruptcy law. Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co., 200 U. S. 405, 50 Law. Ed. 527.

82. A mere claim of right under the Federal constitution in objections to confirmation of an assessment, never afterwards brought to attention of trial or supreme court of the state is not sufficient to sustain error from United States supreme court. Hulbert v. Chicago, 202 U. S. 275, 50 Law. Ed. 1026. Statement in writ of error and petition for citation that certain rights and privileges were claimed under United States constitution and that state court decided against such rights held insufficient. Id. That chief justice of state court allowed the writ did not avail. Id. Federal questions which may be disregarded by highest state court either because not assigned or relied upon in argument will not serve as basis for error from Federal supreme court. Id. Contention that state court failed to give full faith and credit to Federal decree could not sustain error to supreme court where record failed to show such claim in state court. Burt v. Smith, 27 S. Ct. 37. Showing at every stage of litigation in state courts of intention of national bank to rely on Federal statute for immunity from liability as owner of shares in a partnership held sufficient to sustain appellate jurisdiction of United States supreme court, though bank did not in first instance anticipate the form in which immunity was finally denied, especially where state court certified that Federal question was involved. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Wehrmann, 202 U. S. 295, 50 Law. Ed. 1036.

83. A writ of error will lie from the supreme court of the United States to review the final judgment of a subordinate state court denying a Federal right specially set up or claimed if that court is the highest court of the state entitled to pass upon such claim of Federal right. Commonwealth v. Powers, 201 U. S. 1, 50 Law. Ed. 633.

84. Failure of state court to consider contention that acts of drainage commissioners would deprive defendant of property and deny equal protection of laws. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 200 U. S. 561, 50 Law. Ed. 596. Where street railway contended that city could not compel lowering or removal of a tunnel without impairing contract and depriving company of property. West Chicago St. R. Co. v. People, 201 U. S. 506, 50 Law. Ed. 845.

§ 13. Acquisition and divestiture.[86]—Jurisdiction is acquired by process or appearance. Process includes both personal and constructive service and judicial process against the res.[87] In suits in rem or quasi in rem, personal service within the jurisdiction is not necessary,[88] but the adjudication can affect only the res[89] and there can be no judgment in personam,[90] except in so far as the person is affected by the judgment in rem.[91] Constructive service may be had in a Federal court when the suit is one to enforce a lien upon or claim to property,[92] or to remove an incumbrance or cloud upon its title,[93] and in an ancillary suit, parties or privies in the original action may be served though they reside beyond the limits of the district.[94] Constructive service must be complete in order to give jurisdiction.[95] Jurisdiction acquired by process relates only to the cause of action alleged and not

85. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. McKendree, 27 S. Ct. 153; Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co., 200 U. S. 405, 50 Law. Ed. 527. Held to make clear the fact that rights under bankrupt law were relied on and passed upon by state court in action by trustee in bankruptcy to recover assets alleged to belong to estate. Id. A certificate by the highest court of a state that a Federal question was raised and necessarily considered will sustain a writ of error to the United States supreme court as against an objection that the question was raised too late under the local procedure. Cincinnati, etc., Packet Co. v. Bay, 200 U. S. 179, 50 Law. Ed. 428.

86. See 6 C. L. 309. For manner of obtaining jurisdiction over corporations, see Corporations, 7 C. L. 862.

87. See Process, 6 C. L. 1078.

88. A decree for specific performance, acting upon the land itself, may be based upon service by publication. Clem v. Given's Ex'r [Va.] 55 S. E. 567. Upon removal by defendant of a cause to a Federal court, want of personal jurisdiction both in the state and Federal courts does not deprive the latter court of jurisdiction to render a judgment in rem by virtue of an attachment in the state court. Attachment lien preserved by Act March 3, 1875. Clark v. Wells, 27 S. Ct. 43.

89. Where substituted service is properly made under Municipal Court Act, Laws 1902, p. 1517, c. 580, § 83, in an attachment proceeding, the court may render judgment against defendant though he has not personally appeared but such judgment can be satisfied only out of the property attached. Dixon v. Carrucci, 49 Misc. 222, 97 N. Y. S. 380. General judgment against nonresident defendant based solely on attachment of real estate held effective only so far as relating to the property attached. May v. Getty, 140 N. C. 310, 53 S. E. 75.

90. Where Federal court had jurisdiction only by virtue of attachment in a state court it could not render a judgment in personam. Clark v. Wells, 27 S. Ct. 43. A libelant who has attached a foreign vessel on a bill in rem based on a claim which does not constitute a maritime lien cannot convert such libel by amendment into one in personam and proceed against the owner thereon where no monition was served and the owner has not entered a general appearance. The Lowlands, 147 F. 986.

91. In suit between partners to divide real property located within the state, court had jurisdiction to direct payment of amount found due plaintiff out of the undivided one-half of the property the title of which was independent, though the latter was a nonresident and made no appearance. Williams v. Williams, 221 Ill. 541, 77 N. E. 928.

92. To authorize a suit under Judiciary Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 8, 18 St. 472 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 513), to enforce a lien upon or claim to property or to remove an incumbrance or cloud upon its title after giving notice to nonresident defendants by order of court, the suit must be one directed primarily against specific property within the district and, if to enforce a lien, the lien must exist when suit is brought and must not be one sought to be created thereby. Jones v. Gould, 141 F. 698. Suit held to be primarily against certain syndicates for failure to perform their duty and not against property within the district purchased with plaintiff's money under the syndicate agreement and the syndicates being nonresidents, the court was without jurisdiction. Id.

93. A suit by a receiver to adjust equities existing between himself and nonresident defendants in whose behalf another defendant had obtained a judgment in his own name, which he is seeking to enforce against a fund in the receiver's hands, is one to remove an "incumbrance or lien or cloud upon the title to property within the district" within § 8, Act March 3, 1875, 18 St. 472, c. 137 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 513), and in which substituted service may be made upon the nonresident defendants as provided therein. Brown v. Pegram, 143 F. 701.

94. Where defendants in a suit on the equity side of a Federal court to set aside a judgment of dismissal entered on the law side of the same court were parties to the original action or in privity with them, service could be made upon them though they resided beyond the limits of the district. O'Connor v. O'Connor, 146 F. 994.

95. Where the papers on which an order allowing substituted service were not filed the required length of time before return day of the summons, the court acquired no jurisdiction. Stephens v. Molloy, 50 Misc. 518, 99 N. Y. S. 385. In an action against a nonresident upon substituted service only, the court acquires no jurisdiction of property within the state not seized by any process, unless such property is described in the moving papers upon which the order of publication is based. Disconto Gesellschaft v. Umbreit, 127 Wis. 651, 106 N. W. 821.

to matters constituting a new cause.[96] Personal service within the jurisdiction[97] or general voluntary appearance only can give jurisdiction in personam.[98] The necessity of process as notice may be waived.[99] While jurisdiction of the person may be conferred by the acts or consent of the parties,[1] jurisdiction of the subject-matter cannot be so conferred.[2]

96. Amendment held no new cause of action. Moore's Guardian v. Robinson, 29 Ky. L. R. 43, 91 S. W. 659.

97. See Process, 6 C. L. 1078. No valid judgment in personam can be rendered against a defendant without personal service upon him in a court of competent jurisdiction, or waiver of summons and voluntary appearance therein. Clark v. Wells, 27 S. Ct. 43. A personal judgment against a nonresident rendered by default on constructive service is void. Record held to show void judgment. Lutcher v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 149, 95 S. W. 672. Court held without authority to appoint guardian ad litem for infant defendant in partition not properly served with process, and judgment as to him was void. McMurtry v. Fairley, 194 Mo. 502, 91 S. W. 902. Court of Delaware could not acquire jurisdiction by constructive service over nonresidents who were representatives of one who was trustee under a will but not by order of any court. Martin v. Martin, 214 Pa. 389, 63 A. 1026. Nonresident not served and not a party to receivership proceedings except as represented by the corporation not conclusively bound by order assessing his stockholder's liability and professing to charge him with an obligation which he never assumed. Converse v. Aetna Nat. Bank [Conn.] 64 A. 341. A personal judgment for money only against a nonresident without personal service of process within the state where defendant did not appear in the action, is without any validity; and where the record of said judgment contains an affirmative finding that the service was by publication, and no statement that the court otherwise acquired jurisdiction over him, said record cannot be contradicted by evidence aliunde. Leman v. MacLennan, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 205. A judgment in personam in Nebraska against a citizen of Iowa is not authorized on personal service in Iowa. Bank of Horton v. Knox [Iowa] 109 N. W. 201.

98. See, also, Appearance, 7 C. L. 251. County court has jurisdiction of the persons of heirs who enter a personal appearance in proceedings to probate a will and expressly consent to the admission of the instrument offered as the last will of testator. Camplin v. Jackson, 34 Colo. 447, 83 P. 1017. Where court had jurisdiction of subject-matter and record recited that defendant appeared by counsel, the court prima facie had jurisdiction to enter judgment. Everett v. Wilson, 34 Colo. 476, 83 P. 211. The question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court to hear an appeal from a justice of the peace arising from the absence of one of the defendants cannot be raised by another defendant who entered a general appearance and took part in the trial, especially where the question is raised for the first time in the appellate court. Goode v. Illinois Tr. & Sav. Bank, 121 Ill. App. 161. Jurisdiction of a defendant cannot be questioned on appeal where defendant has demurred to and answered the bill in the cause. Rosenbleet v. Rosenbleet, 122 Ill. App. 408. Where by appearance defendant waived objection to jurisdiction in personam and as to the subject-matter the suit could be brought before any justice in the county, the justice thereby obtained jurisdiction of both defendant and the subject matter. Thompson v. Wood [Ind. T.] 91 S. W. 36. A defendant not served may not make a special appearance to resist an interlocutory order and then say that he was not in court for the purpose of a judgment on the merits. Blondel v. Ohlman [Iowa] 109 N. W. 806. Where the parties to a cause pending in justice court by consent transfer it to the district court before judgment, their appearance in such court confers jurisdiction of the cause. Farmers' Mut. Tel. Co. v. Howell [Iowa] 109 N. W. 294. Where one was not made defendant in justice court but was served and appeared in the county court after an appeal thereto and pleaded to the jurisdiction of the justice on the ground that the amount involved was too great, he could not attack collaterally the judgment rendered against him in the county court on the ground that this court had no jurisdiction of his person. Artusy v. Houston Ice & Brew. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 312, 94 S. W. 1106. Where one appears specially and objects to the jurisdiction of the court over his person and his objection is overruled, he does not waive his objection by answering and proceeding to trial (Austin Mfg. Co. v. Hunter, 16 Okl. 86, 86 P. 293; Stephens v. Molloy, 50 Misc. 518, 99 N. Y. S. 385; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Clark [Okl.] 87 P. 430), but if he files a cross petition asking affirmative relief against plaintiff, he submits himself to the jurisdiction for the purposes of the entire action (Austin Mfg. Co. v. Hunter, 16 Okl. 86, 86 P. 293). A special appearance in a state court for the sole purpose of removing the case to a Federal court does not submit the person of a defendant who was not served to the jurisdiction of the state court, nor, upon removal to the Federal court, deprive him of the right to object to the manner of service upon him in that court. Clark v. Wells, 27 S. Ct. 43.

99. Held waived where note embodied a power of attorney authorizing an appearance and confession of judgment on failure to pay note at maturity. Hutchinson v. Palmer [Ala.] 40 So. 339. See Confession of Judgment, 7 C. L. 676.

1. When court has jurisdiction of subject-matter. State v. Fuller [Ala.] 41 So. 990. Where parties consented to transfer a cause from justice to district court before judgment and appeared in district court. Farmers' Mut. Tel. Co. v. Howell [Iowa] 109 N. W. 294. Voluntary appearance and making defense held waiver by express company of ob-

Special proceedings[3] and proceedings in courts of limited jurisdiction[4] must conform strictly to statute in order that jurisdiction may be conferred. When causes are transferred from one judicial district to another[5] or new judicial districts are established, the effect upon the jurisdictions involved depends upon the statute under which the change is made.[6]

Divestiture may be by ouster, termination, or suspension. Ouster of jurisdiction occurs when any plea or condition intervenes which takes it away,[7] transfers it, or shows reasons why it should be transferred to some other court.[8] jection to jurisdiction on ground that suit was brought in wrong county where court had jurisdiction of subject-matter. Southern Exp. Co. v. B. R. Elec. Co. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 254. After joinder of issue by judgment by default, an exception to the jurisdiction of the court, ratione personae, comes too late. Code Prac. art. 333. West v. Lehmer, 115 La. 213, 38 So. 969. Jurisdiction of person of initial carrier held waived by letter stating that no point would be raised thereon. Farmers' Bank v. St. Louis & H. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 1, 95 S. W. 286.

2. Weinstein v. Douglas, 101 N. Y. S. 251; City of Baltimore v. Meredith's Ford & Jarrettsville Turnpike Co. [Md.] 65 A. 35. Parties cannot confer upon an appellate court jurisdiction by stipulation extending the time for appeal. Anderson v. Halthusen Merc. Co. [Utah] 83 P. 560. If a court has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter, a general appearance of the parties cannot confer jurisdiction upon the court to hear and determine the cause. Murphy v. People, 221 Ill. 127, 77 N. E. 439. Where the record did not show that a justice of the peace had jurisdiction of the subject-matter, the defect was not waived by defendant's appearance. Barnes v. Plessner [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 626. Trustee in bankruptcy did not waive objection to jurisdiction of state court over subject-matter by answering over and asking affirmative relief after his demurrer to the jurisdiction had been overruled. Goodnough Merc. Co. v. Galloway [Or.] 84 P. 1049.

3. The district court has no jurisdiction of an action to require the water commissioner to recognize a change in the point of diversion by an owner of a water right who has not complied with Laws 1899, p. 235, c. 105, providing for notice to interested parties, though he had made the change before the act took effect. New Cache La Poudre Irr. Co. v. Arthur Irr. Co. [Colo.] 87 P. 799. Under Municipal Court Act (Lawe 1902, p. 1560, c. 580, § 241), an affidavit of good faith and that a controversy is real is essential to confer upon the municipal court jurisdiction of the subject-matter in a case brought before the court on an agreed statement of facts, and such affidavit cannot be waived. Weinstein v. Douglas, 101 N. Y. S. 251. The jurisdiction of a United States commissioner as ex officio probate judge to appoint guardians for insane and incompetent persons is wholly statutory, and to obtain such jurisdiction it must affirmatively appear that the essential provisions of the statute have been complied with. Martin v. White [C. C. A.] 146 F. 461. Proceeding void where person affected was not personally served. Id. Code Alaska, § 723, declaring that when jurisdiction is conferred upon a court or judicial officer all means of carrying it into effect are also given, and providing that if no course of procedure is pointed out any suitable mode of proceeding may be adopted, applies only to proceedings after jurisdiction has been acquired and where the course of proceeding is not specially provided. Id.

4. Probate courts being courts of limited jurisdiction, the preliminary statutory steps to acquire jurisdiction must be complied with, otherwise the decree is void. Jurisdiction of the subject-matter alone is not sufficient. Taber v. Douglass [Me.] 64 A. 653. A petition to the probate court is the foundation upon which to base its jurisdiction and petition must show authority in the court to make the decree prayed for. Id.

5. Under Gen. Laws 1899, p. 113, c. 75, authorizing the district judges of the district courts of Bexar county to transfer causes from one district to another, a judge of one district court may transfer to another district court a suit to set aside a judgment rendered in the former court and thus invest the latter court with jurisdiction inherent in the former to set aside the judgment. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Brisenio [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 961, 92 S. W. 998.

6. Where a new county is created from a portion of an old one, and is attached to another district for judicial purposes, the records affecting property therein being transferred to it, the courts in such district have power to enforce judgments affecting property within the new county, though they were rendered in the old county and district. State v. Dist. Ct. of Ninth Judicial Dist. [Mont.] 86 P. 798. Under Act March 11, 1902, c. 183, § 7, 32 St. 66 (U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1905, p. 114), dividing Texas into four Federal judicial districts and transferring to the courts of the new district causes of which such courts would have had jurisdiction if they had been constituted when such causes were commenced except that cases in which evidence had been taken should be retained in the courts where pending, an action in which evidence had been taken and in which a judgment of dismissal had been entered remains in the court which entered the judgment for the purpose of determining jurisdiction of an ancillary bill in equity to set aside the dismissal, though if an original suit it would be within the jurisdiction of the courts of the new district. O'Connor v. O'Connor, 146 F. 994.

7. A court of equity which has acquired jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin the infringement of a patent and recover damages will not lose it because pending suit the patent is assigned to another who is made complainant, but may grant injunction and also

Termination of jurisdiction takes place when there is a final adjudication completed which the court is without power to recall or alter[9] except by original proceeding, or when there is such an interruption in the proceedings as disables the court legally to resume or to effect a continuance thereof.[10] Where a plaintiff dismisses his case, the jurisdiction of the court ceases in the absence of any counterclaim upon which the court may proceed.[11]

award damages to both complainants. Leadam v. Ringgold & Co., 140 F. 611. Prior agreement in suit for damages and to enjoin infringement of patent, as to terms of settlement in case plaintiff's patent should be sustained, held not to oust equity jurisdiction. Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. American Graphophone Co., 140 F. 860. The circuit court having acquired full jurisdiction of a cause by removal from a state court does not lose it because service of summons is quashed on defendant's motion, but may permit plaintiff to file an amended petition and permit a new summons to issue thereon. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v Woodson County Com'rs [C. C. A.] 145 F. 144.

8. Where the court assumed jurisdiction without objection and proceeded to final judgment, its jurisdiction could not be ousted pending a motion for a new trial as of right by a motion for change of venue. Bonham v. Doyle [Ind. App.] 79 N. E. 458.

9. Where a judge of the city court of New York took the default of the debtor in supplementary proceedings, he had jurisdiction to entertain a motion to open the default, and after his denial of the motion had power to hear a reargument and nullify his previous determination by opening the default. Morrison v. Stember, 49 Misc. 464, 98 N. Y. S. 850. Defective notice of a conditional order vacating a default judgment before a justice of the peace does not deprive the justice of jurisdiction over the subject-matter and he may on application of the moving party continue the hearing for proper notice. Brainard v. Butler Ryan & Co. [Neb.] 109 N. W. 766.

10. Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. § 5090, is not mandatory so as to require the court to enter judgment, in an action on contract for money only, immediately upon the filing of proof of service on defendants or forfeit its jurisdiction. Delay of over four years held not to divest court of jurisdiction. Peirce v. National Bank [Wash.] 87 P. 488. After a judgment of the supreme court in an appeal in disbarment proceedings remanding the cause to the district court for trial, it is not essential to jurisdiction that the accusation be refiled in the district court. In re Burnette [Kan.] 85 P. 575. The omission of the supreme court to make a specific order relating to the transfer of the accusation to the district court and its custody pending the proceedings there does not deprive the district court of jurisdiction. Id. In view of recital in previous order that a proceeding to settle and distribute an estate had been retained for further orders, held the court had jurisdiction to confirm administrator's report. State v. Settle [N. C.] 54 S. E. 445. The municipal court has no power to render a judgment after the expiration of 14 days from the time a case is submitted to it for decision. City Button Works v. Cohn, 101 N. Y. S. 765. Where at the close of a trial it was stipulated that briefs should be submitted by January 15th, and that the time for decision should run from that date, the court was without jurisdiction to render judgment January 31st. Stewart v. New York City R. Co., 50 Misc. 631, 98 N. Y. S. 617. Where a plaintiff fails to appear in the municipal court at the time specified in the summons or on adjournment the action must be dismissed (Laws 1902, p. 1561, c. 580, § 248), and the court has no power to enter an order in favor of plaintiff merely because he had appeared on a previous date. Katz v. Schreckinger, 101 N. Y. S. 743. Under Municipal Court Act (Laws 1902, p. 1563, c. 580, § 254), limiting to five days the time in which the municipal court may amend its judgment, the court had no power after five days to amend a judgment erroneously rendered for plaintiff notwithstanding a tender so as to make it a judgment for defendant for costs. Lackner v. American Clothing Co., 112 App. Div. 438, 98 N. Y. S. 376. Has no jurisdiction to vacate an erroneous judgment not rendered on default after five days have expired from date of rendition. Quinn v. Schneider, 50 Misc. 630, 98 N. Y. S. 657. State of the record held to show that defendant in municipal court did not consent to an adjournment of more than eight days, and that the court therefore lost jurisdiction. Clemens v. Werner Co., 101 N. Y. S. 755. Court held without jurisdiction to set aside a default after six months from entry. Biensteadt v. Clinton Circuit Judge, 142 Mich. 633, 12 Det. Leg. N. 849, 105 N. W. 875. Where the rules of the quarter sessions provided for certain adjourned terms of court for the hearing of arguments and exceptions to the incorporation of a borough were filed at a regular term, the hearing thereon could be had at the next adjourned term though a regular term intervened, and in such case it was not necessary that the court should have entered a formal order adjourning the hearing to a day certain. Ivyland Borough, 27 Pa. Super. Ct. 19. Court cannot alter or vacate a decree after expiration of term of rendition. Spitznagle v. Cobleigh, 120 Ill. App. 191.

11. Where plaintiff dismissed action to set aside probate of will, court held without jurisdiction to proceed further on defendant's counterclaim to have the probate confirmed, since defendant could not have brought a direct action asking such relief. Davis v. Preston, 129 Iowa, 670, 106 N. W. 151. Plaintiff by remaining in the case and taking exceptions and waiting until the time for appeal had expired before instituting certiorari proceedings did not lose his right to question the jurisdiction of the court to proceed further in the case and render judgment for defendant on an invalid counterclaim. Id.

§ 14. Objections to jurisdiction, inquiry thereof, and presumptions respecting it.[12]—The fundamental facts of jurisdiction must always appear and courts will at all stages inquire thereof or entertain objections thereto.[13] The duty of spontaneously inquiring into their own jurisdiction is particularly emphasized in the Federal courts[14] and some of the courts of appeal,[15] but it exists in all the courts.[16] While want of jurisdiction is usually raised by plea in abatement or other proper pleading,[17] such procedure is not always essential.[18] Mere informalities are waived if

12. See 6 C. L. 312.

13. Where want of jurisdiction of the subject-matter is apparent on the face of the proceedings or record in a cause, the objection may be raised for the first time in the supreme court. Steinmetz v. Hammond Co. [Ind.] 78 N. E. 628. An appellate court will determine for itself whether it has jurisdiction of an appeal and may determine its jurisdiction as a matter of fact on motion to dismiss. Not necessary to object to jurisdiction below. Yockey v. Woodbury County, 130 Iowa, 412, 106 N. W. 950. Objection to jurisdiction of subject-matter will be considered on appeal whether raised below or not. Hudson v. Cahoon, 193 Mo. 547, 91 S. W. 72. But where the parties agree to the settlement of a controversy in an equity court, the jurisdiction of equity will not be inquired into where the objection is raised for the first time on appeal and the record does not show an entire absence of general jurisdiction over the subject-matter. Williams v. Wetmore [Fla.] 41 So. 545. See Equity, 7 C. L. 1323. Objection to jurisdiction in divorce suit because of failure to allege residence within state could be raised for first time by motion in arrest of judgment. Stanbury v. Stanbury, 118 Mo. App. 427, 94 S. W. 566. A personal judgment by default may be attacked collaterally by showing by other parts of the record that at the time service was obtained and judgment rendered defendant was in fact a nonresident. See Judgments, 8 C. L. 530. Lutcher v. Allen [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 149, 95 S. W. 572.

14. The United States supreme court will of its own motion inquire into its own jurisdiction and that of the court below without any special exception being taken. Fernandez y Perez v. Perez y Fernandez, 202 U. S. 80, 50 Law. Ed. 942. Under Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 5, 18 St. 472 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 511), requiring the circuit court to stop proceedings in a case at any time when fraud upon its jurisdiction is discovered, it is immaterial in what manner or by what pleading the issue is raised. Briggs v. Traders' Co., 145 F. 254. When the pleadings show that a jurisdictional fact is in issue, the court must require proof to eliminate such question or else assume that it has no jurisdiction. Klenk v. Byrne, 143 F. 1008. A Federal judge becoming satisfied from the evidence that the subject-matter of the suit was transferred in fraud of the jurisdiction of the court, he may properly direct a verdict for defendant or dismiss the action, notwithstanding he had previously overruled motion to dismiss for that reason (Turnbull v. Ross [C. C. A.] 141 F. 649), and the circuit court of appeals may dismiss upon the same ground (Id.). If want of jurisdiction of a Federal court appears upon the face of the bill, it is the duty of the court to dismiss the suit as soon as the fact is discovered, no matter how far the cause has progressed (Briggs v. Traders' Co., 145 F. 254), but the objection being based merely on alleged extrinsic facts, the court should exercise its discretion to determine whether it will allow such issues of fact to be raised in view of the relations existing between the parties by reason of the proceedings already had (Id.). Where suit to dissolve a corporation of which court had jurisdiction on face of record had proceeded for 16 months and the relations of the parties had changed, a nonparticipating creditor could not intervene and raise an issue of fact upon the question of jurisdiction in respect to which it did not claim to have any more knowledge than it had when suit was commenced. Id.

15. The appellate court must take notice of its want of jurisdiction of a case appealed to it. Yakey v. Leich [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 926.

16. Whenever a court becomes satisfied from well founded reasons that it has no jurisdiction, it is its duty to refuse to try the case. Abrams v. White, 11 Idaho, 497, 83 P. 602. A judge of a court of record may of his own motion, when approving the minutes at the close of the term, expunge therefrom a judgment which the court is, as to the subject-matter, without jurisdiction to render. Scott v. Hughes, 124 Ga. 1000, 53 S. E. 453. A judge being doubtful of his jurisdiction to try a case on account of irregularities in the proceedings, he should call counsel's attention to such irregularities in order that they may be corrected and should not arbitrarily refuse to try the case. Defects in service of summons, etc. State v. Murphy [Nev.] 85 P. 1004.

17. Fraudulent use of process properly asserted by plea in abatement. Frohlich v. Independent Glass Co., 144 Mich. 278, 13 Det. Leg. N. 152, 107 N. W. 889. Plea to jurisdiction commencing and terminating as follows held sufficient: "And the said A. G. in his own proper person comes and defends, etc., and says" * * * "and this the defendant is ready to verify, wherefore he prays judgment if the court here will take cognizance of the action aforesaid." Goldberg v. Harney, 122 Ill. App. 106. Want of jurisdiction of the person of a defendant is waived unless taken by demurrer or answer. Farmers' Bank v. St. Louis & H. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 1, 95 S. W. 286.

18. Jurisdictional facts need not necessarily appear from the pleadings, it being sufficient if they appear from the evidence. Amount involved on appeal. Martin v. Tellotte, 115 La. 769, 40 So. 41. Lack of jurisdiction of subject-matter, unlike lack of junot seasonably challenged by proper objection.[19] In Missouri a defendant who makes timely objection to the jurisdiction of the justice court does not waive such objection by appealing to the circuit court.[20] An objection to jurisdiction over the subject-matter is a waiver of objection to jurisdiction over the person.[21] A defendant who is called as a witness for plaintiff does not waive want of jurisdiction over him as a party by testifying without raising any objection to such jurisdiction.[22]

A nonresident defendant served by publication may not object to jurisdiction over property seized on the ground that he was not the owner of it.[23] Jurisdiction of the subject-matter being conceded, a statutory requirement as to the place of its exercise is now generally regarded as conferring a mere personal privilege which may be waived by the party for whose benefit it is provided.[24]

Evidence and presumptions.[25]—Courts of general jurisdiction will be presumed to have acted within their jurisdiction,[26] but such presumption does not obtain as to courts which exercise only a limited or special jurisdiction.[27] risdiction of person, may be set up by answer to the merits and need not be raised by plea. Divorce. Duke v. Duke [N. J. Eq.] 62 A. 466.

19. Absence of seal from summons and omission from praecipe of statement of nature of action held at most amendable defects in no way affecting jurisdiction, and defendant could not take advantage of them after default. Benedict v. Hadlow Co. [Fla.] 42 So. 239. Where a court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter of an information in the nature of quo warranto, any want of jurisdiction because of failure to obtain leave of court to file the information may be waived. Attorney General v. A. Booth & Co., 143 Mich. 89, 12 Det. Leg. N. 991, 106 N. W. 868. A defendant waives his objection to the jurisdiction of the court on the ground of a fraudulent use of its process by pleading the general issue after his plea in abatement is overruled. Frohlich v. Independent Glass Co., 144 Mich. 278, 13 Det. Leg. N. 152, 107 N. W. 889. Where a cause is transferred to another court having jurisdiction of the subject-matter and defendant proceeds to trial without taking exception to a denial of his motion to strike from the docket, the court has jurisdiction to render judgment though the transfer was made pursuant to an invalid law. Pelham v. Miller [Ala.] 41 So. 418. Plea that amount sued for was too small could not be considered after continuance and long after answer to merits. O'Neil v. Murray [Tex. Civ. App.] 94 S. W. 1090. In a bill to foreclose a mortgage even if it is essential to allege that the personal property was within the jurisdiction of the court at the time of the commencement of the action, if there are allegations from which such fact may be inferred, the bill is good as against a demurrer not directed to this point. Tyler v. Toph [Fla.] 40 So. 624.

20. Bente v. Remington Typewriter Co., 116 Mo. App. 77, 91 S. W. 397. Objection to jurisdiction of person not waived by appeal after judgment. State v. Ayers, 116 Mo. App. 90, 91 S. W. 398.

21. Brainard v. Butler, Ryan & Co. [Neb.] 109 N. W. 766.

22. Where he had filed no plea and made no appearance. Mauck v. Rosser [Ga.] 55 S. E. 32.

23. He could in no wise be affected. Kneeland v. Weigley [Neb.] 107 N. W. 574.

24. Failure to challenge jurisdiction of court to foreclose mortgage on land in another county held waiver of objection. Snyder v. Pike [Utah] 83 P. 692. Initial carrier sued in county where it had no road or agent held to waive jurisdiction as to person by answering and participating in trial. Farmers' Bank v. St. Louis & H. R. Co., 119 Mo. App. 1, 95 S. W. 286.

25. See 6 C. L. 314.

26. In such courts all presumptions are made in favor of the regularity of judgments and the jurisdiction of the court to render them. State v. Settle [N. C.] 54 S. E. 445. It will be presumed that the judgment of the circuit court was within its jurisdiction. Hawthorne v. Cartier Lumber Co., 121 Ill. App. 494. If in an action in a court of general jurisdiction there is nothing in the complaint to show whether the court has or has not jurisdiction, the question cannot be raised by demurrer, since jurisdiction will be presumed. Rudisell v. Jennings [Ind. App.] 77 N. E. 959. The district courts of Colorado have general jurisdiction both at law and in equity in proceedings to adjudicate water rights, and where a decree establishing such rights recites that notice was duly given, the absence from the record of proofs of notice does not show that the court was without jurisdiction. Farmers' Union Ditch Co. v. Rio Grande Canal Co. [Colo.] 86 P. 1042. Where the record does not show that a party appeared in a cause, the fact of such appearance will be presumed where essential to the jurisdiction of the lower court to enter an order dismissing an appeal to it for want of prosecution. Long v. Frank, 117 Ill. App. 207. A recital in a judgment or decree that a required notice was given to the defendants "in conformity of law" raises the presumption of due service and of jurisdiction of the persons in the absence of any inconsistent record or evidence. Wallace v. Adams [C. C. A.] 143 F. 716. Where record does not contain appellee's superseded pleadings, the presumption is that they stated an amount within jurisdiction of county court. Ft. Worth & D. C. R. Co. v. Underwood [Tex. Civ. App.] 98 S. W. 453.

27. The commissioners' court in exercising statutory powers is of limited jurisdiction and its records must affirmatively show the facts on which its authority rests. Com-

Hearing and trial of objections.[28]—An issue of fact upon which the jurisdiction of a Federal court depends may be submitted to the jury,[29] but not going to the right of action itself, it should not be submitted with other issues in the case.[30]

JURY.

§ 1. Necessity or Occasion for a Jury Trial (617).
A. As "Preserved" by the Constitutions (617). Denial of the Right; Conditions (619). The Character of Jury Guaranteed (619).
B. As Conferred Where the Common Law Did Not Give it (620).
C. Demand, Loss or Waiver of Right (621). What Constitutes Waiver (621).
§ 2. Eligibility to and Exemption from Jury Service (622).
§ 3. Disqualifications Pertaining to the Particular Cause (623).
§ 4. Discretion of the Court to Excuse Juror (625).
§ 5. The Jury List and Drawing for the Term (625).
§ 6. The Venire and Like Process (628).
§ 7. Empaneling the Trial Jury (628).
§ 8. Arraying and Challenging (629).
A. Challenge to the Array or Panel (629).
B. Challenge for Cause (629). Right to List of Jurors (630).
C. Peremptory Challenges and Standing Jurors Aside (630). Number Allowed (631). Time for Challenge (631). The Order of Challenges (631).
D. Examination of Jurors and Trial and Decision of Challenges (632). Scope of Examination (632). Review of Trial of Challenges (633). Improper Overruling or Sustaining of a Challenge as a Ground for Reversal (633).
§ 9. Talesmen, Special Venires and Additional Jurors (633).
§ 10. Special and Struck Juries and Juries of Less than Twelve (635).
§ 11. Swearing (635).
§ 12. Custody and Discharge of Jurors and Jury (635).
§ 13. Compensation, Sustenance, and Comfort of Jurors (635).

§ 1. Necessity or occasion for a jury trial. A. As "preserved" by the constitutions[31] the right as it existed at common law is superior to legislative abridgment[32] and a general provision that the right "shall remain inviolate" creates no new rights but secures only those existing at the time of adoption or such as were recognized at common law.[33] No absolute right to a jury exists in equitable actions.[34] Where missioners' Ct. v. Johnson [Ala.] 39 So. 910. In exercising the powers conferred upon it by Acts 1894-95, p. 749, relating to the establishment of stock law districts, its jurisdiction is limited and its records must show the existence of facts on which its authority to act rests. Order held to show jurisdiction, an error therein being merely clerical. Mayfield v. Tuscaloosa County Ct. Com'rs [Ala.] 41 So. 932. One other than an officer claiming a justification under a proceeding or process of a justice of the peace must affirmatively show the existence of the material facts upon which the jurisdiction of the justice depends. Rice v. Travis, 117 Ill. App. 644. The records of proceedings in the probate court must show its jurisdiction. Taber v. Douglass [Me.] 64 A. 653. Where in replevin before a justice of the peace the record did not disclose the township in which defendant resided or in what township the goods were found, it did not appear that the justice had jurisdiction and the judgment was void. Barnes v. Plessner [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 626. Jurisdiction of municipal court not presumed. City Button Works v. Cohn, 101 N. Y. S. 765; Katz v. Schreckinger, 101 N. Y. S. 743. The county court, whether quorum or quarterly, has only statutory powers, and when its jurisdiction is questioned the party relying thereon is bound to point out the statute conferring jurisdiction. State v. True [Tenn.] 95 S. W. 1028.

28. See 6 C. L. 315.

29. Kirven v. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 288.

30. Rule not changed by Act of 1875 authorizing the court to dismiss a case at any stage upon discovery of fraud upon its jurisdiction. Kirven v. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 288.

31. See 6 C. L. 316.

32. Constitutional provisions guarantying a trial by an impartial jury cannot be limited or modified by legislation. Lucas v. State [Neb.] 105 N. W. 976.

33. Const. art. 1, § 6. Marler v. Wear [Tenn.] 96 S. W. 447.

Cases in which the right did not exist at common law, and hence is not secured by such provision: Application for letters of administration. In re McClellan's Estate [S. D.] 107 N. W. 681. Contempt proceedings. Ex parte Allison [Tex.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 687, 90 S. W. 870. Mandamus proceedings. Marler v. Wear [Tenn.] 96 S. W. 447. Equitable actions. Meriden Sav. Bank v. McCormack [Conn.] 64 A. 338.

Act June 25, 1895 (P. L. 300), as amended by Act June 19, 1901 (P. L. 574), gives the party against whom proceedings for the appointment of a guardian are instituted a right to demand a jury, and hence does not violate the Declaration of Rights providing that the right to a jury shall remain inviolate. In re Coit [Pa.] 64 A. 597. The pro-an action involves both legal and equitable relief, the primary relief sought, if warranted by the pleadings,[35] determines the right,[36] and the fact that the equitable relief is ultimately denied does not require the submission of the legal cause to a jury.[37] The right to trial by jury does not exist in contempt proceedings,[38] nor in proceedings for an alternative writ of mandate in Idaho.[39] The right as secured by the Federal constitution and the amendments thereto[40] extends to actions in the Federal courts of the territories,[41] but not to actions in the various state courts.[42]

ceeding provided by Porto Rico Code Civ. Proc. arts. 1409-1415, for the assessment of damages where an attachment has been wrongfully issued, is a special proceeding and not a suit at common law within the 7th amendment to Fed. Const. Fernandez y Perez v. Perez y Fernandez, 202 U. S. 80, 50 Law. Ed. 942. The 7th amendment to the Federal constitution is not applicable to a proceeding for an alternative writ to compel the trial court to submit certain issues to the jury. Nelson v. Steele [Idaho] 88 P. 95. Under U. S. Const. Amend. 7, one in possession of real estate, claiming the whole title, is entitled to a trial by jury of the issue of title. Carlson v. Sullivan [C. C. A.] 146 F. 476. Scire facias on a recognizance. Hollister v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 773. Under Const. art. 6, § 6, declaring that the right to trial by jury shall remain inviolate and shall extend to all cases at law without regard to amount in controversy, parties petitioning for letters of administration are not entitled to a jury, such proceedings not being a "case at law." In re McClellan's Estate [S. D.] 107 N. W. 681.

34. Actions construed as proceedings in equity: Cancellation of a written instrument for alleged fraud whereby plaintiff's intestate was deprived of property. Curtice v. Dixon, 73 N. H. 393, 62 A. 492. An action to determine adverse claims tried under § 5630, Rev. Codes 1899. Blakemore v. Cooper [N. D.] 106 N. W. 566. Action for an injunction exclusively despite allegations for treble damages for trespass under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1667, 1668. Page v. Herkimer Lumber Co. 109 App. Div. 391, 96 N. Y. S. 272. Action to cancel a deed and for relief against fraud and breach of trust and not an action in ejectment. Bluett v. Wilce [Wash.] 86 P. 853. Parties to a suit to quiet title, brought under 3 Gen. St. p. 3486, are not entitled to a trial by jury in an action at law as distinguished from the trial of an issue of law directed by the court of chancery. Brady v. Cartaret Realty Co. [N. J. Err. & App.] 64 A. 1078. A suit to determine title to stock in a building association, to cancel the certificate representing the stock, to restrain the payment of money thereon, and to require the issuance of a new certificate to plaintiff, is an action in equity, and, under Code Civ. Proc. § 592, triable by the court. Noble v. Learned [Cal. App.] 87 P. 402. A complaint alleging that plaintiff held money claimed by two defendants, that plaintiff was ignorant of their respective rights but was willing to pay it to the one entitled thereto, that they were threatening to sue, and praying that they be required to interplead together, etc., states an action in equity as well as within Gen. St. 1902, § 1019, and, under Gen. St. 1902, § 720, defendants had no right to a jury trial. Meriden Sav. Bank v. McCormack [Conn.] 64 A. 338. Where a receiver in bankruptcy takes possession of goods under order of court and a third person files an intervening petition claiming to be a bona fide purchaser, the proceeding is essentially in equity. Dokken v. Page [C. C. A.] 147 F. 438. Held, in an action against a trustee for a specific amount, that when the evidence developed that the amount was unliquidated and required an accounting, it was error for the court not to grant a motion to take the case from the jury and try it as an equity court. Goupille v. Chaput [Wash.] 86 P. 1058.

35. In a suit for a threshing bill and to foreclose the statutory lien, the equitable relief held not warranted by the pleadings. Gorthy v. Jarvis [N. D.] 108 N. W. 39.

36. Held, where the main issue was the right to a money judgment, that mere incidental equitable questions did not destroy the right to a jury trial. Heintz v. Anthony, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 235. In an action to abate a nuisance and for damages, the latter being merely incidental to the primary equitable action, neither party is entitled to a jury as of right. Meek v. De Latour, 2 Cal. App. 261, 83 P. 300.

37. Where in an action for equitable relief and damages the former is denied, the action for damages does not thereupon become triable by jury as of right. Miller v. Edison Elec. Illuminating Co., 184 N. Y. 17, 76 N. E. 734.

38. Violation of an injunction. Ex parte Allison [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 409, 90 S. W. 492; People v. Tool [Colo.] 86 P. 224. One charged with the violation of an injunction under the prohibitory liquor law is not entitled to a jury trial by virtue of § 10 of the Bill of Rights (State v. Thomas [Kan.] 86 P. 499), nor under c. 106, p. 205, Laws 1897, since the amendment thereto by c. 123, p. 231, Laws 1901, abolishing the provision for jury trial, is valid as to title (Id.).

39. A special proceeding and not a common-law action. Nelson v. Steele [Idaho] 88 P. 95. Under Rev. St. 1887, § 4982, the submission of issues of fact made by the return to an alternative writ of mandate rests in the discretion of the court. Id.

40. Under the 7th amendment to the U. S. Const. and Rev. St. U. S. § 566 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 461), defendants, in a proceeding by scire facias on a forfeited recognizance in the Federal court in which the United States claims $1,000, are entitled to a jury trial. Hollister v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 773.

41. Alaska: Though the proceedings are under a territorial statute. Carlson v. Sullivan [C. C. A.] 146 F. 476. Oklahoma. Bettge v. Territory [Okl.] 87 P. 897.

It is not essential to due process of law as secured by the 14th amendment that a jury be afforded.[43]

Neither the Federal constitution nor the ordinance of the Northwest Territory secures the right to a jury trial for violation of municipal ordinances,[44] and such right is not guaranteed by the Minnesota[45] or Georgia[46] state constitutions.

Denial of the right; conditions.[47]—The payment of the jury fee is sometimes made a condition precedent to the right to a jury.[48] The Federal guaranty of a trial by jury is not satisfied by affording accused such trial on appeal.[49] The right to trial by jury is not denied by a directed verdict upon unconflicting evidence,[50] by assessment of punishment by the court,[51] by restricting the right of the trial court to set aside verdicts of its own initiative,[52] or by an appellate court in making conclusive findings of fact,[53] or in reducing the degree of conviction in a criminal case.[54] Where issues of fact in equity are triable by jury, a statute authorizing an injunction to restrain the use of premises for gaming purposes does not deprive one of a trial by jury.[55] Since a summary investigation of the affairs of an office in no way involves the officers, it is not objectionable as depriving them of a jury trial.[56]

The character of jury guaranteed[57] requires a unanimous verdict except as modified by the constitution.[58] The jury contemplated by the Federal constitution and the amendments thereto is a common-law jury of twelve men.[59]

51. Rev. St. 1899, § 1838, providing that it shall be a felony for any person over sixteen years of age to have carnal knowledge of an unmarried female of previous chaste character between the ages of fourteen and eighteen, is not unconstitutional in that it permits the court, instead of the jury, to assess the punishment, and the offense is a felony whatever the punishment assessed may be. (§ 1) B. As conferred where the common law did not give it.[60]—The right to a trial by jury as existing at common law has been extended by statute in many states, thus, the assessment of damages resulting from the establishment of a drainage system,[61] injunction to restrain trespass where the real issue is the ownership of the land,[62] the validity of a will,[63] issues in bankruptcy,[64] contempt,[65] mandamus proceedings,[66] and the issue of adultery in divorce suits,[67] have been made triable by jury. Proceedings for the violation of an ordinance in Georgia,[68] for admeasurement of dower in South Carolina,[69] and the assessment of damages for wrongful attachment in Porto Rico,[70] are not triable by jury, nor are proceedings for the deportation of Chinese persons from the United States.[71] One prosecuted for cruelty to animals in Ohio is entitled to a jury trial.[72]

In equitable actions, submission rests in the discretion of the court.[73] In Idaho the right is given if legal issues are involved.[74] A controverted plea of privilege, as affecting jurisdiction, is triable by jury in Texas.[75]

izing juries of six in the trial of misdemeanors, held unconstitutional. Gius v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 956.

60. See 6 C. L. 319.

61. Illinois: Drainage Act (2 Starr & C. Ann. St. 1896, p. 1508, c. 42). And since the assessment of damages includes the determination of benefits, the commissioners cannot assess the latter. Hull v. Sangamon River Drainage Dist., 219 Ill. 464, 76 N. E. 701.

62. Kentucky: Civ. Code Prac. § 12 (Bush v. Eastern Kentucky Timber & Lumber Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 773, 90 S. W. 547), and the fact that defendant admits plaintiff's ownership of a part does not affect the right where the ownership of the rest is put in issue (Id.).

63. Missouri: Rev. St. 1899, § 4622, allowing five years within which to appear in the circuit court to establish or contest a will after the probate court has acted thereon, and which provides that the issue of "will" or "no will" shall be submitted to the jury, makes such proceeding one at law triable by jury. Schaaf v. Peters [Mo. App.] 90 S. W. 1037.

64. In an involuntary bankruptcy proceeding against the members of an insolvent partnership, the question of membership is not an issue to be submitted to the jury under Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 19a (In re Neasmith [C. C. A.] 147 F. 160), but where such issue is blended with the larger question of insolvency and is material in determining the liabilities, it may be submitted (Id.).

65. Georgia: Civ. Code 1895, § 4046, providing for a jury trial in certain proceedings for contempt, is inapplicable to a rule for contempt issued in an alimony case requiring the respondent to show cause why he should not comply with the order of the court requiring him to pay the same together with attorney's fees. Stokes v. Stokes [Ga.] 55 S. E. 1023.

66. Tennessee: Under Shannon's Code, § 5336, the submission of issues of fact in mandamus proceedings to the jury lies in the discretion of the court. Marler v. Wear [Tenn.] 96 S. W. 447.

67. New York: Code Civ. Proc. § 1757 (Wilcox v. Wilcox, 101 N. Y. S. 828), but where defendant alleges that she was insane at the time of the alleged adultery, she is not entitled to have such issue tried by a jury (Id.).

68. Civ. Code 1895, § 5702, providing that every person charged with an offense "against the laws of this state" shall be entitled to a jury trial, does not secure a jury trial to one charged with violating a city ordinance. Pearson v. Wimbish, 124 Ga. 701, 52 S. E. 761.

69. Not an action for the recovery of money only or the possession of specific real property within Code Civ. Proc. 1902, § 274, providing for jury in such cases, but is within § 275 which leaves it to the court to submit the issue as he sees fit. Frierson v. Jenkins [S. C.] 56 S. E. 890.

70. The general provisions for a jury trial as to issues of fact in the Federal circuit courts, contained in U. S. Rev. St. § 648, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 526, do not, in view of the act of April 12, 1900, § 8, continuing local laws in force in Porto Rico, prevent the district court, while exercising the jurisdiction of the circuit court, from following the special proceedings of Porto Rico Code Civ. Proc. arts. 1409-1415, for the assessment of damages for wrongful attachment without a jury. Fernandez y Perez v. Perez y Fernandez, 202 U. S. 80, 50 Law. Ed. 942.

71. Proceedings for the deportation of Chinese persons are not "causes" within Rev. St. § 566 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 461), providing that trials of issues of fact in the United States district courts in all causes, except cases in equity, etc., shall be by jury. Toy Tong v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 343.

72. In a prosecution under Rev. St. 1906, § 3718a, upon a plea of not guilty, a justice has no jurisdiction to try the case without a jury unless it is waived. Simmons v. State [Ohio] 79 N. E. 555.

73. If an issue of fact is not one which comes within § 19a of the Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, the submission thereof to the jury lies within the discretion of the court. In re Neasmith [C. C. A.] 147 F. 160. Where an ordinary action involved a firm settlement and the recasting of accounts, it was error to submit such issues to a jury instead of transferring it to the equity docket despite the failure of the movant to give bond for

(§ 1) C. Demand, loss or waiver of right.[76]—Where the right to trial by jury is absolute, no demand or order is necessary,[77] and the jury cannot be dispensed with unless waived.[78] But in many cases the right to a jury is conditioned upon a timely demand,[79] made in the prescribed manner,[80] and duly entered of record.[81] Where only particular issues remain[82] or are triable by jury,[83] the demand must be specifically directed to those issues. A demand by one party is usually sufficient to secure the rights of both.[84] The court may deny a demand for jury where the only purpose is for delay.[85] Where a jury trial was had in the court below, it will be presumed on appeal that the proper demand was made, nothing appearing to the contrary.[86]

What constitutes waiver.[87]—Waiver may be implied from the acts of the parties,[88] thus, one consenting to a trial to the court,[89] to a master in chancery,[90] or to the performance of an adverse judgment. Davis v. Ferguson, 29 Ky. L. R. 214, 92 S. W. 968.

74. Where an answer in a suit to foreclose a mechanic's lien alleges a cross action for damages for nonperformance, the legal issues are triable by jury. Sandstrom v. Smith [Idaho] 86 P. 416.

75. Based upon nonresidence in the county where the action is brought. Hudgins v. Low [Tex. Civ. App.] 94 S. W. 411.

76. See 6 C. L. 319.

77. A defendant in an action to determine adverse claims under Code Civ. Proc. § 1638, who claims an estate in his answer, is entitled to a jury of right under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1642, 968, and no application under § 970 is required. Ryan v. Murphy, 101 N. Y. S. 553. Since the right to have the issue of adultery in divorce proceedings submitted to the jury is secured by the Code, a notice of a special motion to submit, as provided by rule 31, is not necessary. Wilcox v. Wilcox, 101 N. Y. S. 828.

78. Puffer v. American Cent. Ins. Co. [Or.] 87 P. 623. In a prosecution under Rev. St. 1906, § 3718a, a justice has no jurisdiction to try the case without a jury unless it is waived (Simmons v. State [Ohio] 79 N. E. 555), and a mere silence or failure to demand a jury does not constitute a waiver (Id.).

79. The demand for a jury in chancery proceeding in Tennessee may be made on the first day of the "trial term" and not of the first term at which it is triable. Rule 35 construed. Harris v. Bogle, 115 Tenn. 701, 92 S. W. 849. And where a jury in an equity action is not demanded in the pleadings, neither party can demand a jury until the rights of the other, under Shannon's Code, § 6284, and Chancery Rule 2, § 4, allowing time for taking evidence, have been enjoyed. Id. Under Acts 1901, p. 112, § 8, providing that in misdemeanor cases a demand must be made within 10 days after the court assumes jurisdiction, a demand made on January 1, is too late where the court acquired jurisdiction by appeal on November 23. Jones v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 299. A demand in the justice's court before removal is insufficient. Id. Failure of an alleged involuntary bankrupt to apply for a jury in writing at or before the time for answering, as provided by Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 19a, 30 Stat. 551 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3429), waives the right to a jury. In re Neasmith [C. C. A.] 147 F. 160.

80. One applying for a rehearing on a default judgment under Code 1896, § 3342, waives, under Acts 1888-89, p. 997, a right to a jury by failing to make a demand therefor in his petition. Baker v. Jackson [Ala.] 40 So. 348. The fact that the objections filed closed with a demand is insufficient where it was not called to the court's attention until the hearing began. Id. Under act of Sept. 27, 1883 (Acts 1882-83, p. 538, § 9), a trial by jury can be had in the city court of Floyd county only upon demand in writing of either party to a civil suit and the defendant in a criminal action. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Lanham, 124 Ga. 859, 53 S. E. 395. Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2923, 2340, objectors to a sale of lands to pay the debts of a decedent must make a written demand for a jury. In re Tuohy's Estate [Mont.] 83 P. 486.

81. In Tennessee the entry must show that the demand was timely, and an entry on the judge's docket "Jury demanded," and on the clerk's docket "5 jury," is insufficient under Shannon's Code, §§ 4611-4613, which makes time of the demand an essential of the right. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Timmons [Tenn.] 91 S. W. 1116.

82. Defendant had defaulted and the only issue was the assessment of damages. Clark v. Baker, 222 Mass. 13, 78 N. E. 455. A motion to reinstate on the jury docket or for leave to file a claim for a jury is insufficient. Id.

83. A general demand for a jury is insufficient in an action involving legal and equitable issues to require the submission of the former. Meek v. De Latour, 2 Cal. App. 261, 83 P. 300.

84. Elmore v. New York City R. Co., 100 N. Y. S. 1019.

85. Where plaintiff after filing a claim for a jury waives the same, motions made by defendant to reinstate the case on the jury calendar and for leave to file a claim for a jury are properly denied where their purpose is delay. Clark v. Baker, 222 Mass. 13, 78 N. E. 455.

86. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Lanham, 124 Ga. 859, 53 S. E. 395.

87. See 6 C. L. 320.

88. Where a single bill is filed against several defendants alleged to have received fraudulent preferences from a bankrupt to a reference,[91] without objection, waives the jury. So too, the creation of equitable issues,[92] and failure to demand that the case be brought to trial while the jury is in attendance,[93] constitutes a waiver. The right to a jury trial of the issue of adultery in divorce proceedings as secured by statute in New York is not waived by defendant's noticing the cause for trial at special term, after a similar notice by plaintiff.[94] Waiver of right to trial by jury must be strictly construed.[95] Where the accused in a prosecution before the Jefferson city court in Georgia waives the jury, the court has no discretion but must try the case without a jury.[96]

§ 2. Eligibility to and exemption from jury service.[97]—In some states only freeholders are eligible to jury service,[98] but the fact that a juror who sat upon the case was not a freeholder or householder as required does not vitiate the verdict.[99]

A state may exempt certain classes from jury service,[1] and such exemptions are mere privileges[2] revocable at will,[3] though stated to be "permanent" in the act creating them.[4] Exemptions are frequently made in favor of those who have rendered jury service within a stated time.[5] The exemptions, however, are usually mere personal privileges[6] and not a disqualification.[7] set the same aside, and defendants filed separate answers, they did not thereby waive the right to have their good faith tried by a jury. Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey [Ind.] 76 N. E. 529.

89. Where plaintiff consented to a trial to the court, did not object to the discharge of the jury or the reservation of the judge's decision, and presents requests to find, he waives his right to a jury. Hutchinson v. Ward, 99 N. Y. S. 708.

90. Where one in receivership proceedings tries issues of fact before the master in chancery without objection, he waives the right to demand a jury trial upon report to the court (San Jacinto Oil Co. v. Culbertson [Tex. Civ. App.] 96 S. W. 110), though the court may in its discretion order the issues submitted to a jury (Id.).

91. One making a successful application for a reference to a master cannot have a jury trial on a hearing on the report. Harris v. Bogle, 115 Tenn. 701, 92 S. W. 849. Where parties to an action acquiesced in the transfer of a case from the law to the equity docket and thereafter agreed that certain issues be referred to a master, they waived the right to a jury trial, though the case was irregularly transferred. Sharrock v. Kreiger [Ind. T.] 98 S. W. 161. A stipulation agreeing to submit all the differences to a referee who was to hear evidence and make report thereof constitutes a waiver of the right to a jury. Lindstrom v. Hope Lumber Co. [Idaho] 88 P. 92.

92. Where, in an action of replevin, intervenors secured an order which required plaintiff to amend his summons and complaint so as to meet the claim asserted by them under a bill of sale, which plaintiff did by alleging fraud and praying for cancellation, upon which issue was joined, the intervenors by creating equitable issues waived their right to jury trial. Hurley v. Walter [Wis.] 109 N. W. 558.

93. There being ample time. Nalle v. Austin [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 660, 93 S. W. 141.

94. Wilcox v. Wilcox, 101 N. Y. S. 828.

95. Sharrock v. Kreiger [Ind. T.] 98 S. W. 161. Where, after a jury has been waived and the case transferred to the equity docket, Congress changes the existing law depriving the case of its equitable features, the parties have a right to have the case transferred back and are entitled to a trial by jury. Id.

96. Acts 1903, pp. 138, 145, construed. Wadkins v. State [Ga.] 56 S. E. 74.

97. See 6 C. L. 320.

98. Interest as tenant by curtesy initiate constitutes a freehold notwithstanding Const. art. 10, § 6, providing that the property of a female acquired before or after marriage shall remain her separate property, and may be devised, etc. Hodgin v. Southern R. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 413. Under the express provisions of Act March 2, 1901 (Acts 1900-01, pp. 2003, 2004), which is in force in Montgomery county, a juror called in a criminal case need not be a freeholder or householder of the county. Gaines v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 865.

99. Reum v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 857, 90 S. W. 1109.

1. The excluding of lawyers, physicians, ministers, etc., from jury service does not deny to one accused due process of law as guaranteed by the 14th Amendment. Rawlins v. Georgia, 201 U. S. 638, 50 Law. Ed. 899.

2. Not a vested right. State v. Cantwell [N. C.] 55 S. E. 820.

3. Rev. 1905, § 1957, directing the county commissioners to place the names of all taxpayers of good character on the jury list, held to repeal Private Acts 1868-69, p. 72, c. 55, granting exemptions to the members of Wilmington fire company. State v. Cantwell [N. C.] 55 S. E. 820.

4. A permanent exemption acquired by five years of active service in the Wilmington fire department under Private Acts 1868-69, p. 72, c. 55, is not a protected contract right. State v. Cantwell [N. C.] 55 S. E. 820. Especially under Const. art 8, § 1, providing that all acts passed pursuant to such section creating corporations "may be altered," etc. Id.

5. Service as a grand juror within a year does not disqualify one under Act Cong. June

§ 3. Disqualifications pertaining to the particular cause. Right to an unbiased and unprejudiced jury.[8]—Parties are entitled to a jury that will decide the case upon the law as given[9] and the evidence adduced, hence, an opinion upon any material fact disqualifies,[10] and one who was a juror in an exactly similar case will be regarded as having such an opinion.[11] Such opinion, however, must be fixed[12] wheresoever derived,[13] and such as will prevent the juror from deciding the case upon the evidence,[14] and consequently qualified opinions based upon rumors[15] or newspaper reports[16] are not grounds for challenge, where the juror testifies he can render a fair and impartial verdict notwithstanding. Where, however, the news-

30, 1879, c. 52, § 2, 21 Stat. 43 (Ind. T. Ann. St. 1899, § 4193), to service as a petit juror. National Bank v. Schufelt [C. C. A.] 145 F. 509. The Act of Aug. 15, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 83), declaring a juror who has served at any session of court ineligible for service at the next succeeding term, does not disqualify jurors of a regular term for service at a succeeding special term. Wall v. State [Ga.] 54 S. E. 815. By express provision of Code 1896, § 4988, persons specially summoned in capital cases are excepted from disqualification because of having rendered other service on juries. Harrison v. State, 144 Ala. 20, 40 So. 568. That a juror, who has been summoned on the regular panel, which has been quashed on a challenge to the array, has again been summoned under a special venire at the same term of court, is not good ground for challenge. Sheibley v. Fales [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1032.

6. Prior service. State v. Hopkins, 115 La. 786, 40 So. 166.

7. Exemption under Mansf. Dig. § 3995 (Ind. T. Ann. St. 1899, § 2675), for service within one year. National Bank v. Schufelt [C. C. A.] 145 F. 509. Rev. Civ. St. art. 3159a, and Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 647a, construed as granting personal exemptions to those who have served as a petit juror for one week and been called once on the special venire or called twice on the latter, and hence the court cannot set aside a venire in advance because they may all claim an exemption. Moore v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 252, 95 S. W. 514.

8. See 6 C. L. 321.

9. Mistaken ideas as to the effect of contributory negligence upon the liability of defendant do not disqualify a juror if he evinces an intention when the true rule is stated to him, of regarding it in rendering his verdict. Wheeling & L. E. R. Co. v. Parker, 9 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 28. Where a juror manifests an intention to decide correctly, the mere fact that he hesitates in answering whether he will comply with a certain provision of the law does not necessarily disqualify him. State v. Rodriguez, 115 La. 1004, 40 So. 438.

10. Preconceived opinion as to guilt or innocence of accused. Commonwealth v. Minney [Pa.] 65 A. 31. Believed that defendant left the country contrary to law and was therefore guilty. State v. Smith [Kan.] 85 P. 1020.

11. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 3785, a juror who assessed damages resulting to another lot from the same change of grade is disqualified. Hunt v. Columbia [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 955. See, also, 6 C. L. 322, n. 90, 91.

12. Commonwealth v. Minney [Pa.] 65 A. 31.

13. Under Pen. Code, §§ 910, 915, an abiding opinion disqualifies notwithstanding it is based upon newspaper reports. Leigh v. Territory [Ariz.] 85 P. 948.

14. Opinion held not to disqualify, it appearing that a fair and impartial verdict could be rendered: Assumption that there was some evidence against accused from the fact that he was informed against. Stats v. Kinney [Wash.] 87 P. 1123. "Fixed" opinion which would require some evidence to remove. Walker v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 878. A feeling that, unless the evidence showed that accused was not connected, he would not be inclined to acquit, held not to disqualify under Code, § 5360. State v. Brown, 130 Iowa, 57, 106 N. W. 379. Opinion from newspaper reports and conversation with a juror who sat on a former trial, it not appearing what the conversation was. Johnson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 244, 94 S. W. 224. Under Cr. Code, § 468. Lucas v. State [Neb.] 105 N. W. 976.

15. Held not disqualified. Melbourne v. State [Fla.] 40 So. 189. Rev. Code 1892, § 2355. Evans v. State, 87 Miss. 459, 40 So. 8. Kirby's Dig. § 2366. Sullins v. State [Ark.] 95 S. W. 159. Though it would require evidence to remove. People v. Brown, 148 Cal. 743, 84 P. 204; Leigh v. Territory [Ariz.] 85 P. 948. Opinion was fixed if the facts upon which it was based were true. Leigh v. Territory [Ariz.] 85 P. 948. Had not talked to any witness. State v. Miles [Mo.] 98 S. W. 25.

16. Held not to disqualify. State v. McCarver, 194 Mo. 717, 92 S. W. 684; Kegans v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 569, 95 S. W. 122; Daughtry v. State [Ark.] 96 S. W. 748; Campos v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 76, 97 S. W. 100. "Guessed" he could disregard his opinion. Croft v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 723. Newspaper report of a confession of accused. State v. Church [Mo.] 98 S. W. 16. Though it would require some evidence to remove the opinion. Croft v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 723; Williams v. Supreme Ct. of Honor, 221 Ill. 152, 77 N. E. 542. Especially where he testifies that he will give defendant the benefit of a reasonable doubt. People v. Brown, 148 Cal. 743, 84 P. 204. Rev. St. 1899, § 2616. State v. Darling [Mo.] 97 S. W. 592. Pen. Code, § 915. Leigh v. Territory [Ariz.] 85 P. 948. Kirby's Dig. § 2366. Sullins v. State [Ark.] 95 S. W. 159. Report of the confession and trial of an accomplice held not to disqualify under Rev. St. 1899, § 2616. State v. Myers, 198 Mo. 225, 94 S. W. 242.

papers report the evidence taken at the coroner's inquest,[17] a different rule seems to prevail. The fact that a juror has sat upon the trial of similar cases during the term does not render him incompetent.[18]

Prejudice of any kind which materially affects the case[19] as prejudice against one of the parties,[20] against a material witness,[21] or against the accused as a witness,[22] against corporations,[23] or for or against the particular business in which one of the parties is engaged,[24] disqualifies.

Conscientious scruples against convictions upon circumstantial evidence,[25] capital punishment,[26] or capital punishment on circumstantial evidence,[27] disqualifies, even though the infliction of the death penalty is discretionary with the jury.[28]

An opinion based upon a newspaper report written by one in whom the juror has confidence and who is to be a witness renders the juror incompetent, though, under Kirby's Dig. § 2366, an opinion based upon a newspaper report does not generally have such effect. Sullins v. State [Ark.] 95 S. W. 159.

17. Mere statements of jurors that they thought that the newspaper reports contained accurate statements of the evidence taken before the coroner's inquest and the preliminary hearing does not establish such fact. State v. Darling [Mo.] 97 S. W. 592.

18. Offenses against the liquor laws. Fletcher v. Com. [Va.] 56 S. E. 149.

19. Held error to overrule a challenge to a juror who states that he has a prejudice which "would probably unconsciously bias his opinion." Theobald v. St. Louis Transit Co., 191 Mo. 395, 90 S. W. 354. The fact that a juror was in possession of a free pass book upon defendant's railroad, which book had been issued to him as a trustee of a certain society long before his selection as juror, is not a ground for setting aside the verdict in the absence of a showing of prejudice. Shepard v. Lewiston, etc., R. Co. [Me.] 65 A. 20. Rev. St. c. 84, § 104, providing that the court may set aside a verdict where either party "during the same term" gave to any of the jurors a gift, is not applicable. Id.

20. A statement that he would convict defendant if he sat on any jury which tried him made in reference to a prior indictment returned by a grand jury of which the juror was a member does not disqualify, where he states that he can give the accused a fair trial. Robinson v. Com., 104 Va. 883, 52 S. E. 690. The fact that a juror was one of 500 who signed a petition urging a special term of court to try defendant, the petition reciting that signers believed that the facts and circumstances connected with the killing of decedent by defendant "more than amply justifies the court" in so doing, does not conclusively establish his incompetency. Hicks v. State [Ga.] 54 S. E. 807. A statement by a juror in a homicide case that it was strange that defendant's father sacrificed his home and team for his boy when he might be hanged or sent to the penitentiary, such comment being upon the sacrifice a father would make for his son, and not an expression of the guilt of the accused, does not show prejudice. Wallace v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 1050.

21. Prejudice against a material witness is not a ground of challenge under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3141, making prejudice against a "party" a disqualification (Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Sage [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 254, 94 S. W. 1074), but is a ground for exercising the discretion vested by Rev. St. 1895, art. 3208, in the court to excuse persons in his opinion unfit for service (Id.). Being a discretionary ruling, it will not be disturbed unless it appears that the objecting party did not have a fair trial. Id.

22. Evidence held insufficient to show an undue prejudice. State v. Rodriguez, 115 La. 1004, 40 So. 438.

23. Not an abuse of discretion to overrule a challenge to a juror who stated that as between a corporation and individuals he would resolve doubts in favor of the latter, where he states that he has no prejudice against corporations and will render a verdict on the evidence. Dale v. Colfax Consol. Coal Co. [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1096.

24. Held prejudiced in favor of railroads because of his former relations with them and a belief that they were unjustly held liable in many similar personal injury cases. Fitts v. Southern Pac. Co. [Cal.] 86 P. 710. Prejudiced against street car companies for having been thrown from a car some years before. Theobald v. St. Louis Transit Co., 191 Mo. 395, 90 S. W. 354. A juror who was "fearful" that he could not help being influenced by the fact that he had had trouble with another railroad properly excused. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Hooser [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. St. Rep. 27, 97 S. W. 708. In the prosecution for an unlawful sale of liquors, the fact that a juror belonged to an anti-saloon league (State v. Sultan [N. C.] 54 S. E. 841), or was an uncle of a witness who belonged to a vigilance committee that had employed attorneys to prosecute such violations, does not disqualify (King v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 488), nor does membership in an organization known as "Actual Settlers" disqualify in an action to try title (Jones v. Wright [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 971, 92 S. W. 1010).

25. Code 1896, § 5018. Whatley v. State, 144 Ala. 68, 39 So. 1014.

26. Commonwealth v. Minney [Pa.] 65 A. 31. Disqualified under Cr. Code 1896, § 5018, though he stated that he "would hang some men." Untreimer v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 285.

27. Under Code 1896, § 5019, authorizing the court to excuse any juror who appears unfit to serve, the court may properly excuse a juror in a homicide case who states that he would not hang a man on circumstantial evidence. Coker v. State, 144 Ala. 28, 40 So. 516.

Mere acquaintance or friendship,[29] or relationship,[30] unless within the prohibited degrees,[31] are not usually grounds for challenge, and the fact that one of the jurors was related within the prohibited degree does not vitiate the verdict.[32] One who is directly interested,[33] or in the employment of one who is interested in the litigation,[34] is usually disqualified for jury service.

Proof of disqualification.[35]—In passing upon the qualifications of a juror, the court is not concluded by the juror's statement that he could render a fair and impartial verdict,[36] but may consider the entire evidence in determining his fitness.[37]

§ 4. Discretion of the court to excuse juror.[38]—The court may excuse a juror for "good and sufficient cause,"[39] and it is not an abuse of discretion to excuse a juror whose family requires his personal attention because of sickness,[40] or a juror hostile to the accused where the defendant refuses to act.[41]

§ 5. The jury list and drawing for the term.[42]—The making of the jury list and the drawing for the term are largely regulated by statute.[43] The legal number

28. Under Pen. Code, § 910, subd. 14. Leigh v. Territory [Ariz.] 85 P. 948. Such discretion is to be exercised in view of the facts of the case, and not pursuant to the whim of the jurors. Haddix v. State [Neb.] 107 N. W. 781.

29. Soper v. Crutcher, 29 Ky. L. R. 1080, 96 S. W. 907. The fact that a juror says that he thinks he is incompetent because the deceased was his friend is not disqualified where he further states that if sworn he will try the case upon the law and evidence just as if he had not known the deceased. State v. Bush, 117 La. 463, 41 So. 793. Sustaining a challenge to an uncle of one who was a close friend of defendant and who was present when the homicide was committed, held proper. Melbourne v. State [Fla.] 40 So. 189.

30. The fact that one of the jurors is a brother of one of the counsel in an expropriation proceeding is no ground for excusing him. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co. v. Morere, 116 La. 997, 41 So. 236.

31. One related within the prohibited degree to one jointly indicted with defendant though not on trial is disqualified. Moore v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 345.

32. Not a ground for a new trial though the relationship was unknown to the accused or his counsel until after trial. McCrimmon v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 481.

33. In an action against a county, the fact that a juror is a taxpayer therein does not disqualify him, especially in view of plaintiff's absolute right to have the case transferred to the adjoining county. Wilson v. Wapello County, 129 Iowa, 77, 105 N. W. 363.

34. Held in a prosecution of a baggage master for embezzlement of baggage that it is the better practice to exclude employes of the railroad, although not decided that it was error for the court to refuse so to do. Hopkins v. State [Fla.] 42 So. 52. Since a lessor railroad company is liable for negligence of the lessee resulting in injury to third persons, thus making the servants of the latter in effect servants of the former, they are disqualified to sit as a juror in an action against the lessor by a party injured. Georgia R. & Banking Co. v. Tice, 124 Ga. 459, 52 S. E. 916.

35. See 6 C. L. 323.

36. In determining whether a juror is so prejudiced as to disqualify him, the court should consider the facts stated as to the condition of his mind rather than his statement whether he could divest himself of such prejudice. Theobald v. St. Louis Transit Co., 191 Mo. 395, 90 S. W. 354. Under Cr. Code, § 468, the statement by a juror that he can render an impartial verdict is not sufficient to qualify him. Lucas v. State [Neb.] 105 N. W. 976.

37. Must consider the conduct and demeanor, etc. Lucas v. State [Neb.] 105 N. W. 976. A juror who stated that he could disregard his scruples and be governed by the evidence held properly excused where he testified it would do violence to his conscience. Commonwealth v. Minney [Pa.] 65 A. 31.

Evidence held insufficient to show that a jury could render an impartial verdict despite his opinion. Lucas v. State [Neb.] 105 N. W. 976.

38. See 6 C. L. 323.

39. Gaines v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 865. Held no abuse of discretion for the court to discharge an accepted juror, it appearing that he was to be a witness in a case following and might not be in a condition to testify if the jury should be out all night. Stats v. White [Or.] 87 P. 137. Where it developed after a juror had been accepted that he was distantly related to defendant and his counsel, it was not an abuse of discretion for the court to dismiss him, he preferring not to sit (Id.), even though one of the parties has voluntarily exhausted his peremptory challenges (Id.).

40. Criminal case. Williams v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 992.

41. State v. Pointdexter, 117 La. 380, 41 So. 688.

42. See 6 C. L. 324.

43. Chap. 176, p. 659, Laws 1905, prescribing the manner of selecting the jurors in counties of less than 30,000, held unconstitutional, as its requirements are impossible of execution in some counties and therefore delays the administration of justice, contrary to art. 1, § 6, Const. State v. Reneau [Neb.] 106 N. W. 451. Venires for the second and succeeding weeks of the term of

should be drawn[44] at the proper time[45] and a list made as required.[46] The list must be prepared and the jurors drawn by the persons designated,[47] impartially[48] and free from outside influence,[49] under such oath as is prescribed[50] pursuant to a sufficient order where one is necessary,[51] and where the drawing or list is by jury commissioners, all should sanction the names chosen.[52] If the list drawn is the act of proper officers, it is not vitiated by their having adopted acts or information of others.[53] The fact that the jury list does not contain a full quota of names is not ground for challenge to the array in the municipal court of New York.[54] In striking from the list those who have become disqualified, any mark or check showing that they are no longer subject to service is sufficient.[55] In Florida the drawings are to be made from the box provided at the time of drawing, and the fact that a new a circuit court should be drawn from the jury box. Colson v. State [Fla.] 40 So. 183.

44. It is an irregularity for clerk of circuit court to draw thirty-six names from jury box to serve as grand and petit jurors instead of thirty names, as is provided by Laws 1895, c. 4386, p. 153, § 2, and it is duty of judge to quash venire and panel upon discovering it. Colson v. State [Fla.] 40 So. 183. Held not so prejudicial as to be a fatal irregularity vitiating judgment. Id.

45. The fact that the jury list was made up in January instead of in December, as required by law, does not vitiate the panel. Hutto v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 55 S. E. 445. The mere fact that the jury commissioners met late is not a ground for quashing the venire, under Act No. 135, p. 223, 1898, where no fraud or injury is shown. State v. Stewart, 117 La. 476, 41 So. 798.

46. Under Code 1896, § 4333, providing that a judgment of conviction shall not be reversed for error not prejudicial to the accused, the fact that the clerk did not immediately make out the list as the jurors were drawn but placed the names in an envelope and made the list later, is not reversible error. Hammond v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 761.

47. Code 1904, p. 2114, § 4018, requiring the list furnished the sheriff with the venire to be drawn by the clerk, is mandatory, and a venire drawn from a list furnished by the court may be quashed (Hoback v. Com., 104 Va. 871, 52 S. E. 575), and, where quashed, a second venire, summoned pursuant to a list furnished by the judge of those before summoned, is insufficient for the same reason (Id.). The fact that certain men were put on the jury list at the suggestion of the clerk is not a ground for reversing a verdict where it is not shown that any of them served. State v. Johnny [Nev.] 87 P. 3.

48. The fact that a jury commissioner is related within the sixth degree to the person for the killing of whom the accused is charged, does not vitiate the array. State v. Henderson, 73 S. C. 201, 53 S. E. 170.

49. The fact that an attorney was present and made some suggestion to the jury commissioners as to selections is not a ground for setting aside a venire where the commissioners were not influenced by such suggestions, especially in view of act No. 135, p. 216, 1898. State v. Sheppard, 115 La. 942, 40 So. 363. Where none of the jurors suggested to the jury commissioners by an attorney were drawn to serve on the jury, no harm is done defendant. Id.

50. Failure of the jury commissioners to take the oath prescribed by Code 1896, § 4997, is no ground for quashing the special venire, no fraud being charged. Sims v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 413. An oath by the jury commissioners that they will impartially perform "all" duties incumbent upon them as commissioner, etc., is sufficient without specifically mentioning that they will discharge those imposed by the act of 1898. State v. Stewart, 117 La. 476, 41 So. 798.

51. Under Code 1904, p. 2114, § 4018, authorizing the judge to order more than twenty names to be drawn and listed in a felony case, but providing that he shall, in such case, specify the number of names to be drawn and the number to be summoned, a letter directing the clerk to summon thirty first-class men is insufficient to authorize the clerk to draw a list of that many. Hoback v. Com., 104 Va. 871, 52 S. E. 575.

52. In the absence of fraud, the fact that each jury commissioner selected a specific number of proposed jurors does not vitiate the venire where the commissioners as a body finally passed upon the ones selected. State v. Sheppard, 115 La. 942, 40 So. 363.

53. The fact that the supervisors and not the jury commissioners prepared the lists from which names were selected to fill the jury box, though an irregularity, is not fatal where the commissioners revised the same. Hutto v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 55 S. E. 445. Where the selection of jurors is imposed upon the board of county commissioners, the clerk thereof cannot select or urge the selection of any juror, though the board may take advantage of information in the possession of the clerk so long as it exercises its own judgment in the selection. State v. Johnny [Nev.] 87 P. 3.

54. Jury list contained only 170 names instead of 200, as required by Municipal Court Act, § 233 (Laws 1902, p. 1558, c. 580). Bunke v. New York Tel. Co., 110 App. Div. 241, 97 N. Y. S. 66.

55. It is not necessary, under act 135, p. 216, of 1898, as amended by act 58, p. 136, of 1904, requiring a list of 300 names for jury service to be made up and every six months corrected by striking those who have served, died, removed, etc., and filling in new names, to draw a line through the names stricken, but any check mark is sufficient. State v. Johnson, 116 La. 855, 41 So. 117.

box is provided before the time of service does not affect the venire.[56] In Kansas the jury list must be made from the real estate assessment roll as well as the personal property roll[57] and if no list is made or is vitiated by irregularities, the district judge may select a sufficient number of jurors for the term.[58]

Irregularities in drawing, where no prejudice is shown, will not vitiate a verdict.[59] Such matters are usually regarded as directory, and substantial compliance is sufficient[60] unless there is fraud.[61] A jury commissioner cannot be heard to impeach the return of proces verbal made by him.[62]

Jurors must be drawn from the appropriate district.[63]

While the Federal constitution does not insure one a jury composed of his own race or even a mixed one,[64] it entitles him to a jury drawn without race discrimination.[65] One alleging discrimination has the burden of establishing the fact.[66] The failure of the court to appoint a negro to the jury commission charged with the selection of the jury does not of itself show discrimination.[67]

56. Thompson v. State [Fla.] 41 So. 899.

57. Gen. St. 1901, § 3796, requiring the original jury list to be selected from the "assessment roll," held to refer to both rolls. State v. Gereke [Kan.] 86 P. 160.

58. Chap. 117, p. 158, Laws 1886. State v. Schmidt [Kan.] 87 P. 742. Chap. 236, p. 427, Laws 1901, held not inconsistent therewith so as to work an implied repeal. Id. And the fact that he fails to select jurors from all the cities and townships of the county does not invalidate the selection, there being no evidence that the omission was intentional. Id.

59. Where a juror was qualified and no prejudice is shown, an objection after verdict that he was not regularly drawn is too late. Oates v. Union R. Co., 27 R. I. 499, 63 A. 675.

60. Where it affirmatively appears that no possible injury could accrue to a defendant by an irregularity not amounting to a substiantial departure from the law in the drawing, an objection thereto should not prevail. Colson v. State [Fla.] 40 So. 183. See, also, notes preceding.

61. Statute to be deemed mandatory where fraud or wrong was committed. State v. Sheppard, 115 La. 942, 40 So. 363. Fraud in not keeping the list up to date to authorize the quashing of the venire, under § 15, act 135, p. 223, of 1898, must be actual fraud or such noncompliance as will justify an inference of fraud, and the mere failure to draw a line through the names stricken off is insufficient where they are checked. State v. Johnson, 116 La. 855, 41 So. 117.

62. State v. Johnson, 116 La. 855, 41 So. 117.

63. The jury in an expropriation case should be taken, as far as possible, from the vicinage. Louisiana R. & Nav. Co. v. Morere, 116 La. 997, 41 So. 236. But the fact that they were drawn from the opposite side of the river, there being nothing to show that those on the same side were qualified or that the sheriff acted from a sinister motive, does not vitiate the jury. Id. Where the territorial extent of a Federal district is changed after the commission of a crime, the Federal jurors for the trial thereof must be drawn from the district as it originally stood. U. S. Const. Amend. 6. United States v. Greene, 146 F. 776. In all cases where crime is charged, the jury district should be coextensive with the trial district; and one charged with an offense committed beyond municipal limits, but within police court jurisdiction as fixed by 97 O. L. 7, cannot be legally tried by a jury drawn from residents of the municipality only. Fendrick v. State, 9 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 49.

64. Martin v. Texas, 200 U. S. 316, 50 Law. Ed. 497; Thomas v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 535, 95 S. W. 1069.

65. Thomas v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 535, 95 S. W. 1069; State v. West, 116 La. 626, 40 So. 920. The fact that the negroes are not given a pro rata representation on the jury is not a violation of the Federal constitution where there was no discrimination in fact. Thomas v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 535, 95 S. W. 1069.

66. As it will be presumed that the statute was followed in the selection. State v. West, 116 La. 626, 40 So. 920.

Held insufficient to show discrimination: Affidavit of defendant verifying this motion to quash. Rivers v. State [Tenn.] 96 S. W. 956; Martin v. Texas, 200 U. S. 316, 50 Law. Ed. 497. The fact that no negro was drawn on the trial jury. Thomas v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 535, 95 S. W. 1069; State v. West, 116 La. 626, 40 So. 920: Martin v. Texas, 200 U. S. 316, 50 Law. Ed. 497. Affidavits that affiants had not seen or heard of a colored man being called to serve on a jury. Ransom v. State [Tenn.] 96 S. W. 953. Evidence that of the 10,000 voters in the county 3,000 were negroes of whom 10 to 25 per cent were disqualified for jury service and that only one negro was drawn for service for each week, is insufficient to show discrimination as against the testimony of the commissioners that no disorimination was made. Thomas v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 535, 95 S. W. 1069. An affidavit made by defendant, a negro, alleging that his race was discriminated against in the selection of the jury, that about 20 per cent of the voters were negroes, and that 15 per cent of them were eligible to jury service, but that none had ever been selected which was the result of discrimination, held insufficient to present the question. Smith v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 1254, 91 S. W. 742.

67. Especially where the judge instructs

§ 6. The venire and like process.[68]—An objection that the notice summoning the jurors failed to state that they were to serve in the oyer and terminer cannot be raised by defendant,[69] and in Alabama a mistake in the name of a juror does not vitiate the venire,[70] although the juror is subject to challenge.[71] In Virginia the venire facias need not state that the jury summoned pursuant thereto is to try all the cases at that term,[72] nor need it contain the names of those to be tried.[73] Where the return of the writ shows what was done thereunder, it is not error, on objection thereto, to permit an amendment making it more definite.[74] The venire must be served by the proper officer.[75]

§ 7. Empaneling the trial jury.[76]—The trial jury must be organized and empaneled by the designated authority,[77] and be drawn from the proper panel.[78] Unless waived,[79] a party, especially the accused in a criminal case, is entitled to the attendance of the full panel;[80] but before an accused can complain of the absence of a juror, he must ask for a continuance[81] and demand process to secure such absentee.[82] Where some of the jurors are deliberating in another case, their names the commissioners not to discriminate. Thomas v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 535, 95 S. W. 1069.

69. Only available to the jurors. Commonwealth v. Johnson, 213 Pa. 432, 62 A. 1064.

70. Code 1896, § 5007. Criminal case. Hammond v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 761; Martin v. State, 144 Ala. 8, 40 So. 275. It may be shown that a petit juror, in the middle initial of whose name a mistake was made, was the only person of that name residing in the precinct. Harrison v. State, 144 Ala. 20, 40 So. 568.

71. A variance in the middle initial of the name of a juror is no ground for discarding it. Untreiner v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 285. Under Code 1896, § 5007, it is error to allow one whose name is Hiram Warner Prickett, called as H. Dudley Prickett, to sit, over the defendant's objection. Martin v. State, 144 Ala. 8, 40 So. 275.

72, 73. Bennett v. Com. [Va.] 55 S. E. 698.

74. Where the return at the beginning contained a clause "Summoned by sheriff of Johnson County to serve as a special venire," and then followed a list of 250 names opposite 42 of which was written "not found," amended so as to show that 208 were summoned and that 42 were not served. Rice v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 396, 94 S. W. 1024.

75. Act May 24, 1887 (P. L. 185), authorizing in general terms the appointment of a deputy sheriff to discharge the duties of the sheriff, does not repeal Act April 14, 1834 (P. L. 333), specifically authorizing the selecting and summoning of jurors by the coroner in case of the inability of the sheriff to act (Commonwealth v. Mallini, 214 Pa. 50, 63 A. 414), and the selection and summoning by the coroner was valid, especially where it does not appear that a deputy was appointed (Id.).

76. See 6 C. L. 325.

77. Under Acts 1890-91, p. 561, § 3, the jury should be organized and empaneled by the court and not the judge. Laws v. State, 144 Ala. 118, 42 So. 40.

78. When a capital case is set for trial on a day of the second or any subsequent week of the term, the special jurors together with the regular jurors summoned for that week constitute the special venire from which the trial jury is to be selected, as provided by Code 1896, § 5005. Smith v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 957.

79. Where a party announces that he is ready for trial, knowing that a part of the regular panel of jurors has been excused for the day, and upon failing to secure a jury from the remainder makes no objection to the court's order to summon talesmen except to say that he preferred the regular panel, he waives his right to have the case postponed until the next day in order to secure the full panel. Rice v. Dewberry [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 193, 93 S. W. 715.

80. Where a return shows that twenty-four of the special venire have not been served, twelve of whom were not served for want of time, it is error to overrule a motion to quash for the want of a showing of due diligence and to direct the sheriff to summon the remainder, compelling the defendant to proceed in the meantime. Horn v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 271, 97 S. W. 822.

81. Before accused can complain of being compelled to proceed in the absence of certain jurors who had been summoned, he must ask that the case be postponed a reasonable time to enable the jurors to be procured. Mays v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 96 S. W. 329.

82. When a party desires the presence of an absent juror, he must ask for an attachment, and he can not avail himself of such absence on appeal unless he makes such request. Hughes v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 525, 95 S. W. 1034. Where a special judge excused certain jurors with the consent of the parties but no memorandum is made of those excused, and upon call of the regular judge many were absent and the court, being unable to determine whether they were excused or not, excused them without objection by the parties and ordered talesmen summoned, the defendant thereafter cannot object. Id.

may be passed when called and replaced in the box when they come in.[83] Technical nonprejudicial irregularities in the manner of empaneling are not grounds for reversal,[84] especially if caused by appellant,[85] and where the names put in the box to be drawn are numbered merely for convenience, a mistake therein does not affect the venire.[86] In Alabama the court may call six jurors in a criminal case and, after asking each the qualifying questions, permit them to answer together.[87] Where it is discovered after a jury has been empaneled but before any evidence is submitted that a juror is disqualified, he may be set aside and a new jury empaneled.[88] One claiming an irregularity has the burden of establishing it.[89]

§ 8. Arraying and challenging. A. Challenge to the array or panel.[90]—The ground of challenge to the array must be one which affects the entire panel and not particular jurors,[91] must be seasonably made,[92] and, where the common law has not been abrogated by statute, must be in writing.[93] Evidence in support of a motion to quash must be responsive to the particular motion made.[94]

(§ 8) B. Challenge for cause.[95]—Failure to appear at the trial[96] or to challenge[97] for a known disqualification,[98] or one which could have been discovered by reasonable diligence,[99] waives the objection, and an objection after verdict is usually

84. Under Va. Code 1904, § 3158, providing that in the selection of a special jury sixteen shall be chosen by lot from the twenty qualified names in the box, it is not error to draw four by lot and excuse them instead of drawing sixteen and excusing the remaining four. Duke v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. [Va.] 55 S. E. 548.

91. Where, after a panel was selected, a newspaper printed an account of an alleged confession of the accused which was read by four members of the panel, held that the court properly overruled a motion to quash the array and discharged the four. State v. Hottman, 196 Mo. 110, 94 S. W. 237.

92. Too late: Motion to quash because of a mistake in the name of a juror drawn made after three jurors have been accepted. Smith v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 957. Motion filed on the day of trial, under act Feb. 18, 1897 (Acts 1896-97, p. 1248), requiring it to be filed not later than 6 o'clock p. m. of the preceding day. Raines v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 932.

Timely: A motion to quash a venire is timely where the trial has not been entered upon, though defendant has announced that he is ready for trial. Porter v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 421.

93. State v. Hottman, 196 Mo. 110, 94 S. W. 237. A challenge to the array must be in writing. State v. Church [Mo.] 98 S. W. 16. Where a challenge was heard and overruled without a written one being filed, unknown to the court at the time, and the court gave permission to file but requested to see it when filed, one filed but not shown to him does not avoid a waiver. People v. Tubbs [Mich.] 110 N. W. 132.

94. Where trial jury is composed entirely of talesmen, evidence as to the manner in which they were drawn is not responsive to a motion to quash because of irregularities in making up the jury list and jury box, and therefore immaterial. Hill v. State [Miss.] 42 So. 380.

95. See 6 C. L. 327. Grounds for disqualification, see ante, §§ 2, 3, 5, 6.

96. Where the defendant had notice of the regular call of his case, it was not an abuse of discretion for the court to proceed to the selection of the jury and the defendant cannot thereafter have more jurors called that he may challenge some selected. Dotterer v. Scott, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 553.

97. A juror incompetent propter defectum is rendered specially competent by a failure to challenge, and a verdict will not be set aside for such defect. Parris v. State, 125 Ga. 777, 54 S. E. 751. Where a party fails to object to a juror and obtain a ruling on his qualications, he cannot thereafter complain, especially in view of Cr. Code of Prac. § 281, providing the decision of the trial court in the formation of the jury is not reviewable. Day v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 816, 96 S. W. 510.

98. A known ground of disqualification of a juror before or during the progress of a too late.[1] A challenge for cause must be timely exercised[2] and must specifically state the ground of challenge.[3] The challenging party has the burden of proving the disqualification.[4]

Right to list of jurors.[5]—In some states an accused upon timely demand,[6] is entitled to a copy of the venire from which the trial jury is to be selected,[7] but not of talesmen thereafter summoned.[8] A defendant is not deprived of his list by a voluntary loan of the same.[9] The list should contain only the names of the jurors summoned,[10] and a mistake in a name therein is not a ground for quashing the venire.[11]

(§ 8) C. Peremptory challenges and standing jurors aside.[12]—The Federal government may in criminal cases stand aside a juror until the panel is exhausted trial is waived by failure to object until after verdict. Robinson v. Territory, 16 Okl. 241, 85 P. 451.

99. Failure to examine a juror as to his competency, full opportunity having been given, especially where only objection is made after trial. Partially blind and an ex-convict for felony. Reed v. State [Neb.] 106 N. W. 649. A party who has been diligent as to the examination of proposed jurors cannot be required to submit his case to jurors who are disqualified by law and but for their own misconduct would have been subject to challenge. Bershiet v. Cincinnati Trac. Co., 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 575.

1. Rice v. Dewberry [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 193, 93 S. W. 715. Under Civ. Code 1902, § 2946, requiring objections to jurors to be made before the jury is empaneled or charged with the trial, the fact that a juror had sat upon the former trial of the case is no ground for setting aside the verdict where the appellant was guilty of negligence in not discovering the fact, and especially where it appears that the juror himself had forgotten the fact. State v. Langford [S. C.] 55 S. E. 120. Where after verdict an attack is made upon a juror as disqualified, the findings of the trial judge will not be reversed unless there was an abuse of discretion. McCrimmon v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 481. Where an alien was accepted and served for a day before the fact was discovered, when he took out his second papers and continued not only without objection but with the express consent of the accused, his right to object was waived. Schwantes v. State, 127 Wis. 160, 106 N. W. 237.

2. A challenge for cause after acceptance but before the juror is sworn is timely, if the cause was unknown before acceptance. Moore v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 345.

3. State v. McCarver, 194 Mo. 717, 92 S. W. 684; State v. Miles [Mo.] 98 S. W. 25. Failed to specify that the challenge was on the ground of having an opinion. State v. Myers, 198 Mo. 225, 94 S. W. 242. A challenge in the form "I challenge the juror for cause" may be disregarded. Robinson v. Territory, 16 Okl. 241, 85 P. 451. Pen. Code § 914, declaring that every challenge for any of the causes stated in § 910 must state the particular clause, is mandatory. Leigh v. Territory [Ariz.] 85 P. 948.

4. In the absence of a showing, it is presumed that jurors have no disqualifying opinion. Day v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 816, 96 S. W. 510. Testimony of a juror that he had rendered jury service within a year is insufficient to show disqualification under Gen. St. 1905, c. 54, § 1, requiring the trustees to exclude from the jury list persons who have served within a year, since such service may have been subsequent to the making of the list. State v. Hamilton [Kan.] 87 P. 363.

5. See 6 C. L. 327.

6. A motion under Rev. Code 1892, § 1408, after the completion of the drawing of a special venire for a list thereof, is untimely and its refusal lies within the discretion of the court. Hannah v. State, 87 Miss. 375, 39 So. 855.

7. Where a capital case is set for trial at the second or any later week of the term, the special venire, a copy of which must be served on defendant, consists of the special jurors drawn and the regular jurors for the week (Smith v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 957; Walker v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 878); hence, an order of the court during the first week directing the sheriff to serve upon the defendant a list of the special jurors summoned and those drawn for "this week" is erroneous (Walker v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 878), and names of persons not regularly drawn and summoned for that week, but called to complete the panel because of the absence of the regular jurors, should not be put on such list (Smith v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 957).

8. State v. Thompson, 116 La. 829, 41 So. 107. Cr. Code 1896, § 5009. Untreiner v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 285.

9. Especially where the sheriff promptly returns the same upon demand. Martin v. State, 144 Ala. 8, 40 So. 275.

10. A list served upon defendant containing names drawn but not summoned is erroneous. Walker v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 878. Not a ground for quashing the venire where the list contained an indorsement showing that particular jurors therein were not served. Porter v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 421.

11. Untreiner v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 285. Code 1896, § 5007. Hammond v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 761. "Bachlor" for "Bachelor." Skipper v. State, 144 Ala. 100, 42 So. 43. "Rodes" for "Rhodes" (Coleman v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 977), or "B. W. Clifton" for "B. W. Clifton, Jr.," is no ground for quashing the venire in view of Code 1896, § 5007, providing that a mistake in the name of a person summoned in a capital case is not sufficient to quash the venire (Smith v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 957).

12. See 6 C. L. 327.

without assigning any cause, in those states where the right of qualified challenge exists in favor of the sovereign, providing such practice has been adopted by court rule in the Federal courts.[13]

Peremptory challenges.[14]—The right of peremptory challenge is statutory and not constitutional.[15]

Number allowed.[16]—The number of peremptory challenges to which a party is entitled is statutory, but usually joint parties are only entitled in the aggregate to the number allowed to a single party,[17] unless their interests are antagonistic.[18] The number of challenges to which an accused is entitled in the territorial district court of Oklahoma, exercising the jurisdiction common to the Federal courts, is determined by the territorial law.[19] Where the number is dependent upon the offense, the phrase "the offense charged" means the offense for which the accused may be tried.[20] A party cannot object to an insufficient allowance unless he exhausts those granted,[21] and an objectionable juror is thereafter called.[22] Where too many challenges are allowed, a party does not waive the error by accepting the jury as selected without objection.[23] In California where after the completion of the jury a juror is dismissed, a motion before another is called to determine the number of peremptory challenges the parties will be allowed is premature.[24]

Time for challenge.[25]—A peremptory challenge must be seasonably exercised,[26] and a defendant is not entitled to examine on voir dire the entire panel before exercising the challenge as to those called.[27] A party by passing his unexhausted peremptory challenges and accepting the jury does not thereby waive his right to peremptorily challenge a juror subsequently called to take the place of one peremptorily challenged by his opponent.[28]

The order of challenges.[29]—Federal courts are not bound by state statutes as to the order in which peremptory challenges shall be exercised.[30] Where the jurors

S. 150, 50 Law. Ed. 972. Permitting the Federal government to exercise a qualified right of challenge is not prejudicial where, at the time the jury is completed, both the government and the defendant have unused peremptory challenges. 17. Where two actions are tried together by one jury, the plaintiffs are entitled to only four peremptory challenges. Hodges v. Southern Pac. Co. [Cal. App.] 86 P. 620. In condemnation proceedings against the owner of the fee and his tenant, defendants constitute one party and are entitled to but three peremptory challenges. Freiberg v. South Side El. R. Co., 221 Ill. 508, 77 N. E. 920. Ky. St. 1903, § 2258, giving "each party litigant" three challenges, construed to allow only three challenges to the antagonistic sides. Pendley v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 28 Ky. L. R. 1324, 92 S. W. 1. Under Kirby's Dig. § 4536, declaring that in civil cases each party shall have three peremptory challenges, and § 4540 providing that where there are several persons on the same side, the challenge of one shall be the challenge of all, all the defendants are only entitled to three challenges in the aggregate. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Burrows, 77 Ark. 74, 96 S. W. 336.

26. The temporary passing of the jury and waiver of the right to peremptory challenges by counsel for plaintiff does not deprive him of the right of exercising such challenges after challenges for cause by the defendant, provided no injustice will result to the defendant. Wheeling & Lake Erie R. Co. v. Parker, 9 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 28.

have been pronounced competent by the court, the right to strike must be exercised in the same manner as if no challenge of incompetency had been interposed.[31]

(§ 8) D. Examination of jurors and trial and decision of challenges.[32]—Jurors are required by their oath to answer questions propounded without concealment or evasion.[33]

Scope of examination.[34]—The scope of examination rests largely within the discretion of the court,[35] and while a juror may be examined as to whether he would convict upon circumstantial evidence,[36] or is opposed to punitive damage where such is sought,[37] he cannot be asked whether he wishes to serve.[38] The object being to ascertain a juror's qualification, questions should be directed toward that end exclusively,[39] and both attorney and court should refrain from prejudicial remarks[40] and conduct.[41] An examination testing a juror's knowledge of material facts should be limited to facts involved in the present case.[42] Plaintiff in an action for personal injuries against his employer may examine jurors as to their interest or connection with any indemnity insurance company,[43] and, while he has a right to ascertain 31. Parties must strike alternately. Nobles v. State [Ga.] 56 S. E. 125.

32. See 6 C. L. 329.

33. When proposed jurors are sworn on their voir dire, they are sworn to tell the whole truth and not part of it, and their answers should squarely meet, without evasion, what is fairly expressed by the terms of the questions, and where one undergoing such an examination was guilty of evasion or concealment, the party examining him was deprived of a substantial right and is entitled to a new trial. Bershiet v. Cincinnati Traction Co., 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 575.

34. See 6 C. L. 329.

35. Especially in misdemeanor cases, and such discretion should be guided largely by the ground of attack. Held, where the only objection was that the jurors had heard certain affidavits and evidence for a continuance, it was not an abuse of discretion to refuse the other statutory questions where the one relative to opinions was asked. Nobles v. State [Ga.] 56 S. E. 125.

36. In a prosecution punishable with death, such question is not objectionable as assuming that the state has only circumstantial evidence. State v. Stephens, 116 La. 36, 40 So. 523.

37. Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Roberts [Miss.] 40 So. 481.

38. Abby v. Wood [Wash.] 86 P. 558.

39. Question of a venireman as to whether he was a stockholder in any indemnifying insurance company held to show that the real purpose was to get the fact of insurance before the jurors. Hoyt v. Davis Mfg. Co., 112 App. Div. 755, 98 N. Y. S. 1031. Record held to show that plaintiff's counsel acted in good faith in examining a supposed agent of an insurance company in the presence of the jury as to the relation of the company to defendant, and not for the purpose of getting the fact of insurance before the jury. Viou v. Brooks-Scanlon Lumber Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 891. In a suit for injuries resulting from the falling of an elevator held not error to permit counsel while examining a juror on his voir dire to question him in the presence of other jurors as to what conditions he found to exist while examining the elevator. Alexander v. McGaffey [Tex. Civ. App.] 88 S. W. 462.

40. Preliminary statement of counsel before asking a juror in a personal injury case whether he was interested in any indemnity insurance company, and long colloquy between counsel and court held to give undue prominence to such insurance. Howard v. Beldenville Lumber Co. [Wis.] 108 N. W. 48.

41. Where, after a juror has been accepted, the court is informed that there is sickness in the juror's family, it is not reversible error for the court, after examining the juror as to the extent of the sickness, to ask the defendant if he would excuse the juror, at the same time telling him he could do as he pleased. Boyd v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 564, 94 S. W. 1053. Where plaintiff's counsel is informed after the empaneling of the jury that one has expressed an adverse opinion and defendant refuses to consent to the excusing of the juror, it is not error to permit counsel to ask the juror in the presence of the other jurors if he had expressed such opinion. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Paschall [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 709, 92 S. W. 446.

42. In a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, it is not error to refuse to allow jurors to be examined as to whether they knew anything about the facts of a former case in which defendant was charged with assault with intent to murder, which case grew out of the same transaction, the purpose of such questions not appearing. Woodroe v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 682, 96 S. W. 30.

43. Vindicator Consol. Gold Min. Co. v. Firstbrook [Colo.] 86 P. 313; Cripple Creek Min. Co. v. Brabant [Colo.] 87 P. 794; Dow Wire Works v. Morgan, 29 Ky. L. R. 854, 96 S. W. 530. And, within reasonable limits, plaintiff will be protected in the exercise of the right, and, strictly within the right, admissions of the defendant may be received, although indirectly involving the company. Viou v. Brooks-Scanlon Lumber Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 891. Question must be so asked as to not give undue importance whether any such insurance exists in order to intelligently select the jury,[44] he cannot interrogate defendant's counsel[45] or his assistant[46] upon such question.

Review of trial of challenges.[47]—A party desiring to review questions propounded to the jurors by the court must object thereto and save exceptions at the time and make such assigned errors a ground for new trial.[48] While the court is vested with great discretion in passing upon the fitness of a juror, such rulings are subject to the same review as other discretionary rulings[49] if brought up on a sufficient record.[50] Rulings involving issues of fact will not be reviewed unless the bill of exceptions states that it contains all the evidence as required by supreme court rule.[51]

Improper overruling or sustaining of a challenge as a ground for reversal.[52]—Since litigants are not entitled to the service of any particular juror but only to a fair and impartial jury, error in excluding a juror is not a ground for reversal where such a jury is secured,[53] nor will a reversal be granted for the erroneous overruling of a challenge where the juror was thereafter excluded,[54] or where the objecting party waives[55] or fails to exhaust his peremptory challenges,[56] although, if the party is thereby compelled to use a peremptory challenge and an objectionable juror is thereafter forced upon him, relief will be granted.[57] In Arkansas a case will not be reversed for an erroneous ruling on a challenge for cause where the state will accept conviction in the lowest degree possible under the evilence.[58]

Qualified juror excused during the empaneling. State v. Gereke [Kan.] 86 P. 160. Rejection of a juror is no ground of complaint as defendant is not entitled to select the jury, and this rule is equally applicable where the judge refuses to allow an excused juror to be cross-examined. Act No. 135, p. 216, of 1898, § 1. State v. Thompson, 116 La. 829, 41 So. 107. The decision of the Kentucky court of appeals, that, under Ky. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 76, 97 S. W. 100. The mere fact that it appears that some objection was made to a juror but the nature is not stated, shows no prejudice. Id. A bill of exceptions reciting that accused was forced to use a peremptory challenge to get rid of a juror alleged to have been disqualified for cause and was thereby compelled to accept S., an objectionable juror, is insufficient in that it does not show that accused exhausted his peremptory challenges, or in what manner S. was objectionable. been called,[60] or where the regular panel has been quashed[61] or discharged,[62] the court is authorized, in many states, to summon a special venire. Where the special venire in a criminal case[63] proves insufficient, talesmen may be called,[64] and the fact that such talesmen are present at the request of the sheriff does not disqualify them.[65] The Alabama statute, requiring the special venire in a criminal case to be drawn by the "presiding judge,"[66] means the judge presiding at the time of drawing and not necessarily the trial judge.[67] The special venire summoned in any felony case in Virginia may be used for the trial of all felony cases pending at that term.[68] The summoning of additional jurors is authorized in some instances.[69] The manner of drawing talesmen[70] and special venire[71] is usually provided by statute. 61. Where venire and panel were quashed because of irregularities, held that, on being satisfied that the public interest would be best subserved thereby, the circuit judge had authority, under Laws 1899, c. 4736, p. 125, to order the sheriff to summon from the body of the county thirty persons to serve as grand and petit jurors for the term. Colson v. State [Fla.] 40 So. 183. Such statute was not amended in the particular or repealed by Laws 1903, c. 5127, p. 67. Id. Code 1904, p. 2115, § 4019, providing that if a sufficient number of jurors cannot be secured from those summoned, the court may direct another venire facias and cause to be summoned from bystanders as many as may be necessary, does not apply where the first writ was quashed. 63. Where the return of the special venire shows that the jurors have not all been served, those in attendance constitute the special venire, and after they have been exhausted, it is error to direct the remaining jurors to be summoned as a part of the venire. 67. Laws v. State, 144 Ala. 118, 42 So. 40.

68. May try one whose indictment was pending at the time of issuing the venire, though he was in another state and not a fugitive from justice. Bennett v. Com. [Va.] 55 S. E. 698.

69. Where only thirty-six jurors were drawn for the term, under the express provisions of Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 648, the special venire properly included additional jurors. Delaney v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 580, 90 S. W. 642. A trial court, in anticipation of a failure to obtain a jury from the regular or special venire, may order additional jurors summoned to be in readiness. Colson v. State [Fla.] 40 So. 183.

70. Gen. Laws (29th Leg.) p. 17, c. 14, amending Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 647a, is intended to equalize jury service and has no application to the selection of talesmen, and it is proper for the court to direct the sheriff to summon talesmen according to his selection, as authorized by Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 649. Mays v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 96 S. W. 329; Wallace v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 1050. Under Act No. 135, p. 222, of 1898, § 11, a trial judge, in his discretion, may order talesmen summoned from that portion of the parish remote from the scene of crime, and where his orders are disobeyed, he may stand aside jurors so drawn. State v. Thompson, 116 La. 829, 41 So. 107.

71. Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 647, providing the method of drawing a special venire in a capital case, is not in conflict with art. 647a (Acts 29th Leg. p. 17, c. 14), providing for a special venire list out of which talesmen are to be drawn when the special venire has been exhausted, and hence not repealed by it. Gabler v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 428, 95 S. W. 521. Acts 29th Leg. p. 17, c. 14 (art. 3159a), does not change the venire law which requires that the names of all the veniremen for the term be placed in the box prior to the drawing of the special venire. Wallace v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 471. Under Acts 29th Leg. p. 17, c. 14, providing that, after the exhaustion of a special venire, an additional venire shall be drawn from the list selected by the jury commissioners, the court has no authority, in capital cases, to order the sheriff to summon talesmen, except as selected by the commissioners and drawn by the clerk. Keith v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 516, 94 S. W. 1044. The manner of selection prescribed by Comp. Laws, § 344, is only directory, and upon the exhaustion of the regular panel the court may, with the consent of bama the venire for a capital case must be drawn by the judge,[72] who must draw not less than twenty-five nor more than fifty names.[73] The judge need not announce the names as he draws them.[74]

§ 10. Special and struck juries and juries of less than twelve.[75]—In the county court of Texas, a case may be tried before a jury of less than twelve if there are less than that number of names in the box; provided there are at least six.[76] In order to entitle one to a jury of twelve, under the Municipal Court Act of New York, demand must be made at the time of joining issue.[77]

§ 11. Swearing.[78]—Mere irregularities in administering the oath where substantial compliance with the statute is made is not reversible error,[79] especially where the party fails to object.[80]

§ 12. Custody and discharge of jurors and jury.[81]

§ 13. Compensation, sustenance, and comfort of jurors.[82]—The Missouri statute, relating to compensation of jurors called but not used in the more serious criminal cases, applies only to those who qualify on the panel of forty from which the trial jury is selected.[83]

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

§ 2. Compensation, Duties, and Liabilities (636).
§ 3. Civil Jurisdiction (637). Residence Determining Jurisdiction (637). The Amount in Controversy (638). Title to Realty (639). Objections to the Jurisdiction (639).
§ 4. Procedure in Justices' Courts (639). The Docket and Other Records (640). Change of Venue (641). Transfer of Cause (641) Process and Appearance (641). Pleadings, Issues and Proof (642). Verdict and Judgment (644). Execution (646).
§ 5. Appeal and Error and Remedies Extraordinary (646). Bonds (649). Process or Appearance (650). The Transcript (651). The Record (651). Dismissal (651). Pleadings on Appeal (652). The Case is Tried De Novo on Appeal (653). Judgment (654). Further Appeal or Error (654).
§ 6. Certiorari (655).
§ 7. Criminal Jurisdiction and Procedure (656).

§ 1. The office.[84]—A justice of the peace is generally a civil magistrate, whose office is of statutory creation and whose jurisdiction is limited.[85] Where it appears defendant, have persons summoned from particular townships. People v. Wheeler, 142 Mich. 212, 12 Det. Leg. N. 684, 105 N. W. 607. The fact that the names of the forty jurors, drawn on the special venire, began with a letter between G and K inclusive, does not of itself show that they were not drawn in the legal manner. Woodward v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 128, 97 S. W. 499.

72. Under Code 1896, § 5004, in capital cases the judge must draw the names of the veniremen from the box, and a judgment entry not showing that the names were drawn by him will not support conviction. Allen v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 660.

73. Code 1896, § 5004, held mandatory. Morris v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 274. Record failing to show the names of those drawn or the number thereof held insufficient. Id.

74. Not necessary under Code 1896, § 5004. Hammond v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 761.

75. See 6 C. L. 330.

76. Under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, § 683, providing that the clerk shall draw from the box, if in the county court, the names of twelve jurors or as many as there may be, if there is a less number, and § 684, providing that if there be not as many as six the court shall summon, etc., held that if there are only six in the box the court may refuse a larger panel, and when those names are stricken off, call talesmen. Hackleman v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 257, 91 S. W. 591. Bill of exceptions held not to affirmatively show that there were more than six in the box, and therefore does not show an error. Id.

77. Where at the close of plaintiff's case his complaint was amended so as to state a new cause of action and an adjournment was taken with an understanding that issue had been joined, a demand thereafter was too late. Bunk v. New York Tel. Co., 110 App. Div. 241, 97 N. Y. S. 66.

78. See 6 C. L. 331.

79. Swearing upon the Evangelists by requiring them to kiss the Book held sufficient. Preston v. State, 115 Tenn. 343, 90 S. W. 856.

80. Where a party fails to object at the time to the manner of administering the oath to the talesmen and makes no motion to have the jurors resworn and reexamined he cannot complain of the error. Preston v. State, 115 Tenn. 343, 90 S. W. 856.

that his bond has been approved, it is presumed that statutory requirements in connection therewith have to be complied with.[86] Recordation of his oath of office is not essential to the validity of his official acts.[87] If he is a de facto officer,[88] his official acts are valid and binding,[89] but if he is neither a de jure nor a de facto officer, they are not.[90]

§ 2. Compensation, duties, and liabilities.[91]—A justice's right to salary or fees rests entirely in legislative enactment,[92] and, where regulated on the basis of population to be determined from the last official census,[93] a judicial finding as to such population is presumed to be based on such census.[94] A justice waives the unconstitutional statute relative to his compensation, when, knowing of such invalidity, he accepts the salary therein provided for a number of years, and takes no steps to recover the fees prescribed by the valid law.[95] He is liable for the statutory penalty for illegally taking fees.[96] After a justice has rendered judgment in a case, he may recover unpaid fees in an action on implied contract.[97]

A justice who acts corruptly and falsifies his record is answerable both civilly and criminally,[98] but he may not be enjoined from acting in his judicial capacity upon a judgment upon his docket regular upon its face.[99] He is not personally liable for a wrongful execution by a constable acting under his instructions,[1] unless the

86. When the superior court approves the bond of a justice, it is presumed that it was accompanied as required by statute by an affidavit showing that the sureties were freeholders, though such affidavit is not shown. Guiberson v. Argabrite [Cal. App.] 87 P. 226.

87. Where it does not appear from the record that the justice's oath of office had been recorded as required by statute, such fact does not show that the oath had not been taken, and is insufficient to show that he acted without jurisdiction. Lund v. Ozanne [N. M.] 84 P. 710.

88. Where a justice is elected for a certain term or until his successor has qualified, and by a change in the election laws the election of a successor is postponed, the justice is a de facto official from the expiration of his term until the election of his successor. Stephens v. Davis [Ala.] 39 So. 831.

89. A judgment by a de facto justice is valid. Stephens v. Davis [Ala.] 39 So. 831.

90. Where a justice issues an attachment after his office has expired, and he had failed to give an official bond as required by statute, which provides that failure to give such bond vacates the office, the attachment is void. Smith v. Hilton [Ala.] 41 So. 747. A judgment rendered by a justice of the peace during interim of terms is void and of no effect, and ought to be enjoined where his term is limited to a certain period from date of his commission. Bushnell v. Koon, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 163.

91. See 6 C. L. 332.

92. Under Laws 1897, superseding Laws 1891, a justice who was not elected at the biennial city election after the adoption of the Laws of 1897, nor serving as the successor by appointment of one so elected, is not entitled to any salary. Ogden v. Chehalis County, 41 Wash. 45, 82 P. 1095. County Government Act, regulating compensation of justices in a certain class of townships as shown by the Federal Census of 1900, authorizes no salaries for justices in a township created after such census was taken, where it affords no means for ascertaining the population of such townships. Chinn v. Gunn, 148 Cal. 755, 84 P. 669.

93. The mode provided in County Government Act, § 184, subd. 13, amended by St. 1901, p. 750, c. 234, for ascertaining the population for the purpose of fixing the compensation of justices, being unconstitutional, it could be ascertained as provided in St. 1897, p. 460, c. 277. Chinn v. Gunn [Cal. App.] 84 P. 374.

94. Though the township in which a justice was appointed was formed after the taking of the census of 1900, by which only can its population be determined for the purpose of fixing his compensation, the finding by the court of the population is presumed to be based on such census. Guiberson v. Argabrite [Cal. App.] 87 P. 226.

95. State v. Messerly, 198 Mo. 35, 95 S. W. 913. The Barnett Law, amending Rev. St. 1889, § 5005, relative to fees of justices in certain cities, is void as a special law. Id.

96. The taking of fees by a justice for services for which no fee is allowed is actionable under Comp. St. 1903, § 34, c. 28. Leese v. Courier Pub. & Print. Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 443.

97. A judgment was rendered by a justice and affirmed on appeal. No judgment was entered because the suit was settled, and plaintiff in the action retained the fees fixed by the order of the appellate court. Held the justice could recover from him. Conlon v. Holste [Minn.] 110 N. W. 2.

98. Reddish v. Shaw, 111 Ill. App. 337.

99. Lasher v. Annunziata, 119 Ill. App. 653. Equity will not enjoin him concerning a matter over which he has jurisdiction. Grossman v. Davis, 117 Ill. App. 354.

1. A justice who instructs a constable as to his duty to sell property levied on is personally liable for wrongful sale only in case the constable was influenced by the instructions. Stallings v. Gilbreath [Ala.] 41 So. 423.

constable was influenced and guided by such instructions.[2] He is not liable on his bond for unofficial acts.[3] If he is indicted for malfeasance, it must appear that he acted in bad faith.[4] A complaint against him for an unlawful act must state what such wrongful act consisted in.[5] A private individual who justifies under process issued by a justice must show his jurisdiction.[6]

§ 3. Civil jurisdiction.[7]—Justice courts are courts of limited and special jurisdiction and are without power to hear any case when such power is not conferred specifically or by clear implication by statute,[8] but they have such jurisdition as is conferred by statute.[9] Justice courts have no equity jurisdiction,[10] but an equitable defense may be interposed.[11] Jurisdiction cannot be conferred by consent of parties upon a justice to reserve a case for decision to a later date than that authorized by statute.[12]

Residence determining jurisdiction.[13]—His jurisdiction is generally limited to the county of which the defendant is a resident,[14] and a nonresident does not waive lack of jurisdiction by merely appearing as a witness.[15] A defendant is not

2. But if the constable was influenced, the justice was liable as a joint tort feasor whether he was acting in his capacity as a justice or not. Stallings v. Gilbreath [Ala.] 41 So. 423.

3. Under the rule that an official who collects money on execution shall be liable on his bond for failure or refusal to turn it over to the party entitled, a justice, who is under no official duty to receive money collected by a constable on an execution issued by him, is not liable on his bond for failure to pay over the same, the bond being not liable for unofficial acts. Polk v. Peterson [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 922, 93 S. W. 504.

4. Where a justice is indicted for malfeasance, it must appear that he acted in bad faith. Hohenstein v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 238.

5. A complaint on the official bond of a justice alleging that he wrongfully issued a warrant for arrest is demurrable for failure to state what the wrongful acts were. Bufford v. Chambers [Ala.] 42 So. 597.

6. One, not an officer, who justifies under a process issued by a justice, must show the existence of the material facts upon which jurisdiction of the justice depends. Rice v. Travis, 117 Ill. App. 644.

7. See 6 C. L. 333. For jurisdiction in criminal proceedings, see Indictment and Prosecution, 8 C. L. 189.

8. Under the Montana statutes a justice has no jurisdiction of an action for deceit in connection with a sale of property. State v. Taylor [Mont.] 83 P. 484. Under Code 1896, § 2733, he has no jurisdiction where the amount of the claim exceeds $50. Tolbert v. Falkenberry [Ala.] 40 So. 120. A conviction for violation of a borough ordinance, had before a justice who is described as acting recorder of the borough, is void for want of jurisdiction. Borough of Vineland v. Kelk [N. J. Law] 63 A. 5. He has no jurisdiction to foreclose a laborer's lien on eighteen miles of railroad, a locomotive, and other property. Lewis v. Warren, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 890, 97 S. W. 104. An action to recover the amount of a lien is not an action to enforce it and a justice has jurisdiction. Where a client failed to recognize a lien of his attorney. O'Connor v. St. Louis Transit Co., 198 Mo. 622, 97 S. W. 150.

9. The proceedings before a justice to recover a penalty for violation of the provisions of an ordinance passed by the Board of Health pursuant to Gen. Laws, p. 1638, § 18, is a civil action in the court of small causes. Board of Health of Woodbury v. Cattell [N. J. Law] 64 A. 144. A justice has jurisdiction of an action on the case to recover for injuries to a horse as the result of negligence in maintaining a fence. Smithley v. Snowden, 120 Ill. App. 86. A married woman may be sued in a justice court for a debt due by her, or on a contract made by her before marriage, or on a contract made after marriage as a free trader. McAfee's Estate v. Gregg, 140 N. C. 448, 53 S. E. 304. Under a statute providing that an action on tax bills not exceeding a certain amount may be brought in a justice court in the city issuing them, a justice of the peace of the township in which a city is located has such jurisdiction. Carpenter v. Roth, 192 Mo. 658, 91 S. W. 540.

10. Where an equitable set-off is set up and judgment rendered thereon, such judgment is void. Cornett v. Ault, 124 Ga. 944, 53 S. E. 460.

11. In an action on a foreign judgment that the judgment was procured by fraud. Levin v. Gladstein [N. C.] 55 S. E. 371.

12. Tussing v. Evans, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 237; Thompson v. Ackerman, 21 Ohio C. C. 740, not followed.

13. See 6 C. L. 333.

14. Under a statute providing that the action must be brought in the county in which the defendant resides, a justice has no jurisdiction over a defendant who resides in another county. Mauck v. Rosser [Ga.] 55 S. E. 32. A defendant, who desires to obtain judgment over against a nonresident, may not bring in such person outside the county of his residence. Scott v. Fitch [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 841. Where in an action for services defendant pleaded that he was agent for another whom he asked to be made defendant, the third person was entitled to be sued in the county of his residence. Id.

required to file his plea of personal privilege to be sued in the county of his residence, before the trial day.[16]

The amount in controversy[17] is determined by the sum demanded,[18] with interest and incidentals provided for,[19] but, under a statute fixing the jurisdictional amount in actions for the recovery of personal property, the jurisdiction depends on the real value and not the value alleged.[20] The amount of each separate demand or cause of action and not the aggregate of the various causes which may be joined determines the jurisdictional amount.[21] The jurisdictional amount cannot be increased by stipulation.[22] A plaintiff may lay his damages in an amount within the jurisdiction, though the actual damages sustained exceeds such amount,[23]

15. A defendant in a proceeding in which the justice has no jurisdiction over him, who files no plea and makes no appearance or defense, does not waive want of jurisdiction by appearing as a witness for plaintiff, though when placed on the stand he does not raise the question of jurisdiction over him as a party. Mauck v. Rosser [Ga.] 55 S. E. 32.

16. Mistrot Bros. & Co. v. Wilson [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 314, 91 S. W. 870.

17. See 6 C. L. 333.

18. A complaint alleging the conversion of property of the value of over $100 shows that the justice has no jurisdiction. Storm v. Montgomery [Ark.] 95 S. W. 149. Where the jurisdictional amount in an action for tort is $50, an action by a passenger for loss of his trunk is for negligence and a claim in excess of $50 is beyond the jurisdiction of the justice. Brick v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. [N. C.] 55 S. E. 194. The jurisdiction of an action for injury to property is measured by the amount demanded, not by the value of the property injured. Watson v. Farmer [N. C.] 54 S. E. 419. Where issues in an action on a note showed credits which reduced the amount sued for to less than the jurisdictional amount, and judgment was for less, the justice had jurisdiction. Watt v. Parlin & Orendorff Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 154, 98 S. W. 428.

19. Where a note containing an agreement to pay interest and costs of collection is sued upon and including such incident exceeds the jurisdictional amount, the justice is without jurisdiction. Hamilton v. Rogers [Ga.] 54 S. E. 926.

Held to be within the jurisdiction: Under the rule that a justice has jurisdiction of controversies when the amount involved does not exceed $300, he has jurisdiction of an action in unlawful detainer where rent claimed amounted to $262.50, and a judgment for over $300 was not void but merely erroneous. South St. Joseph Town Co. v. Scott, 115 Mo. App. 16, 90 S. W. 727. In replevin where the value of the property does not exceed $200. Johnson v. Hartman, 119 Ill. App. 206. In replevin his jurisdiction is confined to cases in which the value of the property taken on the writ does not exceed $200 in value. Rice v. Travis, 117 Ill. App. 644. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4131, a plaintiff in unlawful detainer may recover possession and rent due if the amount does not exceed the justice's jurisdiction. South St. Joseph Town Co. v. Scott, 115 Mo. App. 16, 90 S. W. 727. Where it does exceed such amount, the judgment is void only as to the part relating to rent. Id. An affidavit in replevin for a schooner valued it at $150. A constable levied the writ and valued it at $200. Defendant replevied and gave a bond for $400. The justice gave a consent judgment for the restoration of the property or the payment of $150. Defendant appealed. Held that there was no appeal in excess of $200, the jurisdictional amount. Mellini v. Duly [Miss.] 40 So. 546. Since the adoption of Acts 1900, p. 53, where plaintiff suing on a note and by summons cites defendant to answer the complaint "in an action upon a note, a copy of which note is annexed to this summons," the copy of the note being for $100 and ten per cent as attorney's fees, but the summons being silent as to the giving of the notice specified in such act, such summons is not to be construed as a suit for attorney's fees and the court has jurisdiction. Godfree v. Brooks [Ga.] 55 S. E. 938. Under Const. art. 4, § 27, and Revisal 1905, § 1420, a justice has jurisdiction of all actions ex delicto where the demand does not exceed $50, and not merely tort involving property to the value of such sum. Duckworth v. Mull [N. C.] 55 S. E. 850.

20. Under Const. art. 7, § 40. Kaufman v. Kelley [Ark.] 95 S. W. 448.

21. Where each of several notes sued upon were within the jurisdictional amount, a justice has jurisdiction of an action on all the notes filed as original causes of action, though they aggregate a sum in excess of his jurisdiction. Brooks v. Hornberger [Ark.] 94 S. W. 708. Separate actions on several notes may be maintained where the amount of each does not exceed the jurisdiction, and where if consolidated the amount would exceed such jurisdiction. McDowell County Bank v. Wood [W. Va.] 55 S. E. 753. Ann. Code 1906, § 1899, providing that several demands arising out of contract against the same person must be brought for the whole amount due and payable, does not apply where the aggregate amount exceeds the jurisdiction of the justice. Id.

22. A stipulation on each of two notes, each less but aggregating more than $100, giving a justice jurisdiction, does not give him jurisdiction of an action on the two notes in one case. Cole v. Bock [Iowa] 105 N. W. 331.

23. Watson v. Farmer [N. C.] 54 S. E. 419. A claim may be reduced so as to bring it within the jurisdictional amount. Cable Co. v. Elliott, 122 Ill. App. 342.

and it is permissible to amend so as to bring the demand within the jurisdictional amount.[24] A verdict in excess of the jurisdictional amount demanded may be remitted.[25]

Title to realty.[26]—A justice has no jurisdiction of an action where title to realty is involved,[27] but he has jurisdiction where it is incidentally[28] or not necessarily[29] involved. A purely specious claim of ownership will not oust his jurisdiction in forcible entry and detainer.[30] In some states, if title to real estate is put in issue, he loses jurisdiction for all purposes[31] and in others he is authorized to certify the case to the higher court,[32] but under the latter rule he may do so only where statutory requirements are complied with.[33]

Objections to the jurisdiction.[34]—An objection to the jurisdiction should be taken by demurrer for want of jurisdiction.[35] An objection to the jurisdiction is not waived by appealing,[36] but an objection to jurisdiction over the subject-matter is a waiver of objections to the jurisdiction over the person.[37]

§ 4. Procedure in justices' courts[38] is regulated by statute.[39] The hearing and

24. Where a contract attached to a summons obligated a payment of $125, which was subsequently amended to show a credit which brought the amount below $100, the judgment was not void for want of jurisdiction. Smith v. Puett, 124 Ga. 921, 53 S. E. 457.

25. Where an amount within the jurisdiction was demanded and a verdict in excess of the jurisdictional amount rendered, which excess was remitted, the justice had jurisdiction to enter judgment. Watson v. Farmer [N. C.] 54 S. E. 419.

26. See 6 C. L. 334.

27. Has no jurisdiction of an action for damages for breach of covenant seisin, which involves an inquiry as to title. Brown v. Southerland [N. C.] 55 S. E. 108. Where one had gone into possession of land as tenant of a former owner, and one suing him for rent had purchased the land at execution sale, and the title being disputed and the tenant not having agreed to pay rent to such purchaser but declared his intention to retain possession until the title was settled, a justice has no jurisdiction of an action for rent by such purchaser. Minton v. Minton [Ark.] 98 S. W. 976.

Title not involved: Has jurisdiction of an action on a note given for the purchase price of land where title is not involved. Davis v. Evans [N. C.] 55 S. E. 344. Has jurisdiction of an action on a note given for the purchase price of land. McPeters v. English [N. C.] 54 S. E. 417. Where in trespass no evidence of title was introduced the justice had jurisdiction to enter judgment. State v. Justice Ct. of Carson [Nev.] 87 P. 1.

28. Evidence of title may be received in forcible entry and detainer where it is necessary to determine the question of possession. Dineen v. Olson [Kan.] 85 P. 538.

29. Bill of particulars examined and held not to show title to real estate involved within the meaning of Gen. St. 1901, § 5233. Wilkins v. Lee [Kan.] 85 P. 140. In trespass where plaintiff or defendant did not claim ownership of the land and there was no evidence that it belonged to a third person, title was not necessarily involved. State v. Justice Ct. of Carson [Nev.] 87 P. 1. Evidence held not to show that title to land was necessarily involved. Id. An action for trespass where possession alone is relied upon is not within 2 Mills' Ann. St. § 2630, providing that where title is involved the case shall be certified up. Patrick v. Brown [Colo.] 85 P. 325. Under a law requiring the maintenance of right of way fences, a complaint in an action for killing a horse alleging that the railroad passed through lands of private owners, which was denied, did not raise a material issue of title. Oregon Short Line R. Co. v. District Ct. of Third Judicial Dist. [Utah] 85 P. 360.

30. Clark v. Tukey Land Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 328.

31. In Montana if title to real estate is put in issue, the justice has jurisdiction for no purpose, and cannot confer jurisdiction on the district court by certifying the case to it. State v. District Ct. of Fifth Judicial Dist. [Mont.] 83 P. 597.

32. Under the statutes of North Dakota, a justice does not lose complete jurisdiction because the question of title arises. He is authorized to and must certify the case to the district court for trial. Johnson v. Erickson [N. D.] 105 N. W. 1104.

33. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1486, a bond must be given. State v. District Ct. of Fifth Judicial Dist. [Mont.] 83 P. 597.

34. See 6 C. L. 335.

35. Smith v. Newberry, 140 N. C. 385, 53 S. E. 234. The question of jurisdiction should be raised by plea in the justice court and not by motion to dismiss an appeal. Crew v. Heard [Ala.] 40 So. 337.

36. Bente v. Remington Typewriter Co., 116 Mo. App. 77, 91 S. W. 397. The defendant does not waive an objection to the jurisdiction of his person by appealing. State v. Ayers, 116 Mo. App. 90, 91 S. W. 398.

37. Brainard v. Butler, Ryan & Co. [Neb.] 109 N. W. 766.

38. See 6 C. L. 335.

39. Under a statute providing for the institution of an action by attachment, and providing that in such case the action is deemed commenced on delivery of the writ to the constable, the truth of the affidavit as to the causes of attachment must be determined as of the date the writ was de-determination of a question of law is a trial.[40] Forms of action are not recognized.[41] The nature of the action is to be determined from the evidence introduced.[42] The trial may be adjourned by consent.[43] A justice does not lose jurisdiction through the absence of the summons and return on the return and adjourned days.[44] Failure to require security for costs prior to the return day does not invalidate the judgment.[45] Where disqualification of the justice is not fatal to his judgment,[46] objection thereto may be waived.[47]

The docket and other records[48] need not be kept with the particularity required in courts of general jurisdiction.[49] It is sufficient if the entries made show jurisdiction,[50] and statutory requirements are complied with.[51] That an entry relative livered to the constable. Rosenthal v. Widensohler, 115 Mo. App. 237, 91 S. W. 432. The return of the writ that it was executed by leaving a copy at the usual place of abode of the defendant conclusively negatives the grounds of attachment that defendant has absconded, absented, or concealed himself so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served upon him. Id. Under the statutes of Wyoming relative to jury trials in justices' courts where the jury failed to agree at the first trial, or were paid by defendant who failed to appear at the adjourned day, the justice properly tried the case without empaneling a new jury. Pointer v. Jones [Wyo.] 85 P. 1050.

40. The hearing and determination of the issue of law raised by a demurrer to a complaint in a justice court is a "trial" within Rev. Codes 1899, § 6652. Walker v. Maronda [N. D.] 106 N. W. 296.

41. Where an action in replevin was commenced and the evidence showed conversion, a judgment in trover was properly entered. Morley v. Roach, 116 Ill. App. 534.

42. Schwarzschild v. Goldstein, 121 Ill. App. 1.

43. A second adjournment, on motion of plaintiff, defendant and his counsel being present and making no objection until after departure of the plaintiff, is equivalent to adjournment by consent. Beam v. Reynolds, 144 Mich. 383, 13 Det. Leg. N. 257, 108 N. W. 83.

44. Both being in his possession though not in the court room. Beam v. Reynolds, 144 Mich. 383, 13 Det. Leg. N. 257, 108 N. W. 83.

45. A judgment in favor of a nonresident plaintiff will not be reversed because the justice did not require security for costs, where security was given after the return day. Bakrow & Co. v. Totten [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 707, 109 N. W. 31.

46. Under statutes providing that a justice who is related to a party or who shall have been of counsel shall not hear a case, relationship does not avoid the judgment for disqualification but is merely ground for change of venue. Morrow v. Watts [Ark.] 95 S. W. 988.

47. Where a party knowing of the relationship of the justice to his opponent permits judgment to go against himself by default, and does not raise the question until the case is appealed, his objection on the ground of disqualification is waived. Morrow v. Watts [Ark.] 95 S. W. 988.

48. See 6 C. L. 336.

49. An entry on the docket, referring to the written petition on file, complies with a statute requiring a brief statement of the nature and amount of the demand (Pointer v. Jones [Wyo.] 85 P. 1050), and an entry that the complaint filed in the case presented a claim for an indebtedness for a certain sum sufficiently complies with the requirement of a brief statement of the nature of the pleadings and of a reference to those filed (McGeehan v. Bedford, 128 Wis. 167, 107 N. W. 296). Docket entry that the case was called and after waiting one hour defendant came not, and plaintiff appeared in person and by attorney, sufficiently shows that plaintiff appeared within the hour. Pointer v. Jones [Wyo.] 85 P. 1050. An entry in the docket that summons directing the defendant to appear and answer at a certain time sufficiently shows the particular nature of the process. Id. An entry in the docket that the jury returned a verdict of disagreement shows that the justice was satisfied that they could not agree after being out a reasonable time. Id. The record of a justice in a foreign attachment case is not bad because not setting forth what the notices contained, or that they stated the facts required to be stated by Rev. Code 1852, amended by Rev. Code 1893, p. 759, c. 677, § 33. Hazel v. Cacy [Del.] 63 A. 196. The record of a justice in a foreign attachment case, setting out that five legal notices of attachment were prepared and issued to a certain constable, is not bad because not stating that the justice prepared the notices as required to do by Rev. Code 1852, amended in 1893, p. 759, c. 677, § 33. Id.

50. Failure to refer in the docket to the written answer filed, as required by statute, is not a jurisdictional error, the answer having in fact been filed. Pointer v. Jones [Wyo.] 85 P. 1050. Record of landlord's proceeding must either state, or by reference to a complaint which so states, imply, all the facts entitling landlord to prevail. Judgment simply for possession and damages held bad. Ballou v. Mehring, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 156.

51. In order that a justice's docket should establish the invalidity of his judgment it must fail to disclose some fact which is not only essential to jurisdiction but which the statute requires shall be entered upon the docket. McGeehan v. Bedford, 128 Wis. 167, 107 N. W. 296. Where no statute requires the fact that evidence was heard to be entered to process is insufficient is not available to one who appears and answers.[52] Failure to make proper docket entries does not invalidate the judgment where such error is not prejudicial,[53] and a nonprejudicial irregularity will not invalidate the judgment of the appellate court.[54] The docket, like other court records, imports verity and cannot be contradicted, varied, or impeached except by evidence de hors such record.[55] It is a book required by law to be kept, and is competent evidence to establish facts recited therein, and entries properly recorded cannot be contradicted by parol.[56] But it is not evidence of facts not required to be recited therein.[57]

Change of venue[58] is regulated by statute.[59] Timely application therefor must be made[60] and affidavits must meet statutory requirements.[61]

Transfer of cause.[62]—A cause may be removed to a higher court by consent.[63]

Process and appearance.[64]—Application for process, returnable forthwith, must comply with statutory requirements.[65] Service may be made in the manner prescribed by law,[66] and the full time to appear must be given.[67] If the real name of the defendant is unknown,[68] process containing "real name unknown" must upon the docket, the absence of such entry does not show that the judgment is void. Id.

52. Objection that the docket does not sufficiently state the nature of process issued is not available to the defendant where he appears and answers without objecting. Pointer v. Jones [Wyo.] 85 P. 1050.

53. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4031, mistake in docketing an action against a guarantor on a note under his contract of guaranty, as an action on the note. Warder, Bushnell & Glessner Co. v. Johnson, 114 Mo. App. 571, 90 S. W. 392.

54. Warder, Bushnell & Glessner Co. v. Johnson, 114 Mo. App. 571, 90 S. W. 392.

55. Reddish v. Shaw, 111 Ill. App. 337.

56. Downey v. People, 117 Ill. App. 591. If a judgment has been rendered against a defendant in the court in which garnishment is pending, the justice may look to such judgment to ascertain the amount of the judgment to be rendered against the garnishee without such judgment being introduced. Morrison v. Hilburn [Ga.] 54 S. E. 938.

A transcript of the docket showing a judgment entered thereon and other entries relating to the case, where certified by the justice having custody of the docket, is admissible in the courts of the county in which the justice holds office. Patterson v. Drake [Ga.] 55 S. E. 175.

57. Under the rule that a justice's docket is evidence only of facts required to be noted therein, it is not evidence of other facts therein recited. Carpenter v. Roth, 192 Mo. 658, 91 S. W. 540.

58. See 6 C. L. 336.

59. "May" in Rev. Codes 1899, § 6652, relating to change of venue in justice court, should be construed to mean "must." Walker v. Maronda [N. D.] 106 N. W. 296.

60. It is too late to demand a change of venue after demurrer to the complaint has been argued and overruled. Walker v. Maronda [N. D.] 106 N. W. 296.

61. Under Rev. Code Civ. Proc. § 88, an affidavit for change of venue stating that, in the opinion of affiant based on rulings of the magistrate at a former trial, a fair hearing cannot be had, is insufficient. Affiant must believe. Witte v. Cave, 73 S. C. 15, 52 S. E. 736.

62. See 6 C. L. 336.

63. Where the parties agreed to transfer the cause to the district court, and pursuant to such agreement the plaintiff filed a petition in the district court and defendant appeared and answered and the court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter, it was proper to refuse to dismiss for want of jurisdiction. Farmers' Mut. Tel. Co. v. Howell [Iowa] 109 N. W. 294.

64. See 6 C. L. 337.

65. Where a summons is issued by a justice, returnable forthwith, the plaintiff's application for such summons must be accompanied by the statutory affidavit that there was danger of losing the benefit of his process by delay. Smith v. Fryling [Del.] 63 A. 801.

66. Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 1520, expressly provides that process may be served on the defendant by leaving a copy thereof at his last usual place of abode. Meyer v. Wilson [Ind.] 76 N. E. 748. Jurisdiction of the person is acquired by personal service on him in the county, he appearing in court pursuant to such service. People v. Wait, 99 N. Y. S. 807. One claiming title to personal property through sale under attachment proceedings in justice court must show legal notice to the defendant of the pendency of the action and that the property claimed was attached therein. Beckwith v. Dierks Lumber & Coal Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 442.

67. A summons issued May 17, and returnable May 22, allows the statutory five days as computed in Pennsylvania. Justice v. Meeker, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 207.

68. A statement in a bill of particulars filed before a justice that the first name of the defendant is unknown, is in effect an allegation that the real name is unknown. Uihlein v. Gladieux, 74 Ohio St. 232, 78 N. E. 363.

be served on him personally.[69] Irregularities in the return are not fatal if service was duly and legally made.[70] A return by a constable is not subject to collateral attack.[71] Nonappearance of the defendant within the hour, on the trial day, may be waived.[72]

Pleadings, issues and proof.[73]—Pleadings are sufficient if they advise the opposite party with what he is charged, and bar another action for the same cause.[74] Formality is not required;[75] but what is required to be set forth is subject to the rule that pleadings are to be taken most strongly against the pleader.[76] They are to be liberally construed,[77] and a technical error will not render them bad.[78] Redundancy and surplusage may be disregarded.[79] A pleading, though in writing, need not be more specific than if the case had been tried on oral statements;[80] and if the language of the written complaint is insufficient it may be supplemented orally.[81] But jurisdictional facts must be alleged,[82] and statutory requirements complied

69. Under Rev. St. 1906, § 5118, in such case the plaintiff must allege that he could not discover the true name. Uihlein v. Gladieux, 74 Ohio St. 232, 78 N. E. 363. A return showing service by leaving a copy at the usual place of residence is insufficient. Id. An action against Wm. Rogers and Mrs. Wm. Rogers, whose first name is unknown, is, as to the latter, an action against one whose real name is unknown and brings the case within Rev. St. 1906, §§ 5118, 6475, requiring personal service. Id.

70. Under P. L. 1903, p. 280, providing that judgment of a justice shall not be reversed "for any error made by a constable in the proper return of a summons, as to its service, if it appears that the defendant was duly and legally served" where a corporation alleges as sole ground for reversal that the person served was not such an officer as service could be made upon, it may be shown that service was duly and legally made. Hampton v. Elberon Automobile Co. [N. J. Law] 63 A. 869.

71. An entry of service by a constable on a summons issued by a justice court may be set aside on a traverse of the entry duly filed, but cannot be collaterally attacked. Patterson v. Drake [Ga.] 55 S. E. 175.

72. Failure of defendant to leave or move for dismissal for non-appearance after the expiration of the hour on the return day is a waiver of non-appearance. Where the plaintiff was delayed and telephoned the justice, and appeared five minutes after the hour expired. Bakrow & Co. v. Totten [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 707, 109 N. W. 31.

73. See 6 C. L. 337.

74. Held sufficient: A statement claiming a balance due under an insurance policy, giving the number and date of the policy and date of the loss, is sufficient. Widman v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 115 Mo. App. 342, 91 S. W. 1003. Statement that plaintiff contracted to rent certain premises on condition that defendant would put them in repair, and in reliance on his promise to do so paid $5 rent, and defendant refused to repair the premises or repay the money, does not state a cause of action on a promise to repay, but for money had and received on breach of condition precedent. Fallis v. Gray, 115 Mo. App. 253, 91 S. W. 175. Statement in an action for services rendered held not insufficient because counting on an express contract and not setting up the terms thereof; the amount of compensation being left open under the contract became a matter of quantum meruit rather than contract. Sexton v. Snyder, 119 Mo. App. 668, 94 S. W. 562. Where an action was commenced by filing an account showing a debt due for the privilege of filling in a certain lot, and before trial the contract on which the action was based was filed, the account and contract sufficiently stated the cause of action. Johnston v. O'Shea, 118 Mo. App. 287, 94 S. W. 783. Statement for a certain amount due on settlement held sufficient. Warner v. Close, 120 Mo. App. 211, 96 S. W. 491.

Affidavit and process in replevin held not so insufficient as to oust the justice of jurisdiction. The reference in the mortgage in the affidavit sufficiently identified the plaintiff. Knowles v. Cavanaugh, 144 Mich. 260, 13 Det. Leg. N. 238, 107 N. W. 1073.

Held insufficient: An account charging defendant with merchandise as per bills without specifying the kind of merchandise or date of sale is insufficient. Rechnitzer v. Vogelsang, 117 Mo. App. 148, 93 S. W. 326.

75. In a suit for breach of contract of sale, it is not necessary to allege an acceptance of the offer by conduct in order to entitle plaintiff to introduce parol evidence of such acceptance. Gaus & Sons Mfg. Co. v. Chicago Lumber & Coal Co., 115 Mo. App. 114, 92 S. W. 121.

76. Held ambiguous and under this rule to state a cause of action for a penalty which was not within the jurisdictioin of the justice. Atlanta, etc., R. Co. v. Shippen [Ga.] 55 S. E. 1031.

77. A pleading which purports to amend a plea theretofore filed, if sufficient in itself to constitute a complete answer, may, in accordance with the liberal rules of practice in force, be treated as a new and distinct plea. Glessner v. Longley, 125 Ga. 676, 54 S. E. 753.

78. South St. Joseph Town Co. v. Scott, 115 Mo. App. 16, 90 S. W. 727.

with.[85] Omission of such allegation may, however, be cured by the judgment.[84] In some states, if the action is founded on a written instrument, the instrument must be filed.[85] Such requirement, however, is not jurisdictional[86] and need not be complied with if the instrument is in the possession of the opposite party.[87] Defects in a pleading may be waived.[88] A statement of claim for goods sold must be an intelligible showing of what they were, to require an affidavit of defense.[89] A justice has no power with respect to the time when pleadings shall take place, except such as is conferred by statute.[90] Generally they are not required to be filed prior to the trial day.[91] The defendant may file contradictory pleas.[92]

The general rules governing the exercise of the discretionary power of the court with respect to allowing amendments to pleadings are the same in justice as in the district court,[93] but the rules of procedure relative to them are not.[94] A defective statement may be sufficient to support an amendment.[95] An amendment adding a sum to the original account,[96] or reducing the sum demanded to the jurisdictional amount,[97] may be filed, but not one alleging a cause of action proved, but not set

82. A complaint on an agister's lien is on a right of statutory creation, and must allege all facts necessary to give the justice jurisdiction. Patchen v. Durrett, 116 Mo. App. 437, 92 S. W. 721.

83. Verification of a complaint by the attorney for plaintiff in an action on a note held a sufficient compliance with Laws 1881, p. 562, c. 414, to sustain default judgment. Johnson v. Freeman, 49 Misc. 304, 99 N. Y. S. 225.

84. Failure of the petition to foreclose a mechanic's lien, to allege that notice had been filed in the circuit court showing when and before what justice suit would be instituted as required by statute, is cured by a recital in the judgment that the notice had been filed. Wissman v. Meagher, 115 Mo. App. 82, 91 S. W. 448.

85. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 3852, providing that the instrument sued on shall be filed with the justice, in an action on a contract of guaranty endorsed on a note, it is sufficient to file the note. Warder v. Johnson, 114 Mo. App. 571, 90 S. W. 392. Burns' Ann. St. 1901, § 1529, provides that a copy of the contract sued on is a sufficient complaint in the justice court. Cordes v. Bailey [Ind. App.] 78 N. E. 678.

86. Under a statute providing that failure to file a written instrument which is the foundation of the action is not ground for dismissal, but such instrument may be filed before the jury is sworn or trial begun, failure to file such instrument does not deprive the justice of jurisdiction. Widman v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 115 Mo. App. 342, 91 S. W. 1003.

87. In an action on an insurance policy, failure to file the policy is cured by an allegation that it is in defendant's possession. Widman v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 115 Mo. App. 342, 91 S. W. 1003.

88. A defendant who goes to trial without objecting to the statement waives defects therein. Warner v. Close, 120 Mo. App. 211, 96 S. W. 491.

89. Leek v. Livingston Manor Mfg. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 377. Statement of account for lumber held bad. Id.

90. Under Gen. St. 1894, § 4977, pleadings cannot take place before the time mentioned in the summons for the appearance of the parties. Taylor v. Walther, 97 Minn. 490, 107 N. W. 162. In this case the defendant appeared and pleaded three days before the return day. There being no appearance for him on return day, judgment was properly entered against him. Id.

91. Where the parties appear on the return day named in the writ and on motion of plaintiff the hearing is adjourned one week, the answer may be filed on the adjourned day. By implication the justice designates that day for the pleading, and by his motion plaintiff consents thereto. Nohre v. Wright [Minn.] 108 N. W. 865.

92. Glessner v. Longley, 125 Ga. 676, 54 S. E. 753.

93. Rae v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [N. D.] 105 N. W. 721. A justice may allow a complaint alleging that cattle were killed by the negligent running of a train, to be amended to allege that the injury was due to failure of the defendant to keep its right of way fence in repair. Id. 1 Comp. Laws, § 764, relative to amendments in actions by or against partners, does not deprive the justice of the power, theretofore possessed, of granting amendments, but gives the parties the absolute right to amend at any time before the pleadings are closed, leaving with the court its original discretionary power to permit amendments thereafter. Knowles v. Cavanaugh, 144 Mich. 260, 13 Det. Leg. N. 238, 107 N. W. 1073.

94. The provision of the practice act that an amendment to a plea containing new facts shall have affixed to it an affidavit that such facts were not omitted from the original plea for the purpose of delay does not apply in justice court. Glessner v. Longley, 125 Ga. 676, 54 S. E. 753.

95. Statement in an action to recover payments made on a contract for the purchase of lumber after rescission, made out on plaintiff's bill heads, held not so defective but that it could be amended. Phares v. Jaynes Lumber Co., 118 Mo. App. 546, 94 S. W. 585.

up in the original complaint.[98] An amendment may be served on the opposite party at any time before trial.[99]

The proof must be consistent with the pleadings.[1] Evidence given by a witness at a prior trial cannot be proved by the justice's minutes.[2]

Verdict and judgment.[3]—A judgment entered without jurisdiction of the subject-matter is void,[4] and one irregular on its face is not a lien on the property of the judgment defendant.[5] But a judgment relative to a matter of which he has jurisdiction is not subject to collateral attack.[6] It is bad in so far as unauthorized relief is awarded.[7] A petition attacking a judgment because of defective service of process should point out the particulars in which it is defective,[8] and one attacking on the ground of want of jurisdiction should show wherein jurisdiction was lacking.[9] The judgment must conform to statutory requirements.[10] Under a statute providing that a judgment shall direct the issuance of process necessary to carry it into execution, the fact that it does not in terms so direct does not render it void.[11] Statutes requiring judgment to be entered immediately are generally directory and not mandatory,[12] and entry within a reasonable time is sufficient,[13] and failure to enter it within the period prescribed does not invalidate it.[14] A judg-

97. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2944, permitting amendments at any time during trial if substantial justice will be done, a complaint to recover a penalty is properly permitted to be amended so as to bring it within the jurisdiction of the justice when too much has been claimed in the first instance. People v. Wait, 99 N. Y. S. 867.

98. Where a plaintiff fails to prove the contract alleged, it was proper to refuse to allow him to amend after the close of the evidence so as to allege a different contract. Genger v. Westphal, 128 Wis. 426, 107 N. W. 330.

99. The law does not prescribe the method of service of an amendment consisting of a bill of particulars and it is sufficient if it is handed to defendant's counsel before the trial. Carter v. Pitts, 125 Ga. 792, 54 S. E. 695.

1. A statement that defendant is indebted to plaintiff for "one telephone and telephone stock" is consistent with evidence of a contract for the sale of a telephone instrument and stock at a certain price. Riley v. Stevenson, 118 Mo. App. 187, 94 S. W. 781. A complaint for false representations is not sustained by proof of breach of warranty. Vandervort v. Mink, 113 App. Div. 601, 98 N. Y. S. 772. 5. A transcript of a judgment rendered in an action against Wm. Rogers and Mrs. Wm. Rogers, whose first name is unknown, filed in the office of the clerk of the common pleas, does not constitute such judgment a lien on the lands of Lucy Rogers, though she is Mrs. Wm. Rogers. Ulhlein v. Gladieux, 74 Ohio St. 232, 78 N. E. 363.

6. The judgment that a defective service of process is sufficient. Meyer v. Wilson [Ind.] 76 N. E. 748.

7. In landlord's possessory action, under Act Dec. 14, 1863 (P. L. 1864, 1125), no recovery of rent is allowable but damages only. Ballou v. Mehring, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 156.

8. An allegation that the record and proceedings by which the judgment was procured nowhere showed that process was served as required by law, states a conclusion and is insufficient. Martin v. Castle, 193 Mo. 183, 91 S. W. 930.

9. Martin v. Castle, 193 Mo. 183, 91 S. W. 930. The judgment against a partnership, without setting out the names of the partners, is irregular but not void, and unassailable after time for ordinary modes for review. Justice v. Meeker, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 207.

10. A judgment upon confession which fails to show the cause of action or indebtness as required by Rev. St. 1892, § 1632, is void. Palmer v. Parker [Fla.] 42 So. 398.

11. Such provision being merely directory, not mandatory. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Garrett [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 270, 92 S. W. 1040.

12. Ann. Code 1906, § 2065, providing that a confessed judgment shall be entered without delay, is directory, and not mandatory. McDowell County Bank v. Wood [W. Va.] 55 S. E. 753. The California statute requiring judgment to be entered at the close of the trial is directory only. Reilly v. Cooper, 119 Ill. App. 347.

Contra: Under a statute requiring that the justice enter judgment on the report of referees, a transcript of the record which fails to show such entry will not support certiorari. Ruhl v. Cooper [Del.] 63 A. 575.

13. Rev. Codes 1899, § 5707, requiring a justice to enter judgment on the receipt of the verdict at once, construed to mean within a reasonable time in view of the circumstances of each case. Peterson v. Hansen [N. D.] 107 N. W. 528.

ment without a trial on the merits is not a bar to another action.[15] A determination on the question of exemptions is not conclusive.[16] Where the property of a garnishee is sold and the judgment is reversed, he may, on compliance with required conditions, obtain restitution.[17] A default judgment[18] may be set aside if justice will be thereby furthered,[19] but not to aid a dilatory or negligent party;[20] and failure to appeal precludes the setting aside, as obtained by perjury, or because defenses existed which were not interposed, of a default judgment.[21] The application therefor must be filed within the period prescribed by law,[22] and where not so filed the remedy is by appeal.[23] Statutory requirements[24] must be substantially complied with.[25] In some states it is provided by statute that a transcript of the judgment may be filed in the district court, and when so filed it is to be regarded as a judgment of that court,[26] and jurisdiction of the justice relative to it is terminated,[27] but such transcript is not prima facie evidence of the validity of the judgment.[28]

14. Where one of the defendants appears before the return day and confesses judgment, the fact that it is not entered until the return day does not avoid it. McDowell County Bank v. Wood [W. Va.] 55 S. E. 753. Failure of the justice to enter judgment within the period prescribed by statute does not invalidate it. Wissman v. Meagher, 115 Mo. App. 82, 91 S. W. 448. The mere fact that a justice did not enter judgment on the same day on which verdict was returned is too indefinite a showing to sustain an objection to the offer of the judgment in evidence. Peterson v. Hansen [N. D.] 107 N. W. 528.

15. Where the justice determines as a matter of law that the evidence adduced by plaintiff is insufficient and grants a nonsuit, there has been no trial on the merits, and the judgment is not a bar to another action. Smith v. Superior Ct., 2 Cal. App. 529, 84 P. 54.

16. The decision of a motion to discharge from seizure property taken on attachment on the ground that it is exempt, is not conclusive, and the question of exemption may thereafter be tried in an action of replevin by the judgment debtor. Brunson v. Merrill [Okl.] 86 P. 431.

17. Where a justice renders judgment against the garnishee, who appeals, but pending the appeal his property is sold, and he recovers judgment on appeal, he may obtain an order for restitution, on motion after verdict in his favor and an opportunity given the other party to resist the motion. Woolverton v. Fresman, 77 Ark. 234, 91 S. W. 190.

18. If a garnishee fails to answer within the time required by law, the justice may enter a default against him. Morrison v. Hilburn [Ga.] 54 S. E. 938.

19. Where the return on appeal from a default judgment does not show that proof was taken by the justice to sustain such judgment, it will be set aside. Jackson v. Lurie, 49 Misc. 634, 97 N. Y. S. 1040. Where a defendant could not be present at the trial day, because of sickness, and did not notify the justice or the plaintiff's attorney of his excuse, a default judgment against him will be set aside. Mistrot Bros. & Co. v. Wilson [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 314, 91 S. W. 870.

20. Where one relied on an officer of the court to notify him of the date of trial, and made no inquiry for several days after judgment was entered. Bullard v. Edwards, 140 N. C. 644, 53 S. E. 445.

21. Equity will not act where there is remedy by appeal. Hoskins v. Nichols, 48 Misc. 465, 96 N. Y. S. 926.

22. A justice has no jurisdiction to set aside a default judgment on an application not filed within the statutory period. Under Revisal 1905, § 1478, it must be filed within ten days. Bullard v. Edwards, 140 N. C. 644, 53 S. E. 445.

23. Where the statutory period within which a justice may set aside a default judgment entered by him has expired, the defendant's remedy is by appeal or certiorari. Bullard v. Edwards, 140 N. C. 644, 53 S. E. 445.

24. Defective notice of a conditional order vacating a default judgment does not deprive the justice of jurisdiction over the subject-matter, and he may on application of the moving party, continue the hearing on proper notice. Brainard v. Butler, Ryan & Co. [Neb.] 109 N. W. 766.

25. Under Sayles' Rev. Civ. St. art. 1651, authorizing a justice to set aside a default judgment on motion, notice of which shall be given to the successful party one full day before the hearing, when a motion was filed, and the attorney for the successful party was present and protested on the ground that the statutory notice had not been given, which protest was ignored, the action of the justice was held irregular but not void. Lummus Sons Co. v. Wade [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 160, 95 S. W. 17.

26. Under a statute providing that transcripts of justices' judgments may be filed in the office of the clerk of the district court and when so filed shall be treated in all respects as judgments of the district court, an action to renew a judgment so transcribed is an action for its enforcement and is to be considered the same as a judgment of the district court. Haugen v. Oldford, 129 Iowa, 156, 105 N. W. 393. Where a justice's judgment has been regularly transferred to the district court by the filing of a transcript, it has, for the purposes of a lien and execution, the same effect as a

Execution[29] must be issued upon the judgment within the period prescribed by law.[30] A docket entry of the issuance of execution is not essential to the validity of the process.[31] Where authorized by statute, an execution may be renewed.[32] Pending an appeal, an execution cannot issue on a transcript filed in the district court by the judgment creditor.[33] In Alabama, in case of levy on real estate, the papers must be returned to the circuit court.[34]

§ 5. Appeal and error and remedies extraordinary.[35]—Mandamus is the proper remedy to review an order of the circuit court denying leave to take a special appeal from a justice's judgment.[36] The denial of the writ for such purpose is reviewable by certiorari, and not by mandamus sued out of the supreme court.[37] Prohibition will not lie on refusal of the justice to set aside defective service of summons.[38] In Georgia, if the amount in controversy exceeds $50 and only a question of law is involved, and the nature of the ruling complained of is not such as to dismiss the case, the losing party may appeal to the jury in the justice court,[39] appeal to the superior court,[40] or have his remedy by certiorari.[41] If both questions of law and fact are raised, but the petition for certiorari only complains of rulings which involve questions of law, certiorari is available.[42]

The right of appeal is statutory,[43] and statutory requirements must be complied judgment originally entered therein. Holton v. Schmarback [N. D.] 106 N. W. 36.

27. Under Rev. Codes 1899, §§ 5498, 6717, the filing of a transcript of a justice's judgment in the district court terminates the power of the justice to issue execution, and authorizes the district court to issue its execution as upon judgments originally entered therein. Holton v. Schmarback [N. D.] 106 N. W. 36.

28. Under Acts 1899, c. 4723, p. 115, judgments of a justice, docketed in the office of the clerk of the circuit court, as provided by Rev. St. 1892, § 1624, are not prima facie evidence of the validity of such judgments. Palmer v. Parker [Fla.] 42 So. 398.

29. See 6 C. L. 338.

30. Rev Codes, 1899, § 6723, authorizing a justice to issue execution within five years after the entry of judgment and not thereafter, is a limitation on the justice court and not upon the life of the judgment. The limitation upon the latter is ten years, as prescribed by § 5200. Holton v. Schmarback [N. D.] 106 N. W. 36. Code Civ. Proc. § 685, authorizing enforcement of a judgment in certain cases after the period of limitation has expired, and § 925, providing that only those provisions of the code specifically applying to justice courts are applicable thereto, does not authorize enforcement of a judgment of a justice after the limitation period has expired. Heinlen Co. v. Cadwell [Cal. App.] 84 P. 443. Under Rev. Codes 1899, § 5500, limiting the period of execution to ten years from entry of judgment, execution may be issued on a justice's judgment transcribed in the district court within ten years from its entry by the justice and not within ten years from filing the transcript. Holton v. Schmarback [N. D.] 106 N. W. 36.

31. Commercial Real Estate Brokerage Co v. Riemann [Mo. App.] 93 S. W. 305.

32. An alias execution, issued before the first one has expired and which runs only for the period the first would if renewed, is tantamount to a renewal which is authorized by Rev. St. 1899, § 4038. Commercial Real Estate & Brokerage Co. v. Riemann [Mo. App.] 93 S. W. 305.

33. Where pending an appeal from a justice judgment, the judgment creditor filed in the district court a transcript of the proceedings had before the justice, and after dismissal of the appeal and an order remanding the cause to the justice for further proceedings, caused an execution to issue out of the district court on such transcript, held the execution was void. Jenkins v. Campbell [Neb.] 107 N. W. 221.

34. Under the statutes of Alabama, in case of levy on real estate under an attachment issuing from a justice, the papers must be returned to the circuit court, the city court is without jurisdiction. Moog v. McDermott [Ala.] 40 So. 390.

35. See 6 C. L. 339.

36, 37. Graham v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 143 Mich. 360, 12 Det. Leg. N. 1017, 106 N. W. 1109.

38. Remedy by appeal. People v. Smith, 184 N. Y. 96, 76 N. E. 925. Where a justice refuses to set aside a defective service of summons on special appearance of defendant with a statement of facts on which he claims his privilege, his remedy is by appeal, under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 3053, 3057. People v. Smith, 184 N. Y. 96, 76 N. E. 925.

39, 40, 41. Ansley v. Farley [Ga.] 55 S. E. 180.

42. The right to complain of disputed questions of fact being waived. Ansley v. Farley [Ga.] 55 S. E. 180. Where there is no conflict in the evidence on any material point, the use of the expression that the rulings of the magistrate "was contrary to law and evidence and weight of evidence" and the "evidence as undisputed" demanded a certain finding, did not authorize dismissal of a petition for certiorari. Id.

43. The amendment of 1880 of § 978, Code Civ. Proc., did not repeal § 926, relative to with,[44] or substantially so.[45] There must be an appealable judgment[46] for an amount sufficient to give the appellate court jurisdiction.[47] The appeal must be properly entitled[48] and be taken within the period prescribed by law[49] unless good cause is shown for delay;[50] and to entitle one to a special appeal provided for by statute, appeals from justices' courts. Swem v. Monroe, 148 Cal. 741, 83 P. 1074. There is no distinction between appeals in actions of forcible entry and other cases. Hoffman v. Lewis [Utah] 87 P. 167.

44. The appeal is statutory, and statutes must be substantially complied with. Hoffman v. Lewis [Utah] 87 P. 167. Under the rule that an advance fee shall be paid for dismissal of an appeal when entered on the records of the court, and the rule that an appeal may be dismissed when the appeal papers are not filed and the advance fee paid within thirty days after the transcript was sent up, where defendant appealed, but did not pay the filing fee within the period, plaintiff was entitled to pay it and have the appeal dismissed, though defendant tendered the fee after plaintiff had paid it and before hearing on the motion to dismiss Little v. Blank [Utah] 87 P. 708. Affidavit of appeal held sufficient where from the entire instrument it was to be gathered that it was made by affiant on behalf of the appellant company. Brown-Mfg. Co. v. Gilpin, 120 Mo. App. 130, 96 S. W. 669.

45. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 471, providing that the circuit court shall be possessed of the cause on lodgment of the papers therein, and § 4072, providing that a defective affidavit shall not be ground for dismissing an appeal, a defective affidavit confers jurisdiction where the papers in the case are sent up, though § 4062 forbids the justice to allow an appeal where the affidavit is insufficient. Bader v. Jones, 119 Mo. App. 685, 96 S. W. 305. An appellee who does not avail himself of the right to demand a sufficient affidavit of appeal or move for dismissal, as authorized by Rev. St. 1899, § 4072, thereby waives a defective affidavit. Id.

46. A record reciting that defendant and plaintiff both being present defendant acknowledging the debt and after hearing the allegations and proof and maturely considering the same, judgment was rendered for plaintiff, does not clearly show that judgment was rendered on confession, and was not appealable. Burke v. Silcox [Del.] 64 A. 73. Section 6524, Rev. Statutes, is broad enough to permit of a review of proceedings before a justice of the peace on the weight of the evidence. Karch v. Bacciocco, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 190. Where a justice dismisses a cass instead of certifying it to the district court as required by law, and the plaintiff appeals generally from the judgment, the district court has jurisdiction to try the action. Johnson v. Erickson [N. D.] 105 N. W. 1104. An appeal lies from a default judgment taken after proper service of process. Jackson v. Lurie, 49 Misc. 634, 97 N. Y. S. 1040. Under the Act of 1810, § 22, no appeal lies to the judgment of the common pleas on certiorari to a justice who had jurisdiction. It is final. Fry v. Spatz, 29 Pa Super. Ct. 592; Adams v. Berge, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 422.

47. Where one was sued for $12 and filed a counter claim on one account for $7.25 and another for $26, and recovered judgment and remitted $6 on the $26 claim, held that the remittitur did not reduce the amount in controversy to less than $25, so as to deprive plaintiff of the right to appeal. Bell v. Hartwig [Iowa] 105 N. W. 833. When a judgment is rendered in favor of an intervener and the amount exceeds $20, the plaintiff may appeal, though the cause as between him and the defendant was not appealable. Howard v. Gammon, 78 Vt. 420, 62 A. 1014. When the compiaint was amended so as to reduce the amount demanded below, the sum which would authorize an appeal, the appeal was properly dismissed. Atianta, etc., R. Co. v. Georgia R. & Elec. Co., 125 Ga. 798, 54 S. E. 753. Where a party sues in a less sum than he is entitled to recover for the purpose of depriving the defendant of the right to appeal, it is not a fraud on the appeliate jurisdiction of the higher courts. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Jones [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 166, 95 S. W. 746. A counter claim absolutely without merit, and filed for the sole purpose of forming the basis for an appeal, is insufficient upon which to predicate an appeal where the judgment for the amount sued for was not appealable. Id. Where an action for less than the jurisdictional amount of the appellate court was appealed and by amendment another party who had agreed to assume the liabilities of the appellee was made defendant and answered, the appellate court had no jurisdiction. Little Rock Trac. & Elec. Co. v. Hicks [Ark.] 96 S. W. 385.

48. Where an appeal was entered in the name of a person not a party and was first amended "to the use of" a party and afterwards so as to make it appear that it was taken by a party, the appeal was void. Head v. Marietta Guano Co., 24 Ga. 983, 53 S. E. 676.

49. An appeal granted, under Code 1906, § 2125, after the expiration of the statutory psriod, for causes which could not have prejudiced the appellant if he had been diligent in attending to his interests, is properly dismissed as having been improvidently awarded. McClung v. Price [W. Va.] 55 S. E. 996.

50. That the justice, before rendition of judgment but after the trial, expressed to attorney for appellant his intention to render judgment for him, but had later given judgment against him, that petitioner heard through his attorneys that judgment had been rendered for him, is not good cause for not appealing within the statutory period. McClung v. Price [W. Va.] 55 S. E. 996. Under a statute granting relief to a party who fails to appeal within the statutory period, where he has been prevented by circumstances not within his control, he must not be guilty of

after the period within which the appeal may be regularly taken has elapsed, the statutory conditions must be complied with.[51] There must be a notice of appeal conforming to statutory requirements[52] and duly served.[53] The appeal must be prosecuted with due diligence.[54] The right to appeal should not be denied unless it is clear that the defeated party is not entitled to appeal.[55] Under the rule permitting appeal as a matter of right, the act of a party in insisting on a judgment below for less than he is entitled to does not preclude him,[56] and an appeal may be taken from part of a judgment.[57] The appellate court acquires jurisdiction on the filing therein of the transcript of records.[58] A party objecting to an appeal on the ground that the appeal bond has not been filed need not wait until the expiration of the statutory period,[59] but if he desires to attack on the ground that the papers are not filed or the advance fee paid, he must.[60] It is presumed on appeal that proceedings in the justice court were regular.[61] Costs of appeal may, for good cause, be taxed to the appellant.[62]

laches. Evidence held to show laches precluding relief. Pickell v. Coates [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 947, 110 N. W. 125. Under the Michigan statutes providing that appeals may be allowed after the expiration of the statutory period of five days under certain circumstances a circuit court has no authority to grant such an appeal after the five day period has elapsed, in the absence of the existence of the statutory conditions. Stock v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 143 Mich. 339, 12 Det. Leg. N. 1042, 106 N. W. 897.

51. In this case the affidavit and bond for appeal were tendered to the justice's deputy clerk who had no authority to receive them in the absence of the justice and no effort was made to leave them with the justice as required. Graham v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 143 Mich. 360, 12 Det. Leg. N. 1017, 106 N. W. 1109.

52. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1760, the filing of the notice of appeal must precede or be contemporaneous with its service on the adverse party. State v. District Ct. of Fifth Judicial Dist. [Mont.] 85 P. 872. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4076, providing that if appellant fail to give notice of the appeal ten days before the second term of the appellate court the judgment shall be affirmed or the appeal dismissed at the option of the appellee, where plaintiff on appeal gave no notice and on the second day of the second term took a voluntary nonsuit, the same would be set aside as defendant was deprived of the right to exercise his option. Butler v. Pierce, 115 Mo. App. 40, 90 S. W. 425. A notice of appeal entitled "J. W. Teasdale, Plaintiff," instead of J. W. Teasdale & Co., is sufficient where it designates the justice from whom the appeal is taken, gives the date and amount of the judgment, and is addressed to the above-named plaintiff. Teasdale & Co. v. American Fruit Product Co., 120 Mo. App. 584, 97 S. W. 655. A notice of appeal containing an erroneous statement of the date on which the judgment was rendered is insufficient. Cooper v. Northern Acc. Co., 117 Mo. App. 423, 93 S. W. 871.

53. Under a statute that notice of appeal must be served on the justice personally, and on the attorney for respondent, or respondent personally, within a specified time, it is sufficient to serve the justice personally and the respondent's attorney by mail. Wright v. Southern R. Co. [S. C.] 54 S. E. 211. Under the statutes of Missouri an appeal may not be dismissed for failure to give notice of appeal at the second term after the appeal was taken, but notice need not be given until the third term, the action not being triable until then. Statutes construed. Roll v. Cummings, 117 Mo. App. 312, 93 S. W. 864.

54. Statutes construed, and held that an affirmance for failure to prosecute an appeal was proper when the justice was negligent but no steps were taken by the appellant to urge action. Young v. School Dist., 119 Mo. App. 108, 95 S. W. 947.

55. Burke v. Silcox [Del.] 64 A. 73.

56. Under the rule that any party to a judgment may appeal, the fact that plaintiff insists on taking judgment for less than the evidence shows him to be entitled to is no ground for dismissing the appeal. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Wheeler [Tex.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 502, 90 S. W. 481.

57. Where judgment was rendered for wages and a statutory penalty for nonpayment thereof, an appeal may be taken from the judgment for the penalty. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Langley [Ark.] 94 S. W. 58.

58. An appeal from the justice court, the superior court, by the filing with it of the transcript and records, acquires jurisdiction of the person of appellant and the subject matter of the suit. Brown v. Wagar, 110 Ill. App. 354. Jurisdiction of an appeal in forcible entry and detainer is acquired by the circuit court where the bond has been entered into before the justice, and the bond and transcript filed in the circuit court. Dickerson v. Johnson, 119 Ill. App. 325.

59, 60. Hoffman v. Lewis [Utah] 87 P. 167.

61. Where a case is submitted to the jury by a justice and judgment entered on their verdict, it is presumed on appeal that they considered all the evidence in the case. Murphy v. Drew, 99 N. Y. S. 1007. Where the record recites that plaintiff, a corporation, was not present but was represented by affidavit and other papers and letters in evidence, and defendant being present, judgment was rendered for plaintiff "after hearing all the allegations of the parties and their proofs and maturely considering the

Bonds.[63]—A bond or other security for costs is usually required[64] unless the appeal is from a judgment for costs only.[65] Such bond or security must substantially conform to the statute by which it is required,[66] must be signed by a surety,[67] and conditioned to pay costs or costs and judgment as required,[68] and be filed within the statutory period.[69] In order to stay or supersede the judgment, if the appeal does not have that effect, larger security and appropriately broader conditions are requisite.[70] In some states sureties may be required to justify[71] within a certain period.[72] A bond is not rendered invalid by mere descriptive matter in the title,[73] same," it is not presumed that judgment was rendered on the affidavit but that there was sufficient evidence in the other papers and letters to sustain the same. Emory v. Columbia Wagon Co. [Del.] 63 A. 874. A judgment against a married woman is not void unless it appears from the record that the case was one over which the court had no jurisdiction. McAfee's Estate v. Gregg, 140 N. C. 448, 53 S. E. 304. When it is desired to review a justice's judgment on a motion dependent on extraneous facts, it must be made to appear what proof was offered to establish such facts in the justice court. Hayes v. Eubanks, 125 Ga. 349, 54 S. E. 174.

62. Under the rule that where appellant recovers a greater sum than in the justice court, he is entitled to the costs of both courts, but that the court may for good cause adjudge costs otherwise, an appellant who insisted on a judgment in the justice court for less than he was entitled to and appealed was properly assessed with the costs of the appellate court. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Wheeler [Tex.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 502, 90 S. W. 481.

63. See 6 C. L. 340.

64. Where an appeal bond is expressly required by statute, the appellate court acquires no jurisdiction unless the bond is given. Carter v. Wyrick [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 105, 98 S. W. 644. A statute requiring an appeal bond applies to a judgment against one who claimed property levied upon under a judgment against another, though the statutory claimant's bond was given. Id. In an appeal, not forma pauperis, it is essential that appellant give a bond for the eventual condemnation money. Civ. Code 1895 §§ 4140, 4458. Roberts v. Napier Bros. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 914.

65. Where no judgment is rendered except for costs, no appeal bond is required. Feagan v. Barton-Parker Mfg. Co. [Tex Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 665, 93 S. W. 1076.

66. Where an undertaking on appeal is required, an appeal may be dismissed where the bond is insufficient. Hoffman v. Lewis [Utah] 87 P. 167. Code Civ. Proc. § 978, providing for appeal bonds, is not inconsistent with § 926, providing for a deposit in lieu thereof. Swem v. Monroe, 148 Cal. 741, 83 P. 1074.

67. A bond is fatally defective if not signed by a surety. Roberts v. Napier Bros. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 914.

68. Cost bond alone will support tenant's appeal in landlord's action to recover premises in District of Columbia. D. C. Code, §§ 1218-1236. Dowling v. Buckley, 27 App. D. C. 205. Bond intended for supersedeas, but having only one surety, held good as cost bond. D. C. Code, §§ 20, 30, 1218-1236. Id. The bond on appeal need not be sufficient as a supersedeas but only as a cost bond where the statute after requiring a bond specifies additional requirements "in order" that it shall "operate as a supersedeas." Id.

69. Under a mandatory statute requiring an appeal bond to be filed within a certain period from judgment entered, failure to file it within such period ousts the jurisdiction of the appellate court. 2 Mills' Ann. St. § 2679. Horn v. Martin [Colo.] 87 P. 1073.

70. An appeal bond which stipulates for payment of costs and promises to pay and abide by any judgment which may be rendered, but not given for any specific amount or penalty is not a supersedeas bond within Code 1896, § 2145. Helton v. Ft. Gaines Oil & Guano Co. [Ala.] 39 So. 925. Where an appeal is taken and the appellant claims a stay of proceedings, under § 4842, Rev. St. 1887, it is necessary to give two bonds, one to cover the costs of the appeal, and the other in twice the amount of the judgment. Wilson v. Doyle [Idaho] 85 P. 928. An obligation in twice the amount of the judgment, including costs, for a stay of proceedings, is ineffectual where there is no obligation for costs on appeal. Id. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 978, providing for an appeal bond of $100, and § 926, providing for a deposit in lieu thereof, a deposit of less than $100, is ineffectual, though the judgment and costs do not exceed the sum deposited. Swem v. Monroe, 148 Cal. 741, 83 P. 1074. An appeal may be dismissed for failure to file an appeal bond within the statutory period. Nolan v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 2 Cal. App. 1, 82 P. 1119.

71. As soon as the circuit court acquires jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter it may enter a rule upon the sureties to justify, notwithstanding such rule may be entered at a term at which no dismissal could be had for want of prosecution and no trial could be entered upon. Jackson v. Sherman House Hotel Co., 120 Ill. App. 507.

72. Under the Utah statutes, failure to have the sureties justify within two days after exception taken to their sufficiency nullifies the undertaking given. Hoffman v. Lewis [Utah] 87 P. 167. An appeal may be dismissed for failure to comply with a rule, properly entered, requiring the sureties on the appeal bond to justify within a time fixed, where effort is made to justify and no extension of time is asked or new bond tendered. Jackson v. Sherman House Hotel Co., 120 Ill. App. 507.

73. Where an action was against "Wells, Fargo & Co., Express," "Express" was not alleged as part of the corporate name but or because it misstates the amount of the judgment appealed from,[74] or because it does not designate the particular court appealed from,[75] or because coupled with an invalid stay bond,[76] or because the costs accrued exceed the amount of the obligation,[77] and it will be held good if it can be made complete by looking to other parts of the record.[78] Failure of the justice to place a filing mark on it does not affect its validity where he approves it.[79] If the bond is delivered[80] and the conditions performed, the sureties are liable,[81] but, on dismissal, judgment may not be rendered against the surety alone.[82]

Process or appearance.[83]—Voluntary general appearance in the appellate court confers jurisdiction,[84] providing the justice had jurisdiction,[85] but special appearance does not.[86] merely descriptive, and an appeal bond to "Wells, Fargo & Co." was sufficient to sustain the appeal. Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Hanson [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 495, 91 S. W. 321.

74. A bond correctly stating the date of the judgment and showing the style of the cause and the court in which it was rendered is sufficient, though it misstates the amount. Burger v. Weatherby [Tex. Civ. App.] 91 S. W. 250.

75. An appeal bond is sufficient though it did not state the particular justice court in which the action originated, nor the county in which the superior court to which the appeal was taken was situated. Hayes v. Eubanks, 125 Ga. 349, 54 S. E. 174.

76. Where there is no uncertainty as to the conditions and obligations of an appeal bond, it will be held good for the purposes of appeal though coupled with an invalid stay bond. Edminston v. Steele [Idaho] 87 P. 677. An undertaking for the payment of costs on the appeal to the district court and for a stay of execution, and wherein the sureties are bound in a sum exceeding $200 though not in an amount sufficient to stay the proceedings, and the undertaking contains all the obligations required in appeal bonds, is sufficient. Id.

77. Where a certiorari bond is executed for the statutory amount, it is not reversible error to refuse to require an additional bond, though the costs already exceed the obligation of the bond. Giddens & Co. v. Rutledge [Ala.] 40 So. 759.

78. Where an appeal bond may be made complete by looking to other parts of the record, it is not rendered void by failure to set out that the judgment included the foreclosure of a laborer's lien. Lewis v. Warren, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 890, 97 S. W. 104.

79. Lewis v. Warren, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 890, 97 S. W. 104.

80. Where in an action on an appeal bond such bond was produced at the trial, was found among the papers of the justice, and the docket entries disclosed that it had been filed, a finding that it was delivered was justified. Nolan v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 2 Cal. App. 1, 82 P. 1119.

81. Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 974, 975, authorizing an appeal by a party dissatisfied with the judgment "rendered," an action on an appeal bond alleging that the judgment was rendered need not allege that it was duly made and given. Nolan v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 2 Cal. App. 1, 82 P. 1119. Where there is a condition in an appeal bond that the sureties would pay the judgment and costs if the appeal was dismissed, the sureties assumed the risk that it might be erroneously dismissed. Id.

82. Under a statute providing only for a judgment against a surety on an appeal bond, in connection with a judgment against the principal, an action may not be dismissed against an appellant and judgment rendered against the surety alone. Crow v. Reliable Jewelry Co., 116 Mo. App. 624, 92 S. W. 742. Where an appellee dismissed the appeal and took judgment against the surety alone, the fact that the surety did not know of the judgment until after its rendition did not show negligence on his part. Id.

83. See 6 C. L. 340.

84. Where defendant appeals and perfects his appeal in the circuit court and the plaintiff voluntarily appears, the circuit court has jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter. Jackson v. Sherman House Hotel Co., 120 Ill. App. 507. Where an appeal is perfected so as to give jurisdiction of the subject-matter at a particular term, appellee may, by voluntary appearance at such term, give full jurisdiction of both subject-matter and parties. Dickerson v. Johnson, 119 Ill. App. 325. The question of jurisdiction arising from absence of one of the defendants cannot be raised by another defendant who has voluntarily entered a general appearance in the cause, especially where the one appearing has entered various stipulations in the cause and does not raise the question until the cause has reached the appellate court. Goode v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 121 Ill. App. 161.

The giving of an appeal bond constitutes an appearance in the appellate court and authorizes it to enter judgment without inquiry as to the character of service of process in the justice court. Whether or not the service was defective is immaterial, since the case is tried de novo. Hairston v. Southern Pac. R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 121, 94 S. W. 1078.

85. Where the record does not show that the justice had jurisdiction of the subject-matter, the defect is not waived by appearance. Barnes v. Plessner [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 626.

86. Appearance on appeal for the purpose of moving to dismiss for failure to give the statutory notice of appeal is not general

The transcript[87] of the proceedings in the justice court must be sent up as required by statute;[88] it must be authenticated.[89] But failure to send it up within the statutory period does not affect the rights of an appellant not lacking in diligence.[90] The transcript filed in the common pleas may be amended when incorrect or deficient.[91] Recitals not properly a part of the transcript are of no effect.[92] Cost of transcript may be exacted before sending it up, particularly when a statute so provides.[93]

The record[94] must affirmatively show facts which give the justice jurisdiction over the person of the defendant,[95] and conform to statutory requirements.[96] Where the fact that the amount in controversy exceeded the jurisdictional amount of the justice does not appear, it may be established by evidence.[97] Questions to be reviewed must be properly saved.[98]

Dismissal.[99]—A prevailing party who appeals may dismiss without the consent of the opposite party.[1] An appeal may be dismissed for failure to comply with statutory requirements,[2] but not for failure to pay a fee required by rule of court appearance waiving such notice. Roll v. Cummings, 117 Mo. App. 312, 93 S. W. 864.

87. See 6 C. L. 340.

88. Under B. & C. Comp. § 2246, it must be authenticated by the justice or some person authorized by law. Shaw v. Hemphill [Or.] 86 P. 373.

89. The authenticity of the transcript, where the seal is lacking, is sufficiently established by the evidence of the justice that it is the transcript of his docket. Foster v. People, 121 Ill. App. 165.

90. It is error for the common pleas to dismiss an appeal for failure of the justice to send up the transcript within the time fixed by statute where the appellant is not guilty of laches. Danenhower v. Lippincott [N. J. Law] 63 A. 868. The failure of the justice of the peace to certify and send up the papers within the time fixed by statute does not affect the rights of the appellant. Cain v. State, 36 Ind. App. 51, 74 N. E. 1103.

91. Justice v. Meeker, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 207; Leek v. Livingston Manor Mfg. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 377.

92. A recital in the transcript, "plaintiff claims $25" is properly no part of such transcript, and does not limit the right of recovery on appeal. Chamberlain v. McCoy-Howe Co., 117 Ill. App. 571.

93. In Northumberland county appeal costs to which he is entitled must be tendered before the justice is required to furnish a transcript. If more is demanded, a tender of the proper amount should be made. Llewellyn Min. Co. v. Lloyd, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 129.

94. See 6 C. L. 341.

95. Where the real name of one of the defendants is unknown, and the record shows a continuance by agreement, it does not show that both parties were present consenting to such continuance, and the defect in not making personal service is not cured. Uihlein v. Gladieux, 74 Ohio St. 232, 78 N. E. 363.

96. Under § 100, Revised Justice's Code, requiring a statement of necessary evidence where an appeal is taken on questions of law, or a review is desired on questions of law and fact, and § 101, obviating such requirement if a trial de novo is demanded, an appeal on questions of law and fact is defective without such statement where a new trial is not demanded. Aldrich v. Ramoe [S. D.] 109 N. W. 641.

97. Where a case was dismissed because the sum sued for exceeded the jurisdictional amount, and such facts did not appear from the record, it was proper to allow it to be established by evidence. Singer v. Atlantic Rice Mills Co. [Ga.] 54 S. E. 821.

98. Where a declaration sought to combine a count in replevin and one in assumpsit, and neither the affidavit nor process gave the individual names of the members of the plaintiff, partnership objections to such defects, though not made in justice court, were properly raised in an affidavit for special appeal. Knowles v. Cavanaugh, 144 Mich. 260, 13 Det. Leg. N. 238, 107 N. W. 1073. Error in discharging the jury for disagreement cannot be considered on writ of error in the absence of a bill of exceptions showing exception to the order. Pointer v. Jones [Wyo.] 85 P. 1050. Where specifications of error in the notice of appeal from a justice's judgment on questions of law only do not raise any question as to the sufficiency of the pleadings, that question cannot be raised on appeal, where the defect is one of statement of a cause of action or defense as distinguished from failure to state a cause of action or defense. Rae v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [N. D.] 105 N. W. 721. On appeal from a judgment on verdict of a jury, an exception that it is contrary to the law and evidence brings up the verdict for review. McKee v. Linton [S. C.] 54 S. E. 1016.

99. See 6 C. L. 341.

1. A plaintiff who recovered judgment in the justice court and thereupon appealed to the circuit court could dismiss his suit in the circuit court without the consent of defendant. Mundt v. Cooke-Rutledge Coal Co., 118 Ill. App. 124.

2. Where the clerk of the appellate court is prohibited from filing papers until the advance filing fee is paid, and defendant who appealed failed to pay it within the statutory period, payment by plaintiff in order to move for dismissal was not a voluntary payment waiving his right to have it dismissed. Little v. Blank [Utah] 87 P. 708.

but not authorized by law.[3] An appeal may not be dismissed on preliminary call.[4] An appeal should not be dismissed for want of prosecution unless it appears that a nonappealing party is negligent.[5] A premature and erroneous dismissal is not conclusive.[6]

Pleadings on appeal.[7]—The rule that written pleadings need not be more specific than oral ones applies on appeal.[8] Pleadings on appeal need not be in the same language as those in the justice court.[9] Amendments not changing the cause of action but only perfecting the one originally attempted to be stated[10] or to allege jurisdictional facts,[11] or to promote substantial justice,[12] or increasing the amount of the demand,[13] may be allowed, but those setting up a new or different cause of action may not,[14] and a counterclaim not asserted below cannot be set up on appeal.[15] If the discretionary power of the justice to permit amendments was not invoked, permission to amend may be denied.[16]

3. Rule of court requiring a docketing fee in the county court. Dille v. Rice, 120 Ill. App. 353. Such a rule is contrary to law and is void. Id.

4. A dismissal of an appeal upon preliminary call is not within the rules of the court and is erroneous. Doppelt v. Blum, 118 Ill. App. 64.

5. An appeal should not be dismissed for want of prosecution unless summons had been entered upon the nonappealing party, or an original and alias summons returned "not found," or the appearance of such nonappealing party had been entered in writing ten days before the order was entered. Jackson v. Sherman House Hotel Co., 120 Ill. App. 507.

6. An erroneous and premature dismissal of an appeal for failure to give the statutory notice does not prevent appellants from thereafter giving the statutory notice or excuse failure to do so. Roll v. Cummings, 117 Mo. App. 312, 93 S. W. 864.

7. See 6 C. L. 342.

8. Howard v. Fabj [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 1004, 93 S. W. 225.

9. On appeal the defendant is not required to allege a counterclaim in the same language in which it was pleaded in the justice court. It is sufficient if the identity of the counterclaim is preserved. Brockway v. Reynolds [Neb.] 109 N. W. 154.

10. Under the rule that the statement or account sued on may be amended on appeal, but no new cause of action or item can be added, an account may be amended to state what the items are due for and by prefixing the dollar sign to the items of the account. Keene v. Sappington, 115 Mo. App. 33, 90 S. W. 752. A statement in the justice court for cutting trees on a part of a certain league of land does not vary from an amendment on appeal for cutting timber on the same league and the amendment does not state a different cause of action. Wright v. Dotson [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 682, 93 S. W. 1075.

11. Rev. St. 1899, c. 47, art. 2, creating an agister's lien does not prohibit amendments on appeal from the justice court to show existence of jurisdictional facts, and § 4236 provides that proceedings under the act not specially provided for shall be governed by general laws. Held a complaint to enforce such lien may be amended on appeal to show jurisdictional facts under the rule allowing amendments to promote substantial justice. Patchen v. Dunett, 116 Mo. App. 437, 92 S. W. 721.

12. Where an account filed before the justice was insufficient to state a cause of action because of failure to state the kinds of merchandise or date of sale, it may be amended on appeal. Rechnitzer v. Vogelsang, 117 Mo. App. 148, 93 S. W. 326.

13. A defendant who is appellant may increase the amount of an account claimed as a set-off. Lewis v. Warren, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 890, 97 S. W. 104. A landlord suing for rent is entitled, on his case being called for trial in the county court to amend, to claim recovery of rent coming due since the commencement of the action. Blackwell v. Speer [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 511, 98 S. W. 903.

14. Where an action in justice court was based on contracts for the sale of standing timber and machinery, it may not be amended on appeal to set up another contract relative to saw logs not mentioned in the contracts sued upon in the justice court. Wall v. Melton [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 112, 94 S. W. 358. An amendment on appeal that the plaintiff was also an employe of another party and had agreed that his purchases from such other might be deducted from his salary does not make such other person a party. Lewis v. Warren, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 890, 97 S. W. 104.

15. Rev. St. 1899, § 4078, expressly provides that a counterclaim not set up in the justice court cannot be asserted on appeal. Sexton v. Snyder, 119 Mo. App. 668, 94 S. W. 562. Under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 358, a counterclaim which was not pleaded in a trial before a justice until after judgment cannot be considered on appeal to the county court. Comer v. Floore [Tex. Civ. App.] 13 Tex. Ct. Rep. 410, 88 S. W. 246.

16. Where in replevin the justice was not requested to and did not exercise his discretionary power to permit amendment after the pleadings were closed, a circuit judge was justified in refusing to permit amendment on special appeal. If such amendment was essential to the validity of the judgment in the circuit court, it was also essen-

The case is tried de novo on appeal[17] and the appellate court acquires only such jurisdiction as the justice had,[18] consequently, the complaint cannot be amended to demand a sum in excess of the jurisdictional amount of the justice,[19] and error in permitting such amendment cannot be cured by a remittitur.[20] The case must be tried upon the issues presented in the justice court.[21] The appellant must prove his case to entitle him to recover.[22] But competent evidence not introduced before the justice may be admitted.[23] The appellate court has before it the original papers and may take judicial notice of the time when the action was instituted.[24] The procedure is governed by the rules of the appellate court[25] unless otherwise provided by statute.[26] In Michigan the powers of the appellate court on general appeal do not apply on a tial to the validity of the justice's judgment. Knowles v. Cavanaugh, 144 Mich. 260, 13 Det. Leg. N. 238, 107 N. W. 1073.

17. See 6 C. L. 342. When plaintiff sued for $49 and defendant set up a counterclaim for $64, on appeal defendant was entitled to a new trial on the merits under Code Civ. Proc. § 3068, authorizing a new trial when the sum demanded by either party exceeds $50. Vandevort v. Mink, 113 App. Div. 601, 98 N. Y. S. 772.

18. The appellate court acquires only such jurisdiction as the justice had and can render only such judgment as the justice could have rendered. Kirby's Dig. § 4682. Woolverton v. Freeman, 77 Ark. 234, 91 S. W. 190. Where the amount in controversy exceeded the jurisdictional amount, the appellate court had jurisdiction. Storm v. Montgomery [Ark.] 95 S. W. 149. Where the amount in controversy exceeded the jurisdictional amount of the justice, the appellate court has no jurisdiction. Lewis v. Warren, etc., R. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 890, 97 S. W. 104. If a justice had no jurisdiction, the appellate court has none. Patrick v. Brown [Colo.] 85 P. 325.

19. A complaint cannot be amended on appeal so as to state a cause of action for a sum in excess of the justice's jurisdiction. Rose v. Christinet, 77 Ark. 582, 92 S. W. 866. Though the case is tried de novo, the complaint cannot be amended to demand an amount exceeding the jurisdictional amount of the justice. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 318, 98 S. W. 415.

20. After judgment. Rose v. Christinet, 77 Ark. 582, 92 S. W. 866. An error in permitting such amendment is not cured by omission to include in the charge the items which increased the amount beyond the justice's jurisdiction. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Hughes [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 318, 98 S. W. 415.

21. North & Co. v. Angelo [Neb.] 105 N. W. 1089. Where the summons commanded defendant to answer a complaint "for deceit and breach of warranty and false warranty," and the justice's return on appeal failed to make any statement of the complaint and there was no motion that it be made more specific, the superior court properly submitted the issue of false warranty which was sustained and refused to submit the issue of deceit. Smith v. Newberry, 140 N. C. 385, 53 S. E. 234. On appeal from a judgment of a justice of the peace, an exhibit attached to the record of the circuit court without further return from the justice cannot be considered. Village of Wayne v. Goldsmith, 141 Mich. 528, 12 Det. Leg. N. 516, 104 N. W. 689.

22. The case is tried de novo and, where an appeal is taken by defendant who does not appear, plaintiff must prove his case, and it is error to dismiss the appeal without such proof. Chenowith v. Keenan [W. Va.] 55 S. E. 991. On appeal from a justice to a jury in the superior court where the plaintiff fails to make out a prima facie case, a verdict may be directed for defendant. Callaway v. Southern R. Co. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 23.

23. Competent evidence not introduced on the trial before the justice may be admitted. Equity Savings & Loan Co. v. Boisfontaine, 115 La. 842, 40 So. 241. The admission of competent evidence not introduced in the justice court does not change the cause of action. Hasse v. Herring [Colo.] 85 P. 629.

24. For the purpose of limitations. Van Burg v. Van Engen [Neb.] 107 N. W. 1006.

25. Under a statute providing that the trial in the appellate court shall be governed by the practice of such court, the verdict in the appellate court should be in conformity with the statutes governing the action and not in conformity with the statutes prescribing the form of verdict in justices' courts. Absher v. Franklin [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 1002. Where an action in forcible entry and detainer is removed to the circuit court as provided by statute on the affidavit of the defendant that he entered peaceably and under claim of title, and under a statute which provides that on such removal plaintiff must recover on the strength of his legal title, unless defendant entered under contract or by force, defendants are not entitled to a separate trial of the issue of force vel non. Fowler v. Prichard [Ala.] 41 So. 667.

26. In Georgia it is provided by statute that, where plaintiff obtains judgment and the defendant appeals, the appeal must be tried by a jury. Callaway v. Southern R. Co. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 22. In such case, if the evidence demands a verdict for the defendant, the judge may so direct, and, if the plaintiff does not wish to be concluded by the verdict, he must dismiss before verdict is directed. Id. Where action is brought on an unconditional contract in writing and defendant appears at the first term and files a plea and the case is appealed and the plea stricken in the superior court, judgment cannot be entered against defendant without a jury verdict. Montgomery v.

special appeal.[27] In New York a justice's judgment may be set aside as against the weight of evidence.[28]

Judgment.[29]—The right of recovery on appeal is limited only by the jurisdictional amount of the justice,[30] and such amount may be exceeded by interest accruing during the pendency of the appeal.[31] Where the appeal is taken on a question of law, the decision should be reversed or affirmed and if reversed the case should be remanded,[32] and under a statute limiting the appellate court to affirming or reversing the judgment in whole or in part, it has no power to modify it.[33] Failure of the appellate court to take statutory measures looking to enforcement of the judgment does not avoid it.[34] A motion to set aside a default judgment of the appellate court must be filed within the statutory period.[35]

Further appeal or error[36] may be allowed only where so provided by statute,[37] but one who does not take an appeal where it is allowable may not complain of the judgment.[38] The paper book from the common pleas must include the justice's rec-

Fouche, 125 Ga. 43, 53 S. E. 767. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 3342, a county court may grant a reargument on appeal from a justice. Bumpus v. Anderson, 49 Misc. 417, 99 N. Y. S. 826. Where the opinion of the court affirming a justice's judgment shows that all matters involved were considered and the decision was not in conflict with law to which the attention of the court had not been directed, a motion to argue before the successor of the county judge who heard the appeal will be denied. Id.

27. Statutes, Comp. Laws §§ 918, 10,268, relative to the powers of a circuit judge when the case is tried de novo, do not apply on special appeal. Knowles v. Cavanaugh, 144 Mich. 260, 13 Det. Leg. N. 238, 107 N. W. 1073.

28. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 3063, amended by Laws 1900, p. 1277, c. 553, a county court is authorized to set aside a justice's judgment against the weight of evidence only where it is so plainly against the preponderance of evidence that the justice could not reasonably have reached his decision. International Tailoring Co. v. Bennett, 113 App. Div. 476, 99 N. Y. S. 438. If it is evenly balanced so that different inferences may be drawn from it, the county court should not set it aside. Id.; McRavy v. Barto, 99 N. Y. S. 712; McDonald v. Dunbar, 99 N. Y. S. 768. Held not to so preponderate in favor of the defeated party as to justify setting it aside. International Tailoring Co. v. Bennett, 113 App. Div. 476, 99 N. Y. S. 438. Under this statute, the county court is a court of review without original jurisdiction to determine the facts. McRavy v. Barto, 99 N. Y. S. 712; McDonald v. Dunbar, 99 N. Y. S. 768.

29. See 6 C. L. 343.

30. Limited in no way by the amount recovered before him. Chamberlin v. McCoy-Howe Co., 117 Ill. App. 571.

31. A judgment rendered in the district court on appeal is not erroneous in that it includes interest upon the claim sued upon during the pendency of the action in that court, though it is thereby made to exceed in amount the jurisdiction of the justice from which the appeal was taken. Butler v. Bruce & Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 445.

32. Decision by the justice on the question of venue that he was without jurisdiction. Null v. Superior Ct. [Cal. App.] 87 P. 392. Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 976, 980, if an appeal is based on questions of law alone and the judgment is reversed, the case may be remanded to the justice court for trial. Smith v. Superior Ct., 2 Cal. App. 529, 84 P. 54. The jurisdiction of the court of common pleas is limited, in an attachment suit presented on error to a justice of the peace, to the entering of a judgment of reversal with judgment for costs accrued up to that time. Foote v. Central American Commercial Co., 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 531. In Missouri a circuit court may in vacation remand a case of unlawful detainer to the justice court from which is was certified. Rev. St. 1899, § 3951. South St. Joseph Town Co. v. Scott, 115 Mo. App. 16, 90 S. W. 727.

33. Where summons was accompanied by attachment and was personally served on defendant who moved to vacate the attachment, and on denial appeared generally, and judgment was rendered for money only, it will be affirmed, though the attachment is erroneous, and the appeal is from the part of the order denying motion to vacate it. Hindes v. Mills, 101 N. Y. S. 843.

34. Failure of the district court on affirmance of a justice's judgment to order the clerk to certify the decision or award execution out of the district court as required by statute does not vitiate the judgment of affirmance. Pointer v. Jones [Wyo.] 85 P. 1050.

35. Where plaintiff appealed and recovered judgment by default at the November term, a petition to set aside such judgment filed at the February term is too late. Bader v. Jones, 119 Mo. App. 685, 96 S. W. 305.

36. See 6 C. L. 343. Also Appeal and Error, 7 C. L. 128.

37. Code Civ. Proc. § 1357, relative to the right of appeal to the appellate division of the supreme court from a court of record, does not apply to a summary proceeding originating before a justice and transferred to the county court on appeal. Nor is such appeal allowed by Code Civ. Proc. § 2260. Barrus v. Parsons, 109 App. Div. 634, 96 N. Y. S. 359.

38. A plaintiff, who does not appeal from the judgment of the county court reversing a justice's judgment as against the ord and this cannot be supplied by the continuance docket entries or by recitals in the opinion or the exceptions.[39] The court of first appeal will be followed in the construction of its own rules.[40]

§ 6. Certiorari.[41]—Certiorari will issue where the justice acted without jurisdiction,[42] and in some states to review errors of law,[43] but not to review a verdict properly returned,[44] or the determination of a matter within the jurisdiction of the court.[45] Points made in the petition must be verified by the answer.[46] An answer containing all material evidence introduced is sufficient.[47] The return is to be given a reasonable construction.[48] Certiorari will not be dismissed for a mere irregularity.[49] On the hearing of a petition for certiorari, the power of the superior court extends only to errors committed at the trial.[50] Where the case is up on objections weight of evidence and granting a new trial, cannot urge that the judgment should be affirmed because a new trial was granted, instead of an absolute reversal. International Tailoring Co. v. Bennett, 113 App. Div. 476, 99 N. Y. S. 438.

39. Cunningham v. Everett, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 469.

40. A common pleas rule requiring affidavits of claim or defense and construed as applying only to contract cases will be similarly construed by the appellate court when it is urged that the judgment below was erroneous because of adherence to such practice. Livingston v. Kerbaugh, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 534.

42. Under P. L. 1903, p. 279, § 93, where a justice lacks jurisdiction over defendant because of illegality in the service of summons upon him and yet proceeds to render judgment against him, such judgment may be reviewed on certiorari. Richardson v. Smith [N. J. Law] 65 A. 162. The only question reviewable on certiorari bringing up a judgment in a proceeding to recover a statutory penalty is whether the court had jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter. Board of Health of Woodbury v. Cattell [N. J. Law] 64 A. 144. To deprive a party of the remedy by certiorari, the justice court must have had jurisdiction over the subject-matter and party with reference thereto. City of Bridgeton v. Pierce [N. J. Law] 64 A. 693. Where an action is dismissed because plaintiff's evidence shows that the amount in controversy exceeded the jurisdictional amount, certiorari and not appeal was the proper remedy for plaintiff. Singer v. Atlantic Rice Mills Co. [Ga.] 54 S. E. 821. The docket of the justice is admissible to show such fact. Civ. Code 1895, §§ 5214, 5215, does not prohibit the introduction of the original docket. Id.

43. A petition for certiorari to review a judgment is sufficient where it is alleged that the attorney for the prevailing party promised that no judgment would be taken until a bill of particulars had been furnished, that the judgment was entered in breach of such promise, and that the clerk of the justice's court became a party to the deception by informing petitioner after the judgment had been entered that nothing had been done. Fisher v. Pennsylvania Co., 118 Ill. App. 662. Petition for certiorari properly overruled. Glenn v. Augusta Drug Co. [Ga.] 55 S. E. 1032. Where a jury renders a verdict against the defendant and requests the magistrate to decide which party shall bear the costs, and no exception is taken to such request, the party against whom costs are taxed may review the judgment by certiorari. Hewett v. Robertson, 124 Ga. 920, 53 S. E. 456.

44. Where the uncontradicted evidence demanded the verdict rendered, a petition for certiorari complaining of the rendition of verdict was properly overruled. Quaglino v. Benedette [Ga.] 55 S. E. 938.

45. Where an appeal is taken on a statement of the case, the court has jurisdiction to determine the nature of the appeal and certiorari will not lie to review the order of the court based on a determination that the appeal involved questions of law only, though such determination is erroneous. Smith v. Superior Ct. 2 Cal. App. 529, 84 P. 54.

46. Points made in a petition for certiorari not verified by the answer of the magistrate furnish no ground for reversal. Raymond v. Garden [Ga.] 55 S. E. 944.

47. It is not error to overrule exceptions to the answer of a justice to a writ of certiorari, where the evidence alleged in such exceptions to have been omitted was immaterial, and the answer contained all the evidence introduced that was favorable to the excepting party. Baird v. Smith, 124 Ga. 251, 52 S. E. 655.

48. The return to a writ of certiorari that an adjournment on motion by plaintiff was against objection, implies presence of defendant at the time of the adjournment. Beam v. Reynolds, 144 Mich. 383, 13 Det. Leg. N. 257, 108 N. W. 83. Notice to defendant in certiorari held sufficient to designate the county in which the writ was to be heard, and the fact that the date of the term at which it was to be heard was incorrect, would not invalidate it. American Bonding & Surety Co. v. Adams, 124 Ga. 510, 52 S. E. 622.

49. Where a claimant of property on which execution against defendant had been levied, styled himself as defendant. Baker v. Drake [Ala.] 41 So. 845.

50. An assignment that a juror was related to a party within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity, that the opposite party furnished liquor to the jury, and improper remarks of counsel to the jury, cannot be considered where no ruling was made thereon to the record, the record cannot be supplemented.[51] Certiorari may be sustained as to the erroneous portion of a judgment brought up.[52] Where the error complained of in a writ of certiorari is one of law, the superior court may render final judgment.[53]

§ 7. Criminal jurisdiction and procedure.[54]—The power of a justice to issue warrants, and as a committing magistrate, and the procedure looking thereto,[55] and his jurisdiction of prosecutions for crime and the procedure therein,[56] are elsewhere fully treated.

KIDNAPPING.[57]

An indictment that accused did forcibly seize and confine and did inveigle and kidnap charges but a single crime as defined in Oregon.[58] Evidence that the kidnapped person had signed seaman's articles is not objectionable, as tending to prove criminal enticement of seaman where properly limited to kidnapping.[59] son owning or controlling lands or tenements permits another to occupy the same for a period less than that to which the right of the lessor extends.[61] It is distinguished from a sale[62] in that it gives no right in the fee,[63] and from a contract of hire,[64] or a license, in that it creates an estate in the premises.[65] There seems to be a conflict of authority as to whether a contract for the use of walls and roofs for display advertising purposes is a lease or a license.[66]

§ 2. The contract of lease and creation of tenancy. How created or established.[67]—The relation of landlord and tenant is founded upon a contract whereby one is to have the use and occupation of lands or tenements of another for a term or period.[68] Reservation of rent is not essential to the creation of the relation.[69]

A contract by which one street railway company divested itself of the use and possession of the road and appliances in consideration of specific rent, and the performance of other duties by another company, held to be a lease. Moorshead v. United Rys. Co., 119 Mo. App. 541, 96 S. W. 261. A contract by which was leased a quantity of rails, a steam shovel, and dump cars, provided for rental payments and for purchase on payment of a stated sum, also on default in payment of rent, the owner might take possession. The articles were referred to as "said equipment" but were separately valued. Cars and shovel were marked property of the owner and were not to be removed from the work. Held a lease as to all the articles. Cincinnati Equipment Co. v. Strang [Pa.] 64 A. 678. Instrument by which a board of supervisors leased a school section for 99 years, held in view of the terms of the conveyance and the statute pursuant to which it was executed to be a lease. Moss Point Lumber Co. v. Harrison County Sup'rs [Miss.] 42 So. 290, 873.

Whether contract is lease or agency, see Clark & Skyles Agency, 28.

62. A contract by which one rents land to another, providing for the payment of three installments of rent and agreeing to convey when the last installment is paid, is a lease and not a contract of sale. Thomas v. Johnson [Ark.] 95 S. W. 468.

63. A lease for 99 years gives no right in the fee. Is an estate for years. Moss Point Lumber Co. v. Harrison County Sup'rs [Miss.] 42 So. 290. 873.

64. A contract by which one was to raise a crop, title to remain in the owner of the land and the worker to have one-half the proceeds after deducting all debts due the owner, is one of employment and does not create the relation of landlord and tenant. Bourland v. McKnight [Ark.] 96 S. W. 179. The relation is not created where one fixes up an athletic field under an agreement that he is to be reimbursed out of revenue derived therefrom so as to entitle him to recover rental value. Dockstader v. Young Men's Christian Ass'n [Iowa] 109 N. W. 906. Under a statute providing that a contract for hire exists where one party furnishes land and a team and another labor, with stipulations to divide the crop, and a statute providing that persons who raise a crop by joint contributions in such manner as to make them cotenants therein shall have a lien for their shares, a contract which contains all the elements prescribed by the former statute, and in addition that each shall furnish one-half the fertilizer used, creates a cotenancy in the crop. Hendricks v. Clemmons [Ala.] 41 So. 306.

65. An instrument by which is granted the right to use certain land as a game preserve and providing for forfeiture for breach of the conditions construed to be a lease creating the relation of landlord and tenant. Shafter Estate Co. v. Alvord, 2 Cal. App. 602, 84 P. 279. A conveyance of standing timber, with rights of way over the premises and the privileges usually accorded lumbermen, providing that the timber should be removed within a certain period and that all improvements remaining on the premises should belong to the landlord, is a lease, not a mere license. Alexander v. Gardner, 29 Ky. L. R. 958, 96 S. W. 818.

66. Held a lease: A contract by which one is given the right to use a roof for advertising purposes, and such use involves the maintenance of a structure for signs, is a lease and not a mere license. Pocher v. Hall, 50 Misc. 639, 98 N. Y. S. 754.

Held an irrevocable license: An instrument by which one leases the right to use the wall of a building for display advertising for a definite period, and providing for abatement of rent in case the building is destroyed, whether a lease or a license, is not revocable at the will of the owner. Levy v. Louisville Gunning System, 28 Ky. L. R. 481, 89 S. W. 528. The interest of the grantee in such case is in the nature of an easement. Id. Such a right is not revoked where the owner leases the premises to another by an instrument which does not mention the license. Id.

68. Where one in possession under a contract of sale takes a lease by the express terms of which he surrenders all rights including right to possession under the original contract his possession thereafter is that of tenant, though there is no physical vacation and re-entry. Chambers v. Irish [Iowa] 109 N. W. 787. A parol agreement between land-

Like other contractual relations it may be express or implied.[70] The contract upon which it is founded must possess the elements essential to the validity of any contract; it must be mutual,[71] based on a consideration,[72] and be free from fraud,[73] but it need not be signed by the lessee in order to give it binding effect,[74] and irregularities in execution may be cured by subsequent ratification.[75] It must contain a description of the property leased.[76] It must be made by a person who has some estate in the premises leased[77] and authority to enter into the contract,[78] and, if made by one in a representative capacity, he must have authority.[79] It must not fall within lord and a tenant whose lease is about to expire that the tenant should remain in possession four months longer, followed by possession by the tenant after expiration of his term, is a valid lease for such period, though the amount of rent is not specified. The law implies that he will pay a reasonable rent. Schickedantz v. Rincker [Neb.] 106 N. W. 441. Such parol lease is not abrogated by notice to the tenant that, if he held over after expiration of his first term, he would be taken as occupying for another like term at an increased rental. Id. The relation is not shown to exist between one who takes title to land and states that he takes it for another's benefit and such other remains in possession claiming ownership. Meyer v. Beyer [Wash.] 86 P. 661. Evidence sufficient to show that a parol lease for one year was made, to take effect on a certain date. Fishman v. Wolf, 101 N. Y. S. 16.

70. Evidence sufficient to show that one entered premises as tenant from month to month, under an implied agreement to pay a certain rental in advance, and that he agreed to pay such rent according to such implied agreement. Coney v. Lovett [Cal. App.] 84 P. 428.

71. Where in a preliminary agreement for a lease, whether verbal or written, it is stipulated that the lease shall be in writing, the contract or lease is not completed until the writing is made and signed, and until then either party may withdraw. In re Woodville, 115 La. 810, 40 So. 174. Where an owner states to one who had leased premises from one who had no title that such lease was good and that the tenant could stay there for two years, it does not constitute ratification of such void lease, nor a letting for two years, nor for any other period. Hebberd v. Mayo, 97 N. Y. S. 396. An acknowledgment to a lease by an alleged lessee is insufficient to establish that the subscriber to the acknowledgment is a party to the lease. Sims v. McLaren, 117 Mo. App. 67, 94 S. W. 792. Evidence insufficient to show that a certain person was a party to a lease. Id.

72. A contract not based on a consideration giving the tenant the right to occupy the premises after the expiration of the lease at a certain rental until he could rent another house, but containing no agreement on the part of the tenant to occupy, is unilateral in its nature. Glessner v. Longley, 125 Ga. 676, 54 S. E. 753. Mere inadequacy of consideration or other inequality in the terms of a lease does not of itself constitute ground to avoid it in equity. Brewster v. Lanyon Zinc Co. [C. C. A.] 140 F. 801. Inadequacy of consideration is no ground for cancelling a lease unless it is so gross as to shock the conscience. Smith v. Collins [Ala.] 41 So. 825. To prove fraud in such case there must be more than a mere preponderance of evidence. Id.

73. A lease is void for fraud, where the landlord misreads it to a tenant who cannot read at the time it is executed. Knoepker v. Redel, 116 Mo. App. 621, 92 S. W. 171. Where evidence relied on to show the relation of landlord and tenant consisted in part of a promissory note describing the lands, it is competent to show by parol that such description was not in the note when it was executed. Bullard v. Hudson, 125 Ga. 393, 54 S. E. 132.

74. Baragiano v. Villani, 117 Ill. App. 372.

75. The recognition of a lease of school lands made by county commissioners on behalf of the county, by receiving rent, and making other contracts expressly subject thereto, is a ratification of such lease and cures informality in original execution. Slaughter v. Mallet Land & Cattle Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 282.

76. A description in a lease "314 acres out of the southern part of" a section leases an interest in the south half of the survey. Santa Rosa Irr. Co. v. Pecos River Irr. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 27, 92 S. W. 1014.

77. The state has no title to and cannot lease school lands granted to it by the Federal government until the official survey has been made and approved by Federal authorities. Clemmons v. Gillette [Mont.] 83 P. 879. A lease by a life tenant and the widow of one of the remaindermen reciting that the widow executed on behalf of her minor children and which lease was assigned did not confer on one claiming te have purchased the interest of such minors at guardian's sale the right to recover from the assignees, pending the term, on the ground that the assignee failed to perform the covenant to pay rent. Furr v. Burns, 124 Ga. 742, 53 S. E. 201.

78. It is not ultra vires for a corporation, which has no use for land and an old meeting house on it, to lease it to one who agrees to buy the house, and also to buy on termination of the lease a house to be built by the lessee. Hollywood v. First Parish in Brockton [Mass.] 78 N. E. 124.

79. It is presumed that a guardian has taken all necessary legal steps in leasing his ward's land. Norton v. Stroud State Bank [Okl.] 87 P. 848. Laws 1893, p. 907, c. 433, expressly provides that two-thirds of the stockholders of a railroad corporation may, at a meeting called for that purpose, the inhibition against champertous contracts.[80] The relation does not exist between the vendee at a tax sale, of the premises and a tenant in possession under the former owner,[81] but does between a grantee of the leased premises and a tenant in possession,[82] and between a subtenant and the owner where the mesne lessee surrenders.[83] Whether a sublease for an entire term creates the relation between tenant and sublessee depends on the intention of the parties.[84]

Construction of leases and proof of the terms of tenancy.[85]—If the contract upon which the relation of landlord and tenant is based is an express one, it is governed by the rules of construction applicable to all such contracts.[86] It is to be construed in connection with contracts contemporaneously executed,[87] and, if executed by virtue of statutory authority in connection with the statute,[88] a lease will be construed in the light of statutes pertaining to leasehold estates,[89] and to give effect to the intentions of the parties[90] as expressed in the terms of the instrument.[91] authorize a lease of the road. Continental Ins. Co. v. New York & H. R. Co. [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 1026.

80. Under the rule that adverse possession does not prevent a person from selling his interest in land, one whose title rests on a contract to purchase may lease though it is not shown who was in actual or constructive possession of the land at the time the lease was executed. Beck v. Minnesota & Western Grain Co. [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1032.

81. Such vendee takes free from contracts or obligations of such former owner. Carlson v. Curran, 42 Wash. 647, 85 P. 627. An offer to pay rent by tenants under a former owner to one who purchased the premises at tax sale, which tender was refused, was an offer to pay to whomsoever was entitled to it and does not create the relation between the parties. Id. Where in a suit in ejectment by a purchaser at tax sale of the premises against one in possession as tenant of a former owner it is adjudged that he is entitled to notice to quit or demand for possession before suit brought, such judgment is not an adjudication that the relation of landlord and tenant existed. Id.

82. A grantee of the landlord becomes landlord of the tenants. Chambers v. Irish [Iowa] 109 N. W. 787.

83. Where a tenant who has sublet surrenders his lease, the subtenant is made tenant of the owner. His rights under his lease are not affected. Moskowitz v. Diringen, 48 Misc. 543, 96 N. Y. S. 173.

84. A lease to a subtenant for the full term creates the relation of landlord and tenant between the sublessee and the original lessee if so intended. Boyd v. Kinzy [Ga.] 56 S. E. 420.

85. See 6 C. L. 349.

86. See in this connection, Contracts, 7 C. L. 761. Leases are to be reasonably construed according to the apparent intention of the parties. City of New York v. U. S. Trust Co., 101 N. Y. S. 574.

87. Lease of railroad and contracts executed contemporaneously between the same parties and relative to the same subject-matter should be construed together. Marklove v. Utica, etc., R. Co., 48 Misc. 258, 96 N. Y. S. 795. Alleged oral agreement made some time after execution of the lease held not to change its terms or authorize forfeiture for breach of conditions of such agreement. Madden v. McKenzie [C. C. A.] 144 F. 64.

88. The provisions of a statute authorizing a lease of school lands for 99 years, requiring the lessee to pay taxes and giving him the right to sue for waste, is not inconsistent with a leasehold estate only. Moss Point Lumber Co. v. Harrison County Sup'rs [Miss.] 42 So. 290, 873.

89. Instrument so construed held an agreement to give a new lease at the expiration of the term, presumably for one year. Brill v. Carsley, 2 Cal. App. 331, 84 P. 57.

90. A lease of personal property, providing that the lessee shall pay expenses incurred in retaking it at expiration of the lease, does not indicate that the parties contemplated attorney's fees as an incident of such expense (White River, etc., R. Co. v. Star Ranch & Land Co., 77 Ark. 128, 91 S. W. 14), nor does it show that the lessee intended to pay such fees in case the lessor should be drawn into litigation with third persons concerning ownership or right to possession (Id.). Under a contract by which one was to work land of another and have one-half the proceeds after paying all advances made by the landlord to enable him to make the crop, whether a cow and calf and certain medical bills were within the terms of such contract, held a question for the jury. Bourland v. McKnight [Ark] 96 S. W. 179. The rights of a lessee for a term of 99 years must be determined from the instrument under which he holds and not by conditions existing when the lease was made. Moss Point Lumber Co. v. Harrison County Sup'rs [Miss.] 42 So. 290, 873.

91. A lease providing that the lessee guarantees his annual receipts shall be $10,000, and agreeing to pay 20 per cent of such receipts as rent, is an agreement to pay $2,000 rental per annum, and the lessee was required to make up the difference if his receipts did not amount to $2,000. Shartenberg v. Ellbey, 27 R. I. 414, 62 A. 979. Where a lease gives the tenant the right to purchase, also binds him to make needed repairs and improvements of a certain value during the term "and to leave the same" on the premises if the purchase is not consummated, held a binding obligation to increase the value of the property to such an amount forming part of the consideration of the lease. Peters v. Stone [Mass.] 79 N. E. 336. The term "im-

Whatever is implied in a lease is as effectual as what is expressed.[92] It is to be construed most favorably to the lessee, especially where the clause to be construed is claimed to be one defeating his estate,[93] and presumptions are to be indulged in his favor.[94] Technical terms will be construed in connection with the nature of the estate conveyed and authorized.[95] Terms merely descriptive[96] and manifest clerical errors[97] will be disregarded. A lease will be construed to take effect from its date,[98] and, if for a certain term at a specified rental, is one entire contract.[99] The term[1] and tenements included must be determined from the recitals of the provements" as used covers new buildings as well as additions and repairs. A provision that in case the tenant defaulted in the performance of any of his covenants, the landlord might collect rent from subtenants, and that the lease should be cancelled, only authorizes cancellation at the option of the landlord in case of the tenant's default. O'Brien v. Levine, 50 Misc. 303, 98 N. Y. S. 636. A lease of a portion of a building required the lessee to pay to the lessee of another portion, which contained the heating plant of the entire building, one-half the cost of operating the boiler and provided that if the part of the building containing the heating plant became vacant the lessor would pay the excess expense of operating the heating plant. Held the lessor did not impliedly covenant to furnish heat. New Era Mfg. Co. v. O'Reilly, 197 Mo. 466, 95 S. W. 322.

92. If an implication arises from the language of the lease and is not gathered from mere expectations, it is controlling. Brewster v. Lanyon Zinc Co. [C. C. A.] 140 F. 801. A lease granting all oil and gas under the leased premises and the right to enter for the purpose of developing, and reserving royalties on the product, which were the controlling inducement of the grant, and expressly requiring the drilling of one well during the first five years but not expressly defining the diligence to be exercised in the work of development, implies a covenant that it should be continued with reasonable diligence if oil and gas are found in paying quantities during the period allowed for original exploration. Id.

93. Where an instrument partly written and partly printed may be construed to defeat or save the tenant's estate, the latter construction will be given. Moskowitz v. Diringen, 48 Misc. 543, 96 N. Y. S. 123. Where one claimed that an insolvent held possession as a tenant under him but did not produce the lease nor excuse nonproduction or prove its terms, it may be inferred that its provisions as to the right of the tenant to remove fodder, etc., from the premises was unfavorable to him. Wilson v. Griswold [Conn.] 63 A. 659.

94. Where a landlord assents to the removal of a plate glass window so that a tenant may bring in an article of furniture, he assents to taking it out the same way and a refusal to allow it to be so removed is a conversion. Marder v. Heinemann, 100 N. Y. S. 250.

95. The phrase "the right, title, use, interest, and occupation" used in a lease of school lands is to be construed in connection with the character of the estate authorized to be conveyed, and the nature of the estate. Moss Point Lumber Co. v. Harrison County Sup'rs [Miss.] 42 So. 290, 873.

96. Where lease of apartments in a building contains "known as the Bristol Apartment Hotel," such term is descriptive only and does not indicate an agreement that no portion of the building should be used for purposes inconsistent with use of the building as an apartment hotel. Bristol Hotel Co. v. Pegram, 49 Misc. 535, 98 N. Y. S. 512.

97. Where through a clearly clerical error in the lease, the landlord instead of the tenant was given the right to renew, it was the duty of the parties to so read the lease, hence there was no necessity for action on the part of either as preliminary to the tenant's right to renew and no delay of either in calling attention to the error could impair the tenant's right to exercise his option. Gray v. Maier & Zobelein Brewery, 2 Cal. App. 653, 84 P. 280.

98. Under a lease providing that rent should commence when possession should be taken at a future date, but that if possession should not be given on such date then from the date of possession, the term commences to run from the date of the lease. Where such lease was for five years and was of Indian lands which under Acts of Congress could not be leased for more than five years, it was not void. Blackburn v. Muskogee Land Co. [Ind. T.] 91 S. W. 31.

99. Where a lease is made of premises at a monthly rental and a six months' term, the contract is entire and there can be but a single breach and recovery; and where the lessee refuses to enter, a recovery of judgment for the first month's rent and its payment constitute a bar to further actions for recovery under the lease. Burckhardt v. Greene, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 515.

1. Under an oil and gas lease for twelve years and so long thereafter as minerals should be found in paying quantities, "or" the payments hereinafter provided for are made, "or" should be read "and" and the term limited to twelve years unless oil or gas is found. American Window Glass Co. v. Indiana Natural Gas & Oil Co. [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 1006. A lease for one year with an option to the tenant to extend for four years upon notice, and a further option for an additional term of five years at an advanced rental, upon proper notice, is a lease for ten years at the option of the lessee, absolute for one year, and optional as to the future continuance. Walker v. Wadley, 124 Ga. 275, 52 S. E. 904. Where a lessee takes possession and pays rent under a lease for ten months, he waives any condition on which such lease was made that it should contract.[2] "Appurtenances" include everything essential to the beneficial use and enjoyment of the thing leased.[3]

A written lease is presumed to contain the entire agreement of the parties and cannot be varied by parol testimony[4] of preliminary negotiations,[5] or that the parties intended to make a contract other than appears from the instrument,[6] unless it appears that a mistake was made in drafting the instrument.[7] The consideration may be explained by parol.[8] The contract may be proved by an unsigned draft thereof.[9] It is presumed that one who executes a lease is owner of the property.[10] A lessor is estopped to deny that he had title at the time the lease was made.[11] not take effect until certain repairs had been made in the absence of evidence which would justify a contrary conclusion. Hallenbeck v. Chapman, 72 N. J. Law, 201, 63 A. 498.

2. A lease of the first floor of a building described as "the store * * * with the basement under the same" and a room on the fourth floor left the vestibule and stairway in possession of the landlord, but entitled the lessee to the unobstructed use of a window facing the vestibule, which it was contemplated he should use. Whitehouse v. Aiken, 190 Mass. 468, 77 N. E. 499. Where a tenant held a store and two apartments under the same lease and on its expiration took a lease of the store which did not include the apartments, held not to show that such apartments were covered by the new lease so as to prevent an advance of the rent. Dickinson v. Brown, 99 N. Y. S. 838. A lessee cannot sustain his right to a corner basement under a lease covering a basement adjoining a corner, where it appeared that there was a basement other than the one occupied by the tenant answering the description, in the absence of reformation of the lease or acts of the landlord after making the lease recognizing the identity of the basements. Kasower v. Sandler, 96 N. Y. S. 734. Where a subtenant claimed the right to hold a corner basement under the lease of a basement adjoining the corner, the tenant under whom he claimed could not testify that the lease to him describing the basement adjoining the corner referred to the corner basement, as such would be a conclusion. Id. A lease of premises described as "the lands near Marshallville, Ga., known as the C. A. Johnson place" entitles the tenant to the use of the cultivable land and also to the fruit on an orchard on such premises, unless the lease is reformed so as to except such fruit. Quiggle v. Vining, 125 Ga. 98, 54 S. E. 74. A lease of the upper floors of a building carries with it as an appurtenant the entrance and hallway leading to the only stairway in the building, and a right reserved by the landlord to change, alter, or repair the stairway gives him no right to lease part of the space. Lindblom v. Berkman [Wash.] 86 P. 567.

3. "Appurtenances" in a lease covers a heating plant which constitutes the only means of heating the premises. Stevens v. Taylor, 111 App. Div. 561, 97 N. Y. S. 925.

4. Oral evidence of the intent of the parties at the time the lease was executed is inadmissible. Willis v. Weeks, 129 Iowa, 525, 105 N. W. 1012.

5. Where a lease of apartments does not provide that the building shall be used exclusively as an apartment house, it is not competent to show a parol representation by the landlord made prior to the letting that the building would be so rented. Bristol Hotel Co. v. Pegram, 49 Misc. 535, 98 N. Y. S. 512. Where a written lease purports to contain the whole contract but makes no reference to repairs except that the tenant should keep in good repair, it cannot be shown by parol that there was delivered with the lease an unsigned list of repairs to be made and that it was verbally agreed that such list should be a part of the lease and that the repairs should be made by the landlord. Hallenbeck v. Chapman, 72 N. J. Law, 201, 63 A. 498.

6. A contract in the form of a lease with an option to purchase cannot be shown by parol to have been intended as a contract for sale of the land. Smith v. Caldwell [Ark.] 95 S. W. 467. In an action for breach of contract of lease, evidence of a written contract signed by the lessor and lessee and also by a third person not mentioned in the lease held not to vary from the contract sued on. Hlass v. Fulford, 77 Ark. 603, 92 S. W. 862.

7. Where an oral lease reserved to the lessor the right to reconstruct the front of the building, and a subsequent written lease failed to make such reservation, evidence of the terms of the verbal lease, and that such terms were contained in rent receipts, and that the receipts were shown to the clerk who drew the lease, was admissible to show that the reservation was omitted from the written lease by mistake. Cage v. Patton [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 525, 91 S. W. 311.

8. Though a deed does not reserve rents, it is competent to show a parol reservation thereof as explaining the consideration. Applegate v. Kilgore [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 17, 91 S. W. 238. In an action for such rents, it was proper to permit the landlord to testify that he had reserved them verbally. Id.

9. On an issue as to the terms of a cropping contract, a draft of such contract not signed by either party but shown to have been read by both was admissible on the terms of the contract. Morgan v. Tims [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 832.

10. A lease executed by a certain person creates a presumption that he is owner of the premises. Blake v. Meyer, 110 App. Div. 734, 97 N. Y. S. 424.

The statute of frauds.[12]—A lease being a contract for the conveyance of an estate in lands is within the statute of frauds and must be in writing if for a longer period than one year.[13] Such lease may, however, be valid as to provisions for rent, repairs, and termination.[14] In order to bring an oral lease for a longer period than one year within the rule that the landlord will not be permitted to enforce the statute of frauds to perpetrate a fraud, it must appear that the tenant would suffer material injury;[15] and a tenant who seeks to bring himself within the equitable principle that the landlord will not be permitted to invoke the statute of frauds to perpetrate a fraud has the burden to show that he would suffer material injury.[16]

Covenants.[17]—The word "grant," "demise," or "lease," in a lease for years creates a covenant in law for good title and quiet enjoyment during the term.[18] A covenant for quiet enjoyment extends to all incidents and appurtenances.[19] Whether a covenant is also a condition is a question of intention.[20] A covenant restricting the power of alienation is void.[21] The landlord may retain money deposited to secure performance of the covenant to pay rent until expiration of the term.[22]

Reformation[23] may be had wherever a party shows himself equitably entitled to it.[24]

Breach of contract to make lease.[25]—A contract to give a lease may be specifi-

13. Under a statute providing that no person shall be charged on a parol lease for more than one year, a lease for one year to commence at a future date is unenforceable. Ray v. Blackman, 120 Mo. App. 497, 97 S. W. 212. A parol lease for a year to begin at a future date is unenforceable. Wessells v. Rodifer [Ky.] 97 S. W. 341. But see Fishman v. Wolf, 101 N. Y. S. 16, holding it valid, though made to take effect at a future date. Under Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 4568, providing that an unacknowledged lease is good for one year, and § 4569, providing that lease for an indefinite term may be terminated by a notice given thirty days prior to the expiration of a rent paying period, held that an unacknowledged lease for four years is terminable by proper notice at the end of the first year, though there has been part performance. Dorman v. Plowman, 41 Wash. 477, 83 P. 322.

14. A parol lease for longer than one year which under the statute of frauds is void, is, where the tenant takes possession and attorns to his landlord, valid as to the provisions relative to repairs, rent, and termination. Ray v. Blackman, 120 Mo. App. 497, 97 S. W. 212.

15. Such injury is not shown by proof of permanent improvements without showing to what extent such improvements increased the rental value. Watkins v. Balch, 41 Wash. 310, 83 P. 321. Where a lessee in a parol lease which is void under the statute of frauds takes possession and makes improvements which can be removed, it is not such part peformance as takes the case out of the statute. Wessells v. Rodifer [Ky.] 97 S. W. 341. An oral lease for a period longer than one year is within the statute of frauds, though possession has been taken under it. Mollitor v. Thom Van Co., 118 Ill. App. 293.

19. A covenant for quiet enjoyment applies to a vault under the street which is necessary to enjoyment of the premises, which was constructed by permission from the city, and such covenant is broken where the city revokes the license to maintain it. Pabst Brew. Co. v. Thorley [C. C. A.] 145 F. 117.

20. In an oil and gas lease where the covenants state that the lease is made on certain terms and is to be rendered void by failure of the lessee to comply with "any of the above conditions," if, by necessary implication, a covenant by the lessee to exercise reasonable diligence in developing the property is contained, such covenant is also a condition, a breach of which in view of the circumstances will entitle the lessor to avoid the lease. Brewster v. Lanyon Zinc Co. [C. C. A.] 140 F. 801.

21. A covenant restricting the right of a railroad company, which leased its road to mortgage its reversion is void as restraining alienation. Continental Ins. Co. v. New York & H. R. Co. [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 1026.

22. When a lessee deposited money to secure performance of the covenants of the lease, one of which was that in case of abandonment the landlord might relet as agent of the tenant and he should be liable for any difference in rent received and the lessee abandoned the premises without cause, held that the landlord was entitled to retain the deposit until expiration of the term. O'Brien v. Levine, 50 Misc. 303, 98 N. Y. S. 636.

23. See 6 C. L. 351. See, also, Reformation of Instruments, 6 C. L. 1279.

24. Where because of mistake the lease does not conform to the agreement pursuant to which it was made, it may be re-

cally enforced according to its terms.[26] One seeking such remedy must be equitably entitled to it.[27] Specific performance may be had against the real party in interest, though no jurisdiction is obtained of the holder of the record title.[28] Whether a contract to give a lease has been broken may be a question of fact.[29] Where a sum is deposited as security for the execution of a lease, the person receiving it is not entitled to retain it where the depositor fails to execute in the absence of proof of damage.[30] One who agreed to obtain a term and sublease to defendant cannot in an action for breach show that he obtained the term without offering therewith proof of damage by defendant's nonperformance.[31]

§ 3. The different kinds of tenancies and their incidents. Periodical tenancies.[32]—A periodical tenancy for the rent paying period generally results where a tenant for a term holds over,[33] or where one enters under a lease which is void under the statute of frauds.[34] A notice intended as one to quit at the termination of an existing term will not be construed to create a new tenancy from month to month.[35] A tenancy otherwise at will may be converted into a periodical tenancy formed. Hardy v. Ladow, 72 Kan. 174, 83 P. 401. Where a landlord in forcible entry seeks to have a forfeiture declared for noncompliance with conditions, the court in the exercise of its equitable powers may examine all the equities of the parties and grant a decree reforming the lease. Gray v. Maier & Zobelein Brewery, 2 Cal. App. 653, 84 P. 280.

25. See 6 C. L. 351.

26. Where a contract did not provide for a provision against subletting without the landlord's consent, he was not entitled to have such provision inserted. Mausert v. Christian Feigenspan, 68 N. J. Eq. 671, 63 A. 610, 64 A. 801.

27. Under the circumstances of this case, it is held that a lessee is not entitled to specific performance of a contract to execute a lease without first paying a mortgage indebtedness. Mausert v. Christian Feigenspan, 68 N. J. Eq. 671, 63 A. 610, 64 A. 801.

28. Where a lessee contracted to obtain a renewal and sublease a portion of the premises, and the renewal at his request was made to run to his son who was a nonresident, but provided that the original lessee should be his agent and he guarantied performance of the conditions of the lease, held specific performance of the agreement to sublease could be had though the court had no jurisdiction of the son as the original lessee was the real party in interest. Capps v. Frederick [Wash.] 86 P. 1128.

29. Where one agreed to give another a lease and put him in possession within thirty days or as soon thereafter as he could get the present tenant out, and the tenant deposited the first month's rent in a bank to be turned over to the landlord when possession was given, held a question for the jury whether after nine months the landlord had done all that was required of him to put the tenant in possession. Leininger v. Clarke Nat. Bank, 97 Minn. 364, 107 N. W. 396.

30. Rosenfeld v. Silver, 49 Misc. 117, 96 N. Y. S. 1027. An instrument acknowledging receipt of a certain amount on a house proposed to be leased to the depositor, the security to be a specified greater amount, followed by a lease executed and the greater sum deposited, held to show that the first deposit was secured for execution of the lease and the depositor was entitled to recover it when that event took place. 33. Under Laws 1901, c. 31, a tenant in possession under a lease which contains no provision for renewal, but provides for monthly payment of rental, by holding over becomes tenant from month to month, but in other respects the covenants in the original lease are presumed in force. Slafter v. Siddall, 97 Minn. 291, 106 N. W. 308.

34. Where possession is taken under any oral lease void under the statute of frauds, a tenancy from month to month is created by operation of law. Mollitor v. Thom Van Co., 118 Ill. App. 293. Under the statute of frauds of Washington, an oral lease for a longer period than one year is a lease from period to period for the rent paying period. Watkins v. Balch, 41 Wash. 310, 83 P. 321. Where one entered under a void lease for five years at a certain monthly rental, such entry implied a new contract for tenancy from month to month. The fact that the rent was $135 per month and that $300 was deposited to secure payment of rent is of no importance in determining whether the tenancy was from month to month or from year to year, as such deposit was made under the void five year lease. Julian v. Berardini, 49 Misc. 119, 96 N. Y. S. 1064. A parol lease of a vacant city lot for the purpose of enabling the tenant to erect a house thereon for a real estate office is a tenancy from month to month under Rev. St. 1899, § 4110, making all oral leases of tenements in cities such tenancies and not a tenancy from year to year, which requires 60 days' notice to quit. Edmonston v. Webb, 119 Mo. App. 679, 94 S. W. 314.

35. Where a tenant was in possession under a lease for three years, a new tenancy from month to month is not created under Civ. Code, § 827, by notices served on him by the landlord to the effect that after the expiration of the term the rent would be advanced; that his lease should terminate by operation of law.[36] A tenancy which, if it was of city property, would by virtue of statute be from month to month, is, when relative to urban property, one from year to year.[37] The interest of a tenant from year to year is a chattel real.[38]

Tenancy at will[39] results where a lease is made by parol for a period longer than one year,[40] but not necessarily from the fact that the estate is at the will of one party.[41] To constitute one holding over a tenant at will, there must be something implying an assent of the landlord.[42] One is a tenant at will who after discharge from employment continues to occupy rooms, the use of which was part of his compensation.[43]

Tenancy at sufferance[44] results where a tenant from month to month defaults in the payment of rent and holds over after such default.[45]

§ 4. Rights and interests remaining in the landlord. A. Reversion, seisin and right of re-entry.[46]—The landlord is the owner of all of the estate save that demised[47] and he may maintain action to protect his interest.[48] Where the lease passes an interest there is, at law, no estoppel on the landlord as to an after acquired interest.[49] Equity, however, does not inflexibly follow this rule, and where the parties in addition to the usual lease covenants have contracted specially as to such after acquired interest their contract may be treated as a covenant for a further assurance, and the estoppel will be extended to bind such after-acquired interest, particularly as fairness and good conscience seem to require it.[50]

(§ 4) B. Estoppel of tenant to deny title.[51]—A tenant while occupying on such date, and a further notice stating that the notices were intended as a notice to quit for the purpose of terminating the tenancy, the tenant also having notice that the landlord had leased the premises to another. Vatuone v. Cannobio [Cal. App.] 88 P. 374.

36. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 3414, providing that a tenancy for a term of years created by parol contract is one at will, held, where such estate is followed by possession and payment of rent, the estate is from year to year by operation of law. Ray v. Blackman, 120 Mo. App. 497, 97 S. W. 212. In Missouri a parol lease, until the lessor should want possession for the purpose of improving the premises or should sell, creates a tenancy from year to year, though under Rev. St. 1899, § 3414, it was a tenancy at will. Kroeger v. Bohrer, 116 Mo. App. 208, 91 S. W. 159.

37. A lease of a city tract of land containing five or six acres for agricultural purposes under a lease providing that it should run until the owner should sell or desire to improve, is not one relating to occupation of tenements in cities or towns, terminable by thirty days' notice under Rev. St. 1899, § 4110, but was a tenancy from year to year and could be terminated only by 60 days' notice prior to expiration of a year. Blackburn v. Muskogee Land Co. [Ind. T.] 91 S. W. 31.

40. A tenant in possession under a parol lease for a term longer than one year is a tenant at will. Wessells v. Rodifer [Ky.] 97 S. W. 341.

41. A lease for a definite and permissible term, but which reserves to the lessee the option to terminate it before the expiration of the term, does not create a mere tenancy at will within the rule that an estate at the will of one party is equally at the will of the other. 48. Where a portion of a cellar and first floor room having an outside wall in a building parts of which were occupied by different tenants was rented by lease requiring the landlord to make outside repairs and the landlord shored up the wall when it was necessary, held he was in possession of it and could maintain forcible entry against an adjoiner who injured it. the premises cannot deny his landlord's title,[52] or impeach his capacity to own the premises,[53] even after expiration of the term.[54] This is so though he was in possession prior to the lease,[55] but where parties are claiming adversely to each other, the fact that by operation of law the relation of landlord and tenant exists between them does not preclude either from strengthening his claim by obtaining a tax or street assessment deed.[56]. The rule which estops a tenant to deny his landlord's title applies to all persons who enter into possession under him.[57]

Adverse possession does not run in favor of a tenant while the relation exists.[58]

A tenant may not, during the continuance of his lease, change the character of his possession and oust his lessor by purchasing or leasing from a third person. Moulierre v. Coco, 116 La. 845, 41 So. 113. A tenant of building located on land held under a lease by another party does not, by accepting a lease of the land from a stranger before the expiration of the lease without the consent of the landlord or lessee of the land, place the stranger in possession of the land so as to enable him maintain a suit to quiet title. Trimble v. Lake Superior & Puget Sound Co. [Minn.] 108 N. W. 867. 55. A tenant who has paid rent up to the time of being served with notice terminating the lease cannot deny the landlord's title in an action for possession, though he was in possession prior to the lease. Wallace v. Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Ass'n [C. C. A.] 148 F. 672.

Smith v. Smith, 144 Mich. 139, 13 Det. Leg. N. 237, 107 N. W. 894. In a proceeding by the lessor at the term to recover possession, the lessee or sublessee cannot defend on the ground that the landlord had leased the premises to another without connecting themselves with the title of such lessee. Vatuone v. Cannobio [Cal. App.] 88 P. 374.

58. Where a tenant constructed a building which partially extended on other land of the landlord, he was not in adverse possession of it until he purchased the leased premises. Ross v. (§ 5) A. Occupation and enjoyment. Right to enter.[62]—A lessee is entitled to possession according to the terms of the lease.[63] Where a lessor fails to give possession, the measure of damages is the difference between the rental value and the rent reserved,[64] together with special damages, if authorized by the circumstances;[65] but prospective profits may not be recovered unless the tenant's business has been interrupted.[66] All damages sustained may be recovered in a single action.[67] Where a lessor refuses to give possession, the lessee in order to recover general or special damages need not prove any effort to rent other land or engage in other occupation.[68]

A covenant for quiet enjoyment[69] does not protect the lessee from acts of a stranger[70] except by express terms,[71] nor from a lawful entry by the landlord,[72] nor protect him except as to his interest.[73] But for breach of such covenant by the landlord he may recover damages proximately resulting,[74] hence, where a tenant is en-

Where a tenant defaults in his covenant to assume an unperformed contract and the landlord pays a judgment recovered against him because of the breach, he may recover in assumpsit against the lessee. Pocono Spring Water Ice Co. v. American Ice Co., 214 Pa. 640, 64 A. 398. Where a lease of personal property provided that the lessee on termination of the lease should deliver it at a certain place and gave bond for performance of the conditions of the lease, and the lessor accepted the property at another than the place specified, he could not hold the sureties for costs of removal nor collect rent after he accepted it. White River, etc., R. Co. v. Star Ranch & Land Co., 77 Ark. 128, 91 S. W. 14.

62. See 6 C. L. 354.

63. A lessee who is unable to obtain possession because the premises are occupied by another under a lease to the occupant's assignor taken from him with the owner's consent may recover in damages from the landlord for breach of his contract to give possession. Rothman v. Kosower, 48 Misc. 538, 96 N. Y. S. 268.

64. Jarrait v. Peters [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 415, 108 N. W. 432.

65. The lessee's measure of damages for the landlord's refusal to give possession is the difference between the rental value and the agreed rent with special damages if authorized by the circumstances. Devers v. May [Ky.] 99 S. W. 255. On an issue of damages where the lessor refused to give possession, evidence that the premises were worth a epecified sum more than the agreed rent for the purposes for which the lessee rented was admissible. Id.

66. Where prior to the commencement of the term the lessor allowed the lessee to bring his desk and some of his tools to the premises and to use the lessor's horse and wagon, such fact did not, where the landlord subsequently refused to give possession, bring the case within the rule that where a business has been interrupted prospective profits may be recovered. Jarrait v. Petere [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 415, 108 N. W. 432.

67. Devers v. May [Ky.] 99 S. W. 255.

68. The recovery being for breach of contract and not for loss of time or services. Devers v. May [Ky.] 99 S. W. 255.

69. See 6 C. L. 357.

70. A landlord is not liable for injuries to tenants caused by the acts of third persons over whom he has no control. Where the building was injured by blasting during the excavation of a tunnel on adjoining property. Farnandis v. Great Northern R. Co., 41 Wash. 486, 84 P. 18.

71. The implied covenant covers disturbances by the landlord or those paramount to his title and an express covenant is necessary if he is to be liable for disturbances by strangers. Hastings v. Burchfield, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 309. If there be a verbal express covenant against strangers proof of fraudulent, accidental, or mistaken omission is essential. Id.

72. Where rent was overdue and tenants had sold crops from the premises without paying rent, it was not an unwarranted interference with the tenants for the landlord to go onto the premises and threaten to attach the balance of the crop. Smith v. Caldwell [Ark.] 95 S. W. 467.

73. Where, after a railway company had acquired a right of way across land from the owners of an undivided half thereof, it was leased and the lessee built fences over the right of way which the railway company tore down and stock injured the tenant's crop, held the company was not liable. Casteel v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. [Ark.] 99 S. W. 540.

74. After a landlord has rented rooms for a certain purpose he cannot so tear down and mutilate the building as to render the rooms unsuitable for the purposes for which they were leased without being liable in damages. Frepans v. Grostein [Idaho] 87 P. 1004. Evidence sufficient to sustain a verdict for $200 for injury by the landlord to the leased premises. Id. A sublessee, with a privilege of purchase, who loses this privilege and is compelled to attorn to the owner, because of the failure of the lessee to renew the lease or exercise his own privilege of purchase, suffers a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment and is entitled to any damages he may have sustained by reason of eviction from his privilege. McHugh v. Regan, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 406. Where a life tenant leases the premises for a certain joined by the landlord from making a proper use of the premises, he may recover damages.[75] There is no breach of the covenant of quiet enjoyment because of defective condition of the premises in the absence of legal eviction,[76] nor is there such breach where a lessor conveys reserving a life estate.[77]

Nature of the tenant's estate.[78]—A tenant has an estate in the premises and should be made a party to any action wherein his rights are liable to be affected.[79] He may defend his rights under the title of his landlord.[80] He possesses an estate as susceptible to damage, by reason of the closing of the street on which the property abuts, as if he owned the fee.[81] Where work and labor is done for, and materials furnished, a lessee of mining property, no lien therefor can be enforced against the owner.[82] A vendee of land in possession of a tenant takes subject to the unexpired term[83] but he takes all rights of the landlord.[84]

(§ 5) B. Assignment and subletting.[85]—The right to assign is incident to term and dies before the expiration of the term and the tenant is ejected by the fee owners, he may recover from his lessor's administrator for breach of covenant. Duker's Adm'r v. Kaelin, 28 Ky. L. R. 900, 90 S. W. 959. Where one leased from a life tenant for a certain term with privilege of renewal for a further term, and on death of the lessor before expiration of the first term he was evicted, it was no defense to his action for breach of covenant of quiet enjoyment that he never elected to take for the additional term. Id. Where the defective condition of a brick wall in a leased storehouse rendered it dangerous to life and property and necessitated its reconstruction by the lessor, held the lessee is entitled to recover direct pecuniary loss occasioned by the work of reparation in addition to reduction of rent provided by Civ. Code art. 2700. Lazare Levy & Co. v. Madden, 116 La. 374, 40 So. 766.

75. Where a tenant leased premises on a third floor for a roller skating rink and fitted it up for such purpose and conducted it with no more noise than necessary, and at the instigation of the landlord was enjoined from carrying on his business by tenants of the lower floors. Williams v. Getman, 99 N. Y. S. 977. The fact that rent was paid for some months after the injunction was granted does not change the situation. Id.

76. Pratt, Hurst & Co. v. Tailer, 100 N. Y. S. 16. Damages for breach of covenant of quiet enjoyment cannot be set off in an action by the landlord to recover for breach of covenant to assume an unperformed contract where there had been no eviction at the time the action was brought. Pocono Spring Water Ice Co. v. American Ice Co., 214 Pa. 640, 64 A. 398.

77. Bates v. Winifrede Coal Co., 4 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 265.

78. See 6 C. L. 359.

79. Where there is a judicial sale of the property and a general writ of possession awarded against tenants in favor of an assignee of the purchaser, one who claimed to have a lease from the purchaser antedating the assignment is entitled to be made a party. Aull v. Bowling Green Opera House Co. [Ky.] 92 S. W. 943. Notice of a proposed street improvement is binding upon all parties interested in the property, when served on a lessee for ten years with privilege of purchase to whom the care and control of the property is entrusted as completely as in this case. Clemmer v. Cincinnati, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 31.

80. The tenant of an agricultural society has a right to defend under the title of that society derived from the county, and cannot be ousted from the property by the county unless it be made to appear that the agricultural society has lost its rights therein, and a judgment against the tenant on the pleadings was therefore erroneous. Toledo Exposition Co. v. Kerr, 8 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 369.

81. Coleman v. Holden [Miss.] 41 So. 374. A lessee during the period of his term has all the rights, as to ingress and egress, as to obstructing or interfering therewith, as the owner of the fee would have, except as to the extent of damages. Id.

82. Williams v. Eldora Enterprise Gold Min. Co. [Colo.] 83 P. 780.

83. Stone v. Snell [Neb.] 109 N. W. 750.

84. Where a lease provided that the lessee should at the end of the term leave a certain amount of cotton seed on the place, and the landlord conveyed his reversion and assigned his rights under the lease, the purchaser acquired all the rights of the vendor to have the cotton seed left on the place, and the vendor could not recover it from the lessee during the term. Cobb v. Johnson [Ga.] 55 S. E. 935.

85. See 6 C. L. 360.

Note: A lease, by a tenant, of the demised premises for his entire term, is an assignment and not a sublease, though the rent reserved is different from that reserved in the original lease, and though the second lease provides for forfeiture and re-entry for condition broken and for surrender of the premises on expiration of the term. Sexton v. Chicago Storage Co., 129 Ill. 318, 21 N. E. 920, 16 Am. St. Rep. 274. In this case the court says: "The general principle as held by all the authorities is that where the lessee assigns his whole estate, without reserving to himself a reversion therein, a privity of estate is at once created between his assignee and the original lessor, and the latter then has a right of action directly against the assignee on the covenants running with the land, one of which is that to pay rent; but if the lessee sublets the premises, reserving or retaining any rethe lessee's estate, especially if assignment is authorized.[86] A covenant against assignment is liberally construed in favor of the tenant[87] but will not be so construed as to defeat its purpose.[88] A covenant against assignment or subletting without the consent of the landlord, in a lease absolute for one year and optional with the tenant as to future continuances, is not confined to the first year but extends during a continuance.[89] A provision against assignment without consent of the lessor is for his benefit and may be waived by him, and where waived an assignment without his assent is valid.[90] If an instrument by which a lessee conveys operates to transfer version, however small, the privity of estate between the sublessee and the original landlord is not established and the latter has no right of action against the former for breach of covenant, there being no privity of contract nor privity of estate between them." Whenever a lessee grants or transfers the whole term for which the premises were leased to him, reserving no reversionary interest in himself, it amounts to an assignment and is not a sublease. This results by operation of law without regard to the form of the instrument. A mere reservation of rent, or of the right of re-entry for a breach of any of the conditions of the lease, will not change the legal relations of the parties, and the introduction of covenants into the instrument, whatever may be their effect between the immediate parties thereto, does not change the legal effect of giving up the reversion. Craig v. Summers, 47 Minn. 189, 49 N. W. 742, 15 L. R. A. 236. To constitute an assignee it is not necessary that the instrument of transfer should be designated as an assignment. Any conveyance by the lessee of his whole interest, leaving no reversionary interest in himself, operates as an assignment, regardless of the form of the transfer. McLennan v. Grant, 8 Wash. 603. See, also, Smiley v. Van Winkle, 6 Cal. 607; Lee v. Payne, 4 Mich. 117; Cook v. Jones, 28 S. W. 692; Woods, Landlord and Tenant, par. 65; Woodhull v. Rosenthal, 61 N. Y. 382, 391; Bedford v. Terhune, 30 N. Y. 457; St. Joseph, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 135 Mo. 173, 36 S. W. 602, 33 L. R. A. 607. [Editor.]

86. Provision in a lease authorizing assignment held to entitle the lessee to assign regardless of the wishes of the landlord. Harris v. Sheffel, 117 Mo. App. 514, 94 S. W. 738. Where a landlord owed a tenant a debt which wae to be paid in merchandise to be retailed on the leased premises, the fact that the lessee who sold his business and assigned his lease did not assign the claim did not relieve the lessor from paying it. Id.

87. A transfer to a trustee in bankruptcy is not a "voluntary assignment" nor a "transfer under execution or other legal process" and does not authorize forfeiture under a provision for forfeiture for such transfer. Gazlay v. Williams [C. C. A.] 147 F. 678.

Note: Covenants against assignment and underletting are not favorably regarded by the courts, and are liberally construed in favor of the lessee, so as to prevent the restriction from extending any further than is necessary. Jones, Landlord and Tenant, § 464. In Riggs v. Pursell, 66 N. Y. 193, it is said: "Such covenants are restraints which the courts do not favor. They are construed with the utmost jealousy, and very easy modes have also been countenanced for defeating them." The cases go very far towards holding that the mere letter of the covenant is controlling. Illustrations of this attitude and how far it has led the courts to go are abundant. As, for instance, it has been held that an underletting is not a breach of the covenant against assignment (Jackson v. Silvernail, 15 Johns. [N. Y.] 277); that an assignment is not a breach of the covenant against underletting (Field v. Mills, 33 N. J. Law, 254), though there are other cases holding to the contrary of this; that a sublease of part of the premises is not a breach of the covenant against underletting the premises (Roosevelt v. Hopkins, 33 N. Y. 81); that the placing one in charge of leased premises as servant or caretaker is not an assignment or subletting (Presby v. Benjamin, 169 N. Y. 377, 57 L. R. A. 317); that a mortgage of the leasehold interest and a sale thereunder is not an assignment (Riggs v. Pursell, 66 N. Y. 193); that a delivery of a lease or security for money loaned operating as an equitable mortgage of the term is not a breach of the covenant not to let, set, assign, transfer, or turn over or otherwise part with the premises demised (Doe v. Hogg, 4 Dowl. & Ry. 266); that a sale under execution against the tenant is not a breach of the covenant against assigning or underletting (Farnum v. Hefner, 79 Cal. 575, 12 Am. St. Rep. 174); that an assignment by an assignee appointed in voluntary proceedings in insolvency is not a breach of a covenant not to lease or underlet (Bemis v. Wilder, 100 Mass. 446, 97 Am. St. Rep. 115); and that an assignment by one of two joint lessees is not a breach of the covenant against assignment by the lessee (Randol v. Scott, 110 Cal. 590). See Gaylay v. Williams, 147 F. 678.

88. Where a lease to one, his executors and administrators, contains a covenant against assigning or subletting without consent of the landlord and upon death of the tenant letters of administration are granted to an heir at law, a written assignment by all the heirs at law, without the consent of the lessor and an entry by the assignee with the acquiescence of the administrator, is a breach of the covenant. Walker v. Wadley, 124 Ga. 275, 52 S. E. 904.

89. Walker v. Wadley, 124 Ga. 275, 52 S. E. 904.

90. Livingston County Tel. Co. v. Herzberg, 118 Ill. App. 599. An assignment by his entire estate, it is generally held to constitute an assignment,[91] and an assignment may be inferred from facts and circumstances in the absence of a formal contract,[92] but not from an instrument not purporting to assign.[93] In the absence of fraud, an assignment passes all interests it purports to convey.[94] An assignee of a lease without warranty stands in the position of a grantee in a quitclaim deed and in the absence of fraud cannot set up a defect in title.[95] In Washington an instrument, in form a lease and containing all the covenants of the original lease but reserving a right of entry at the termination of the term or for breach of condition, was held an assignment,[96] but in New York such reservations were held to constitute the instrument a sublease.[97] A covenant against assignment without consent of the lessor may be waived.[98] Such waiver does not result from a subsequent acceptance of rent unless at the time the lessor has full knowledge of all the facts.[99] A provision against subletting without the consent of the landlord but providing no penalty for its violation on breach gives the landlord an action for damages or a right to enjoin conparol of a lease cannot be questioned in an action for rent unless denied by the pleadings. Id.

91. Agreement whereby the lessee sold the premises properly construed between lessor and lessee as an assignment of the lease. Waggoner v. Wyatt [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 196, 94 S. W. 1076. Where three or four beneficiaries conveyed their interest, and trustee in a lease reciting such conveyances leased the remaining undivided fourth for the term of the trust, held he had completely parted with his right to possession of any of the property. Smith v. Myers, 212 Pa. 51, 61 A. 573. One who acquires the whole estate of a lessee in a portion of the leased premises is an assignee and not a subtenant. Hollywood v. First Parish in Brockton [Mass.] 78 N. E. 124.

92. Where a lessee of a building joined others in organizing a corporation and put into it as payment for stock the goods he used in connection with his business and the lease which, however, was not formally assigned, and thereafter the corporation paid the rent usually with its checks, evidence held to show that the corporation owned the lease and was liable to a sublessee. James Sheehan & Co. v. Maison Barberis, 41 Wash. 671, 84 P. 607.

93. A bill of sale of all right and title to the "following described personal property" enumerating it, and all property used in conducting the livery and dray business sold, does not transfer a lease of the premises held by the seller. Johnson v. Levy [Cal. App.] 86 P. 810.

94. Where a lessee who had deposited a sum as security to be applied on the last month's rent, before the expiration of the term executed a bill of sale of the business with the "lease with security thereon," the mere fact that she could not read the bill of sale did not entitle her to avoid the effect of the provision assigning the sum deposited. Wackerow v. Engel, 96 N. Y. S. 1071. The assignee of a lessor of a saw mill and facilities, of such lessor's rights under the lease, takes title to "crossers" which the lessee had agreed under the lease to return or pay for. St. Regis Paper Co. v. Watson-Page Lumber Co., 111 App. Div. 108. 97 N. Y. S. 636. An assignment by a lessor of his rights in a lease of a saw mill and facilities, which included "covers" or boards for covering lumber piles, does not entitle the assignee to such covers on termination of the lease, but they remain property of the lessor. Id.

95. Norton v. Stroud State Bank [Okl.] 87 P. 848.

96. An instrument in form a lease by which a lessee transfers his entire term to another, and which contains the same covenants as the lease under which he holds, is an assignment and not a sublease, though a right of re-entry at the end of the term is reserved, and also a right to re-enter for breach of any covenant or for default in the payment of rent. Weander v. Claussen Brew. Ass'n, 42 Wash. 226, 84 P. 735.

97. Where a lessee leased to another "so long as the landlord herein shall have the lease on said premises" for an increased rent with right of re-entry on breach of certain conditions and providing for delivery of possession on termination of the lease and later consented to a transfer of such lease, held not an assignment, but a sublease. Shumer v. Hurwitz, 49 Misc. 121, 96 N. Y. S. 1026.

98. A provision against subletting without written consent of the landlord is waived where the lessee informs the landlord of his intention to sublet and the landlord acquiesces therein. Knoepker v. Redel, 116 Mo. App. 621, 92 S. W. 171. Where a lease provides against assignment without consent of the lessor but the lessor agrees to consent if the lessee procures a suitable tenant, such promise is without consideration when made, but efforts expended by the lessee in procuring a tenant constitute a consideration and render the promise enforceable. Underwood Typewriter Co. v. Century Realty Co., 118 Mo. App. 197, 94 S. W. 787. Where the lessee procured a tenant, mutuality was imported into the contract which related back to its date. Id.

99. Walker v. Wadley, 124 Ga. 275, 52 S. E. 904. Where the rent is payable annually, knowledge of the lessor that there has been a breach of such covenant during the year for which rent is received is a waiver of the breach as to that year, but not as to tinuance thereof.[1] A waiver of a breach of covenant may be pleaded in bar of an action brought by the lessor against the lessee and his assignee because of an alleged forfeiture growing out of breach of covenant against assigning without consent of the landlord,[2] but the establishment of such defense will not entitle the lessee or his assignee to be reimbursed for expenses incurred in making permanent improvements upon the premises.[3]

A tenant need not be in possession in order to sublet.[4] A subtenant is chargeable with notice of the provisions of his lessor's lease[5] and is bound thereby,[6] but his interest cannot be defeated by the mesne lessee's surrender of his estate in the premises to the lessor.[7] The rights and liabilities of the parties under a contract for subletting rests in the terms of the contract.[8]

(§ 5) C. Repairs and improvements.[9]—In the absence of statutory provision or express agreement, the tenant and not the landlord is bound to keep the premises in repair,[10] consequently, promises by the landlord to repair, made after execution of the lease, are without consideration,[11] and a contemporaneous agreement to repair must have been a condition to the making of the lease.[12] This rule, however, the whole term where the lessor had no knowledge that such an assignment had been made. Id.

4. Beck v. Minnesota & Western Grain Co. [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1032.

5. He takes the chance of its being canceled when under the terms of the lease and the facts the lessor has the right to cancel it. Cuschner v. Westlake [Wash.] 86 P. 948.

6. Sublessees, equally with lessees, of rights under a street railway franchise, are bound by all the limitations embodied in the grant to the original company. City of Cincinnati v. Cincinnati St. R. Co., 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 489. Under a lease giving an option to purchase and binding the lessee to make needed repairs, also to make improvements of a certain value, to remain on the premises in case the option to purchase was not exercised, and containing no restriction against assignment, binds an assignee to the covenants as to use and improvement. Peters v. Stone [Mass.] 79 N. E. 336. Where the assignee erected buildings on the premises and before completion of the term abandoned the premises, the buildings were a part of the realty and not subject to attachment as property of the assignee. Id.

7. Cuschner v. Westlake [Wash.] 86 P. 948. Where under a lease the rent was payable on the first of the month, and the lessee assigned and after the first he and his assignee paid the rent and the same day notice was served that the lease was terminated for non-payment of rent, and it did not appear that it was terminated before payment, the facts showed as to sublessees only a voluntary relinquishment of his estate by the lessee. Id. Where subletting is not prohibited, the interest of sublessee continues after surrender by the lessee. Mitchell v. Young [Ark.] 97 S. W. 454.

8. Where a lessee, in subletting, agrees to stand good for the rent of the sublessee, but not for advances made to him, the lessee is not liable for goods advanced by the lessor though charged in an account in which the lessee is without his consent named as surety. Poindexter v. Cunningham [Miss.] 41 So. 3. Where an heir of a lessee consents to the taking of goods by the lessor in payment of the lessee's debt, the lessor could not apply any of such goods on a debt due from a sublessee. Id.

9. See 6 C. L. 361.

10. At common law, the burden of making repairs was on the tenant unless the landlord expressly agreed to repair. Brett v. Berger [Cal. App.] 87 P. 222. In absence of an agreement to the contrary, it is the duty of the tenant to keep up the fences. Morgan v. Tims [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 832. A landlord is not bound to make repairs unless he agrees to do so in the lease. Blackwell v. Speer [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 511, 98 S. W. 903. A landlord is not obliged to make repairs during the tenancy unless he has agreed to do so. Mylander v. Beimschla, 102 Md. 689, 62 A. 1038. It is presumed that a lease of an apartment includes the ceilings, so that the landlord is under no obligation to repair them. Schiff v. Pottlitzer, 101 N. Y. S. 249.

11. Where under the express terms of a written lease the tenant agrees to furnish the house, keep the lawn mowed and the hedges trimmed, he cannot enforce a contemporaneous parol agreement by which the landlord agrees to do so. Leeming v. Duryea 49 Misc. 240, 97 N. Y. S. 355. Promises of the landlord after execution of the lease to furnish a house and keep the lawn in shape, and hedges trimmed are without consideration. Id.

12. An oral agreement to repair during the term, as distinguished from repairs to be made before tenancy commenced, is not collateral and is inadmissible. Greene v. Kerr, 48 Misc. 609, 95 N. Y. S. 568. An oral agreement relative to certain specified repairs entirely separate and independent of the lease does not constitute a modification of a provision in the lease requiring the tenant to make inside repairs. Auer v. Vahl [Wis.] 109 N. W. 529. Answer in an action does not require the tenant to remedy an existing nuisance,[13] nor make repairs essential to the enjoyment of his estate.[14] It is the duty of the landlord to repair all portions of the premises not demised and which are essential parts of the entire building.[15] The liability of the landlord for repairs must be found in the terms of the contract,[16] and where a stated sum per annum, to be deducted from the rent, is allowed by the lease for repairs, the legal inference is that this is the extent of the landlord's liability.[17] A covenant by the landlord to repair is obligatory on him during the entire term.[18] The fact that a tenant remains in possession at the request of the landlord, after the latter has failed to repair pursuant to his covenant, is not a waiver of any right under the lease.[19] There can be no recovery for failure to repair in the absence of proof of damage.[20] A covenant with a lessee and his assigns, binding the landlord to pay for improvements, runs with the land.[21] Failure of the landlord to make certain improvements must be seasonably taken advantage of.[22] A tenant may recover for failure of the landlord to furnish water for irrigating purposes pursuant to his covenant.[23] Where the lessee's liability for repairs is speci-for rent alleging certain agreements, stating the terms of the lease, and also in the same sentence and as part of the agreements on the part of the landlord to do certain things relative to the premises, held to show one complete contract and not a contract collateral to the lease. Leeming v. Duryea, 49 Misc. 240, 97 N. Y. S. 355.

13. Where premises are leased with an existing public nuisance thereon, there is no implied agreement that the tenant will pay for remedying it. City of New York v. U. S. Trust Co., 101 N. Y. S. 574.

14. A lessee who is required to remove and rebuild a portion of the leased building because of orders of the building inspector and in order to avoid delay in securing the benefit of his lease may recover expense incurred in so doing but not expense incurred in doing things which were discretionary with him in the absence of contract. Clark v. Gerke [Md.] 65 A. 326.

15. Roofs and chimneys. Fairmount Lodge No. 590 v. Tilton, 122 Ill. App. 636.

16. A contract by which it was agreed that the tenant should make improvements and that the account therefor should be kept and paid by the landlord at the time the tenant removed, held not too vague and indefinite to be enforced. Busby v. Marshall, 125 Ga. 645, 54 S. E. 646. Where the landlord contracted to furnish materials for repairs and one man's labor, the tenant to furnish the remainder of materials and labor, the landlord was only required to perform when requested by the tenant to do so. Brett v. Berger [Cal. App.] 87 P. 222. Where the landlord is sued for failure to furnish heat, it is not competent to show that he made an allowance on the rent for time required to make certain improvements. New Era Mfg. Co. v. O'Reilly, 197 Mo. 466, 95 S. W. 322. Where it is agreed between landlord and tenant that the latter shall make certain improvements and that the account for such improvements shall be payable by the landlord on the date the tenant removes from the premises, limitations do not run against an action on such account until the tenant removes and surrenders possession. Busby v. Marshall, 125 Ga. 645, 54 S. E. 646.

17. Faron v. Jones, 49 Misc. 47, 96 N. Y. S. 316. Where a lease of a building and machinery provides for an allowance by the landlord of a certain sum for repairs to the building, the landlord is not liable for new machinery, installed by the tenant when the old machinery became useless, in the absence of express or implied agreement to replace it. Id.

18. A verbal agreement to make certain improvements in the premises, in consideration of which a written lease is executed, remains obligatory upon the lessor during the term, and if, after that period, the lessee remains in possession and becomes a tenant from month to month, such agreement is presumed to remain in force. Damages caused by leakage because of failure to make such improvement in a workmanlike manner are not limited to the period covered by the written lease. Slafter v. Siddell, 97 Minn. 291, 106 N. W. 308.

19. Vincent v. Central City L. & Inv. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 428.

20. Damages for breach of covenant to repair cannot be set off in the absence of proof of damage. Pocono Spring Water Ice Co. v. American Ice Co., 214 Pa. 640, 64 A. 398. It is no evidence of damage to a sublessee that the landlord paid the lessee a certain sum for the privilege of making repairs. McConnell v. Adair [Ala.] 41 So. 419.

21. Hollywood v. First Parish in Brockton [Mass.] 78 N. E. 124. A covenant in a lease to a lessee, "his heirs and assigns," binding the lessor to pay for improvements made during the term, binds him to pay for improvements made by an assignee of the lessee. Id.

22. Where a lessee used a dynamo and engine, placed in the building by the landlord under his agreement to do so, for a year prior to the landlord's death, he was precluded from thereafter asserting that they did not comply with the stipulations in the lease. New Era Mfg. Co. v. O'Rielly, 197 Mo. 466, 95 S. W. 322. In an action by a lessee for failure of the landlord to install in the building an engine and dynamo of the character called for by the lease, evidence that the one installed had broken fied in the lease, it cannot be extended by construction.[24] A covenant by the tenant to make needful repairs is to be so construed as to effectuate the intention of the parties.[25] A covenant to make necessary repairs and surrender in good repair, ordinary wear and tear excepted, does not require the rebuilding of a worthless building burned,[26] but does require the repairing of existing defects[27] and the keeping up of fences.[28] Under such a covenant a tenant can remove old fixtures and replace them at the end of the term with repairs necessary to make their condition as good as when received,[29] and he need not replace fixtures becoming useless from ordinary wear and tear.[30] The right to enforce such covenant may be waived by the landlord,[31] but the liability of the tenant is not affected by the fact that a subsequent tenant made repairs that he should have made.[32] A right of action for failure to return the premises in good condition, based on reparable damages, does not accrue down within two years thereafter was incompetent, where offered six months after it had broken, to show that the machinery installed did not comply with the agreement. Id.

23. Where the landlord breaches his agreement to furnish water to irrigate the crop, one-half of which was to be his, the tenant may recover the value of his share of the crop less the cost of producing the entire crop. Dunlap v. Raywood Rice Canal & Mill. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 86, 95 S. W. 43. Evidence sufficient to sustain judgment for the amount awarded. Id. Where a landlord fails to furnish water for irrigation as he has agreed to do, the measure of the tenant's damages is the difference between the crop raised, less cost of harvesting, etc., and the crop which should have been raised, less cost of harvesting, etc. McFaddin v. Sims [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 757, 97 S. W. 335. Where a landlord sues for rent and advances and the tenant sets up failure to furnish water for irrigation and damages for negligently handling the crop, allegations that the tenant was an experienced farmer, etc., held irrelevant and should have been stricken. Id.

24. City of New York v. U. S. Trust Co., 101 N. Y. S. 574.

25. A lease by which the lessee covenanted to make all repairs, comply with all rules and regulations of the health, fire and building departments, but not to make additions or alterations, does not impose on him the duty of removing stone steps and a railed areaway extending into the street as required by the city. City of New York v. U. S. Trust Co., 101 N. Y. S. 574. A provision requiring the tenant to keep in good repair, that if water meters are installed he shall pay water charges, that if the authorities require toilets to be removed from the yard to the building, or any other structural change, the landlord shall do it, does not make the tenant liable for expense of putting in new sinks and water meters. Epstein v. Saviano, 99 N. Y. S. 910. Covenants requiring the lessee to keep in good repair, except for ordinary wear and tear, and that alterations shall be made at his expense, do not require him to surrender the property in an improved condition, nor pay for removal of a portion of the building as ordered by the building inspector, which change was necessary to the enjoyment of his lease. Clark v. Gerke [Md.] 65 A. 326. An agreement executed concurrent with the lease by which the tenant agreed to save his landlord harmless as to making alterations recited in the lease does not require the tenant to stand expenses incurred in making alterations required by the building inspector where such alterations were not recited in the lease. Id. A lessee who in order to enjoy his lease makes alterations required by the building inspector under an agreement by which rent was to be regularly paid until it could be legally determined who was liable for the repairs is not a volunteer but stands in the position of one who repairs at the request of the landlord. Id.

26. A covenant to surrender the premises in good repair, ordinary wear and tear excepted, but not requiring the tenant to rebuild, does not require him to rebuild worthless building burned where he was not negligent. Junction Min. Co. v. Springfield Junction Coal Co., 222 Ill. 600, 78 N. E. 902.

27. A tenant who covenants to make all needful repairs and to leave the premises in good repair, ordinary wear and tear excepted, is liable for his failure to surrender up in good repair regardless of their condition and existing defects when he took possession. Appleton v. Marx, 102 N. Y. S. 2.

28. A lessee who agrees to build, repair, and keep in good condition houses sufficient to accommodate laborers necessary to cultivate the premises, and to keep fences in repair, is liable for failure to deliver in good repair at the end of the term. Franklin v. Triplett [Ark.] 94 S. W. 929.

29, 30. Fox v. Lynch [N. J. Eq.] 64 A. 439.

31. Though a tenant covenants to make all needful repairs and to leave the premises in good order, where he fails to repair an elevator and pump and the landlord does so by putting in new ones, he thereby waives the right to collect the cost of repair from the tenant. Appleton v. Marx, 102 N. Y. S. 2. Where a landlord sued to recover the cost of repairs which the tenant had covenanted to make but failed to do, evidence held insufficient to authorize an allowance of an item for painting. Id.

32. A tenant who covenants to make needful repairs and to leave the premises in good repair is liable for his failure to do so, though a subsequent tenant who made the same covenant made repairs which the first tenant should have made. Appleton v. Marx, 102 N. Y. S. 2.

until expiration of the lease.[33] Such right of action passes to a grantee of the leased premises.[34] A landlord who repairs on failure of the tenant to perform his covenant to do so, may recover the cost thereof[35] but not interest thereon.[36] A covenant by which a landlord agrees to repair as speedily as possible in case of partial destruction of the building is a personal one.[37] A covenant by the landlord to make repairs but that the lessee at his option may do so and be reimbursed is a personal obligation on the part of the original lessor and does not run with the reversion.[38]

Waste.[39]—A tenant is liable for waste irrespective of the term of his lease unless exempted from liability therefor by the terms of his lease.[40] What constitutes waste is to be determined by a consideration as to whether the act done results in injury to the inheritance in view of the conditions which exist at the time the act is committed.[41]

(§ 5) D. Insurance and taxes.[42]—A covenant to pay taxes does not cover special assessments for public improvements,[43] nor does a covenant to comply with police and sanitary regulations.[44] Where a lessee agrees to pay increase in taxes resulting from proposed erection of a building by him, an increase in the assessed valuation subsequent to the improvement is prima facie due thereto.[45] A previous breach by the sublessee of a covenant for payment of taxes does not afford a ground of action against him by the lessee where every circumstance surrounding the matter indicates that the forfeiture of the estate for nonpayment of taxes was waived.[46]

(§ 5) E. Injuries from defects and dangerous condition.[47]—The tenant takes the premises in the condition in which they are at the time in the absence of any

33. Knutsen v. Cinque, 113 App. Div. 677, 99 N. Y. S. 911. Under a covenant to deliver up the premises at the end of the term in good repair, the tenant has the whole time until the end of the term to put the premises in good repair. Fox v. Lynch [N. J. Eq.] 64 A. 439.

34. Knutsen v. Cinque, 113 App. Div. 677, 99 N. Y. S. 911.

35. Where a tenant fails to repair as he has covenanted to do and the landlord does so, he may recover the cost thereof on proof that it is reasonable. Markham v. Stevenson Brewing Co., 111 App. Div. 178, 97 N. Y. S. 604.

36. Where a tenant fails to repair as he has covenanted to do and the landlord repairs, he may not recover interest on the cost of such repairs as it is unliquidated. Markham v. Stevenson Brew. Co., 111 App. Div. 178, 97 N. Y. S. 604.

37. The landlord may not, by delegating its performance to a contractor absolve himself from liability for the contractor's negligence. Eberson v. Continental Inv. Co., 118 Mo. App. 67, 93 S. W. 297.

38. Willcox v. Kehoe, 124 Ga. 484, 52 S. E. 896. One who purchases land subject to a lease containing a covenant on the part of the landlord to repair or to reimburse the lessee for repairs made by him is not bound for breach of such covenant. Id.

39. See 6 C. L. 362.

40. Moss Point Lumber Co. v. Harrison County Sup'rs [Miss.] 42 So. 290, 873. Under the Mississippi statute enacted in 1883, authorizing a lease of school lands for 99 years instead of for three years, as previously authorized, a tenant is liable for waste. Id. In the absence of a stipulation to the contrary, a lessee of school lands is presumed to have taken them for agricultural purposes and may not cut timber for commercial purposes. Id. Cutting timber for commercial purposes by a lessee for 99 years, held waste. Id. This is so though the timber was valueless when he acquired the lease and matured during the term. Id.

41. Moss Point Lumber Co. Harrison County Sup'rs [Miss.] 42 So. 290, 873. A tenant for years may cut timber for clearing as much of the premises as his family may need, and he may clear for cultivation such portions of the land as a prudent owner of the fee would clear providing he leaves enough timber for the permanent use of the inheritance. Id.

43. McVickar Gaillard Realty Co. v. Garth, 111 App. Div. 924, 97 N. Y. S. 640.

44. A covenant to comply with and execute all laws, orders, and regulations of state and municipal authorities, has reference to police and sanitary rules and regulations, and does not require payment of special assessments for public improvemente. McVickar Gaillard Realty Co. v. Garth, 111 App. Div. 924, 97 N. Y. S. 640.

45. Eichner v. Cohen, 48 Misc. 541, 96 N. Y. S. 279. Where a lessee proposed to erect a building and the lease provided that he should pay any increase in taxes resulting from the improvement, and an assignee of the lease assumed such obligation and executed a written agreement to pay taxes on a fixed amount of increased valuation, the agreement was valid and imposed no different obligation than the lease, but merely fixed the sum due by reaeon of the increase. secret defect, deceit, warranty or agreement on the part of the landlord to repair,[48] and a landlord who discovers a defect after the beginning of the tenancy is under no obligation to communicate such fact to the tenant.[49]

In the absence of a covenant to repair, the landlord is not liable for injuries resulting to a tenant,[50] his guest,[51] or servant,[52] by reason of the premises being out of repair,[53] but he is liable for injuries resulting from concealed defects,[54] or where he causes repairs to be made and the work is negligently done.[55] In such case he is liable for the negligence of a person he employs to do the work.[56] The landlord

48. Auer v. Vahl [Wis.] 109 N. W. 599. A lessee assumes the risk of injury from a wire extending from an electric light pole without the premises to an anchor two feet within the premises which was so located to his knowledge at the time the lease was made. Hatch v. McCloud River Lumber Co. [Cal.] 88 P. 355. Where a tenant and his wife knew of the existence of a wire anchored on the premises, the wife was guilty of negligence in running against it in the evening. Id.

49. Shute v. Bills, 191 Mass. 433, 78 N. E. 96.

50. Under Civ. Code arts. 2693, 2694, the tenant is bound to make ordinary repairs and cannot recover for personal injuries caused by the want of such repairs. Brodtman v. Finerty, 116 La. 1103, 41 So. 329. Where the tenant of the first floor of a building covenanted to make repairs, but the landlord at his request repaired the roof so as to prevent leaking which was injuring the ceiling of the first floor, such work could not be regarded as admission of liability to repair. Dalton v. Gibson [Mass.] 77 N. E. 1035. Where a landlord had made some repairs and had promised to repair a ceiling, it did not show that he retained control of it and was required to repair it. Schiff v. Pottlitzer, 101 N. Y. S. 249. A landlord who has the premises examined monthly, and who repaired the roof and examined all the slats thereon four weeks prior to the accident, is not guilty of negligence and liable for damages where a tenant is injured because one of the slats on the roof was loose. Schwartz v. Monday, 49 Misc. 527, 97 N. Y. S. 978.

51. A third person living with the tenant cannot recover from the landlord for injuries caused by a hidden defect, where it is not shown that the landlord knew or should have known of its existence. Shute v. Bills, 191 Mass. 433, 78 N. E. 96. A landlord is not liable for injuries to a third person living with the tenant for injuries sustained because of a defect in the roof and gutter of the house, where it is not shown that the roof and gutter did not remain in as good condition as when the premises were let. Id. In an action by a third person living with a tenant for injuries caused by an alleged hidden defect in the outside of the premises, evidence held insufficient to show that the landlord had assumed to repair such defects, that notice had been given his agent and that he had unsuccessfully undertaken to repair. Id.

52. A servant of the tenant has no greater right to recover from the landlord for injuries for defects in the premises than the tenant has. Dalton v. Gibson [Mass.] 77 N. E. 1035.

53. A landlord is not liable for an injury sustained because the elevator was not guarded as required by New York City Building Code, § 91, unless the elevator was in such condition at the time of the lease. Washington v. Episcopal Church, 111 App. Div. 402, 97 N. Y. S. 1072. A landlord is not liable where, after he leased the premises, a rainspout became defective and cast water upon adjoining premises where he had not agreed to make repairs. Mylander v. Beimschla, 102 Md. 689, 62 A. 1038. Where a tenant rented the ground floor of a building and covenanted to make repairs, he was required to repair the ceiling. His servant who was injured by falling plaster could not recover from the landlord. Dalton v. Gibson [Mass.] 77 N. E. 1035.

54. Where prior to leasing premises in which a person had been sick with a contagious disease the landlord employed a skilled nurse and physician to disinfect them, he was not liable when thereafter a child of a tenant to whom he rented such premises died of the disease, though experts testified that there were better means of disinfecting than those used by the nurse and doctor. Finney v. Steele [Ala.] 41 So. 976. Whether a building was caused to collapse by the negligence of the landlord held a question of fact. Di Palma v. Weinman [N. M.] 82 P. 360. Where a landlord had not agreed to make repairs and during the tenancy a rainspout became defective and cast water on adjoining premises, but subsequently the building was re-rented in its defective condition, the landlord was liable only for the damages occurring after the second lease was made. Mylander v. Beimsehla, 102 Md. 689, 62 A. 1038.

55. Upham v. Head [Kan.] 85 P. 1017. Where the landlord undertakes to remodel a leased building, he must do so in such manner as not to injure the tenant's property or interfere with the enjoyment of his tenancy. He is liable for damages resulting to the tenant if he does not properly supervise the work done by subcontractors. Bancroft v. Godwin, 41 Wash. 253, 83 P. 189. Where a landlord was bound to repair and attempted to do so, but the work was ineffectual, proof of such fact justifies an inference that the work was negligently done. Shute v. Bills, 191 Mass. 433, 78 N. E. 96.

56. A landlord who on request of his tenant undertakes to repair defects existing upon the leased property and employs a mechanic to do the work is chargeable with knowledge of the manner in which the work is done. Upham v. Head [Kan.] 85 P. 1017.

is liable for injuries flowing from defective construction of the building.[57] A provision exempting the landlord from liability for specified defects does not apply where injury from such defects is the result of his own negligence.[58] The landlord is not liable for injuries resulting from the wrongful act of a cotenant.[59] For failure to perform his covenant to furnish heat only proximate damages can be recovered.[60]

Though a landlord fails to comply with his agreement to repair, yet the duty rests on the tenant to use all reasonable means to protect his property from unnecessary exposure,[61] and if necessary make repairs himself and recoup from the rent,[62] and, if he fails to do so, he may not recover from the landlord.[63]

Where a landlord was liable for damages caused a tenant by negligence of contractors doing the work of remodeling the building, the verdict will not be set aside because of an erroneous instruction that the landlord was not liable for negligence of the contractors. Bancroft v. Godwin, 41 Wash. 253, 83 P. 189. Where it is the duty of the landlord to repair the plumbing, the fact that he contracted with plumbers to do the work does not relieve him from liability for injuries to an infant child of the tenant by the negligence of workmen. Rosenberg v. Zeitchik, 101 N. Y. S. 591. Where a plumber employed by a landlord to make repairs left a portable furnace unattended on the floor, and an infant child of the tenant in passing overturned the furnace and was burned, held the leaving of the furnace unattended constituted negligence. Id. A landlord who authorized the tenant of a second floor to reconstruct a porch and stairway suitable for his purposes, at his own cost, the same to be under his exclusive control, is liable to a tenant of the first floor for failure to exercise ordinary care to see that the improvement is made reasonably safe. In such case he stands in the same relation to the lower tenant as though he had made the improvement himself. Myhre v. Schleuder [Minn.] 108 N. W. 276. Evidence sufficient to show that the work was defective and that the landlord failed to exercise the proper degree of care to supervise the improvement. Id.

57. Evidence sufficient to show that a landlord was negligent where water was permitted to leak through from the second floor onto the tenant's goods. James Sheehan & Co. v. Maison Barberis, 41 Wash. 671, 84 P. 607.

58. A provision exempting the landlord from liability for injury caused by leakage of gas, steam, or water pipes of any kind whatsoever, does not exempt him where overflow of a tank resulted from negligence of his servants in defectively adjusting a manhole cover to the tank. Lewis Co. v. Metropolitan Realty Co., 112 App. Div. 385, 98 N. Y. S. 391. A provision exempting the landlord from liability "for acts or neglect of cotenants or other occupants" does not apply to acts or neglect of such parties authorized or committed under any right given by the landlord. Wade v. Herndl, 127 Wis. 544, 107 N. W. 4. A provision exempting the landlord from liability for damage caused by leaky roof, unless he neglects to repair after written notice, does not exempt him from liability where leaks were occasioned by his own negligence. Pratt, Hurst & Co. v. Tailer, 100 N. Y. S. 16. As where the landlord permitted the roof to be used for an unsuitable purpose and in a manner which caused it to leak. Id.

59. A landlord is not liable where tenants of an upper floor leave a faucet open and water leaks into the rooms of a tenant below. Brick v. Favilla, 101 N. Y. S. 970.

60. Failure of the landlord to furnish heat as he covenanted to do does not entitle the tenant to maintain action against him for death of his child from sickness. Dancy v. Walz, 112 App. Div. 355, 98 N. Y. S. 407.

61. Where a lease provided that injuries by fire should be repaired by the landlord, and after a fire destroyed the roof, of which fact the landlord was immediately notified, no repairs were made for six days when a rain injured the tenant's goods, held the tenant could not recover as it was his duty to protect his goods or make repairs and charge them to the landlord. Weinberg v. Ely, 100 N. Y. S. 283. Whether a tenant was guilty of contributory negligence in bringing new goods into the building while the landlord was making repairs, and whether the tarpaulin covering the hole in the roof was sufficient, held questions of fact. Eberson v. Continental Inv. Co., 118 Mo. App. 67, 93 S. W. 297.

62. Where a landlord fails to repair as he has agreed to do and the ceiling falls, injuring the tenant, the measure of damages is merely the expense of doing the work which the landlord failed to do. Schiff v. Pottlitzer, 101 N. Y. S. 249. Where a landlord refuses to perform his covenant to repair, the tenant may not stand by and see his crops destroyed because thereof, but must himself repair and recover the cost thereof from the landlord. Brett v. Berger [Cal. App.] 87 P. 222.

63. Where a tenant fails to repair and recoup from the rent, members of his family who are injured because of the lack of repair have no cause of action against the landlord. Brodtman v. Finerty, 116 La. 1103, 41 So. 329. Where the tenant may recoup as against the rent for damages flowing from patent defects existing at the time of renting, as to the existence of which both parties had notice, he cannot do so where the landlord wae not notified to repair, or the tenant could by ordinary care have avoided the injury. Henley v. Brockman, 124 Ga. 1059, 53 S. E. 672. A landlord is not liable for injuries to a tenant occasioned by defects in the premises which he has covenanted to repair, where knowing of the defect the tenant fails to exercise his right to repair and recoup from the rent or surrender the premises. Reams v. Taylor [Utah] 87 P.

A landlord is liable for injuries resulting from his negligence in failing to keep in a reasonably safe condition portions of the building over which he retains control,[64] and, though such liability is contingent upon notice, notice is not necessary where the defective condition results from his own act,[65] but he is liable in this respect only where he has been guilty of negligence[66] after notice of the defective condition,[67] and the person injured has not been guilty of contributory negligence.[68]

1089. Where it was not the duty of the landlord to repair and the tenant did not as required by Civ. Code art. 2694, the landlord was not liable for injuries resulting from the defect to the tenant's wife. Bianchi v. Del Valle, 117 La. 587, 42 So. 148. Especially was the landlord not liable where there was no serious injury but only an abrasion of the skin. Id.

64. A custom by which a landlord letting dwelling houses to tenants at will retained control of the outside, yard, roof, etc., is invalid. Shute v. Bills, 191 Mass. 433, 78 N. E. 96. A landlord must use reasonable care to keep the roof of the premises in a reasonably safe condition. Schwartz v. Monday, 49 Misc. 527, 97 N. Y. S. 978. A landlord who reserves control of balconies, stairways, and steps, for the common use of tenants, is bound to use ordinary care to keep them in a reasonably safe condition. Walsh v. Frey, 101 N. Y. S. 774. Where several floors of a building are leased to different tenants who jointly use the elevator, the duty to keep it in repair devolves on the landlord. A tenant is not liable to a servant for injuries occasioned by a defect in such elevator. Andrus v. Bradley-Aiderson Co., 117 Mo. App. 322, 93 S. W. 872. A landlord is liable for injuries to a tenant or a stranger for his failure to guard an elevator shaft where the elevator is under his control. Shoninger Co. v. Mann, 121 Ill. App. 275. The landlord is liable for injuries to the infant child of a tenant resulting from the dangerous condition of a water closet if, under express or implied contract with the tenant, the closet was for the common use of tenants of the flat. In the absence of such contract, however, the landlord is not liable, though the closet was used by other tenants with his knowledge or approval. Hess v. Hinkson's Adm'r, 29 Ky. L. R. 762, 96 S. W. 436. A landlord who retains control of a cistern for the purpose of repairs is liable for injuries resulting from failure to repair after reasonable notice, and is liable where a child of a tenant was drowned in the cistern. Mills' Adm'r v. Cavanaugh, 29 Ky. L. R. 685, 94 S. W. 651. Owners of an office building, the offices in which are heated by a single plant of which they retain control, are liable where steam is negligently allowed to escape from the radiators and injure property in the offices. Bryant v. Carr, 101 N. Y. S. 646. Where a freight elevator in a building, portions of which were let to several tenants, remained under the control of the owner, he was bound to maintain it in a reasonably safe condition for the use of those who had a right to use it. Rosenberg v. Schoolherr, 101 N. Y. S. 505. Where the elevator was partially enclosed by slats, and the lower part of two slats had been broken off, and one using the car allowed his foot to protrude through the hole and it was crushed, the landlord was held negligent. Id. Where a third person living with the tenant was injured by an alleged hidden defect in the outside of the premises, it is admissible to show a custom or usage which required the landlord to furnish outside repairs where premises like those in question were leased to a tenant at will. Shute v. Bills, 191 Mass. 433, 78 N. E. 96.

65. Where a landlord leases each floor of a building to separate tenants but remains in possession of the roof and covenants to repair it on written notice, and leases such roof for a purpose for which it is not suitable, and it becomes broken and leakage damages a tenant and he has actual notice of the leakage, he is liable for damages caused without being given written notice. Pratt, Hurst & Co. v. Taller [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 328.

66. Where a tenant was injured by catching her foot in a hole in the hallway of a tenement house, the question of the landlord's negligence was held for the jury. Acker v. Stiner, 101 N. Y. S. 766. The landlord is responsible for injuries to tenants resulting from the dangerous condition of parts of the premises which he reserves for common use, and over which he retains control only when he has been guilty of actual negligence with regard thereto. Hanselman v. Broad, 113 App. Div. 447, 99 N. Y. S. 404.

67. He must have notice of the condition of things or circumstances equivalent to notice must exist, where injuries resulted to a tenant of a tenement house because of the fall of a clothes pole in the yard where the tenant was hanging wash clothes, unless he had notice of the rotten condition of the pole. Hanselman v. Broad, 113 App. Div. 447, 99 N. Y. S. 404. Evidence that another similar pole set out the same time had previously fallen was admissible on the question of notice. Id. Where a tenant was injured because of a defect in the roof, evidence held insufficient to show that the landlord had knowledge of such defect. Schwartz v. Monday, 49 Misc. 527, 97 N. Y. S. 978.

68. Where a servant of a tenant was injured by falling down an elevator shaft which he asserted was because the hallway was dark, and the landlord asserted that he opened the door when the elevator was not there and stepped in, instructions as to the duty of each in the premises held proper. Pascieszny v. Boydell Bros. White Lead & Color Co. [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 726, 109 N. W. 417. It is not error to leave it to the jury to say whether the facts and circumstances under which the plaintiff stepped into the open elevator shaft were such as to lull him into a sense of security, by leading him to think the cab was there to receive him. Breuer v. Frank, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.) 581. Where the landlord was making extensive repairs in a tenement house, and

The landlord is not liable where a tenant is injured while making an exclusive use of a portion of the premises over which he retains control.[69] A landlord who maintains a common passage for the use of several tenants must use due care to keep it in the condition it was when the lease was made, but is not bound to change the mode of construction.[70] A landlord who leases separate portions of the same building to different tenants but reserves control of halls, stairways, and outer doors, must use reasonable diligence to keep such part of the premises free from improper obstruction.[71] His duty in this respect is measured and limited by the uses to which it is reasonable, from the nature of the building, to infer that such portions of the building were intended to be subjected in making the leases.[72]

To strangers.[73]—The landlord is not liable to third persons for injuries occasioned by defects which do not constitute a nuisance,[74] nor from an injury resulting piled debris so as to leave only a narrow path to the toilet, the questions of negligence and contributory negligence were for the jury, where a tenant was injured by falling over an obstruction in the hall in the evening, where such obstruction had been carelessly left there that day and the tenant had never seen it. Sacks v. Segal, 101 N. Y. S. 41.

69. Where a landlord provided a place for hanging clothes but a tenant strung lines for that purpose between the uprights of a rear porch over which the landlord had control, and while hanging clothes the rail gave way and she was injured, held that the use the tenant made of the porch was an exclusive one for her own convenience and the landlord was not liable. Walsh v. Frey, 101 N. Y. S. 774.

70. It is proper to instruct in an action by a tenant for injuries sustained because of a defect in a common stairway that, if the defect was obvious at the time of the letting, he could not recover, but, if they appeared strong and safe, the landlord was bound to keep them in such condition. Andrews v. Williamson [Mass.] 78 N. E. 737.

71. Whitcomb v. Mason, 102 Md. 275, 62 A. 749.

72. Whitcomb v. Mason, 102 Md. 275, 62 A. 749. The owner of an office building is not required to keep the outer doors open or unlocked on Sunday. Where the building is occupied principally by lawyers, the landlord is not liable for destruction of furniture by an unusual fire which occurred on Sunday because he was unable to remove them. Id. Where in such case it appeared that the only door by which the furniture could be removed was securely locked, a request to take the case from the jury for want of evidence that the landlord prevented the removal of the furniture was properly denied. Id.

Note: As a general rule a landlord cannot be charged with liability for injuries to adjoining premises if, at the time of the letting, the demised premises are in a proper state of repair and the tenant permits them to get into a condition injurious to adjacent property. Edgar v. Walker, 106 Ga. 454, 32 S. E. 582. An exception to this rule exists in a case in which the lessor covenants to keep in repair, and by reason of his failure to do so, the building gets into a dangerous condition and falls. Benson v. Saurez, 43 Barb. [N. Y.] 408. Injuries from a nuisance not existing at the time of the demise but created by the tenant, impose no liability on the part of the landlord as where the tenant obstructs the natural flow of surface water (Baker v. Allen, 66 Ark. 271, 50 S. W. 511, 74 Am. St. Rep. 93), nor is the landlord liable where the tenant digs a ditch and constructs a dam on the leased premises causing water to overflow adjacent property (Jansen v. Barnum, 89 Ill. 100; Sargent v. Stark, 12 N. H. 332). No liability can be imposed upon him for the filtration of sewage from a cesspool or privy vault into the cellar or well of adjoining premises which is not the result of defective construction, but of failure of the tenant to keep in repair (Anheuser Busch Brewing Ass'n v. Peterson, 41 Neb. 897, 60 N. W. 373; Pope v. Boyle, 98 Mo. 527, 11 S. W. 1010; Wunder v. McLean, 134 Pa. 334, 19 A. 749, 19 Am. St. Rep. 702), nor is he liable if the tenant allows offensive or impure matter to accumulate on the demised premises in such a way as to be washed by rains onto the adjoining lands (Edgar v. Walker, 106 Ga. 454). A tenant who allows offensive odors to escape from a livery stable to an adjoining house, thereby rendering it unfit for habitation, is alone liable, where the stable is so constructed that it can be used for livery purposes in a lawful manner. Metropolitan Sav. Bank v. Manion, 87 Md. 68, 39 A. 90; Packard v. Collins, 23 Barb [N. Y.] 444. But a landlord who renews a lease after the creation of a nuisance by the tenant, which did not exist at the time of the original letting, is liable for injury to adjoining property by the continuance of the nuisance. Fleischner v. Citizens' Real Estate & Invest. Co., 25 Or. 119, 35 P. 174.—See note to Mylander v. Beimschla [Md.] 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 316.

74. A cellarway under a sidewalk constructed by permission of the authorities and provided with doors is not a nuisance, and the landlord is not liable for injuries to a pedestrian who fell into it while the door was open, the premises being in the exclusive control of the tenant. Opper v. Hellinger, 101 N. Y. S. 616. Where there is no covenant on either side to repair, but the landlord reserved the right to enter to see if repairs were necessary, and it does not appear that the premises were a nuisance when leased, the landlord is not liable where snow drops from the building onto from a defect which the tenant is bound to repair,[75] but, where a duty to repair is imposed on both landlord and tenant, either is liable.[76] A judgment against a landlord for injuries inflicted by a vicious dog kept by a tenant is based on negligence.[77]

(§ 5) F. Emblements and fixtures.[78]—Where the renting is for a time certain, the tenant is not entitled to crops which mature after expiration of the term in the absence of custom of the country or express contract.[79] But though there be no custom of the country or express agreement, there may be other circumstances that in equity will estop the landlord to claim the crop which but for such circumstances he would be entitled to hold.[80] Where the right of a tenant to a crop maturing after expiration of the lease is equitable and rests on estoppel, injunction will issue to protect such right.[81] The right to emblements is in some states fixed by statute.[82]

The general rule is that fixtures placed on the premises by the tenant may be removed by him[83] unless otherwise agreed,[84] and covenants restricting this right a passenger on the highway, where it appears that the accident happened because of failure of the tenant to remove the snow after a storm as it was his habit of doing. Neas v. Lowell [Mass.] 79 N. E. 810. Where an obstruction to a sidewalk is not one which an owner is bound to remove if the premises are in the actual possession of a tenant, the landlord cannot be held liable without proof of an obligation to repair and notice of the necessity of doing so. Chroust v. Acme Building & Loan Ass'n, 214 Pa. 179, 63 A. 595.

75. Landlord is not liable for injuries to one delivering goods to a tenant of a tenement house, caused by fall of a dumb waiter because of a defective rope, where he had no notice of such defects. Russo v. McLaughlin, 99 N. Y. S. 839. Where a lease of premises not shown to have been out of repair at the time provides that the lessee shall make repairs, the lessor, though he makes repairs on notice that they are needed, is not liable to a third person for injuries sustained because of a defect of which the landlord had not reasonable notice. Rice v. Boston University Trustees, 191 Mass. 30, 77 N. E. 308.

76. Where a pedestrian on the street was killed by an iron pipe which fell from the side of the building because of getting out of repair, the tenant is liable. Mitchell's Adm'r v. Brady [Ky.] 99 S. W. 266. Where a pedestrian on the street was killed by an iron pipe which fell from the side of a building because of getting out of repair, the landlord is liable, though the tenant had covenanted to repair. Id.

77. A judgment against a landlord for injuries inflicted by a vicious dog kept by a tenant is based on negligence and not "willful and malicious injury to the person" within the bankruptcy act, and the defendant is released from it by his discharge in bankruptcy. In re Lorde, 144 F. 320.

78. See 6 C. L. 366.

79. Carmine v. Bowen [Md.] 64 A. 932. A lease for three years beginning March 1st, by which the tenant agrees to rotate crops, though implying that he must sow wheat and rye in the fall preceding termination of his lease, does not show an express contract entitling him to remove the crop after termination of the lease. Id.

80. As when the tenant sowed a crop of grass which would not mature during the term and stated to the landlord who was present that he anticipated no trouble in harvesting it. Carmine v. Bowen [Md.] 64 A. 932. A lessee under a cropping contract who plants a crop with the lessor's consent is entitled to it, and to ingress and egress to remove it, though it had not matured when the lease expired. Crow v. Ball [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 583.

81. Carmine v. Bowen [Md.] 64 A. 932.

82. Under Ky. St. §§ 3862, 3863, providing that emblements on land of a person dying after March 1, which shall be severed prior to the following December, shall go to the personal representative, if not to the heirs, where the owner of an estate per autre vie leased it in September for a year from the following March, and the per autre vie died in October, but previous to his death the lessee had sown wheat, held the lessee occupied the same position as his lessor and could not claim emblements. Devers v. May [Ky.] 99 S. W. 255.

83. Under a lease by which the tenant agreed to deliver up the premises in as good condition as when he received them, ordinary wear and tear excepted, and to make no alterations without consent of the landlord, the landlord has no claim on fixtures put in by tenant to replace those worn out, and threatened removal would not justify an injunction, the remedy at law for waste or breach of covenant being adequate. Fox v. Lynch [N. J. Eq.] 64 A. 439. Under the rule that fixtures may be removed, held that one who rented land for a game preserve and erected a house and barn thereon which could be removed without injury to the freehold was entitled to remove them during the term. Shafter Estate Co. v. Alvord, 2 Cal. App. 602, 84 P. 279.

84. Under a lease providing that the tenant should make certain improvements which should belong to the lessor at the end of the term, where the premises were destroyed by fire and the lease rescinded because of lack of diligence of the lessors in performing their covenant to rebuild, the lessor was entitled to recover such proportion of the insurance money received by the lessee as the portion of the expired term bore to the entire term. Lincoln Trust Co. v. Nathan [Mo. App.] 99 S. W. 484. Where at the time a lease was executed certain store fixtures are strictly construed,[85] but the reserved right to remove may be waived where the tenant takes a new lease not containing such reservation.[86] In such case the fixtures become the property of the landlord at the date of renewal.[87] Intention to annex trade appliances will be presumed on their being left after surrender of the premises, otherwise not.[88] The duty to remove before surrender has, therefore, no application where the landlord prevents it,[89] and a license to remove them thereafter when relied on by the tenant cannot be revoked for slight causes,[90] but in case articles are enumerated, no other can be taken after surrender.[91]

(§ 5) G. Options of purchase or sale.[92]—An option to purchase must be definite and certain in its terms[93] and is to be given effect according to the plain import of its terms.[94] Where a mining lease containing an option to purchase was not signed by the lessee and as to the option was nudum pactum, it is converted into an enforceable contract on payment of part of the purchase price.[95]

§ 6. Rent and the payment thereof, and actionable use and occupation.[96]—The obligation to pay rent rests on the relation of landlord and tenant[97] but does not depend on possession,[98] and the full amount stipulated may be recovered, though the premises are not used all the time,[99] or where only a portion of them are oc-were on the premises and were attached to and used as part of the store, the lease confirmed the property in the lessor and precluded the tenant from claiming it against a purchaser from the lessor. Baringer v. Evenson, 127 Wis. 36, 106 N. W. 801.

85. Fox v. Lynch [N. J. Eq.] 64 A. 439. A covenant not to claim a rebate for alterations to fixtures does not relate to the tenant's right to remove trade fixtures put in by him. Id.

86. Where a lease for twenty-one years provided for purchase by the lessor of a building erected by the tenant or a new lease for a like term, and a second lease was given containing a like provision, also a third which did not contain such provision but provided that the premises should be yielded up at the end of the term, held that the building belonged to the landlord from the execution of the third lease, and his title was not affected by an agreement entered into the day prior to the expiration of the last lease to extend for thirty days the time within which the lessor should exercise his option to purchase or grant a new lease. Precht v. Howard [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 847.

87. Where a lease for a long period provided that the tenant should erect a building which the landlord agreed to buy at the expiration of the lease or execute a renewal, the renewal contained like covenants, but a second renewal did not. A contract entered into prior to termination of the lease, whereby the landlord agreed to purchase the building, was without consideration. Precht v. Howard, 110 App. Div. 680, 97 N. Y. S. 462. Where the lessees were not injured by such contract, the landlord is not estopped to assert that it is without consideration. Id.

93. A provision in a lease by a county of school lands that if the county desired to sell them at the expiration of the term the lessees should have the preference right to purchase at any bona fide offer acceptable to the county is not void for uncertainty. Slaughter v. Mallet Land & Cattle Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 282.

94. Under a lease giving the tenant an option to purchase for a stated sum, "and in case the landlord decided to sell to any one he would give notice and the refusal to purchase," the option is to purchase for a stated sum. Bennett v. Farkas [Ga.] 54 S. E. 942. Under the facts of this case a tender was necessary, and a tender of a less sum than that stated was not a compliance with the tenant's obligation, and did not give him such equitable title as would preclude eviction at the end of the term. Id. Where lessees of school land were given a preference right to purchase, it is immaterial to a third person who had a contract subject to such right that the terms of the sale varied from the terms of the lease. Slaughter v. Mallet Land & Cattle Co. [C. C. A.] 141 F. 282.

98. The tenant is liable for rent from the time he is entitled to possession under his lease, regardless of whether he actually obtained it. Smith v. Barber, 112 App. Div. 187, 98 N. Y. S. 365. Liability for rent does not depend upon possession. Landt v. McCullough, 121 Ill. App. 328. It is no defense to an action for rent that the landlord was wanting in diligence in re-renting the premises after abandonment by the tenant. Rau v. Baker, 118 Ill. App. 150.

99. Under a lease of a hall for an indefinite period, failure of the lessee to use the hall does not release him from liability for rent, where with his knowledge it was kept ready for use by him. Buffington v. McNally [Mass.] 78 N. E. 309.

cupied,[1] but a tenant precluded from taking possession because of a paramount title is not liable for rent.[2] A covenant to pay rent runs with the land.[3] Rents may be mortgaged.[4] Under a covenanted re-entry with a right to relet at the defaulting lessee's risk, he remaining liable and entitled to credit for actual receipts only, a reasonable effort to relet must be made in order to hold the lessee.[5] Also where a landlord relets premises for a portion of the term for which a tenant has paid rent, the latter is entitled to recover the sum received.[6] As a general rule rent is not payable in advance[7] in the absence of express contract.[8] The amount of rent rests in the terms of the lease,[9] and such stipulation governs where a tenant holds over with the consent of the landlord,[10] but in some states a different rental is imposed by statute in case of willful holdover.[11] A provision for abatement of rent in case no beneficial use is had of the premises is to be given effect according to the intent of the parties.[12] A provision for the deduction from the rent of a specified sum for care of the premises operates to reduce the rent to such extent.[13] The parties

1. Where a tenant had for several years rented two stores and basements and had paid a certain monthly rental for each store and basement, and it was agreed that he should vacate one store after a certain date but he continued to occupy the basement beneath such store after that date, he was liable for the full rental of store and basement. Katz v. Schreckinger, 101 N. Y. S. 743.

2. Where at the beginning of the term the premises are in possession of a third person claiming under a paramount title, a tenant thereby excluded is not liable for rent. Smith v. Barber, 112 App. Div. 187, 98 N. Y. S. 365.

7. Under an agreement for a lease "all conditions and covenants to be the usual ones," the rent is not payable in advance. Arcade Realty Co. v. Tunney, 101 N. Y. S. 593.

8. Letters constituting the lease construed and held that a covenant to pay rent in advance was not contained. Arcade Realty Co. v. Tunney, 101 N. Y. S. 593. Where rent was payable in instalments, the last instalment being payable on a certain date, or before if the "party renting" desires it. The landlord was spoken of in the lease as having "rented" her farm. Held the last instalment was payable before the specified date at the option of the landlord. Muse-wald v. Seeker, 101 N. Y. S. 287.

9. Where a tenant remains in possession after expiration of the term and was unable to agree with the landlord as to the terms of a lease except as to the rent, the lessor's agreement to rent for such sum is an admission that it was a proper amount of rental. Dickinson v. Arkansas City Imp. Co., 77 Ark. 570, 92 S. W. 21.

10. A tenant who by consent of the landlord holds over another year after expiration of the term is liable only for the annual rent stipulated in the lease. Stevens v. New York, 111 App. Div. 362, 97 N. Y. S. 1062. Where a tenant held over under an agreement that the rent was to be on the same terms, but that all improvements were to be considered property of the landlord, held the landlord was entitled to recover rent for the entire premises, including a house built by the tenant. Mentz v. Haight [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 943, 97 S. W. 1076.

11. Real property law, Laws 1896, p. 590, providing for rent in double the yearly value of the premises where a tenant willfully holds over, does not apply where he holds over with consent of the landlord. Stevens v. New York, 111 App. Div. 362, 97 N. Y. S. 1062.

12. Where a lease of land at so much per acre provided that in case the land became inundated the rent was to be deemed paid, held that it was not necessary that the entire crop should be destroyed before such provision took effect, but if part of the land was flooded, the rent was to be reduced $5 per acre. Knoepker v. Redel, 116 Mo. App. 621, 92 S. W. 171. Where a lease of reclaimed land provided that if by reason of overflow it could not be cultivated prior to June 1st of any year the lessee should not be liable for rent, and also provided for termination if the land could not be cultivated, where the land was submerged in February and the lease cancelled in May and it was impossible to cultivate prior to June, the lessee was not liable for rent for the first half of the year payable April 1st. Donnellan v. Wood, Curtis & Co. [Cal. App.] 87 P. 235.

13. Where in a lease providing for a yearly rental the landlord agreed to allow $150 per month for repairs, lighting, etc., to be deducted from the rent, and the tenants agreed to do the work, such provision operated to reduce the rent so much absolutely, whether or not the tenants performed the work of lighting, keeping the halls clean, etc. Pakas v. Shinberg, 49 Misc. 238, 97 N. Y. S. 209. Under a lease providing that the landlord should allow a certain sum per month to compensate tenants for lighting, sweeping halls, etc., such sum to be deducted from the rent, the landlord's remedy for breach may by oral agreement reduce the stipulated rent.[14] The consideration for an agreement reducing rent for the remainder of a term may be shown by parol.[15] A provision for reduction in case of renewal, if the lessor remains the owner, confers no rights if the landlord sells prior to the expiration of the term.[16] Taxes to be paid by the tenant may constitute part of the rent,[17] as may sums provided for for other purposes.[18] The tenant's obligation for rent may be assumed by one who acquires his estate.[19] An assignee of the lease[20] or other persons holding by virtue of it are liable for the stipulated rent.[21] A surety for the payment of rent is not discharged as to accrued rent where the landlord accepts a surrender of the premises.[22] A tenant who so agrees is liable for diminution of rent.[23] Where a statutory method of payment is prescribed, the statute must be complied with,[24] and, if the manner of pay-of the tenant's duty to perform was an action for damages. Id.

14. Where action is brought for rent after a lease under seal has expired, and it appears that it had been fully performed, it is competent to show by parol that the parties had orally agreed to a reduced rental in consideration of alterations made by the lessee and that the lessor had thereafter accepted checks for the reduced rental as payment in full thereof. Snow v. Griesheimer, 220 Ill. 106, 77 N. E. 110. It is sufficient consideration for the reduction of rent during the remainder of the term that the tenant agrees to make additions to and alterations in the premises not required of him by the terms of the lease. Natelsohn v. Reich, 50 Misc. 585, 99 N. Y. S. 327.

15. Natelsohn v. Reich, 50 Misc. 585, 99 N. Y. S. 327.

16. Where a lease provides that in case of renewal the tenant shall have a reduction in rent in case the lessor remained the owner, the tenant has no rights under such provision where the lessor sold prior to the termination of the lease and the tenant leased from the purchaser. Newberger v. Matchak, 99 N. Y. S. 470.

17. Where a lessee covenants to erect a building which he will be entitled to remove, and to pay a specified rental for the land, also taxes against the land and against the improvements, the taxes provided for are a part of the rent. Perrin & Smith Printing Co. v. Cook Hotel & Excursion Co., 118 Mo. App. 44, 93 S. W. 337.

18. Where a contract creating the relation of landlord and tenant embraces a sum to be paid as rent and another sum as hire of animals used on the premises, the entire sum is rent and may be collected by distress. Sapp v. Elkins, 125 Ga. 459, 54 S. E. 98. No conflict in the evidence as to the amount of rent due. Id.

19. Where one conveyed land and reserved rents by parol reservation, and the grantee conveyed to another who obtained possession of the land and crops, held, if the grantee had notice of the reservation, he assumed the tenant's obligation to pay rent. Applegate v. Kilgore [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 17, 91 S. W. 238.

20. Where a lease provides that it shall not be assigned without the consent of the lessor, and after several assignments the landlord brings action against the assignee for an increased rental, he thereby admits the tenancy and cannot assert that it was terminated by the assignments, and the assignee holds under a void lease, nor can he recover more than the rent reserved in the original lease. Shalet v. Rauch, 50 Misc. 311, 98 N. Y. S. 883.

21. Where a lease provided that the lessee should erect a building which he would have a right to remove, and when the building was nearly completed receivers appointed for the lessee were authorized to take charge of the building and complete it, held they held the premises under the lease and were liable for the portion of the rent falling due during their occupancy. Perrin & Smith Printing Co. v. Cook Hotel & Excursion Co., 118 Mo. App. 44, 93 S. W. 337. The claim for rent takes priority over certificates issued by the receivers for completing the building. Id. The claim for rent does not lose its priority because the lease was not recorded. The recording acts are for the protection of persons acquiring an interest in the property and holders of the certificates do not by reason thereof acquire an interest. Id.

22. Sureties on a bond to secure payment of rent are not discharged by the lessor's retaking of possession on surrender by the lessee. White River, etc., R. Co., v. Star Ranch & Land Co., 77 Ark. 128, 91 S. W. 14. Under a lease providing for monthly rental, not assignable except by consent of the landlord and for re-entry by the landlord for failure to perform any of the covenants, and on such entry the term should cease, one who guarantied the prompt payment of rent, and faithful performance of the covenants, was not discharged by a surrender of the lease after default in payment of rent. Bothfeld v. Gordon, 190 Mass. 567, 77 N. E. 639.

23. Where a landlord sued for diminution of rent under a covenant making the tenant responsible for loss or diminution of rent in case of re-entry for condition broken, and there was no claim for rent as such, a requested ruling as to whether the tenant continued to hold as such after the entry was immaterial. Edmands v. Rust & Richardson Drug Co., 191 Mass. 123, 77 N. E. 713. Where a lease provided that the lessee should be responsible for loss or diminution of rent sustained in consequence of entry because of breach of conditions by the lessee, the lessor was not required to accept a prospective tenant with whose financial responsibility the lessee was satisfied. Id.

ment is prescribed by the lease, compliance therewith is sufficient.[25] If no place of payment is fixed by the terms of the lease, demand on the premises is not essential.[26] A tender of an amount less than is due does not constitute payment.[27] A plea of payment for one month is no defense to an action for rent for a different month.[28] The application of payments rests with the pleasure of the landlord.[29]

Defenses, set-offs, and reductions.[30]—Eviction is a defense to an action for rent,[31] but a constructive eviction is not if the tenant remains in possession.[32] In the case of an apartment lease, destruction by fire destroys the liability.[33] Vacation of premises and surrender of key to lessor does not discharge a liability for rent reserved for a term.[34] A surrender of the premises and an acceptance thereof is no defense to an action for accrued rent.[35] A tenant who sets up that he had surrendered the premises prior to the date from which rent was claimed, has the burden to prove it.[36] In order to discharge the liability by execution of a contract for purchase, it is essential to prove one binding on the lessor.[37] Since rents accruing after the landlord's death belong to the heirs, the landlord cannot release them even though he may cause the sale of the land to pay debts.[38] The assignee of such rents from the heirs may recover the rents.[39] An assignment of the lease terminates the liability for rent to the owner where he had no privity with the assignor.[40] An assignee of a

24. Payment is not made by depositing money in a bank in the absence of an offer to pay or notice of the deposit to the landlord under the rule that an obligation may be paid by an offer and deposit in the name of the creditor and notice to him of such fact. Owen v. Herzihoff, 2 Cal. App. 622, 84 P. 274.

25. Where a lease provided that deposit in a certain bank should constitute payment of rental, a deposit after the expiration of the term which was accepted by the bank without notice from the lessor constituted payment. American Window Glass Co. v. Indiana Nat. Gas & Oil Co. [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 1006.

26. If a lease contains no provision fixing the place for payment of rent, a demand on the leased premises is not essential to establish liability of the lessee to forfeiture for failure to pay rent, if the practice of the parties had been to make and receive payment elsewhere. Lund v. Ozanne [N. M.] 84 P. 710.

27. Where a lessee covenanted to repair and tendered a check for a month's rent less a certain amount for repairs, which check was immediately returned to him, there was no payment of rent. O'Brien v. Levine, 50 Misc. 303, 98 N. Y. S. 636.

28. Pleading payment of rent to May 1st in an action for rent for the month of May is not a plea of payment. Manhattan Leasing Co. v. Weill, 98 N. Y. S. 686. If one party to a joint lease when sued alone pleads general denial and makes no objection either by answer or at the trial, he is not after decision entitled to amend so as to set up such fact. Hoatson v. McDonald, 97 Minn. 201, 106 N. W. 311.

29. A landlord is not required to apply the proceeds of cotton received from a tenant to a secured claim, but could apply it to a subsequent claim for supplies. Cadenhead v. Rogers & Bro. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 837, 96 S. W. 952.

30. See 6 C. L. 370.

31. If the premises are made unfit for the purposes for which they are leased by the act of the landlord, the tenant may abandon them and he is not liable for rent. Frepons v. Grostein [Idaho] 87 P. 1004. Where in an action for rent the tenant counterclaims for constructive eviction, he is properly allowed for time lost and expense of moving. Wade v. Herndl, 127 Wis. 544, 107 N. W. 4.

32. Laws 1860, p. 592, c. 345, releasing the tenant from liability for rent if the premises without his fault becomes untenantable, and also providing that the tenant may surrender possession, does not apply where the tenant continues in possession. Faron v. Jones, 49 Misc. 47, 96 N. Y. S. 316.

33. Paxson & Comfort Co. v. Potter, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 615.

34. Hastings v. Burchfield, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 309.

35. Though a lease was surrendered and accepted after the occurrence of facts constituting a constructive eviction, it was no defense to an action for rent during the time the tenant was in possession. Henning v. Savage, 100 N. Y. S. 1015.

36. Sammis v. Day, 48 Misc. 327, 96 N. Y. S. 777. Evidence insufficient to show that a lease had been surrendered and accepted and the tenant relieved from liability for rent. Id. Where a tenant set up surrender of the premises in an action for rent and introduced evidence that the landlord had entered on the premises to repair them, he had the burden to show that the entry for such purpose was made prior to payment of the last installment of rent. Id. Where a tenant pleaded a surrender in an action for rent, evidence that a "to let" sign was placed on the house on a certain date is no proof that it was placed there by authority of the landlord. Id.

37. Nesbitt v. Tarbrake, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 460.

38, 39. Winkle v. Meany, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 339.

40. Where there is no privity of contract leasehold who sets up reassignment as a defense to an action for rent has the burden to prove such fact.[41] Rent may not be recovered if the premises were let for immoral purposes,[42] but if the lease be for lawful uses and the circumstances do not show the transaction to be colorable, subsequent knowledge of the landlord of the immoral or illegal purposes to which the tenant has subjected the premises will not invalidate the lease nor preclude collection of rent.[43] If, however, the landlord after being made aware of the illegal use does any affirmative act indicating his sanction of it, he becomes pari delicto and the courts will not aid him.[44] Fraud is a defense to an action for rent.[45] Damages for trespass by the landlord,[46] and taxes paid by the tenant, may be set off.[47] Under the rule that a written lease implies a consideration, want of consideration cannot be pleaded against an action for rent because of the fact that the landlord had no title.[48] A provision in the lease exempting the tenant from liability for rent if the premises became untenantable applies only on the occurrence of such condition,[49] and a statute exempting him from payment of rent in case of total destruction does not apply in case of partial destruction.[50] A covenant by the landlord to make the premises tenantable before a lessee shall be bound to occupy or pay rent is a condition precedent and until complied with the tenant is not bound to pay rent,[51] and is ground for the recovery of rent already paid,[52] but breach of the landlord's covenant to make repairs is no defense,[53] though between an assignee of a lease and the owner of the reversion, the liability of such assignee for rent is terminated by an assignment to a third person under an assumed name. Hartman v. Thompson [Md.] 65 A. 117.

41. Hartman v. Thompson [Md.] 65 A. 117. Where an assignee of a lease was sued for rent, the question of whether she had parted with all her estate in the premises was held for the jury. Id.

42. If a house be let with intent that it shall be used for purposes of prostitution, rent cannot be recovered. Kessler v. Pearson [Ga.] 55 S. E. 963.

43, 44. Kessler v. Pearson [Ga.] 55 S. E. 963.

45. Under the rule of the municipal court that in actions on a written contract fraud may not be proved as a basis for affirmative relief but may be set up as a defense, in an action for rent, it may be shown that the tenant was induced to take the lease by fraudulent representations as to the apartment he was to have. Pelgram v. Ehrensweig, 99 N. Y. S. 913. Where a landlord represented at the time the lease was made that the roof did not leak, and it appeared that he had reason to believe that repairs recently made had accomplished the purpose, it was held that he was not guilty of fraud. Bayles v. Clark, 100 N. Y. S. 586. Where after a tenant entered under an oral lease for a year and had paid a month's rent the lease was reduced to writing, alleged false representations inducing the signing of the lease held not to alter the relations of the parties and not available as a defense to an action for rent. Id.

46. Within Va. Code 1904, p. 1740, authorizing the defendant in an action on contract to file a plea or set-off, a motion by a lessor for judgment for rent is an action at law. Newport News & O. P. R. & Elec. Co. v. Bickford [Va.] 52 S. E. 1011. Under such rule a claim for damages for trespass committed by the lessor is directly connected with and grows out of the contract forming the basis of the lessor's action and may be asserted as an offset. Id.

47. Where a son cultivates his mother's lands under an agreement that he is to have a portion of the crop, he is entitled after the death of his mother to set off as against her estate taxes paid and other charges properly chargeable to the landlord. Burwell v. Burwell, 103 Va. 314, 49 S. E. 68.

48. Beck v. Minnesota & Western Grain Co. [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1032.

49. A provision exempting the tenant from liability for rent if the premises became untenantable does not exempt him if he stays in possession after a fire to enable the insurance commissioner to examine his goods and adjust the loss. Beers v. Taussig, 49 Misc. 619, 96 N. Y. S. 738.

50. A partial destruction of a leased building, though it may render the premises untenantable for the purposes of the lease until repairs are made, does not amount to "total destruction" within Landlord and Tenant Act, § 35 (Gen. St. p. 1923). Booraem v. Morris [N. J. Law] 64 A. 953.

51. Fallis v. Gray, 115 Mo. App. 253, 91 S. W. 175. The fact that a landlord fails to make certain repairs necessary to fit the premises for occupancy as he has covenanted to do is cause for abandonment by the tenant and a defense to an action for rent accruing thereafter. Vincent v. Central City Loan & Inv. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 428.

52. Where a landlord covenants to put the premises in repair before the tenant shall be bound to occupy or pay rent and refuses to do so, the tenant may recover rent paid. Fallis v. Gray, 115 Mo. App. 253, 91 S. W. 175.

53. The tenant's remedy is an action for damages or recoupment from rent. Lewis v. Ritoff, 101 N. Y. S. 40. Failure of the landlord to put the premises in repair pursuant to his agreement at the time of making the a promise to pay additional rent for additional conveniences to be installed on the premises may be avoided if the landlord fails to provide them.[54] Where in an action for rent the tenant sets up special damages in that goods in the premises were damaged by water because of the roof being defective, expense of moving, etc., he must specially plead each item.[55] A judgment for counterclaim in an action for rent cannot stand where there is no proper evidence of rental value upon which such damages can be estimated.[56]

Ground rents and perpetual leases.[57]—The creation of ground rent may be presumed from circumstances.[58] An agreement to reduce the granted rate of a "ground rent" payable by a fee owner of land is binding only as to executed payments if voluntary,[59] but where the "ground rent" is redeemable and the tenant's grantee has paid the reduced rate only, notice of intention to exact the granted rate must be given.[60]

Use and occupation.[61]—A contract to pay the reasonable value of use and occupation may be implied.[62] There must be proof of a stipulated sum to be paid or of the reasonable worth of the use of the land.[63]

§ 7. Rental on shares.[64]—Whether a landlord has a mere lien upon a crop raised on shares for the amount of his rent, or whether he becomes owner of a part so raised, is to be determined from the rental contract.[65] The right of the landlord to title and possession of the crop until division thereof may be waived.[66] Where a cropping contract does not give the tenant the first bale of cotton, the landlord is entitled to distrain the tenant's crop where he removes a portion of the crop from the premises without the landlord's consent.[67] A judgment creditor of a tenant who levies on a crop raised on the premises and thereafter pays a judgment recovered by the landlord for conversion, in which he established a landlord's lien, becomes lease is no defense to an action for rent if the lessee has taken possession. Henning v. Savage, 100 N. Y. S. 1015. The alleged failure of the landlord to make necessary repairs is no justification for refusal to pay monthly rent as it accrues. The right of the lessee under Rev. Civ. Code, art. 2694, to retain rents for the purpose of making indispensable repairs, does not arise until after notice to the lessor and his failure or refusal to make them, and is restricted to rents coming due after his default. Mullen v. Kerlec, 115 La. 783, 40 So. 46.

54. An agreement to pay additional rent made after the lease on consideration of a promise to put in heating facilities may be avoided if they were not put in, and if in consequence there was a deficiency of heat. Yinger v. Youngman, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 139.

57. See 6 C. L. 372.

58. Where deeds executed between 1810 and 1833 reserved an annual ground rent payable to one, his heirs and assigns forever, and payments were made during such interval, the creation of ground rent would be presumed, though the deeds were lost. Braunstein v. Black [Del.] 62 A. 1091.

62. Where an occupant of premises is notified that the owner will not pay him rent for certain premises of such occupant the owner held possession of, the owner was liable for the reasonable value of the use of such premises. Head v. Pryor, 29 Ky. L. R. 719, 96 S. W. 465. Where the state enters upon and uses land of an owner with his consent, there is an implied agreement to pay what the use and occupation is reasonably worth. Remington v. State, 101 N. Y. S. 952.

65. Miles v. Dorn [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 257, 90 S. W. 707. Where evidence shows that a crop was raised on shares, it is error to charge that the landlord only has a lien. Sparks v. Ponder [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 380, 94 S. W. 428.

66. Where a lease secured to the landlord possession and title of the crop until personally divided by him, evidence held to show that he had waived his right and authorized the tenant to make division. Baumann v. Jerome [S. D.] 109 N. W. 513.

67. Morgan v. Tims [Tex. Civ. App.] 97 S. W. 832. Where a cropper removes a part of the crop from the premises without the landlord's consent, it is immaterial that he had no intent to defraud. Id. Where in an action for wrongful distress the landlord pleaded that the tenant had wrongfully removed a bale of cotton from the premises, the law implied a denial of such allegation subrogated to the landlord's interest.[68] One who asserts a right to a crop grown on leased premises and partially housed there under purchase from the tenant has the burden to show his right thereto as against the owner of the land.[69]

§ 8. The term, termination of tenancy, renewals, holding over.[70]—A lease for a definite term expires at the expiration of such term,[71] and if subject to termination on the happening of an event or contingency, it will terminate when such event occurs.[72] A lease by a life tenant terminates at his death by operation of law.[73] A lease may be terminated prior to the expiration of the term by agreement of the parties[74] or under statutory authority for making illegal use of the premises.[75] The term may be prolonged by subsequent agreement, though the lease is silent on the subject,[76] and if subject to be extended at the election of a party, such election must be timely exercised.[77] Acceptance of rent is an admission of the continuance of tenancy.[78] A lease may be terminated by annulment,[79] by custom,[80] or by the

and justified the admission of evidence that the tenant was entitled to the first bale. Id.

71. A provision that the lessees were to take the premises "for one year and the privilege of four years" means a one year term but that it might be four years at the election of the tenant. Willis v. Weeks, 129 Iowa, 525, 105 N. W. 1012. A lease executed January 5, providing for a term of five years from the first of the following February, and in the last paragraph providing that any holding over should be taken as a renewal for one year, is a lease for an extreme term of five years from February 1. Connors v. Clark [Conn.] 63 A. 951. The parties must abide by the agreement as entered into at the time of the lease. Jackson Brew. Co. v. Wagner, 117 La. 875, 42 So. 356. Ky. St. 1903, § 2295, providing that where a lease is to expire on a certain day and the tenant is to abandon on such date, if he holds over for 90 days he cannot be ousted for another year, does not apply to a parol lease void under the statute of frauds. Wessells v. Rodifer [Ky.] 97 S. W. 341. Where payment of rent as it became due was made of the essence of the contract, the lessee in default is not entitled to hold possession for the succeeding year nor claim reimbursement for improvements made. Smith v. Caldwell [Ark.] 95 S. W. 467. Whether a lease has "expired by its terms" is a question of law. Owen v. Herzihoff, 2 Cal. App. 622, 84 P. 274.

72. As to wells already in existence on land under lease so long as oil or gas shall be found in paying quantities, it is for the lessee to say whether the production will warrant their further operation; and the fact that, for reasons which seem to be sufficient, he has failed to pump the wells for some time, is not ground for the cancellation of the lease if in his judgment he can still make some profit from the operation of the wells. Zeller v. Book, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 429. Failure to drill additional wells is not ground for terminating a lease for oil and gas lands, where it has been satisfactorily shown that the territory is light and the production would not warrant the sinking of more wells. Id. Under a provision that the lessee agrees to vacate within a reasonable time after sale of the premises, the time within which he could procure a like house similarly situated was not the test of a reasonable time. Cooper v. Gambill [Ala.] 40 So. 827.

73. Bidwell v. Piercy [N. J. Eq.] 63 A. 261.

74. Where in an action for rent the tenant claimed that his term was ended by agreement and did not claim to have served the statutory notice, it was proper to instruct respecting the conditions under which a tenancy at will may be terminated. Brayton v. Boomer [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1099. Evidence insufficient to show an agreement terminating the tenancy prior to expiration of the time. Latham v. Woodward, 50 Misc. 306, 98 N. Y. S. 639.

75. Code Civ. Proc. § 2231, authorizing summary eviction where tenant or subtenant uses the premises for illegal trade, authorizes such eviction for sale of liquor without a license, six months prior to action brought, where he was convicted only one month prior thereto, be being still in possession. Conforti v. Romano, 50 Misc. 148, 98 N. Y. S. 194.

76. De Friest v. Bradley [Mass.] 78 N. E. 467. A written agreement for an extension supersedes prior oral negotiations. Where improvements were made on an oral understanding that the lease should be continued for five years and afterwards a written contract was made granting the extension under the conditions of the original lease, one of which was that the lease could be terminated on notice, the condition in the original lease is binding. Id. An agreement made during the term for a continuation of the term for a year from the date of the agreement, the rental to run to the end of the old lease at the rate stated therein and thereafter at a reduced rate, though unusual, may be established by parol. Withers v. Massengill, 148 Cal. 769, 84 P. 153.

77. Where a lease gave the option to renew for another term of five years, and also an option to extend for a further term of five years thereafter, where the first option was exercised but the second one was not until some time after the expiration of the term, the lease and options had expired. Atlantic Product Co. v. Dunn [N. C.] 55 S. E. 299.

78. Where the assignee of a lease accepts merger of estates.[81] Conditions that render a demise void for breach of covenants by the lessee will work an avoidance only at the election of the lessor.[82] Under the circumstances specified in the lease, the relation of landlord and tenant may be continued after forfeiture,[83] or after eviction by the compliance with statutory requirements.[84] The running of time is not suspended by an action by the landlord which does not prevent the tenant from fully exercising his rights under the lease.[85] A terminated tenancy is not restored by the fact that goods of the tenant remain on the premises.[86]

Surrender, abandonment and eviction.[87]—A surrender may be made by an abandonment by the tenant and reentry by the landlord,[88] by a substitution of tenants,[89] or by offer and acceptance.[90] The surrender must be accepted by the landlord.[91] Whether there has been an acceptance may be a question of fact[92] and in such case the burden of proof rests on the tenant.[93] rent from a sublessee. Cuschner v. Westlake [Wash.] 86 P. 948. Acceptance of rent after it is due is a waiver of the right to terminate the lease for failure to pay when due. Id.

79. Date on which a lease was annulled held a question of fact where the landlord asserted one date and the tenant another. Harden v. Card [Wyo.] 88 P. 217. Verdict that a lease was annulled on a certain date as testified to by the tenant and one other witness held sustained, though the landlord testified that it was annulled on a different date. Id.

80. On a question of title in defendant who claims as lessor, it was improper to submit to jury "usual custom" as to termination of a lease, in the absence of any evidence thereon. Wilson v. Griswold [Conn.] 63 A. 659.

81. A lessee may purchase the landlord's title at execution sale, acquire it by deed from him, and thereby end the relation. Reed v. Munn [C. C. A.] 148 F. 737.

82. Williams v. Beach Pirates Chemical Engine Co. [N. J. Eq.] 63 A. 990.

83. Under a provision in the lease that should the lessee hold possession after forfeiture or expiration of the term, whether with or against the consent of the landlord, such tenancy should be in accordance with the lease, the relation of landlord and tenant existed after forfeiture and the tenant did not become one at sufferance entitled to notice prior to bringing forcible entry proceedings. Marshall v. Davis, 28 Ky. L. R. 1327, 91 S. W. 714.

84. Where the tenant traversed the inquisition and stayed judgment in forcible entry proceedings and before the traverse was tried paid rent in arrears and the traverse was dismissed by agreement, held the judgment of eviction was thereby set aside, and the tenant continued to hold under the lease and not by sufferance. Marshall v. Davis, 28 Ky. L. R. 1327, 91 S. W. 714.

85. The mere bringing of an action by the landlord to have a lease declared void, unaccompanied by restraining order, even if decided in favor of the lessee, does not prevent him from at all times exercising his rights under his lease and is not ground upon which to invoke the equity power of the court to extend the lease for a period equal to the time the action was pending. Lanyon Zinc Co. v. Burtiss, 72 Kan. 441, 83 P. 989.

86. Where the purchaser of a business was substituted as tenant, the fact that the original tenant took part of the goods on a mortgage and that they remained on the premises a short time did not restore his tenancy. Brayton v. Boomer [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1099.

87. See 6 C. L. 374.

88. Abandonment by the tenant and reentry and reletting by the landlord operate as a rescission of a lease which contains no provision authorizing reentry upon default in its conditions without causing forfeiture. Haycock v. Johnston, 97 Minn. 289, 106 N. W. 304. Where the contract between landlord and tenant provided that the tenant was to take possession, put hands to work and cultivate, and the contract involved mutual obligations as to furnishing stock, feed, etc., and thereafter the tenant removed the help and abandoned the premises and the landlord without notice to him took possession and rented portions of the land to others and received rents from them, such facts amounted to a surrender and acceptance, relieving the tenant from further obligation. Rucker v. Taber [Ga.] 56 S. E. 124.

89. Where a tenant of a business building sells out and the purchaser agrees to pay the rent and the landlord on being notified of the fact tacitly consents thereto, the original tenant was relieved from liability for rent accruing thereafter. Brayton v. Boomer [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1099.

90. Where a tenant of a mill informed the landlord that he would have to give it up and was told that he could do so if he could get a man as good as himself to run it, and no rent was paid thereafter and the leased premises were surrendered and accepted by the landlord who took possession, the tenants were relieved from further payment of rent. West Concord Mill. Co. v. Hosmer [Wis.] 107 N. W. 12. Declarations of the lessee's son when he delivered keys to the janitor held admissible as declarations of an agent. Trainor v. Schutz [Minn.] 107 N. W. 812. Evidence insufficient to show an agreement releasing the tenant from his obligation to perform the covenants of his lease. Brasher v. McCaskrin, 120 Ill. App. 343.

A lease will be treated as abandoned where acts of one of the parties inconsistent with it are acquiesced in by the other,[94] but under a provision for forfeiture for nonpayment of rent, such nonpayment does not constitute an abandonment.[95] The landlord may market a crop abandoned by the tenant and apply the proceeds on the tenant's debt to him.[96]

An eviction may be actual or constructive.[97] Any act of the lessor by which his tenant is deprived of the enjoyment of the whole or a part of the premises,[98] or

91. Where a tenant quit prior to the expiration of the term, evidence held insufficient to show that the landlord accepted a surrender of the lease. Diker v. Hutchinson, 98 N. Y. S. 616.

92. Question of acceptance of a surrender of premises held for the jury where a hold-over tenant gave notice that he would vacate on a certain date and did so and left the key with the landlord's agent and was accepted, and it appeared that immediately thereafter some furniture was stored on the premises but the landlord denied that it was with his consent. Leggett v. Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co. [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 976. Where a tenant from month to month vacated without giving notice of his intention to move and on the landlord's refusal to accept the keys left them on the premises and thereafter the landlord used the building to some extent for storage purposes, the question of his acceptance of the surrender was one for the jury. Sander v. Holstein Com. Co. [Mo. App.] 99 S. W. 12.

93. Where in an action for rent against an alleged hold-over tenant, the tenant sets up that he remained in possession with the landlord's consent and subsequently vacated and surrendered the premises and they were accepted by the landlord, the tenant has the burden to prove it. Leggett v. Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co. [Mo. App.] 97 S. W. 976.

94. Herpolsheimer v. Christopher [Neb.] 107 N. W. 382.

95. People v. Freeman, 110 App. Div. 605, 97 N. Y. S. 343.

97. Isabella Gold Min. Co. v. Glenn [Colo.] 86 P. 349.

98. Isabella Gold Min. Co. v. Glenn [Colo.] 86 P. 349.

Not an eviction: Where the state, in a lease of water from a canal, reserved the right to keep a certain bulkhead in repair and dictate where and in what manner water was to be taken, the putting in of a new bulkhead and shutting off the tenant's water at a time when he was not using it was not in hostility to his rights. People v. Freeman, 110 App. Div. 605, 97 N. Y. S. 343. An eviction does not result where the landlord, without intention to deprive the tenant of possession, enters to put in fire escapes and makes permanent use of a portion of them for such purpose, in obedience to law. Cassard v. Thornton, 119 Ill. App. 397. Under a lease providing that the landlord should make outside and the tenant inside repairs, the lessee may not abandon the premises because of defective inside condition. Auer v. Vahl [Wis.] 109 N. W. 529. Where a lessee agreed in the lease to build a shed for drying tobacco, and such shed would have materially increased the value of the use of the farm, the fact that the landlord informed the dealer in lumber who was to furnish the material that he would not pay for it, and also gave notice to the lessee's employes building the shed that he did not want it built and threatened to stop work by legal proceedings, held not to constitute a breach of the lease nor grounds for abandonment of the premises by the lessee. Buhler v. Smith [Wis.] 110 N. W. 412. There is no eviction of apartment tenants holding leases for a year where part of the building is used as a transient hotel. Bristol Hotel Co. v. Pegram, 49 Misc. 535, 98 N. Y. S. 512. A mere trespass by the landlord does not amount to an eviction though it may be accompanied by such acts and committed under such circumstances as to be equivalent thereto. Isabella Gold Min. Co. v. Glenn [Colo.] 86 P. 349. Under a provision giving the landlord right to enter to repair, an entry and occupation of part of a floor space in order to make repairs required by the building department is not an eviction. Ernst v. Strauss, 99 N. Y. S. 597.

Constructive eviction: Where premises become untenantable because of dampness, leakage of water into the premises, lack of protection, and negligent management of boilers, there is a constructive eviction, authorizing the tenant to vacate. November v. Wilson, 49 Misc. 533, 97 N. Y. S. 989. Under Building Code providing that in case of excavations by an adjoiner he shall support the wall by proper foundation, where a leased building fell because of an excavation of an adjoiner, there was constructive eviction, entitling the tenant to damages on proof that the accident would not have occurred if the obligation had been discharged. Lindwall v. May, 111 App. Div. 457, 97 N. Y. S. 821.

A constructive eviction of a tenant of rooms is not shown, by an answer in an action for rent, by allegations that the landlady habitually received visits in her bedroom from a man and at such times kept her door locked, and that by reason of the immoral conduct of plaintiff and the character the house had acquired defendant was obliged to quit, where the allegations did not show that the house was one of ill fame. Molineux v. Hurlbut [Conn.] 64 A. 350.

No eviction: Under a provision that the obligation to pay rent should cease if the premises became untenantable and the lessor could not repair them in a reasonable time, but if he could rent should cease only for such period, where the premises were destroyed by fire and the landlord restored which shows an intent upon the part of the lessor permanently to deprive,[99] or seriously to obstruct or interfere with the tenant's quiet and peaceable enjoyment of the premises[1] amounts in law to an eviction. The measure of damages for wrongful eviction,[2] or for wrongfully withholding possession,[3] is ordinarily the difference between the rental value and the rent reserved for the unexpired term. Special damages may be awarded where they are certain and are the natural result of the wrong complained of.[4] A waiver of damages for trespass against adjoining lessees does not relieve the landlord from liability for an eviction caused by adverse occupancy of such adjoiners acting in collusion with the landlord.[5]

Forfeiture.[6]—As a general rule, forfeitures are not favored[7] and the right thereto must be promptly asserted,[8] but they will be enforced according to the terms of the lease, if expressly provided for,[9] unless the right thereto has been waived.[10] When it as a three story building, it having been four, and the tenant retained possession after having notice that it would be restored as a three story building, held there was no eviction and the tenant was liable for rent under the lease after the repairs were made. Rogers v. Grote Paint Co., 118 Mo. App. 300, 94 S. W. 548.

Question of eviction held for the jury: Whether there was an eviction where a landlord, prior to the end of the term, moved out the furniture of one left in possession by the tenant and changed the locks on the doors, held a question of fact. Such person was left in possession after the landlord refused to consent to an assignment of the lease to him, and such lease could not be assigned without the landlord's consent. Broadway Bldg. Co. v. Myers, 49 Misc. 531, 97 N. Y. S. 977.

99. Isabella Gold Min. Co. v. Glenn [Colo.] 86 P. 349.

1. Isabella Gold Min. Co. v. Glenn [Colo.] 86 P. 349. If a landlord who rents an apartment in his apartment house permits the main drainpipe of the building to become clogged with offensive matter dangerous to the health of the tenant, and fails after notice to remedy the defect and the tenant moves out, such fact constitutes an eviction and relieves the tenant from paying rent after removal. McCurdy v. Wyckoff [N. J. Law] 63 A. 992. An eviction results where a landlord leases a portion of a building for one purpose and another portion for another purpose by which the first portion rented is rendered unfit for the purposes intended. Where an upper room is rented for a studio and a lower one rented for an automobile shop. Wade v. Herndl, 127 Wis. 544, 107 N. W. 4. Where a tenant asserted a constructive eviction because of disturbance caused by other tenants and it appeared that the landlord was present when such disturbance was being made to note its effect, it is presumed that the tenants had a right to do the act which caused it, it being essential to the conduct of their business. 8. Under a provision for forfeiture for nonpayment of rent in the lease of water rights from a canal, the state lessor could not wait 50 years after default before declaring forfeiture. People v. Freeman, 110 App. Div. 605, 97 N. Y. S. 343. Where a lease by the state of water from a canal provided for forfeiture for nonpayment of rent, failure of the state authorities to collect rent or enforce forfeiture does not make user of the water by the tenant unlawful. Id. Where a lease of water rights by a state provided for forfeiture for nonpayment of rent, and no rent was collected for 50 years, an assignee of the lease was liable for interest on the rent only from the time he commenced to use water. Id.

9. Equity will not relieve against a breach of condition, in the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, where the measure of compensation is uncertain, but will permit forfeiture if such is the remedy provided for. Brewster v. Lanyon Zinc Co. [C. C. A.] 140 F. 801. Where a corporation lessee had forfeited its rights under the lease, and after notice of forfeiture according to the terms of the lease it was adjudicated a bankrupt, the court of bankruptcy properly decreed a forfeiture and directed the trustee to surrender possession. Lindeke v. Associates Realty Co. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 630. Evidence held to support a verdict for the tenant, there being evidence that the written lease was superseded by an oral one the terms of which were not clearly shown to have warranted the eviction in question. Frantz v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 343.

10. Under a provision for forfeiture for default for one year in payment of rent, where forfeiture was not declared for the first default, equity will not consider prior or subsequent defaults as an absolute forfeiture until some action is taken to enforce it. People v. Freeman, 110 App. Div. 605, 97 N. Y. S. 343. A lessor who sells part of the leased land cannot enforce a forfeiture of the lease as to such land for a subsequent breach of condition. Brewster v. Lanyon Zinc Co. [C. C. A.] 140 F. 801. Where one purchased a lease from the lessee at a time when rent was due, and also took a new lease from the lessor stating that it was subject to the one purchased, and such transactions occurred before the lessor attempted to forfeit the prior one for nonpayment of rent, the lessee and assignee rent is payable at the office of the lessor's agent, a demand there is not necessary to fix a default and forfeiture.[11] A lessor who has a right to declare a forfeiture and has given notice does not waive it by accepting rent for a period which will expire before he is entitled to reenter under the terms of the lease.[12] Under the statutes of California, the effect of a forfeiture for nonpayment of rent may be averted by payment of arrearages into court,[13] but such payment must be made before possession is surrendered.[14] The conditions upon which forfeiture may be declared rests in the terms of the lease,[15] and whether conditions precluding the right to forfeiture have been complied with depends upon the nature of the lease and circumstances.[16] Where a lease has been forfeited and the lessee is not entitled to equitable relief, the lessor may maintain a bill to establish the forfeiture as a matter of record and cancel the lease as a cloud.[17] It is said to be an open question whether equity will relieve a tenant from a forfeiture for breach of collateral covenants, such as that to pay taxes,[18] but it will not allow the defaulting tenant to litigate the validity of an irredeemable tax title at the risk of concluding the lessor who was free from misleading conduct, while the omission was wholly the oversight of the tenant.[19] And the purchase of the tax title by a stranger, to whom the landlord thereupon agreed to lease and did lease the premises, is not a fraud on the defaulting tenant warranting relief.[20]

Notice to vacate and demand of possession.[21]—Where notice of termination is expressly provided for, it must be given,[22] but no notice is necessary where the re-could not take advantage of the fact of nonpayment of rent as against sublessee under the original lease. Cuschner v. Westlake [Wash.] 86 P. 948. Right of forfeiture for failure to pay rent is waived where pending the trial of a traverse in unlawful detainer proceedings the tenant pays rent in arrears and also in advance which the landlord accepts, and the traverse is dismissed. Proc. § 1174, providing that where a lease is forfeited for nonpayment of rent, the judgment shall be satisfied and the tenant restored to his estate by payment into court of rent due, where a tenancy from month to month is forfeited in forcible entry for nonpayment of rent and not by giving notice to quit, the tenant by paying the rent due into court during the period allowed him for a stay of execution was entitled to satisfaction of the judgment for treble rent. Owen v. Herzihoff, 2 Cal. App. 622, 84 P. 274.

14. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1174, providing that a tenant who has forfeited his rights by nonpayment of rent may be restored to his estate by payment into court, such right is waived by his surrender of possession before making payment into court. Owen v. Herzihoff, 2 Cal. App. 622, 84 P. 274.

15. Where a lease for 50 years provided for forfeiture for default in payment of rent, taxes, etc., or in the performance of covenants, and there was among others a covenant to erect a building, it was held that the right to forfeiture extended to default in performance of any of the covenants, especially the one to build, which was one of the principal objects of the lease. Lindeke v. Associates Realty Co. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 630. An oil and gas lease by which the lessee is required to drill a well within two years but providing that the period might be extended by the payment of a rental after the second year, and also providing that the lease should be void if no well was dug in five years, defines the diligence with which the work of exploration must be conducted during the first five years, and where a rental was paid and one well sunk during the fifth year the lease was not avoidable because other wells were not sunk. Brewster v. Lanyon Zinc Co. [C. C. A.] 140 F. 801.

16. Where the object of operations contemplated by an oil and gas lease is to obtain a profit for both lessor and lessee, neither is the arbiter of the diligence or extent with or to which operations shall proceed. The criterion is what would reasonably be expected of operators of ordinary prudence under the circumstances. Brewster v. Lanyon Zinc Co. [C. C. A.] 140 F. 801. In the circumstances of this case the work of development was not prosecuted with reasonable diligence and the lessor was held entitled to terminate the lease. Id.

Under a covenant that the lessee would, thirty days before expiration of the lease, give notice that the premises would be vacated at that time, otherwise the lessor might at his option continue the lease for another year, held where the notice was not given the lessor exercised his option by permitting the lessee to remain in possession after expiration of the term. Trainor v.

lation of landlord and tenant does not exist,[23] or has been repudiated by the tenant,[24] nor after expiration of the term.[25] The right to notice may be waived,[26] but a waiver will not be read from acts wholly inconsistent therewith.[27] The notice to quit, given by the landlord, may be waived by him.[28] The waiver may result from any conduct sufficiently manifesting such intention.[29] The term of the notice varies with the differing tenancies and the statutes pertaining to them.[30] What constitutes reasonable notice depends on the circumstances of the case.[31] The requisites of the notice[32] and what constitutes a sufficient service thereof rest in the terms of a statute,[33] or the circumstances which require it.[34] A service upon the treasurer of a corporation tenant is service upon the corporation.[35]

Renewal under express agreement.[36]—The right to renewal even in the absence of stipulation therefor is a property right.[37] Where a lessee is given the privilege

St. 1899, § 4131, authorizing the landlord to recover possession after demand for rent and default in payment, it is not necessary to give notice of intention to declare forfeiture as authorized by the lease. Rogers v. Grote Paint Co., 118 Mo. App. 334, 94 S. W. 549.

23. Where the relation of landlord and tenant does not exist between the parties to an action in ejectment, no notice or demand for possession is necessary. Carlson v. Curran, 42 Wash. 647, 85 P. 627.

24. A tenant who repudiates that relation and claims title adversely cannot defend an action for possession on the ground of insufficiency of the notice to terminate the lease. Wallace v. Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Ass'n [C. C. A.] 148 F. 672.

25. Notice to quit is not essential to the maintenance of ejectment after expiration of the term. Blocker v. McClendon [Ind. T.] 98 S. W. 166. Rev. St. 1899, § 4111, providing that no notice is necessary to terminate a tenancy, expiration of which is prescribed by the lease, is not limited to contracts not affected by the statute of frauds. Ray v. Blackman, 120 Mo. App. 497, 97 S. W. 212.

26. A provision waiving all right to notice to quit, though found in the paragraph dealing solely with terminations from other causes than lapse of time, and stipulating for such terminations, held to apply to all right to notice, and was not limited to a termination for a cause specified. Connors v. Clark [Conn.] 63 A. 951.

27. Where a tenant from month to month stated to the landlord that he intended to move and the landlord stated that he could not hold him, but later repeatedly demanded written notice of his intention to move, there was no waiver of written notice. Sander v. Holstein Com. Co. [Mo. App.] 99 S. W. 12.

St. 1899, § 4110, providing for the termination of tenancies at will, in tenements in cities and towns by one month's notice, does not affect § 4109, providing for the termination of a tenancy from year to year by 60 days' notice before the end of the year. Kroeger v. Bohrer, 116 Mo. App. 208, 91 S. W. 159. A tenancy at sufferance may be terminated by the statutory three days' notice to quit. Clark v. Tukey Land Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 328. A lease from month to month may be terminated by a month's notice by either party. Pulliam v. Sells [Ky.] 99 S. W. 289. Under Ky. St. 1903, § 2326, a tenant at will may be ejected after thirty days' notice. Wessells v. Rodifer [Ky.] 97 S. W. 341. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4109, 60 days' notice prior to any current year is essential to terminate a parol lease for a term of years. Ray v. Blackman, 120 Mo. App. 497, 97 S. W. 212.

31. Under a provision by which the lessee agreed to vacate within a reasonable time after sale of the premises, where a notice was given April 23 to vacate in thirty days and the purchaser accepted rent for May, the reasonable time expired June 1 by operation of law. Cooper v. Gambill [Ala.] 40 So. 827.

32. The notice to quit provided by Comp. Laws 1897, § 3347, should be sufficiently definite to inform the tenant of the origin and meaning of the notice, but it is not indispensable that it should bear the signature of the landlord. Lund v. Ozanne [N. M.] 84 P. 710.

33. Under Gen. Laws 1896, c. 269, § 4, requiring written notice to terminate a tenancy from month to month but not prescribing the form thereof or manner of service, it is sufficient to serve notice on the wife of a tenant during his absence. Cranston Print Works v. Whalen, 27 R. I. 445, 63 A. 176.

34. Where leased land is sold under a contract which entitles the purchasers to possession, a notice to quit is properly signed and caused to be served by only one of the purchasers. Willis v. Weeks, 129 Iowa, 525, 105 N. W. 1012. Under a provision by which the lessee agrees to vacate within a reasonable time after a sale of the premises, notice to vacate is properly given by the purchaser instead of the lessor. Cooper v. of renewal upon the performance of conditions he must comply with the conditions,[38] and mere holding over without such compliance is not an exercise of his privilege;[39] but where he does exercise his option it constitutes a present demise, subject to all the covenants and conditions of the original lease,[40] and cannot be defeated by the landlord's subsequent refusal to renew.[41] Where a lease is to two tenants as joint lessees it is necessary for both to exercise the option to renew.[42] If a renewal is made by an agent, his authority must appear.[43] A privilege of renewal may be defeated by the tenant's own act.[44]

Holding over without agreement.[45]—Under a provision that a holding over shall constitute the lease a yearly one to be terminated by thirty days' notice by either party before the expiration of any year, a holding over by the lessee after giving

37. While in the absence of stipulation therefor a tenant has no right to a renewal as against the landlord, he has a reasonable expectancy which is regarded in equity as property, and if one standing in a fiduciary relation to him secures a renewal for himself equity will treat him as a trustee of it. McCourt v. Singers-Bigger [C. C. A.] 145 F. 103.

38. Where 60 days' notice prior to expiration of the term is required he must give it. Jackson Brew. Co. v. Wagner, 117 La. 875, 42 So. 356. A provision that at the expiration of the term the tenant should have the privilege of leasing for a further term is a covenant for a renewal and not for an extension, and notice was required to entitle the tenant to exercise his right. Gray v. Maier & Zobelein Brewery, 2 Cal. App. 653, 84 P. 280. Where a lease provided for its termination on October 1, and also provided that the tenant should have the privilege of renewal for a further term commencing on such date, held the tenant had all of October 1 to give notice of his election to renew though the old lease expired at midnight on September 30. Id.

39. Under a lease for five years with a privilege of renewal for five years longer on three months' notice, mere holding over is not an acceptance of such option where no notice is given. English v. Murtland [Pa.] 63 A. 882. Under an oil and gas lease for a period of twelve years and so long thereafter as the minerals should be found in paying quantities, and providing for a rental, the acceptance of rent after the expiration of twelve years did not continue the lease for another like period but did preclude the lessee from terminating the lease without reasonable notice. American Window Glass Co. v. Indiana Natural Gas & Oil Co. [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 1006.

40. Where the lease contains a provision for an additional term at the election of the lessee, the exercise of the option constitutes a present demise subject to all the conditions and covenants of the original lease, taking effect at the expiration of the first term without other agreement. De Friest v. Bradley [Mass.] 78 N. E. 467. Under a lease wherein the lessee covenants to erect certain improvements or a new modern store and office building and containing a covenant for renewal at the expiration of the first term, and also providing that the new lease should provide that if a new office building was erected the lessor should purchase it at the end of the term or grant a new lease for a third term, held that on the expiration of the first term the lessee was entitled to a new lease containing the covenant specified, though it made the improvements and did not erect the new building. Martin v. Babcock & Wilcox Co. [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 726. Under the Illinois statute providing for recovery of possession of the premises in forcible entry and detainer where a tenant holds over "without right," it is a defense to such action that the lease gave the tenant the right to renew and that the lessor refused to sign a renewal lease which was tendered him. Holt v. Nixon [C. C. A.] 141 F. 952. A provision that rent "shall be paid quarterly on the (blank)" requires payment on the last day of each quarter; and a renewal lease, where the tenant had a right to renew, tendered to the landlord for execution, providing for payment on the last day of each quarter, is an election to review. Id.

41. Where right of renewal is given by the terms of the lease and notice of an election to renew is given the lessor, the right cannot be affected by the fact that after the landlord refused to renew the tenant sought other premises, with a view to surrendering those leased if he thought advisable. Holt v. Nixon [C. C. A.] 141 F. 952.

42. The intention to renew, however, may be expressed jointly or independently or by remaining in possession and may be a question of fact. Tweedie v. Olson Hardware & Furniture Co. [Minn.] 107 N. W. 557.

43. Proof that an agent has authority to collect rent does not show that he is authorized to renew the lease. Such fact, however, is to be considered as a circumstance tending to show such authority. Noble v. Burney, 124 Ga. 960, 53 S. E. 463. On an issue as to the authority of an agent to renew a lease, evidence as to his prior authority is admissible where it appears that he had the same authority at the time of renewal. Id.

44. Where one rented for five years from a tenant who held under a lease expiring before the sublease did, but provided for renewal unless the owner could get more rent, and such subtenant competed with his landlord in an effort to get a lease on its expiration, he rendered it impossible for his landlord to acquire a lease, and could not recover damages for his failure to perform the lease under which he then held. Maas v. Kramer, 101 N. Y. S. 800.

such notice amounts to a renewal of the lease for another year at the option of the landlord.[46]

§ 9. Landlord's remedies for recovery of rent. Parties and procedure generally.[47]—Where the landlord has a lien on crops, he may sue any person who takes with notice.[48] A lessee from an assignee is a surety, and the lessor has his remedy against either.[49] An action for rent may not be maintained in the justice court if adjudication of title is necessary.[50] A Federal circuit court may entertain a suit by the lessor against the agent of shareholders of an insolvent national bank which was the lessee and is in liquidation.[51] A justice of the peace must in his judgment find the facts which give him jurisdiction of such cases[52] and he cannot give greater relief than is authorized.[53] A complaint for rent under a terminated lease should allege that the tenant held over or occupied the premises during the period for which rent was claimed.[54] Under a general denial in an action for rent, the tenant may not prove an eviction or accord and satisfaction.[55] A plea of eviction must set out facts amounting to it,[56] but a defendant need not deny an allegation that he requested a statement of the amount of rent demanded.[57] Where a landlord sues for rent in a justice court, he may when the cause is called for trial in the district court amend to claim recovery for rent coming due since commencement of the action.[58] The proof must not vary from the complaint.[59]

Distress.[60]—Distress in Illinois will not lie to recover damages for poor husbandry,[61] nor to recover general damages for breach of the general covenants of a lease.[62] The landlord need not enforce his lien by distress where the tenant admits liability and delivers the crop in satisfaction of the claim.[63] Demand for payment of rent is not a condition precedent to suing out a distress warrant in Georgia.[64] In that state a distress warrant returnable to a justice may be tried in the superior court,[65] and where a distress warrant has been converted into mesne process, the pleadings may be amended.[66] Necessary expense incident to the proceeding may be taxed as costs.[67] An acceptance of the excess of proceeds of a sale under a distress warrant is not a waiver of the wrongful act of the landlord in suing it out.[68] In an action for wrongful distress, it is not necessary to specifically describe the goods taken.[69] Where the evidence in that regard is not clear, it is for the jury to say what goods of a stranger were wrongfully distrained though their value is not disputed.[70]

Liens and securities for the payment of rent.[71]—A landlord has no warehouseman's lien for rent on personal property of a third person brought onto the premises by a tenant, where the tenant abandons the premises and the landlord notifies the owner that he will be held for rent until the property is removed.[72] A clause attempting to create a lien on crops to be raised for the payment of rent reserved is ineffectual to create either a legal or equitable lien on crops grown thereafter.[73] A landlord who has title to the crop has rights therein superior to attaching creditors of the tenant, with notice.[74]

There are numerous statutes creating liens for rent[75] and for advances to make a crop,[76] which liens attach by force of statute and do not require levy, seizure, or process.[77] Such special liens are usually superior to others created after the tenancy or term originates[78] and to liens expressly made subject to them.[79] A provisional

Though a distress warrant issued by a justice is on its face made returnable to the justice court, yet if it be actually returned to the superior court it is sufficient, and the latter may entertain jurisdiction to try the issue formed by the counter affidavit. Henley v. Brockman, 124 Ga. 1059, 53 S. E. 672.

66. Where the amount due a landlord is measured by the value of the specifics in which the rent is payable, it is competent for the landlord, after a distress warrant has been converted into a mesne process by filing a counter affidavit, to amend his pleadings by alleging that the value of the specifics claimed is a larger sum than that originally named in the affidavit upon which the warrant issued. 74. Where a tenant is indebted to his landlord for rent and advances and agrees that the landlord may have all the crop, sell it, and pay the tenant the surplus above the debt, and in gathering and shipping the crop the tenant acts as the landlord's agent, the landlord has possession of the crop and may maintain it against attaching creditors of the tenant who had notice of the agreement. Evans v. Groesbeck [Tex. Civ. App.] 93 S. W. 1005.

75. In Georgia a landlord's special lien for rent upon the crop takes effect upon maturity of the crop. Cochran v. Waits, Johnson & Co. [Ga.] 56 S. E. 241.

76. Georgia: The special lien upon the crop for advances to make the same arises by mere operation of law when the supplies are furnished. Cochran v. Waits, Johnson & Co. [Ga.] 56 S. E. 241.

77. In re McIntire, 142 F. 593. No levy is necessary to fix the lien either for rent or for advances. Cochran v. Waits, Johnson & Co. [Ga.] 56 S. E. 241.

78. Where products are levied on under such judgments, and the liens are foreclosed and execution placed in the hands of the levying officer but the property is sold under the judgments, the liens have precedence. Cochran v. Waits, Johnson & Co. [Ga.] 56 S. E. 241. Equitable rights in the fund determined. Id. Under Code W. Va. 1899, c. 93, § 11, a landlord has a lien for one year's rent whether accrued or not on the tenant's goods. Such lien is superior to any other created after the goods are taken onto the premises whether distress warrant has is-seizure to enforce a lien does not discharge it and substitute the lien of the seizure.[80] A superiority conferred particularly over levy of execution has no application when the levy is void[81] and is not a lien recognized in bankruptcy.[82] The statutory lien attaches only to the property specified by the statute,[83] and hence will not make one year's advances a lien on a different year's crops.[84] The lien for advances is for all advances contemplated by the statute.[85] In Iowa the lien attaches to secure rents reserved but not yet due.[86] The lien on personal property does not ordinarily follow or attach to the proceeds of its sale.[87] A landlord has not by virtue of his lien such possessory right to the crop as entitles him to prevent removal thereof from the premises by the tenant's creditor under an execution, and to maintain an action to try the right of property in order to have it returned if removed.[88] One who takes crops from a tenant takes subject to the lien[89] if according to one statute he had sued for the rent or not. In re McIntire, 142 F. 593. Civ. Code 1896, §§ 2703, 2706, expressly provides that the landlord's lien for rent on the crop is superior to that of a mortgagee. Wilson & Son v. Curry [Ala.] 42 So. 753. Liens of the landlord and other creditors and rights thereunder adjusted. Bowles' Ex'r v. Jones, 29 Ky. L. R. 1022, 96 S. W. 1121.

79. Where a crop mortgage by a tenant expressly refers to a rent claim, the mortgagee may not thereafter assert that his claim is superior to the landlord's. Bowles' Ex'r v. Jones, 29 Ky. L. R. 1022, 96 S. W. 1121.

80. Where a lessor sues his tenant for rent due under the lease, and simultaneously seizes movables under the conservatory writ of provisional seizure, the privilege which secures payment of the rent does not spring from the seizure but is a lien granted as of the date of lease. Schall v. Kinsella, 117 La. 687, 42 So. 221. In such case where before judgment the tenant is adjudicated a bankrupt and the trustee makes himself a party, he is not entitled to the property but only to the surplus over the amount of the lien. Id.

81, 82. Although Act Pa. 1836, §§ 83, 85, provides that chattels upon demised premises liable to distress, which shall have been taken by virtue of an execution, shall be liable for rent in arrears for one year at the time of taking, the landlord's lien will not be preserved in a court of bankruptcy, where such proceedings were instituted within four months of the issuing of execution. In re Whealton Restaurant Co., 143 F. 921.

83. Under Code, § 2992, giving a lien on crops grown, the landlord has a lien on crops produced by a subtenant. Beck v. Minnesota & Western Grain Co. [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1032. Rev. St. 1895, arts. 3235, 3251, giving the landlord a lien on crops and on property in the building, does not give a lien on a building erected by the tenant on a vacant lot. Allen v. Houston Ice Brew. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 942, 97 S. W. 1063.

84. The special statutory lien for money or supplies furnished in making a crop exists and can be foreclosed as a lien only on the crops of the year in which the advances were made. A balance of indebtedness for a prior year cannot be included in a foreclosure of such lien even though the parties agreed at the beginning of the year that such balance should be included with the advances of that year. Parks v. Simpson, 124 Ga. 523, 52 S. E. 616.

85. Under Kirby's Dig. § 5033, giving the landlord a lien for advances of necessary supplies, a sewing machine and money for ginning and wrapping and also for plastering held proper advances. Earl Bros. & Co. v. Malone [Ark.] 96 S. W. 1062. Kirby's Dig. §§ 5032, 5033, gives a landlord a lien only for rent and advances, and not for damages for the tenant's neglect of the crop or rental value of land not cultivated, and as to such claims it is inferior to a mortgagee of the tenant for supplies. Few v. Mitchell [Ark.] 96 S. W. 983.

86. Where the lessee gives notes for annual rent payable yearly for a term of years, the landlord has a lien on the crops and personal property used on the premises for rent to become due. Miller v. Bider [Iowa] 105 N. W. 594.

87. A tenant of a building, contemplating a sale to one person, gave a bill of sale to a trustee to secure claims against himself. The trustee took possession and on being paid the amount of the debts against the seller surrendered possession, the sale was completed and the purchaser removed the goods. The trustee then gave the money received to another to distribute among creditors. Held that the trustee and such other were not liable to the landlord, even if he had a lien, they not taking part in the sale but merely receiving a portion of the purchase price. Hartwig v. Iles [Iowa] 109 N. W. 18. Where one signed a note as surety for a tenant and took a chattel mortgage on his property which was voluntarily sold and the proceeds, at the tenant's request, applied on the note, the landlord could not recover it, though he had a lien on the property. Overholser v. Christensen [Iowa] 110 N. W. 321.

88. Evans v. Groesbeck [Tex. Civ. App.] 93 S. W. 1005.

89. A buyer of a crop subject to a landlord's lien for rent acquires subject to the lien, and, in appropriating it to his own use, is liable to the extent of the lien. Beck v. Minnesota & Western Grain Co. [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1032. Where one testified that he had authority from the landlord to collect rent, and also that he demanded the value of the crop from an agent of one who purchased it when it was subject to the land-notice;[90] and where a landlord has a lien on the entire crop, an attaching creditor may not take any part of it without showing that such lien had been satisfied.[91] But a landlord who represents that he has no lien,[92] or permits the tenant to deal with the property as his own,[93] thereby waives his lien. Where he permits the tenant to sell the crop, the waiver takes effect only from the date of the sale and only in favor of the purchaser.[94] The lien must be enforced within the period prescribed.[95] Injunction will issue to prevent a tenant from selling property which is subject to a lien for rent to become due in the future, regardless of the solvency of the tenant.[96] Where in an action by an insolvent tenant against a sublessee for rent a receiver is appointed to collect rent, the original lessor is entitled to the fund collected by the receiver,[97] and he may maintain an action therefor without reducing his claim to judgment.[98]

lord's lien, evidence held to show a demand prior to action brought conceding it to be necessary. Id. An agent of the landlord who had authority to collect rent has authority to demand of a purchaser of a crop which is subject to the landlord's lien the value of the crop. Id. Complaint in an action by the landlord against a third person who had purchased cotton from the tenant on which the landlord had a lien held sufficient. Cadenhead v. Rogers & Bro. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 837, 96 S. W. 952. One who takes, from a tenant, cotton seed which is subject to a landlord's lien, is liable in conversion only when he takes it under such circumstances as destroys the lien; and the owner of a gin, to which a tenant takes cotton, who mixes the seed with his own, but does not claim to be a purchaser of it, is not liable. Maddox v. Maddox [Ala.] 41 So. 426.

90. Where one purchasing grain knew it was raised on leased premises, his liability to the landlord is not affected by the fact that he thought it had been grown on demised premises other than those rented from the person suing him for the price of the crop. King v. Rowlett, 120 Mo. App. 120, 96 S. W. 493. Where a landlord sues one who purchases the crop from the tenant, while he is required to show that the purchaser had notice that the crop was grown on leased premises, he is not required to show that the purchaser knew that the premises belonged to him. Id.

91. Such fact is not shown by proof that the remainder of the property is sufficient to satisfy the lien. Evans v. Groesbeck [Tex. Civ. App.] 93 S. W. 1005.

92. A landlord who for the purpose of procuring advances to his tenant states to another that the tenant is to have the land rent free and that he had no claim on the crop grown is estopped to assert as landlord a claim for rent and advances, where the person to whom the representations were made made advances and took a mortgage on the crop. Chancellor v. Law [Ala.] 41 So. 514. Where a lease provides that a building erected by the tenant shall not be removed until rent is paid, and the landlord does not record the lease but tells another that the building belongs to the tenant without stating his rights, he may not assert them against such person acquiring a mechanic's lien on the building. Allen v. Houston Ice & Brew. Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 942, 97 S. W. 1063.

93. Where a landlord permits a tenant to sell to a certain buyer parts of the crop on which he has a lien and receives from the tenant his share of the proceeds, he waives his lien and the buyer takes subsequent purchases free therefrom. Planters' Compress Co. v. Howard [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 815, 92 S. W. 44.

94. A landlord who has a lien on a portion of the crop and authorizes his tenant to sell the entire crop waives his lien only when the sale is made and then only in favor of the purchaser. Not as to creditors of the tenant. Sparks v. Ponder [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 380, 94 S. W. 428.

95. Code, § 2992, gives a landlord a lien for a year, but not continuing more than six months after expiration of the lease. Held that an action is timely when brought to enforce a lien on a crop raised by a subtenant, though commenced more than a year after such subtenant's rent became due but within a year from the time the tenant's rent became due and within six months of termination of the lease. Beck v. Minnesota & Western Grain Co. [Iowa] 107 N. W. 1032.

96. Miller v. Bider [Iowa] 105 N. W. 594.

97. Kemp v. San Antonio Catering Co., 118 Mo. App. 134, 93 S. W. 342. Where property subject to an existing lease was leased expressly subject to rights under the first lease and the lessor orally agreed to cancel such prior lease but the lessee procured an assignment of it and made no demand that it be canceled, held failure of the lessor to cause it to be canceled did not entitle the second lessee to deny the lessor's right to claim as rent a fund paid into court by a sublessee. Id.

98. An insolvent lessee, who had sublet, procured the appointment of a receiver to collect rents. He admitted that he owed his lessor a certain amount of rent. Held that as a judgment against him would be fruitless, and as the appointment of a receiver rendered it impossible for the lessor to garnish the sublessee, he was not required to reduce his claim to judgment before claiming the fund collected by the receiver. Kemp v. San Antonio Catering Co., 118 Mo. App. 134, 93 S. W. 342. Where a lease of land provided that the lessee should erect a building which he could remove at the end of the term and he did so and sublet portions of it, and in litigation between lessee and sublessee a receiver was appointed to collect rent, the original lessee was insolvent

§ 10. Landlord's remedies for recovery of premises.[99]—A landlord may at his election, eject a tenant at the expiration of his term.[1] In such case he must prove his title independent of the tenancy.[2] But he cannot maintain ejectment before the end of the term unless the tenant has in some way violated the terms of the lease.[3] Injunction is not the appropriate remedy for the recovery of possession.[4] Injunction should not issue against execution of a landlord's warrant until answer to the bill,[5] and even then cannot do injury to the tenant in order to force him out.[6]

A covenant not to seek the opening of a judgment of ejectment binds subtenants as well as tenants,[7] and a judgment entered pursuant to a warrant in the lease for that purpose will not be opened save on clear proof.[8]

Summary proceedings[9] are statutory and the statute must be strictly followed.[10] A mortgagee of the lease is not a necessary party.[11] The pleadings must conform to statutory requirements.[12] A jurisdictional defect cannot be remedied by amend-and the lessor claimed this fund as rent, held that the fact that the lessee was entitled to remove the building did not make the fund paid by a sublessee issue out of personalty instead of the realty so as to prevent the lessor from claiming it as rent. Id.

1. Blocker v. McClendon [Ind. T.] 98 S. W. 166. The statute provides that the lessor may sue his lessee upon termination of the lease by failure to pay rent, or by any other breach of the contract, to oust him from the premises. Jackson Brew. Co. v. Wagner, 116 La. 51, 40 So. 528.

2. A landlord who brings ejectment after expiration of the term must prove his title independent of the tenancy. Blocker v. McClendon [Ind. T.] 98 S. W. 166.

3. Jackson Brew. Co. v. Wagner, 116 La. 51, 40 So. 528.

4. Injunction will not issue to restrain a tenant from withholding possession upon the ground that the landlord is entitled to possession by reason of his election to terminate the lease on the ground that the premises have been rendered uninhabitable by fire. Forcible entry is the remedy. Mitchell v. Hannah, 121 Ill. App. 597.

5. Currey v. McCurdy, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 287.

6. The landlord who contaminates the atmosphere in the premises to force a defaulting tenant out and thereby injures him must answer in damages. Stopping chimneys in order to force smoke into tenant's rooms. Huggins v. Bridges, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 32.

7. Guenther v. Gilchrist Imp. Jar Co., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 232.

8. On appeal from refusal to set aside a judgment entered under an ejectment clause, a waiver of the right to appeal will necessitate a quashal of the appeal if the record does not show that a new lease was made as alleged, lacking such waiver. Seagrave v. Lacy, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 586. The tenant cannot have the judgment, entered under an ejectment clause in the lessor's name, vacated on the mere allegation that there had been an assignment by such lessor, especially when the assignee, if there be one, does not object. Singer v. Sheriff, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 305.

9. See 6 C. L. 384.

10. There is no authority for an entry of final order where the parties do not appear. Katz v. Schreckinger, 101 N. Y. S. 743. Where in summary proceedings there was no motion to dismiss the petition because of insufficient service of notice, but the motion was made on the ground of no proof of demand for rent or taxes, such proof under the circumstances was sufficient. Peabody v. Long Acre Square Bldg. Co., 112 App. Div. 114, 98 N. Y. S. 242. Where in summary proceedings to recover possession the treasurer of the corporation tenant testified that the notice to quit or pay taxes was served upon him, it constituted an admission that such service was properly and duly made. Id. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2247, providing that issues in summary proceedings for possession must be tried by the court, where lessees did not pay taxes as required by their lease until after issue joined, and such fact was not set up in the answer, there was sufficient foundation for final order of dispossession. Id. Where counter affidavit to a warrant to evict in part claimed an equitable title, after such part had been dismissed, it was competent for the court to receive evidence on the remaining issue, tenancy or no tenancy, raised by the affidavit. Bennett v. Farkas, 126 Ga. 228, 54 S. E. 942.

11. A final order in summary proceedings in favor of the landlord will not be set aside in order to permit a mortgagee of the lease to come in and defend, as he is not a necessary or proper party to such proceeding. Rubenstein v. Rosenthal, 50 Misc. 313, 98 N. Y. S. 681.

12. An allegation in a petition in summary proceeding "that the said petitioners are the landlords of the premises hereinafter described" is not a sufficient allegation of the interest of the petitioners under Code Civ. Proc. § 2235. Bell v. Karsch Brew. Co., 101 N. Y. S. 803. Code Civ. Proc. § 2235, requiring the petition in summary proceedings to state the interest of the petitioner in the land, is not complied with by an allegation that he is the lessee and landlord thereof. Ferber v. Apfel, 113 App. Div. 720, 99 N. Y. S. 215. Petition in summary proceedings alleging that notice requiring in the alternative payment of rent or possession of the premises or payment of taxes or possession, was served on an officer of a corporation tenant, held to confer jurisdiction on the mu-

ment.[13] Where a tenant is evicted from a portion of the premises, summary proceedings cannot be maintained against him for nonpayment of rent during the continuance of such partial eviction.[14] The mortgagee of a lease may pay rent due by his mortgagor at any time before final order in summary proceedings in order to protect his security, and the landlord is bound to accept it.[15] In New York only the final order in such proceedings is appealable,[16] and in Connecticut a judgment of restitution is not.[17] A writ of dispossession gives the landlord no right to exercise dominion over or to use or retain the tenant's personalty on the premises.[18]

Forcible entry and unlawful detainer.[19]—In forcible entry and detainer it must appear that the relation of landlord and tenant exists.[20] But in some states it may be maintained by a grantee of the premises, though the tenant has not attorned to him.[21] Where a lessee refuses to perform his covenant to vacate within a reasonable time after sale of the premises, the proceeding is properly brought by the lessor for the use of his vendee though the vendee might have sued.[22] The proceeding must be brought within the limitation period.[23] In such proceeding only the right to possession is involved.[24] The proceeding must be instituted in a court having jurisnicipal court. Peabody v. Long Acre Square Bldg. Co., 112 App. Div. 114, 98 N. Y. S. 242. If such notice was insufficient, failure to object at the trial was a waiver of such insufficiency. Id. In dispossessory proceedings, under Code 1895, § 4318, an equitable petition by the tenant seeking to enjoin such proceeding held demurrable. Hays v. Clay, 124 Ga. 908, 53 S. E. 399.

13. Where process in a summary proceeding to dispossess was insufficient in the first instance to confer jurisdiction, it may not be amended under Municipal Court Act. Eighty William St. Bldg. Co. v. Jones, 101 N. Y. S. 757. The provision of the New York code requiring a petition in summary proceedings to state the interest of the petitioner is jurisdictional. Where not complied with, the court is without power to permit it to be stated by amendment. Ferber v. Apfel, 113 App. Div. 720, 99 N. Y. S. 215. Failure to allege it is not waived by an answer admitting that the respondents held as tenant of the petitioner. Id. In such case an amendment to conform to proof that petitioner was the landlord does not cure the defect. Id.

14. Ferber v. Apfel, 113 App. Div. 720, 99 N. Y. S. 215.

15. Rubenstein v. Rosenthal, 50 Misc. 313, 98 N. Y. S. 681.

16. Under Municipal Court Act, Laws 1902, p. 1488, c. 580, § 1, only the final order in summary proceedings is appealable. Dickinson v. Brown, 50 Misc. 640, 98 N. Y. S. 694. Record held not to show a final order. Id.

17. Under the statutes of Connecticut, a judgment of restitution in a summary proceeding, as authorized by 14 Sp. Laws, p. 600, is not appealable. Marsh v. Burhans [Conn.] 64 A. 739.

18. Reich v. Cochran, 99 N. Y. S. 755. Evidence as to conversion of a tenant's chattels by a landlord on dispossessing the tenant held for the jury. Id. On an issue as to conversion of a tenant's goods by the landlord on dispossessing the tenant, evidence that the landlord placed a person in possession of the goods and charged him to keep them was admissible. Id.

19. See 6 C. L. 385. Ses Forcible Entry and Unlawful Detainer, 7 C. L. 1671. Section 6601, providing that judgments either before a justice of the peace or in the court of common pleas, under the forcible entry and detainer chapter, "shall not be a bar to any further action brought by either party," is not class legislation and unconstitutional because in the interest of landlords, and should be literally construed. Laver v. Canfield, 7 Ohio C. C. (N. S.) 389.

20. Chambers v. Irish [Iowa] 109 N. W. 787. To authorize an action in forcible entry and detainer the relation of landlord and tenant must be established at the time action was instituted. Gies v. Storz Brewing Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 775. In unlawful detainer, evidence held insufficient to show that the landlord was entitled to possession and to a certain sum as rent. Ahlers v. Barrett [Cal. App.] 87 P. 232.

21. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 3352, giving a grantee the same remedy to recover possession as his grantor had, where the tenant is holding over at the time of the grant, the grantee may maintain unlawful detainer though the tenant had never attorned to him. Ray v. Blackman, 120 Mo. App. 497, 97 S. W. 212.

22. Cooper v. Gambill [Ala.] 40 So. 827.

23. Limitations against an action of forcible entry against a tenant at sufferance begins to run on termination of the tenancy. Clark v. Tukey Land Co. [Neb.] 106 N. W. 328.

24. In forcible entry, the tenant cannot deny the landlord's title nor defeat the action by pleading pendency of an action to settle contract rights in the land alleged to exist between himself and a former owner, not his landlord. Chambers v. Irish [Iowa] 109 N. W. 787. Where in forcible entry and detainer the relation of landlord and tenant is shown to exist, the questions to be determined are, is the tenant holding over after expiration of the lease, or contrary to its terms? Id. In an action to evict a tenant holding over where the sole defense consists of a denial of the relation of landlord and tenant, it is not error to exclude a deed

diction.[25] It may be maintained after forfeiture[26] and after expiration of the term without demand for possession.[27] Statutory requirements must be complied with.[28] The judgment may be for possession, rent due,[29] and damages for withholding,[30] providing the landlord shows himself entitled to recover.[31] A judgment in one action is not a bar to another proceeding based on a different cause.[32]

§ 11. Liability of third persons to landlord or tenant.[33]—For any injury to the estate vested in him[34] the tenant may recover and the landlord for any to that which remains in him.[35] A landlord cannot recover damages for a temporary nuisance maintained on adjoining premises which depreciates rental value during pendency of the lease, as such right belongs to the lessee;[36] but it is no defense to an

from a third person to the tenant which was executed prior to the date of the alleged creation of the relation of landlord and tenant. Allen v. Lawson, 125 Ga. 336, 54 S. E. 176.

25. The municipal court of Minneapolis has no jurisdiction of forcible entry and detainer based upon breach of contract of a lease to lands situated partly within and partly without Hennepin County. Bunker v. Hanson [Minn.] 109 N. W. 827.

26. Under Civ. Code Proc. § 452, defining forcible detainer, and Ky. St. 1903, § 2292, providing that unless a landlord consents in writing every assignment or transfer by a lessee having a term less than two years shall work a forfeiture and the landlord may maintain forcible entry or detainer, where one who has received possession from a tenant who has a lease for more than two years providing against assignment or subletting without the landlord's consent, he may, on failure to pay rent, be dispossessed by forcible detainer. Haase v. Schickner, 29 Ky. L. R. 87, 92 S. W. 949.

27. Under Rev. St. § 3321, where a lessee holds over, the landlord may maintain unlawful detainer without demand for possession. Ray v. Blackman, 120 Mo. App. 497, 97 S. W. 212. A tenant may be ejected by forcible detainer after expiration of his term. Alexander v. Gardner, 29 Ky. L. R. 958, 96 S. W. 818.

28. Where, after expiration of a lease, the lessee held over and continued to pay rent in advance on the first day of each month, and the lessor served notice that the rent would be advanced from the fifteenth of a certain month and on the third of such month served a demand for one-half a month's rent at the old and one-half at the new rate, and the lessee tendered a full month's rent at the old rate, held forcible entry and detainer could not be maintained, conceding that the term expired on the fifteenth, and the notice was sufficient under Civ. Code, § 827, to change the terms of the lease to take effect at the expiration of the month because no part of the rent for the month beginning the fifteenth would be due prior to that date. Dawson v. Cerf [Cal. App.] 87 P. 559. Evidence held sufficient to show service of notice in an action of forcible entry and detainer. Martin v. Hartshorne [Okl.] 87 P. 854. Where on appeal, in proceedings to dispossess a tenant from month to month, the notice to quit does not appear in the record, and the testimony is contradictory, the proceeding will be dismissed. Benedict v. Heffman, 101 N. Y. S. 37. Where in forcible entry and detainer an allegation of the giving of the statutory notice was not denied, the fact that it was given was not in issue. Coney v. Lovett [Cal. App.] 84 P. 428. Forcible entry and detainer may not be maintained without notice for nonpayment of rent where the lease did not provide for forfeiture for nonpayment or that such default should terminate the lease. Lane v. Brooks, 120 Ill. App. 501. The institution of such proceeding does not constitute such notice of an election to terminate as will enable the proceeding to be maintained. Id.

29. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4131, giving justices of the peace jurisdiction of actions of forcible entry and unlawful detainer, a landlord, if entitled to recover, may have judgment for possession and for rent due if the amount does not exceed the jurisdiction of the court. South St. Joseph Town Co. v. Scott, 115 Mo. App. 16, 90 S. W. 727. Where in landlord and tenant proceedings the jury returns a verdict for an amount stated for use and occupation after the expiration of the lease, the court in rendering judgment for the money may also enter judgment for possession. English v. Murtland [Pa.] 63 A. 882.

30. In an action in unlawful detainer where the landlord seeks to recover the land but not the buildings, his assignee may not recover damages for detention of the building in an action on the supersedeas bond. Ellis v. Cross [Ind. T.] 97 S. W. 1030. In such action the premises, the amount of the judgment superseded, rental value, costs, and any other damages shown, may be recovered. Id. Under Ind. T. Ann. St. 1899, § 2296, providing that in unlawful detainer where the tenant gives bond to retain possession the plaintiff may show damage by being kept out of possession, rental value may be shown as an element of damages but rent as such cannot be recovered. Id.

36. The premises had been leased at a action by the landlord against a third person for permanent injuries to the leased premises that the tenant has an option to purchase.[37] In Georgia a landlord may recover damages from one who entices the tenant away.[38] A landlord suing for injuries to crops may recover only for injuries to his share,[39] but where the landlord sues and the tenant testifies in the cause, the defense that the crop belongs to the tenant cannot be maintained.[40] A tenant may recover for a trespass.[41] Where the premises are taken under the power of eminent domain, the tenant is entitled to have his damages apportioned between the landlord and himself, according to their respective rights.[42] If he fails to plead any interest in the land he thereby assents to recovery of all damages by the landlord.[43] Where a tenant was injured by negligence of a subcontractor doing work of remodeling building without supervision of the original contractor, the subcontractor and not the original contractor was responsible to him.[44]

§ 12. Crimes and penalties.[45]—A statute making criminal a certain act in respect of contracts of hire does not apply where the relation of landlord and tenant exists.[46]

§ 1. Common-law larceny.[47]—Larceny is the taking[48] and carrying away[49] of the personal property[50] of another[51] from his possession[52] without his consent,[53]

reduced rental after the creation of the nuisance but it did not appear that the difference was the result of its maintenance. Miller v. Edison Elec. Illuminating Co., 184 N. Y. 17, 76 N. E. 734.

37. In case he exercised his option he would also be entitled to recover. Hayden v. Consolidated Min. & Dredging Co. [Cal. App.] 84 P. 422.

38. A promissory note promising to pay a certain amount of cotton for rent of a certain tract of land is within Acts 1901, p. 63, providing that it shall be unlawful for a person during the existence of the relation of landlord and tenant as to agricultural lands to disturb the relation or employ the tenant, and giving the landlord in such case the right to recover double the rent. Pace v. Goodson [Ga.] 56 S. E. 363. A contract contemplated by the statute must be shown to have existed where it is sought to recover under the statute. Id.

39. Where a landlord sues for injuries to crops alleging that they are his own, but the proof shows that a share belongs to his tenant, he can only recover for injury to his share, though the evidence also shows that the tenant authorized him to collect for injuries sustained by him. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. McMurrough [Tex. Civ. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 476, 91 S. W. 320.

40. Where a landowner sues a railroad company for injury to crops by fire, it cannot defend on the ground that the crops belonged to a tenant where the tenant testified in the case and made no claim thereto. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Farris, 117 Ill. App. 108.

41. Under Comp. Laws, § 11,153, providing that no entry shall be made on lands except in cases specified, and then only peaceably, where one had surrendered possession of his farm which had been leased to another, the former had no right to enter and forcibly obstruct the latter from harvesting crops though the latter claimed title thereto. Byers v. Anderson, 143 Mich. 178, 12 Det. Leg. N. 971, 106 N. W. 734. Where under his lease a tenant was entitled to the full and unobstructed use of a window, the placing of a show case in front of such window in such manner as to interfere with the unobstructed use was a trespass, and its removal by him was lawful. Whitehouse v. Aiken, 190 Mass. 468, 77 N. E. 499.

42. Douglas v. Indianapolis & N. W. Traction Co. [Ind. App.] 76 N. E. 892. A railroad company, upon purchasing a right of way across leased premises, cannot enter upon the same without first compensating the tenant. Ft. Smith Suburban R. Co. v. Maledon [Ark.] 95 S. W. 472.

unlawfully,[54] and with a felonious intent[55] entertained at the time of taking,[56] to deprive the owner therof[57] and to convert the same to the use of the taker.[58]

The property must have some value,[59] and where the offense is continuous the values of the several items stolen may be added.[60] to perform services with intent to defraud, has reference to contracts of hiring and does not apply where persons occupy the relation of landlord and tenant, and a tenant is not liable under such statute where as part of the contract of rental he agrees to clear up certain land. Young v. State, 124 Ga. 788, 53 S. E. 101.

47. See 6 C. L. 402.

48. Acts of ownership over inherited property do not constitute larceny, though ancestor may have stolen property. Havard v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 531, 92 S. W. 804.

49. Where defendant lifted harness from hooks, but, on being discovered, dropped it and ran away, asportation complete. State v. Williams [Mo.] 97 S. W. 562. Mere sale of another's property not in seller's possession, the latter not participating in delivery, not larceny. Henderson v. State [Ark.] 96 S. W. 359.

50. Gas supplied to consumers through pipes and measured by meters, as where a party disconnected meter and obtained gas by making rubber hose connection. Woods v. People, 222 Ill. 293, 78 N. E. 607. Such offense is larceny under Starr & C. Ann. St. 2nd Ed. par. 305, c. 38, p. 1316, and does not fall under Crim. Code, § 117, relating to offense of tampering with gas meters. Id.

51. Mere lawful possession on the part of the party from whom the property is stolen is sufficient. State v. Philips, 73 S. C. 236, 53 S. E. 370; Cain v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 881, 92 S. W. 808. Exclusive possession and control sufficient. Cook v. State [Ark.] 97 S. W. 683. One in possession of an estray has sufficient property interest therein, or one in possession of property purchased from thief, or a thief in possession of the property as against another than the owner. Maxwell v. Territory [Ariz.] 85 P. 116. Possession by jailor of property belonging to discharged prisoner. Cain v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 881, 92 S. W. 808. Party charged with authority to take possession of animals if he should find them, but who never found them, had no special ownership in them Bryan v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 37, 91 S. W. 580.

52. Custodian of property on owner's premises takes same from the owner's possession if he converts it. Daniels v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 525. Property must at one time have been in the possession, actual or constructive, of the person in whom the ownership is laid, and, hence, inducing a party to include in a check an amount to which drawee is not entitled is not larceny. Commonwealth v. Barrett, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 112.

W. 454; Welch v. State, 126 Ga. 496, 55 S. E. 183; Bink v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 469, 98 S. W. 863. No larceny where intent to steal is not formed until after taking with owner's consent. McMahon v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 699, 96 S. W. 17. Where particular goods are obtained from officers of a corporation having their custody and authority to sell them, consent of other officers is immaterial. Beuchert v. State, 165 Ind. 523, 76 N. E. 111. Where party with consent of servant in charge of horse drove and assisted servant in driving off the horse with intent to appropriate it, he was not guilty of larceny. Pearce v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 447, 98 S. W. 861.

54. Trespass an essential element. Topolewski v. State [Wis.] 109 N. W. 1037; Commonwealth v. Barrett, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 112.

55. Felonious intent an essential element. Triplett v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 974, 91 S. W. 281; Barbe v. Territory, 16 Okl. 562, 86 P. 61; People v. Moss, 113 App. Div. 329, 99 N. Y. S. 138. Intent is a question for the jury where facts are in dispute or intent is doubtful. Triplett v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 974, 91 S. W. 281. As a general rule the question of intent is for the jury, but if in connection with the alleged criminal act there are other facts and circumstances which negative the existence of a criminal intent or are consistent with innocence, it is the duty of the court to hold as a matter of law that a conviction cannot be had, whether the question be presented on demurrer or on motion to discharge at the close of the state's case, or on habeas corpus. People v. Moss, 113 App. Div. 329, 99 N. Y. S. 138.

56. Where original taking is without criminal intent, no subsequent appropriation will constitute larceny. Leak v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 476.

57. Barbe v. Territory, 16 Okl. 562, 86 P. 61. Trespass or unlawful taking for which a civil action would lie is not sufficient but must be coupled with intent to steal. Ryan v. U. S., 26 App. D. C. 74.

58. Barbe v. Territory, 16 Okl. 562, 86 P. 61; Miller v. Territory of Oklahoma [C. C. A.] 149 F. 330; Triplett v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 974, 91 S. W. 281.

59. People v. Fletcher, 110 App. Div. 231, 97 N. Y. S. 62; Portwood v. State, 124 Ga. 783, 53 S. E. 99. Value not determined by market value generally. Glover v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 354. Ordinary test of the value of the property is the price it will command in the market if offered for sale, as where gas is stolen its value will be determined by selling price to consumer in district where crime is committed and not by cost value of material from which gas was made. Woods v. People, 222 Ill. 293, 78 N. E. 607.

60. Where gas is stolen from time to time by means of connection cutting out meter. Woods v. People, 222 Ill. 293, 78 N. E. 607. Fact that Shannon's Code, § 6650, makes it a misdemeanor to sell or dispose of a pistol in the state does not prevent theft of pistol from being larceny. Osborne v. State, 115 Tenn. 717, 92 S. W. 853.

That the owner furnishes the opportunity for the execution of a formed design to commit larceny will not prevent the offense when committed from being larceny,[61] but it is not larceny where the owner induces the original intent to steal,[62] nor where the acts of the owner amount to a consent to the taking.[63]

A taking through mistake or inadvertence is not larceny,[64] nor is a taking under bona fide claim of ownership.[65] So also, a party may be incapacitated by drunkenness from forming the intent to steal.[66]

The distinction between larceny and some of the kindred offenses,[67] such as robbery and embezzlement, lies in the manner in which the possession is acquired. Thus, where the possession is acquired by violence or by putting in fear, the offense is robbery,[68] and where the possession is honestly obtained and the conversion occurs thereafter, the offense is embezzlement.[69] On the other hand, the distinction between larceny and obtaining property by false pretenses lies in the intention of the owner in parting with the property, it being the latter offense where he is induced by fraud to part with both possession and title,[70] and the former where he parts with the mere possession intending to retain the title.[71]

Where a party aids in the larceny of goods, he will be guilty of larceny of the whole of them if he appropriates any portion.[72]

§ 2. Statutory larceny, theft, etc.[73]—Under the statutes many offenses are larceny which were not such at common-law, such as embezzlement,[74] obtaining prop-

Where property is returned before intent to steal arises or as soon as he realizes his possession, and this embraces cases where property is recovered or taker is apprehended before his return to conscious realization of his offense with reasonable opportunity to act upon reflection. Id.

67. Such distinctions have to a great extent been abolished by statute. See post, § 2, Statutory Larceny, Theft, etc.

68. See 6 C. L. 1317. Robbery is sometimes called compound larceny and is constituted by the unlawful and felonious taking and asportation of the personal property of another by violence or by putting him in fear. Triplett v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 974, 91 S. W. 281. Robbery is larceny aggravated by circumstances of violence or putting in fear, and the former includes the latter. State v. Smith, 190 Mo. 706, 90 S. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 548, 91 S. W. 572. False representations that party had authority to collect a debt and thus inducing debtor to include such amount in check payable to such party. Commonwealth v. Barrett, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 112. The doctrine that there is no larceny where party is induced by false pretenses to part with title to his property recognizes no distinction between money and other property. Bink v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 469, 98 S. W. 863.

71. People v. Moss, 113 App. Div. 329, 99 N. Y. S. 138. In such case the subsequent felonious conversion of the property will relate back and make the taking and conversion a larceny. Aldrich v. People, 224 Ill. 622, 79 N. E. 964; Welch v. State, 126 Ga. 495, 55 S. E. 183; State v. Kosky, 191 Mo. 1, 90 S. W. 454. The rule that it is not larceny where the intention is to pass title does not apply to a case where the party from whom the possession is obtained has no authority to pass the title, as where possession of trunk was obtained from transportation company by fraudulent interchange of checks. Aldrich v. People, 224 Ill. 622, 79 N. E. 964.

People v. Snyder, 110 App. Div. 699, 97 N. Y. S. 469; People v. Moss, 113 App. Div. 329, 99 N. Y. S. 138. Not larceny where taking is under open, notorious, and bona fide claim of title. Id. Where the representation is as to the financial ability of the party making it, such representation must be in writing. Pen. Code, § 544. People v. Snyder, 110 App. Div. 699, 97 N. Y. S. 469. Representation by defendant that he was a member of a firm, one of the partners of which was his brother who had a good financial rating, was a representation of an independent fact not relating solely to financial ability. Id. In New York the willful and fraudulent use of check or draft or order for payment of money or delivery of property, in obtaining money or property, is larceny. Pen. Code, § 529. People v. Lipp, 111 App. Div. 504, 98 N. Y. S. 86. When there is no question as to intention of defendant in using such check or draft, his conduct toward party from whom money or property is obtained both prior and subsequent to the transaction are circumstances to be considered in determining good faith and lack of criminal intent. Id.

In Texas the distinction between larceny and swindling still exists, notwithstanding Pen. Code, art. 861, providing that if possession of property is wrongfully obtained with intent to convert it the offense is larceny. Bink v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. App. 369, 98 S. W. 249. Statute does not include case where money is borrowed and it is not intention of parties that same identical money shall be returned. Id.

The illegal purpose of the owner in surrendering possession of the property will prevent a conviction under the statute relating to larceny by false pretense, trick, or device. People v. Tompkins [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 326, following McCord v. People, 46 N. Y. 470. "The law of this state, as set forth in McCord v. People, 46 N. Y. 470, has been in existence since 1837. It has become a rule of personal liberty quite as firmly established in this state as the rule of property recently reaffirmed in the case of Peck v. Schenectady R. Co., 170 N. Y. 298, 63 N. E. 357. Although it may be admitted that this rule, which exists only in New York and Wisconsin, is at variance with what now appears to be the more reasonable view adopted in at least twelve of our sister states, and although it may be conceded to be too narrow for the practical administration of criminal justice as applied to modern conditions, we are admonished that the remedy is not with the courts, but in the legislature. We cannot change the existing rule without enacting, in effect, an ex post facto law. This cannot be done without judicial usurpation of legislative power." Id. This rule does not apply where the illegality affects merely the validity of the contract or transaction between the parties, and hence the fact that a loan induced by false representations was usurious was no defense to a charge of larceny in obtaining such loan. People v. Koller, 101 N. Y. S. 518.

76. Pen. Code, § 528. People v. Moss, 113 App. Div. 329, 99 N. Y. S. 138. Officer of corporation is not guilty of larceny by breach of trust merely because he receives reimbursement from the corporation for money paid out by him for ultra vires purposes, such as contributions to political campaign funds. Id. Conversion by party to whom property is delivered for transportation is larceny after the trust without element of simple larceny. Barron v. State, 126 Ga. 92, 54 S. E. 812.

77. Pen. Code 1895, § 877. Butler v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 146, 93 S. W. 743; Simpson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 87, 96 S. W. 925. Borrowed property. Bink v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 369, 98 S. W. 249. Where bailor for repairs failed to pay charges, bailee not guilty of larceny because he took property away with him. Simpson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 87, 96 S. W. 925. Conversion by agent comes under bailment statute where possession obtained by agent from owner by virtue of agency. Peters v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 91 S. W. 224. Leave granted by the owner of a horse to keep charge of the same, after party is seen going off with it, creates a bailment. Harding v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 422, 95 S. W. 528.

78. Under Pen. Code, arts. 951, 952, a party is not guilty of larceny where he brings into state property acquired by swindling. Bink v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 369, 98 S. W. 249.

79. Where partner receives check from his copartner for a specific purpose, fact that identical check is not used for such purpose does not make him guilty of larceny where amount of check is subsequently appropriated and applied to designated purpose. People v. Hart, 99 N. Y. S. 758. Conviction for grand larceny under Kirby's Dig. §§ 1821-1824, for stealing check is no bar to an indictment for forging the check. Crossland v. State, 77 Ark. 537, 92 S. W. 776. Under Code 1896, §§ 5049, 5050, a mortgage may be subject of a larceny. Shannon v. Sims [Ala.] 40 So. 574.

Evidences of debt or creation of demand, right, or obligation. Pen. Code, §§ 536, 545. People v. Fletcher, 110 App. Div. 231, 97 N. Y. S. 62. Under Code, § 545, it is not necessary that evidence of debt or demand should bear upon its face an obligation to pay money, and hence load ticket issued by contractor for removal of snow which entitled holder to payment of certain sum was a subject of larceny though it did not specify such sum on its face or recite any promise to pay. Id. In determining the grade of larceny where subject thereof is evidence of debt, amount of money which in any contingency might be collected thereon or there-larceny of particular kinds of property,[80] define property rights the invasion of which will constitute larceny,[81] and define particular kinds of larceny,[82] but whatever the statutory definition of the crime may be, criminal intent is a necessary ingredient;[83] and an unlawful taking without a felonious intent, though a statutory crime, is not larceny where the statute defining the latter offense is merely declaratory of the common law.[84]

§ 3. Indictment and prosecution. A. Indictment.[85]—In the absence of objection, until the close of the evidence, to a trial on several counts as charging a single offense, the court may look to the evidence to determine whether the several counts charge the same offense.[86] Burglary and larceny may be charged in the same count,[87] and a conviction may be had for either offense,[88] and a conviction of either offense alone will be an acquittal of the other,[89] but the fact that the indictment is insufficient on the charge of burglary will not prevent a conviction for larceny.[90]

by is deemed to be the value of the thing stolen. Id. Under statute, railroad tickets may be subject of larceny where they have been stamped or are in such a condition as to authorize transportation. Patrick v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 98 S. W. 840.

Chattels real: Under Revisal 1905, § 3511, relating to larceny of wood or "other kind of property whatsoever," taking of brass railing attached partly to freehold and partly to ice plant engine attached to freehold was larceny, the meaning of the phrase "other kind of property" being extended beyond its usual scope by use of the word "whatsoever." State v. Beck, 141 N. C. 829, 53 S. E. 843.

80. Larceny of domestic animals. Section 561 of the Crimes Act (Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, § 2480). Hurst v. Territory, 16 Okl. 600, 86 P. 230. Pen. Code 1895, art. 867. Hasley v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 530, 94 S. W. 899. Grand larceny without regard to value. Rev. St. 1887, § 7048. State v. Williams [Idaho] 86 P. 53. Word "horse" as used in this statute includes colts. Word "colt" is merely descriptive of age of horse. Id. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 4988, it is felony to steal cattle of value of $5 or over. Long v. State [Wyo.] 88 P. 617. Pen. Code, § 487, subd. 3, making it grand larceny to steal any horse, mare, gelding, etc., uses word "horse" in a generic sense, word "mare" being used merely to make statute more definite. People v. Melandrez [Cal. App.] 88 P. 372.

81. Under Pen. Code 1895, art. 864, it may be larceny for party to take own property from one to whom it has been pawned as security for a debt. Lewis v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 301, 97 S. W. 481.

82. Mere taking of personal property from person of another is not of itself sufficient to constitute larceny from the person since taking may have been without intent to steal or may have been with the actual or implied assent of owner. People v. Stofer [Cal. App.] 86 P. 734. Under Pen. Code 1895, art. 880, subd. 2, theft from the person must be committed without the knowledge of the owner of the property or so suddenly as not to allow time to make resistance before the property is carried away. Roquemore v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 99 S. W. 547. Though owner may be too drunk to make resistance, where property is not taken suddenly and he knows that it is being taken, the offense is not larceny from the person under this statute. Id. Robbery from person in nighttime. State v. Smith, 190 Mo. 706, 90 S. W. 440.

Larceny from house was not committed where a party's only opportunity to steal money was while she had the custody of it in the owner's presence, and while the compartment into which it was to be placed was unlocked. Robinson v. Van Auken, 190 Mass. 161, 76 N. E. 601. But where such circumstances were stated to an officer, question was properly submitted to the jury as to whether the officer, who imprisoned the plaintiff at the defendant's request, had reasonable ground for believing that plaintiff had committed larceny in a building as distinguished from simple larceny. Id. Larceny from dismantled box car, set off the track and used as tool and supply house, was neither larceny from a building nor from a railroad car within Gen. St. 1901, § 2073. 84. Offense under St. 1903, § 1256, of unlawfully, but without criminal intent, taking and carrying away the property of another is not a degree of common-law larceny. Triplett v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 974, 91 S. W. 281. This statute has no application to a case where one unlawfully takes his own property from another who has the legal right to its possession. Id.

90. Where indictment failed to allege ownership of house from which property was stolen, conviction for both burglary and larceny was erroneous but did not necessi-

Under an indictment for robbery a conviction cannot be had for a statutory crime akin to larceny but not larceny or any degree thereof.[91] Where the larceny charged is included in a greater crime proved, a conviction for larceny may be had.[92] Evidence tending to establish the larceny charge does not constitute a variance merely because it also tends to prove another crime.[93]

Special facts upon which the jurisdiction of the grand jury depends must be alleged.[94] Under certain circumstances the venue may be laid in any one of several counties.[95]

The property must be described with such certainty as will advise the defendant of the charge against him and will furnish a bar against a future prosecution.[96] Insufficiency of the description of a part of the property is not fatal where the other part is sufficiently described.[97]

tate a reversal, being correctible by modification of the judgment. State v. James, 194 Mo. 268, 92 S. W. 679.

91. Offense of taking and carrying away property of another without felonious intent, defined by St. 1903, § 1256, is not a degree of common-law larceny, and a conviction therefor cannot be had under an indictment for robbery. Triplett v. Com., 28 Ky. L. R. 974, 91 S. W. 281.

92. Robbery in first degree committed at night includes larceny from person at night as defined by Rev. St. 1899, § 1900. State v. Smith, 190 Mo. 706, 90 S. W. 440. Defendant not thereby deprived of any constitutional right to be apprised of the nature of crime charged against him. Id.

93. Proof of branding of cattle by person in whose possession they were found, being admissible to show intent, does not constitute a variance from a charge of larceny merely because it also tends to prove crime of unlawful branding denounced by Ball. Ann. Codes & St. § 125. State v. Wilson, 42 Wash. 56, 84 P. 409.

94. Under Code Crim. Proc. § 56, the court of special sessions has, except in certain cities, exclusive jurisdiction of all complaints for petit larceny, except where, as provided by section 57, a certificate of the county judge or a justice of the supreme court is filed with the magistrate before whom the charge is pending, recommending an indictment, and an indictment for petit larceny must allege the filing of such certificate. Cleveland v. Cromwell, 110 App. Div. 82, 96 N. Y. S. 475.

95. Under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, arts. 235, 240, and Act 28th Legislature, p. 194, c. 74, defendant may defend an indictment in one county on the ground of a previous indictment in another county. Pearce v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 447, 98 S. W. 861.

96. Indictment for larceny or railroad tickets should allege name of railroad issuing tickets, that it was incorporated, and that tickets had been issued by company, or if they had not been issued such fact should be stated, and whether tickets entitled holder to transportation. Patrick v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 98 S. W. 840. Description of railroad ticket merely as being between certain points and of a certain value was insufficient. Id. Description as "one promissory note of the value of $81.80" was not sufficient. Calentine v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 574, 94 S. W. 1061. A description as two diamond rings of a certain value and one diamond brooch of a certain value was sufficient. Butler v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 146, 93 S. W. 743. Description as certain bank bills, or national bank notes, or United States treasury notes, lawful money of the United States of America or the U. S. A., is sufficient. Hamilton v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 940. Character, kind, or denomination of money need not be alleged. Code Cr. Proc. art. 446. Dalton v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 462, 98 S. W. 855. Coin number, denomination, or kind of money need not be alleged. Crim. Code of Prac. § 135. Todd v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 473, 93 S. W. 631. Description as "one hundred and ten and no-100 dollars in money, then and there current money of the United States, and of the value of one hundred and ten and no-100 dollars," was sufficient. Dalton v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 462, 98 S. W. 855. Description as "twenty-seven dollars in money which passed current as money of the United States of America, of the value of twenty-seven dollars," was sufficient. Brewin v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 534, 92 S. W. 420. Description as "six dollars in money, of the value of six dollars," without alleging whether it was gold, silver or paper money, was not sufficient under Kirby's Dig. § 1844. Cook v. State [Ark.] 97 S. W. 683. Description as "one hundred dollars in money, the same being current money of the United States of the value of one hundred dollars," was sufficient. Butler v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 146, 93 S. W. 743. Description as "nine dollars in money of the value of nine dollars" was not subject to a special demurrer upon the ground that the property alleged to have been stolen was not sufficiently described. Frederick v. State [Ga.] 55 S. E. 1044. Indictment for stealing a horse is sustained by proof of the stealing of a mare where the statute uses the word "horse" in a generic sense. People v. Melandrez [Cal. App.] 88 P. 372. Indictment charging the larceny of a colt is sufficient under a statute relating to the larceny of horses, though the statute does not mention colts. State v. Williams [Idaho] 86 P. 53.

97. Indictment for larceny of money and property, and money not sufficiently describ-

The ownership of the property must be laid either in a natural person or one alleged to be a partnership or a corporation,[98] and in one who had the actual or constructive possession of the property.[99] It may be laid in the actual owner[1] or in one who merely had the lawful possession.[2] Proof of special ownership will sustain an allegation of general ownership,[3] and a general allegation of ownership is sustained by proof of a partial interest.[4] A charge of larceny from the house of a married man is sustained by proof that the property stolen was the separate property of his wife, where the two were living in the same house.[5] An allegation that land from which corn was stolen "belonged to" a certain party does not necessarily refer to the owner in fee but to any person who had the management and control of the property.[6] An indictment for larceny by a bailee[7] may allege the bailment generally.[8] Objections to allegations of ownership cannot be raised by motion for a new trial.[9]

The owner's nonconsent to the taking and appropriation need not be alleged.[10]

The use of the term "feloniously" sufficiently imports a criminal intent.[11] A ed, indictment was good for larceny of the property. Cook v. State [Ark.] 97 S. W. 683.

98. Allegation that property was owned by Southern Railway Company, without alleging whether such company was a natural person, partnership, or corporation, was insufficient. Burrow v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 987.

Partnership: Allegation of ownership by "R. Bros., a mercantile firm composed of C. F. R. and H. R.," sustained by proof that it was owned by the firm of C. F. R., composed of C. F. R. and H. R. Duncan v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 248, 91 S. W. 572.

99. Charge of larceny of money from certain person not sustained by proof that money was obtained from bank by means of such person's check. Commonwealth v. Barrett, 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 112.

1. Where party in custody of property at time of larceny was mere servant of another, ownership or possession may be laid in the latter. Duncan v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 248, 91 S. W. 572. Where property consisted of horses in pasture under a simple contract of pasturage, and owner of pasture had no control over them but owner of horses retained and exercised such control, ownership was properly laid in the latter. Byrd v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 712, 93 S. W. 114.

2. State v. Phillips, 73 S. C. 236, 53 S. E. 870. May be laid in mere custodian. Cain v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 881, 92 S. W. 808.

3. Cook v. State [Ark.] 97 S. W. 683.

4. Where it is alleged in the information that the stolen property is owned by a certain person and the evidence shows that such person only has a half interest therein. State v. Cotterel [Idaho] 86 P. 527. Under Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 445, proof of joint ownership will sustain allegation of ownership by one of the joint owners. Bailey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 304, 97 S. W. 594. Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 445, does not refer solely to a technical joint ownership or possession, but refers to any case where the parties exercise a joint or common possession. Id.; Duncan v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 248, 91 S. W. 572. Fact that one of possessors was mere servant of other does not change rule under this statute. Id. Where stolen cattle belonged to owner of land leased to another and were kept on the land and looked after by both parties, ownership was properly laid in the actual owner. Bailey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 304, 97 S. W. 594.

5. Thomas v. State, 125 Ga. 286, 54 S. E. 182.

6. Allegation that corn was property of A, growing in field belonging to W, was sustained by proof that land belonged to G and was leased by him to W who had sublet it to A, and that A raised the corn. Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 896, 98 S. W. 246.

7. Where defendant procured property as agent of owner, indictment must be under bailment statute. Peters v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 91 S. W. 224.

8. Allegation that property was given to defendant for safe keeping to be returned to the owner was sufficient. Butler v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 146, 93 S. W. 743. Where bailee was a hotel clerk, it was not necessary to allege that he came into possession as such clerk. Id.

9. Question as to whether allegation of agency was mere descriptio personae or was intended to indicate a qualified right in property should have been raised by demurrer or motion to quash. State v. Philips, 73 S. C. 236, 53 S. E. 870.

10. Either at common law or in a prosecution for larceny of domestic animals, under section 561 of the Crimes Act (Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, § 2480). Hurst v. Territory, 16 Okl. 600, 86 P. 280.

11. State v. Allen [Mont.] 87 P. 177. Allegation that defendants "did then and there unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously, by stealth take, steal and carry away, without the consent and against the will of the true owner," certain personal property, "with the unlawful and felonious intent then and there" of the defendants "to deprive the said * * * thereof and to convert the same to their own use and benefit," sufficiently charges felonious intent to convert. Barbe v. Territory, 16 Okl. 562, 85 P. 51.

warrant for petit larceny need not allege that the caption was felonious where the statutory definition of petit larceny does not use the term "felonious" or make the crime a felony.[12]

Value need not be alleged where it is not of the essence of the offense.[13] Where a statute relating to subsequent offenses is not exclusive of the right to prosecute for such offense independently, a conviction may be had as for an independent offense, though the indictment is insufficient under the statute,[14] and though the former conviction be not proved.[15] The jurisdiction of the court in which the former conviction was had need not be alleged where it is such that judicial notice will be taken thereof.[16]

Under statutory provisions, amendments may be allowed to cure variance between allegations and proof as to the description of places, persons, or things, where the defendant will not be prejudiced thereby.[17]

(§ 3) B. Admissibility of evidence.[18]—The general rules of criminal evidence apply,[19] including those governing the admission of evidence of the corpus delicti,[20] intent,[21] ownership of property,[22] value,[23] the defendant's identity,[24] opinions of witnesses,[25] hearsay,[26] res gestae,[27] and credibility.[28]

12. Satterfield v. Com., 105 Va. 867, 52 S. E. 979.

13. Variance as to value or amount of money stolen is immaterial where degree of offense is not affected thereby. Todd v. Com., 29 Ky. L. R. 473, 93 S. W. 631. Rev. St. U. S. §§ 5356, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3688, does not make value an element of offense therein defined. Brown v. U. S. [C. C. A.] 146 F. 975. Value need not be alleged in indictment under Sess. Laws 1895, c. 20, p. 104, art. 1, § 1, relating to larceny of any "stallion, mare, colt, gelding," etc. Howard v. Territory, 15 Okl. 199, 79 P. 773.

14. Indictment for third offense held sufficient as indictment for independent offense, though it alleged that accused was fined for second offense, whereas penalty under Code 1904, § 3907, is not fine but imprisonment. Satterfield v. Com., 105 Va. 867, 52 S. E. 979.

19. Where defense was that property was taken with consent of partner, evidence that charge of larceny was part of scheme of other partner to get rid of copartner was irrelevant. State v. Baird [Vt.] 65 A. 101. Where there was evidence that party from whom defendant claimed to have bought the property sent defendant's purchase-money draft to drawees without indorsement and requested them to deposit its proceeds in bank to his credit, evidence of custom of banks to require indorsement of drafts was irrelevant, and its admission error. Sparks v. Territory of Oklahoma [C. C. A.] 146 F. 371. On prosecution for larceny by bailee, it was error to allow bailor to testify that he would have paid bailee's charges if he had demanded them. Simpson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 87, 96 S. W. 925.

20. Evidence that prosecutor's watch was in pawnshop admissible to establish fact of larceny of watch. State v. Welle [Mont.] 83 P. 476.

21. Fact that stolen cattle had been branded by person in whose possession they were found was evidence of intent. State v. Wilson, 42 Wash. 56, 84 P. 409.

22. On a prosecution for larceny by obtaining money by false representations as to the ownership of land, it was proper to allow witness to testify that he was owner and not defendant nor person represented by defendant as the owner. People v. Langley, 114 App. Div. 427, 100 N. Y. S. 123. On prosecution for larceny by obtaining money by false representations as to the ownership of land, abstract of title admissible. Id. On prosecution for larceny of domestic animals, under section 561 of the Crimes Act (Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, § 2480), evidence of marks and brands is competent to prove ownership, although such marks or brands are not recorded. Hurst v. Territory, 16 Okl. 600, 86 P. 280. Article 4, c. 3, § 101, Wilson's Rev. & Ann. St. 1903, does not make unrecorded brands incompetent as evidence of ownership. Id.

23. Witness who had been in jewelry business four years competent to testify as to material of which watch was composed, and as to its reasonable value. Bernal v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 581, 95 S. W. 118. Witness held qualified to testify as to value of shoes, though he had never bought, sold, or owned any of that particular brand. Moss v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 840. Sufficient where it was shown that witness had been merchant and had some knowledge as to value of goods stolen. Echols v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 298.

(§ 3) C. Effect of possession of stolen property.[29]—In some jurisdictions the recent possession of the stolen property raises a legal presumption of guilt,[30] while in others such possession, though unexplained, raises no such presumption[31] but is merely an incriminating circumstance.[32] It is always a circumstance to be considered,[33] but in all cases its probative force may be rebutted.[34] In Washington, possession of stolen cattle casts upon the possessor the burden of explaining such possession.[35] The concealment of the property is very strong evidence of felonious intent.[36] Under certain circumstances evidence of the possession of other stolen

24. For purpose of identification, any fact connecting defendant with the crime may be proved, such as fact that a few days before he sold stolen property to certain party he had sold other property to such party. State v. Walker, 194 Mo. 253, 92 S. W. 659.

25. Testimony that witness could not have driven a head of cattle the distance defendant drove it without discovering its brand and seeing what it was held inadmissible. Bryan v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 33, 91 S. W. 581. Where defendant claimed that he had borrowed property from certain party, it was proper for him to show relations existing between him and such party, but not what such party would have done in a certain contingency, as that he would have loaned him property, especially where such party denied the loan. Kegans v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 569, 95 S. W. 122. Opinion or belief of witnesses as to the identity of the property is admissible when such opinion or belief rests upon facts within witness' own knowledge, although witness does not testify positively as to such identity. State v. James, 194 Mo. 268, 92 S. W. 679. Opinion or belief of a witness based upon facts within witness' own knowledge is sufficient to carry the case to the jury upon the question of identity. Id.

26. Testimony that owner of property had lost it, was looking for and had regained it from one who had purchased it from defendant, was not inadmissible as being hearsay where it did not appear that witness derived information from owner or otherwise than through his own personal knowledge. Nixon v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 59, 93 S. W. 555.

Harmless error: Hearsay as to fact otherwise proved. Castevens v. State [Ark.] 96 S. W. 150.

Held prejudicial: On prosecution for larceny from the person it was prejudicial error to allow saloonkeeper to testify that when defendant and others were in back room of saloon, the door being slightly open, policeman came in and characterized defendant as crook, whereupon saloonkeeper told him that defendant and others were back in the room and had a watch which they wanted to sell for $3, and that officer did not have courage to go and arrest them. People v. Cahill [Mich.] 110 N. W. 520.

27. Where check was given to defendant by partner as part of latter's partnership contribution, another check for balance given two days later and its stub were admissible as part of res gestae. People v. Hart, 99 N. Y. S. 758. On charge of larceny by obtaining money by false representations, evidence as to what the representations were was admissible. Towns v. State [Ind.] 78 N. E. 1012.

28. Where check alleged to have been stolen was given to defendant by partner as part of contribution to partnership, a second check for balance payable to defendant was admissible as bearing upon drawer's credibility in testifying that he did not know that first check was payable to defendant's individual creditor. People v. Hart, 99 N. Y. S. 758. Drawer of two checks to defendant having testified that at time he gave first check he did not know whether his bank account would warrant giving check for full amount of both checks, other checks drawn by him during period between giving of first and second checks were admissible as bearing upon drawer's credibility. property is admissible,[37] and so also possession by a joint perpetrator of the larceny charged.[38] It may also be shown that the defendant was impecunious before the crime and that he had money thereafter,[39] and the same fact may be shown as to a joint perpetrator.[40] In order to convict of larceny because of the possession of stolen property, it must appear that the possession was recent,[41] but the law does not declare just what period will be considered recent, much depending upon the character of the property and the circumstances of the case.[42]

(§ 3) D. Sufficiency of evidence.[43]—The defendant's connection with the crime may be established by circumstantial evidence.[44] Intent need not be specifically proved but may be inferred from the manner of the taking or acquisition of the property.[45] Where the evidence shows that persons other than the defendant were present and concerned in the offense, it is not necessary to prove that the defendant and no one else committed the crime.[46] Parties who enter a dwelling house and steal therefrom will not be permitted to raise nice and delicate questions as to the ownership of the article stolen.[47] The incorporation of the owner need not be proved by the articles of incorporation but may be proved by reputation.[48] On a prosecution for simple larceny, proof that the thing stolen was of some value is indispensable,[49] and specific value must be proved when it is a material element of the offense.[50] Otherwise, it need not be proved as laid.[51] Except where the nonconsent of the owner is made an affirmative element of the offense,[52] it need not be proved, the consent of the owner being an element of defense.[53] In proving the nonconsent of a corporation it is necessary to prove the nonconsent of only those officers having custody of the goods stolen.[54]

In the notes are collated cases involving the sufficiency of evidence as a whole[55]

56. Proof of corpus delicti held sufficient to take case to jury. Harris v. State, 144 Ala. 61, 40 So. 571.

57. Evidence of witnesses other than accomplices held sufficient. Barbe v. Territory, 16 Okl. 562, 86 P. 61. That stolen cattle had been gathered by others and driven some distance, and defendants met them according to agreement and assisted in mutilating brands and driving cattle across into another state, held sufficient. State v. Morse [Idaho] 86 P. 53.

58. That prosecutor's diamond pin was in his scarf at time defendant had the opportunity to steal it. People v. Flannery [Cal. App.] 84 P. 461.

59. Identification by one witness sufficient to carry case to jury. State v. Connor [Kan.] 87 P. 703.

60. Evidence of criminal intent held sufficient. Thrash v. State [Ark.] 96 S. W. 360. Held sufficient to sustain finding that defendant did not believe the stolen colt was his at the time he took possession of it and branded it as his own. State v. Williams [Idaho] 86 P. 53. Evidence of defendant's intention to take property merely for temporary use held sufficient to go to the jury. Cain v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 881, 92 S. W. 808.

61. Insufficient to show defendant's fraudulent possession. Lowrie v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 787, 98 S. W. 838. Sufficient to sustain finding that defendant received proceeds from agent whom he had employed to get note discounted for the owner. People v. Conlon, 101 N. Y. S. 597.

considered as a whole,[72] especially where the instructions are connected by reference.[73] Instructions need not be given exactly as requested.[74] They must be within the evidence[75] and must not be upon the weight of the evidence.[76] Instructions must conform to the indictment[77] and must not be abstract[78] or argumentative.[79]

Where there is evidence that a witness was an accomplice of the defendant, an instruction as to the testimony of accomplices should be given.[80] Where the case is wholly dependent on circumstantial evidence, the court is required to charge thereon,[81] but where the main fact, that is the taking, is proved by positive testimony and the intent and other elements are proved by circumstantial evidence, no instruction on circumstantial evidence is necessary.[82] Where larceny of several articles is charged, the defendant is not entitled to an instruction for acquittal upon the failure of the evidence to establish one only of the larcenies charged.[83]

An instruction defining larceny[84] need not include kinds of larceny not charged[85] or excluded by the evidence.[86] All the degrees and kinds of larceny covered by

72. Castevens v. State [Ark.] 96 S. W. 150. Where material element of crime omitted from one instruction is specifically given in another. Blair v. Territory, 15 Okl. 549, 82 P. 653. As to recent possession of stolen property. Territory v. Livingston [N. M.] 84 P. 1021. As to alibi in connection with effect of recent possession. State v. Walker, 194 Mo. 253, 92 S. W. 659. As to honesty of defendant's belief as to ownership of property. Johnson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 709, 95 S. W. 1062.

73. Where instruction stated that if defendant broke into a store with intent to steal therein, and subsequent instruction stated that if defendant broke into such store "as defined and explained in preceding instruction," part of first instruction referred to, especially that part charging an "intent to steal," was thereby made part of second instruction. State v. Speritus, 191 Mo. 24, 90 S. W. 459.

74. Sufficient if given in substance. State v. Wells [Mont.] 83 P. 476.

75. Held erroneous as assuming facts not testified to. Hazlett v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 603, 96 S. W. 36. Erroneous in assuming that defendant claimed property when he disclaimed any interest therein. Johnson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 380, 90 S. W. 633. Not error to refuse to charge that defendant is presumed to have a good character where no evidence has been introduced as to his character. People v. Langley, 114 App. Div. 427, 100 N. Y. S. 123.

76. Hazlett v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 603, 96 S. W. 36; Mickey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 321, 91 S. W. 587. Instruction that jury could only consider certain testimony in order to establish identity of transaction, or could use same in developing res gestae and to aid in proving guilt by circumstances connected with offense, was not upon weight of evidence. Byrd v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 712, 93 S. W. 114.

77. Variance between instruction and indictment for larceny from the person, in that instruction included in definition the element of suddenness in taking which element was not included in indictment, was harmless where court limited jury to charge as made in indictment. Brewin v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 534, 92 S. W. 420.

78. Held abstract. Young v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 656.

79. Held argumentative. Young v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 656.

80. Leak v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 476. Charge on law as to accomplices should be broad enough to apply to all persons shown by evidence to have been accomplices. Mickey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 321, 91 S. W. 587.

81. Nixon v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 59, 93 S. W. 555. Where state's case was circumstantial and depended mainly on identification of head of stolen animal, a special instruction on circumstantial evidence in this connection should have bsen given. Bailey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 304, 97 S. W. 694.

82. Nixon v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 59, 93 S. W. 555. Where defendant admitted taking of property. Welch v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 522, 95 S. W. 1035. Only when conviction sought upon circumstantial evidence alone that charge or circumstantial evidence is required. State v. Foster [N. D.] 105 N. W. 933.

83. Where defendant was charged with larceny of two hogs, an instruction for acquittal on reasonable doubt as to ownership of either of the hogs was improper. Glover v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 354. Where larceny of a pocketbook and money was charged, instruction for acquittal if evidence failed to show larceny of money was properly refused. Harris v. State, 144 Ala. 61, 40 So. 571.

84. Instruction purporting to define larceny, but falling short of statutory definition, is erroneous. Miller v. Territory of Oklahoma [C. C. A.] 149 F. 330.

85. People v. Roberts, 1 Cal. App. 447, 82 P. 624.

86. Held not error under evidence to fail to charge with reference to statutes making the indictment and the evidence should be charged upon,[87] but not those not so covered.[88] Where a statute defining larceny makes no mention of a criminal intent, such intent must be imported into the statutory definition by the court in applying such definition to a particular case.[89]

All proper issues raised by the evidence must be submitted,[90] and so also all defenses as to which there is evidence.[91]

In the notes are collated cases involving instructions and refusals to instruct in regard to particular matters, such as description of property,[92] its ownership[93] and the nonconsent of the owner,[94] the defendant's intent,[95] his flight,[96] his recent possession of the property[97] and his explanation of such possession.[98]

it penal offense to drive or remove live stock from its accustomed range, evidence showing that defendant was either guilty of theft or that he borrowed property for temporary use from third party. Kegans v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 569, 95 S. W. 122.

87. Evidence on prosecution for grand larceny held such as to require instruction on petit larceny. People v. Stofer [Cal. App.] 86 P. 734. In such case grand larceny also should be defined. Id. Evidence held such as to require definition of larceny from person. Id. Request for instruction that stealing of money less than $50 would not constitute grand larceny unless it was taken from person of another, and that there were two degrees of larceny, and that, although guilty of stealing money, jury must determine whether crime was grand or petit larceny, was a sufficient request for an instruction as to larceny from the person. Id.

88. On prosecution for theft by bailee, it was improper but not reversible error to give definition of theft in general. Harding v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 422, 95 S. W. 528. Where offense is larceny after trust without element of simple larceny, it is error to instruct upon simple larceny. Barron v. State, 126 Ga. 92, 54 S. E. 812. Where no evidence of larceny by trick or device, it was error to instruct in regard thereto. People v. Roberts, 1 Cal. App. 447, 82 P. 624.

89. Mere casual use of word "felonious" in one paragraph of charge held insufficient to import into formal definition of crime theretofore given the necessary modification to make it correct statement of law. State v. Allen [Mont.] 87 P. 177.

90. Where there was evidence tending to show that defendant may have been a receiver of the property instead of the thief, it was error to refuse to submit issue thus raised. Mickey v. State [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 321, 91 S. W. 537. On prosecution for larceny of check given defendant by partner, it was error to refuse to instruct as to what would constitute a partnership. People v. Hart, 99 N. Y. S. 758.

91. Simpson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 87, 96 S. W. 925; Cain v. State [Tex. Civ. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 881, 92 S. W. 808. Where party when accused of crime denied it and did not produce property until after his arrest, he was not entitled to a charge on the voluntary return of stolen property. Dalton v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 462, 98 S. W. 855. Held not error under evidence to refuse to submit defense of temporary appropriation. Kegans v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 569, 95 S. W. 122. Evidence held such that instruction as to mistake as to ownership should have been given. Hazlett v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 603, 96 S. W. 36. Charge for acquittal if defendant took property with fair color of title and believing it to be his own held sufficient presentation of defense that property was owned by defendant and was being wrongfully withheld by pawnee, there being no evidence that taking was as claimed by defendant or that pawnee had refused defendant's tender. Lewis v. State [Tex. Civ. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 301, 97 S. W. 481. Charge held correct in abstract but insufficient in failing to specify that intention subsequently formed to appropriate the property would not sustain conviction. Leak v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 97 S. W. 476.

92. Instruction that defendant cannot be convicted unless property stolen be shown to have been of kind described in indictment should be given. Hamilton v. State [Ala.] 41 So. 940.

93. Instruction held proper and correct as to effect of variance in that general ownership was charged and partial intent proved. State v. Cotterel [Idaho] 86 P. 527.

94. Upon issue as to larceny of particular goods from corporation, instruction that prosecution must prove nonconsent of all officers authorized to sell "goods" was too broad and was properly refused. Beuchert v. State, 165 Ind. 523, 76 N. E. 111. Instruction that it was larceny if defendant took and carried away property with intent to "permanently deprive the owner thereof without his consent" sufficiently charges necessity of lack of owner's consent to taking. State v. Spertus, 191 Mo. 24, 90 S. W. 459. Held too restrictive on question of consent of owner to taking. McMahan v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 699, 96 S. W. 17.

95. Where question of defendant's intent in using check, draft, or order was in issue, defendant's conduct toward party from whom money or property was obtained both prior and subsequent to transaction must be considered in determining his good faith. People v. Lipp, 111 App. Div. 504, 98 N. Y. S. 86.

96. Instruction that fact, if it be a fact, that defendant left place where larceny was committed soon after it was committed is only a circumstance to be considered along with all other evidence of guilt, and that defendant is entitled to have jury consider fact, if it be a fact, that return to such place before his arrest was circumstance tending to show his innocence was properly

(§ 3) F. Trial, sentence, and review.[99]—A finding of guilty necessarily implies a finding of all the elements of the crime charged,[1] but a verdict of guilty of larceny will not sustain a conviction for larceny from the person.[2] Where different offenses of the same grade are charged in several counts, a general verdict of guilty will be sufficient if the verdict indicates which offense defendant is found guilty of,[3] and such a verdict will operate as an acquittal of the other offense,[4] but where the particular offense is not thus indicated, the effect of a general verdict is a conviction of both offenses[5] and the court may impose separate sentences as prescribed by law for each of the two offenses,[6] or the conviction may be treated as being for the highest crime charged and the penalty appropriate therefor may be im-refused as being not only abstract but argumentative. Young v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 656.

97. Instruction as to presumption, if explanation of possession of recently stolen goods was found to be false, approved. Green v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 90 S. W. 1114. In determining propriety of instruction as to recent possession, court not confined to mere fact that defendant had possession of only part of property, but any other circumstances may be taken into consideration which tend to show unlawful possession and that defendant wrongfully obtained goods. State v. James, 194 Mo. 268, 92 S. W. 679. Evidence held such as to authorize instruction on recent possession. Id. Evidence held such as to require instruction as to effect of recent possession. Bailey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 304, 97 S. W. 694. An instruction that recent possession raises presumption that defendant either stole property or received it, knowing it to be stolen, was properly refused, since such possession raises no presumption as to knowledge of receiver of goods as to whether they were stolen. State v. Speritus, 191 Mo. 24, 90 S. W. 459. Instruction as to effect of recent possession held erroneous in that it did not submit evidence of defendant's good character. State v. Wright [Mo.] 97 S. W. 874. Instruction merely giving defendant benefit of good character as in ordinary cases was insufficient. Id.

98. Sufficiency of instruction: Held sufficient. Ramon v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 468, 98 S. W. 872; Williams v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 396, 98 S. W. 246. Instruction to effect that if jury found beyond reasonable doubt that defendant's explanation of how he came by property is false they must convict is erroneous. Bernal v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 581, 95 S. W. 118. For proper charge on subject of explanation, see Wheeler v. State, 34 Tex. Cr. App. 350, 30 S. W. 913, the charge in such case being approved in Bernal v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 581, 95 S. W. 118.

Propriety of instruction: Evidence held such as to require instruction as to defendant's explanation. Bailey v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 304, 97 S. W. 694; Johnson v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 14 Tex. Ct. Rep. 380, 90 S. W. 633. Refusal not error where defendant gave no explanation. State v. McClain, 130 Iowa, 73, 106 N. W. 376. Where on prosecution for larceny of horse there was no evidence of the larceny of bridle found in defendant's possession, there was no error in refusing to charge with reference to explanation as to possession of bridle. Hammock v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 15 Tex. Ct. Rep. 906, 93 S. W. 549.

99. See 6 C. L. 413.

1. Animus furandi. Grant v. State, 125 Ga. 281, 54 S. E. 182. On prosecution for third offense of petit larceny, punishment for which was confinement in the penitentiary for not less than one or more than two years, verdict of guilty as charged in the indictment, and fixing punishment at confinement in penitentiary for one year, necessarily implies finding that defendant had been twice before convicted for same offense. Satterfield v. Com., 105 Va. 867, 52 S. E. 979.

2. Verdict containing no finding of larceny from person or of value of property taken was insufficient to sustain a conviction of larceny from person. Koch v. State, 126 Wis. 470, 106 N. W. 531. Verdict that finding defendant guilty of larceny from person in nighttime, as charged in information, and fixing term of imprisonment, was in proper form on charge for the offense defined by Rev. St. 1899, § 1900. State v. Smith, 190 Mo. 706, 90 S. W. 440.

3. Verdict on indictment charging burglary and grand larceny held sufficient to sustain judgment of conviction for grand larceny. Perry v. People [Colo.] 87 P. 796. On indictment for larceny and for receiving stolen property, general verdict of guilty as charged in the indictment, coupled with finding of value of property, is sufficient to sustain judgment of conviction for larceny where case was tried entirely as involving larceny only, and verdict is in form a proper verdict on the charge of larceny and not in form on charge of receiving stolen property. Long v. State [Wyo.] 88 P. 617.

4. Verdict of guilty of larceny on an indictment for burglary and larceny is an acquittal on the charge of burglary. State v. James County, 117 La. 419, 41 So. 702. Conviction on count charging larceny of money will or will not constitute an acquittal on a count charging larceny of draft, according to whether both counts do or do not charge the same offense. People v. Peck [Mich.] 110 N. W. 495. See ante, § 8A, Indictment.

5. Grand larceny and receiving stolen goods. Washington v. State [Fla.] 40 So. 765.

posed.[7] Where the offense charged does not embrace any other degree, no finding as to degree is necessary;[8] nor is it usually necessary to make any finding as to value.[9]

The jury is sometimes given more or less discretion as to the punishment to be imposed.[10] Additional punishment is sometimes imposed for subsequent offenses.[11] On the other hand, provision is sometimes made for a lighter punishment where the property is voluntarily returned.[12]

On appellate review the general rules apply as to saving questions for review.[13] A judgment will not be reversed on the ground of excessive punishment where the punishment assessed by the jury is within the limits prescribed by law and there is no showing of passion or prejudice.[14]

B. Pleading (723). Bills of Particulars (725).
C. Evidence (725).
D. Trial (728).
§ 6. Criminal Libel and Slander (731). The Prosecution (732).
§ 7. Jactitation or Slander of Title (733).

§ 1. Definition and distinctions, nature of tort, and persons liable or damnifiable.[15]—One who procures another to publish a libel is answerable as though he published it himself.[16] Any words which directly or indirectly charge a person[17]

6, 7. Washington v. State [Fla.] 40 So. 765.

8. Where larceny of steer was charged and verdict was guilty as charged in indictment. Maxwell v. Territory [Ariz.] 85 P. 116. Statute providing that where a crime is distinguished into degrees the jury must find the degree of which defendant is guilty has no application to such a case. Id., distinguishing McLane v. Territory [Ariz.] 71 P. 938.

9. Verdict of guilty as charged in the indictment includes finding of value as charged. State v. James County, 117 La. 419, 41 So. 702. Finding that certain property was stolen and that its value was certain amount will be construed as a finding that value of property was such amount at time it was stolen. Long v. State [Wyo.] 88 P. 617.

10. Rev. St. 1899, § 1900, relating to larceny from the person in the nighttime. State v. Smith, 190 Mo. 706, 90 S. W. 440. Crim. Code, § 5050, providing that the jury may return a general verdict of guilty of petit larceny, leaving to the court the imposition of punishment by imprisonment or by hard labor, or they may in their discretion impose a fine not exceeding $500, the discretion of the jury relates only to the matter of superadding a money fine, and they had no authority to fix the time of imprisonment or of hard labor. Moss v. State [Ala.] 39 So. 830.

11. Redress afforded by Code 1904, § 3907, relating to subsequent offenses of petit larceny, is not exclusive and leaves unimpaired the authority of the commonwealth to prosecute an offender independently for successive offenses of petit larceny. Satterfield v. Com., 105 Va. 867, 52 S. E. 979.

12. See 6 C. L. 413. Not a voluntary return where party denied the crime when accused of it, refused to take advantage of an invitation to return property, and did not produce it until after his arrest. Dalton v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 17 Tex. Ct. Rep. 462, 98 S. W. 855.

13. See Indictment and Prosecution, 8 C. L. 249.

14. Five years in penitentiary held not excessive punishment for larceny from the person in the nighttime, as defined by Rev. St. 1899, § 1900. State v. Smith, 190 Mo. 706, 90 S. W. 440.

15. See 6 C. L. 414.

16. Noyes v. Thorpe, 73 N. H. 481, 62 A. 787.

17. Where plaintiff is merely mentioned in a publication in which others are charged with disreputable practices and police repute, but no other association of the plaintiff with them, nor other implication of similarity in practices and police repute than with crime, or which tend to injure his reputation in any other way, or to expose him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule, are defamatory.[18] The action of libel is not based on neglect of duty but is for a positive tort.[19] A corporation is liable in damages for the publication of a defamation[20] and may likewise maintain an action for defamation,[21] but it has been held that it cannot recover for injury to its reputation[22] nor for imputations affecting particular members.[23] Official connection with a newspaper corporation does not of itself render either the president[24] or editor in chief[25] responsible for a defamatory publication in the paper. A parent cannot recover in an individual capacity for defamation of a minor child.[26] Mental incapacity to publish a defamation is a defense unless there is a ratification.[27]

§ 2. Elements of tort. A. Actionable words.[28]—Words actionable per se without proof of special damage[29] include words imputing crime[30] or want of chas-

what may be found from having been spoken of in the course of the article, the publication is not rendered libelous per se as to plaintiff. Reporters' Ass'n of America v. Sun Printing & Pub. Ass'n [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 710. When a publication has no intelligent application or reference to the plaintiff in a defamatory sense, and the language, fairly construed, is incapable of such construction, an action for libel based thereon cannot be maintained. Lanston Monotype Mach. Co. v. Mergenthaler Linotype Co., 147 F. 871.

18. Richardson v. Thorpe, 73 N. H. 532, 63 A. 580. Other definitions. Goldsborough v. Orem, 103 Md. 671, 64 A. 36. Civ. Code 1895, § 3832. Witham v. Atlanta Journal, 124 Ga. 688, 53 S. E. 105; Chambers v. Leiser [Wash.] 86 P. 627; Kenworthy v. Journal Co., 117 Mo. App. 327, 93 S. W. 882.

19. Hence, one guiltless of complicity in it cannot be held responsible therefor because of mere official connection with the instrumentality of publication, as an editor in chief of a newspaper. Folwell v. Miller [C. C. A.] 145 F. 495.

20. Pennsylvania Iron Works Co. v. Voght Mach. Co., 29 Ky. L. R. 861, 96 S. W. 551. A corporation is responsible for libel published with the sanction of its manager in a matter concerning the business of the company. Pattison v. Gulf Bag Co., 116 La. 963, 41 So. 224. The failure of a corporation to disapprove or repudiate a libel published by its agent, after obtaining knowledge of its publication, is a ratification thereof. Pennsylvania Iron Works Co. v. Voght Mach. Co., 29 Ky. L. R. 861, 96 S. W. 551. Corporation held liable for act of agent in publishing libel. Id. The fact that a corporation did not authorize its agent to incorporate a libel in a communication written by him without its knowledge or consent does not exonerate it from liability for a wrong perpetrated by the agent in an effort to obtain business for it. Id.

21. Pennsylvania Iron Works Co. v. Voght Mach. Co., 29 Ky. L. R. 861, 96 S. W. 551. A corporation may recover for pecuniary loss as a result of a libelous publication the same as an individual in a like situation. Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. McClure Co., 146 F. 623. When a defamatory publication assails the management or credit of a corporation and inflicts injury on its business or property, it may maintain an action therefor. Reporters' Ass'n of America v. Sun Printing & Pub. Ass'n [N. Y.] 79 N. E. 710. For criminal libel of corporation see post, § 6.

22. In determining whether a publication respecting a corporation is libelous per se, it is necessary to consider that the injury to be redressed must be one to its property or business resulting in pecuniary loss, since it has no reputation in a personal sense. Memphis Tel. Co. v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 904.

23. An imputation that certain members of a corporation have been guilty of acts which would injuriously affect their standing in society, or render them liable to criminal prosecution, does not constitute a defamation of the corporation itself. Memphis Tel. Co. v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 904.

24. The president of a newspaper corporation who is also its principal stockholder is not liable merely as such for the publication of a defamatory article therein. Folwell v. Miller [C. C. A.] 145 F. 495.

25. When it affirmatively appears that an editor in chief of a newspaper published by a corporation was not on duty during any part of the time between the reception of libelous matter and its publication in the paper, and could have had no actual part in composing or publishing it, he is not liable for the publication. Folwell v. Miller [C. C. A.] 145 F. 495.

26. Pattison v. Gulf Bag Co., 116 La. 963, 41 So. 224.

27. Proctor v. Pointer [Ga.] 56 S. E. 111. Averments in a plea filed after bringing an action cannot ratify a defamation for which defendant was not responsible because of defendant's mental disability at the time the publication was made. Id.

28. See 6 C. L. 414.

29. When language is used concerning a person or his affairs which from its nature necessarily must, or presumably will, as its natural and proximate consequence, occasion him pecuniary loss, its publication is actionable per se. Nichols v. Daily Reporter Co. [Utah] 83 P. 573. To constitute language libelous per se it must be either such as necessarily in fact or by presumption of evidence occasions damage to him of whom or whose affairs it is spoken. Memphis Tel. Co. v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 904.

30. Held actionable per se: When blackmailing is made a criminal offense by statute, charging a person with being a black-tity,[31] or exposing one to scorn, ridicule, contempt,[32] or injuring one in his busimailer is actionable per se. Sheibley v. Nelson [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1034. Charging criminal neglect of one's wife. Gendron v. St. Pierre, 73 N. H. 419, 62 A. 966. Charging the commission of a crime and imputing wrongdoing in the plaintiff's trade calculated to injuriously affect the commercial relations of the plaintiff. Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. McClure Co., 146 F. 623. Charging one with perjury. Smith v. Hubbell, 142 Mich. 637, 12 Det. Leg. N. 360, 106 N. W. 547. Endeavoring by fraudulent means to obtain from treasury of village for which plaintiff was attorney a sum of money for which village was not responsible. Id. The words "Grafters foiled" in the headlines of an alleged defamatory article held to imply reprehensible conduct, if not a crime, on the part of plaintiff. Craig v. Warren [Minn.] 109 N. W. 231. Charging one's own agent in a report to a surety on the bond of such agent with a shortage in his account in a given sum. Sunley v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 463. Charging burglary and larceny. Rose v. Imperial Engine Co., 110 App. Div. 437, 96 N. Y. S. 808. A publication which in effect charges plaintiff with blackmail is actionable per se. Town Topics Pub. Co. v. Collier, 99 N. Y. S. 575. "He stole my hoe." Abraham v. Baldwin [Fla.] 42 So. 591. "You stole my cabbage." Lee v. Crump [Ala.] 40 So. 609. Charge that there were criminal cases pending against plaintiff growing out of his connection with a bank named. Witham v. Atlanta Journal, 124 Ga. 688, 53 S. E. 105. Imputation of pecuniary interest in contracts awarded by plaintiff as school director held libelous per se under B. & C. Comp. §§ 3389, 3391, making such transaction a misdemeanor. Woolley v. Plaindealer Pub. Co., 47 Or. 619, 84 P. 473. A statute making criminal the offense of fraudulently converting property held in a trust relation, without the consent of the owner, makes a charge by an employer of his employee dishonestly taking goods from the store wherein the employee was a clerk actionable per se, even if it is not actionable in the absence of such statute. Shipp v. Patton, 29 Ky. L. R. 480, 93 S. W. 1033. Charging a person with being the proprietor of a gambling house (Washington Post Co. v. Wells, 27 App. D. C. 495), or of a building used for the purpose of gambling and for disorderly purposes (Id.). Charging plaintiff with whipping her mother held slanderous per se under Rev. St. 1898, § 4388, making the crime charged punishable by imprisonment in the county jail. Earley v. Winn [Wis.] 109 N. W. 633. See, also, post, § 6.

Held not actionable per se: A publication concerning the trustees of a hospital that "Of course Mr. Kenedy had to make his statement from the books as they appear; but it occurs to me that the proper entries were not made in the books as to certain items, or were omitted to be made, so that the books do not present proper data from which to make a proper comparative statement," held not libelous of the plaintiff, one of the trustees. Phythian v. Raison, 29 Ky. L. R. 293, 92 S. W. 591. "Why don't you take that damned crape off your hat. You didn't think anything of your brother. You are a robber. You robbed widows and would steal the gold from a dead man's teeth." Flaacke v. Stratford, 72 N. J. Law, 487, 64 A. 146. "Robbing the taxpayers." Dow v. Long, 190 Mass. 138, 76 N. E. 667. Charging plaintiff with exacting a commission or fee on the wages of persons employed for his employer. Russell v. Barron, 111 App. Div. 382, 97 N. Y. S. 1061. Where neither the name nor the nature of the society referred to nor the relation of the parties thereto was disclosed, charging plaintiff and his son with having paid arrears for the purpose of cheating the society, does not impute crime so as to render the words actionable per se. Casale v. Calderone, 49 Misc. 555, 97 N. Y. S. 1102. A newspaper publication purporting to be a San Francisco, Cal., telegram, that plaintiff's brother had arrived from New York and announced in court that he was prepared to see that his brother returned to New York and that the judge thereupon ordered him [using plaintiff's surname] released. Rees v. New York Herald Co., 112 App. Div. 456, 98 N. Y. S. 548. To publish that one was wrongfully put in jail. Hughes v. New York Evening Post, 100 N. Y. S. 982.

31. Actionable per se: Charging a young woman with having a record well known to the police is actionable per se. Harriman v. New Nonpareil Co. [Iowa] 110 N. W. 33. To charge a woman with being a lewd character, using her body for commercial purposes, and with keeping a gambling room, is actionable per se. Battles v. Tyson [Neb.] 110 N. W. 299. Defamatory utterance concerning a woman's chastity held actionable per se under Acts 1838, c. 114, and Acts 1888, p. 723, c. 444. Cairnes v. Pelton, 103 Md. 40, 63 A. 105.

Not actionable per se: No fault, impropriety, or bad reputation is charged by saying, even of a young woman, that she has had an eventful life. Harriman v. New Nonpareil Co. [Iowa] 110 N. W. 33. "What right have you to his [a certain man's] key or papers? You are not his wife," and "You could not be his wife as your husband [naming another man] is still living." Maerlender v. Porter, 99 N. Y. S. 533. See, also, post, § 6.

32. Actionable per se: Publication that a person is a suicide fiend, had attempted suicide 25 times before succeeding, and would usually go to the hospital and ask to be pumped out. Wandt v. Hearst's Chicago American [Wis.] 109 N. W. 70. A publication charging a notary public with inducing a person to libel another in an affidavit procured by such notary. Sheibley v. Ashton, 130 Iowa, 195, 106 N. W. 618. A publication charging one with originating and circulating false and malicious reports attacking the character of another. Sheibley v. Huse [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1028. Charging plaintiff with false statements and malicious motives and unscrupulous attempts to injure defendant's business, and with bad faith, fraud, and deceit. Burr's Damascus Tool Works v. Peninsular Tool Mfg. Co., 142 Mich. 417, 12 Det. Leg. N. 754, 105 N. W. 858. To say of church vestrymen that they had turned their ness or occupation.[33] Hence it is not essential to libel that participation in criminal misconduct be imputed.[34] Circumstances may render words of praise actionable,[35] and defamatory words are none the less actionable because commingled with matter of a complimentary nature.[36] The language of an alleged defamation must back on moral and legal obligation in the matter of choosing a rector. Goldsborough v. Orem, 103 Md. 671, 64 A. 36. Statement as to discrepancies in books kept by trustees of hospital held not libelous of particular trustee. Phythian v. Raison, 29 Ky. L. R. 293, 92 S. W. 591. Charging one employed as janitress with having as such obtained possession of her employer's property, refused to perform the duties, barricaded the rooms so that her employer could not get access to them, shut off the gas and water from the rest of the building, and using the landlord's coal to supply herself with hot water against the landlord's wishes. Flaherty v. New York Times Co., 109 App. Div. 489, 96 N. Y. S. 381. Statement that plaintiff allowed her picture to be taken and used as an advertisement when it was repulsive to look at. Hart v. Woodbury Dermatological Institute, 113 App. Div. 281, 98 N. Y. S. 1000. Unauthorized testimonial of a dermatological institute representing plaintiff as having been partially relieved of the markings of smallpox. Id. Portions of letter from stockholder to fellow stockholder concerning another stockholder and officer of the company making accusations of attempts to wreck the company and putting land of no value into the company. Chambers v. Leiser [Wash.] 86 P. 627. Charging plaintiff as employee in a college laundry with swinging out of a window in her night robe, having cursed the boss like a sailor, thrown a cup of hot tea in the face of another employee, with being the favorite of the boss and thereby relieved of labor and awarded better fare than the rest. Washington Times Co. v. Downey, 26 App. D. C. 258. Charging, inter alia, that plaintiff was dishonest and acted fraudulently in his business transactions immediately prior to his adjudication in bankruptcy. Richardson v. Thorpe, 73 N. H. 532, 63 A. 580.

Not actionable per se: Publication of the story of a practical joke, which leaves unimpaired the repute and affairs of the butt of the pleasantry. Story of wager that plaintiff had a black hand tatooed on his back decided against plaintiff because of the joker using burnt cork and slapping his own hand on plaintiff's back and leaving the imprint. Lamberti v. Sun Printing & Pub. Ass'n, 111 App. Div. 437, 97 N. Y. S. 694. To write and publish of one not a trader or merchant and not of or concerning his business or affairs that he is indebted to the publisher, and, though able to pay, has neglected or refused to do so. Nichols v. Daily Reporter Co. [Utah] 83 P. 573. A publication merely charging that the vestrymen of a church promised not to call a certain person as rector unless it was satisfactory to the congregation and that because of the promise no effort was made to change the vestry is not libelous of a vestryman. Goldsborough v. Orem, 103 Md. 671, 64 A. 36.

33. Actionable per se: Attempting to loot treasury of village for which plaintiff was attorney. Smith v. Hubbell, 142 Mich. 637, 12 Det. Leg. N. 860, 106 N. W. 547. Using position as village attorney for the purpose of exacting illegal fees from the village. Id. Charging a village attorney with being a pettifogger. Id. Charging plaintiff as village attorney with having misled village council by means of dishonest advice. Id. Incompetency as village attorney. Id. An imputation of plaintiff's dishonesty and unfaithfulness to his employer is actionable per se. Sunley v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 463. A newspaper publication charging a graduate of reputable educational and theological institutions, and student of medical subjects, who had served the government as clerk under the title "Specialist in Education as a Preventive of Pauperism and Crime," with being a humbug and pseudo-scientist. McDonald v. Sun Printing & Pub. Ass'n, 111 App. Div. 465, 98 N. Y. S. 116. Charging that a factory girl was discharged, not for the violation of the rules but for a reason that the manager of the factory preferred not to disclose, such that she could not be retained in the factory. Pattison v. Gulf Bag Co., 116 La. 963, 41 So. 224. Letter written by rival of plaintiff in the ice machine business that plaintiff was a second-hand dealer, that it put in a class of inferior work, that it was a scab establishment, and that it did not have a mechanic in its establishment. Pennsylvania Iron Works Co. v. Voght Mach. Co., 29 Ky. L. R. 861, 96 S. W. 551.

Held not actionable per se: "He is not worth a dollar and everything is in his wife's name." Dallavo v. Snider, 143 Mich. 542, 13 Det. Leg. N. 69, 107 N. W. 271. Charging plaintiff with exacting a commission or fee on the wages of persons employed for his employer. Russell v. Barron, 111 App. Div. 382, 97 N. Y. S. 1061. A publication merely asserting that defendant is co-owner and translator of a book offered for sale by plaintiff and for that reason the defendant objects to plaintiff offering the book under his own name or soliciting subscriptions in that manner. Jockin v. Brassler, 99 N. Y. S. 586.

34. Shelbley v. Huse [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1028. "Robbing the taxpayers" held to be in fact capable of carrying defamation, though not importing any crime. Dow v. Long, 190 Mass. 138, 76 N. E. 667. An imputation that plaintiff was such a man that, from his standpoint, one who would unlawfully and improperly spend the public money was his ideal as a public official and that plaintiff supported a particular candidate because he was such a man is libelous. Id.

35. Martin v. The Picayune, 115 La. 979, 40 So. 376. See 19 Harv. L. R. 539. Publication detailing in newspaper cure of difficult case by physician opposed to advertising and member of society so opposed held actionable. Martin v. The Picayune, 115 La. 979, 40 So. 376. See 19 Harv. L. R. 527.

36. Hart v. Woodbury Dermatological Institute, 113 App. Div. 281, 98 N. Y. S. 1000.

be construed as used in its ordinary meaning according to the scope and object of the whole article.[37] Hence the head lines or title of an alleged libelous article must be construed as a part thereof.[38] It is a rule of construction that in an alleged defamatory publication the words will be given their natural and ordinary signification,[39] not necessarily what the defendant intended to express but what would be naturally understood.[40] Generic defamation or that which is predicated of a class containing a large and indefinite number of persons is not actionable by particular members of the group,[41] but defamation of a class of ascertainable persons is ordinarily actionable by particular members of the class who by proper allegations connect themselves therewith.[42] Defamatory language is not actionable when it is merely in disparagement of one's property or the quality of the articles which he manufactures or sells,[43] but when it occasions special damage the rule is otherwise.[44] By statute in some states the common-law rule that no verbal defamation, no matter how vile, affecting the chastity of a female, whether married or unmarried, would constitute slander per se has been changed.[45] Statutes making all classes of libel misdemeanors and defining libel as at common law do not make publications libelous other than as at common law.[46] False matter is none the less actionable because appearing in the same publication with truthful statements.[47] The fact that actual damage has followed from the publication is immaterial in arriving at the true construction of an alleged defamation.[48] It is held in Wisconsin that fine or imprisonment in the county jail constitutes infamous punishment within the rule that a false charge which will subject the party charged to indictment for a crime involving moral turpitude or subject him to an infamous punishment is slanderous per se.[49] Repetitions of defamatory matter are in themselves actionable,[50] and damages caused thereby are not

37. Hughes v. New York Evening Post Co., 100 N. Y. S. 982. "The whole of a libelous article must be submitted to the jury when any part of it is to be construed by the jury. Berger v. Freeman Tribune Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 784.

38. Berger v. Freeman Tribune Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 784; Sheibley v. Nelson [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1034; Craig v. Warren [Minn.] 109 N. W. 231.

39. Sheibley v. Ashton, 130 Iowa, 195, 106 N. W. 618. The words of an alleged libelous article are to be construed as they would naturally and ordinarily be interpreted by the general reader. Dow v. Long, 190 Mass. 138, 76 N. E. 667.

40. Sheibley v. Ashton, 130 Iowa, 195, 106 N. W. 618; Flaacke v. Stratford, 72 N. J. Law, 487, 64 A. 146; Goldsborough v. Orem, 103 Md. 671, 64 A. 36.

41. A publication referring to trading stamp concerns generally in a defamatory manner is not actionable by particular concerns or individual trading stamp dealers. Watson v. Detroit Journal Co., 143 Mich. 430, 13 Det. Leg. N. 26, 107 N. W. 81.

42. Publication charging graft on the part of coroner's physicians of whom there were four held actionable by one of the four. Weston v. Commercial Advertiser Ass'n, 184 N. Y. 479, 77 N. E. 660. Where a publication is defamatory in character, a petition basing a cause of action thereon which alleges by way of innuendo that the plaintiff was the person defamed, other proper averments being made, is not demurrable though the publication applies equally well to more than one person. Kenworthy v. Journal Co., 117 Mo. App. 327, 93 S. W. 882. Whether a statement that functionaries turned "their back on moral and legal obligations" was written of them as individuals or of the body in which they were members, held for the jury. Goldsborough v. Orem, 103 Md. 671, 64 A. 36.

43. Language of letter held merely in disparagement of the quality of plaintiff's safes and therefore not actionable in the absence of special damage. Victor Safe & Lock Co. v. Deright [C. C. A.] 147 F. 211.

44. To knowingly cause a notice of mechanic's lien to be filed against plaintiff's property on a fictitious claim, thereby causing delay of the work on a building in process of construction resulting in loss of rent, is actionable. Ghiglione v. Friedman, 100 N. Y. S. 1024. See, also, post, § 7.

45. Acts 1838, c. 114, and Acts 1888, p. 723, c. 444. Cairnes v. Pelton, 103 Md. 40, 63 A. 105. See, also, post, § 6.

46. Rev. St. 1899, §§ 635, 2259, 2260, construed. Kenworthy v. Journal Co., 117 Mo. App. 327, 93 S. W. 882.

47. Meriwether v. Publishers: George Knapp & Co., 120 Mo. App. 354, 97 S. W. 257.

48. Nicknames "Blackhand" and "Blackhand Kidnapper" resulting from playing practical joke on plaintiff, which was told in the publication, held immaterial in construing publication. Lamberti v. Sun Printing & Pub. Ass'n, 111 App. Div. 437, 97 N. Y. S. 694.

49. Earley v. Winn [Wis.] 109 N. W. 633.

50. German Sav. Bank v. Fritz [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1008. That a libel was copied from another's publication is no defense in an acchargeable to one who made the statements to persons guilty of the repetition.[51] The publication of one's picture may be actionable by the use of it in connection with defamatory matter referring to another.[52] A publication is none the less defamatory because put in the form of a question[53] or opinion[54] or is indirect.[55]

(§ 2) B. Publication[56] is essential and consists in making known a defamatory statement to any person other than the object thereof,[57] but the author is not responsible in damages for a publication by the plaintiff himself.[58]

(§ 2) C. Malice[59] is said to be essential but is presumed from the publication of defamatory matter.[60] Express malice may be shown in the publication of a defamation actionable per se to enhance the damages.[61] Reiteration of a defamatory statement is evidence of malice,[62] as is also the refusal of a demand for retraction,[63] and it may be inferred from the fact alone that a slanderous utterance was false and known by the publisher to be false.[64] An ulterior motive of professional jealousy may be sufficient to show malice.[65] When defamatory words are false and used by the publisher because of anger and ill will towards the injured person, malice is express as well as implied.[66] Where a slanderous publication affecting a married woman was not made publicly nor at all except in answer to questions by her husband, and the answers disclosed no hatred or ill will, malice is not shown.[67] The existence of malice is a conclusion which may be drawn from the face of the alleged libel itself and from the facts and circumstances which surround and characterize it.[68] Where in the absence of the master his servants without authority from him publish libelous matter which is not ratified by him, he cannot be charged with malice in the publication.[69] It is held in Washington that in determining the amount of damages for defamation the question of malice is of no moment.[70] Proof of pub-

55. It is immaterial whether the words spoken impute an offense to the plaintiff in a direct manner or indirectly by such hints or modes of expression as are likely to convey the intended meaning to the person addressed. Gendron v. St. Pierre, 73 N. H. 419, 62 A. 966.

lication is in itself insufficient to prove malice,[71] but it may be inferred from the style and tone of the publication.[72] Malice of one not a party to the publication cannot be shown.[73] Malice as a jury question is treated elsewhere in this topic.[74]

§ 3. Privilege and justification.[75]—Statements made in the course of judicial proceedings are generally accorded an absolute privilege[76] when pertinent,[77] but in Louisiana the rule has been held not to extend to allegations made without probable cause,[78] though when probable cause exists the rule would seem to be the same in that state as elsewhere,[79] and the absolute privilege accorded statements made in the course of judicial proceedings is applicable to the case of a hearing before a legislative committee[80] when pertinent to the matter under investigation.[81] Ordinarily, a fair publication of judicial proceedings is privileged,[82] but defamatory, ex parte, preliminary proceedings cannot with impunity be published before the adverse party has been afforded opportunity to be heard.[83] Occasions when a qualified privilege may be invoked extend to a variety of communications made in good faith from honest motives,[84] such as publications made in endeavors to bring suspected criminals to justice,[85] honest criticism of those in official conduct[86] or of persons of public char-

retraction, to be given any effect, must be a retraction of all the defamatory statements complained of, and not merely a portion of them.[2] It is provided by statute in some states that one concerning whom a defamatory publication is made may notify the publisher for the purpose of procuring retraction.[3] To demand the particulars of a published insinuation is not to license the publication of defamatory falsehoods as replies.[4] A newspaper has no greater privilege than an ordinary person to publish false and defamatory statements.[5] Privilege as a plea and denial of uttering the slander charged are inconsistent defenses when the denial is inclusive of all defamatory words,[6] and when pleaded together the defendant may be required to elect on which he will stand.[7] The justification must be as broad as the charge and of the very charge.[8] Mistake as to the identity of persons will not excuse a defamation.[9] A publication relating to a private person with reference to whom there was no occasion to make any publication whatever is not privileged.[10] Privilege as a jury question is treated elsewhere in this topic.[11] The defense that the words used were nonslanderous is not established by proof that some but not all of the hearers so understood.[12]

Truth.[13]—In a civil action the substantial truth of the publication is a complete defense if the publication was for a proper purpose,[14] but proof of the truth of a part only of a defamatory charge will not defeat the action,[15] and the benefit of the defense may be lost, where the matter published is private or where even though proper the manner and style render the publication libelous.[16] Pleading the truth in justification as a partial defense for an alleged defamation has no effect as a ratification of the act when no cause of action against the defendant existed at the time of the commencement of the action.[17]

is generally held to be an element of damages for defamation.[19] When punitive damages are eliminated in an action for defamation only the effect which the publication is calculated to have on the minds of its readers is material in arriving at the amount of damages.[20] For the publication of that which is defamatory per se, the plaintiff may recover without proof of special damage.[21] To warrant recovery of special damages a causal connection between the defamation and the damages claimed must be shown.[22] Injury to reputation does not constitute special damage.[23] As a general rule it is held that punitive or exemplary damages can be allowed only when there was express malice in making the publication,[24] the existence of which must be established by a fair preponderance of the evidence,[25] but in Kentucky it is held they may be recovered without proof of express malice when the publication is defamatory per se,[26] while in Washington it is held that exemplary damages cannot be recovered unless specially provided for by statute,[27] and consequently that a plaintiff may recover all the damages to which he is entitled, regardless of any motive the defendant may have in publishing a defamation.[28] In fixing the amount of punitory damages the Louisiana supreme court will take into consideration the fact that defendants in libel have been before the court on similar charges.[29] It is held in Missouri that the failure of defendant to establish a plea of truth in justification is not ground for awarding punitive damages unless the jury finds it was filed in bad faith.[30] Defendant's means and wealth may be considered in assessing damages for a defamation.[31] The plaintiff is entitled to such damages as the jury believe he ought to receive rather than such as defendant ought to pay.[32] Damages assessed by the jury will not be interfered with in the absence of an abuse of discretion.[33] The fact that plaintiff is not damaged in the estimation of friends by a defamatory publication goes only in mitigation of damages,[34] as does the fact that a libel is a copy of another's publication.[35]

§ 5. Actions and procedure. A. Conditions precedent.[36]—When statements made in judicial proceedings are actionable, the plaintiff need not await the termination of the particular proceeding before bringing his suit.[37]

(§ 5) B. Pleading.[38]—When the words of a publication are capable of a defamatory or innocent meaning, dependent on extrinsic facts, the complaint must allege the defamatory meaning to state a cause of action.[39] Defamatory words uttered in a foreign language must be set out in the complaint or declaration and a translation given,[40] and this rule is applicable in actions for slander.[41] The ordinary rules governing uncertainty and ambiguity in pleading apply in actions for defamation,[42] as do those relating to the pleading of evidence[43] and irrelevant and redundant matter,[44] as well as to the construction of pleadings in general.[45] By statute a general allegation that an alleged defamatory article was published concerning the plaintiff is sufficient in some jurisdictions,[46] and a complaint containing such allegation is not rendered insufficient by other allegations tending to show that plaintiff was not referred to.[47] When the words of an alleged defamatory publication are capable of more than one meaning, it is the office of the innuendo to explain or point out the sense in which it is claimed they were used,[48] but an innuendo cannot enlarge or extend the meaning of language used.[49] Part of an alleged libel being libelous per se, it is unnecessary to adopt innuendoes for other parts which are ambiguous.[50] Whether an innuendo is fairly warranted by the language declared on, when that language is read either by itself or in connection with the inducement and colloquium, is a matter of law.[51] The truth of an innuendo must always appear from precedent averments and be warranted by the inducement and colloquium.[52] A publication which is defamatory per se is not restricted by innuendoes,[53] but where plaintiff avers a special meaning for alleged defamatory words, that is the only meaning the defendant need meet.[54] Where a defamation is actionable per se, special damages need not be alleged,[55] and, conversely, special damages must be alleged to entitle one to maintain an action for defamation which is not actionable per se.[56] As a general rule the special damage must be fully and accurately stated,[57] but the names of particular persons dissuaded from dealing with plaintiff need not be alleged.[58] Where an alleged libel is justified by a plea of the truth thereof, the withdrawal of the plea of the general issue does not admit that the article was false[59] nor that it was malicious.[60] Where the answer specifically states the facts showing the alleged defamation to have been a privileged communication, and it is averred that the words were spoken without malice and in good faith, there is a sufficient pleading of privilege as a defense.[61] The rule that the truth of an alleged defamation must be pleaded as a defense has no application when the plaintiff's petition shows the substantial truth of the publication.[62] A partial defense which is pleaded to the whole cause of action is demurrable.[63] A demurrer to the declaration raises the question of the actionable quality of the publication.[64] The general rule that failure to demur to the declaration waives defects therein applies.[65] The insufficiency of an allegation of special damages may be raised by demurrer.[66] A demurrer to a complaint for defamation does not admit the truth of unintelligent innuendoes.[67] A statute permitting a plaintiff to state generally in his complaint that an alleged defamatory article was published concerning him makes the allegation one of fact which a demurrer necessarily admits.[68] While the general rule as to allegata et probata applies, immaterial variances in libel cases are not fatal,[69] and by statute in some states the same is made true as to slander cases.[70]

is on plaintiff to prove the correctness of the translation of a defamation uttered in a foreign language.[82] In slander the burden is on the plaintiff to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that defendant made some one or more of the so called defamatory accusations precisely as alleged.[83] As a general rule the burden is on defendant to show the truth of the alleged defamation or probable ground for believing it to be true,[84] but the proof need not be beyond a reasonable doubt in justification, though the alleged libel was a charge of crime.[85] Where a defamatory publication was made which is applicable as well to others as to plaintiff, the burden is on plaintiff to show its application to him.[86] Ordinarily, the plaintiff may show all the circumstances which give character to the defamation and the injury occasioned thereby.[87] Plaintiff's general reputation is in issue in suits for defamation,[88] and evidence touching his general reputation for integrity and moral worth prior to the date of the publication is admissible.[89] It is held, however, that he cannot prove his own reputation until it has been attacked.[90] His general reputation for truth and veracity may of course be shown for the purpose of impeachment.[91] Testimony of particular facts affecting the reputation of plaintiff as to the quality impugned by the defamation is ordinarily not admissible,[92] and the rule is the same when the publication was under a qualified privilege,[93] but is otherwise when the testimony is elicited by the party to whom it is unfavorable[94] or on cross-examination.[95] In any attempt to prove reputation in mitigation or partial denial of damages, the proof must be confined to reputation in respect to the fault or trait of character involved in the offense charged,[96] and confined to a period prior to the alleged slander.[97] Evidence of the financial standing of the defendant is admissible in actions for defamation as a basis for both compensatory and punitive damages.[98] In an action for slander the time of publication need not be exactly proved when laid under a videlicet.[99] A substantial agreement between the allegations and the proof of an alleged slander is all that is required to entitle plaintiff to recover.[1] The fact that a publication is made under a qualified privilege does not affect its admissibility.[2] Evidence of other defamations than those charged is not ordinarily admissible.[3] As a general rule, proof of the effect of the publication on others is admissible,[4] but their declarations out of court cannot be shown,[5] nor can their declarations of ill will towards plaintiff be shown.[6] Contrary to the general rule, witnesses may testify as to their understanding of slanderous words heard by them.[7] The application of the defamation to plaintiff may be shown.[8] Abandoned answers of defendant are admissible as admissions against interest.[9] Collateral evidence tending even in slight degree to establish the plea of justification is admissible[10] as well as that tending to show injury to plaintiff by the publication sued on.[11] When a defamatory petition has been published under a qualified privilege, the defendants in an action for the defamation may testify as to their belief in the facts recited therein,[12] and in a general way the grounds of their belief,[13] and also on whose instigation and request they signed it.[14] The rule which precludes evidence of the truth of the charge without a plea in justification has only a limited application when the alleged defamation has been published under a qualified privilege.[15] When plaintiff sues for a defamatory charge of adultery, evidence of repute of marriage, in the absence of any other evidence, is all that is required of plaintiff.[16] Pursuant to the general rule, one party may show the whole of a conversation of which the other has proved a part.[17] The rule that to prove statements by a witness contradictory to cross-examination the statements must be material is applicable in actions for defamation,[18] as is also the rule requiring a proper foundation to be laid for impeachment.[19] Where an article is libelous per se, defendant cannot show that his motives were pure.[20] Where a libel does not on its own face purport to be derived from another, but is stated as of the writer's own knowledge, it is not admissible to show that it was copied or communicated.[21] When a privileged communication is sued on as defamatory, any evidence tending to show express malice is admissible in behalf of the plaintiff,[22] and any tending to show good faith on the part of defendant.[23] The relevancy of evidence must appear to render it admissible.[24] The rule excluding the conclusion of a witness is applicable on the question of damages for defamation.[25] In an action for slander, newspaper reports of the language used by defendant are inadmissible.[26] Refusal to entertain a compromise proposition renders admissible reiterations of the defamation made at the time.[27] The fact of repetition of a defamation has no tendency to show falsity or knowledge of falsity of the publication.[28] Correspondence to which plaintiff was not a party is inadmissible to contradict him as to the truth of an accusation.[29] As tending to show absence of malice, defendant may testify to what others told him of a transaction he had in mind in making the accusation,[30] but otherwise the ordinary rules as to hearsay[31] and current rumor[32] apply. Trial.*[34]—Where there are special pleas only, the right to open and close the evidence and argument remains with the plaintiff.[35] The meaning of words is for the court unless they may have either a harmless or a defamatory meaning, when it is for the jury to say which is carried and to determine their injurious

22, 23. Vial v. Larson [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1007.

24. No connection being shown between an alleged slanderous communication as to the soundness of a bank and a withdrawal of funds by depositors, evidence relating to the withdrawal of funds was properly excluded. German Sav. Bank v. Fritz [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1008. In an action for slander in charging plaintiff with whipping her mother, evidence of high words and jangling being heard between them from 6 to 12 hours before the alleged whipping had no tendency to prove the whipping. Earley v. Winn [Wis.] 109 N. W. 633. On an issue as to whether plaintiff had a police record as charged in an alleged libelous article, testimony of police officers having knowledge of the record at the time charged and anterior thereto is competent (Harriman v. New Nonpareil Co. [Iowa] 110 N. W. 33), but testimony of such officers having no knowledge of the record except subsequent to the time charged is incompetent (Id.).

25. Plaintiff held not entitled to state, in answer to a question calling therefor, the amount of damages sustained. Harriman v. New Nonpareil Co. [Iowa] 110 N. W. 33.

29. Sunley v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 463.

30. In an action for defamation in charging plaintiff with being a thief, testimony of defendant is admissible to show that a certain person told him of a transaction in which plaintiff was alleged to have been guilty of larceny. Yager v. Bruce [Mo. App.] 93 S. W. 307.

31. In slander for charging plaintiff with whipping her mother, testimony of defendant as to what plaintiff's mother had said to him before and after the alleged slander was inadmissible. Earley v. Winn [Wis.] 109 N. W. 633. In slander for charging plaintiff with whipping her mother, testimony of defendant as to statements of the mother to him tending to show that she was subject to ill treatment at the hands of plaintiff held inadmissible to show the truth of the charge. Id. The declarations and particulars of conversations between witnesses and third persons not produced as witnesses concerning their having seen the alleged libelous publication and the effect it produced in their minds is hearsay and inadmissible when objected to on that ground. Salem News Pub. Co. v. Caliga [C. C. A.] 144 F. 965. Publication cannot be shown by hearsay. Corning v. Dollmeyer, 123 Ill. App. 188.

32. Where defendant was charged with impugning the chastity of plaintiff, he was not entitled to show that current rumor prior to the publication was unfavorable to plaintiff's chastity. Overton v. White, 117 Mo. App. 576, 93 S. W. 363.

33. Evidence held insufficient to show theft of wrench alleged in justification of imputation that plaintiff was a thief. Yager v. Bruce [Mo. App.] 93 S. W. 307. Evidence held not to warrant a ruling that alleged libelous statements were, as matter of law, substantially proved. Monaghan v. Globe Newspaper Co., 190 Mass. 394, 77 N. E. 476. Evidence held insufficient to show publication of a letter at a certain place other than by plaintiff himself. Konkle v. Haven, 144 Mich. 667, 13 Det. Leg. N. 369, 108 N. W. 98.

effect.[36] Whether words are capable of use in the sense ascribed by innuendo is for the court, but whether in fact so used is for the jury.[37] Whether a publication is privileged is generally a question of law for the court, but when all the essential facts and circumstances are not conceded, the existence or non-existence of privilege should be submitted to the jury,[38] and in some jurisdictions the publication itself, it is held, may present a jury question to determine whether it is privileged.[39]

36. In the absence of extrinsic evidence giving to alleged defamatory language a meaning different from that it bears on its face, its meaning is for the court. Harriman v. New Nonpareil Co. [Iowa] 110 N. W. 33. Unless words on which a charge of slander is based are plain and unambiguous, the meaning intended by the defendant and the understanding of those hearing the charge should be submitted to the jury. Battles v. Tyson [Neb.] 110 N. W. 299. The meaning of the alleged slanderous words: "Why don't you take that damned crape off your hat? You didn't think anything of your brother. You are a robber. You robbed widows, and would steal the gold from a dead man's teeth," held for the jury. Flaacke v. Stratford, 72 N. J. Law, 487, 64 A. 146. Whatever effect the introduction of a defamatory utterance with a phrase showing it to be opinionative merely has as to its definiteness and injurious effect is a question for the jury. Gendron v. St. Pierre, 73 N. H. 419, 62 A. 966. Whether it was libelous to publish of plaintiff that he was ally and coworker with another in political matters held a question for the jury. Meriwether v. Publishers: George Knapp & Co., 120 Mo. App. 354, 97 S. W. 257. Whether plaintiff was entitled to damages for a libelous publication affecting her in her occupation and calling as a laundress held a question for the jury. Washington Times Co. v. Downey, 26 App. D. C. 258. Where defendant was the author of a false charge which led a surety company to withdraw from a bond to a prospective employer of plaintiff, and thus to deprive him of his position, the jury were justified in finding that the severance of relations between plaintiff and his prospective employer was the immediate result of the false charge. Sunley v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 463. Whether witnesses to a slander charging plaintiff with the death of a child at whose birth she officiated as obstetrician knew at the time that the child was born dead held a question for the jury. Kloths v. Hess, 126 Wis. 587, 106 N. W. 251.

37. Berger v. Freeman Tribune Pub. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 784. Certain words held incapable of application to plaintiff corporation by innuendo. Memphis Tel. Co. v. Cumberland Tel. & T. Co. [C. C. A.] 145 F. 904. Certain words held capable of the construction that plaintiff was dishonest and acted fraudulently in his business transactions immediately prior to his adjudication of bankruptcy. Richardson v. Thorpe, 73 N. H. 532, 63 A. 580.

38. Abraham v. Baldwin [Fla.] 42 So. 591; Ambrosius v. O'Farrell, 119 Ill. App. 265; Carpenter v. Ashley, 148 Cal. 422, 83 P. 444; Shipp v. Patton, 29 Ky. L. R. 480, 93 S. W. 1033. Whether defamatory utterance was privileged in being made to employer of plaintiff in objecting to plaintiff working on defendant's premises held a question for the jury. Abraham v. Baldwin [Fla.] 42 So. 591. Whether complaint of defendant to plaintiff's superior officer of official misconduct by plaintiff as city dockmaster was privileged held a question for the jury. Fleming v. Brauer, 110 App. Div. 876, 96 N. Y. S. 594. Whether a communication of information concerning the insolvency of a bank made by plaintiff to his business associates who were depositors was privileged held a question for the jury. German Sav. Bank v. Fritz [Iowa] 109 N. W. 1008.

Truth or falsity: Defendant held not entitled to ruling that truth of charge that plaintiff had been arrested on larceny charge was substantially proved. Monaghan v. Globe Newspaper Co., 190 Mass. 394, 77 N. E. 476. Charge of neglect of official duties as city dockmaster, criminal acts of oppression, and conspiracy for the criminal extortion of money. Fleming v. Brauer, 110 App. Div. 876, 96 N. Y. S. 594. Whether letter of plaintiff to defendant preceding the publication of its alleged libelous answer or the answer spoke the truth. Meriwether v. Publishers: George Knapp & Co., 120 Mo. App. 354, 97 S. W. 257.

Actual malice. Sunley v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 463; Kloths v. Hess, 126 Wis. 587, 106 N. W. 251; Mulderig v. Wilkes-Barre Times [Pa.] 64 A. 636; Robinson v. Van Auken, 190 Mass. 161, 76 N. E. 601; Ambrosius v. O'Farrell, 119 Ill. App. 265. When a defamatory communication contains expressions which exceed the limits of privilege, such expressions are evidence of malice warranting the submission of the case to the jury. Mulderig v. Wilkes-Barre Times [Pa.] 64 A. 636. When it is the jury's province to find the existence or non-existence of privilege and they find the alleged defamation was privileged, it is then their duty to ascertain whether the publication was malicious. Chambers v. Leiser [Wash.] 86 P. 627. Whether report of insurance company to surety of agent that the agent was short in his accounts was malicious held a question for the jury. Sunley v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. [Iowa] 109 N. W. 463. Whether a charge of child murder against a woman officiating at the birth as obstetrician was maliciously uttered held a question for the jury. Kloths v. Hess, 126 Wis. 587, 106 N. W. 251. Whether defendant, in an action for slander in making a charge of crime against plaintiff in the presence of a police officer for the purpose of procuring plaintiff's arrest and imprisonment on the charge, was acting in good faith or in part from malice held a question for the jury. Robinson v. Van Auken, 190 Mass. 161, 76 N. E. 601. Where defamatory language is uttered while the publisher is enjoying a qualified privilege, evidence in an action therefor tending to show express malice renders the

Whether words that are not on their face mere criticism are privileged as fair newspaper comment is for the jury and not a question of law.[40] The construction of doubtful collateral documentary evidence bearing on the truth of the charge is for the jury.[41] When a plaintiff not named is identified by imprecise description, it is proper to submit his identity generally to the jury,[42] but it is good practice to fully explain the law in that respect.[43] It is error to assume the defamatory character of a doubtful publication in charging the jury[44] or to give conflicting instructions,[45] or to exclude competent evidence from the consideration of the jury therein,[46] or to ignore the case made by the pleadings,[47] though a failure to request an instruction to cure an omission of the latter character may be fatal to the claim of error.[48] The general rules of construction apply to instructions in actions for defamation.[49] Where the publication of defamatory matter which is actionable per se is admitted by failure to deny, the court should so charge.[50] The jury are pre-question of the actionable quality of the language one for the jury. Yager v. Bruce [Mo. App.] 93 S. W. 307.

39. Criticism of officer of corporation in letter from one stockholder to another. Chambers v. Leiser [Wash.] 86 P. 627.

40. Publication that a corrupt candidate was being supported by plaintiff and others using reprehensible if not illegal means Dow v. Long, 190 Mass. 138, 76 N. E. 667.

41. In libel on charge of association with alleged criminal politician and being a liar and trickster, whether political agreement to which plaintiff was a party was in fact corrupt held a question for the jury. Merlwether v. Publishers: George Knapp & Co., 120 Mo. App. 354, 97 S. W. 257.

42. Charge held appropriate. Burkhart v. North American Co., 214 Pa. 39, 63 A. 410. Whether the allegations of a declaration that the words of a defamatory article were intended to apply to the plaintiff as vestryman of a church where the vestry as a class were referred to therein held a question for the jury. Goldsborough v. Orem, 103 Md. 671, 64 A. 36. When defamatory language points to no person in particular, whether or not it applies to the plaintiff is a question of fact. Id. Whether plaintiff was the person meant as charged in an innuendo held a question for the jury. Every Evening Printing Co. v. Butler [C. C. A.] 144 F. 916, afg. 140 F. 934. In the face of direct evidence of an admission by defendant that a publication referred to plaintiff, the case cannot be taken from the jury on that issue. Lubrano v. Curzio, 27 R. I. 594, 65 A. 273. Whether an article concerning a person of a different given name, but having the surname of plaintiff and in connection with which plaintiff's picture was published as the person mentioned, referred to the plaintiff held a question for the jury. Ball v. The Tribune Co., 123 Ill. App. 235.

43. Burkhart v. North American Co., 214 Pa. 39, 63 A. 410. Charge held adequate when read as a whole. Id.

44. Defendant is not entitled to a ruling that it is enough to prove that the things written were in substance true when the evidence is insufficient as matter of law to prove such statements to have been substantially true. Monaghan v. Globe Newspaper Co., 190 Mass. 394, 77 N. E. 476.

45. A charge that the publication was undisputed, that it meant what plaintiff alleged it to mean and that "all other matters alleged in plaintiff's declaration are true," was in conflict with an instruction that the jury were the sole judges of the fact whether the words of the alleged libel bore the meaning attributed to them in the innuendoes. Geringer v. Novak, 117 Ill. App. 160.

46. Geringer v. Novak, 117 Ill. App. 160.

47. An instruction stating the contentions of the parties which averred that defendant claimed the alleged libelous articles were true and that the same constituted facts and as such are privileged, followed by an instruction that the articles were not privileged, tended to deprive defendant of the full benefit of the allegation of the truth of the matter published. Harriman v. New Nonpareil Co. [Iowa] 110 N. W. 33. Notwithstanding the plea of the general issue was withdrawn, an instruction that the publication was undisputed, that it meant what plaintiff alleged it to mean, and that "all other matters alleged in plaintiff's declaration are true," was too broad where defendant had on file a plea of justification declaring the alleged libel to be true. Geringer v. Novak, 117 Ill. App. 160. Where the publication of a libel actionable per se is admitted and justification pleaded, an instruction that the burden is on plaintiff to establish the allegations of his petition is unwarranted. Sheibley v. Fales [Neb.] 106 N. W. 1032.

48. When defendant is not satisfied with a general instruction regarding compensatory and punitive damages because it leaves out of view the plea in mitigation, he should request an instruction calling the jury's attention to his plea, and if he does not the general instruction ignoring the plea will not constitute error. Yager v. Bruce [Mo. App.] 93 S. W. 307.

49. In an action for defamation, an instruction that from a charge of criminal conduct the law imports liability means no more than an accountability to an action to determine liability and is not erroneous. Abraham v. Baldwin [Fla.] 42 So. 591. Instruction on compensatory damages held not erroneous as authorizing assessment of damages for portion of accusation which might be found to be true. Meriwether v. Publishers: George Knapp & Co., 120 Mo. App. 354, 97 S. W. 257.

sumed to have followed the court's instructions in returning their verdict.[51] A verdict for defendant in slander is seldom set aside.[52]

§ 6. Criminal libel and slander. The offense.[53]—The malicious publication of a libelous article is a common-law crime and punishable as a misdemeanor.[54] A statute defining criminal slander and fixing the punishment therefor does not affect previous statutes defining criminal libel and fixing the punishment.[55] A private corporation may be the subject of a criminal libel.[56] By statute in some states, persons delivering to papers untrue statements for publication are punishable criminally.[57] To constitute a criminal libel the language published must injure, or at least tend to injure, the reputation in which a man is held by his fellow men.[58] It is as much a crime to cause to be printed as to print a libel.[59] Malice and falsity are generally held to be essential elements.[60] A charge of one crime cannot be justified hy proof of guilt of another distinct crime.[61] Malice in criminal libel may be inferred from the character of the accusation and the absence of probable or reasonable grounds for making it.[62] That a libelous article is published by the pastor

51. Verdict held not to include punitive damages. Meriwether v. Publishers: George Knapp & Co., 120 Mo. App. 354, 97 S. W. 257.

52. To warrant setting aside a verdict for defendant in slander, the evidence must be so clearly overwhelming that the court can see injustice has been done and that the verdict is due to passion or prejudice. Fleming v. Brauer, 110 App. Div. 876, 96 N. Y. S. 594.

53. See 6 C. L. 429.

54. Defendant in an action for libel held not required to discover authorship of alleged libel or to produce the original from which publication was made because of its tendency to incriminate him. Noyes v. Thorpe, 73 N. H. 481, 62 A. 787.

55. Act No. 107, p. 161, § 4 of 1902, and Rev. St. §§ 804, 982, construed. State v. Kiernan, 116 La. 741, 41 So. 55.

56. The word "person" in Gen. St. 1901, § 2271, held to include a corporation. State v. Williams [Kan.] 85 P. 938.

57. Indictment held insufficient under P. L. 1898, p. 476. State v. Renner [N. J. Law] 64 A. 988.

58. State v. O'Hagan [N. J. Law] 63 A. 95. To publish of a corporation that it made an authorized change in its contract with one of its patrons is not libelous per se. State v. Williams [Kan.] 85 P. 938. To publish of a man that he has done that which is legal and proper without ironical innuendo does not, under ordinary circumstances, tend to injure his reputation, as that plaintiff, a baker, refused to recognize the Bakers' Union or use the label and advising against patronizing him. State v. O'Hagan [N. J. Law] 63 A. 95. A charge of breach of trust amounting to statutory embezzlement makes out a criminal defamation. A publication that a third person had prosecutor collect some money and after collecting it prosecutor failed to turn it over to her, but finally admitted that he had used it and would give his notes for the same, charges the commission of a crime by prosecutor, under B. & C. Comp. § 1805, making such act embezzlement and punishable as larceny. State v. Conklin, 47 Or. 509, 84 P. 482.

59. Indictment charging in disjunctive held defective. State v. Singer, 101 Me. 299, 64 A. 586.

60. Under Rev. St. 1899, § 2262. State v. Collins, 117 Mo. App. 658, 93 S. W. 325. Where defendant was charged with falsely imputing want of chastity to a female in stating that she had been caught using a pump or syringe for the purpose of getting away with a child, his guilt depended on whether he had falsely and maliciously spoken words which imputed to the prosecuting witness the act of fornication when she was in fact innocent of the commission of that act within a period to which the language used must have referred. Id. To constitute the offense of criminal defamation the accusation must have been false and malicious. Cornelius v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 670. Falsity and publication without justification or excuse warrant an inference of malice. Stutts v. State [Fla.] 42 So. 51. Under a statute requiring a defamation to be false and malicious to render it criminal, the state is not required to show by direct proof that defendant entertained ill will or hatred towards the injured person or a purpose to injure, but malice may be inferred from the character of the accusation and the absence of probable or reasonable grounds for making it. Cornelius v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 670. Proof of the falsity of the publication alleged to be criminally libelous is not essential to show malice. State v. Lomack, 130 Iowa, 79, 106 N. W. 386. Where defendant was charged with falsely imputing want of chastity to a female in stating that she had been caught using a pump or syringe for the purpose of getting away with a child, testimony tending to show that such female had had illicit intercourse within the time during which defendant's alleged words imputed the act to her was to be considered by the jury in determining whether or not the imputation of lewdness was true, not whether defendant's words were true in their full meaning. State v. Collins, 117 Mo. App. 658, 93 S. W. 325. Where defendant published of prosecutor that he was proven guilty as corespondent in defendant's divorce case and had caused the separation of two men from their wives, proof of prosecutor's of a church on the authority of the official board of his church does not render the publication privileged.[63] It is no justification for criminal libel that the person libeled has said unkind things of defendant.[64] In the absence of statute, an imputation of unchastity to a female may be a criminal offense,[65] and it is made a criminal offense by statute in some states;[66] and it is no defense under the statutes that the language was used at a meeting when defendant was discussing with the father of prosecuting witness other charges against her character,[67] nor that he gave the name of his informant.[68] The imputation of unchasity must be direct.[69] Such imputations are published when made in the presence of one person without repetition to a third person.[70]

The prosecution.[71]—When a publication is defamatory only because of special conditions, the conditions must be alleged in an indictment therefor by way of prefatory averment.[72] In those jurisdictions where falsity is not regarded as an essential element, an allegation of falsity will be treated as surplusage and need not be proved.[73] An indictment for criminal libel need not expressly aver that it was published of and concerning the prosecutor, but it is sufficient to allege that the article was intended to and did charge the prosecutor with crime.[74] An innuendo cannot in criminal, any more than in civil, proceedings, extend the meaning of language.[75] Mere inaccuracies in language charging the crime will not vitiate an indictment,[76] and is unnecessary when the publication is per se defamatory.[77] The indictment must not charge the commission of two or more separate crimes in the disjunctive.[78] In Oregon the sufficiency of an indictment or information must be raised by demurrer or plea.[79] Any proof tending to mitigate the offense or punishment is admissible.[80] On a prosecution for libel all portions of the publication which adultery with defendant's wife and his causing the separation of another woman from her husband was sufficient to justify the publication. State v. Lomack, 130 Iowa, 79, 106 N. W. 386.

71. See 6 C. L. 429.

72. Indictment for alleged defamation of plaintiff, a baker, who was charged with having refused to recognize the Bakers' Union or use the label held insufficient. State v. O'Hagan [N. J. Law] 63 A. 95. When a publication does not necessarily on the face of it import a libel, it is requisite to connect it with certain facts by way of inducement in order that so explained it may amount to libel. State v. Renner [N. J. Law] 64 A. 988.

73, 74. State v. Lomack, 130 Iowa, 79, 106 N. W. 386.

75. An innuendo that defendant, by saying of a female that he had had a big time with her, meant that he had had improper communication with her person in the nature of carnal intercourse is unwarranted. Gooing v. State [Tex. Cr. App.] 98 S. W. 851. See ante, § 5B.

76. An indictment for malicious imputation of unchastity of a woman using the word "saying" for "speaking" followed by the clause "in the presence of and in the hearing of" a person named is not thereby rendered defective. Stutts v. State [Fla.] 42 So. 51.

77. An indictment for publishing of a female that she had had a young one before she was married requires no innuendo to show the imputation of unchastity. Cornelius v. State [Ala.] 40 So. 670. Innuendoes in an indictment for defamation imputing want of chastity in a woman may be disregarded as surplusage. State v. Clifford, 58 W. Va. 681, 52 S. E. 864.

78. Charging in the disjunctive in an indictment for criminal libel that defendant printed or caused to be printed the alleged defamation is a fatal defect. State v. Singer, 101 Me. 299, 64 A. 586.

79. Motion to strike out innuendoes in information for criminal libel held not proper mode of raising objection under B. & C. Comp. § 1355, providing that the only pleading by defendant is either a demurrer or plea. State v. Conklin, 47 Or. 509, 84 P. 482.

80. In a criminal action for defamation, in any way relate to the subject-matter of the portion or portions alleged to be libelous should be introduced in evidence by the state in proving its case in connection with the portion alleged to be libelous,[81] but where any portion is on a different subject, and in no way qualifies or explains the portion alleged to be libelous, it is within the discretion of the trial court to exclude such portion.[82] Collateral publications must be relevant to warrant their admission.[83] Defendant is entitled to show the basis for making the charge.[84] A proper foundation must be laid to admit evidence in justification,[85] nor can justification be shown by threats long anterior to the publication.[86] When the alleged defamatory matter is unambiguous, it is the duty of the court to interpret its legal effect.[87] The questions whether a publication was true and published with good motives and for justifiable ends are generally for the jury.[88] Where the elements of a crime are charged, an instruction is not erroneous which names a crime of which they are constituents,[89] but instructions must not ignore case made by the pleadings and evidence.[90]

§ 7. Jactitation or slander of title.—The suit in jactitation is a form of the action in revendication.[91] A mere incidental charge of slander of title does not suffice to make a suit one in jactitation.[92] Defendant is not entitled to oyer of plaintiff's title.[93] Joint owners may join in a jactitation suit.[94] When involving property held in severalty by one of the plaintiffs, it cannot be engrafted by supplemental petition on a suit in jactitation involving property held in indivision by several plaintiffs.[95] When a suit in jactitation is against a succession, it need not be brought before the court in which the succession is pending, but may be brought in the parish where the property is situated,[96] but when brought against a succession in the court of another parish than that where the succession is pending, a suit in damages cannot be coupled with it.[97]

83. Where defendant on a prosecution for criminal libel denied having in a sermon made certain statements attributed to him by prosecutor, it was proper to refuse to permit him to testify regarding other portions of the sermon. State v. Lomack, 130 Iowa, 79, 106 N. W. 386.

84. Where defendant charged in an alleged libelous publication that prosecutor would have been indicted for perjury but for certain things, he should have been permitted after having testified that he had presented the matter to the grand jury and caused other witnesses to go before that body, to state who the others were. State v. Lomack, 130 Iowa, 79, 106 N. W. 386.

85. Defendant on a prosecution for criminal libel cannot show that the alleged libel was published in reply to articles which he believed had been written by prosecutor when the prosecutor has not been shown to have had anything to do with the articles in question. 86. On a prosecution for criminal libel, evidence tending to show the state of feeling on the part of the person libeled against the defendant the year previous to the publication is inadmissible. State v. Lomack, 130 Iowa, 79, 106 N. W. 386.

§ 1. Definition and nature.[98]—The distinction between a privilege tax imposed for revenue and an ordinary tax is that the former involves a contractual obligation while the latter does not,[99] and the same distinction obtains between such a privilege tax and a license fee exacted under the police power,[1] and there is no difference, as regards the contractual basis of a privilege revenue tax, between exactions from foreign corporations and those from domestic corporations.[2] This distinction[3] is important not only as bearing upon the validity of the taxing statute[4] but also in de-tion was not thereby made one of jactitation or slander of title. Ramos Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Labarre, 116 La. 559, 40 So. 898.

99, 1, 2. State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Wis.] 108 N. W. 594.

3. Note: "There is some confusion in judicial expressions as to whether an ordinary tax is a debt. * * * For example, in Warden v. Fond du Lac County Sup'rs, 14 Wis. 618-620; Peters v. Meyers, 22 Wis. 602; March v. Board of Sup'rs, 42 Wis. 502-509; Flanders v. Merrimack, 48 Wis. 567-572, 4 N. W. 74; State v. Pors, 107 Wis. 420-425, 83 N. W. 706, 51 L. R. A. 917—an ordinary tax is in each instance spoken of as a debt, the precise nature of the liability however not being involved. In Re Assignment of Riddell, 93 Wis. 564, 67 N. W. 1135, such question was directly involved and the conclusion was that such taxes are not debts in the ordinary sense, Cooley on Taxation and other authorities being cited, which hold that they do not involve any contractual element. Again at one time in Iowa the court was inclined to treat such taxes as debts, and to hold that ordinary remedies were usable to collect them. During such period they will be found spoken of as debts, though there was not entire harmony, by any means, as to whether they were collectible as ordinary contractual obligations, nor was there any definite decision to that effect. City of Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39 Iowa, 56; City of Burlington v. Burlington & M. R. Co., 41 Iowa, 134. Later that idea was criticised and still later entirely discarded. Marshall County v. Knoll, 102 Iowa, 573, 69 N. W. 1146, 71 N. W. 571; Crawford County v. Laub, 110 Iowa, 355-357, 81 N. W. 590; Plymouth County v. Moore, 114 Iowa, 700-701, 87 N. W. 662. All text writers and judicial authorities substantially agree that the distinguishing feature between a debt and a tax, in the ordinary sense, is that in case of the former there is express or implied promise to pay, enforceable by ordinary remedies, and in case of the latter, such element does not exist and such remedies are ordinarily not applicable. City of Carondelet v. Picot, 38 Mo. 125; Pierce v. Boston, 3 Met. [Mass.] 520; Camden v. Allen, 26 N. J. Law, 398; State v. Synder, 139 Mo. 549-553, 41 S. W. 216; Blevins v. Smith, 104 Mo. 583-595, 16 S. W. 213, 13 L. R. A. 441; City of Augusta v. North, 57 Me. 392, 2 Am. Rep. 55; Shaw v. Peckett, 26 Vt. 482; Loeber v. Leininger, 175 Ill. 484, 51 N. E. 703; Mechanics' & Traders' Bank v. Debolt, 1 Ohio St. 591; Danforth v. McCook Co., 11 S. D. 258, 76 N. W. 940, 74 Am. St. Rep. 808; Hibbard v. Clark, 56 N. H. 155, 22 Am. Rep. 442; State of Georgia v. Railroad, 70 Ga. 11; Burroughs on Taxation, 253; Blackwell on Tax Titles, 205; 1 Desty, § 6. * * * It has many times been held that a law exempting property from taxation coupled with an obligation to contribute to the public funds other than by taxation in the ordinary sense, direct taxation of property, in consideration of some privilege granted by the state within its power to grant, refuse or prohibit, is valid and creates a contract between the owner of the property and the state. Louisville City Ry. Co. v. Louisville, 4 Bush [Ky.] 478; City of Newport v. So. Covington & Cincinnati R. Co., 89 Ky. 29, 11 S. W. 954; Pac. R. R. v. McGuire, 20 Wall. [U. S.] 36, 22 Law. Ed. 282; State v. Miller, 30 N. J. Law, 368, 86 Am. Dec. 188; Mobile & Ohio R. R. v. Tenn., 153 U. S. 486, 38 Law. Ed. 793; Wilmington, etc., R. R. v. Alsbrook, 146 U. S. 279, 36 Law. Ed. 972; Mobile & Ohio R. R. v. Moseley, 52 Miss. 127; State Board v. Morris, etc., R. R., 49 N. J. Law, 193, 7 A. 826; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. [U. S.] 331, 15 Law. Ed. 401; State v. Miller, 30 N. J. Law, 368, 86 Am. Dec. 188; State v. Butler, 86 Tenn. 614, 8 S. W. 586; Detroit St. R. Co. v. Guthard, 51 Mich. 180, 16 N. W. 328. No constitutional provision on the subject of taxation of property is involved in such a law except that feature permitting exemptions from taxation. In the very latest expression of the Federal supreme court on this subject (Powers v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 201 U. S. 543, 50 Law. Ed. 860), the law then under consideration characterized the exaction as a tax and so it was called over and over again in the opinion by Mr. Justice Brewer. But it was held that the obligation upon which it was based was contractual and the court treated the law as not dealing with taxes in the ordinary sense."—See State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Wis.] 108 N. W. 594.

terminiñg the liability for the penalty prescribed for nonpayment of the tax.[5] Exemptions from property taxation are not applicable to license taxes.[6] A municipal occupation license is not a franchise.[7] A theatre license does not place the proprietor under any obligation to keep the theatre open,[8] and the license of a ticket speculator, so far as it has any validity, simply authorizes him to conduct his business on the sidewalk,[9] and neither of such licenses adds to or takes from the rights of the parties to the contract evidenced by a theatre ticket.[10]

Where the license fee is apportioned to earnings or property as shown by a return made by the licensee, and provision is made for contesting the truth of such return, the fee cannot be changed after having been fixed,[11] but where the duties of the licensing officers in regard to the approval of the return are purely ministerial and no provision is made for contesting the return, the licensee's obligation is not discharged by payment of a fee based upon an erroneous return.[12]

Licenses are granted subject to the criminal laws,[13] but an occupation or act otherwise illegal may be legalized by license.[14] A municipal corporation, however, cannot, without express authority, legally license a public nuisance.[15]

§ 2. Power to require and validity of statutes.[16]—Any business that endangers the public morals, safety, or welfare may be subjected to regulation and license under the police power of the state,[17] but occupations relating only remotely to the public health and safety do not come within this rule,[18] and there is some conflict as to what matters do so relate to the public health and safety as to be subject to such regulation.[19] The usual rules as to the title[20] and as to the separability of constitu-either regulative license taxes[26] or occupation or privilege taxes.[27] Occupations may be classified for the purpose of license taxation[28] and the classification will not be interfered with by the courts unless it is unreasonable or arbitrary,[29] but the class-

74, p. 92, was upheld on the ground that though the exaction therein required of railroads was in lieu of constitutional taxes it was not a constitutional tax. That such was the decision in this case was challenged to a certain extent by Justice Cole, who took part in the decision, and who, in his dissent from what he considered a practical overruling of the case in Knowlton v. Sup'rs of Rock County, 9 Wis. 410, said that the former case did not decide that the law of 1854 "did not impose a tax in the just and proper sense of that term." But in Atty. Gen'l v. Winnebago Lake & Fox Plank Road Co., 11 Wis. 35, the same justice agreed that the case decided in 1855 did decide that the exaction was not a tax in a constitutional sense. Thus it would seem that the seeming disagreement between him and his colleagues was based upon a distinction without a difference, since the exaction might not be a constitutional tax, and yet still be a tax "in the just and proper sense of that word," in that it imposed upon the owners of the property the duty of contributing indirectly on account thereof to the public revenue. Milwaukee & Miss. Ry. Co. v. Board of Sup'rs, 9 Wis. 431, was seemingly overruled by Knowlton v. Rock County Sup'rs, 9 Wis. 410, and Attorney General v. Winnebago Lake & Fox River Plank Road Co., 11 Wis. 35, but was reaffirmed by Kneeland v. Milwaukee, 15 Wis. 454, and again by Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. Taylor County, 52 Wis. 37, 8 N. W. 833, upon the ground that the exaction imposed by the law of 1854 was not a constitutional tax, but an exemption therefrom in consideration of an equivalent. The idea of compensation for the privilege of operating in the state did not enter into the law of 1854 or the decisions thereunder. This feature was added by Laws 1860, c. 174, p. 153, and has been retained by the subsequent enactments on the subject, Revision of 1878, and Rev. St. 1898, §§ 1211-1214. Kneeland v. Milwaukee, 15 Wis. 454, was not decided until 1862, but it was decided under the law of 1854, and the validity of the law of 1860 was not passed upon. The latter law, however, must have been valid if the former one was, especially as it was adopted in the light of the decisions under the former law and with the manifest intention to make the tax contractual, a compensation for a privilege, thus relieving it of objections available against a constitutional tax. And Rev. St. 1898, §§ 1211-1214, being merely a perpetuation of the same compensatory or contractual scheme is not subject to the objections and construction applicable to a constitutional tax. The law of 1860 and the subsequent laws perpetuating it may be sustained also on the ground that they are in the nature of acts amending corporate charters pursuant to authority reserved in the constitution.—See State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. [Wis.] 108 N. W. 594.

In classifying corporations for purpose of imposing licenses, the legislature has a wider scope than in case of individuals. Thus, a license may be imposed on state mutual insurance companies and exempt county mutuals not organized for profit, and classify all county mutuals as corporations not organized for profit. Id. License fees on street cars operated in a city are sustainable as occupation fees or taxes. Bloomington & Normal R., etc., Co. v. Bloomington, 123 Ill. App. 639. Municipal license on attorneys at law, imposed under authority of statute enacted pursuant to Const. § 181, conferring legislative authority to authorize municipalities to impose license fees on professions, held valid. Yantis v. Lexington, 29 Ky. L. R. 689, 94 S. W. 653. Railroad companies may be segregated from other persons, natural and artificial, for purpose of regulation and taxation. State v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 909, 97 S. W. 71. Oil producers or operators of oil wells may be subjected to separate classifications for purpose of levying occupation tax. Producers' Oil Co. v. Stevens [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 157; Stephens v. Morning Star Oil Co. [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 159; Southwestern Oil Co. v. State [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 159; Texas Co. v. Stephens [Tex. Civ. App.] 99 S. W. 160. N. C. Pub. Laws 1903, c. 247, taxing business of meat packing, held valid, though other dealers in packing-house products and other kinds of packing businesses are not taxed. Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy, 200 U. S. 226, 50 Law. Ed. 451. Code Supp. 1902, § 1333d, providing for license tax on insurance companies, held not unequal in its operation in that it exempts certain kinds of insurance companies, since it operates equally upon all companies in a like position. Iowa Mut. Tornado Ins. Ass'n v. Gilbertson, 129 Iowa, 658, 106 N. W. 153. Higher license tax on liquor dealers than on dealers in other commodities held valid. Lachman v. Walker [Fla.] 42 So. 461.

30. Larger tax on sale of oil in city transported thereto in bulk, tank cars, or pipes, than on sale of oil produced within city or otherwise brought thereto, held discriminatory and unequal. Standard Oil Co. v. Fredericksburg, 105 Va. 82, 52 S. E. 817. Manner of distribution of oil in city and sale of same by means of tank wagons or in barrels is reasonable basis of classification for licensing purposes. Id.

31. Held discriminative: Ordinance imposing license tax on fire and wreck sales of merchandise but exempting salvage from fire and wreck in city of Atlanta. City of Atlanta v. Jacobs, 125 Ga. 523, 54 S. E. 534. Laws 1905, pp. 372, 373, requiring license for peddling or selling by sample "after shipment to the state," held discriminative against nonresidents, and hence invalid under U. S. Const. art. 1, § 8, art. 4, § 2, 14th Amend. § 1, and state Const. art. 1, § 12. Bacon v. Locke, 42 Wash. 215, 83 P. 721. Buffalo city charter, tit. 2, § 17, Laws 1891, c. 105, p. 137, authorizing city to license and regulate hawkers and peddlers and to make regulations deemed expedient for good government of city, does not authorize prohibition of peddling produce between hours of 5 a. m. and 1 p. m. City of Buffalo v. Linsman, 113 App. Div. 584, 98 N. Y. S. 737. Discrimination in favor of religious and benevolent associations and resident merchants in matter of bill-posting and distribution of samples. City of Watertown v. Rodenbaugh, 112 App. Div. 723, 98 N. Y. S. 885. Pub. Acts, 1895, p. 311, No. 214, providing for licensing of transient merchants, held invalid under state Const. art. 6, § 32, and Federal Const. Amend. 14, in that it authorizes the municipality to suspend the operation of the act in any specific case. Brown v. Stuart [Mich.] 13 Det. Leg. N. 507, 108 N. W. 717.

Held not discriminative: License on ferries between certain points not unequal because ferries between other points not included where license imposed on such other ferries by other ordinances. Norfolk, etc., Co. v. Norfolk, 105 Va. 139, 52 S. E. 851. Code Supp. 1902, § 1333d, providing for license tax on insurance companies, held not discriminative in that it exempts county mutuals and not state mutuals. Iowa Mut. Tornado Ins. Ass'n v. Gilbertson, 129 Iowa, 658, 106 N. W. 153. Laws 1897, p. 236, c. 163, providing that no license shall issue to any person or firm to do plumbing until he or they shall have passed examination before board of plumbers, and that every plumbing firm shall have at least one practical plumber, makes a distinction between a licensed plumber and a practical plumber, and does not exempt all members of a firm except one from examination, and hence does not discriminate in favor of firms. Caven v. Coleman [Tex. Civ. App.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 778, 96 S. W. 774. Act July 1, 1905, §§ 3, 5, is not contrary to Const. 1870, art. 4, § 22, prohibiting granting of special privileges, in that it requires resident applicants for examination by dental examiners, except such as are already licensed, to produce diplomas while nonresidents of five years' practice are not required to produce diplomas, and also authorizes licensed physicians to extract teeth, and authorizes students of recognized dental schools to practice under instructor's supervision without license. Kettles v. People, 221 Ill. 221, 77 N. E. 472. A privilege tax on railroads based upon percentage of gross earnings in a ratio of its track mileage within to that without the state is not unequal because the gross earnings of some of the roads operating in the state consist more largely of receipts from interstate business than those of others. State v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 909, 97 S. W. 71.

32. 24 St. at Large, p. 441, exempting from business license tax all confederate veterans of civil war who enlisted from state, held invalid in that it denies equal protection of laws to veterans of other wars and confederate veterans of Civil war who enlisted from other states. City of Laurens v. Anderson [S. C.] 55 S. E. 136.

den of showing inequality of a licensing ordinance is upon the party alleging such inequality.[33] The fact that only one person, firm, or corporation falls within a class, does not render the classification discriminative,[34] nor does failure to exact the license from one party subject thereto while exacting it from another constitute discrimination.[35] An excise or privilege tax need not be designated as such.[36] On the other hand, the mere fact that a license purports to be assessed under the police power will not exempt it from objections applicable to constitutional taxation,[37] nor may police regulation be used as a guise for the arbitrary invasion of personal and property rights.[38] Whether a statute is a revenue or a licensing measure must be determined according to its terms, purpose, effect, and the constitutional authority under which it was enacted.[39] It is not necessary that the applicant for license, required under police power, be given any hearing or that any provision be made for review by the courts.[40]

A license fee imposed under the police power and not for revenue is not subject to objections based upon questions of double or special taxation.[41] Nor is it double taxation to impose an occupation tax in addition to an ad valorem tax on the property used in such occupation.[42] An ad valorem tax on corporate franchises does not necessarily include a privilege tax upon the exercise of such franchises;[43] nor does the granting of a franchise by the state impliedly exempt the holder from regulative restrictions and burdens,[44] especially where the right to impose such regulations is reserved in the statute granting the franchise;[45] but a city having only a general regulative authority over its streets cannot impose a privilege tax on a telephone company holding a state franchise,[46] and where a municipal tax on corpo-

33. Burden not sustained as to license on ferries between certain points where it appears that there are other ordinances authorizing imposition of license on ferries between other points and it does not appear that the licenses are unequal or that license on such other ferries is not enforced. Norfolk, etc., Co. v. Norfolk, 105 Va. 139, 52 S. E. 851.

34. Standard Oil Co. v. Fredericksburg, 105 Va. 82, 52 S. E. 867. License on ferries. Norfolk, etc., Co. v. Norfolk, 105 Va. 139, 52 S. E. 851.

35. Iowa Mut. Tornado Ins. Ass'n v. Gilbertson, 129 Iowa, 658, 106 N. W. 153.

36. Tax of 1% on gross earnings of railroads imposed by Gen. Laws 1905, p. 336, c. 141, held an excise or privilege tax, though not designated as such in the act. State v. Galveston, etc., R. Co. [Tex.] 16 Tex. Ct. Rep. 909, 97 S. W. 71.

37. Laws 1905, p. 130, c. 66, requiring license of plumbers, held contrary to Const. art. 1, §§ 3, 12, relative to uniformity of taxation, plumbing being held not a proper subject of police regulation. State v. Smith, 42 Wash. 237, 84 P. 851.
