Requiring accused to permit state to take depositions.— A statute permitting one charged with a crime to take testimony in foreign jurisdictions by deposition is not unconstitutional because requiring defendant to enter of record a consent that the prosecution may also taken depositions without the state. Butler v. State, 97 Ind. 378.

11. Va. Acts (1849), p. 666, § 34, which provided a new and simpler method of taking depositions, did not relax the requirements of the law which it superseded as to cases commenced before its enactment. Smith v. Grosjean, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 109.

12. Statutes relative to supplying the titles to lands to which the deeds "have been" lost or defaced do not authorize the perpetuation of testimony relating to a deed lost since the passage of those acts. Matter of Koockagey, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 46.

13. A deposition taken ex parte under a statute permitting such practice is not invalidated by a subsequent statute requiring depositions to be taken on notice. Armstrong v. Griswold, 28 Vt. 376.

Change before completion of deposition.— An act providing that no new law shall be construed to repeal a former law as to any act done or any right accrued, etc., under the former law, or in any way whatever to affect any act so done, or any right accrued or claimed, arising before the new law takes effect, etc., will give no right to use a deposition, the taking of which was commenced before but completed after the passage of an act inhibiting the use of such depositions. B. Perpetuation of Testimony — 1. In General. Depositions may be taken to perpetuate testimony where no action has been brought, and it is sought to secure the evidence of some right or interest which may be endangered or lost if the testimony on which it depends is not preserved.[16] The right does not depend on Appeal from justice.— Depositions in an action pending in the county court on appeal from a justice should be taken under the statute relative to the taking of depositions in cases brought in the county court, and not under the statute as to depositions in actions pending before a justice. Wilson v. Welch, 12 Colo. App. 185, 55 Pac. 201.

Probate of will.— A statute prescribing the mode of taking the deposition of a witness to a will in the probate court will not preclude the taking of such a deposition in common form to establish a will in the circuit court. Cawthorn v. Haynes, 24 Mo. 236. The deposition of a sick, aged, or infirm witness in a probate proceeding must be taken under a provision conferring the right to take depositions in such cases, and not under provisions relating to the taking of depositions generally. Matter of McCrosky, 5 Dem. Surr. (N. Y.) 256.

United States courts.— A dedimus will not issue to take testimony which can be taken de bene esse. Turner v. Shackman, 27 Fed. 183.

Following state practice.— The mode of issuing and executing a dedimus in the federal court is regulated by the state statute relating to depositions on commission and not by a statute relating to depositions de bene esse. Jones v. Oregon Cent. R. Co., 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,486, 3 Sawy. 523.

"Common usage," in U. S. Rev. St. (1878) § 866 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 663], is construed to mean the rule or law governing the practice of the court at the time — the state statute. Jones v. Oregon Cent. R. Co., 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,486, 13 Sawy. 523.

U. S. supreme court.—The provisions of the judiciary act of 1789 relative to taking depositions de bene esse do not apply to causes pending in the supreme court of the United States but only to cases pending in the district and circuit courts. In the supreme court the testimony can be taken only according to its rules. The London Packet, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 371, 4 L. ed. 264; The Argo, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 287, 4 L. ed. 241.

Texas.— The right to perpetuate testimony was recognized and established many centuries ago by the civil law, and was the law of Mexico and of Texas prior to the revolution. Sullivan v. Dimmitt, 34 Tex. 114.

When proper.—They may be taken where a party is in actual undisturbed possession of land, and although no action has been brought, he is exposed to a future attack. Hickman v. Hickman, 1 Del. Ch. 133. So where land is devised from an heir who intends to bring suit to recover it, but has had no opportunity to examine his witness and there is danger of losing his testimony before a judicial investigation can be had. Hickman v. Hickman, 1 Del. Ch. 133. Where a person in possession has reason to believe that another intends to impeach his title, upon the ground that the title by which he holds the estate is a forgery, and as the person in possession can take no step to establish his title, and as the person out of possession will not bring an ejectment against him, until his witnesses are dead, then the person in possession may file a bill to perpetuate the testimony of his own witness and thus frustrate the design of the person out of possession, who delays bringing suit. Ellice v. Roupell, 32 Beav. 299, 307, 318, 9 Jur. N. S. 530, 32 L. J. Ch. 563, 624, 8 L. T. Rep. N. S. 191, 2 New Rep. 3, 150, 11 Wkly. Rep. 579. A bill to perpetuate testimony will lie only in aid of a right purely legal and not in aid of equitable proceedings. Baxter v. Farmer, 42 N. C. 239; Smith v. Turner, 39 N. C. 433, 47 Am. Dec. 353. The testimony of the witnesses to a deed (Caldwell v. Head, 17 Mo. 561; Mason v. Goodburne, Rep. T. Finch 391, 23 Eng. Reprint 214); or a bond (Suffolk v. Green, 1 Atk. 450, 26 Eng. Reprint 286) may be perpetuated. The testimony may be perpetuated where an action for infringement of a patent is anticipated. New York, etc., Coffee Polishing Co. v. New York Coffee Polishing Co., 9 Fed. 578, 20 Blatchf. 174, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 485. Depositions may be taken by one threatened with suits on promissory notes alleged to have been the condition of the witness but upon the situation of the party and his power to bring his right to an immediate investigation,[17] and will not be defeated because it may subject the defendant to injurious consequences as a penalty.[18]

2. RIGHTS AND INTERESTS PROTECTED. Only present rights can be protected by this mode of taking depositions, but it is immaterial that the interest is slight or remote. A mere contingency, however near or valuable, is not sufficient.[19]

3. NOT FAVORED. Unless the right to perpetuate testimony is absolute, the preservation of evidence by depositions in this mode is not favored, and will not be permitted unless where necessary to prevent a failure of justice.[20]

III. WHOSE DEPOSITION MAY BE TAKEN.

A. In General. The testimony of a corporation may be taken by procuring forged with his name. He may take the deposition of the forger who is imprisoned on a conviction for other forgeries. Graham v. Bank, 3 Lanc. Bar (Pa.) 68. Sureties may examine the principal on a bond touching usury in the consideration, but they must first offer to pay the amount acknowledged to be due. Crawford v. McAdams, 63 N. C. 67. In Belfast v. Chichester, 2 Jac. & W. 439, it was questioned whether a court of equity had jurisdiction to entertain a bill filed to perpetuate testimony in support of a claim to a dignity. One contemplating a tortious act cannot perpetuate testimony to shield him from the legal consequences of his proposed wrong-doing. Hanford v. Ewen, 79 Ill. App. 327.

17. Hall v. Stout, 4 Del. Ch. 269.

18. Hickman v. Hickman, 1 Del. Ch. 133 [citing Suffolk v. Green, 1 Atk. 450, 26 Eng. Reprint 286]. A party may bring a bill to perpetuate the testimony in many cases where he cannot bring a bill for relief, without waiving the penalty as in waste, or in the case of a foreign deed, or in the case of insurances after a commission to examine witnesses beyond seas as to fraudulent losses. Suffolk v. Green, 1 Atk. 450, 26 Eng. Reprint 286.

The right contemplated by the Illinois statute is a present right, either vested or contingent, and the proceeding cannot be maintained to protect a mere possibility or expectancy. Hanford v. Ewen, 79 Ill. App. 327.

Establishing will of lunatic.—If one makes a will and afterward becomes a lunatic, a bill will not lie, during the life of the lunatic, to perpetuate the testimony of the witnesses to it. Next of kin of a lunatic, however hopeless his condition, have no interest whatever in the property which will sustain such a bill. Dursley v. Berkeley, 6 Ves. Jr. 251, 31 Eng. Reprint 1036. The next of kin of a lunatic who has contracted to sell his expectancy has such an interest as will entitle him to file a bill in perpetuam relative to such expectancy. Butler v. Haskell, 4 Desauss. (S. C.) 651.

Reversioner.— A bill by one of two persons, each claiming to be the purchaser of a reversion after an estate for life, will not lie in the lifetime of the life-tenant. Hitchcock v. Sedgwick, 2 Vern. Ch. 156, 23 Eng. Reprint 707.

Release of cause of action.— There is no right to preserve testimony for protection against a possible action for slander, where the probable plaintiff releases all claims which he may have for the utterances. Hanford v. Ewen, 79 Ill. App. 327.

Right which may be barred.— The court will not perpetuate testimony of a right which may be immediately barred by the defendant. Dursley v. Berkeley, 6 Ves. Jr. 251, 31 Eng. Reprint 1036.

Tenant by the curtesy.— The possession of one claiming as tenant by the curtesy is a sufficient interest to be protected. Hall v. Stout, 4 Del. Ch. 269.

In England courts of equity have jurisdiction to perpetuate testimony with a view to proceedings in foreign courts. Morris v. Morris, 11 Jur. 93, 16 L. J. Ch. 286, 2 Phil. 205.

The reasons assigned are that the testimony is not given under the sanction of the penalties which the general policy of the law imposes upon the crime of perjury, and that as the depositions cannot be used until the death of the witness any perjury committed must necessarily go unpunished. Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & St. 83, 24 Rev. Rep. 149, 1 Eng. Ch. 83.

the instance of a co-party,[25] or by the adverse party,[26] in like manner as may the depositions of witnesses who are not parties. However, where the court is vested with a discretion in the premises, it will not permit a party to have his testimony taken by deposition where prejudice will or may result to the adverse party, but only where it satisfactorily appears that he is unable to attend.[27]

IV. GROUNDS FOR TAKING.

A. In General. Although the right to perpetuate testimony and the right to take depositions de bene esse rest on different grounds, the reason for preserving testimony by either mode is practically the same, that is, the danger of losing

N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 872, subd. 5, which requires the affidavit to procure an examination before trial to set forth the physical disability of the person to be examined or other special circumstances which render an examination proper, and provides that "this subdivision does not apply to a case where the party to be examined is a party to the action," by this proviso merely exempts a party to an action from the restrictions contained in the other part of the subdivision and does not affect his right to obtain his own deposition or that of any other party to the action under the general provisions of the statute. Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Siefke, 144 N. Y. 354, 39 N. E. 358; Jarvis v. Brennan, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 723, 24 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 383; McVitey v. Stanton, 13 N. Y. Suppl. 914, 20 N. Y. Civ. See Briggs v. Taylor, 4 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 328. Also see contra, Montague v. Worstell, 55 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 406, which is manifestly overruled by the foregoing cases.

To support plea of usury.— The fact that an act permits a defendant who pleads usury to give testimony in support of the plea will not authorize him to have his testimony taken by deposition on the ground that he is about to leave the state. Stone v. Jones, 4 McCord (S. C.) 254.

Notice by adverse party of intention to testify.— In New York, prior to the amendment of section 399 of the Code of Procedure, the examination of a non-resident party under a commission could not be had, unless the adverse party had given notice of his intention to offer himself as a witness at the trial (Block v. Haas, 8 Abb. Pr. 335; Hull v. Wheeler, 7 Abb. Pr. 411); but the amendments (1857, 1859) obviated this objection so that a party, except in certain specified cases, could be examined the same as any other witness without previous notice (Block v. Haas, 8 Abb. Pr. 335; Fairbanks v. Tregent, 7 Abb. Pr. 21, 16 How. Pr. 187. But see this case on appeal, 17 How. Pr. 258. And see Bigelow v. Mallory, 17 How. Pr. 427). This section as amended did not require the party notified to give notice and specify the points on which he intends to be examined, which the section requires his adversary to do in giving notice of his intended examination. Burling v. Ogden, 14 How. Pr. 75. Where, under a general notice that sundry witnesses are to be examined, a party is called and examined in the absence of the adverse party, his agent or attorney, no subsequent notice of an intention to use such deposition on the trial can be considered a compliance with a statute providing that he shall not testify unless he give reasonable notice of his intention to do so. In the United States courts the deposition of a party cannot be taken at the instance of his adversary, although permissible by the state practice. Ex p. Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 5 S. Ct. 724, 28 L. ed. 1117; Turner v. Shackman, 27 Fed. 183. But see Texas v. Chiles, 21 Wall. 488, 22 L. ed. 650.

27. Goodman v. Wineland, 61 Md. 449, where the court said that the true rule seems to be that while a non-resident plaintiff has not an absolute right to have his testimony taken under a commission he should be allowed to do so in the sound discretion of the court upon his causing it satisfactorily to appear that by reason of permanent inability he is unable to attend the court in person.

Perpetuation unnecessary.— A petition for proceedings to perpetuate the testimony of a city clerk, within the state, in regard to the ballots cast at an election, which are in a ballot-box, sealed according to law, and merely in his custody as such clerk, is insufficient, within Minn. Gen. St. (1894) c. 73, tit. 4, since the law preserves and secures the ballots, and all the clerk could testify to is his custody, which testimony can be as well secured on the trial of any action in the future. State v. Elliott, 75 Minn. 391, 77 N. W. 952.

Professional engagements of physician.— Under a statute authorizing the taking of the deposition of a witness who is about to depart from the state, or who, by reason of age, sickness, "or other cause," shall be unable, or likely to be unable, to attend court, an affidavit averring that a witness living in another county is a physician with a large practice, whose professional engagements are more than ordinarily numerous in October, and that it is likely he will be unable to attend the court to be held in October or April, is insufficient to warrant taking a deposition. American Express Co. v. Bradford, (Miss. 1903) 33 So. 843.

Not within state.— It is not enough that the witness is a non-resident, it must also appear that he is not within the state. Brown v. Russell, 58 N. Y. App. Div. 218, 68 N. Y. Suppl. 755.

Presumption of non-residence.—Where nothing appears to the contrary, if a deposition is taken in the usual mode on a commission issued out of the state, it will be presumed that the witness is a non-resident. Doe v. Welsh, 4 Houst. (Del.) 233. It is prima facie sufficient if the notice, deposition, and return state the witness to be a non-resident. Oliver v. Columbia, etc., R. Co., 65 S. C. 1, 43 S. E. 307.

C. Distant Residence — 1. In General. In some jurisdictions the residence of the witness at a great distance [30] or at a prescribed distance from the place of trial will authorize the taking of his testimony by deposition.[31]

2. Computation of Distance. In determining the propriety of permitting the deposition to be taken, the distance from the residence of the witness to the place of trial is as a rule computed along the ordinary, usual, and shortest way or route of public travel and not in a straight line.[32]

Residence out of the county.— In Michigan where the witnesses in a chancery cause reside in a county other than that in which the suit is pending, the practice is to take their testimony in the county where they reside. Lyon v. Brunson, 48 Mich. 194, 12 N. W. 32. An act authorizing the taking of the deposition of a witness in an action pending in certain designated counties, where he resides in another specified city or county, does not permit the examination of a witness who resides in such city in an action pending in a new county formed since the passage of the act out of part of one of the counties so designated. Brown v. Turner, 15 Ala. 832.

Temporary absence.— A deposition taken out of the state by stipulation is not invalidated by the fact that the actual residence of the witness was within the state. Mason v. Chicago Title, etc., Co., 77 Ill. App. 19.

Without county but within prescribed distance.—Where a deposition may be taken if a witness resides out of the county in which his testimony is to be used, or more than thirty miles from the place of trial, it is sufficient if he live without the county, although his place of residence is less than thirty miles from the place of trial. Skidmore v. Taylor, 29 Cal. 619.

Return of witness.— In Atkins v. Palmer, 5 Madd. 19, before the commission reached its destination the witness had returned to the jurisdiction, and the court refused to permit his examination de bene esse, and held that the bill should be amended.

Existence of other ground.— The residence of the witness is immaterial, where a good ground for taking his deposition is shown. Potts v. Coleman, 86 Ala. 94, 5 So. 780.

Expert testimony.— In a suit for infringing a patent, a commission to examine witnesses abroad should be granted in the case of a contest involving the chemistry of coloring compounds, when it is asserted by the moving party, and denied by the opposing party, that the art is so little practised here that the best expert testimony can only be obtained by such a commission. In Pennsylvania depositions of witnesses who reside more than forty miles from the place of trial may be taken. Fuller v. Guernsey, 6 Luz. Leg. Reg. 152, 24 Pittsb. Leg. J. 200.

In the United States courts the deposition of a witness may be taken de bene esse if he lives at a greater distance from the place of trial than one hundred miles; but not if he lives within that distance and his attendance can be compelled. "Lives" construed.— A witness "lives" where he can be found, and is sojourning, residing, or abiding for his health or any other lawful purpose. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Robison, 58 Fed. 723, 7 C. C. A. 444, 22 L. R. A. 325.

Deposition taken in state court before removal.— A deposition properly taken in an action pending in a state court is not invalidated where the cause is subsequently removed to a federal court, by the fact that when taken the witness resided less than one hundred miles from the place where the cause was pending. U. S. Life Ins. Co. v. Ross, 102 Fed. 722, 42 C. C. A. 601.

Depositions in foreign countries.—The statutory provisions respecting the taking of depositions under such circumstances apply only to depositions de bene e. .e (Sergeant v. Biddle, 4 Wheat. (U. D. Witness "About to Leave." It is proper to permit a deposition to be taken where the witness is about to leave the state or jurisdiction and will probably be absent therefrom when the case is called for trial.[33]

E. Physical Inability. Another common ground for granting a commission or otherwise authorizing a deposition to be taken is the physical inability of the witness to attend the trial because of illness, old age, or other bodily infirmity.[34]

It is not a sufficient ground for a deposition that the witness has no property and is about to remove from one part of the state to another (McFarlane v. Moore, 1 Overt. (Tenn.) 32, 3 Am. Dec. 752); that he is a transient person, moving from place to place, and talked of moving out of the country (Turnley v. Evans, 3 Humphr. (Tenn.) 222); or that he "is a seaman on board a gunboat . . . and liable to be ordered to some other place, and not to be able to attend the court at the time of its sitting" (The Samuel, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 9, 4 L. ed. 23).

Non-resident witness within the state may be examined on commission de bene esse as a going witness. Porter v. Beltzhoover, 2 Harr. (Del.) 484.

Residence at place of taking.— To authorize the deposition of a going witness it is not necessary that he should be a permanent resident of the place where his deposition is taken; a temporary or transient residence is sufficient. Bryden v. Taylor, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 396, 3 Am. Dec. 554.

The deposition of an army officer who expects to be ordered away may be taken. Cardall v. Wilcox, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 266.

The Maryland act of 1779 related only to persons who were residents at the time the depositions were taken and who afterward left the state or died before the trial of the cause. Shane v. Clarke, 3 Harr. & M. (Md.) 101.

Witnesses servants of applicant.— In East India Co. v. Naish, Bunb. 320, 2 Fowl. Exch. Pr. 127, an application for the examination of two ship captains on the ground that they were about to go on a voyage was refused because they were servants of the applicant and under its control, and also because the time was too short to cross-examine.

Criminal proceeding.— Under a statute providing that a defendant in a criminal case may take the depositions of his witnesses if they are about to leave the state without his procurement or consent, or are physically unable to attend the trial, or their death is apprehended, there is no right to a commission to take depositions in a foreign country. F. Exclusive Knowledge of Witness. In chancery depositions of a single witness, sometimes of two, may be taken de bene esse, where the knowledge of the matter rests wholly with the witness or with two witnesses — this in view of the general uncertainty of human life.[35] But this rule has never been adopted in this country by courts of law,[36] although the right to take depositions on this ground has been conferred by statute.[37]

G. Special Circumstances. Special circumstances may authorize the taking of a deposition; as the confinement of the witness in jail,[38] the pendency of criminal proceedings against him,[39] his engagement as attorney in another court,[40] or his inability to furnish security for his appearance as a witness for the people in a criminal case.[41] So where it appears that the witness is a female,[42] is a practising physician,[43] is deaf,[44] it is inconvenient for him to attend,[45] or generally where the justice of the case requires that the testimony be taken in this form.[46]

Ability to attend trial.—Where the witness departs from the county, an order to take his deposition on the ground that there is good reason to believe that he cannot attend within a reasonable time on account of age, sickness, or infirmity, should not be made, as the departure is an indication of an ability to return. McCoskry's Estate, 10 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 178.

Extent of illness.— The ill-health must be such that the witness is in a dangerous state. Bellamy v. Jones, 8 Ves. Jr. 31, 6 Rev. Rep. 205, 32 Eng. Reprint 261.

Witness over seventy.— In England the rule is that the witness must be seventy years old (Fitzhugh v. Lee, Ambl. 65, 27 Eng. Reprint 38; Bidder v. Bridges, 26 Ch. D. 1, 50 L. T. Rep. N. S. 287, 32 Wkly. Rep. 445 [affirming 53 L. J. Ch. 479]; Prichard v. Gee, 5 Madd. 364); when over seventy the order for leave to examine is of course (Rowe v. ——, 13 Ves. Jr. 261, 33 Eng. Reprint 292). In Fitzhugh v. Lee, Ambl. 65, 27 Eng. Reprint 38, the rule requiring the witness to be seventy years of age was dispensed with in the case of the surviving witness to a will, upwards of sixty years old, afflicted with gravel, and the parties residing in Virginia, the chancellor saying: "The parties living in Virginia, is a favorable circumstance; for it would be long before they could be served with process, and possibly when they were, might not pay regard to it."

Jurisdiction of foreign court.— A commission may issue to examine as to the extent of the jurisdiction of a foreign court, but not as to its original constitution. Gage v. Stafford, 2 Ves. 556, 28 Eng. Reprint 354.

Nationality of vessel.— A commission may be granted to determine the nationality of a vessel seized by customs officers. Laragoity v. Atty.-Gen., 2 Price 172.

Proper amount of alimony.— In Forrest v. Forrest, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 661, the court refused a commission to obtain testimony to be used on a reference to ascertain the proper amount of alimony to be paid upon the reversal of so much of a decree for divorce as fixed the amount of permanent alimony.

Questioning foreign judgment.— A commission will not be granted for the purpose of questioning a foreign judgment. Martin v. Nicolls, 3 Sim. 458, 6 Eng. Ch. 458.

To prove foreign unwritten laws a commission may issue, although the statute laws may be proved by official printed copies and the unwritten laws by resident lawyers versed in the laws of the foreign country. Depositions may be taken in a qui tam action (Moses v. Gunn, 1 Root (Conn.) 307), in an action to recover a statutory penalty (Indiana Millers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. People, 65 Ill. App. 355), in an action against a corporation (Eastman v. Coos Bank, 1 N. H. 23), in an injunction proceeding (Rancour's Petition, 66 N. H. 172, 20 Atl. 930), in a foreclosure suit (Lombard v. Thorp, 70 Iowa 220, 30 N. W. 490), in an issue out of chancery to try the validity of a will (Green v. Green, 5 Ohio 278), on the trial of a feigned issue out of chancery (Lockyer v. Lockyer, 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 107), or in an interpleading proceeding (Canada Permanent Bldg. Soc. v. Forest, 6 Ont. Pr. 254).

Action for separation.— Where a wife brings a counteraction for a separation, on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment consisting of charges of adultery with a person named, the husband should be permitted to take depositions as to the misconduct of the wife with the person referred to, for the purpose of justifying his alleged cruel and inhuman treatment. Israel v. Israel, 54 N. Y. App. Div. 408, 66 N. Y. Suppl. 777.

An investigation by a foreign judge as to an alleged smuggling transaction is not within a statute providing that the testimony of any witness residing in the United States may be obtained by commission or letters rogatory, to be used in a suit for the recovery of money or property depending in any court in a foreign country when the government of that country is a party, or interested in the suit, and do not warrant an order directing the attendance of a witness to answer the interrogatories. In re Letters Rogatory, 36 Fed. 306.

In Indiana depositions may be taken without the state in an action pending before a mayor having the jurisdiction and powers of a justice of the peace. Reeves v. Allen, 42 Ind. 359.

The court must have jurisdiction of the cause. U. S. v. Hom Hing, 48 Fed. 635.

The federal statutes relative to the taking and use of depositions are applicable only to cases in the United States circuit and district courts. The Argo, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 287, 4 L. ed. 241.

48. A statute which authorizes depositions to be taken in actions only will not authorize the taking of a deposition to be used on a motion by a person not a party to an action to be relieved from a purchase made at a judicial sale (Crane v. Evans, 12 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 445), to take testimony to be used in supplementary proceedings (Morrell v. Hey, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 430, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 48; Champlin v. Stodart, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 378; Graham v. Colburn, 14 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 52), or to examine a party to an action for the purpose of procuring his testimony to be used on a special motion (Stake v. Andre, 18 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 159), nor can a commission issue in proceedings to disbar an attorney (In re Attorney, 83 N. Y. 164), in a statutory proceeding by a receiver before referees, in relation to claims against an insolvent insurance company (Wood v. Howard Ins. Co., 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 646), or in proceedings against an absconding debtor (In re Whitney, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 533).

In Vermont the provisions of the statute relative to the taking of depositions in civil causes do not apply to that class of cases in which the supreme court has jurisdiction, involving the trial of matters of fact on evidence, as granting divorces, establishing highways, granting new trials on petition, and vacating levies of execution on real estate. Briggs v. Green, 33 Vt. 565.

taken, however, when expressly permitted, or when they are authorized in civil cases generally.[49]

C. Criminal Prosecutions. In many jurisdictions statutes have been enacted which, either expressly or by implication, permit a defendant in a criminal case to take a deposition in his own behalf.[50] If no such statute exists the deposition cannot be taken[51] unless the accused first procures the consent

49. Depositions may be taken and used in contempt proceedings (Una v. Dodd, 38 N. J. Eq. 460), in a proceeding for the discovery of the assets of an estate (Ex p. Gfeller, (Mo. Sup. 1903) 77 S. W. 552; Eckerle v. Wood, 95 Mo. App. 378, 69 S. W. 45), in bastardy proceedings (State v. Hickerson, 72 N. C. 421), in garnishment proceedings (—— v. Galbraith, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 78, 1 L. ed. 297), in probate proceedings (In re Arrowsmith, 206 Ill. 352, 69 N. E. 77; Moore v. Smith, 88 Ky. 151, 10 S. W. 380, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 729; Gildersleeve v. Atkinson, 6 N. M. 250, 27 Pac. 477, in proceedings for the appointment of a receiver (Robinson v. McConnell, 19 Ohio Cir. Ct. 716), in proceedings in a surrogate's court to fix a transfer tax (Matter of Wallace, 71 N. Y. App. Div. 284, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 838), in proceedings on return to a writ of habeas corpus (Re Smart Infants, 12 Ont. Pr. 2), in proceedings to disbar an attorney (In re Wellcome, 23 Mont. 259, 59 Pac. 711. But see In re Attorney, 83 N. Y. 164), on a motion for a new trial (O'Connor v. McLaughlin, 80 N. Y. App. Div. 305, 80 N. Y. Suppl. 741; Llewellyn v. Levy, 33 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 310), on an appeal from an order of filiation and maintenance (Hildreth v. Overseers of Poor, 13 N. J. L. 5), on the trial of an election petition (Maclennan v. Bergin, 1 Hodg. El. Rep. (U. C.) 803), or on a summary application to set aside proceedings on the ground of bad faith in establishing them (Pictou Bank v. Pugsley, 32 N. Brunsw. 384).

Surrogate proceedings.— A statute by its terms applicable to depositions in actions, which by another section is extended to surrogates' courts and to "the proceedings therein, so far as they can be applied to the substance and subject-matter of a proceeding, without regard to its form," authorizes the surrogate's court to grant commissions to take testimony out of the state to be used in special proceedings before it. In re Plumb, 135 N. Y. 661, 32 N. E. 22 [affirming 64 Hun 317, 19 N. Y. Suppl. 79, 22 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 209].

When a special appearance is entered for the purpose of having an unauthorized general appearance stricken out on a motion, the court cannot order a commission to take testimony for the purpose of ascertaining whether the general appearance was authorized, as such an order presupposes the entry of a general appearance, and assumes the very point in issue. of the state.[52] The state with the consent of defendant may take depositions for use in the prosecution;[53] but otherwise cannot do so;[54] and it seems that a deposition taken without the consent of the accused cannot be used in his favor.[55]

VI. PERSONS AND OFFICIALS WHO MAY TAKE.

A. Statutory Designation — 1. In General. The United States statutes designate the judicial officers, magistrates, and others before whom depositions de bene esse may be taken for use in the federal courts,[56] and many of the states have substantially similar statutes which specify the particular officials before whom depositions may be taken generally,[57] or provide for the taking of deposi-

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 25.

Inquiry as to sanity of accused.— Where the object of a statute is to authorize the taking of a deposition for use on the trial of the indictment, it cannot be taken to be used on an inquiry into the sanity of defendant by a commission appointed by the court before the trial. People v. Haight, 13 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 197.

52. In South Carolina the testimony of a non-resident witness can be taken by defendant only by the consent of the solicitor for the state, which consent the court has no power to compel. State v. Murphy, 48 S. C. 1, 25 S. E. 43.

55. Dominges v. State, 7 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 475, 45 Am. Dec. 315.

56. Under U. S. Rev. St. (1878) § 863 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 661] which designates among others before whom depositions de bene esse may be taken, a judge of a county court of any of the United States, the following have been held competent: A "justice" of a county court (Smith v. Williams, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,127), the judge of a probate court, being a court of record and possessing a seal (Merrill v. Dawson, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,469, Hempst. 563 [affirmed in 11 How. 375, 13 L. ed. 736]), and the judge of a county court within a county other than that to which his judicial functions are limited (Voce v. Lawrence, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,979, 4 McLean 203). A judge of a city court (Foreman v. Holmead, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4,935, 5 Cranch C. C. 162) or a judge of a county commissioners' court is not within section 30 of the federal judiciary act authorizing depositions to be taken before certain magistrates and judicial officers (Garey v. Union Bank, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,241, 3 Cranch C. C. 91). Section 30 of the judiciary act which does not include justices of the peace among the officials who may take depositions de bene esse refers to depositions taken without a rule. A deposition may be taken under a rule in the federal court, before such a justice. Banert v. Day, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 836, 3 Wash. 243.

Act of July 29, 1854.— A deposition under section 30 of the act of Sept. 24, 1789, may, under the provisions of the act of July 29, 1854 (10 U. S. St. at L. 315 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 661]) be taken before a notary public. Dinsmore v. Maroney, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,920, 4 Blatchf. 416.

In a territorial court, following the federal admiralty practice, a deposition for use in admiralty may be taken before a notary public. Phelps v. Panama, 1 Wash. Terr. 615.

57. In Michigan a deposition for use in a circuit court may be taken before a justice of the peace, in a county other than that in which the trial is to be had. Eslow v. Mitchell, 26 Mich. 500.

In Mississippi the practice in chancery is to take depositions before justices of the peace without commission and on notice. Gordon v. Watkins, Sm. & M. Ch. 37.

In Oregon a deposition may be taken before an officer authorized to administer oaths on notice and without a commission. Wheeler v. Burckhardt, 34 Oreg. 504, 56 Pac. 644.

Assistants to surrogate.— Where assistants to a surrogate are authorized to administer and certify oaths, if depositions are reduced to writing and the jurat signed by an assistant the presence of the surrogate is constructive and sufficient to satisfy the statute requiring witnesses giving their depositions on probate of a will to be examined before him. In re Clark, 1 Tuck. Surr. (N. Y.) 119.

Coördinate authority.— A deposition noticed to be taken before a county judge may be taken before the county clerk, where both officers have the like authority in the premises, and the statute does not require that the officer should be specified in the notice. Williams v. Chadbourne, 6 Cal. 559. Under a statute designating among others justices of the supreme court and county judges as officials to whom application for an order to take depositions in perpetuam may be made, and providing that the examination may be ordered to be had before any officer to whom application might have been originally made, where application is made to a supreme court justice he may direct the examination to take place before a county judge qualified to act in the premises. Sheldon v. Wood, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 267. Testimony taken by a notary public under the act of 1883 providing "that, in addition to the methods for tions in other states before persons empowered to take depositions or administer oaths therein.[58] It follows that in such jurisdictions depositions can be taken only by officials of the kind or class so designated, and under the circumstances and conditions prescribed.[59] taking testimony now provided by law," the mode provided for by the act may be resorted to, stands upon the same footing as that taken by a regular commissioner. Petrie v. Columbia, etc., R. Co., 27 S. C. 63, 2 S. E. 837.

De facto officer.— A deposition is not invalidated because taken before a de facto notary public who has failed to file his bond as prescribed by statute. Keeney v. Leas, 14 Iowa 464.

On proceedings to probate a will before the surrogate, the testimony of a witness unable to attend before that officer because of bodily infirmity must be taken by him and not by a referee. McCoskry's Estate, 10 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 178.

On the death of a magistrate before whom depositions were to have been taken, they may be taken before the magistrate to whom the docket of the deceased magistrate was transferred. Phelps v. Young, 1 Ill. 327.

Standing commissioner.— Under a statute authorizing a commissioner appointed by a circuit superior court to take depositions in any cause depending in any court of the state, a commissioner appointed by a superior court in chancery may take depositions in an action at law. McGuire v. Pierce, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 167. In West Virginia a master commissioner of the circuit court to whom a cause is referred to take, state, and settle an account of indebtedness has authority to take depositions. Hickman v. Painter, 11 W. Va. 386.

58. Greene v. Tally, 39 S. C. 338, 17 S. E. 779; Mattocks v. Bellamy, 8 Vt. 463; Pike v. Blake, 8 Vt. 400; Patterson v. Patterson, 1 D. Chipm. (Vt.) 200.

Clerk of court of record.— A deposition taken before a "county clerk" is not taken before the clerk of a court of record, where it does not appear that he is the clerk of a county court. Bolds v. Woods, 9 Ind. App. 657, 36 N. E. 933.

Deputy clerk.— A statute empowering the clerk of a court to take depositions does not confer the like authority on the deputy clerk. Hartman v. Hartman, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 368; Urquhart v. Burleson, 6 Tex. 502; Hughes v. Prewitt, 5 Tex. 264.

Non-resident standing commissioners.—The authority given to the commissioners of the state of Tennessee, resident in other states, to take affidavits, to be read as evidence in the courts of that state, includes the authority to take depositions. McCandlass v. Polk, 10 Humphr. (Tenn.) 617. In Maine, it is not necessary that a magistrate before whom depositions are taken in another state should be a commissioner appointed by the governor and council of Maine to take depositions. George v. Nichols, 32 Me. 179.

Unauthorized officer.— It is immaterial that the officer was not authorized to take depositions in the foreign state. City Bank v. Young, 43 N. H. 457. Depositions taken in another state before justices not empowered by the laws thereof to take depositions may be read if they would be admissible if taken within the state. Bostwick v. Lewis, 1 Day (Conn.) 33. It is immaterial that no objection was made to the official character of the officer. Thompson v. Wilson, 34 Ind. 94.

U. S. consul.— The Code of Criminal Procedure nowhere prescribes rules for taking depositions out of the United States, but Tex. Rev. St. art. 2226, provides that in civil cases a United States consul may take depositions, and Code Cr. Proc. art. 762, extends to criminal cases the rules prescribed for civil cases when not in conflict with the criminal code. It was held that a United States consul in Mexico is a proper person to execute a commission to take testimony in Mexico. Adams v. State, 19 Tex. App. 250. An American consul residing in a foreign country, and who has been duly accredited there, is a magistrate authorized to take affidavits and depositions in such country, within the rule of court. Savage v. Birckhead, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 167.

According to the English practice a commission must be executed before a person authorized by the law of the foreign country to administer oaths and take depositions. Levitt v. Levitt, 2 Hem. & M. 626.

Special examiners.— In England instead of commissioners the court may name special examiners. In re Smith, L. R. 8 Eq. 23, 17 Wkly. Rep. 758; London Bank v. Hart, L. R. 6 Eq. 467, 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 553; Crofts v. Middleton, 9 Hare (App.) xviii, lxxv, 17 Jur. 112, 1 Wkly. Rep. 163, 41 Eng. Ch. (App.) xviii, lxxv; Edwards v. Spaight, 2 Johns. & H. 617; Laurence v. Maule, 3 Wkly. Rep. 534. A barrister chosen by the parties to take special evidence must be a special examiner. Reed v. Prest, 1 Kay (App.) xiv.

Ohio.— Gibson v. McArthur, 5 Ohio 329; Matter of Herckelrath, 5 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 565, 7 Ohio N. P. 537.

2. Presumption of Authority. If the deposition purports to have been taken by competent authority the official character assumed and the authority of the person who acted will be presumed until the contrary appears.[60]

3. Territorial Jurisdiction. An officer having general authority to take depositions has no power to act out of the jurisdiction where, under his appointment or the like, he is alone authorized to exercise his functions.[61]

B. Special Appointment or Designation — 1. In General. Persons may be appointed by statute or empowered by state authority to execute commissions or take depositions within or without the state on behalf of and for the use of courts within the state of the appointment;[62] they may be designated by the De facto officer.— Proof that the justice of the peace by whom a foreign deposition was taken was at the time a justice of the peace de facto is good prima facie evidence of his being so de jure. Adams v. Graves, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 355; Allen v. Perkins, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 369.

Officer not specially designated.— Under a rule of court requiring a commission to be directed to a justice of the peace, notary public, or other officer legally empowered to take depositions, a justice of the peace or a notary public is presumed to have authority, and the power need not be affirmatively shown; but where the commission issues to any other officer his authority must appear. Steele v. Stone, 12 N. H. 90; Shepard v. Thompson, 4 N. H. 213.

Failure to state official title.— Where a commission issues to a notary public and is returned by the person who executed it, without a statement of his official title, the deposition is a nullity. Argentine Falls Silver Min. Co. v. Molson, 12 Colo. 405, 21 Pac. 190. In Bryden v. Taylor, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 396, 3 Am. Dec. 554, a deposition taken before a justice of the peace was permitted to be read, although his official character did not appear. It is no objection to the reading of a deposition that the persons before whom it was taken are not described as justices of the peace in the commission or their own certificate. Ridge's Orphans v. Lewis, 1 N. C. 536.

Stipulation to take depositions before a person named, styling him a justice of the peace in a county of one of the British provinces, is a concession that there was a person of that name occupying the official position of justice of the peace at the place mentioned, and an agreement under the statute upon that person as commissioner. Examiners in United States courts.—Under equity rule 67, adopted by the supreme court of the United States, the federal courts are authorized to appoint examiners to take testimony orally beyond the limits of the district in which a suit is pending, and the attendance of witnesses before such an examiner may be compelled by the courts in the district to which the examiner is sent. White v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 79 Fed. 133, 24 C. C. A. 467; Western Div. N. C. R. Co. v. Drew, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,434, 3 Woods 691. See Arnold v. Cheesebrough, 35 Fed. 16 (where the power to make such an appointment is doubted); Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Russell, 35 Fed. 17 [distinguishing Western Div. N. C. R. Co. v. Drew, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,434, 3 Woods 69] (where it is held that an examiner in one district cannot take testimony outside of his district).

In Canada the court will not direct the examination of witnesses to take place before an examiner in a county where no resident master has been appointed, although consented to by the parties. Phelan v. Phelan, 6 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 384.

Appointment by state authority.— A commissioner appointed by the court of another state is appointed under the authority of the state within a provision that depositions may be taken within the state "before commissioners appointed under authority of the state or government in which the suit is pending." Com. v. Smith, 11 Allen (Mass.) 243.

Effect of subsequent statutes.—The powers of a commissioner appointed by statute do not cease by the passage of a subsequent statute which does not affect the officer or his powers or duties except in those particulars in which the former statute is changed or modified. Currier v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 31 N. H. 209.

court in which the action is pending or a judge thereof[63] on suggestion;[64] they may be selected by the party suing out the commission;[65] or each party may participate in the selection.[66] When appointed by a foreign court to execute a commission within the state, the commissioner derives his authority from the foreign state and court.[67]

2. MISNOMER OR MISDESCRIPTION. A deposition cannot be taken before any one but the commissioner named; hence where a commission directed to a person by name or by his official title is executed by a person of different name or having a different title the deposition cannot be read,[68] unless it appears or is proven that the party who executed the commission was the person intended.[69]

63. A provision that depositions de bene esse may be taken before, as well as after, issue joined, in which former case the clerk shall name the commissioner, implies that in the latter case the judge shall name him. Kerchner v. Reilly, 72 N. C. 171.

A foreign court or the judges thereof may be designated to take testimony. Wilson v. Wilson, 9 P. D. 8, 49 L. T. Rep. N. S. 430, 32 Wkly. Rep. 282; Lumley v. Gye, 2 Ch. Consent.— Depositions taken before a notary public by stipulation of the parties are evidence, not by virtue of any authority of the notary to act as commissioner, but by force of the stipulation and his power to administer oaths under the statute. Crone v. Angell, 14 Mich. 340. To same effect see Knight v. Emmons, 4 Mich. 554.

Each party has the right to select his own examiner and one may conduct the direct and the other the cross-examination. Troup v. Haight, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 335; Turner v. Burleigh, 17 Ves. Jr. 354. The right of exceptants to interrogatories to name a commissioner to act on their behalf is not affected by the fact that the party at whose instance the commission is to be issued has also named one. Lowry's Estate, 4 Pa. Dist. 691, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 131.

Waiver of right.— Defendant's neglect, after receiving notice of the name of plaintiff's commissioner, to name another commissioner, must be considered as a waiver of his right to have two commissioners, and a consent to the execution of the commission by the one named. Presumption of identity.— Where a commission is returned by a person of the same name with the commissioner to whom it was

3. Necessity of Official Capacity. Except in those jurisdictions where it is essential that the commission should be directed to an official person,[70] if the commission is directed to a person by name, he derives his authority from the appointment, which carries with it all the powers necessary to execute the commission, including the power to administer oaths to the witnesses, and his official capacity is immaterial.[71]

4. Several Commissioners — a. In General. Two or more commissioners may be appointed;[72] but except by statute if the commission is directed to more than one it must be executed by all,[73] unless by the terms of the commission less than directed there is a presumption of identity. Wallace v. McElevy, 2 Grant (Pa.) 44.

E. 659, where three commissioners were named by the party procuring the commission and but two acted, the third having had no notice of his appointment or of the time and place of taking the testimony, and the deposition was permitted to be read over the objection of the adverse party.

Identification.—Where one party to a joint commission named commissioners and gave their profession and address, and the other merely named the commissioners without identifying them or giving their specific addresses, it was held that the commission was well executed by the commissioners specifically identified, after an unsuccessful endeavor to find the others. Pigott v. Holloway, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 436.

Notice.— A commission to two cannot be executed by one without notice by the acting commissioner to the other. Hoofnagle v. Dering, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 302.

Waiver of objection.—Where a commission for the examination of witnesses abroad was issued directing the depositions to be taken before four commissioners, one of whom, although notified, did not attend, and the commission was executed by the other three, in the absence of any protest at the time, or suggestion that defendant had been injured by its execution by three only, and where he had an opportunity of applying at term to suppress the depositions, but failed to do so, the court held that the ob-the whole number of the commissioners who are therein designated are empowered to act.[74]

b. Statutory Provisions. In some jurisdictions by statute a majority of the commissioners named [75] or any one of them may execute the commission,[76] unless it contain an express direction to the contrary.[77]

C. Incompetency or Disqualification — 1. In General. A commission cannot be executed by a commissioner incompetent to act or disqualified.[78]

2. Interest or Bias — a. In General. The commissioner must stand indifferent between the parties. If he directly or indirectly bear to either party such a relation as would authorize a presumption of bias or prejudice in favor of or against either party he is not competent.[79]

Deposition of commissioner.— A commission directed to two persons named, or either of them, authorizes the deposition of one to be taken by the other. Lonsdale v. Brown, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,492, 3 Wash. 404.

Failure of commissioner to attend.— One commissioner named in a joint and several commission may execute it, although the commissioner of the other party fail to attend. Pennock v. Freeman, 1 Watts (Pa.) 401. Where the commission provided that if either of two commissioners named were absent the other might execute it, and both were at the same place when the commission was received, but it was executed by one in the absence of the other, it was held that, in the absence of any proof of abuse or of any unfairness or partiality by the commissioner who acted, this was no ground for vacating the commission. Leetch v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 4 Daly (N. Y.) 518.

An agreement to waive the provision of a statute requiring two commissioners to act, and that one may take the depositions, must be strictly pursued. Rooney v. Southern Bldg., etc., Assoc., 115 Ga. 400, 41 S. E. 648.

76. O'Brien v. Commercial F. Ins. Co., 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. 224.

Abuse of process.— If the execution by only one of the commissioners was the result of a scheme to abuse the process of the court, and to deprive the parties of an opportunity of having their rights protected, the authority of the court may be invoked and should be exercised to suppress the commission after its return. O'Brien v. Commercial F. Ins. Co., 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. 224.

The provision of the Maryland code that when a commission in an equity case is issued to two commissioners either of them may execute it applies as well to actions at law. Purner v. Piercy, 40 Md. 212, 17 Am. Rep. 591.

77. O'Brien v. Commercial F. Ins. Co., 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. 224.

78. A person not named in the commission cannot assist in its execution. Willings v. Consequa, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,767, Pet. C. C. 301.

Holding incompatible offices.— Where under constitutional provisions the offices of county clerk and notary public are incompatible, a deposition purporting to have been taken by a notary after he had been elected and qualified as county clerk is irregularly taken. Biencourt v. Parker, 27 Tex. 558.

Illiteracy.— A deposition taken by two commissioners, one of whom made his mark instead of signing, is properly rejected; the presumption being that he could neither read nor write and was therefore incompetent to act. Osten v. Carey, 23 Ga. 4.

Non-residence of commissioner.— That a commissioner appointed by a foreign court to take a deposition within the state is a resident of the foreign state is no reason for the refusal by the state court of its aid in procuring the execution of the commission. Matter of Canter, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 126, 81 N. Y. Suppl. 338 [reversed on another ground in 82 N. Y. App. Div. 103, 81 N. Y. Suppl. 416, in which Van Brunt, P. J., in concurring in the result, said that the foreign court could not confer on a foreigner the right to exercise semijudicial functions within the state].

Termination of authority.— Where a commission issues to take the depositions of several witnesses without the state, the commissioner's authority expires on the return of his commission pursuant to the direction thereon, and the filing of the same with the clerk of the court from whence it issued, together with the depositions of a portion of the witnesses; and the commissioner has no power thereafter to take the depositions of other witnesses named in the commission. b. Attorneys or Agents. An attorney, counsel, solicitor,[80] or agent of one of the parties to the cause is not competent to execute a commission or take depositions therein,[81] and with some exceptions[82] this disqualification has been held to England.— Peacock's Case, 9 Coke 70*b*; Cooke v. Wilson, 4 Madd. 380.

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 87 et seq.

Action against town — Taxpayer.— If the statute declares that a magistrate is not disqualified from acting because one of the parties is a town in which the magistrate is a taxpayer, he is not disqualified from taking a deposition in behalf of a town in which he is a taxpayer. New Hartford v. Canaan, 52 Conn. 158.

Action by county clerk to county commissioners.— In a suit brought by a county depositions taken before a justice who is also clerk of the county commissioners may, in the absence of unfair action on his part, be offered in evidence. Overseers of Poor v. Forest County, 91 Pa. St. 404.

Bookkeeper for party.— A notary public is not disqualified because he is the bookkeeper of one of the parties. Palmer v. Hudson River State Hospital, 10 Kan. App. 98, 61 Pac. 506.

Certificate of impartiality.— Where in an action by a corporation it is agreed that a commission may be executed by a person named, providing that he certifies that he is not interested in the suit or in plaintiff as an officer, member, or otherwise, a certificate that he is not of counsel or kin to any of the parties in the suit or interested therein is insufficient. Rooney v. Southern Bldg., etc., Assoc., 115 Ga. 400, 41 S. E. 648.

Extent of bias.— In Coffin v. Jones, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 441, the court permitted the deposition to be read, although the magistrate who took it on the part of defendant testified that he was defendant's friend, and felt it to be his duty to aid him by advice, etc., in his defense; that he was present at the taking of other depositions and gave advice; and that defendant then said he wished to take some depositions before him, after which he acted impartially between the parties. It also appeared that plaintiff agreed to the commission under which the deposition was taken, and declared himself satisfied with the magistrate's impartiality; and that the deposition was used at a previous trial without objection.

Foreign judge who is hostile to the party procuring the commission may be omitted, and the foreign court requested not to permit him to take part in the examination. Valentin v. Hall, 35 L. J. Q. B. 121, 14 Wkly. Rep. 606.

Intimacy with witness.—In Ongley v. Hill, 22 Wkly. Rep. 817, a commission was issued to a minister resident at a foreign court to examine a witness attached to the embassy, one of whom was the minister's personal attendant.

Name identical with that of interested party.— Mere identity of name of itself is not sufficient to establish the fact that the commissioner before whom a deposition is taken is the same person who is shown by the papers in the cause to be an interested party. Colgin v. Redman, 20 Ala. 650.

Proof of interest.— A mere suggestion of interest is insufficient. There must be an affidavit specifying the ground. Biays v. Merrihew, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 251.

The interest of the commissioner with the party objecting on that ground is immaterial. Ballard v. Perry, 28 Tex. 347.

Attorney in other cases.— That the officer who took a deposition is an attorney for one of the parties in other cases is no ground for suppressing the deposition. Burton v. Galveston, etc., R. Co., 61 Tex. 526.

Conclusiveness of finding below.— A finding below supported by evidence that a commissioner was not the attorney for one of the parties will not be disturbed. Augusta, etc., R. Co. v. Killian, 79 Ga. 234, 4 S. E. 165.

Relationship at time of taking deposition. — A deposition will not be suppressed on the ground of the professional relationship of the officer to the party procuring the testimony, where it is not shown to have existed at the time the deposition was taken. McGrew v. Wilson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 57 S. W. 63.

Special employment.— An attorney in a distant city, employed to find and furnish the names of witnesses to prove certain facts, is incompetent to act as the notary to take the depositions of such witnesses. Testard v. Butler, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 106, 48 S. W. 753.

What constitutes relation.— A magistrate to be disqualified must be counsel or attorney within the meaning of the statute. Coffin v. Jones, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 441.

81. Smith v. Smith, 2 Me. 408; Mostyn v. Spencer, 6 Beav. 135, 9 Jur. 97, 14 L. J. Ch. 1.

Proof of agency.— The fact that the commissioner had two years previously addressed letters of inquiry about claims adverse to plaintiff's title, his appointment as agent not having been proven, is insufficient to show his incompetency. Craig v. Lambert, 44 La. Ann. 885, 11 So. 464.

82. Not interested in cause.— A partner of the solicitor of one of the parties, who is not retained in nor interested in the cause, is not disqualified. Potier v. Barclay, 15 Ala. 439.

Presumption as to scope of partnership.— A deposition will not be rejected because it was taken before a master who was the part-extend to the partners,[83] and clerks of the attorneys or counsel.[84] However the mere fact of having been previously connected with the cause as attorney or counsel is not a ground of disqualification, if that connection has ended.[85]

c. Consanguinity or Affinity. The relationship by blood[86] or with some exceptions[87] the affinity of the commissioner or other like officer to a party to the cause[88] operates as a disqualification.

D. Compensation — 1. In General. Where depositions are taken within the state or in the federal courts, the fees of the officers designated to take them are fixed by statute.[89] But in the absence of any statute limiting or regulating the compensation of commissioners appointed to take depositions in suits or actions pending in other states, their compensation is the subject of adjustment by the court by whom they were appointed and whose officers they are.[90]

2. Amount. The compensation of a commissioner should not be limited by the fees fixed by statute for like services rendered by a notary public or a justice of the peace, nor should it exceed the fees allowed a referee, and in determining the question in a given case the limits furnished by these analogous employments should govern.[91]

Student in office of attorney.— Depositions taken by a student at law of an attorney in the cause, and in the office and presence of the attorney, are inadmissible. Glanton v. Griggs, 5 Ga. 424.

Clerk to solicitors and commissioners.— It is a ground to suppress depositions that the clerk to the commissioners was a clerk to one of the solicitors (Newton v. Foot, Dick. 793, 21 Eng. Reprint 479; Cooke v. Wilson, 4 Madd. 380) or parties (Shaw v. Lindsey, 15 Ves. Jr. 380, 33 Eng. Reprint 798).

Previous employment of an engrossing clerk by one of the solicitors will not incapacitate him from acting in a like capacity for the commissioners. Wood v. Freeman, 4 Hare, 552, 9 Jur. 549, 14 L. J. Ch. 371, 30 Eng. Ch. 552.

An attorney who acted for a party in obtaining a judgment may act as commissioner in taking a deposition for the party, to be used in a claim suit growing out of the judgment; he not being the attorney in the claim suit, and it not being shown that he has any interest in the event of the suit. 88. The brother-in-law of a party is incompetent. Bryant v. Ingraham, 16 Ala. 116. See contra, Culver v. Benedict, 13 Gray (Mass.) 7. The fact that one of the parties had a brother-in-law who had resided within the state and was of the same name as the commissioner who took a deposition abroad is no evidence of the identity of the two or of the incompetency of the commissioner. Blakey v. Blakey, 33 Ala. 611.

Presumption.— Until the contrary appears, it will be presumed that the commissioner is not of kin to either party. Grigg v. Mallett, 111 N. C. 74, 15 S. E. 936. See Blair v. State Bank, 11 Humphr. (Tenn.) 84.

3. Liability For. The fees or charges of executing a commission are chargeable in the first instance to the party at whose request it was issued and executed,[92] and commissioners employed by the parties or counsel are entitled, if their compensation is not fixed by statute or has not been agreed on,[93] to recover such sums as their services are reasonably worth.[94]

VII. Bills in Equity.

A. To Perpetuate Testimony — 1. In General. A bill to perpetuate testimony or to examine witnesses in perpetuam rei memoriam is an original bill in anticipation of litigation not instituted, and is designed to secure the evidence of some present right or interest which may be endangered or lost, if the testimony on which it depends is not preserved.[95] It is not a bill of discovery in the strict ing to the days they actually sit. Small v. Atwood, 4 L. J. Exch. Eq. 1, 1 Y. & Coll. Exch. 53. See Howell v. Tyler, 7 Jur. 525, 12 L. J. Ch. 223, 2 Y. & Coll. 284, 21 Eng. Ch. 284, where a small sum was allowed for perusing the pleadings.

Reference to ascertain amount.—An action to recover compensation may be restrained and a reference made to ascertain what is due. Ambrose v. Dunmow Union, 8 Beav. 43; Blundell v. Gladstone, 3 Jur. 413, 8 L. J. Ch. 109, 9 Sim. 455, 16 Eng. Ch. 455.

A stenographer employed by a commissioner must look to the latter for his pay. Manning v. Standard Theatre, 83 Mo. App. 627. The commissioner is entitled to an allowance for a stenographer, where the parties have agreed that one should be employed. Watkins v. McDonald, 70 Mo. App. 357.

Commissioners have a lien for their fees and may refuse to return the depositions until they have been paid. Peters v. Beer, 14 Beav. 101, 15 Jur. 1024, 20 L. J. Ch. 424; Smith v. Hallen, 2 F. & F. 678. But see Lucan v. O'Malley, 8 Ir. Eq. 386; Doherty v. Doherty, 8 Ir. Eq. 379. But see Melvin v. Handley, 1 Wilcox (Pa.) 235, 6 Lanc. L. Rev. 47.

93. Agreement with attorney.— Authority to an attorney to engage the services of a commissioner carries with it as an incident the power to stipulate with him as to the amount of his compensation. Fairchild v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 8 Ill. App. 591.

94. Peoples' Bank v. McLendon, 57 Ga. 384; Fairchild v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 8 Ill. App. 591; Lyman v. Hayden, 118 Mass. 422; Paxson v. Macdonald, 97 Mo. App. 165, 70 S. W. 1101.

Compensation fixed by court.— In the absence of contract, where the court of another state has fixed the compensation of a commissioner appointed by it, he cannot sue in the state in which the commission was executed for the recovery of a larger sum upon a quantum meruit. Peters v. Rand, 108 Pa. St. 255.

Employment of counsel by commissioner. — The employment of a commissioner appointed under the authority of one state to take depositions in another carries with it no implied authority to employ counsel, either to instruct the commissioner in his own duties or to look after the interests of a party to the controversy to which the depositions relate. Lyman v. Hayden, 118 Mass. 422.

Such bills are according to the usage of the Roman law. Mason v. Goodburne, Rep. T. Finch 391, 23 Eng. Reprint 214, which in Cooper Eq. p. 51, is said to be the first and leading case on a bill of this character.

In England, when lands are devised from the heir, the devisee, in order to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses, exhibits a bill in chancery against the heir, sets forth the will verbatim and suggests that the heir is inclined to dispute its validity. Then, defendant having answered, they proceed to issue as in other cases and examine the witness to the will, after which the cause is at an end without proceeding to any decree, no relief being prayed by the bill. This is what is known as proving a will in chancery. Hickman v. Hickman, 1 Del. Ch. 133.

Under U. S. Rev. St. (1878) § 866 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 663], providing that any circuit court on application to it as a court of equity may according to the usages of chancery direct depositions to be taken in perpetuam, if they refer to any matters that may be cognizable in any court of the United States, refers to the usage of the English chancery, and a proceeding cannot be maintained in equity under any circumstances by mere ex parte petition to take depositions in perpetuam, without any bill filed, or process issued, or served on defendants in interest, although they are not in the country. Green v. Compagnia Generale Italiana Di Navigation, 82 Fed. 490.

Effect of statute.— The Virginia code of 1849 providing for the perpetuation of testisense of the term and cannot be made to perform the double functions of both species of these bills.[96]

2. NECESSARY AVERMENTS — a. In General. The ground or reason for perpetuating the testimony must be set forth.[97]

b. Title or Interest — (I) OF COMPLAINANT. The complainant must distinctly set forth his right, title, or interest in the matter or thing to which the evidence relates.[98]

(II) OF DEFENDANT. The bill must also show that defendant claims no title or interest in the subject-matter as to which the testimony is sought.[99]

c. Subject-Matter of Controversy. The bill must specifically state the subject-matter of the controversy.[1]

d. Inability to Obtain Judicial Investigation. The bill must aver that the facts to which the testimony relates cannot be made the subject of immediate judicial investigation, or if they can, that the sole right of action belongs to the other party, or that some impediment to an investigation exists or has been interposed by such other party.[2]

e. Naming Witnesses. Although it has been held that the names of the witnesses should be stated,[3] it has also been held that such a statement is unnecessary [4] mony merely prescribed a new mode of taking depositions for that purpose and did not change the form of proceeding by a bill in equity for the same purpose. Smith v. Grosjean, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 109.

Parties.— The bill must be filed against all those concerned in interest. Glover v. Faulkner, 1 Vern. 452, 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 234.

Necessity of filing.— It is improper to take depositions after the subpœna, before the bill is filed and without an order to take the testimony. Smith v. Grosjean, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 109.

Service of bill in first instance.— The court ordered a commission for examination of an aged witness to issue without requiring a bill to be served in the first instance, the object of the suit being to perpetuate testimony, and it having been sworn that there was danger of testimony being lost. Hunt v. Prentiss, 4 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 487.

To establish usury — Tender of amount due.— A bill filed by the sureties on a bond against the obligee, alleging that the bond was usurious, and that the knowledge of the usury was confined to the principal and defendant, and praying that the principal might be examined touching the usury in the consideration of the bond, and his testimony be perpetuated, will not be entertained unless the sureties offer to pay the amount which they acknowledge to be due. 4. Since the purpose of a bill to perpetuate testimony may include the testimony of any

f. Facts as to Which Examination Is Sought. The facts as to which the plaintiff desires an examination of the witnesses should be set forth sufficiently to inform the defendant of the point or points as to which they are to be examined, but not the evidence which they are expected to give.[5]

g. Danger of Loss of Evidence. It must sufficiently appear by the bill that the complainant is in danger of losing the evidence sought to be perpetuated before a judicial investigation can be had.[6]

3. Prayer For Relief. As the object of the bill is attained so soon as the desired testimony is procured, it is sufficient to pray for a commission and subpœna, and a prayer for relief is unnecessary and improper.[7]

4. Demurrer. The remedy of a defendant who deems the bill insufficient to entitle the complainant to preserve the testimony is to demur; but it is too late to object after a commission has been ordered.[8]

5. Dismissal For Want of Prosecution. The bill may be dismissed for want of prosecution at any time before replication and examination of witnesses.[9]

6. Affidavit. No affidavit is necessary where the bill sets forth the ground or reason for perpetuating the testimony.[10]

7. Answer. The answer should not put in controversy matters which can be decided only on a trial of the main issue.[11] And an averment of readiness to witness to certain facts material to the subject in controversy, the names of the witnesses need not be stated in the bill. Pettebone v. Lehigh Valley Coal Co., 4 Kulp (Pa.) 349.

Bill to establish forgery of note.—Where a bill alleges that certain notes in respondent's possession have been forged, and prays for an order to perpetuate the testimony of the forger (in prison, and about to be sentenced), it is not necessary that it should set forth the notes in hæc verba. Graham v. Bank, 3 Lanc. L. Rev. 68.

Supplemental bill.— Where, after the completion of the examination of witnesses upon a bill to perpetuate testimony, the commission is closed, plaintiff cannot sustain a supplemental bill for the further examination of witnesses upon the ground that new material facts have been discovered since the filing of the former bill, without stating in the bill what his facts are. 10. Hickman v. Hickman, 1 Del. Ch. 133.

Contra.— A bill to perpetuate testimony must be supported by an affidavit that the witnesses are old and infirm or likely to die before the disputed question can be legally determined, but such affidavit is sufficient when made a part of the bill itself. Norristown Ins., etc., Co. v. Burgess, 14 Montg. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 91.

11. As for instance questions of title. May v. Armstrong, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 260, 20 Am. Dec. 137; Pettebone v. Everhart, 4 Kulp (Pa.) 353. In Ellice v. Roupell, 32 Beav. 299, 308, 318, 9 Jur. N. S. 530, 32 L. J. Ch. 563, 624, 8 L. T. Rep. N. S. 191, 2 New Rep. 3, 150, 11 Wkly. Rep. 579, plaintiff filed a bill in perpetuam, on the ground that the matters in dispute could not be then made the subject of judicial investigation. Defendant answered, and plaintiff amended in immaterial matters. Defendant then pleaded that since answering plaintiff had himself filed another bill, raising the point in dispute and showing that the mat-become defendant in an action by plaintiff to determine a dispute as to a title is impertinent, unless it is also averred that defendant is in possession.[12] An answer accompanied by a release of all claims on the part of defendant against plaintiff is sufficient to defeat the bill and authorize its dismissal.[13]

8. Setting Down Cause For Hearing. The bill is never brought to a hearing because the end is answered by the examination. If the cause is set down the bill will be dismissed with costs;[14] but the dismissal will not prejudice the plaintiff in the perpetuation of his testimony.[15]

9. Publication. The testimony when taken must be sealed and kept not to be published until after the death of the witness by a special order made on an affidavit showing such decease.[16]

10. Hearing — a. Scope of Inquiry. If defendant merely answers, and does not join in the commission[17] plaintiff will be confined to the interrogatories annexed to the bill.[18]

b. Questions Considered. Eligibility to a public office cannot be considered on the hearing of a bill to preserve testimony to prosecute an action for the office.[19]

B. To Take Testimony De Bene Esse — 1. In General. A bill to examine ters in question could now be made the subject of judicial investigation, and it was held that the plea could not be sustained, and that if at all it should have been pleaded in the first instance.

Jr. 670, 673, a motion being made to publish the depositions of living witnesses, Eldon, Lord Chancellor, said: "There is no precedent that I can find for publishing these depositions. After considerable research, there is not a single instance, except of a person sick, incapable of traveling, or prevented by accident: all the orders, but in those excepted cases, stating, that the witness is dead." See infra, XIX, B.

Delivery of copies.— The court will not order copies of depositions taken to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses to be delivered out for the purpose of perfecting the title to an estate, even when the witnesses are dead. Teale v. Teale, 1 Sim. & St. 385, 1 Eng. Ch. 385.

Discretion of court.— Where depositions are taken under a bill in perpetuam it is a matter for discretion in the court to allow publication or not, according to the case made; but publication will not be ordered before the death of the witness unless in a strong case. Harris v. Cotterell, 3 Meriv. 678, 36 Eng. Reprint 260.

17. But where defendant joins in the commission or rule, plaintiff may exhibit such interrogatories as he pleases. Because by joining defendant is at liberty to examine as largely as he pleases, and this authorizes plaintiff to extend his examination to any matters suitable to his case. Hickman v. Hickman, 1 Del. Ch. 133.

witnesses de bene esse is in aid of a trial at law or in equity, where the testimony is in danger of being lost before the matter to which it relates can be examined into by the proper tribunal;[20] or it may be made a part of a bill in equity, brought in a case in which such testimony has a direct bearing and reference.[21]

2. NECESSARY AVERMENTS. The bill must sufficiently aver facts sufficient to authorize the court to issue a commission or order the taking of the testimony.[22] Thus the bill must aver that an action is pending[23] and the pleas therein,[24] the probable inability to procure the attendance of the witness at the trial and the reasons therefor,[25] the facts to be proved by the witnesses,[26] and the materiality of their testimony,[27] that the court may judge of the necessity of taking the testimony, and the danger of loss by delay.

3. AFFIDAVIT. The bill must always be accompanied with an affidavit showing the circumstances by which the evidence intended to be preserved is in danger of being lost.[28] It should name the witness,[29] specify the matters as to which his testimony is desired,[30] and state the grounds on which the testimony is sought — as that the witness is aged,[31] infirm,[32] or in a dangerous state of health,[33] or that the witness or witnesses sought to be examined are acquainted with the facts and is or are the only witness or witnesses to the particular fact or facts.[34]

4. Publication. The ordinary course is that depositions are not to be published, unless the witness is dead or is absent, so that it is impossible to have a subsequent examination,[35] and then the publication can only be by special order.[36]

VIII. Application For Commission or Leave to Take Testimony.

A. Necessity. Except where depositions may be taken on notice[37] or the parties consent,[38] a formal application to take the testimony of a witness in the form of a deposition is essential and necessary.[39]

B. Consent.[40] A commission may issue or depositions may be taken by consent of the parties without an application or affidavit.[41]

The English rule is said to be that when the examination is sought because of age, the affidavit must state the witness to be seventy years old. See Hickman v. Hickman, 1 Del. Ch. 133. But see Fitzhugh v. Lee, Ambl. 65, 27 Eng. Reprint 38, where the witness was sixty years of age but afflicted with a dangerous disease.

Necessity of stating age of witness.— Where the ground is that the matter lies in the knowledge of a single witness or of two the affidavit need state that fact only, and need not state the age of the witness. Informalities in procuring the testimony, or in the return, may be waived by consenting to the commission. Bird v. Halsy, 87 Fed. 671.

Misapprehension.— An order to take a deposition de bene esse may be vacated when granted by the consent of the adverse party given under a misapprehension. Seymour v. Doull, 32 Nova Scotia 364.

Statutory requirement of order.— Where a deposition in a criminal case can be taken by the accused only by order of the court and upon notice to the attorney-general, a deposition cannot be taken without an order, although the attorney-general consent. Curtis v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 502.

42. The taking of a deposition by one party will not preclude a subsequent application by the other. Woodruff v. Garner, 39 Ind. 246.

A dedimus may issue on the application of one party, although the other refuses to consent. Farnsworth v. Pierce, 7 Vt. 83.

Failure of applicant to proceed.— Where notice of intention to take a deposition has been given, and interrogatories and cross interrogatories have been filed, a party on whom the notice is served, as well as the party giving the notice, may obtain the commission and take the deposition, in case the other party fails to do so. Burton v. Galveston, etc., R. Co., 61 Tex. 526. Where plaintiff has obtained an order for a commission but has not served it, defendant is entitled as of course to a like order. At common law where consent was obtained, the practice was to apply to the court in term or to a judge in vacation. Ragan v. Cargill, 24 Miss. 540.

Application must be made in open court and not to a judge at chambers. Peters v. Prevost, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,032, 1 Paine 64.

Court or judge.— A statute authorizing judges of a superior court to perform the duties of justices of the supreme court confers the power to summon a witness whose testimony is desired on the judges of the former court and not on the court itself. Fonda v. Armour, 49 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 72.

Inferior courts of record.— A statute conferring authority generally on courts of record to issue commissions will empower an inferior court of record to procure testimony in this mode. Watson v. Smith, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 51.

Justices of the peace.— Under a statute authorizing a justice of the peace to issue a commission to take the testimony of a witness, who is not within the county or within an adjoining county, the justice may issue a commission to take the testimony of a witness without the state. Collins v. Shaffer, 78 Hun (N. Y.) 512, 29 N. Y. Suppl. 574. A statute authorizing the issue of a commission by a justice to take the deposition of a witness empowers the issue of a commission to take the deposition of a party to the action. Murphy v. Sullivan, 77 N. Y. Suppl. 950, 10 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 303.

Officers authorized to perform the duties of the court, the judges thereof, or of officers of other courts as clerks of the court (Cannon v. White, 16 La. Ann. 85; Henning v. Boyle, 112 Fed. 397), court commissioners (Fonda v. Armour, 49 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 72), or a county judge authorized to perform the duties of a supreme court judge at chambers (Lang v. Brown, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 256) may entertain the application.

Probate courts and judges.— A statute authorizing a judge of probate to "make and issue all warrants and processes that may be necessary or proper to carry into effect the powers granted to him," etc., authorizes the judge to issue a dedimus (Amory v. Fellowes, 5 Mass. 219), or a commission to take the deposition of the witness to a will, who resides without the state (In re High, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 515). In New York the surrogates' courts have statutory power to issue a commission to take the testimony of witnesses without the state in a proceeding pending in such court (Matter of Wallace, 71 N. Y. App. Div. 284, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 838; Matter of Plumb, 64 Hun 317, 19 N. Y. Suppl. 79), or to direct the examination of a witness residing in another county to be taken before a referee (In re Gee, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 425, 24 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 241). The Washington code confers authority on a superior court sitting in probate to issue a commission to take necessary testimony. North America Reformed Presb. Church v. McMillan, 31 Wash. 643, 72 Pac. 502.

Referee to hear and determine cannot entertain an application for a commission (Rathbun v. Ingersoll, 34 N. Y. Super. Ct. 211), unless specially authorized (see Hughes v. Rees, 9 Ont. Pr. 86; Moffatt v. Prentice, 6 Ont. Pr. 33).

authorized to entertain and grant applications for taking testimony in the form of depositions.[46]

E. Time of Application — 1. In General. The application should be made with due diligence,[47] although if no prejudice has resulted delay may be disregarded, and the application granted.[48]

2. As Dependent on Condition of Cause — a. Perpetuation of Testimony. The object of perpetuating testimony is to preserve evidence which may be lost because of the inability of a party to bring the matter in controversy to a judicial investigation, and the consequent danger of losing the testimony. Hence depositions can be taken in this mode only in anticipation of litigation and when by no

The Maine statute which contemplates notice to all parties interested without regard to their residence does not limit the court to cases where one or more of the parties interested are non-residents, because of a single provision therein prescribing the notice to be given to non-residents. Ocean Ins. Co. v. Bigler, 72 Me. 469.

The provision of the Chinese exclusion acts for the examination before United States commissioners of Chinese persons alleged to be unlawfully in this country clothes them with a jurisdiction independent of the district court; and that court has no power to issue a dedimus potestatem to take testimony to be used in such an investigation. U. S. v. Hom Hing, 48 Fed. 635.

Trial of issue in chancery.— A motion for a commission to take testimony on an issue directed out of chancery should be made to the court in which the trial is to be had. Bourdeaux v. Rowe, 1 Bing. N. Cas. 721, 1 Hodges 93, 1 Scott 648, 27 E. C. L. 834.

46. Where by statute any justice of a court of general jurisdiction may grant an order for a commission, and by a subsequent statute all motions are required to be made within the district in which the action is triable or in a county adjoining, the place of application is governed by the latter statute. Sturgess v. Weed, 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 130.

District of trial.— An application for a commission to examine a witness may be made in the district in which the action is to be tried, or before a county judge in a county adjoining that of trial. Erwin v. Voorhees. 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 127.

47. Wilcox v. Stern, 89 N. Y. App. Div. 14, 85 N. Y. Suppl. 159; Rathbun v. Ingersoll, 34 N. Y. Super. Ct. 211; Forrest v. Forrest, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 661; Morse v. Grimke, 8 N. Y. After replication.— A defendant is not guilty of laches in failing to procure a commission until six months after plea, where he acts immediately after the filing of the replication. Buchanan v. Trotter, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,075.

Delay of five months.— Where a cause was held open to enable a party to take testimony abroad, it was held that a delay of five months in applying justified the refusal of the application. Coombs v. Bodkin, 81 Minn. 245, 83 N. W. 986.

Injunction proceedings.— No greater diligence to take testimony under commission is required in proceedings by injunction, which are summary than in ordinary cases. Slidell v. Rightor, 4 Rob. (La.) 59.

In Louisiana an application the fifth day of the first term after an injunction is in time. Slidell v. Rightor, 4 Rob. 59.

Under the New York Code of Procedure, and in analogy to the former practice defendant had twenty days after reply in which to make application. Charleston Bank v. Hurlbut, 1 Sandf. 717.

Imposition of terms where the applicant has been guilty of laches see infra, VII, J, 3, f.

Doubt of ability to use testimony.— In his discretion a surrogate may deny an application for a commission made after a large amount of testimony has been taken, where it is doubtful if it can be returned before the expiration of his term of office. Matter of Hodgman, 11 N. Y. App. Div. 344, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 1004.

Rights not impaired.—A delay in applying for the commission is no ground for denying it, where no right of the adverse party has been impaired, and the parties will be able to execute the commission before the next trial term. Hart v. Ogdensburg, etc., R. Co., 67 Hun (N. Y.) 556, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 401.

Stay of proceedings may be refused where there was an unreasonable delay in the application. Butler v. Fox, 9 C. B. 199, 67 E. C. L. 199.

In New York a commission may issue, although the application is not made until the fourth special term after issue joined. Beall v. Dey, 7 Wend. 513. An application should not be denied on the ground of laches, because of the refusal of the court to grant two prior applications on the ground of defects in the moving papers. Margulies v. Damrosch, 24 N. Y. App. Div. 15, 48 N. Y. Suppl. 936.

means the party can have a present investigation and determination.[49] To preclude a party from maintaining a bill of this nature it must rest in his power and not be optional with defendant to bring the matter to a present judicial investigation.[50]

b. Depositions De Bene Esse — (i) Civil Actions — (A) Necessity of Pending Action. The statutes generally provide that depositions other than those for the perpetuation of testimony[51] can be taken only in a pending action or where an action has been commenced by the service of process, or defendant or the subject-matter has been brought within the jurisdiction of the court in some recognized legal mode.[52] The service of process must have been duly made and must be

No suit being brought the party has no opportunity to examine his witness and is exposed to a future attack or to a future loss in a judicial investigation. Hickman v. Hickman, 1 Del. Ch. 133.

Raising triable issue.— Where a person files a bill to perpetuate testimony and raises an issue which can be tried at once at law, there is no proper case for a bill to perpetuate testimony on the trial, as the evidence when taken cannot be used if the witnesses are alive, and as the depositions are sealed up and can only be used when the case arises thereafter, it would be idle for the court when the question might be tried at once, and the witnesses might be examined, to perpetuate their testimony. Ellice v. Roupell, 32 Beav. 299, 9 Jur. N. S. 530, 32 L. J. Ch. 563, 8 L. T. Rep. N. S. 191, 2 New Rep. 3, 150, 11 Wkly. Rep. 579.

50. It is no objection to a bill to perpetuate testimony, that defendant, or any other person except plaintiff, can make the matter to which the testimony relates the subject of an immediate judicial investigation. Spencer v. Peek, L. R. 3 Eq. 415, 15 Wkly. Rep. 478.

Action after filing bill.— The institution of an action of ejectment by defendant after the filing of the bill will not preclude the complainant, because the action might be discontinued at any time before a commission could issue. Hall v. Stout, 4 Del. Ch. 269.

Existing suit.— A bill to perpetuate testimony relating to a matter which is the subject of an existing suit against plaintiff is demurrable, although plaintiff could not himself have made such matter the subject of present judicial investigation. Spencer v. Peek, L. R. 3 Eq. 415, 15 Wkly. Rep. 478.

Part of subject-matter involved.— The right to the relief will not be affected by the fact that defendant has instituted an action of ejectment as to a part of the realty in controversy. Hall v. Stout, 4 Del. Ch. 269.

After service of summons.— Under Ohio Rev. St. §§ 5243, 5266, authorizing the taking of the deposition of a party or a witness by the adverse party at any time after the service of summons, a deposition may be taken immediately after the summons is served. In re Rauh, 65 Ohio St. 128, 61 N. E. 701; Ex p. Miller, 11 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 69, 8 Ohio N. P. 142 [affirmed in 21 Ohio Cir. Ct. 445, 12 Ohio Cir. Dec. 102]; In re Robinson, 9 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 763, 7 Ohio N. P. 105.

After filing bill.— In South Carolina by rule of court a commission to examine witnesses may issue at any time after the filing of the bill. State Bank v. Rose, 2 Strobh. Eq. 90.

After nonsuit.— A deposition procured after a judicial nonsuit and before an order taking it off is taken during the pendency of the suit. Brown v. Foss, 16 Me. 257. Subsequently to the issuing of a commission, and prior to the taking of the deposition, the court granted a continuance of the cause on condition of plaintiff's paying costs. It was held that although the costs remained unpaid the depositions so taken might be used, since the neglect to pay the costs did not operate as a nonsuit, no order to that effect having been obtained. Kelton v. Montaut, 2 R. I. 151.

Effect of appearance.— Where plaintiff took a deposition in a cause before defendant was properly brought into court, the irregularity was not cured by defendant's subsequent voluntary appearance. Oxford Iron Co. v. Quinchett, 44 Ala. 487.

Attachment.— A suit is "pending," within the meaning of the first section of the statute concerning depositions, after an attachment of lands of non-residents is made, and before the summons is served. Lewin v. Dille, 17 Mo. 64.

Bastardy proceeding.— An ex parte deposition of the mother cannot be taken before the institution of a bastardy proceeding. McDonald v. Hobby, 1 Root (Conn.) 154.

The attendance of the witness is not a waiver of the irregularity, as the objection goes to the jurisdiction. Stovel v. Coles, 3 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 362.

Under U. S. Rev. St. (1878) § 868 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 664], depositions in perpetuam cannot be taken ex parte by a proceeding in equity without service of process upon defendants in interest, although they are out of the country. Notice of institution of suit.— That interrogatories and notice to take depositions were served on defendant before citation in the case is not a sufficient objection to the deposition, as such service sufficiently apprises him that suit has been brought against him, and gives him an opportunity to cross-examine. Kottwitz v. Bagby, 16 Tex. 656.

Witness going to sea.— In Massachusetts under the provincial laws the depositions of witnesses going to sea might be taken after a bond given for review and before service of the writ. Hallowell v. Dalton, Quincy 33.

In England it has been held that a bill will lie before the commencement of an action, provided plaintiff annexes thereto an affidavit of the truth of his alleged statement with respect to the witnesses. On issuing a subpœna in an action for divorce a rule may be entered to take depositions before its return. Anonymous, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 404.

Taking subject to opinion of the court.— Depositions may be taken de bene esse, under a rule, subject to the opinion of the court before the return of the writ. Gilpin v. Semple, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 251, 1 L. ed. 123.

(B) Joinder of Issue. By the strict rules of the common law a deposition cannot be taken de bene esse before issue joined, and this requirement is preserved in many of the states by statute.[56] But this rule has been relaxed under special circumstances so as to permit the taking of testimony before answer when the exigencies of the case so require.[57]

Going witness — Party confined.— On affidavit that defendant is in confinement, and that material witnesses in his favor are about to leave the state, a rule will issue to take their depositions, although the writ is not returnable till the next term. Effect of amending pleadings.— Plaintiff by amending his bill does not postpone his liability to be examined until after the time for answering the amendments expires. Fowler v. Boulton, 12 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 437.

If issue is joined as to one defendant a commission may issue. Treadwell v. Pomeroy, 2 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 470. Defendant has a right to examine plaintiff as soon as his answer is filed, although there may be other defendants who have not answered. Fowler v. Boulton, 12 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 437.

Setting aside decree permitting answer.— The validity of a deposition taken after joinder of issue is not affected by the subsequent rescission of an interlocutory decree which permitted the answer to be filed. Brooke v. Berry, 2 Gill (Md.) 83.

Setting aside decree pro con.— Where a party defendant to a bill in equity died before the time to answer expired and a decree pro confesso taken against his administrator was set aside and permission given him to answer, depositions taken after the administrator was made a party, and also after setting aside the decree but before answer, were held to have been taken before the cause was at issue. Henderson v. Hall, 134 Ala. 455, 32 So. 840.

Time of objection.—See Vesturme v. Way, 15 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 224, where the commission was returned before plea and although the claim would be barred by limitation if the deposition were rejected, the court declined to pass on its validity in advance of the trial.

(c) Abatement of Action. A deposition cannot be taken after the abatement of the action by the death of a party and before its revival.[58]

(d) Cause Ready For Trial. Unless under special circumstances depositions will not be permitted to be taken if the cause is ready, has been noticed, or set for trial. This rule is specially applicable in equity causes.[59]

(e) During Trial. Ordinarily depositions cannot be taken during the progress of a trial,[60] nor, without special order made upon sufficient showing after cumstances the taking of a deposition before appearance may be authorized. Allen v. Annesley, 2 Jones 260; Campbell v. Atty.-Gen., 11 Jur. N. S. 922, 13 L. T. Rep. N. S. 356, 14 Wkly. Rep. 45; Frere v. Green, 19 Ves. Jr. 319, 34 Eng. Reprint 536.

Commission by consent.— A deposition taken under a consent commission cannot be objected to on the ground that the replication was not filed at the time the deposition was taken, as the consent is an admission that the issues are made up. Maryland, etc., Coal, etc., Co. v. Wingert, 8 Gill (Md.) 170.

Contemplated issue.— Depositions may be taken on a contemplated issue. Maze v. Heckinger, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 541. In Street v. Cuthbert, 3 Can. L. J. 9, leave was granted to administer interrogatories before plea pleaded, leave to plead several matters being asked for in the same summons, and the interrogatories having particular reference to the pleas sought to be pleaded.

Contempt of witness.— Ordinarily defendant must answer before the testimony is taken, but if after being served with process he refuses to answer or absconds the depositions have been allowed to be taken on these facts being proved. Green v. Compagnia Generale Italiana Di Nav., 82 Fed. 490; Lancaster v. Lancaster, 6 Sim. 439; Frere v. Green, 19 Ves. Jr. 319, 34 Eng. Reprint 536, where it was said by Lord Eldon that there is no instance of such an examination before appearance, except after service of subpœna, and then, there being no appearance, the court, holding defendant to be in contempt, has granted the examination.

Death of witness before replication.— In Marsden v. Bound, 1 Vern. Ch. 331, 23 Eng. Reprint 502, a deposition de bene esse taken before answer was permitted to be read, the witness having died before replication.

Difficulty in transmitting commission.— Where the witness resided in a foreign port which was open only to certain privileged vessels, a commission issued where an opportunity of transmitting it by such a vessel presented itself, although the cause was not at issue. Brain v. Rodelicks, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 73.

Retarding joinder of issue.— Plaintiff may be permitted to take depositions de bene esse, where defendant delays answering and prevents a joinder of issue. Coveny v. Athill, Dick. 355, 21 Eng. Reprint 306; Cann v. Cann, 1 P. Wms. 567, 24 Eng. Reprint 520.

Statutory provisions.— Where the state statute requires a deposition in chancery to be taken within six months after replication, it is of no validity if taken after that time, unless taken by consent or by order of the court, or unless it was taken out of the district. Wiggins v. Wiggins, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,627, 1 Cranch C. C. 299.

Supersession of rule by statute.— A statute providing that evidence shall be taken in the same manner in equity as at law supersedes a rule in equity whereby a cause is deemed set for hearing four months after replication, so as to permit a commission to issue after the expiration of the four months. Pingree v. Coffin, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 600.

The early New York rule was that a defendant intending to sue out a commission was required to give notice of his intention before he received notiee of trial, or within a reasonable time after issue joined according to the circumstances of the case (Jones v. Ives, 1 Wend. 283; Burr v. Skinner, 1 Johns. Cas. 391); and this rule was not changed by the Code of Procedure (Brokaw v. Bridgman, 6 How. Pr. 114, Code Rep. N. S. 407).

Prior opportunity.— An application made after the cause has been noticed and moved for trial will be denied, where by stipulation ample opportunity was afforded to take the deposition before that time. Wilcox v. Stern, 89 N. Y. App. Div. 14, 85 N. Y. Suppl. 159.

In Canada defendant is entitled to examine plaintiff before a special examiner, notwithstanding that the cause has been set down and notice of examination and hearing served. Clarke v. Hawke, 1 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 346.

Permission to examine orally.— The refusal to permit depositions to be taken by commission in a case which was set for trial at a previous term, and where the application is made about the time the trial is to be had, is not oppressive, when accompanied by permission to orally examine the witnesses who are in attendance. Hamilton v. Walters, 3 Greene (Iowa) 556.

After adjournment.— In Bank v. Farques, Ambl. 145, leave was given to examine witnesses after adjournment of the cause.

60. Worthy v. Shields, 90 N. C. 192.

Inability to give notice.— As where a particular mode of taking depositions on argument.[61] However they have been permitted to be taken during the trial under special circumstances, and where the court was vested with discretion,[62] and after the close of plaintiff's case.[63] So testimony in rebuttal has been permitted to be taken in this mode.[64]

(F) After Default, Trial, or Judgment. Depositions may be taken after defendant has made default in pleading and a decree pro confesso has been entered,[65] but not after a trial and determination of the matters in controversy.[66]

(G) On Appeal. Although it has been held that a commission cannot issue pending an appeal from the judgment,[67] it has also been held that the pendency of an appeal will not preclude the right to take a deposition to preserve testimony,[68] and that the right will not be lost where an appeal has been taken but not notice is prescribed. Ogden v. Robertson, 15 N. J. L. 124.

Place of taking remote from court-house. — A party cannot be required, during the progress of a trial, to take a rebutting deposition at a place so remote from the court-house that he cannot be present at the resumption of the trial. Wise v. Postlewait, 3 W. Va. 452.

As condition of continuance.— The taking of the evidence of attending witnesses by deposition may be directed as the condition of a continuance. Thomas v. Black, 84 Cal. 221, 33 Pac. 103.

Expediting trial.— A statute authorizing the court to order the taking of depositions whenever it is deemed necessary to determine the rights of the parties or to expedite the trial of the cause empowers the court to permit the taking of depositions during the progress of the trial. In Higgins v. Horwitz, 9 Gill (Md.) 341, an interlocutory decree passed against two defaulting defendants, and an ex parte commission was ordered. On the same day the guardian of an infant defendant appeared, and a commission was then issued to commissioners "as named on the part of the complainant and defendants," requiring notice to be given "to the respective parties," and it was held that this was a commission in chief, although the statute provided for an ex parte commission as against defaulting defendants.

After commissioner's report.— A deposition taken as to matters controverted in a commissioner's report may be disregarded. Buster v. Holland, 27 W. Va. 510.

After interlocutory decree.— An act authorizing the taking of depositions "from the filing of the bill to the final hearing" will not authorize the issue of a commission after an interlocutory decree to take depositions as to matters settled by the decree. Moore v. Hilton, 12 Leigh (Va.) 1. But see Summers v. Darne, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 791, in which it was said that there was no rule of practice or of law which precluded a party from taking new evidence on a question of fact passed upon by an interlocutory decree, even before a rehearing is obtained.

Examination of aged witness for new trial. — In Anonymous, 6 Ves. Jr. 573, 31 Eng. Reprint 1202, on suggestion of an intention to move for a new trial an order was made to examine a witness over seventy.

Cause pending in another court.— A justice of the peace has no power to take a deposition to be used in the county court where the cause is pending in the supreme court on exceptions and could not be pending in the county court at the term named in the caption. Bowen v. Hall, 22 Vt. 612.

Other remedy.— In Richter v. Jerome, 115 U. S. 55, 5 S. Ct. 1162, 29 L. ed. 345, the supreme court of the United States declined to grant a commission, pending an appeal, to take testimony in perpetuam for use below in the event of reversal, nothing appearing to show that the testimony could not be taken on application to the circuit court.

68. Long v. Straus, 124 Ind. 84, 24 N. E. 664.

Probate of will.— A statute permitting a perfected;[69] and that a rule may be entered below to take depositions to be read in the event of reversal and the award of a venire de novo.[70]

(H) After Filing or Publication. After depositions taken have been filed, published, and read, the adverse party will not be permitted to take depositions on his behalf, unless for special reasons justifying a further examination, and on explanation of the previous neglect to move.[71]

(II) Criminal Proceedings. Depositions in criminal cases should not be taken until after indictment,[72] and when the case is pending in court.[73]

F. Affidavit[74]— 1. Necessity. The particular facts upon which the right to procure the testimony depends should usually be presented by affidavit, verified petition, or the like.[75] deposition to be taken in proceedings to probate a will authorizes the taking of a deposition on appeal from an order admitting the will to probate. In re Arrowsmith, 206 Ill. 352, 69 N. E. 77.

Probate proceedings.— Ky. Gen. St. c. 113, § 31, providing that when a will is offered for probate, and an attesting witness is out of the state or unable to attend, the court may cause a commission to issue annexed to the will, authorizing a deposition, does not apply to proceedings in the circuit court on appeal from the county court in probate proceedings, and depositions in the circuit court may be taken in such a case as in any other civil proceeding. Moore v. Smith, 88 Ky. 151, 10 S. W. 380, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 729.

69. A rule to take the depositions of ancient, infirm, and going witnesses may be granted after an appeal has been taken from the decision of a justice of the peace, but before a transcript of his judgment has been filed in the court of common pleas. Harlan v. Stewart, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 333.

70. Huidekoper v. Cotton, 3 Watts (Pa.) 56.

Danger of losing testimony.— A suit having been dismissed on demurrer, and an appeal from such dismissal having been taken to the United States supreme court, which probably would not be decided in less than two or three years, a bill to take depositions de bene esse of aged and infirm witnesses whose testimony would be material if the decision were reversed and the case remanded for trial upon the merits ought to be allowed. Richter v. Jerome, 25 Fed. 679.

(Pa.) 385, holding that after plaintiff has had a commission executed, defendant may have a new commission to examine the same witnesses on matters not inquired of by plaintiff's interrogatories.

Object of rule.— This rule is intended to guard against the mischiefs which would result from holding out an opportunity to supply a defect by fabricated evidence. Hamersly v. Lambert, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 432.

After filing answers to interrogatories.— Where parties are permitted to interrogate each other, a party putting interrogatories need not sue out a commission until the answers are filed. Montgomery v. Russell, 7 Mart. N. S. (La.) 288.

In England applications have been granted after publication to examine on new matter on terms of not delaying the trial (Newland v. Horseman, 2 Ch. Cas. 74, 1 Vern. Ch. 21, 23 Eng. Reprint 275) and to examine as to the credit of witnesses previously cross-examined (Wood v. Hammerton, 9 Ves. Jr. 145, 32 Eng. Reprint 557). See also Scott v. Allgood, Prac. Reg. Recognizance as condition precedent.— Nev. Cr. Prac. Act (1861) § 167, as amended in 1867, requiring the magistrate to take from each of the material witnesses examined before him on behalf of the people a written recognizance to appear and testify at the trial, does not make the taking of a recognizance a condition precedent to the taking of a witness' deposition. In England in certain cases, as where the application is made on the ground of the ill-health of the witness, there must be an affidavit as to his condition. Bellamy v. Jones, 8 Ves. Jr. 31, 6 Rev. Rep. 205, 32 Eng. Reprint 261.

In Kentucky it is not necessary that an affidavit should be filed to authorize the court to grant an order to take a deposition, but it is otherwise where the application is made to the clerk. Thomas v. Davis, 7 B. Mon. 227.

Special statute.— No affidavit was necessary to obtain an order for the examination of a non-resident witness under the New York police act of 1844. People v. Hadden, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 220.

Proof of fact of affidavit.— The fact that an affidavit which cannot be found was actually made may be proved by the clerk.

2. Who May Make. When practicable the affidavit should be made by the party for whose benefit the testimony is sought.[76] When not practicable because of his absence or his lack of personal knowledge, or where permitted by statute, it may be made by his attorney or agent,[77] or by any person acquainted with the facts, although not a party to the suit.[78]

3. Who May Take. The affidavit must be sworn to before any duly qualified officer.[79]

4. Necessary Statements and Averments — a. In General.[80] The affidavit should set forth all the facts requisite to entitle the applicant to take the desired testimony, and ordinarily will be sufficient if it substantially complies with the statute.[81] It should be as positive as the circumstances of the case will permit;[82] and although affidavits on information and belief have been held sufficient,[83] the

A statute permitting a stranger to the action to make the affidavit is sufficient to authorize the attorney of the party to act in the premises. Young v. McLemore, 3 Ala. 295.

Authority of attorney.— A rule for a commission will not be stayed until the attorney applying files his warrant. Boutlier v. Johnson, 2 Browne (Pa.) 17.

Information and belief.— In Eaton v. North, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 631, the affidavit was held sufficient where the party who applied for the commission himself residing out of the county, his attorney signed the affidavit in support of the application, and swore that the witness was material in his information and belief, and no laches was imputable to the party applying.

Excusing omission of party to make affidavit.— An affidavit by an attorney based on information derived from his client is insufficient if it states no reason why it was not made by his informant. Clark v. Sullivan, 4 Silv. Supreme (N. Y.) 1, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 565. Attorney of party.— The testimony taken will not be invalidated by the fact that the affidavit was taken by one of the attorneys of record. Gary v. Burnett, 16 S. C. 632.

Shortcomings.—A motion for a commission ought not to be denied because of any shortcomings in the affidavit. Voorhis' Estate, 5 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 444, 2 Dem. Surr. (N. Y.) 298.

Unnecessary statements.— An order to examine a party before trial cannot be vacated because the affidavit on which it was granted showed more than is required by the statute. Trotter v. Brevoort, 29 Misc. (N. Y.) 662, 61 N. Y. Suppl. 181.

Examination of parties.— Plaintiff when seeking to take his own testimony must show strong and positive reasons why he will be unable to attend the trial (Light v. Anticosti Co., 58 L. T. Rep. N. S. 25); but the court is more favorable to the application of defendant than it is to an application by plaintiff, and will usually grant it in the absence of special circumstances. better practice requires that the belief should be founded on investigation by the affiant, who should state the grounds of his belief,[84] or it should appear that the facts on which the allegations are based are beyond dispute.[85]

b. Jurisdiction of Court or Officer. It should affirmatively appear by suitable averment that the court or judge to which the application is made has jurisdiction to entertain it.[86]

c. Identification of Cause. An affidavit to obtain a deposition de bene esse must sufficiently designate or identify the cause or proceeding in which it is intended to use the testimony.[87]

d. Condition of Cause. If the condition of the cause need not be stated in the affidavit an allegation in respect thereto is unnecessary;[88] but where it must be shown that issue is joined in the cause, that fact must appear or some reason be given for applying before joinder.[89]

e. Grounds — (i) Sickness or Physical Disability. If the ground on which the deposition is sought is the sickness or infirmity of the witness, the affidavit must sufficiently show that his physical condition is such as to afford reasonable ground for believing that he will not be able to attend the trial.[90]

Court of inferior jurisdiction.— The moving papers on the application for a commission out of a court of inferior jurisdiction must show that the court has jurisdiction of the proceeding. Matter of Wallace, 71 N. Y. App. Div. 284, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 838.

Proceeding to fix transfer tax.— Where an application for a commission to take testimony without the state in proceedings to fix a transfer tax on certain money is based on a petition, and also on an affidavit, which latter states that the money was the proceeds of the sale of an interest in a partnership in the city of New York, and was deposited in a bank in that city in the name of the wife of the seller, since deceased, it gives the surrogate of New York county jurisdiction, although the petition is insufficient in that it does not show that the property was ever in such county. Matter of Wallace, 71 N. Y. App. Div. 284, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 838.

Proper district.—An application for a commission to examine a foreign witness must affirmatively show that the motion is made in the district where the cause is triable or in the county adjoining it. Dodge v. Rose, 1 Code Rep. (N. Y.) 123.

Where action triable.— On motion for a commission to take testimony, an order taken by default is not a nullity merely because the motion papers do not disclose the name of the county in which the action is to be tried. Blackman v. Van Inwagen, Code Rep. N. S. (N. Y.) 80.

Final settlement of administrator.— An affidavit for taking a deposition, made by the attorney of the administrator de bonis non, in a proceeding for the final settlement of the accounts of the deceased administrator of intestate between such administrator's personal representative and the administrator de bonis non, which describes the cause as "a cause now pending in the Probate Court, in the matter of the final settlement of the estate of" said intestate, sufficiently identifies the proceeding. McDonald v. Jacobs, 77 Ala. 524.

Surplusage.— Where an affidavit is entitled in a court, a judge of which is alone empowered to order the perpetuation of testimony for use in the court in which the action is pending, such entitling may be treated as surplusage, where the action and the court in which it is pending otherwise sufficiently appear. Sheldon v. Wood, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 267.

Sufficiency.— Upon an application for a foreign commission it is not necessary to show that the action is technically at issue; it is sufficient that it be shown that some issue is raised on the pleadings which must be tried in the action. Smith v. Greey, 11 Ont. Pr. 38. It is sufficient to show that an issue of fact has been joined without further showing that the action is at issue as to all the defendants. Information and belief.— An affidavit by the attorney for the applieant "that the affiant has been informed and believes that the witness is unable to attend eourt beeause of siekness and great bodily infirmity" is suffieient. Reese v. Beck, 24 Ala. 651. In Oleott v. Evans, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 703, an applieation based on an affidavit made on information and belief was resisted, and another affidavit suffieiently stating the facts as to the state of health of the witness being submitted, it was held that under the eireumstanees diselosed and in view of the gravity of the eonsequenees should the testimony not be seeured, the court properly granted the applieation instead of denying the motion with leave to renew on the second affidavit.

Common intent.— It need only be shown to a common intent that the witness is a non-resident. Boardman v. Ewing, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 293.

Inability to attend trial.— It should appear by the oath of the applieant that the non-resident witnesses cannot personally attend the trial. Atty.-Gen. v. Gooderham, 10 Ont. Pr. 259.

Intention to remain away.— A statement that the witness is in a designated plaee without the jurisdiction, without further stating that he there resided, or that he intended to remain there is insuffieient. Parmelee v. Thompson, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 77.

Notice of taking affidavit.— An affidavit to show that a witness lives out of the state, and to obtain thereby a eommission for the examination of sueh witness, need not be taken on notice. Den v. Wood, 10 N. J. L. 62.

Presumption of continuance of non-residence.— Where the affidavit was made five months prior to the issue of the commission, it was presumed that the non-residence continued. Pharr v. Baehelor, 3 Ala. 237.

Witness traveling.— On an application for a foreign eommission to examine a witness who is traveling, it should be shown that he will remain at the plaee to which the commission is directed a sufficient time to allow of its due execution. Singer v. C. W. Williams Mfg. Co., 8 Ont. Pr. 483.

Sufficiency.— Under a statute authorizing the taking of the deposition of a witness who "is not within the state," a mere showing that the witness is a non-resident or is absent from the state is insuffieient. Brown v. Russell, 58 N. Y. App. Div. 218, 68 N. Y. Suppl. 755; Apollinaris Co. v. Venable, 57 Hun (N. Y.) 587, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 469; Wallaee v. Blake, 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 519, 4 N. Y. A statute authorizing the taking of the deposition of a witness on an affidavit that he resides out of the state, or is out of it in the serviee of the state, is complied with by showing, either by the deposition itself or by other evidence, that the witness resided out of the state, or was not in it when the deposition was taken. Evidence to cure defective affidavit.— An affidavit defeetive beeause of an insufficient allegation as to the eontemplated absenee of the witness from the state at the time of trial is not eured by the testimony of the witness showing a design to leave the state and probable inability to attend the trial. Henderson v. Fuller, 54 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 422.

Non-resident witness.—An affidavit alleging an intended departure of the witness from the state on a speeified date will not be regarded as fraudulently made, nor as suppressing the truth, beeause at the time of its presentation the witness was a non-resident, and proposed to come within the state to be examined, and to leave as alleged. Misnomer.— When the name of a witness is written in the affidavit, "C. Swabine," and "Catharine Swab" in the deposition, the discrepancy will not vitiate the deposition, if in other respects legal. Beal v. Brandt, 7 La. 583.

Non-resident witnesses.—An affidavit stating that "some" of the witnesses reside without the state without naming them is insufficient. Lesne v. Pomphrey, 4 Ala. 77.

Omission of christian name.— A deposition will not be suppressed, because the christian name of the witness is not stated in the affidavit made to procure the issuance of the commission, when the commission and notice so describe and identify the witness as to preclude the idea that the opposite party could have been misled or injured by the omission. Allegation by attorney.— The affidavit of the court or officer to whom application is made may determine the materiality and necessity of the testimony. There are, however, decisions to the effect that a general allegation of materiality will be sufficient.[98] materiality may be made by the person for whose benefit the testimony is sought (Brown v. McConnel, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 265) or his attorney (Fitzpatrick v. Montgomery Bank, 127 Ala. 589, 29 So. 16; Reese v. Beck, 24 Ala. 651; Young v. McLemore, 3 Ala. 295; Beall v. Dey, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 513).

Effect of filing interrogatories.— In Louisiana interrogatories should be filed with the affidavit for a commission to examine witnesses out of the state, or the materiality of the testimony sought should be shown by the oath required. Stierle v. Kaiser, 45 La. Ann. 580, 12 So. 839; Lee v. Lee, 1 La. Ann. 318. See also Quadras v. The Daniel Webster, 11 La. Ann. 203; Bradford v. Cooper, 1 La. Ann. 325; Denton v. Murdock, 5 Rob. 127; Rife v. Henson, 2 La. 96, all holding that where a commission has been granted and cross interrogatories propounded, the absence of an affidavit of materiality may be disregarded. The order of itself dispenses with the affidavit.

Effect of omission.— A deposition taken by a person who was both commissioner and clerk of the court cannot be rejected on the ground that no preliminary proof of the witness' materiality was made. Nelson v. Woodruff, 1 Black (U. S.) 156, 17 L. ed. 97.

Filing.—Where a change of venue has been granted, but the record has not been removed, the affidavit of materiality should be filed in the court in which the suit was instituted. Phelps v. Young, 1 Ill. 327.

Necessity of stating expected proof.— Where no laches is imputable, and there is nothing to cast suspicion on the application, the applicant is not bound to state what he expects to prove by the witness whose testimony he seeks to procure. Eaton v. North, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 631, 3 Code Rep. (N. Y.) 234.

Only witness.— It should be clearly shown that the witness is the only witness as to the fact sought to be proved by him; an affidavit of the solicitor as to his belief is insufficient. Jameson v. Jones, 3 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 98.

On motion to rescind an order for the examination of witnesses in an action of slander, the court may require the applicant to state what he expects to prove by them. Barry v. Barclay, 15 C. B. N. S. 849, 109 E. C. L. 849.

The points on which it is intended to examine need not be stated. Grove v. Young, 3 De G. & Sm. 397, 13 Jur. 847; Carbonell v. Bessell, 5 Sim. 636, 9 Eng. Ch. 636; Rougemont v. Royal Exch. Where defendant states what he "expects to prove" if the probability that the expected testimony will be as stated is supported by the affidavits of others, the materiality of the testimony is disclosed by satisfactory proof. Burnell v. Coles, 26 Misc. (N. Y.) 810, 56 N. Y. Suppl. 888 [dismissing appeal in 25 Misc. 409, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 940].

Instances of insufficiency.— A statement that the applicant has a good claim and cannot proceed to a hearing without the testimony of a designated witness (Thayer v. Swift, Walk. (Mich.) 384), that the witness "is or may be a material witness" (Parmelee v. Thompson, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 77), by the counsel of one accused of crime, that he is acquainted with the case of defendant, and what is necessary for his defense, and verily believes that the testimony of a named witness, to whom interrogatories calling for his opinion as an expert, and accompanying the motion for a commission, are addressed, "is necessary, material, and important to the defendant" (Hodge v. State, 29 Fla. 500, 10 So. 556), and that the testimony of the proposed witnesses will be necessary to defendant and competent to his defense (Burnell v. Coles, 23 Misc. (N. Y.) 615, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 200). So an affidavit which fails to state that the witness is material as affiant is advised by his counsel after stating to him his case is insufficient. Lansing v. Mickles, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 248. See Beall v. Dey, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 513.

Waiver by joining in commission see infra, VIII, I, 1.

98. A general allegation of materiality made by an attorney is sufficient. Beall v. Dey, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 513. See Fitzpatrick v. Montgomery Bank, 127 Ala. 589, 29 So. 16.

A positive statement in the affidavit of the materiality of the absent witness must be credited, where the affiant might know from personal knowledge that the witness is material. Eaton v. North, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 631, 3 Code Rep. (N. Y.) 234.

"Cannot proceed to trial without testimony," etc.— An affidavit that the witness is material and out of the jurisdiction of the court is sufficient without a further statement that the party cannot safely proceed to trial without his testimony. Brackett v. Dudley, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 209.

Exclusive witness as to defense.— An affidavit that "a material part of the defense to said action depends exclusively on the evidence of said witness" is sufficient. Potts v. Coleman, 86 Ala. 94, 5 So. 780.

Information and belief.— Under a statute permitting an attorney to make an affidavit as to the materiality of a non-resident witness, he may do so on information and belief. Fitzpatrick v. Montgomery Bank, 127 Ala. 589, 29 So. 16.

In surrogates' courts.— Under the provisions of the New York Code of Procedure applicable to depositions in surrogates' courts, a general allegation of materiality is sufficient. Voorhis' Estate, 5 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 444, 2 Dem. Surr. 298.

G. Affidavit of Merits. An affidavit of merits or an affidavit showing a defense on the merits is necessary when defendant seeks a stay until the return of the commission.[99]

H. Perpetuation of Testimony.[1] Where no action is pending, the applicant must comply with statutory requirements or bring himself within the chancery rule respecting bills in perpetuam, and aver in his affidavit the existence of such conditions as will sustain such a bill.[2]

I. Notice of Application — 1. Necessity. Unless special circumstances exist which will permit a commission or order to take depositions to issue ex parte,[3] notice to the adverse party or his attorney of the application for the commission or order is absolutely necessary.[4] The adverse party may waive notice by joining

Cause of action against definite person.— An application under the New York Code of Civil Procedure to obtain testimony for use in a contemplated action must show that the applicant has a cause of action against a person definitively named. Matter of White, 44 N. Y. App. Div. 119, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 702.

Cannot safely proceed without knowledge of testimony.— A statement by the party showing that it is important that he should know what the witness will testify to and that he cannot with safety bring an action until thus advised does not disclose circumstances rendering it necessary for his protection that the testimony should be perpetuated. Matter of White, 44 N. Y. App. Div. 119, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 702, 7 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 154.

Danger of losing testimony.— An affidavit to perpetuate testimony must show a hazard of losing if it is not preserved. Matter of Fulton, 75 N. Y. App. Div. 623, 78 N. Y. Suppl. 116.

Inability of witness to attend trial.— An affidavit to procure the perpetuation of testimony need not state the probable inability of the witness to attend the trial. Jackson v. Perkins. 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 308.

In Canada an application for an order that a party to a suit do submit to be examined at his own expense or in default be committed will not be granted ex parte; notice must be served. Weir v. Matheson, 1 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 224.

An order shortening the time to take a deposition obtained without notice is irregular. Nevitt v. Crow, 1 Colo. App. 453, 29 Pac. 749.

5. Notice is waived by a party who joins in the proceedings by nominating commissioners. Tussey v. Behmer, 9 Lanc. Bar (Pa.) 45.

6. A waiver of the privilege of filing cross interrogatories will dispense with the necessity of notice under a statute providing that a commission to take the deposition of a nonresident witness may issue, on filing a copy of the interrogatories and giving the opposite party notice thereof ten days before the commission is to issue. Computation.— In Iowa and Michigan the time within which notice of suing out a commission must be given is computed by excluding the day of service. Bonney v. Cocke, 61 Iowa 303, 16 N. W. 139; Eaton v. Peck, 26 Mich. 57; Arnold v. Nye, 23 Mich. 286. A rule requiring fifteen days' notice of the commission will not authorize the issue of a commission on October 14, on notice given the last day of the previous September. Coxe v. Ewing, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 429.

11. Order to show cause.— In California it is sufficient to serve on the opposite party a copy of an order of the court or judge requiring the party to show cause on a day named why a commission should not issue. No other notice of the application is required. If the day named is less than the five days required for notice by the statute, the order and the issuing of the commission are equivalent to an order shortening the time. Dambmann v. White, 48 Cal. 439.

Service of interrogatories by copy left at the office of the attorney of the opposite party is sufficient notice of taking out a commission. Randel v. Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co., 1 Harr. (Del.) 233.

J. Hearing and Determination — 1. Resistance to Application. The adverse party may oppose the application and make proper objections to the commission or order for examination;[15] but he cannot deprive the moving party of the right to protect himself against contingencies which may result in the loss of material testimony,[16] by asserting the non-existence of facts which will authorize the reading of the deposition;[17] nor can a party or a witness defeat the right to take a deposition by insisting on his ability and intention to be present at the trial.[18]

2. What May Be Considered. The materiality of the testimony and the purposes for which it is invoked may be considered,[19] but a statute imposing restrictions on the right to take testimony in other cases,[20] or the fact that the applicant has given security for costs cannot be considered in determining whether or not a commission should issue;[21] nor can the merits of the controversy be gone into.[22]

3. Discretion to Grant or Refuse — a. In General. Ordinarily the right to a commission or to an order permitting depositions to be taken is not absolute, but rests in the judicial discretion of the court or judge, although usually permission is granted as a matter of course on a proper presentation of facts.[23] But where the

In New York the rules of practice authorize the court to deny a petition for a commission, unless the court is satisfied that the application is made in good faith. See Matter of Spinks, 63 N. Y. App. Div. 235, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 398.

Proof that the applicant could obtain the evidence that he seeks from resident witnesses may tend to show bad faith, but is not conclusive. Morse v. Grimke, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 1, 18 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 37.

Attempt to ascertain existence of cause of action.— The taking of a deposition to perpetuate testimony will not be allowed where the real object is to ascertain whether the party seeking to take it has a cause of action against a proposed defendant. Matter of White, 44 N. Y. App. Div. 119, 60 N. Y. Suppl. 702; Matter of Anthony, 42 N. Y. App. Div. 66, 58 N. Y. Suppl. 907.

Business competitors will not be permitted to secure private information, through the medium of a deposition. Matter of Spinks, 63 N. Y. App. Div. 235, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 398.

Presumptions.— The court will not assume that the object of taking the deposition of an adverse party immediately after the commencement of the action is a fishing excursion for evidence, but the burden is upon the party who resists the taking of the deposition to show abuse of process of the court. In re Robinson, 9 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 763, 7 Ohio N. P. 105.

27. In re Carter, 3 Oreg. 293, where the order if granted would have operated in effect as a habeas corpus.

Definite purpose.— Orders to examine witnesses de bene esse are only granted where it is shown that the evidence is to be used for some definite purpose; yet, the court will make such an order when it considers that the practice requires it. Whitehead v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 5 Can. L. J. 232.

28. Forrest v. Forrest, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 661. An application to take immaterial testimony should be denied. Ablon v. Barbey, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 154.

Ability to procure attendance of witness. — Where an open commission can only be allowed to take testimony in the United States or in Canada, such a commission will not issue to take testimony in Florida, where it appears that the witnesses reside in Cuba, no reason except the difference in expense being given to show that it would be any more difficult to procure the attendance of the witness within the jurisdiction. Purdy v. Webster, 9 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 144.

Cumulative testimony.— A commission will will not issue where the object is to procure cumulative testimony on a point on which there was conflicting evidence at a former trial and the expense of executing the commission will exceed the amount involved in that point. Mitchell v. Montgomery, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 676.

Examination futile.— A commission is properly refused where the examination would be futile, as for instance when the applicant does not ask for an adjournment. Dryer v. Sexsmith, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 242, 10 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 29. In O'Callaghan v. O'Brien, 116 Fed. 934, where after the return of a commission to take testimony as to kinship, the court refused to issue a new commission at the instance of defendant, to take additional testimony, where by the affidavits of the proposed new witnesses submitted in support of the application, it appeared that their testimony would not directly contradict that in behalf of the complainant, and would be as strongly for as against him, the same rule was applied.

d. Prejudice to Adverse Party. The application for a commission or for the taking of a deposition will be denied when prejudice or injury will or may result to the adverse party.[29]

e. Admissions by Adverse Party. A commission may be denied when the adverse party admits the facts which are sought to be elicited by the deposition;[30] but the truth of the facts must be admitted. It will not be enough to admit that the witness if present would testify to them.[31]

f. Terms and Conditions. In granting the application such terms or conditions may be imposed as will protect the adverse party against possible injury or prejudice,[32] as where the applicant has been guilty of laches in making the Pivileged communication.— In an action to recover for negligence an application by defendant to take the testimony of plaintiff's physician, upon commission, in respect of certain statements made to him by plaintiff concerning the circumstances under which the injury was received, and in respect of what took place between him and another physician at the time of their consultation, was held to have been properly denied. Enright v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 26 N. Y. App. Div. 538, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 609.

Witness interested.— The application will not be denied because the adverse party asserts that the witnesses named are interested; but the question of their competency will be examined at the trial of the cause. Graves v. Delaplaine, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 200.

29. Goodman v. Wineland, 61 Md. 449; Ring v. Mott, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 683; McKenzie v. Clark, 4 Ont. Pr. 95.

Disadvantage.— In Hollander v. Baiz, 43 Fed. 35, a libel suit against a foreign consul by a plaintiff who had been expelled from the country which the consul represented, by order of its government, the consul applied for a commission to examine witnesses in such country, and it appeared that the foreign government refused to allow plaintiff to attend such commission, and that the government of such foreign country stood in the virtual relation of principal to defendant, because the alleged libel was published by him under orders from such government, and the application was denied except as to documentary evidence, because of the disadvantage of the adverse party.

Injury to business.— The application will not be denied because the witnesses are business patrons of the adverse party, and he fears the taking of their testimony may disrupt the business relations existing between them. Morse v. Grimke, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 1, 18 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 37.

Construction of stipulation.— Where, in consideration of the abandonment of a proceeding to perpetuate decedent's testimony, defendant's general attorney stipulated that plaintiff might testify in any suit thereafter brought as to what the decedent said was the cause, character, and extent of his injuries, the stipulation was sufficiently broad to justify evidence that decedent stated on returning home that he was a passenger on defendant's freight train, on which certain of his cattle were being transported, and that near a certain station the train-men caused the car in which he was riding to give a sudden, violent jerk, which threw him from his seat against the door-casing of the car, causing injuries to his head, shoulder, back, and side. Thompson v. Ft. Worth, etc., G. R. Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 73 S. W. 29.

Residence of witnesses.— A statement in an affidavit made in opposition to an application that the adverse party will consent that the witnesses reside at the places indicated in the application, provided that they will admit that they are citizens of such places, is too problematical to be treated as a concession. Boyes v. Bossard, 87 N. Y. App. Div. 605, 84 N. Y. Suppl. 563.

Refusal to accept affidavit of witness.— It is not an objection to a commission that after notice given of intention to apply for it, a proposition was made to accept the affidavit of the witness, which proposition was declined before the time for issuing the commission expired. Brooks v. Brooks, 16 S. C. 621.

Statement as to proof required.— Where a commission will cause great delay, and the adverse party shows that the testimony sought will probably be insufficient, and proposes to admit whatever the applicant will swear he expects to prove on the commission, the latter will be required to state what he so expects to prove. Bank of Commerce v. Michel, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 687.

Presence of witness at trial.— In August v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 9 N. Y. Suppl. 270, plaintiffs who sought to take the deposition of a witness in jail under an order of arrest application and by reason thereof the adverse party will be greatly inconvenienced or prejudiced if it is granted.[33]

IX. Order For Commission or to Take Testimony.

A. Necessity — 1. In General. Where an order for a commission[34] or to take testimony de bene esse[35] or procure the depositions of witnesses in per- procured by them were required to stipulate that the deposition should be suppressed, if they permitted the witness to leave the jurisdiction.

Safe conduct in foreign jurisdiction.— In Hollander v. Baiz, 40 Fed. 659, an action against a foreign consul-general, in which the plaintiff sought to take testimony in the country represented by defendant, it appeared that plaintiff's presence at the execution of the commission was necessary, but that the foreign government declined to permit him to enter its territory, and it was held that the commission should issue only on condition that defendant obtain from his government, and furnish to plaintiff, a safe-conduct, allowing him to enter the country and return, and be present on the execution of the commission.

33. Severe terms may be imposed. Mills v. Campbell, 1 Jur. 865, 7 L. J. Exch. Eq. 5, 2 Y. & C. Exch. 402.

Costs may be imposed. Todd v. Aylwin, 1 Sim. 271, 2 Eng. Ch. 271. Where notice of a motion for a commission is served by defendant without unnecessary delay, and before notice of trial served by plaintiff, the motion will be granted without the payment of plaintiff's costs of preparing for trial. Brokaw v. Bridgman, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 114.

Security for costs.— Where a non-resident plaintiff unnecessarily delays his application, and his recovery is doubtful, he may be required to give security for costs. Hames v. Judd, 16 Daly (N. Y.) 110, 9 N. Y. Suppl. 743, 18 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 324. In Fischer v. Hahn, 13 C. B. N. S. 659, 32 L. J. C. P. 209, 11 Wkly. Rep. 342, 106 E. C. L. 659, a plaintiff seeking to be examined on his own behalf on the ground that he was going abroad, in addition to special terms was required to give security for costs and to furnish an additional affidavit as to his bona fides. In De Rossi v. Polhill, 7 Scott 836, the court directed a reference as to the advisability of increasing the security the applicant had given for costs.

Payment into court.— If there is a reason to suspect that the application of defendant is for delay, the court may direct that the money sued for be brought into court. Sparks v. Barrett, 7 L. J. C. P. 65, 5 Scott 402. See also Lloyd v. Key, 3 Dowl. P. C. 253.

At common law a dedimus or commission could only issue by leave of the court. Hume v. Scott, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 260.

Under the Kentucky statutes no dedimus or order therefor is necessary to authorize the taking of a deposition de bene esse. Hume v. Scott, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 260.

In Louisiana no order is necessary where the commission is to be executed within the state. Hall v. Acklen, 9 La. Ann. 219.

In the United States courts, in accordance with the state practice, the clerk may issue a commission without an order of the court. U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 18 Fed. 480.

In term-time.— Where the clerk has no authority to grant an order or commission to take depositions in term-time, but only in vacation, a deposition taken under a commission issued by the clerk in term-time is illegal. McCandlass v. Polk, 10 Humphr. (Tenn.) 617.

During vacation a commission may issue to take the deposition of a witness who is fatally ill, without the special order or direction of the court. Hays v. Johnson, 3 Houst. (Del.) 319.

Failure to enter order.— A commission taken by both parties may be read in evidence, although the rule on which it was grounded was not entered on the docket. Dawson v. Tibbs, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 349.

Sufficiency.— The signing by the judge of a commission issued by the clerk of the court is a sufficient approval of the commission and a sufficient order therefor. Bradford v. Cooper, 1 La. Ann. 325.

35. Travis v. Brown, 43 Pa. St. 9, 82 Am. Dec. 540; Curtis v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 502.

Leave of court or notice.— Under a statute providing that defendant in a criminal case "may, by leave of the court, take the depositions of witnesses residing out of the State," upon consenting that the state may also take depositions, and that "the defendant may, on the same terms, by leave of court, or by notice to the prosecuting attorney, take the deposition of any witness conditionally," a deposition may be taken by defendant within the state on notice and without leave of the court. Tullis v. Stafford, 134 Ind. 258, 33 N. E. 1023.

During recess.— Depositions taken in term-time, during a recess of the court, the opposite party having notice, are received, although taken without an order of the court. Jones v. Spring, 7 Mass. 251.

In Illinois the statute authorizes a person filing a bill, before issue joined, to take depositions substantiating its averments; and without an order to that effect he may proceed to take his depositions de bene esse. Doyle v. Wiley, 15 Ill. 576.

In Pennsylvania the testimony of a witness petuam[36] is a prerequisite to the issue of the commission or to the right to take or preserve testimony in this form a deposition taken without an order is irregular and invalid.

2 In Chancery. Ordinarily the deposition of a witness or a party cannot be taken in chancery without an order therefor,[37] but this rule has been relaxed in many jurisdictions, so that by the practice a deposition may be taken without leave, subject to the right of the party against whom it is proposed to read it to except.[38]

3. Federal Practice. The provisions of the United States Revised Statutes which empowers the courts of the United States whenever it may be necessary to prevent a failure or delay of justice to grant a dedimus to take depositions according to common usage,[39] or to adopt the state practice relative to taking depositions,[40] authorizes the issue of a commission or the granting of permission to take depositions, according to the law of the state in which the court is held,[41] whenever the right to take it is conferred by the federal statutes,[42] except where who resides more than forty miles from the place of trial may be taken by rule or commission, if he is unable to attend. Buck v. Strong, 6 Pa. Dist. 116, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 174.

Motion for new trial.— Depositions in support of a motion for a new trial may be taken and presented without leave of court first had. Llewellyn v. Levy, 33 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 310.

36. Under the Virginia practice there must be an order to take the testimony sought to be perpetuated, and when taken a final decree perpetuating it. Smith v. Grosjean, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 109.

See Sproule v. Samuel, 5 Ill. 135.

Unsigned order.— In Cummins v. Wire, 6 N. J. Eq. 73, a paper purporting to be the certified copy of an order and of the signature of the chancellor thereto, for the examination of a defendant in a suit, was sent by the clerk to the solicitor of defendant, but by some oversight the original draft of the order had not been presented to the chancellor for his signature, and it was held that the court might receive the testimony, if the party examined was not interested.

39. U. S. Rev. St. (1878) § 866 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 663].

"According to common usage" in the judiciary act of 1789 refers to usage of the state courts in the particular state where the United States court is to be held. Warren v. Younger, 18 Fed. 839; U. S. v. Cameron, 15 Fed. 794, 5 McCrary 93. In Warren v. Younger, 18 Fed. 859, 862, the court said: "It is the universal experience that most of our knowledge of the common usage of courts is absorbed by us in the atmosphere of the courts; that it is perpetuated by tradition, and only partial and unsatisfactory, and often delusive glimpses of it can be caught now and then in text-books and reports. This usage, like the usage or general custom of trade, has life in itself and grows to meet the cases of the growth of the business to which it relates."

Examination of party before trial.— It is not "according to common usage" to call a party in advance of the trial for the purpose of extracting information which may be thereafter used or not, as serves the purpose of the party obtaining it. Matter of Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 5 S. Ct. 724, 28 L. ed. 1117. A common usage, within the meaning of the statute, cannot be established by a state statute authorizing the examination of a party to obtain facts on which to frame a pleading. Turner v. Shackman, 27 Fed. 183.

40. U. S. Rev. St. (1878) § 914 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 684]. And see Courts, XII, E, 1 [11 Cyc. 884]. See also 27 U. S. St. at L. 7 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 663], to the effect that, "in addition to the mode of taking the depositions of witnesses in causes pending at law or equity in the district and circuit courts of the United States, it shall be lawful to take the depositions or testimony of witnesses in the mode prescribed by the laws of the state in which the courts are held."

41. McLennan v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 22 Fed. 198; U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 18 Fed. 480.

42. 27 U. S. St. at L. 7 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 664] providing that depositions may be taken for use in the federal courts in the mode prescribed by the state laws, merely provides an additional method of taking depositions in cases already authorized, and does not confer any additional rights to take testhe mode of taking it whether under commission or otherwise is expressly provided for therein.[43]

B. Notice of Order or Entry. In some jurisdictions where an order to take testimony or for a commission is taken or entered ex parte, the adverse party must be served with a written notice, specifying the commissioners and indicating where they can be found.[44]

C. Form and Requisites[45] — 1. Order For Commission. The order should show the existence of a sufficient ground for issuing the commission,[46] and should designate and identify the commissioner and the witnesses.[47] In England it is required that the order specify the time, place, and manner of executing the commission.[48] timony under state laws. National Cash Register Co. v. Leland, 77 Fed. 242.

Grounds.— The right to take the testimony must depend upon a statute of the United States and not on a state statute. McLennan v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 22 Fed. 198. In adopting the state practice the court does not dispense with the requirement of the act of congress which authorizes depositions to be taken when the witness lives more than one hundred miles from the place where the case is tried. The adoption of the state law only refers to the form and mode of taking depositions. Warren v. Younger, 18 Fed. 859; Curtis v. Central R. Co., 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,501, 6 McLean 401.

Examination of party before trial.— The courts of the United States cannot compel a party to submit to an examination before trial as provided for by state statutes, nor enforce an order for such examination made in the state court previous to the removal of the cause. Matter of Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 5 S. Ct. 724, 28 L. ed. 117.

Choice of modes.— Where the right exists under the federal statutes, the parties may follow as to the mere mode of procuring the deposition at their election, either the provisions of the state law or of the act of congress. McLennan v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 22 Fed. 198; U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 18 Fed. 480.

Conflict of laws.— The courts of the United States will not authorize the taking of depositions under the statutes of a state which conflict with the act of congress relating to depositions in similar or analogous cases. Randall v. Venable, 17 Fed. 162.

43. U. S. v. Pings, 4 Fed. 714.

Sufficiency.— A bona fide substantial compliance with the rule requiring notice is sufficient. Kellum v. Smith, 39 Pa. St. 241.

Sufficiency of service.— A rule of court requiring service of notice of a rule to take depositions upon a party is not complied with by service on his attorney, and a waiver of service on the party cannot be implied from the attorney's omission expressly to dissent to the service on himself. Cunningham v. Jordan, 1 Pa. St. 442.

An order to examine a party need not be served on him. Smith v. Pincombe, 13 Jur. 91, 158, 18 L. J. Ch. 211, 16 Sim. 497.

45. For form of order: For commission see Clayton v. Yarrington, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 273 note; U. S. v. Hom Hing, 48 Fed. 635. For oral examination see Clayton v. Yarrington, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 275 note.

46. Absence of witness.— Where it is necessary to show that the witness is not within the state, it is not enough to state that he resides out of the state, or that he is absent from the state at the time of the trial. Wallace v. Blake, 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 519, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 438, 16 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 384.

47. Corbin v. Anderson, 84 N. Y. App. Div. 268, 82 N. Y. Suppl. 683; Wallace v. Blake, 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 519, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 438, 16 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 384.

An order for an open commission should state the names of the witnesses to be examined. Corbin v. Anderson, 84 N. Y. App. Div. 268, 82 N. Y. Suppl. 683.

Description of commissioners.— A rule for a commission to take the testimony in another state, which names commissioners but fails to state their residences or to specify the county or place in the state where the commission is to be executed, is so defective that the depositions taken under the commission cannot be read. Patterson v. Greenland, 37 Pa. St. 510.

Omission of name of commissioner — Authorizing party to submit names of witnesses. — Where it is provided that the commission may issue to one or more persons to be named therein, an order in which the name of the commissioner is not inserted, and which provides for the examination of "such other witnesses as the defendant may submit the names and addresses of to the plaintiff," is irregular in both respects. Wallace v. Blake, 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 519, 4 N. Y. Suppl. 438, 16 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 384.

In England the order need not name the commissioner. Nicol v. Alison, 11 Q. B. 1006, 12 Jur. 598, 17 L. J. Q. B. 355, 63 E. C. L. 1006.

Sufficiency.— An order for a commission to examine witnesses in a city within one of the United States and to return the same before a specified date is sufficient as to time and place. Bulham v. Mears, 6 Wkly. Rep. 597.

2. Order to Take Testimony. Among other requirements it has been held that an order to take testimony should properly designate the cause in which the testimony is to be taken,[49] and specify the notice to be given to the adverse party,[50] as well as the time and place of taking the deposition.[51] But where the officer by whom the deposition is to be taken is implied, an order which is silent in that respect is not bad for that reason.[52]

X. The Commission.[53]

A. In General. At common law the ordinary mode of procuring depositions is by commission, and this mode of procedure is usually required by statute, especially where the witness is beyond the jurisdiction. It follows that except where the common-law rule has been abrogated,[54] or special circumstances exist

Time of notice.— Where a rule of court authorizes a rule to take depositions to be entered of course, stipulating reasonable notice, the construction of the rule must, so far as respects the necessity of specifying the number of days' notice in the rule, depend on the usage and practice of the court. 54. In Iowa where the witness resides within the state, but in a different county from the place of the trial, his deposition may be taken either upon notice or written interrogatories. If he resides without the state a commission should issue to the officer or commissioner taking the same; if within the county where the trial is to take place no commission is necessary; if within the state, but in a different county, then the party may pursue either of the two methods. Fabian v. Davis, 5 Iowa 456.

Under the Kentucky statutes testimony may be taken de bene esse without a dedimus. Hume v. Scott, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 260.

The Tennessee act providing that hereafter it shall not be necessary to procure an order of the court or to make any affidavit previous to taking a deposition, but that either party litigant in any of the courts of the state may take depositions on notice to the adverse party in all cases that by law can be taken abolishes the commission and renders it unnecessary. D. Form and Requisites — 1. In General. The dedimus or commission should conform to the order for its issue and should be in the form and contain all the requirements prescribed by statute or otherwise;[61] but mere informalities or irregularities which do not substantially affect or prejudice the rights of the parties may be disregarded.[62]

2. Designation of Cause. While the commission should accurately designate the action or suit in which the testimony is to be taken,[63] where the action is or may be otherwise identified, and the error is not misleading or prejudicial, a mere misdescription of it,[64] clerical errors in the initials or names of the parties,[65] or as to the capacity in which they sue or are sued,[66] or incorrect statements as to the court in which the litigation is pending,[67] may be disregarded.

3. Designation of Commissioner — a. In General. In many of the states the commission must designate by name the commissioners by whom the testimony is to be taken,[68] with such specificness as will leave no reasonable doubt of his identity.[69] In those states, however, where the commission may be directed to designated officials authorized to administer oaths, it is ordinarily sufficient to

b. Alternative Designation. Although it has been held that a commission may be directed to persons named in the alternative,[74] it has also been held improper to address the writ to several officers in the alternative;[75] and that if addressed to a person by name or to any officer it will be good as to the person named only.[76]

c. Substitution of Commissioner. In Illinois under the statute providing that the commission may be "directed to any competent or disinterested person as commissioner, or to any judge," etc., no individual need be expressly named as commissioner. Brackett v. Nikirk, 20 Ill. App. 525.

In Indiana a dedimus in a pending suit to take depositions out of the state must be directed to a justice of the peace; but a person only expecting to become a party to a suit may have a dedimus, by the statute, directed to any officer of another state who is there authorized to take depositions. Hobbs v. Godlove, 17 Ind. 359; Dumont v. McCracken, 6 Blackf. 355.

In Louisiana a commission to take testimony within the state may be directed generally to any judge or justice of the peace in a particular parish. Dwight v. Splane, 11 Rob. 487. Where a deposition is actually taken before an officer of another state, as intended, the fact that the dedimus was erroneously addressed "to any judge or justice of the peace" of the state in which the dedimus issued is immaterial. Sufficiency.— A commission addressed to "any notary public within and for Dauphin Co., Pa.," sufficiently designates the county and state in which he is authorized to act. Gilman v. Sheets, 78 Iowa 499, 43 N. W. 299. Where a commission issues to a notary public, if within the United States or Canada, it is sufficient to name the county of his residence; but if the deposition is to be taken in some foreign country, the city or town of his residence must be stated. Lyon v. Barrows, 13 Iowa 428. A dedimus issued in Missouri and directed "to any judge . . . of the city of New Orleans" is of no validity, since the court will not take judicial notice that New Orleans is a municipal division of any of the United States. unauthorized insertion by the party who procured it of two other names will vitiate it.[79]

d. Filling Blanks. A commission to take testimony without the state may issue in blank as to the name of the commissioner, which may be inserted afterward,[80] or by the commissioner at the time of taking the testimony;[81] and it has been held that the failure of a commissioner to insert his name in a blank commission will not vitiate it, if the return shows who the commissioner was,[82] and that the deposition was taken before the proper person.[83]

4. Designation of Witnesses — a. Necessity. It is the general rule that the witnesses who are to be examined must be named in the commission, or in some other manner sufficiently identified.[84] Under special circumstances, however, the party may be allowed to take the depositions of such witnesses as he may produce before the commissioner without naming them, for the purpose of proving a distinct fact.[85]

An open commission authorizing the examination of any witness that may be produced by either party, but which does not name or describe the witnesses or limit them to persons residing within the state is erroneous. Darling v. Klock, 74 Hun (N. Y.) 248, 26 N. Y. Suppl. 445.

Following terms of order.—Where an order was made for a commission to examine a witness named "and others" the commission cannot issue to examine such witness only, without amending the order. Smith v. Babcock, 9 Ont. Pr. 175.

One commission may be sued out to take the depositions of several witnesses. Howe v. Pierson, 12 Gray (Mass.) 26.

Foreign witnesses.—In Pennsylvania it has never been the practice to require parties issuing a commission to examine foreign witnesses to name them, although the court has a discretion to compel them to do so. As to open commission see infra, XI.

Inability to ascertain names.— Where the applicant shows that the facts which he wishes to establish can only be proved by persons in the employ of his adversary whose names are unknown to him, the court will either permit the commission to issue generally without the names of the witnesses or grant a stay of proceedings until their names can be ascertained. Shaffer v. Wilcox, 2 Hall (N. Y.) 502. On proof that the names of witnesses or the importance of their evidence was not discovered until the commission was put in execution abroad, their testimony may be taken. The Infanta, 13 Fed. Cas. "Members of the bar."— If no objection is made before the commission issues, a direction to take the deposition of a person named

b. Sufficiency. The misnomer or misdescription of a witness by the omission of a second initial letter or name or a variation which does not change the sound of the name or the like, is immaterial;[86] but the deposition of a person whose name is clearly dissimilar from the name designated in the dedimus or commission must be rejected, although he is the person whose testimony is intended.[87]

c. Additional Witnesses. When necessary to prevent a failure of justice the commission may be modified by inserting the name of an additional witness;[88] but a new name will not be inserted on the death of a witness named — a new commission should issue.[89]

5. Time and Place of Execution. Ordinarily the time and place of executing the commission should be inserted therein;[90] but a commission to be executed in another state need not designate the particular place of execution.[91]

Omission of name of party.— Where, on application by a non-resident plaintiff for commission to examine non-resident witnesses, the opposing affidavit avers that plaintiff has purposely omitted his name as a witness to embarrass defendant in obtaining certain evidence in his possession, the order granting the commission will be modified by requiring plaintiff's name to be inserted, unless he stipulates to be present at the trial for examination. "To-morrow."— There is no error in the commissioner being directed by the commission to take the deposition on "to-morrow," the commission bearing a specific date. Wolfe v. Parham, 18 Ala. 441.

91. In Missouri a commission to take testimony without the state may be addressed to any judge, notary public, justice of the peace, or other judicial officer within the state, without designating the place therein where the deposition is to be taken. Borders v. Barber, 81 Mo. 636.

Failure to specify county.— A deposition taken without the state is not objectionable because the dedimus failed to designate the county in which it was to be taken. Turner v. Patterson, 5 Dana (Ky.) 292.

93. See cases cited infra, this note.

Failure to annex statutory provisions.— The omission to annex to the commission as prescribed by statute a copy of the provisions as to its execution is immaterial, where the commission has been properly executed. Hall v. Barton, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 274; Williams v. Eldridge, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 249.

As to additional interrogatories.—In granting a foreign commission it is proper to direct the commissioner not to admit any additional interrogatories. Cunningham v. Otis, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,485, 1 Gall. 166.

Indorsement on interrogatories.— It is immaterial that the directions for executing the commission are indorsed on the inter-instructed specially when such instruction is necessary as to who may appear before them.[94]

b. Notice to Adverse Party. The commission should contain a direction that notice be given to the adverse party of the time and place of taking the deposition.[95]

c. As to Return. The commission must contain a direction for its return[96] to the proper court or officer,[97] the mode or manner thereof,[98] and usually the time at or within which the return shall be made.[99]

7. Signature. The commission should be signed or authenticated by the clerk of the court,[1] although the signature of the judge will be sufficient, where the commission is issued by authority of the court.[2]

8. Date. The commission should bear date as of its issue, but it will not be invalidated by an erroneous date if it properly issued in fact.[3]

Instructions in English are sufficient, although the commissioner may be a foreigner. Darling v. Darling, 8 Ont. Pr. 391.

Omission of clerk to sign.— A deposition will not be suppressed where the commission appears to have been properly executed, although the form of instructions to the commissioner, annexed to the commission, was not signed by the clerk or defendant's counsel, as required by a rule of court. U. S. v. Pings, 4 Fed. 714.

94. Where a commission is granted to take evidence in a foreign country, the court may direct the commissioner not to allow either party or his counsel to appear before him. Cunningham v. Otis, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,485, 1 Gall. 166.

96. Smith v. Randall, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 495.

Who may direct.— A statute authorizing the judges of the court to prescribe a return of the commission empowers the presiding judge, who has the power of a judge in vacation, to direct the return. Homer v. Martin, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 156.

Place of direction.— An explicit direction as to its return contained in the body of the commission is a sufficient compliance with a statute requiring such a direction on the commission. Hall v. Barton, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 274.

Amendment.— The omission of the judge to sign the instructions for the return may be remedied by amendment when the deposition is offered. Leetch v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 4 Daly (N. Y.) 518.

97. To clerk.— Where it does not appear that the place of trial was changed merely for the convenience of witnesses, it is proper to direct the return to be made to the clerk of the county originally named in the complaint as the place of trial, instead of to the clerk of the county afterward selected. Whitney v. Wyncoop, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 370.

99. A statute requiring process to be returnable to the term next ensuing its teste, does not apply to commissions to take depositions, which may be made returnable to any subsequent term. Duncan v. Hill, 19 N. C. 291.

Improper return-day.— A deposition will not be rejected because the clerk made the commission returnable at a day when the court was not sitting. Scott v. Baber, 13 Ala. 182.

Failure to fix return-day.— A commission is not rendered void by the neglect of the court to fix a return-day. Follain v. Lefevre, 3 Rob. (La.) 13.

1. Steptoe v. Read, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 1.

Sufficiency.— A signature "F. U. T., clk. by T. R. T., D. C." is a sufficient teste by the deputy clerk. Miller v. George, 30 S. C. 526, 9 S. E. 659.

Where, through inadvertence, the clerk omits to subscribe the commission, if the paper bears on its face the usual attestation clause denoting its official character and finality, and is in the handwriting of the clerk, the omission will not invalidate the commission. Steptoe v. Read, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 1.

Amendment.— A commission to take interrogatories is not invalidated by the fact that another than the clerk's name appears in the attesting clause, but the court may permit it to be amended by erasure, and by inserting the clerk's name. Linskie v. Kerr, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 34 S. W. 765.

2. Goodyear v. Vosburgh, 41 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 421.

3. Date prior to suit.— A dedimus is not vitiated because bearing a date prior to the institution of the suit, where it is apparent from the clerk's books and from other testimony that the date is erroneous. Curle v. Beers, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 170.

Date subsequent to day of application.— On objection that the commission was dated as of a day subsequent to the day on which the notice stated the application would be made comes too late on the trial. Foster v. Henderson, 29 Oreg. 210, 45 Pac. 899.

9. SEAL. Except where dispensed with by statute[4] or waived by the parties,[5] the dedimus or commission can only issue under the seal of the court.[6]

10. ATTACHING EXHIBITS. The weight of authority is to the effect that in actions on a promissory note or draft where plaintiff has procured a commission to be issued, he cannot be compelled to annex thereto the instrument sued on, especially where its production for inspection or for any other purpose can be had in other modes.[7] But where the identity of an instrument sued on or its genuineness is involved it should be attached to the commission or interrogatories for submission to the witness.[8]

XI. OPEN COMMISSION.

A. In General. An open commission should never be granted without the strongest proof of its necessity and unless it satisfactorily appear that the interests of justice require it, and further that an ordinary commission with interrogatories will be inadequate and will not protect the rights of the parties.[9]

4. A provision that the clerk of a designated court shall not affix its seal to process issued to the county dispenses with a seal to a commission to take a deposition within the county. McArter v. Rhea, 122 N. C. 614, 30 S. E. 128.

5. Sealing is waived by a stipulation "that the annexed commission do issue." Churchill v. Carter, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 385.

Certified copy under seal.— Where a commission by a register of wills of Pennsylvania to take testimony issues without the official seal, and the testimony is taken and returned to the register, a certified copy of it under seal given by the register is sufficient to admit the will in evidence in an action of ejectment respecting land devised by the will. Loy v. Kennedy, 1 Watts & S. (Pa.) 396.

Proof of authenticity.— A commission issued in another state is sufficiently authenticated by the seal of a county in that state, without further proof of its genuineness. Mencke v. Strause, 17 Phila. (Pa.) 104.

The judge of a county court acting as his own clerk cannot issue a commission without a seal, where by statute it must be issued by the clerk under the seal of the court. Blakeslee v. Dye, 1 Colo. App. 118, 27 Pac. 881.

The omission of the clerk to affix the seal of the court is a mere irregularity which is not fatal to the deposition. The Oriental v. Barclay, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 193, 41 S. W. 117.

Sealing after execution of commissions.— The clerk may be permitted to affix his seal after the depositions have been taken. The Oriental v. Barclay, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 193, 41 S. W. 117.

8. In an action on a note claimed to be a forgery, the original and not a copy should be attached to the interrogatories. Weidner v. Conner, 9 Pa. St. 78.

Attaching will.— The Illinois statute which provides for the taking of the depositions of attesting witnesses to a will on dedimus issued, with the will attached, being applicable to probate courts, does not limit circuit courts to that mode, after appeal; and a deposition may be taken as in other cases, without the will attached, the will being properly identified and submitted to the witness by the proper custodian. In re Noble, 124 Ill. 266, 15 N. E. 850.

Interrogatories referring to an account should have the same attached so that it may be identified. Shockley v. Morgan, 103 Ga. 156, 29 S. E. 694.

9. Stewart v. Russell, 66 N. Y. App. Div. 542, 73 N. Y. Suppl. 249; Predigested Food Co. v. Scott, 28 N. Y. App. Div. 59, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 896; Darling v. Klock, 74 Hun (N. Y.) 248, 26 N. Y. Proc. 34; Parker v. Lithgoe, 36 N. Y. St. 981; Heney v. Mead, 4 Month. L. Bul. (N. Y.) 10.

Consideration for adverse party.— The right to an open commission depends on the desire of the party moved against, and not on the desire or convenience of the moving party. Kaempfer v. Gorman, 17 N. Y. Suppl. 857, 22 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 34.

Prior resort to ordinary commission.— If the ground of the application is that some of the witnesses are unwilling to testify, but it is alleged that other proposed witnesses are willing, and it does not appear but that the testimony of the latter will suffice, it is not unreasonable to require that their testimony should be first taken in the ordinary

B. When Permissible. An open commission is proper where the party desiring the testimony has no exact knowledge as to the persons from whom it may be obtained,[10] or where fraud is charged, and the witnesses are more or less friendly to the adverse party, and are unwilling or reluctant to testify;[11] but it is no reason for granting such a commission that the proposed witnesses are hostile to the applicant.[12]

C. Right to Name Witnesses. Both parties may name witnesses whose testimony they desire.[13] method, before an open commission is issued. Burnell v. Coles, 23 Misc. (N. Y.) 615, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 200. An open commission to take the testimony of witnesses is properly refused where the witnesses have already been examined under a commission, with interrogatories, and the only object sought is to examine them further as to facts to which their attention has been directed, and to obtain certain books, there being nothing to prevent a further examination under a commission, with interrogatories. Beadleston v. Beadleston, 2 N. Y. Suppl. 814.

Who may be examined.—A commission for the examination of corporate officers who have possession of books and papers should be limited in a general way to an examination of those present and past officers, agents, and clerks of the corporation who have or have had charge of the books and papers, and who have knowledge of the facts alleged in the complaint. Hart v. Ogdensburg, etc., R. Co., 67 Hun (N. Y.) 556, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 401.

Annexing interrogatories.—Where an open commission is granted it is improper to require the examination to be on interrogatories and cross interrogatories annexed to the commission. Clark v. Sullivan, 4 Silv. Supreme (N. Y.) 1, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 565.

Non-residence of witness.— An averment that the proposed witness does not reside within the state is insufficient to justify an open commission. The proof must be that the witness was not within the state at the time the application is made. Burnell v. Coles, 23 Misc. (N. Y.) 615, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 200.

Witnesses hostile.—In an action to recover money loaned on fraudulent securities, plaintiff's claim that certain witnesses residing in another state were hostile, based upon the fact that the bank of which they were officials was the correspondent of defendant bank, and that they refused to plaintiff any information concerning the alleged cause of action, is not sufficient ground to justify the granting of an open commission to examine them. Thalmann v. Importers', etc., Nat. Bank, 74 N. Y. App. Div. 629, 77 N. Y. Suppl. 586.

Appeal.— An order granting an open commission affects substantial rights and is appealable. Jemison v. Citizens' Sav. Bank, 85 N. Y. 546 [reversing 24 Hun 350]; Anonymous, 59 N. Y. 313.

An order granting an open commission will not be disturbed unless the adverse party consents that testimony in another action against the same defendant, involving the same issues, and taken under a like commission may be used. Bliss v. Hornthal, 87 Hun (N. Y.) 110, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 1018.

10. Complicated corporate transactions.— In an action by stock-holders of one corporation to prevent its consolidation with another on the ground that plaintiffs' company is absolutely controlled by the other, and that plaintiffs' stock will be rendered valueless by the inequitable nature of the contract for consolidation, an open commission will issue when it appears that the ordinary commission with written interrogatories would be useless, in view of the want of exact knowledge of the methods of the two corporations possessed by plaintiffs and their counsel, and when it further appears that plaintiffs do not know the names of the precise persons who have possession of the important books and documents which they may need, or of the names of those who may have passed from the service of defendants, but who were actors at the time of the various events relied on to show the inequitable nature of the proposed consolidation. Hart v. Ogdensburg, etc., R. Co., 67 Hun (N. Y.) 556, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 401.

To prove bad character.— In an action for breach of promise of marriage, defendant may have an open commission to procure testimony in support of his defense setting up in mitigation of damages, plaintiff's bad character and immoral and licentious conduct. Burnell v. Coles, 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 409, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 940.

Undue influence and testamentary incapacity.—An open commission may be granted where a will is contested for undue influence and testamentary incapacity, and testator had resided in another state for over a year prior to her death and for some time prior to the execution of her will, all the witnesses as to her capacity, and the influences surrounding her at the time she executed the will also residing there. Matter of Anderson, 84 N. Y. App. Div. 268, 82 N. Y. Suppl. 683.

11. In an action charging fraud plaintiff is entitled to an open commission where the witnesses had sustained long-continued business relations with defendant, supplemented by more or less of personal intercourse and friendship, and were unwilling or at least reluctant to testify. Jones v. Hoyt, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 324, 63 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 94.

12. Kaempfer v. Gorman, 17 N. Y. Suppl. 857, 22 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 34.

13. Matter of Anderson, 84 N. Y. App. Div. 268, 82 N. Y. Suppl. 683. See Darling v. Klock, 74 Hun (N. Y.) 248, 26 N. Y. Suppl. 445.

XII. ORAL EXAMINATION.

In some jurisdictions oral examinations under an order or commission are expressly provided for,[14] or under particular circumstances may be permitted in addition to the examination of the witness under written interrogatories;[15] but as a rule an examination in this mode is not favored, and will be allowed only in a Necessity of naming witnesses in commission see supra, X, D, 4.

14. In Hawaii the court may direct an oral examination under a statute authorizing it to "give all such directions touching the time, place and circumstances connected with such examination as may appear reasonable and just." Matter of Ivers, 12 Hawaii 99.

In Illinois the statute permitting the oral examination of non-resident witnesses is applicable as well to persons residing without the county in which suit is pending as to persons residing without the state. Gardner v. Meeker, 169 Ill. 40, 48 N. E. 307 [affirming 69 Ill. App. 422].

Prior notice to take on interrogatories.— A deposition is improperly taken on written interrogatories where, subsequent to the giving of the notice of intention to take the same, the opposite party gave notice of his election to take it upon oral interrogatories, as allowed by statute. Lewis v. Fish, 40 Ill. App. 372.

In Kentucky there is no provision for interrogatories, consequently they are unnecessary. Smith v. Leavill, 29 S. W. 319, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 609.

In New York under a statute providing that the parties may stipulate or the court may direct that a commission issue without written interrogatories, and that the deposition be taken on oral questions, or partly on oral questions and partly on written interrogatories, the court has the power to direct an oral commission against the objection of one of the parties. Laidley v. Rogers, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 468, 23 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 110. See also Matter of Anderson, 84 N. Y. App. Div. 268, 82 N. Y. Suppl. 683; Deshon v. Packwood, 16 Abb. Pr. 272, where the court said there was no precedent for an order for an oral examination.

In Pennsylvania under the act June 25, 1895, allowing testimony to be taken out of the state by way of depositions, instead of upon commission, the court will allow a rule to take such testimony unless cause be shown to the contrary. Reed v. Fidelity, etc., Co., 39 Wkly. Notes Cas. 438.

U. S. equity rule 67 authorizes the court to appoint examiners for the taking of depositions orally, outside as well as inside its territorial jurisdiction. Bischoffsheim v. Baltzer, 10 Fed. 1. 20 Blatchf. 229; Western North Carolina R. Co. v. Drew, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,434. 3 Woods 691.

In England the examination of witnesses de bene esse is taken orally. Cook v. Hall, 9 Hare (App.) xx, 16 Jur. 1008, 22 L. J. Ch. 12, 1 Wkly. Rep. 31, 41 Eng. Ch. (App.) xx.

In Canada where a commission was issued to England to take evidence in a case involving many intricate questions of fact, the evidence was ordered to be taken on viva voce questions instead of upon interrogatories. Watson v. McDonald, 8 Ont. Pr. 354.

Subsequently propounding written interrogatories.—Where leave is given to examine orally, if after an oral examination, written interrogatories are propounded by the officer, the deposition is invalidated. Nevitt v. Crow, 1 Colo. App. 453, 29 Pac. 749.

15. Wainwright v. Low, 49 Hun (N. Y.) 283, 1 N. Y. Suppl. 786; Anderson v. West, 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 209; Clayton v. Yarrington, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 273 note.

Where witnesses were examined orally, and afterward on written interrogatories sent by one party, the deposition was rejected. Nevitt v. Crow, 1 Colo. App. 453, 29 Pac. 749.

Oral cross-examination.— Where plaintiff procures a commission to examine witnesses on interrogatories and it is difficult for defendant to anticipate what their testimony will be, so as to enable him to properly frame his cross interrogatories, he will be granted the right to cross-examine them orally, with leave to plaintiff to reëxamine the witnesses orally, or to have an oral direct examination if he prefers. Laidley v. Rogers, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 468, 23 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 110. Where interrogatories annexed to a commission are so numerous and cover so many transactions that it would be difficult to frame cross interrogatories properly to develop the answers, the adverse party will be given leave to attend and cross-examine orally. Parsons v. Middleton, 9 Pa. Dist. 53.

Condition of granting commission.— An order granting a commission to take testimony abroad may be upon condition that the applicant consent that the witnesses be examined and cross-examined orally. Clayton v. Yarrington, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 273 note.

In Pennsylvania when a commission has issued, the court has no authority to authorize the adverse party to call witnesses before the commissioner in his own behalf, and examine them orally, subject to cross-examination by the party obtaining the commission. McCullough's Estate, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. 87, 20 Wkly. Notes Cas. 471.

Written cross interrogatories furnished.— Where the adverse party does not join in a commission, but furnishes written interrogatories, there is no irregularity in permitting an oral cross-examination. Grill v. General Iron Screw Collier Co., L. R. 1 C. P. 600. 2 Jur. N. S. 727, 35 L. J. C. P. 321, 14 L. T. Rep. N. S. 711, 14 Wkly. Rep. 893.

clear case of necessity and where it is apparent that an examination in the usual mode by interrogatories and cross interrogatories will be inadequate.[16]

XIII. LETTERS ROGATORY.[17]

Letters rogatory are letters or a formal communication containing a request by a court in which an action is pending of a foreign court or tribunal that the testimony of a witness residing within its jurisdiction may be formally taken under its direction and transmitted to the court making the request. At an early period this process was in use between the states of the Union. The procurement of depositions in this manner rests entirely on comity.[18] This mode of obtaining testimony should be resorted to only where a commission cannot be executed or would be inadequate,[19] and not where it would be objectionable because removing Adverse witnesses.— The court should allow plaintiff in a divorce suit to take her proof on oral examination upon notice to the adverse party, where the proof, if any can be had, must in the main come from the friends and associates of defendant, thus making an oral examination necessary to do justice to plaintiff. McCampbell v. McCampbell, 103 Ky. 745, 46 S. W. 18, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 552. When it appears from the statement of a witness that he is reluctant to testify for plaintiff, owing to his employment by defendant, and it is impossible to foresee whether he will testify frankly to questions framed, and it is probable that he may manifest a spirit of unfairness to plaintiff, the issuance of a commission to examine the witness on oral questions is proper. Frounfelker v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 81 N. Y. App. Div. 67, 80 N. Y. Suppl. 701.

Biased witness.— The unwillingness of the witness to submit to cross-examination or the fact that he is the son of the applicant is no objection to a rule for an examination viva voce, where it does not appear that the witness is under his father's influence. Carruthers v. Graham, 9 Dowl. P. C. 947.

Discretion of court.— The exercise of discretion in refusing to grant an oral examination will not be interfered with. Matter of Ivers, 12 Hawaii 99.

Review of conflicting evidence.— The court will not interfere with the discretion of a master in deciding on the relative veracity of witnesses, where evidence has been taken viva voce before him. Waddell v. Smyth, 3 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 412.

17. For form of letters rogatory see Doubt v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 238, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 178.

18. Black L. Dict.

Discretion.— The power to make letters rogatory effective rests upon comity, which implies the right to exercise judicial discretion and leaves the court whose power is invoked the right to determine the legality and rightfulness of its exercise. Doubt v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 238, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 178. Pa. Pub. Laws, 308, relative to letters rogatory, do not deprive the courts of this discretion. Doubt v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 238, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 178.

Every presumption in favor of a demand made by a foreign court will be indulged, but its sufficiency may be determined by the court to which it is addressed. Doubt v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 238, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 178. The court to which the letters are directed will not pass on the validity of their issue but will give an opportunity to the party objecting to apply to the tribunal issuing them to have them vacated, and leave it to determine upon their regularity. McKenzie's Case, 2 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 227, 1 Pa. L. J. Rep. 356, 2 Pa. L. J. 343. When letters rogatory are issued from another state, they will not be regarded as coming from a foreign government; but the court to which they are issued will extend to the citizens of each state, in as far as practicable, all the advantages which could be given to citizens of the state, under the laws thereof. McKenzie's Case, 2 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 227, 1 Pa. L. J. Rep. 356, 2 Pa. L. J. 343.

In England an order for letters of request can only be made to examine witnesses and not for the production of documents. Cape Copper Co. v. Comptoir d' Escompte, 38 Wkly. Rep. 763.

Materiality of testimony.— The evidence sought to be procured by the letters must be directly material to the question to be tried. Ehrmann v. Ehrmann, [1896] 2 Ch. 611, 65 L. J. Ch. 745, 75 L. T. Rep. N. S. 37, 45 Wkly. Rep. 149.

Interrogatories must be attached. Doubt v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 238, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 178.

Viva voce examination.— The court to which the letters are addressed will refuse to lend its aid where the examination by the statute of the state in which it is situated is limited to interrogatories, and the request is to permit an examination viva voce, without restriction. Doubt v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 238, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 178.

the investigation from the control of the domestic court, and from the operation of the rules of evidence prevailing therein.[20]

XIV. STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

In the absence of a statute or rule of court to that effect the issue of a commission or an order therefor will not operate as a stay of proceedings unless so ordered on a direct application,[21] which is addressed to the discretion of the court or judge,[22] and will usually be granted,[23] on conditions which will protect the adverse party,[24] unless the applicant has been guilty of laches,[25] or there is a sus-

Prior issue of commission.— It must be shown with certainty that a commission is not adequate, preferably by the issuance of such commission and its return, showing the impossibility, after proper efforts, of obtaining the desired testimony thereunder. Gross v. Palmer, 105 Fed. 833.

Substitution of commission.—That witness testified falsely before the foreign commissioner because not recognizing the binding obligation of the oath administered will not authorize the substitution of a commission. Anonymous, 59 N. Y. 313; Froude v. Froude, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 76, 3 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 79.

To afford complete justice.— The request in the letters should be complied with, when the court sending them cannot do complete justice without the testimony. Shannon Mfg. Co. v. George W. McCaulley, etc., Co., (Del. 1902) 56 Atl. 367.

20. Ferrie v. Public Administrator, 3 Bradf. Surr. (N. Y.) 249.

A resident who has brought suit in another state against a corporation of both states, on a cause of action arising in the state of his residence, should not be permitted to take depositions under letters rogatory. Doubt v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 238, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 178.

The proper practice in objecting to the action of a court receiving letters rogatory from a sister state is to file formal objections, as the court is then enabled to dispose of the questions more methodically and with more certainty of considering all the questions raised. Doubt v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 238, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 178.

21. Maynard v. Chapin, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 520; Jackson v. Woodworth, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 135.

Early New York practice.— In New York, prior to 1830, if a commission was obtained within the time required by the rules of the court (four days in term next after issue joined) it will stay proceedings of course, without anything to that effect in the rule. Jackson v. Woodworth, 18 Johns. 135.

Limited stay.— A rule of court for an examination of witnesses on interrogatories is not an absolute but only a limited stay of proceedings. Forbes v. Wells, 3 Dowl. P. C. 318.

Necessity of vacating order for commission. — A rule for a commission to take the testimony of a witness suspends the trial till the rule be vacated, or leave to proceed is obtained; but a defendant in whose favor a commission was granted, by appearing at the trial and examining witnesses, waives his commission, and a vacatur is unnecessary. Brain v. Rodelicks, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 73, decided in 1803. The plaintiff is entitled to proceed with the trial where defendant had joined in a commission which has not been returned, without vacating the rule for the commission. Shuter v. Hallett, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 115. Where defendant has obtained a rule for a commission at a previous term and has done nothing further under it, plaintiff is not stayed. Kirby v. Watkiss, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 503.

Notice by defendant of an intention to sue out a commission given before he received notice of trial will stay the proceedings. Brokaw v. Bridgman, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 114, Code Rep. N. S. (N. Y.) 407; Jones v. Ives, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 283 [citing Burr v. Skinner, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 391]. See Novals v. Dorrien, 4 Madd. 362.

In Pennsylvania a party desiring to take the deposition of a witness out of the jurisdiction of the court could formerly file a bill in chancery for a commission, and to stay proceedings at law pending its execution. Vanriper v. Vanriper, 3 Lanc. Bar (Pa.) 155.

L. 199, the court discharged so much of an order for a commission as stayed the proceedings on the ground of an unreasonable delay in the application.

Dissolution for delay in return.— Where a commission is not returned two years after its issue an injunction then granted should be dissolved. Penney v. Edgar, 1 Anstr. 276.

picion of bad faith or an ulterior motive on the part of the party making application for the stay.[26]

XV. INTERROGATORIES.

A. In General. The party who procures a commission to be issued is entitled to propound direct interrogatories, and the adverse party to present cross interrogatories.[27]

B. Form.[28] The interrogatories, both direct and cross, must be in proper form, and substantially comply with all requirements prescribed by statute or by rules of court.[29]

C. Propriety — 1. In General. Interrogatories should not be so general as to deprive the other party of an opportunity to properly prepare interrogatories

If the party moves promptly the length of the stay will be proportioned to the distance and difficulty of procuring the evidence. Morse v. Grimke, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 1, 18 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 37.

26. A stay should not be granted, except in a case free from suspicion that any part of the motive in applying for it is to delay or annoy plaintiff, nor unless it appears that great injustice would probably be done by refusing it. Forrest v. Forrest, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 661. In Beall v. Dey, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 513, a stay was granted, although application for the commission was not made until the fourth special term after issue joined.

Necessity of showing bona fides.— Where much time has elapsed very satisfactory excuse is required, and the party must make out so strong a case, not only excusing the laches, but also of the necessity and materiality of the evidence sought, as to remove the natural suspicion of bad faith. Rathbun v. Ingersoll, 34 N. Y. Super. Ct. 211.

27. Hendricks v. Craig, 5 N. J. L. 668; Van Amringe v. Ellmaker, 4 Pa. St. 281. And see cases cited infra, this and succeeding notes.

Interrogatories on retaking see infra, XIX, F.

In Kentucky no provision is made for interrogatories. Smith v. Leavill, 29 S. W. 319, 16 Ky. L. Rep. 609.

Nominal party.— Where the facts to be proved by a commission taken out by plaintiff's creditors, prosecuting the suit for their benefit on the ground that he is about to abandon it, go to support his allegations, he cannot exclude the commission because he had no opportunity to cross it. Baum's Succession, 11 Rob. (La.) 314.

28. For form of interrogatories see Bullitt Civ. Code Ky. (1895) p. 724; Jones v. Jones, 75 Hun (N. Y.) 35, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 274.

For form of caption to interrogatories see Spaids v. Cooley, 113 U. S. 278, 5 S. Ct. 449, 28 L. ed. 984.

29. See cases cited infra, this note.

Misnomer of witness.— A deposition is not excluded by a discrepancy as to the witness' name between the interrogatories and the deposition, if the opposite party knew what person was intended to be examined, and directed his cross-examination accordingly. Tompkins v. Williams, 19 Ga. 569.

Place of statement.— A statute providing that the party desiring a commission shall state in the caption to his direct interrogatories the name and place of residence of each witness, "and shall serve a copy thereof. . . . with notice that . . . a commission will be issued," is complied with when the residences of the witnesses are stated in the notice accompanying the interrogatories, although not in the caption. Semmens v. Walters, 55 Wis. 675, 13 N. W. 889.

Residence of witnesses.— In Georgia interrogatories prepared prior to the issuance of a commission must state the place of residence of the witness if known. McWilliams v. McWilliams, 68 Ga. 459. So in Wisconsin. Semmens v. Walters, 55 Wis. 675, 13 N. W. 889.

Signing.—The New Jersey statute requires the interrogatories to be signed by the parties or their counsel. Graham v. Whitley, 26 N. J. L. 254. In New York the interrogatories may be signed by an attorney (Ludlam v. Broderick, 15 N. J. L. 269) and when so signed will be sufficient, although the person signing fails to further state that he is an attorney (Homer v. Martin, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 156).

A general interrogatory inquiring for matters tending to the advantage of plaintiff does not comply with a rule requiring such an interrogatory to inquire of the witness whether he knows of anything of advantage to the parties or either of them. Smith v. Cokefair, 1 Pa. Co. Ct. 48.

A general cross interrogatory requiring the witness to "state anything else you may know that would be of benefit to the defendant connected with the title in controversy" is objectionable in that it did not call for, but rather excluded, the whole truth. Allen v. Hoxey, 37 Tex. 320.

Exhibits.— Where notes or other writings are to be proved by two or more witnesses, they may be attached to one set of interrogatories, and referred to by appropriate description in the others. Mobley v. Leophart, 51 Ala. 587.

There may be one set of interrogatories for several witnesses. Howe v. Pierson, 12 on his behalf,[30] or so framed as to elicit incompetent or inadmissible testimony;[31] and interrogatories, direct or cross, which are clearly irrelevant or immaterial should not be permitted.[32] However mere informalities or irregularities may be disregarded where it is apparent that the witness will or did understand the purpose of the interrogatories, and no prejudice will or did result.[33]

2. LEADING INTERROGATORIES. An interrogatory which suggests the answer or instructs the witness how to answer on a material point, or which, embodying a material fact, admits of an answer by a simple negative or affirmative is

Gray (Mass.) 26; Fowler v. Merrill, 11 How. (U. S.) 375, 13 L. ed. 736.

30. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Whitaker, 68 Tex. 630, 637, 5 S. W. 448, where after a statement of the case, the witnesses were asked to "state any fact within their knowledge that will assist the court in arriving at a correct and just conclusion of the case, as fully as if specially here inquired about." But see Cator v. Chamberlain, (Tex. Civ. App. 1902) 68 S. W. 196, where after an interrogatory describing the note in suit and asking the witness if he knew the parties to the action, an objection to the question "Please state fully and explicitly all you know about the execution and delivery of said note by" the maker to the payee, that the interrogatories were so general as to leave defendant to conjecture what the answers would be, and practically deprive him of the right to cross-examine, was held to have been properly overruled.

31. Conely v. McDonald, 40 Mich. 150; Gilpin v. Appleby, 13 N. Y. Suppl. 394; Gilpin v. Daly, 12 N. Y. Suppl. 448, 20 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 91.

Admissions of party.—Where an interrogatory seeks to establish a party's admission of an act, the cross interrogatory may require the witness to disclose what the party at the same time stated as his inducement to the act. Taylor v. Paterson, 9 La. Ann. 251.

Eliciting partial proof.— An interrogatory is not objectionable because the answer thereto will not make out a sufficient case. Montgomery's Estate, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 306.

Lost instrument.— An interrogatory is not objectionable because asking the witness to "state the contents or the substance of the contents" of a lost deed, when proof of the exact words of the instrument is unnecessary. Potts v. Coleman, 86 Ala. 94, 5 So. 780.

Official corruption.— In an action for professional services in obtaining a claim against the United States a cross interrogatory of a witness tending to show bribery and corruption of members of congress is improper. Cummings v. Thomas, 2 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 368.

Reference to interrogatory stricken out.— A cross interrogatory will not be suppressed because it directs the attention of the witness to a particular matter, and requests, in case he shall have answered a preceding interrogatory that such particular fact did not exist, to state that another fact did exist, where such preceding interrogatory was stricken out. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Green, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 36 S. W. 812.

Cross interrogatories need not be confined to the question propounded, but will be sufficient if pertinent to the issues. Evansich v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 61 Tex. 24.

32. Walton v. Godwin, 54 Hun (N. Y.) 387, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 926; Moreling v. Navigation Co., 4 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 72; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Melugin, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 63 S. W. 338.

Private business of witness.— Interrogatories are not objectionable because they call for matters concerning the private business of the witness. Fry v. Manhattan Trust Co., 2 Misc. (N. Y.) 520, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 386, 23 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 98.

Production of mass of written testimony.— Interrogatories are not objectionable because calling for such a mass of written testimony that it will be a great burden to the witness to produce it. Fry v. Manhattan Trust Co., 2 Misc. (N. Y.) 520, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 386, 23 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 98.

Unless clearly frivolous an interrogatory should not be disallowed so as to deprive a party of the opportunity of securing the testimony, that they may offer it at the trial, and if it is excluded have the benefit of an exception. Jones v. Jones, 75 Hun (N. Y.) 35, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 274.

33. Assumption of fact.— Depositions as to the value of legal services will not be suppressed merely because one of the interrogatories assumed the rendition of the services instead of being hypothetical. Howard v. Metcalf, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 26 S. W. 449.

Calling attention to subject of inquiry.— A statement merely calling the witness' attention to the subject-matter of the inquiry is no ground for suppressing the answer. Lott v. King, 79 Tex. 292, 15 S. W. 231.

Indefiniteness.— It is not error to refuse to exclude a deposition, because the interrogatories are vague and indefinite as to the person concerning whom inquiries are made, where it appears from the answers of the witness that he fully knew to whom the interrogatories referred. Florida R., etc., Co. v. Webster, 25 Fla. 394, 5 So. 714.

Prolixity — Multifariousness.— Depositions are not objectionable because the interrogatories are prolix, multifarious, or double, but if the record is unnecessarily encumbered, the offending party may be taxed with the costs unnecessarily incurred. Borland v. Walker, 7 Ala. 269.

Showing bias.— A question as to any fact tending to show a bias in the evidence of the adverse party is admissible, whether it be offered by the examination in chief or on cross-examination. Evansich v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 61 Tex. 24.

objectionable because leading.[34] But in many jurisdictions it is discretionary with the court or judge to permit such an interrogatory.[35] However it is not important that some interrogatories were leading, where it appears that the deposition would not be materially affected by the omission of the answers to those interrogatories,[36] or where all the material facts testified to were elicited by other unobjectionable interrogatories.[37]

D. Filing, Service, and Notice. Where so prescribed by rule or statute the interrogatories must be filed,[38] and due notice of the filing thereof must be given

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 66.
The following interrogatories were held to be unobjectionable: An interrogatory commencing "state whether or not" (Montgomery's Estate, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 306); "please state whether or not you have, from year to year, given in and paid all legal taxes chargeable by law on the debt which is the foundation of this suit" (Shorter v. Marshall, 49 Ga. 31); "did the plaintiff make any inquiry of you, in relation to the line or boundary between him and defendant about the time said plaintiff was preparing to build on said land, or at any other time" (Payne v. Benham, 16 Tex. 364); "state whether or not you ever sold and conveyed" a certain described certificate (Lott v. King, 79 Tex. 292, 15 S. W. 231); "is the account in the schedule to your affidavit correct" (Lockwood v. Bew, 10 Ont. Pr. 655); and an interrogatory requiring the witness to state whether a certain person paid money to defendant, and what amount, if any (Mathis v. Buford, 17 Tex. 152).
A statute permitting leading interrogatories to be propounded to the adverse party will not authorize leading interrogatories to one of two joint defendants who has made no defense and whose interests are adverse to those of his co-defendant, although the latter has an opportunity to file cross interrogatories. Bizzell v. Hill, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 37 S. W. 178. A judgment will not be reversed because one of the defendants was permitted to answer a leading interrogatory addressed to him by plaintiff. Lee v. Stowe, 57 Tex. 444.
Where several questions are so linked together that they cannot be separated and left as independent questions and answers without seriously affecting their import, and the form of the main questions is leading, the entire interrogatory is properly suppressed. Mayton v. Sonnefield, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 48 S. W. 608.
If interrogatories are settled by the attorneys, and a stipulation to that effect is indorsed thereon, neither party can at the trial object to the reading of the depositions on the ground that the interrogatories are leading. Cope v. Sibley, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 521. To same effect see Morse v. Cloyes, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 100.

37. Birely v. Staley, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 432, 25 Am. Dec. 303. Although a leading interrogatory to a deponent is objected to when it is filed, yet if the answer thereto shows that he was not led by it, or if the answer relate to matter proved aliunde, respecting which the party, who objects to the interrogatory, has given evidence, the interrogatory and answer may be read. Stiles v. Western R. Corp., 11 Metc. (Mass.) 376.

38. See cases cited infra, this note.
In the federal courts the practice is that the interrogatories shall be filed therein by both parties previous to the issue of a commission to take testimony abroad. Cunningham v. Otis, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,485, 1 Gall. 166. Notwithstanding a rule permitting depositions to be taken on notice where interrogatories and cross interrogatories are first filed, depositions may be taken without the usual interrogatories, where the evidence is to be derived from books chiefly not yet examined. Russell v. McLellan, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,158, 3 Woodb. & M. 157.
Time of filing.— Where cross interrogatories were filed after the time prescribed by rule, but before the commission issued, it was held error to refuse to annex them. Case v. Cushman, 1 Pa. St. 241. In the circuit court of the District of Columbia it was the practice (following the law of Maryland) to file interrogatories ten days before the rule day, and if the opposite party did not file cross interrogatories within five days thereafter the commission issued upon the order of the court or of a judge in vacation without notice of the motion. Frevall v. Bache, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,113, 5 Cranch 463.
Where cross interrogatories are not filed within a prescribed time after notice of the filing of the direct interrogatories, they will not be stricken from the files, if they were actually filed before the commission issued. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Watson, 90 Ala. 41, 7 So. 813.
Presumption.— Where a party has a right to a commission on a prescribed day after giving notice of the filing of his interrogatories, and it issues on that day, if the cross interrogatories are not embraced therein, it to,[39] or service of the interrogatories on, the adverse party must be made,[40] in the manner and within the time prescribed.[41] will be presumed that they were not filed when the commission issued, and their absence will not invalidate the deposition. McKinney v. O'Connor, 26 Tex. 5.

Enlarging time.— In Leggett v. Austin, 1 Pa. L. J. Rep. 310, 2 Pa. L. J. 247, the party seeking the commission refusing to name his witnesses, the court directed him to do so and enlarged the time of filing cross interrogatories until a specified time after the names of the witnesses should be given.

When filing unnecessary.— It is not necessary that previous to the issuing of a commission to take the deposition of a non-resident witness, the interrogatories should be filed in the clerk's office. The party may examine the witness before the commissioners. Wiggins v. Pryor, 3 Port. (Ala.) 430.

After a decree pro confesso it is not necessary that the interrogatories should remain on file the time prescribed in other cases. Attkisson v. Attkisson, 17 Ala. 256.

39. State v. Jones, 2 Harr. (Del.) 393.

In Louisiana prior to the adoption of the Code of Procedure, notice of the filing of the interrogatories was unnecessary. Clay v. Kirkland, 4 Mart. 405.

After a decree pro confesso the party in contempt is not entitled to notice. Attkisson v. Attkisson, 17 Ala. 256.

Failure to give notice of the filing of interrogatories is not fatal. Frevall v. Bache, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,113, 5 Cranch C. C. 463.

Sufficiency of notice.—A commission issued contrary to a rule requiring fifteen days' notice to file cross interrogatories is of no validity, where but fourteen days' notice was given, thus depriving the adverse party of his full opportunity to file his cross interrogatories. Van Amringe v. Ellmaker, 4 Pa. St. 281.

40. Saunders v. Erwin, 2 How. (Miss.) 732; Rhoades v. Selin, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,740, 4 Wash. 715.

Where parties join in a commission they must serve on each other copies of their direct interrogatories simultaneously. Brush v. Vandenbergh, 1 Edw. (N. Y.) 649.

Service may be made on the party or his counsel. Hallock v. Caruthers, 5 Rob. (La.) 190.

Service on attorney.— Where defendants have an attorney of record within the jurisdiction of the court service on a curator appointed in an attachment suit before issue joined is bad. Lard v. Strother, 4 Rob. (La.) 95. Service of notice of interrogatories to be propounded to a party to the action may be made on his attorney. Huggins v. Carter, 7 Ala. 630.

Service on warrantor.—In a petitory action for the recovery of slaves, it is sufficient, prior to the call in warranty, to make service of interrogatories upon defendant, and it is immaterial that they are not served on the warrantor. Pagett v. Curtis, 15 La. Ann. 451.

Service on absentee without counsel.—Service must be made at the domicile of an absentee not appearing by counsel. Medley v. Wetzlar, 5 La. Ann. 217.

Service on witness.— Personal service of the interrogatories on the witness is unnecessary. Blanchin v. Pickett, 21 La. Ann. 680.

Exhibits.— The copy of a plat of survey, annexed to interrogatories and filed in the clerk's office, need not be served. Dwight v. Richard, 5 La. Ann. 365.

Admission of service.— A party who acknowledges service of interrogatories handed to him and returns them the next day crossed waives any further delay. Tollett v. Jones, 3 Rob. (La.) 274.

Waiver of service.—The sentence, "Let the commission issue as proposed," written by defendant's attorney on the interrogatories in chief served upon him, constitutes a waiver of further service of the interrogatories and all other formalities in the issuance of the commission. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. State, 60 Md. 449.

The South Carolina act of 1883 does not require the interrogatories to be served. Moore v. Willard, (S. C. 1889) 9 S. E. 273.

41. Georgia.—Where notice is given to the adverse party on the same day, but after the filing of the interrogatories, and then ten full days are allowed before the issuing of the commission to take testimony, it is a sufficient compliance with Code, § 3879, which provides that a copy of the interrogatories must be served on the opposite party with a notice of the time of filing, and that the original interrogatories shall then be filed and remain in the office for ten days. Malone v. Robinson, 77 Ga. 719.

Maryland.— An interval of fourteen days, after the filing of interrogatories in the clerk's office, before the commission goes out, will be deemed notice enough to the other party to file cross interrogatories. Hatton v. McClish, 6 Md. 407.

Time of sending out commission.— Service, without filing the same, of a copy of the interrogatories on or about the day of sending off a foreign commission is not sufficient notice. Parker v. Sedgwick, 4 Gill (Md.) 318.

Proof of service.— Service by the clerk may be proved by parol. Purner v. Piercy, 40 Md. 212, 17 Am. Rep. 591.

At the trial.—Where the reading of a deposition is objected to on the ground that the record fails to show the service of notice and copies of the interrogatories, the court may hear proofs of the service, return, and loss of the notice and copies. Thompson v. Herring, 27 Tex. 282, where the action of the trial court in overruling the objection and permitting the deposition to be read was sustained.

Sufficiency.— An affidavit that a copy of the interrogatories was given to the adverse party ten days before a specified date does not show that it was so given ten days prior

E. Settlement[42] — 1. In General. Where the parties cannot agree on the interrogatories it is usual for the party dissatisfied to object specifically,[43] and have the objections passed on and the interrogataries settled by the court or a judge thereof[44] on due notice of the time and place of settlement.[45] to suing out the dedimus as required by statute. Corgan v. Anderson, 30 Ill. 95.

Amendment of return.— The sheriff's return of service may be amended at the trial to conform to the fact. Miller v. New Orleans Canal, etc., Co., 8 Rob. (La.) 236.

42. For form of notice of settlement of interrogatories see Cronkhite v. Mills, 76 Mich. 669, 43 N. W. 679.

For form of order settling interrogatories see Brewer v. Press Pub. Co., 20 Misc. (N. Y.) 509, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 639.

43. The objection should be specific in order that the adverse party may vary or correct the interrogatory objected to. Allen v. Babcock, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 56. See Cannon v. Kinney, 3 Harr. (Del.) 317.

Objections to the form of the interrogatories must be taken before they are annexed to the commission and go to the commissioner. Anonymous, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 165; Potter v. Leeds, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 309; Morse v. Cloyes, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 100. See Francis v. Ocean Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 404. At the time of settlement see Brewer v. Press Pub. Co., 20 Misc. (N. Y.) 509, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 639.

In Pennsylvania the proper form of objecting to interrogatories in chief is by exceptions and not by motion to strike off. McMurdy v. Connecticut Gen. L. Ins. Co., 5 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 211. But see contra, Machine Co. v. Shillow, 14 Lanc. Bar (Pa.) 58. In the orphans' court, an entry of an office rule to strike out interrogatories filed sur commission to take testimony is not allowable. Yorke's Estate, 5 Pa. Dist. 264.

In Canada an application to strike out objectionable interrogatories may be made before the issue of the commission to take evidence. Lockwood v. Bew, 10 Ont. Pr. 655. See Millville Mut. Mar., etc., Ins. Co. v. Driscoll, 11 Can. Supreme Ct. 183; McDonald v. Murray, 5 Ont. 559; Darling v. Darling, 8 Ont. Pr. 391; Williams v. Corby, 8 Ont. Pr. 83.

Waiver.— Objection to the form of the interrogatories is waived by a stipulation that the settlement of the interrogatories shall be without prejudice to any valid objection to the competency of the witness; also to the admissibility in evidence of any entries in the books of the witness; also, without prejudice to any valid objection on account of the immateriality of the first two cross interrogatories. Morse v. Cloyes, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 100.

44. A county judge has no authority to allow and settle interrogatories for a commission in an action pending in the supreme court. Erwin v. Voorhees, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 127.

A referee has no jurisdiction to strike out interrogatories for impertinence. The proper course is for the witness to demur. Williams v. Corby, 8 Ont. Pr. 83.

The interrogatories may be referred to a master in chancery to be settled by him, subject to the ultimate review of the court. Cocker v. Franklin Hemp, etc., Co., 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,930, 1 Story 169.

In the absence of any provision in the rules of practice concerning the settlement of interrogatories, they must be settled in accordance with the practice which was in force prior to the time of the adoption of the Code of Civil Procedure. Brewer v. Press Pub. Co., 20 Misc. (N. Y.) 509, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 639.

Admissions.— Interrogatories should not be disallowed because the adverse party offers to admit the facts intended to be elicited, where it is doubtful if the admission will benefit to the same extent as the evidence. Thorp v. Riley, 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 254, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 547.

Indorsement of allowance.—That the judge before whom the interrogatories are settled indorses his allowance of the same upon the commission by referring to them as annexed to it is a sufficient compliance with the statute. Halleran v. Field, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 38.

The omission of the court to rule upon objections made by defendant to interrogatories filed to a witness, whose deposition was taken, was not error of which he could complain, where all grounds of objection upon which he was entitled to rely were passed upon when the answers of the witness were offered in evidence. Trammell v. Hudmon, 86 Ala. 472, 6 So. 4.

45. Where the court orders a settlement on a shorter notice than that prescribed by statute, a party who admits due service of the notice, interrogatories, and order and who appears on the day specified for the settlement and secures an adjournment to enable him to file cross interrogatories, has no ground of objection. Hobart v. Jones, 5 Wash. 385, 31 Pac. 879.

Notice of exceptions.— Where interrogatories are excepted to, notice of the exceptions must be given, that the party filing the interrogatories may correct them if he sees fit, or abide the result of an objection at the trial. Cannon v. Kinney, 3 Harr. (Del.) 317.

It is improper to settle interrogatories prior to the hour appointed in the notice. Cronkhite v. Mills, 76 Mich. 669, 43 N. W. 679.

A direct interrogatory, added, without notice to the other party, after the interrogatories are crossed, will be disregarded. Stubbs v. Fleming, 92 Ga. 354, 17 S. E. 935.

In New York unless the order granting the commission prescribes some other mode, or the interrogatories are settled by consent, a copy of the proposed interrogatories must be

2. Matters Considered. On settling interrogatories their materiality and pertinency to the issue will alone be regarded, and unless a proposed interrogatory is manifestly improper or impertinent it should be allowed subject to objections at the trial.[46]

F. Annexing to Commission. Where the examination is required to be had on interrogatories they should accompany the commission;[47] but otherwise where the commission is the only authority necessary to empower the commissioner to act.[48]

XVI. Notice of Taking Depositions.

A. Necessity. Where it is permissible to take depositions on notice to the adverse party, or he is entitled to notice of the execution of the commission or the examination of the witness,[49] the giving of such notice is ordinarily essential served on the attorney for the adverse party with notice of settlement, and the other party may propose interrogatories and give notice of presentation of the same for settlement at the same time and place. Krauss v. Hallbemier, 29 N. Y. Suppl. 1106, 23 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 317.

46. Treadwell v. Greene, 89 N. Y. App. Div. 60, 85 N. Y. Suppl. 318; Walton v. Godwin, 54 Hun (N. Y.) 387, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 926; Wilcox v. Dodge, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 565, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 368, 23 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 209, 17 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 248; Thorp v. Riley, 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 254, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 547; Macdonald v. Garrison, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 510, 9 Abb. Pr. (N. Proc. 91.

In settling cross interrogatories, the judge has not the discretion which he can exercise on an examination at a trial, and must allow all pertinent questions, although at the trial he might, in his discretion, exclude them. Uline v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 79 N. Y. 175, 53 Am. Rep. 123.

On settling interrogatories, their pertinency is determined by the fact that they may under some circumstances become pertinent and not by the fact that they do not at present seem pertinent. Fry v. Manhattan Trust Co., 2 Misc. (N. Y.) 520, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 386, 23 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 98 [following Uline v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 79 N. Y. 175].

Questions as to transactions with decedent. — It is not a ground for disallowing interrogatories that the evidence sought to be elicited is within a statutory inhibition relative to evidence of personal transactions with a deceased person, etc., inasmuch as something may occur at the trial to render the evidence admissible, or it may not then be objected to. Wilcox v. Dodge, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 565, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 368, 23 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 209, 17 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 248.

The sufficiency of the answer as a defense will not be considered. Thorp v. Riley, 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 254, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 547.

Striking out cross interrogatories.— Where particular direct interrogatories are objected to, and cross interrogatories are propounded on the same matters, on sustaining the objection it is proper to strike out the cross interrogatories and the answers thereto. Stepp v. National L., etc., Assoc., 37 S. C. 417, 16 S. E. 134.

47. Originals or copies.— Although it may be required that the original interrogatories should be annexed to the commission, the fact that copies are annexed and the originals permitted to remain on file will not be deemed prejudicial. Stone v. Stillwell, 23 Ark. 444.

Neglect of clerk.— It is a good objection to the reading of a deposition that cross interrogatories filed after the time prescribed by rule but before the issuing of the commission were not annexed thereto because of error of judgment on the part of the clerk. Case v. Cushman, 1 Pa. St. 241.

The accidental omission to annex cross interrogatories will not require suppression of the deposition. Darling v. Darling, 8 Ont. Pr. 391.

In the United States courts notice to the adverse party or his counsel must be given when either is within one hundred miles of the place of caption. Dick v. Runnels, 5 How. 7, 12 L. ed. 26; Allen v. Blunt, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 217, 2 Woodb. & M. 121; The Argo, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 517, 2 Gall. 314 [affirmed in 2 Wheat. 287, 4 L. ed. 241]. If beyond that distance (Merrill v. Dawson, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,469, Hempst. 563 [affirmed in 11 How. 375, 13 L. ed. 736]; Miller v. Young, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,596, 2 Cranch C. C. 53) or the commission is to be executed abroad, no notice is necessary (Frevall v. Bache, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,113, 5 Cranch C. C. 463).

Under the early Connecticut practice the prescribed distance was twenty miles. Fowler v. Norton, 2 Root 25; Killingsworth v. Goshen, 1 Root 480; Hillyard v. Nichols, 1 Root 493; Williams v. Fitch, 1 Root 316; Moses v. Gunn, 1 Root 307; Whiting v. Jewell, Kirby 1. In Johnson v. Foot, Kirby 283, and Nichols v. Hillyer, Kirby 219, where the depositions were admitted, the witnesses lived within twenty miles from the adverse party, but when sworn were absent from home and more than twenty miles distant.

Actual notice is equivalent to formal notice. Nelson v. Woodruff, 1 Black (U. S.) 156, 17 L. ed. 97.

Copy of officer's appointment.— Service on the solicitor of a copy of the examiner's appointment for the examination of a party is a sufficient notice to the solicitor. Fowler v. Boulton, 12 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 437.

Death of officer.— Where a magistrate before whom depositions were to have been taken dies the party desiring the testimony may give further notice to his adversary of the death of the magistrate, and that the examination of the witnesses will take place before another magistrate at the same place and hour, and to whom the docket and papers of the deceased magistrate have been transferred. Phelps v. Young, 1 Ill. 327.

Notice of application.— No special notice is necessary where interrogatories have been filed and the adverse party has received notice of the application for the commission. O'Neill v. Henderson, 15 Ark. 235, 60 Am. Dec. 568.

Service of affidavit.— In Colorado depositions of witnesses residing in the state, but outside the county where the case is tried, may be taken under a dedimus with interrogatories, without service of an affidavit, and in the same manner as the testimony of a witness residing out of the state. Mackey v. Briggs, 16 Colo. 143, 26 Pac. 131.

The general notice of a master appointed to take an account (Miller v. Cox, 38 W. Va. 747, 18 S. E. 960) or to adjust, settle, and report matters referred to him (Geiser Mfg. Co. v. Chewning, 52 W. Va. 523, 44 S. E. 193) is sufficient.

The neglect of the clerk to obey a directory requirement to give notice will not vitiate the deposition. Shea v. Maby, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 319.

Under a notice entitled in two distinct cases a deposition cannot be taken unless both cases are between the same parties on the same matter. Laithe v. McDonald, 7 Kan. 254.

fact.[51] Nor is the failure to give notice material where the adverse party has refused or neglected to join in the commission;[52] and the necessity of notice is obviated by propounding cross interrogatories.[53] But the failure to give notice of the execution of a commission is not cured by extending the time of execution to enable notice to be given.[54]

B. Waiver.[55] Notice may be waived by agreement,[56] by consenting to the issue of a commission,[57] or by the appearance of the adverse party at the examination[58] and by participation therein.[59]

C. Form and Requisites[60] — 1. In General. The notice should be in substantial compliance with the requirements of statutes or rules prescribing it,[61] and should give such information to the adverse party as will enable him to participate in the examination or take such other steps as he may see fit.[62]

Wainwright v. Webster, 11 Vt. 576, 34 Am. Dec. 707.

In Louisiana, where the commission is to be executed within the state, no notice is necessary, although the adverse party decline to file cross interrogatories, and reserve the right to notice. Hall v. Acklen, 9 La. Ann. 219. See also Gasquet v. Johnson, 1 La. 425, holding that notice of the execution of a commission without the state is unnecessary.

In Mississippi depositions may be taken in chancery without notice. Gordon v. Watkies, Sm. & M. Ch. 37.

After default and decree pro con.— No notice is required to be given by plaintiff where defendant has made default, and a decree pro confesso has been entered. Jordan v. Jordan, 17 Ala. 466; Planters', etc., Bank v. Walker, 7 Ala. 926; Brooke v. Berry, 2 Gill (Md.) 83; Oliver v. Palmer, 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 426.

Inability to give notice.— Where a witness was about to leave the state, and reside permanently abroad, the court on motion permitted him to be examined de bene esse, without previous notice of the motion, it appearing that such notice could not well be given. Rockwell v. Folsom, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 165.

Refusal to proceed — Right of adverse party.— Where one party gives the required notice that he will take the deposition of a witness, and is present at the designated time and place, but declines to take the deposition, it may be taken by the adverse party without further notice. Annexing copy of rule of court.— Where a rule of court prescribes that notice of taking depositions shall have a copy of the rule to take the deposition affixed, if such copy is not affixed to the notice the deposition cannot be read. Alexander v. Alexander, 5 Pa. St. 277.

The notice need not be verified. Colton v. Rupert, 60 Mich. 318, 27 N. W. 520. But see contra, Campau v. Dewey, 9 Mich. 381.

62. The notice need not state the reason for taking the deposition. U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 18 Fed. 480; De Butts v. McCulloch, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,718, 1 Cranch C. C. 286.

Materiality of testimony.— The omission of the notice to state that the testimony of non-resident witnesses was material and therefore necessary is unimportant, where that fact appears on the face of the deposition. Independent Dryer Co. v. Livermore Foundry, etc., Co., 60 Ill. App. 390.

One of two witnesses may be examined under a notice by commissioners of the intention to execute a commission to examine witnesses. Hall v. Connell, 3 Y. & C. Exch. 528.

Requirement of cross interrogatories.— Notice need not require the party on whom it is served "to put interrogatories if he should think fit." Bussard v. Catalino, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,228, 2 Cranch C. C. 421.

2. IDENTIFICATION OF CAUSE. The action or suit in which the testimony is to be taken should be identified [63] and the parties thereto designated.[64] But the incorrect entitling of the cause [65] or an insufficient statement of the venue [66] will not vitiate the notice if the party receiving it is not misled.

3. NAMES AND RESIDENCES OF WITNESSES. When so prescribed the notice must specify the names of the witnesses to be examined [67] and their residences.[68]

Divorce suit.— The notice of the taking of depositions in divorce cases must be the same as in other cases. Whipple v. Whipple, 43 N. H. 235.

Improper direction.— A deposition taken on behalf of plaintiff on a notice directed by mistake to "plaintiff" or his attorney, although served on defendant in interest, cannot be read. Adams v. Easton, 6 Watts (Pa.) 456.

63. It is sufficient to designate the court in which the action is pending, without describing the cause of action. Bundy v. Hyde, 50 N. H. 116.

Time of holding court.— It is not necessary that the notice should state the time when the court where the cause is pending is to be held. Great Falls Mfg. Co. v. Mathes, 5 N. H. 574.

64. Kingsbury v. Smith, 13 N. H. 109.

Action against administrator.— The failure to describe the action as against an administrator will not invalidate the deposition. Ballou v. Tilton, 52 N. H. 605.

Action by infant.— A notice to defendant stating the action to be one "in which the plaintiff sues by his guardian," naming him, sufficiently indicates the parties. Kingsbury v. Smith, 13 N. H. 109.

Full names.— The parties' names need not appear in full. Fowler v. Boulton, 12 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 437.

65. Stephens v. Joyal, 45 Vt. 325, where the title of the cause differed from that docketed, but in fact stated the names of the real parties.

"Above-entitled action."— A notice is sufficient where its caption includes the name of the court and the title of the action, and it contains a statement that the deposition is "to be used on the trial of the above-entitled action." Sparks v. Sparks, 51 Kan. 195, 32 Pac. 892.

Knowledge of adverse counsel.— Where counsel for the adverse party knew inferentially the case referred to, and was informed of the witness to be examined, and signified his intention to be present, the notice is sufficient. Matthews v. Dare, 20 Md. 248.

Appearance and cross-examination.— A party who attended and examined the witnesses cannot complain. Erwin v. Bailey, 123 N. C. 628, 31 S. E. 844.

66. Thus notice that the deposition would be taken to be read "in a case now pending in the superior court of law for the said county, wherein I am plaintiff and you are defendant" without specifically designating the county is sufficient, in the absence of any evidence of the pendency of any other suit. Owens v. Kinsey, 51 N. C. 38. A notice to take a deposition within the state is sufficient, although it states the county in which the suit is pending only. Davis v. Settle, 43 W. Va. 17, 26 S. E. 557. A notice to take depositions in a suit pending in a federal circuit court which correctly states the title of the case and the name of the court, but lays the venue in the state and county, instead of in the district, does not vitiate the deposition. Gormley v. Bunyan, 138 U. S. 623, 11 S. Ct. 453, 34 L. ed. 1086. A statement that the action was pending in one county, whereas in fact it was pending in another, is insufficient. Bowyer v. Knapp, 15 W. Va. 277.

Massachusetts.— Minot v. Bridgewater, 15 Mass. 492; Barnes v. Ball, 1 Mass. 73.

Michigan.— Patterson v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 54 Mich. 91, 19 N. W. 761.

North Dakota.— Ashe v. Beasley, 6 N. D. 191, 69 N. W. 188.

Contra, Neeley v. Harris, Tapp. (Ohio) 209.

The names of all the witnesses need not be given. Mumma v. McKee, 10 Iowa 107.

"Divers witnesses."— The deposition of a party cannot be taken under a notice that the testimony of "divers witnesses" will be taken. Brown v. A Raft of Timber, 1 Handy (Ohio) 13, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 1.

A clerical error in substituting the name of the commissioner for that of the witness is immaterial, where all the other papers are correct, so that the opposite party could not have been misled. Eastman v. Bennett, 6 Wis. 232.

Slight errors in describing witnesses may be disregarded where it appears that they had been formerly examined upon the same points in another case, by the same counsel, who, upon their second examination, had copies of their former depositions. Blackett v. Laimbeer, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 366. A difference between the names given in a notice of the taking of depositions and those signed to the depositions is not a cause for suppression of the depositions at the trial, where it appears that the deponents had been witnesses at a former trial of the same case, and that the party against whom the depositions were to be used filed cross interrogatories. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Morris, (Tex. Sup. 1901) 61 S. W. 709 [affirming (Civ. App. 1901) 60 S. W. 813].

68. Indorsement on interrogatories.— An indorsement of the residence of the witness on the back of the interrogatories served is a substantial compliance with the statute. Fidelity Mut. L. Assoc. v. Harris, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 40 S. W. 341.

4. DESIGNATION OF OFFICER. The citation or notice should specify the magistrate or other officer before whom the deposition is to be taken.[69]

5. TIME AND PLACE OF TAKING — a. In General. The notice must specify the time[70] and the place of taking the deposition,[71] with sufficient particularity to enable the party notified to attend the examination if he so desire.

b. Sufficiency as to Time. The time of taking a deposition has been held to be sufficiently specified,[72] if the notice states that the deposition will be taken on several or successive days[73] or on alternate days,[74] although no particular hour is

In Illinois the residence of the witness need not be stated. Hays v. Borders, 6 Ill. 46.

The notice need only presumptively show that the witness is a non-resident of the county where the action is pending. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Baddeley, 54 Ill. 19, 5 Am. Rep. 71.

"Any justice."— A notice to take depositions before "any justice of the peace" of a designated county is irregular. Carmalt v. Post, 8 Watts (Pa.) 406.

Initials.— The first names of the magistrate may be designated by initials. Barber v. Bennett, 58 Vt. 476, 4 Atl. 231, 56 Am. Rep. 565.

A slight misspelling of the notary's name will not be regarded as prejudicial. Sloan v. Hunter, 56 S. C. 385, 34 S. E. 658, 879, 76 Am. St. Rep. 551.

Residence.— The omission to state the residence of the officer to whom the commission issued will not vitiate the deposition. Rayburn v. Central Iowa R. Co., 74 Iowa 637, 35 N. W. 606, 38 N. W. 520.

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 96.

Proof of change of place.— An agreement to change the place of taking a deposition may be shown by the certificate of the justice of the peace before whom it was taken. Fry v. Coleman, 1 Grant (Pa.) 445.

The federal court may pursue the state practice which does not require the notice to specify the time and place of taking the deposition. U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 18 Fed. 480.

Constructive notice.— In Maryland actual notice may be given directly by the commissioner, or constructive notice will result from filing the interrogatories in the clerk's office before the commission goes out. Hatton v. McClish, 6 Md. 407. Likewise the service of copies of the interrogatories in sufficient time to enable the adverse party to file cross interrogatories will be sufficient notice of the time and place of its execution. Law v. Scott, 5 Harr. & J. (Md.) 438.

Verbal notice.— Although the omission to notify the opposite party in writing of the time and place of taking the deposition may be good cause to suppress it, if the fact of notice is denied, yet a verbal notice is sufficient if the fact of notice is not denied. Milton v. Rowland, 11 Ala. 732.

72. An undated notice served on the second day of the month, and stating that the depositions will be taken on "the 27th day of this present month of December, is good." Sweitzer v. Meese, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 500.

specified,[75] or the time designated is between stated hours of a particular day or date.[76]

c. Sufficiency as to Place. The place of taking the deposition is sufficiently designated if it can be readily ascertained or identified, and it does not appear that there is any other place answering the description or that the party notified was misled.[77]

6. Nature of Deposition. A notice of the taking of a deposition de bene esse need not specifically state that it is to be so taken,[78] if it contains enough to show that fact.[79] But a notice that a deposition in chancery will be taken conditionally is bad, for the reason that such depositions are taken absolutely,[80] and a notice to take a deposition to be read absolutely is not authorized by a rule to take the deposition de bene esse.[81]

7. Signature and Date. The notice should be signed[82] and dated.[83] But the omission of the attorney's signature[84] or irregularities in the signing[85] are immaterial if the party notified was not misled or prejudiced.

D. By Whom Given. Notice of the time and place of executing a commission is usually given by the commissioners,[86] and notice of taking a deposition without a commission may be given by the judge[87] or magistrate before whom it is to be taken,[88] or by either party who may desire to use it or by his attorney,

E. 443, 629, where the affidavit attached to the notice to take the deposition of a witness for plaintiff showed that the affiant was one of plaintiff's attorneys, and it appeared on the face of the notice that the name of the firm of attorneys for plaintiff was omitted inadvertently, and the defendant was not misled or prejudiced.

85. Osgood v. Sutherland, 36 Minn. 243, 31 N. W. 211 (where the notice was signed by one of the attorneys for the party, individually instead of by the firm); Clement v. Brooks, 13 N. H. 92 (where notice to defendant of the caption was signed by plaintiff as justice of the peace).

86. Notice of the time and place of taking the testimony, given by the commissioners, if the interrogatories are not filed soon enough to allow the opposite party an opportunity to file cross interrogatories, is sufficient. Parker v. Sedwick, 5 Md. 281.

By attorney.— Notice of the execution of a commission is not sufficient if it comes from the attorney of the party, without consent or approbation of the commissioners. Parker v. Sedwick, 5 Md. 281.

87. In Colorado it is the duty of the judge before whom a deposition is to be taken for use in a criminal trial, to fix the time and place of taking and to notify the accused and the prosecuting attorney, and this when done by the prosecuting attorney is a nullity. Ryan v. People, 21 Colo. 119, 40 Pac. 775.

An order requiring the adverse party to appear and attend the examination of a witness is made out of court, and without notice, and may be made by any judge of the court, in any part of the state. Silver Creek Bank v. Browning, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 272..

88. In Vermont the personal notice required must be given by the magistrate himself, viva voce, in the presence and hearing of the party to be notified. Fitts v. Whitney, 32 Vt. 589.

this last being the most usual mode and always necessary where depositions are to be taken on notice.[89]

E. Who Entitled to Notice — 1. Adverse Party. Notice to the attorneys of record for the adverse party is insufficient but must be given to the party or his attorney in fact, when so required by statute[90] or rule of court,[91] or where the deposition is to be taken before the return of the writ and no appearance by attorney can be entered.[92]

2. Attorney For Party. Ordinarily it will be sufficient to give notice to the attorney for the adverse party,[93] especially where the latter is absent from the state

Notice of taking depositions for use in the federal courts must be given by the magistrate before whom they are to be taken, and not by the party intending to use them. Young v. Davidson, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,157, 5 Cranch C. C. 515.

89. King v. Ritchie, 18 Wis. 554.

Counsel not authorized.— A deposition cannot be taken to be read on behalf of a party, upon notice by counsel not representing such party. Payne v. Cowan, Sm. & M. Ch. (Miss.) 26.

In Kentucky in an action for divorce notice to defendant is sufficient without serving the county attorney. Lambdin v. Lambdin, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 835.

Notice to the attorney instead of to the party is equivalent to waiver of notice to the client, where the attorney appears and represents the latter. Hunt v. Crane, 33 Miss. 669, 69 Am. Dec. 381.

One who disclaims any connection with a commission is not entitled to notice. McCombie v. Anton, 6 M. & G. 27, 6 Scott N. R. 923, 46 E. C. L. 27.

Party who interpleads after depositions are taken cannot complain of want of notice. Miller v. Campbell Commission Co., (Okla. 1903) 74 Pac. 507.

Party without county.— Service on the partner of the attorney at his office is not sufficient where the statute requires the notice to be left at the residence of the party where he is not to be found in the county. Toulman v. Swain, 47 Mich. 82, 10 N. W. 117.

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 107.

Address or direction.— Where the notice is addressed to attorneys by their firm-name, without stating that they are attorneys at law, by whom the declaration was filed, it will be presumed, in the absence of any denial on their part, to have been addressed to them in the same character in which they filed the declaration. Reese v. Beck, 24 Ala. 651.

Adverse party residing beyond prescribed distance.— Where the statute requires notice to the adverse party if living within thirty miles of the place of caption, if he lives beyond that distance his attorney who lives within the limit need not be notified. Heacock v. Stoddard, 1 Tyler (Vt.) 344.

Corresponding attorney.— Where defendant who is within the county has not entered his appearance, the notice may be served on his corresponding attorney. Railey v. Railey, 66 S. W. 414, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1891.

Forwarding to party.—Depositions will not be suppressed where, defendant being imprisoned in the state in which the depositions were to be taken, service was made on his attorney who mailed it to defendant who never received it, it appearing that the depositions were taken three or four months before trial, and that no effort was made to secure a cross-examination. Diedrich v. Diedrich, (Nebr. 1903) 94 N. W. 536.

or jurisdiction.[94] It must appear, however, that the attorney is duly authorized to represent the party.[95]

3. Agent of Party. Where service of notice may be made on the agent or attorney in fact of the adverse party or a person designated by him to accept service,[96] it must appear that such agent or other person is authorized to act in the particular matter.[97]

4. Several Parties. Where there are several parties to a cause, plaintiffs or defendants, a deposition taken therein is admissible only against such of the parties as had notice,[98] unless the statute provides that notice to one shall be sufficient

Party or attorney.— Whether or not the notice of the commissioner of the execution of the commission is given to the guardian or his solicitor is immaterial. Higgins v. Horwitz, 9 Gill (Md.) 341.

Under the California practice act notice was required to be served on the attorney of the other party, even if he lived out of the county where the action was pending. Notice to the party himself was not sufficient. Griffith v. Gruner, 47 Cal. 644.

Criminal proceedings.— Service of notice to take a deposition in a criminal proceeding may be made on the prosecuting attorney. State v. McCarty, 54 Kan. 52, 36 Pac. 338.

In Tennessee if a party be absent from home and from the state, notice must be given by leaving it at his residence, and by service on his attorney also. Wilson v. Drake, 5 Hayw. 108.

95. Brown v. Ford, 52 Me. 479; Allen v. Doyle, 33 Me. 420; Pierce v. Pierce, 29 Me. 69.

Acceptance of service.— It is a good service on plaintiff and one of defendants if a notice addressed to the attorney, who has appeared as attorney for both, is accepted by him, although he appends to his signature to the acceptance language indicating that he is the attorney for plaintiff only. Walker v. Abbey, 77 Iowa 702, 42 N. W. 519.

New partnership.— Notice to a new partner of one of a dissolved law firm which had acted for the party in the cause is insufficient, where the new firm did not succeed to the business of the old one. Johnston v. Ashley, 7 Ark. 470.

Service on an attorney who appeared without authority is sufficient. Smith v. Bowditch, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 137.

Service on substituted attorneys is sufficient, although no formal substitution has been entered. King v. Ritchie, 18 Wis. 554.

96. After revocation of authority.— Notice to a person appointed as state agent and attorney to accept service after his authority has been revoked, but before the appointment of a substitute, is good. U. S. Life Ins. Co. v. Ross, 102 Fed. 722, 42 C. C. A. 601.

97. Thus notice to the wife of the party (Bauman v. Zinn, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 157), his overseer (Chapman v. Chapman, 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 426), or special bail (Weaver v. Cochran, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 168) is insufficient where no agency is shown.

Agreement as to who may be served.— Where it is agreed that notice may be given to persons designated, a notice to others is insufficient. Bohr v. The Baton Rouge, 7 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 715.

The station agent of a railroad company is not within a provision permitting service of notice on the agent of the adverse party. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Meek, 49 Nebr. 295, 68 N. W. 509.

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 106.

Deposition by one defendant.— A statute providing that depositions may be taken on notice "to the adverse party, if there be only one person; if there be several, to any one of them who is a real party in interest" does not authorize one of two defendants to take depositions by service of notice on the sole plaintiff, and thereby bind his co-defendant. Black v. Marsh, 31 Ind. App. 53, 67 N. E. 201.

Notice to one defendant.— The deposition of one defendant taken without notice to the other is not admissible against the latter, at whose instance the deponent was made a party, and who seeks relief against both him and plaintiff. Zerkel v. Wooldridge, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 36 S. W. 499.

Irregularity in a notice to one defendant is cured by a proper notice to his co-defendant who is the attorney of record for both. Newman v. Dodson, 61 Tex. 91.

Objection by defendant served.— Defendants on whose attorney notice has been properly served cannot object that their co-defendants were not notified. Glenn v. Glenn, 17 Iowa 498.

Ejectment.—In ejectment depositions taken on notice to the tenants, but without notice to their co-defendant, the warrantor, cannot

5. Perpetuation of Testimony. Notice of proceedings to perpetuate testimony must be given to the parties interested in the subject-matter to which the testimony relates.[2]

F. Reasonableness — 1. In General. Where the time within which notice must be given is not prescribed or otherwise fixed, such reasonable notice must be given to the adverse party[3] as will afford him an opportunity to attend the be read if the tenants claim only through the warrantor. Woodard v. Spiller, 1 Dana (Ky.) 179, 25 Am. Dec. 139.

Injunction.— In a proceeding by creditors to enjoin the removal of goods purchased from them by one who prior to the purchase had conspired with third parties to seize the goods under fictitious executions against him, notice to the third parties is sufficient. Field v. Holzman, 93 Ind. 205.

In trespass against several, a deposition may be read against one of the defendants, although the notice was served on him alone, and it contains statements conducing to prove the others guilty. Logan v. Steele, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 230.

99. Chase v. Hathorn, 61 Me. 505; Ellis v. Lull, 45 N. H. 419.

Discretion.— The authority conferred by the Tennessee code on the court or clerk to determine whether notice shall be given to each person, and if not to whom it shall be given, is to be exercised in the discretion of the court or clerk, as the case may be. Thompson v. Commercial Bank, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 46.

Nominal defendant.— In trespass to try title the failure to serve one defendant who is in possession of the premises as the servant of his co-defendant who was duly served is immaterial. King v. Maxey, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 28 S. W. 401.

Party of record.— Notice may properly be given to the party of record. Richter v. Selin, 8 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 425.

A party interested on the question whether or not a claim is just should have notice of the taking of a deposition as to that fact. Vaught v. Murray, 71 S. W. 924, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1587. In taking a deposition in support of a claim filed against an estate, it is not necessary to notify every person who has an ultimate interest in the distribution of the property. It is sufficient to notify the executor and any other person who may have appeared to resist the claim. Deuterman v. Ruppel, 103 Ill. App. 106.

Creditors.— In an action against an assignee for the benefit of creditors who had been summoned but did not become parties to the record, where the validity of the assignment is alone in issue, notice to the trustee alone is sufficient. Totman v. Sawyer, 39 Me. 528.

2. Dearborn v. Dearborn, 10 N. H. 473.

Parties interested.— In Maine under a statute requiring a person wishing to perpetuate testimony to make a sworn statement containing the names of all persons supposed to be interested in the subject, and cause notice to be given to all persons so named, a notice served on the husband is not enough, when the wife, being the owner of the premises to which the testimony relates, is not named in the statement or notified, although the husband appeared at the time of taking the deposition, and put interrogatories to the deponent. Danforth v. Bangor, 85 Me. 423, 27 Atl. 268. Under the New Jersey act of 1784 notice was required to be served on the party interested, and service on his attorney was a nullity. Middleton v. Taylor, 1 N. J. L. 445. Under 22 Ohio Laws, p. 104, the judges taking depositions are required to notify only parties interested who are within the county, or their attorneys, if within the county. examination personally or by counsel, or to take such other steps as he may deem advisable. What constitutes reasonable notice is a question dependent on the peculiar circumstances of each particular case,[4] and is for the determination of the court.[5]

Notice by commissioners.—Where a rule of court provides that commissioners shall give "such notice as they may deem reasonable," it is enough if the notice actually given was reasonable in fact. Waters v. Waters, 35 Md. 531.

Where the clerk omits to specify what notice shall be given, it must be shown that the notice actually given was reasonable. Lesne v. Pomphrey, 4 Ala. 77; Parker v. Haggerty, 1 Ala. 632.

Attendance of party.— Where a party to a suit, having no solicitor, is required to attend before a master to be examined, it would seem that forty-eight hours' notice thereof should be given to him. Watson v. Ham, 1 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 293.

4. The chief circumstances to be considered are distance, number of witnesses, and facility of communication to obtain proper representation at the taking. American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Spokane Falls First Nat. Bank, 82 Fed. 961, 27 C. C. A. 274.

Instances.— It is sufficient to give notice at eleven o'clock in the morning, for the examination of a witness bound to sea at four o'clock in the afternoon (Vinal v. Burrill, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 401); in the forenoon to take a deposition at two-twenty o'clock in the afternoon, where at that time notice was given to attend at four o'clock (Allen v. Perkins, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 369); one entire day (Allen v. Champion, Wright (Ohio) 672) where the witness is a seafaring man (Bowie v. Talbot, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,732, 1 Cranch C. C. 247); two days (Georgetown Water Co. v. Central Thompson-Huston Co., 16 Ky. L. Rep. 125) or more than two days when the deposition is to be taken in the country (Hamilton v. McGuire, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 478). Where the adverse party or his attorney resides at the same place where the deposition is to be taken, notice of the taking given on the same day (Vinal v. Burrill, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 401; Mumford v. Church, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 147; McGinnis v. Washington Hall Assoc., 12 Gratt. (Va.) 602; Leiper v. Bickley, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,222, 1 Cranch C. C. 29; Nicholls v. White, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,235, 1 Cranch C. C. 58), or on the preceding day (Harris' Appeal, 58 Conn. 492, 20 Atl. 617; Atkinson v. Glenn, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 610, 4 Cranch C. C. 134), will be deemed sufficient.

Four days' notice of the examination of witnesses about to go abroad is sufficient. See Dicher v. Power, Dick. 112, 21 Eng. Reprint 211.

Depositions in China.— In Sing Cheong Co. v. Yung Wing, 59 Conn. 535, 22 Atl. 289, it was held that two months' notice of taking depositions in China, given in Connecticut, was insufficient, although the trip to the place of taking could be made in twenty-nine days, in view of the fact that the length of time required to reach that place furnished no safe guide for the reasonableness of the notice, as it would in a country where no special preparations are necessary for the proper taking of depositions.

If no time is specified by a commissioner to perpetuate testimony fourteen days will be deemed reasonable. Jackson v. Perkins, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 308.

Parties residing near each other.— Where there was no rule of court or settled practice as to the number of days' notice of taking a deposition under a rule, and it is uncertain whether the rule was not entered by order of court, and many years have elapsed, and no objection has been made, a deposition taken on six days' notice, the parties living near each other, will be admitted. Carpenter v. Groff, 5 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 162.

What laws govern.— The sufficiency of the notice as to time is determinable by the laws of the state where the action is pending. In re Wogan, (Mo. App. 1903) 77 S. W. 490.

Inconvenience of attorney.— Where the notice is served on the attorney of record in apt time, the sufficiency of the notice is not affected by the fact that it is inconvenient for the attorney to attend. Bailey v. Wright, 24 Ark. 73.

Duty to inform adverse party of intended departure of witness.— Where defendant objects to taking a deposition at the appointed time, on account of the insufficiency of notice, plaintiff is not bound to inform him that the witness is about to leave the state, and therefore his deposition cannot be postponed, provided he is guilty of no fraudulent concealment. McGinnis v. Washington Hall Assoc., 12 Gratt. (Va.) 602.

Presumption.— Where notice was given on the eleventh of the month of an intention to take a deposition in an adjoining state, and the examination was had on the seventeenth, it will be presumed, in the absence of anything to the contrary, that the notice was sufficient to enable the party notified to attend. Greene v. Tally, 39 S. C. 338, 17 S. E. 779.

Waiver.— The insufficiency of the notice is waived by appearance and cross-examination. Nevan v. Roup, 8 Iowa 207.

5. Gerrish v. Pike, 36 N. H. 510; Darling v. Woodward, 54 Vt. 101; Folsom v. Conner, 49 Vt. 4; Hough v. Lawrence, 5 Vt. 299.

By trial judge.— Where the judge who issued a commission failed to fix the time of notice and the parties disagree as to its sufficiency, the question should be determined by the judge who presides when the depositions are offered. Cherry v. Slade, 9 N. C. 400.

The reason for giving short notice by a commissioner can be shown only by his certificate. Oral proof cannot be given at the trial. Chase v. Garretson, (N. J. Sup. 1891)

2. Time of Notice — a. In General. Where the time within which notice of taking a deposition must be given is prescribed by statute or rule, or is fixed by a judge of the court, the validity of the deposition depends upon compliance with such statute, rule, or direction as the case may be.[6]

b. Notice of Taking at Different Times and Places. Notice or notices of taking depositions at different places at the same time,[7] or at such times and places that the adverse party or his attorney cannot attend are unreasonable.[8] In such a case the party may attend at either place designated and disregard the notice as to the other, and the depositions taken in his absence will be suppressed,[9] or as it has been held in some cases the depositions taken will be rejected.[10]

c. As Dependent on Distance, Route, and Means of Travel. In determining the reasonableness of the notice, the distance, traveling conveniences, condition of the roads, and other matters affecting the ability of the party or his counsel to attend the examination or to attend it and return in time for trial must be considered;[11] and where the notice is inadequate to permit such attendance and Review.— The determination of the court below as to the reasonableness of the notice will not be revised. Nelms v. Kennon, 88 Ala. 329, 6 So. 744; Hough v. Lawrence, 5 Vt. 299.

6. Richardson v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 8 Iowa 260.

By commissioner.— In proceedings under the act to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses, the commissioner should specify in the order the number of days for which notice is to be given. If no time is specified, he will be considered as having deemed fourteen days reasonable notice. Jackson v. Perkins, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 308.

By court.— Where it is necessary to take a deposition during the trial the court may prescribe the notice to be given. Deming v. Foster, 42 N. H. 165.

By judge.— The judge who grants the commission should fix the time of the notice. Cherry v. Slade, 9 N. C. 400. A deposition will not be set aside where the order of the judge fixed the time of notice at three days, and the counsel of the opposite party acknowledged service of a written copy of notice more than three days before the taking of the deposition. Attwood v. Fricot, 17 Cal. 37, 76 Am. Dec. 567.

Forthwith.— Under a provision for at least five days' notice unless the judge prescribe a shorter time, an order to take depositions on the day of the order, and directing service of notice forthwith, is insufficient to justify less than five days' notice. Howell v. Howell, 66 Cal. 390, 5 Pac. 681.

Special order.— Where a standing rule requires ten days' notice, a deposition taken under a special ex parte order on three days' notice cannot be read. Quynn v. Brooke, 22 Md. 288.

Notice which barely exceeds that prescribed is good, although the indulgence of the court may be needed in allowing a party taken by surprise to meet it. Toulman v. Swain, 47 Mich. 82, 10 N. W. 117.

Computation.— A requirement of ten days' notice contemplates that the party should receive the notice ten days prior to the examination and not that it should be left for him. Gooday v. Corlies, 1 Strobh. (S. C.) 199.

The Iowa code which prescribes five days' notice of the taking of any deposition when the notice is served on the party "within the county" has reference to the county in which the depositions are taken, and not to the county in which the cause is pending and in which the depositions are to be used. Kennedy v. Rosier, 71 Iowa 671, 33 N. W. 226.

Relaxation of statutory requirement.— A requirement of forty-eight hours' notice will not be applied strictly in the case of an examination abroad before special examiners. De Brito v. Hillel, L. R. 15 Eq. 213, 42 L. J. Ch. 307, 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 59, 21 Wkly. Rep. 379.

Party giving, connected with but one case. — The fact that plaintiff's attorneys notified defendant that they would take depositions in one state on the same day as other depositions were taken by them in another distant state will not vitiate either deposition, where plaintiff is connected with only one of the causes, and the objection is not made until the calling of the case. Where deposition can be taken at one place only.— Where one of the witnesses died before the time fixed by the notice and the adverse party by reasonable inquiry could have ascertained that fact in time to enable him to attend the examination of the others, the notice and deposition taken thereunder were upheld. Taylor v. Bate, 4 Dana (Ky.) 198.

d. Computation of Time and Distance — (i) Time. Where the time to be allowed is prescribed by statute or rule one day should be counted inclusive and the other exclusive.[13]

(ii) Distance. In considering distance for the purpose of determining the sufficiency of the time allowed by the notice, it has been held that the computation should be made from the residence of the party notified to the place of Instances of sufficiency.—The following notices have been held reasonable and sufficient: Two miles distant, one day's notice (McGuiley v. McLaughlin, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 302); less than twenty miles, twelve hours (Balser v Singer, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 56, West. L. J. 394); eighty-three miles, five days (Dean v. Tygert, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 172); two hundred and forty-one miles, one day, excluding Sundays, for each twenty miles (Pinkham v. Cockell, 77 Mich. 265, 43 N. W. 93); one thousand five hundred miles, ten days, where the distance could be traveled in six days (Carlisle v. Tuttle, 30 Ala. 613); six days' notice at Ft. Wayne, Ind., of taking depositions at Topeka, Kan. (Fitzpatrick v. Papa, 89 Ind. 17); nine days' notice in Indiana of examination in New York city, N. Y. (Manning v. Gasharic, 27 Ind. 399); eight days' notice where journey could be made in thirty-six hours (Hipes v. Cochrane, 13 Ind. 175); thirty days' notice in Kentucky for taking in Philadelphia, Pa. (Gaskill v. Glass, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 252); twenty days' notice in Ohio of examination at Little Rock, Ark. (Timms v. Wayne, 1 Handy (Ohio) 400, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 204); ten days' notice at Olympia, Wash., of taking deposition at Seattle, in same state (Phelps v. Panama, 1 Wash. Terr. 615); forty-five days' notice in New Hampshire of taking at San Francisco, Cal. (Gerrish v. Pike, 36 N. H. 510).

Additional days allowed for travel.— In some of the states one day is allowed for every twenty miles of travel in the ordinary mode, from the place where the notice is given, or the trial is to take place, to the place of caption, and notice given in accordance with the rule will be deemed sufficient. Lindauer v. Delaware Mut. Safety Ins. Co., 13 Ark. 461; Central Bank v. Allen, 16 Me. 41; Pinkham v. Cockell, 77 Mich. 265, 43 N. W. 921. An additional day is not required, unless for twenty full additional miles travel. Scammon v. Scammon, 33 N. H. 52. A party claiming the notice to be unreasonable because time was not allowed for travel must show affirmatively that he is entitled to the additional time. Adams v. Peck, 4 Iowa 551.

In Kentucky a notice which allows travel at the rate of thirty miles a day and two days for preparation is deemed sufficient. Sneed v. Wiester, 2 A. K. Marsh. 277.

13. Littleton v. Christy, 11 Mo. 390; Beasley v. Downey, 32 N. C. 284.

One day.— Under an order allowing testimony to be taken on one day's notice, a notice given on one day to take testimony on the next is sufficient. Walsh v. Boyle, 30 Md. 262.

Exclusion of day.— In Iowa the first day is excluded and the last included. Richardson v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 8 Iowa 260. Notice served on the tenth to take testimony on the twentieth of the same month is not reasonable notice of not less than ten days. Williams v. Halford, 67 S. C. 296, 45 S. E. 207. A requirement of not less than ten days' notice is complied with by a notice served on the thirteenth to take depositions on the twenty-third of the same month. Williams v. Halford, 64 S. C. 396, 42 S. E. 187. Where at least five days' notice must be given, and one day in addition allowed for every thirty miles travel, where the distance from the place of service to the place of caption is thirty miles, a notice given on the twenty-first for an examination on the twenty-sixth of the same month is insufficient. Richardson v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 8 Iowa 260.

Exclusion of days of service and examination.— In computing the time the day of service and the day specified for the examination should be excluded. Atty.-Gen. v. Ball, 9 Ir. Eq. 463.

caption,[14] or with reference to the distance of the attorney from the place of examination when he is nearer than the party.[15] In all cases the computation should be by the shortest available route.[16]

G. Service of Notice — 1. Who May Serve. The notice may be served by any competent private person,[17] unless it is required that service be made by an officer[18] or by some person specially authorized.[19]

2. Modes of Service — a. On Party. Unless otherwise prescribed service of the notice must be personal on the party.[20]

b. On Attorney. Service may be made by leaving the notice at the attorney's office, during his absence from the state, with a person of suitable age.[21]

c. Reading. A requirement of service of a notice in writing is not complied with by reading the notice to the person for whom it is intended.[22]

d. Leaving at Residence. In some jurisdictions, where the party is not absent from the state or on a journey, the notice may be served by leaving it or a copy thereof at the residence of the person for whom it is intended with a person of suitable age and discretion.[23]

14. Porter v. Pillsbury, 36 Me. 278.

15. Toulman v. Swain, 47 Mich. 82, 10 N. W. 117.

16. A notice given in time to allow the party notified to reach the place named by the shortest possible route, although not by the ordinary railroad route, is sufficient. Ellis v. Lull, 45 N. H. 419.

Land or water route.— Where the notice is seasonable if the usual land route is traveled, but too short if the distance is computed by the actual route by water, it will be held sufficient. Lindauer v. Delaware Mut. Safety Ins. Co., 13 Ark. 461.

If the place of trial has been changed but the record has not been removed, the distance should be computed from the county where the suit was brought. Phelps v. Young, 1 Ill. 327.

By sheriff.— A citation by a justice addressed to any sheriff or constable in the state notifying a party to a suit pending in another county, of the taking of a deposition out of the state, may be served by the sheriff of the county where the justice exercises jurisdiction in the county where the party resides. Parker v. Meader, 32 Vt. 300.

Unauthorized officer.— Where service is required to be made by an officer who is authorized generally to serve process of the court which has jurisdiction of the action in which the notice is given, a constable cannot serve notice to take a deposition in an action pending in the superior court. Cullen v. Absher, 119 N. C. 441, 26 S. E. 33.

19. The authorization of an indifferent person is a judicial act requiring the exercise of judicial discretion, hence authorization by a magistrate who was counsel for one of the parties is invalid. St. Johnsbury v. Goodenough, 44 Vt. 662.

e. Mailing. Mailing the notice to the party entitled thereto has been held under some circumstances or in connection with other modes of service to be sufficient.[24]

f. Publication. Where the whereabouts of the adverse party is unknown, and he is not represented by an attorney, service may be made by publication.[25]

3. Proof of Service — a. Necessity. The party offering the deposition must show that the required notice was given.[26]

b. Modes of Proof. Where the service is made by an officer, it is proved by his return;[27] when notice was given by the officer before whom the deposition was taken proof is made by his certificate,[28] if served by a private person or an officer not authorized to make service, by his affidavit,[29] or by parol proof;[30] the party, at his dwelling-house, when it was known by the adverse party that he was absent on a journey to another state, and when it appeared also that the notice might have previously been given to the party himself, and that the taking of the deposition might have been postponed, as it respected the trial of the cause, until he returned, the service was held to be insufficient, and the deposition inadmissible. Coleman v. Moody, 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 1.

Unable to find within county.—In Michigan the notice may be left at the residence of the party, if he cannot be found within the county. Toulman v. Swain, 47 Mich. 82, 10 N. W. 117.

Where both parties reside in the same town, leaving a copy of the notice at the residence of the adverse party is insufficient. Lemon v. Bishop, 1 Penr. & W. (Pa.) 485.

24. A letter directed to the opposite party, and put into the post-office on the twenty-first day of the month, informing him that the deposition of a certain witness would be taken on the twenty-eighth of the same month, is not conclusive evidence of notice, if in fact the letter was not received until the twenty-ninth, although it appears that in the due course of mail the notice should have been received on the twenty-second or twenty-third. Walker v. Parker, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,082, 5 Cranch C. C. 639.

In connection with other modes.— In Trevelyan v. Lofft, 83 Va. 141, 1 S. E. 901, it was held that the notice was sufficiently served by posting at the door of the party's residence, he and all of his family being absent from home, and also by serving a copy on his counsel upon the same day, and by mailing a copy to him abroad, which he received in due course of mail.

25. Maxwell v. Holland, 2 N. C. 302, where an order was made directing publication for three successive weeks in a newspaper, of notice that the deposition would be taken at a certain place and day three months after publication.

But unless authorized by statute it has been held that the attempted service of notice by publication is a nullity. Lattier v. Lattier, 5 Ohio 538.

Must be in conformity with the statute.— Publication under a statute which requires the notice to be published once a week for four successive weeks is completed on the fourth issue of the newspaper containing it and if a reasonable time elapses between the date of said fourth issue and the taking of the depositions the notice will be sufficient. Miller v. Neff, 33 W. Va. 197, 10 S. E. 378, 6 L. R. A. 515.

26. Smelser v. Williams, 4 Rob. (La.) 152; Gill v. Phillips, 6 Mart. N. S. (La.) 298.

Recording proof.— In Thomas v. Clagett, 2 Harr. & M. (Md.) 172, a deposition was held inadmissible because it did not appear that proof of notice was lodged for record, with the clerk of the county where the deposition was taken, nor that the notice was recorded.

27. Hour of service.— A return of service on the day before the time appointed for taking the deposition, without stating the hour of service, fails to show that the party had the twenty-four hours' notice allowed by statute. Hunt v. Lowell Gas Light Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 343.

Sufficiency.— A return "executed by delivering a true copy of the above notice" sufficiently shows service on the party to whom the notice is addressed. Helm v. Shackleford, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 390. A return "executed this writ on the 18th of June, 1859," although informal, if in other respects unexceptionable, is sufficient. Bewley v. Cummings, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 232.

28. Conclusiveness of proof see infra, XVI, G, 3, e.

Annexation of notice.— Where the magistrate omits to certify that the adverse party was duly notified, but annexes the notice, from which it appears that legal notice was given, the deposition may be read. Homer v. Brainerd, 15 Me. 54.

Who may certify.— Service of a notice to take a deposition, to be used in the circuit court of the United States, should be certified by the magistrate as well as by the marshal. Harris v. Wall, 7 How. (U. S.) 693, 12 L. ed. 875.

In deposition.— A witness who serves notice may prove the service in his deposition. Balser v. Singer, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 56, 1 West. L. J. 394.

Verification of return.— A return by a clerk who served notice is not legal evidence unless verified by his affidavit. Hyde v. Benson, 6 Ark. 396.

or service may be shown by the written admission of the attorney of the party.[31]

c. Presumptions. In the absence of any showing to the contrary it will be presumed that the officer performed his duty in serving the notice,[32] and that the date of the notice was the date of its service.[33]

d. Sufficiency. The proof of service must show that the notice was served within the time[34] and in the manner required by law.[35] If the party was not served personally the reason for the omission should appear.[36]

e. Conclusiveness. While it has been held that the return of an officer[37] or the certificate of the magistrate[38] or notary[39] before whom the deposition was taken is only prima facie evidence of its truth, it has also been held that the certificate of the magistrate renders conclusive the recitals in the caption of the deposition as to the fact of notice.[40]

XVII. EXECUTING COMMISSION OR TAKING DEPOSITION.

A. In General. Statutes respecting the taking of depositions must be substantially complied with and no material deviation therefrom will be allowed, unless by the agreement or waiver of the parties.[41] Where a deposition is taken Oath of party.—A party cannot prove service by his own oath. Lockwood v. Adams, 10 Ohio 397.

Proof before commissioner.— A commissioner to take depositions in another state, to whom the commission is sent, may take evidence by affidavit that notice of the time and place of holding the commission was served on the other commissioners appointed in the matter. Tussey v. Behmer, 9 Lanc. Bar (Pa.) 45.

31. Coffin v. Anderson, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 395; Claiborne v. Frazier, 2 Brev. (S. C.) 47.

Admission by partner of attorney.— In Brown v. Clement, 68 Ill. 192, there was held to be sufficient service where the notice sent by mail was returned with an admission of service, and acted upon under the belief that it was signed by authority of the attorney, who was in fact absent, and it appeared that the admission was signed by the attorney's son and law partner.

32. Advertisements.— Where the commissioner is directed to "advertise the time and place of his sittings," the court will presume, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, that the commissioner did his duty. Maze v. Heckinger, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 541.

Identity of person served.— If the notice is executed by the sheriff on a person bearing the same name as one of the partners of the firm, it will be presumed that the sheriff did his duty, and that the person on whom the notice was served was a partner of the firm. Reese v. Beck, 24 Ala. 651.

33. Keller v. Nutz, 5 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 246.

34. Proof that notice was given ten days before a specified date does not show compliance with a requirement of notice ten days before the dedimus is sued out. Corgan v. Anderson, 30 Ill. 95.

35. Service at residence.— Where service by leaving the notice at the residence of the party is relied on, the proof must specify the residence (Hill v. Norvell, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,497, 3 McLean 583), and state with whom the notice was left (Crozier v. Gano, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 257). If the notice was left with the wife of the party the proof need not show that she was informed of its purport (McCall v. Towers, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,674, 1 Cranch C. C. 41), and it will be presumed that she was at home and that service was therefore made at the dwelling-house of the party (Snyder v. Wilt, 15 Pa. St. 59).

Impeachment by return of officer.— The statement in the caption cannot be controlled by an officer's return on a notification attached, which is not referred to in the caption, nor by the fact that the adverse party or his attorney was actually absent at the time. Norris v. Vinal, 33 Me. 581.

Parol evidence to impeach.— Parol testimony to show that the time between the notice and the caption was less than allowed by the statute is inadmissible. Cooper v. Bakeman, 33 Me. 376.

in another state to be used within the state in which the commission issued, the proceedings are the proceedings of the court which issued it, and are to be regulated by the laws of the state in which it is situated.[42]

B. By Person Designated. The deposition must be taken before the magistrate, notary, or other officer designated in the notice,[43] unless the notice states that it will be taken before the officer named or some other like official or proper authority.[44]

C. Oath of Commissioner or Officer. When so required by statute or rule the commissioner must take the prescribed oath,[45] but if not so required he need not be sworn;[46] nor need an official to whom a general oath of office has been administered be specially sworn when acting as a commissioner or taking depositions in a particular case.[47] Where commissioners certify that they were duly Canada.— Millville Mut. Mar., etc., Ins. Co. v. Driscoll, 11 Can. Supreme Ct. 183.

Non-execution.— If the caption to the interrogatories recites that the answers were taken by consent of parties, the taking of the answers cannot be referred to a commission. The commission is to be considered as unexecuted by the express return of the commissioners. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Chaffin, 84 Ga. 519, 11 S. E. 891.

Substantial compliance.— Compliance with the substance of the law is sufficient. Greene County v. Bledsoe, 12 Ill. 267.

This rule is superseded by the Idaho code, which requires its provisions to be liberally construed. Darby v. Heagerty, 2 Ida. (Hasb.) 282, 13 Pac. 85.

That all the witnesses named in the commission were not examined does not require the suppression of the depositions of those that were. Schmior v. Russell, 83 Tex. 83, 18 S. W. 484.

In England.— A strict and literal compliance with the directions in an order for a commission under the English statute (1 Wm. IV, c. 22, § 4), to examine witness abroad is unnecessary. Hodges v. Cobb, L. R. 2 Q. B. 652, 8 B. & S. 583, 36 L. J. Q. B. 265, 16 L. T. Rep. N. S. 792, 15 Wkly. Rep. 1038.

Commissioners may qualify each other. Williams v. Richardson, 12 S. C. 584.

Sufficiency of oath.— A statute requiring a commissioner to make oath that he will "faithfully, fairly and impartially execute the commission" is not complied with by an oath that he will faithfully execute the commission (Perry v. Thompson, 16 N. J. L. 72) or by swearing that he will truly, faithfully, and without partiality take the examination and depositions (Lawrence v. Finch, 17 N. J. Eq. 234).

Swearing himself.— A single commissioner appointed to take evidence abroad may administer the oath to himself. Wilson v. De Coulon, 22 Ch. D. 841, 53 L. J. Exch. 248, 48 L. T. Rep. N. S. 514, 31 Wkly. Rep. 839.

sworn[48] or there is evidence on the face of the commission that the oath was administered, and the commissioners so certify, it will be presumed that it was administered by a competent officer.[49]

D. As to Witness. The deposition of a person other than the witness designated is inadmissible,[50] unless the adverse party is aware that the person examined was the witness intended.[51]

E. Place of Taking — 1. In General. Where the commission or the order for taking a deposition directs where it is to be taken, or the place of taking is prescribed by statute or rule of court, if the deposition is taken elsewhere it is inadmissible,[52] unless the circumstances or exigencies of the case authorized a departure from the general rule.[53]

Original qualification.—A standing commissioner, who has taken the oath prescribed in "open court," and whose certificate of qualification was filed at that time, is sufficiently qualified to take depositions, although the act under which he was appointed directs that his certificate be "recorded," and that his oath must be taken "before the judge." Quynn v. Brooke, 22 Md. 288.

48. State v. Levy, 3 Harr. & M. (Md.) 591.

Aliter where the commissioners merely certify that they took the oath, and no signature of an officer is appended thereto. Brewer v. Bowersox, 92 Md. 567, 48 Atl. 1060, where the commissioner merely certified "I took the oath annexed to said commission."

Presumption.— Depositions taken abroad and returned with the commission are admissible in evidence without proof that the commissioners had taken the oath prescribed by the commission, or returned by them to that effect. Such oath is required to be taken, but the court will presume that this has been done, nothing appearing to the contrary. Wilmot v. Haws, 3 N. Brunsw. 351.

Witnesses named "and others."— A notice of the taking of the depositions of certain named witnesses "and others" is sufficient to authorize the taking of the deposition of an additional witness not specifically named. Independent Dryer Co. v. Livermore Foundry, etc., Co., 60 Ill. App. 390. And compare McDugald v. Smith, 33 N. C. 576, to the effect that under a notice to take the depositions of two persons named and others the depositions of other witnesses than those named may be taken, although the witnesses named are not examined.

County where witness "sojourns."— A person living without the state who does business in a city within the state "sojourns" in such city, within a statute providing that a commission issued in another state may be executed in the county in which the witness resides or sojourns. Wittenbrock v. Mabins, 57 Hun (N. Y.) 146, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 733.

Place different from that designated.— Where the office of the commissioner is specified by designating its location in a city, a deposition taken at his office at another location but in the city named is admissible. Sayles v. Stewart, 5 Wis. 8.

The convenience of the parties' counsel or witnesses may be taken into consideration (Kahn v. Redford, 3 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 55); but a party or a witness should not be compelled to attend anywhere but the place at which he has a right to be examined unless under special circumstances (Gallagher v. Gairdner, 2 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 480; McDermid v. McDermid, 2 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 372). For the convenience of defendant summoned as a witness, instead of compelling him to appear before the examiner, his testimony may be taken in the county where he and some of the complainants' counsel reside. Prevost v. Gorrell, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,405*a*.

Evidence of place of taking.—Where a commission issued to take a deposition abroad it is competent for the judge to find that it was taken in the foreign country, from evidence that the envelope in which the deposition was received bore the post-mark and postage stamp of such foreign country. McKinney v. Wilson, 133 Mass. 131.

Office of interested attorney.— The practice of taking depositions in the office of an attorney interested in the cause is objectionable, but the fact that a notary before whom a deposition was taken has his office in a room occupied by the attorneys who represented the parties taking the deposition is not of itself sufficient to warrant the exclusion of the deposition when offered to be read upon the trial. Singer Mfg. Co. v. McAllister, 22 Nebr. 359, 35 N. W. 181.

53. Aged witnesses living in a distant part of the state may be examined before a master

2. Compliance With Notice. The deposition should be taken at the place designated in the notice.[54]

F. Time of Taking — 1. In General. Statutes and rules prescribing the time for taking a deposition must be strictly complied with.[55] If the time is not prescribed they must be taken with reasonable diligence[56] and at a reasonable time of day,[57] but should not be taken at a time when it is evident that the adverse party or his counsel cannot attend.[58]

But if it is shown that it was taken substantially at the place specified (De Witt v. Bigelow, 11 Ala. 480; Trapnell v. State Bank, 18 Ark. 53); that the place is so identified in the notice that the adverse party could not have been misled (Sparks v. Sparks, 51 Kan. 195, 32 Pac. 892; Taylor v. Shemwell, 4 B. That counsel was attending court out of the county at the time the deposition was taken furnishes no reason why it should not be read. Warring v. Martin, Wright (Ohio) 380. Where an attorney was party to a suit,

2. COMPLIANCE WITH RULE OR ORDER. As a rule depositions cannot be taken after the time fixed by the rule or order for their taking;[59] but the suppression of depositions so taken is discretionary, where the delay was caused by the adverse party,[60] or no prejudice has been sustained by the irregularity.[61]

3. COMPLIANCE WITH NOTICE. The deposition may be taken at the time specified in the notice or at any time within the hours or days so specified,[62] but not at any other time.[63] The depositions should not be closed until the expiration of the time designated in the notice.[64] It has been held, however, that depositions taken before the expiration of the time will not be rejected, where the adverse party was afforded a reasonable time for appearance and cross-examination.

4. AFTER RETURN-DAY. Depositions taken after the day the commission is returnable cannot be received.[65]

5. TIME STIPULATED. Where the parties have stipulated as to the time when depositions shall be taken or closed, depositions taken thereafter are inadmissible.[66]

6. DEPOSITIONS TAKEN IN TERM. Unless by order of the court or consent of the parties a deposition cannot be taken during the term of the court in which the

and a deposition was taken by the opposite party while the court was sitting in the county where the attorney resided, it was held that such deposition could not be rejected unless the party taking the depositions knew that the court would be sitting at that time. Ela v. Rand, 4 N. H. 54.

Lack of bad faith.—Where defendant failed to take all his depositions until six months after the time fixed by order of court, a suppression of the depositions and proceeding with the case without allowing a continuance is too severe a penalty, in the absence of anything showing bad faith. "From day to day."—Under a notice by plaintiff to take depositions on a certain day, and "from day to day," he may adjourn over from day to day, and over Sunday, until he completes his depositions, so long as he is in fact taking proof in good faith. Cross v. Cross, 41 S. W. 272, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 650.

Adjournments.—Where the adverse party fails to appear proceedings should begin on the day named in the notice; and if adjournments occur entries should be made each day of the proceedings of that day together with the adjournment, it not being sufficient for the officer to certify, where the depositions are taken after the day for which notice was given, that the taking has been adjourned "from day to day by reason of bad weather." cause is pending.[67] To this general rule there are exceptions which permit depositions to be taken during term before the cause in which they are to be used is reached or called for trial,[68] or where it is necessary to take them[69] because of special circumstances arising during the term.[70] In the absence of any inhibitory statute or rule depositions may be taken in term as well as at any other time.[71] And they have been received where the party taking them has acted in good faith,[72] where there has been no unreasonable delay,[73] where the adverse party has not been surprised or prejudiced,[74] or where he was present and cross-examined without objection.[75]

7. EXTENSION OF TIME. In a proper case, as where the party has been unable to procure all his testimony, new evidence has been discovered, or the like, and he has not been guilty of laches, an extension or enlargement of the time for taking depositions may be granted.[76] The extension may be obtained ex parte,[77] and if Court not in session.— Where depositions may be taken in term only where they are taken in the town in which the court is held at a time when it is not actually in session unless by special order, a deposition taken out of town without such an order (Fuller v. Damon, 135 Mass. 586) or a deposition taken in town without an order when the court is in session for docket business (Rollins v. Rollins, (Me. 1886) 5 Atl. 264) is inadmissible.

Deposition not to be used at term.— It is discretionary with the court to admit or reject a deposition taken in term-time but not to be used at that term, in view of a custom that parties in court and their attorneys should not be required to attend the taking of depositions in term-time. the applicant is entitled to the extension on the facts, it is improper to impose conditions.[78]

G. Attendance of Witnesses — 1. Power to Compel. Except as to letters rogatory there is no power to compel the attendance of witnesses or to compel them to depose before an officer or a commissioner appointed by the courts of another state, unless that power is expressly or impliedly conferred;[79] but where such power is expressly conferred on the court, an officer thereof, or the commissioner or officer before whom the deposition is to be taken, the attendance and testimony of the witness may be procured by order, subpœna, summons, or other process,[80] in like manner as the attendance of witnesses may be procured generally enlarging the time may be obtained, after the time limited in the first order has expired, but before the expiration of the time as enlarged by an agreement. Fitch v. Hazeltine, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 416.

Necessary statements.— Where the time has already been extended by an agreement containing a stipulation that the defendant should have fifteen days to produce testimony after the examination of a certain witness on the part of the complainant had closed, the affidavit should state that fact also, so that a similar provision may be inserted in the order. Fitch v. Hazeltine, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 416.

78. Where the applicant has not been guilty of laches it is error to enforce as a condition the payment by plaintiff of money which plaintiff had theretofore been ordered to pay to defendant as a condition of opening a default in the action, which payment as a condition of opening the default the court had afterward held to have been waived by defendant. Short notice.— A witness who attends at the appointed time in obedience to notice cannot object to being examined on the ground that the notice was too short. Re North Wheal Exmouth Min. Co., 31 Beav. 628, 8 Jur. N. S. 1168, 7 L. T. Rep. N. S. 306, 1 New Rep. 42, 11 Wkly. Rep. 58.

Unauthorized order.— Where the cause is pending within the state, and the witness on the trial of an action, and if he disobey the same an attachment may issue against him.[81]

2. Application For Order or Subpœna. An application for an order or subpœna to compel the attendance and testimony of a witness before a commissioner appointed in another state need not present formal proof of the commission;[82] nor is the judge required to satisfy himself of its authenticity.[83] It must appear, however, that a cause is actually pending, that notice of the examination has been given,[84] that the commission is to be executed within the state,[85] and that the testimony of the witness is material.[86] If there is no authority to quash subpœnas in a proceeding to take depositions, they cannot be quashed because of the insufficiency of the affidavit.[87]

3. Letters Rogatory. The jurisdiction to require witnesses to attend and testify under letters rogatory rests on comity, or courtesy extended by one judicial tribunal to another;[88] and the court to which the letters are addressed is vested with a discretion to compel or refuse to compel a witness to attend and has been subpœnaed by a notary to attend before him, an unauthorized order requiring his attendance will add nothing to the legal obligation to obey the subpœna. Burns v. San Francisco, 140 Cal. 1, 73 Pac. 597.

Foreign commission — Power of court.— The court from which a subpœna is issued to a witness named in a foreign commission has no inherent power to compel him to attend. Matter of U. S. Pipe-Line, 16 N. Y. App. Div. 188, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 713.

Witness beyond jurisdiction.— A judge of the superior court, before whom depositions are to be taken in a suit in the federal courts, has no jurisdiction to compel by attachment the attendance as a witness of a non-resident of the state, who is beyond its boundaries, and who was served with a subpœna when temporarily within the state. State v. Kennan, (Wash. 1903) 74 Pac. 381.

Sufficiency.— An affidavit that the action is brought to distribute a fund in which the persons sought to be examined claim an interest, and that plaintiff expects to prove by them that their claim is invalid and that he has no other witness by which he can prove that fact is sufficient. Matter of Heller, 41 N. Y. App. Div. 595, 58 N. Y. Suppl. 695.

H. Production of Books and Papers. A witness may be compelled to produce books and papers which would be material and competent on the trial of the issues,[91] before a commissioner appointed by the court of another state where by statute such production may be compelled.[92] But their production cannot be required where the local tribunal is not empowered to compel the production of documentary evidence on the taking of a deposition.[93] The application must be founded on an affidavit showing the necessity for the production of the evidence and its materiality and must be made on notice.[94]

I. Presence of Party or Counsel. When not prohibited by statute the presence of a party or counsel at the examination is not objectionable; and if he has a right to be present it is error to exclude him.[95] However, the mere fact Proof conceded.— A witness whose interest is conceded cannot be compelled to produce a contract or agreement with his co-complainant to show such interest. Bullock Electric Mfg. Co. v. Crocker Wheeler Co., 121 Fed. 200.

Sending out of jurisdiction.— Books and documents produced in an action may when a proper case is made out be sent out of the jurisdiction for the purpose of the examination of witnesses before a foreign commission. Cure of exclusion by permitting cross-examination.— The improper exclusion of the agent of the adverse party is not cured by that a party was not present when a deposition was taken is no reason for excluding it, if he was duly notified and might have attended,[96] and no prejudice resulted from his absence.[97] On the other hand in some jurisdictions in view of possible prejudice to the opposite party, when he has had no notice of the examination,[98] or by statute, the parties, their attorneys, or agents are not permitted to be present at the taking of a deposition on interrogatories.[99] In others, and in the absence of statute or rule on the subject, the fact that the party or his representative was present will not require the rejection of the deposition, where it does not appear that the witness was prompted or influenced.[1] his subsequent cross-examination of the witness. Pratt v. Battles, 34 Vt. 391.

Execution of foreign commission.— A foreign commissioner is not bound to permit the attendance of parties or counsel. Harper v. Young, 17 Phila. (Pa.) 109, where the commissioner refused to allow the agent of the counsel of the adverse party to be present, and the exceptions were dismissed with a suggestion that the parties agree that the witness be recalled for further examination, and a statement that if a proposition to that effect were refused a rule would be granted to show cause why they should not be so examined.

Necessity of application.— An application for leave to appear and cross-examine is unnecessary. McCullough's Estate, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. 87, 20 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 471, a claim against a decedent's estate.

Presence of master of vessel.— On the examination of the crew of a vessel libeled for damages caused by a collision, the master of the vessel, although himself a witness, has not only the privilege but it is his duty as the agent of the owners to be present, unless his exclusion becomes necessary, by reason of his contumacy. The Havre, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,232, 1 Ben. 295.

Presence of third parties.— An examiner has discretion to permit the presence of a shorthand writer. Wright v. Wilkin, 4 Jur. N. S. 804, 6 Wkly. Rep. 643.

at the request of either party,[3] or unless in some way restricted he may adjourn it by consent of the parties.[4]

2. From Day to Day. Adjournments may be taken from day to day where the deposition cannot be completed on the day designated,[5] or the commission or notice provided for the taking of a deposition or depositions from day to day until they are completed.[6] The adjournments must be taken in good faith and for a sufficient reason, which should appear,[7] although it has been held that the reason or necessity for the continuance,[8] or that there was a formal adjournment need not be noted.[9] But authority to adjourn from day to day does not authorize an adjournment for a longer time, unless by consent,[10] or where the succeeding day falls on Sunday or a legal holiday.[11]

3. Notice of. Unless where the adverse party has disregarded the notice originally given,[12] notice of the adjournments must be given to the party or parties entitled thereto.[13]

K. Contempt[14] — 1. What Constitutes. The disobedience of a subpœna or direction to appear before the commissioner or officer before whom the deposition is to be taken, or to testify,[15] to answer specific questions,[16] or to produce books and papers[17] may be punished as a contempt. The questions as to which there is a refusal to answer must be relevant[18] and material to the issue,[19] and their propriety must be determined by the officer in the first instance.[20] But a witness is not guilty of contempt where he cannot be rightfully subjected to an examination,[21] as where the object is to ascertain in advance what a party will testify to on the trial,[22] to discover facts to be used against the witness in another case,[23] or where there is no power to compel obedience to the order or direction.[24]

2. Power to Punish. The power to punish the contemner resides in the court which issued the subpœna or mandate,[25] unless that power is delegated to or conferred on the officer whose process or direction is disobeyed, or he has authority by reason of his general powers.[26] But there is no power to punish a witness for disobedience to an unauthorized order or direction.[27]

3. APPLICATION TO PUNISH. The application to punish a contumacious witness may be made ex parte unless the court direct notice to be given,[28] and must show the materiality of the questions which the witness refused to answer.[29]

4. PUNISHMENT AND COMMITMENT. If the contempt consists of the refusal to answer several questions all bearing on the same question, there is but one contempt, for which but one sentence can be imposed.[30] The commitment by an officer must show the pertinency and materiality of the questions which the witness refused to answer,[31] and also of what the contempt consisted.[32]

L. Conduct and Scope of Examination — 1. IN GENERAL. On an oral examination if no form is prescribed the testimony should be procured by questions and answers.[33] But in the absence of rules on the subject the mode of conducting the examination will not be deemed material.[34]

United States courts.—Congress has not conferred power upon the district and circuit courts of the United States to make rules touching the mode of taking testimony. Randall v. Venable, 17 Fed. 162.

35. See cases cited infra, this note; and, generally, Witnesses.

Compelling attendance and answer.—Where a defendant refused to answer questions not founded on any case or charge or allegation made in the bill, an application to compel him to attend and answer was refused with costs. Dickson v. Covert, 2 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 342.

Immaterial evidence.—A motion to suppress a deposition on the ground that the witness whose deposition had been taken had refused to answer cross interrogatories should be denied, where it does not appear that there was any collusion between the witness and the party in whose behalf the deposition was taken, and the questions not answered called for immaterial evidence. Michaelis v. Compania Metalurgica, 51 N. Y. App. Div. 470, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 753.

Privilege.—The New Hampshire public statutes providing that no "party" shall be compelled, in giving a deposition, to disclose the names of the witnesses by whom, nor the manner in which, he proposes to prove his case, nor to produce any writing which is material to his case or defense, being expressly limited to "parties," does not excuse the servants in charge of a street railway car, whose duty it was to procure the names of persons present at the time of an accident, and report the same in writing to the corporation, from answering questions relative thereto in the taking of their depositions in an action against the corporation. Bradley's Petition, 71 N. H. 54, 51 Atl. 264.

Questions calling for incriminating answers.—Commissioners may not ask questions, the answers to which may subject the witness to penalties or criminal punishment (Smith v. Beadnell, 1 Campb. 30); but the court will not restrain an examination on the ground that its object is to secure evidence as to penalties incurred by the witness for gaming (Ex p. Burlton, 1 Glyn & J. 30).

Suppression for refusal to answer.—A deposition may be suppressed if it appears that the witness refused to answer competent and material questions. Michaelis v. Compania Metalurgica, 51 N. Y. App. Div. 470, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 753.

The refusal must be deliberate. Michaelis v. Compania Metalurgica, 51 N. Y. App. Div. 470, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 753.

Witness objecting to interrogatories must demur and state his objection on oath. His demurrer may be then set down for argument. Parkhurst v. Lowten, 3 Madd. 121, 2 Swanst. 194, 19 Rev. Rep. 63, 36 Eng. Reprint 589; Bowman v. Rodwell, 1 Madd. 266. See Morgan v. Shaw, 4 Madd. 54.

In a foreign action the examination should not be limited to the rules of evidence prevailing in English courts. DeSilla v. Fells, 40 L. T. Rep. N. S. 423.

Commissioners may reject improper testimony (Whitelocke v. Baker, 13 Ves. Jr. 511, 9 Rev. Rep. 216, 33 Eng. Reprint 385. See Surr v. Walmsley, L. R. 2 Eq. 439, 14 L. T. Rep. N. S. 621, 14 Wkly. Rep. 888); but not until the time for closing evidence has expired (Wood v. Searth, 3 Eq. Rep. 485, 24 L. J. Ch. 392, 3 Wkly. Rep. 305).

Improper interrogatories or interrogatories which may deter a witness from giving evidence should be disallowed. Stocks v. Ellis, L. R. 8 Q. B. 454, 42 L. J. Q. B. 241, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 267, 22 Wkly. Rep. 17.

Reference to account not produced.—Answers to interrogatories which refer to an alleged account are not pertinent, where no account is attached to the interrogatories or exhibited. Shockley v. Morgan, 103 Ga. 156, 29 S. E. 694.

to the interrogatories or questions propounded.[39] But an answer to the last or general interrogatory may state facts material to the issue[40] or not elicited by pre-

The answers were held to be responsive in the following cases: Stern v. Filene, 14 Allen (Mass.) 9 (where to an interrogatory as to whether defendant did not on a certain occasion claim that there was something due him from plaintiff, the witness answered that certain goods were sold to defendant by plaintiff, who refused to deliver the same except on receipt of cash, on the strength of which refusal defendant objected to paying the bill in suit); Hall v. Mackay, 78 Tex. 248, 14 S. W. 615 (where in answer to the questions, "What was the personal appearance of the man you served as R. D. Hall? What is the appearance of the defendant?" the witness said: "His personal appearance [referring to the man served] was a man of medium height, dark complexion, and long, dark whiskers"); Waters Pierce Oil Co. v. Davis, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 508, 60 S. W. 453 (an action for injuries by the explosion of gasoline in a laundry, where one of the proprietors in her deposition was asked whether there were any regulations in force in regard to handling the gasoline, as to the time of drawing it, quantity and method of drawing it, and if so by whom the regulations were made, and whether they were acted upon or not; and answered that "the work of operating the laundry was in charge of the foreman; they were told to draw as much as possible in the morning"). And see Southern Home Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Riddle, 129 Ala. 562, 29 So. 667, an action to set aside a conveyance, where an answer by the complainant that he sold to the parties defendant to the bill the goods under the firm-name of the partnership, as described in the bill, was held to be responsive to an inquiry in an interrogatory whether the witness was acquainted with the parties to and the subject-matter of the pending suit. In De Walt v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 22 Tex. Civ. App. 403, 55 S. W. 534, the witness was asked, "Is it not true that you could not open the throttle of this large engine as quickly as the old locomotive without giving a sudden jerk to the whole train?" and he answered, "Yes, easier without sudden jerk," and it was held that the answer fairly conveyed the information sought, and was not so evasive or irresponsive that the deposition should have been suppressed.

An answer "I cannot remember" is sufficiently specific. Baals v. Stewart, 109 Ind. 371, 9 N. E. 403.

Answer to erroneous interrogatory.—Where by mistake an interrogatory was made to read "In whose car" was certain goods sent, instead of "In whose care," an answer stating who ordered the car is not prejudicial, where the fact of a certain person accompanying the car was not controverted. Richmond v. Sundburg, 77 Iowa 255, 42 N. W. 184.

"Belief" for "opinion."—Testimony by a subscribing witness to a will as to his "belief" as to the mental capacity of the testator is admissible, where the deposition shows that he used the word as synonymous with "opinion." Hughes v. Hughes, 31 Ala. 519.

Hearsay evidence should be suppressed, and a refusal to suppress affords ground for reversal, although legitimate evidence tending to prove the same facts was put into the case. Rooker v. Rooker, 83 Ind. 226.

Knowledge of rental value.—A witness, having answered interrogatories so as to show that his knowledge of the rental value of goods detained had been gained from an experience of eight years, replied to cross interrogatories as to specific instances of renting such goods, intended to ascertain the extent of such knowledge, and how obtained, that during the four years he was with a certain concern they never rented such goods. It was held that such reply was evasive, warranting a suppression of the entire deposition. Mobile Electric Lighting Co. v. Rust, 131 Ala. 484, 31 So. 486.

Partial answer.—The failure to answer one distinct part of a question will not condemn the answer to the other part. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Drake, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 601, 38 S. W. 632.

Personal injuries.—Direct testimony of a physician that he treated plaintiff for injuries is sufficient to sustain answers to cross interrogatories as to the extent of those injuries. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Baumgarten, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 253, 72 S. W. 78.

Responsive to subsequent interrogatory.—A deposition should not be suppressed because an answer is irresponsive to an interrogatory, where it is responsive to a subsequent interrogatory, in reply to which the witness stated that he had already in his previous answers told all that occurred. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Bell (Tex. Civ. App. 1903) 73 S. W. 56 [affirmed in (Tex. Sup. 1903) 75 S. W. 484].

Extent of objection.—An objection for irresponsiveness is not available as to such parts of the answers as are admissible. Heintz v. O'Donnell, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 21, 42 S. W. 797. To same effect see Western Union Tel. Co. v. Drake, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 601, 38 S. W. 632.

40. Yarborough v. Hood, 13 Ala. 176.

Opposite party not put on notice.—An answer to a final general interrogatory may be excluded if it contains material and important testimony of the nature of which the opposite party was not reasonably put upon notice either by the question embraced in that particular interrogatory or by the same when taken in connection with preceding interrogatories. White v. Jones, 105 Ga. 26, 31 S. E. 119.

vious particular interrogatories which have been put to the witness prior to the general interrogatory.[41]

4. Necessity of Full Examination. In chancery the examination should be as exhaustive as the nature of the case requires or will admit.[42] Where a commission is taken out ex parte, the party procuring it may put such of the interrogatories as he sees fit;[43] but if the commission is joint all the interrogatories must be propounded.[44] The last or general interrogatory must always be put.[45]

5. Compelling Testimony — a. In General. A witness who refuses to testify or answer specific questions may be compelled to do so, by the court within whose jurisdiction the examination is pending,[46] or the officer before whom the deposition is to be taken;[47] and for the refusal to answer material questions or proper cross interrogatories, the entire deposition may be suppressed.[48] The power to compel the witness to testify in an action pending without the state is not inherent, but exists only when conferred by statute.[49]

41. Percival v. Hickey, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 257, 9 Am. Dec. 210.

42. Limiting supplemental proof.— The parties should make their proofs as full before publication as the nature of the case requires or admits, so that supplementary proofs before the master may be as limited as the rights and responsibilities of the parties will admit. Remsen v. Remsen, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 495.

43. Merrill v. Dawson, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,469, Hempst. 563.

A deposition cannot be impeached by the party on whose behalf it was taken, by evidence of declarations made by the witness, whose attention was not called to them on his examination. Cooper v. Hills Bros. Co., 50 N. Y. App. Div. 304, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 1046.

44. Union Bank v. Torrey, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 626; Brown v. Kimball, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 259; Kimball v. Davis, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 437; Hinkley v. Insurance Co., 4 Pa. Co., 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,901, 2 Wash. 7.

Interrogatory dependent on answer to prior interrogatory.— Where an interrogatory is to be put if a previous question is answered in a particular way, and that question is not answered in the manner indicated by the terms of the interrogatory, such interrogatory should not be put, or if put the answer thereto should not be admitted. Selden v. Bank of Commerce, 3 Minn. 166.

The witness may be examined on all parts of the case, whether direct or in rebuttal. Thurstin v. Luce, 61 Mich. 292, 28 N. W. 103.

Discretion as to letters rogatory.— It is discretionary with the court to which letters rogatory have issued to compel a witness to testify or not, but like any other judicial discretion it is not to be exercised arbitrarily. McKenzie's Case, 2 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 227, 1 Pa. L. J. Rep. 356, 2 Pa. L. J. 343.

Application to compel — By whom made.— In Massachusetts an application to compel a witness to answer interrogatories attached to a commission from another state must be made by the commissioner and not by a party to the action. Chicago First Nat. Bank v. Graham, 175 Mass. 179, 55 N. E. 991.

Certifying refusal to answer.— The justice should certify at the foot of the deposition if the witness refuses to answer. Vincent v. Huff, 4 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 298.

Dedimus not delivered to officer.— The officer has no power to compel a witness to give his deposition, where the dedimus, although issued, has not been received by him. In re Nitsche, 14 Mo. App. 213.

Impertinent or irrelevant questions.— The commissioner cannot lawfully order the witness to answer impertinent or irrelevant questions. Ex p. Woodworth, 6 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 19, 29 Cinc. L. Bul. 315.

Passing on propriety of question in first instance.— On the execution of a foreign commission the pertineney and propriety of the questions should be passed on by the commissioner in the first instance. Matter of Dittman, 65 N. Y. App. Div. 343, 72 N. Y. Suppl. 886.

48. Mobile Electric Lighting Co. v. Rust, 131 Ala. 484, 31 So. 486.

Depositions received and opened by agreement.— The whole of a deposition may be suppressed on the ground that a witness has refused to answer a material question; but where no effort is made to compel him to answer, no notice given of an intention to move for suppression because of the refusal, and the depositions are subsequently received and opened by agreement, and two terms intervene before such a motion is made, it is then too late to urge it. b. Excuses. A witness named in letters rogatory is not excused from testifying on the ground that they were improperly issued, where the foreign court has decided otherwise,[50] that the testimony sought is not relevant,[51] that he is not interested in the case, is within the county in which the action is pending, and does not intend to depart, and is in good health, and will be able to attend court as a witness when the case is reached for trial,[52] or by the fact that the parties have agreed to use a deposition made by him in a former suit.[53]

6. Examination Confined to Interrogatories — a. In General. Where the deposition is to be taken on written interrogatories, the examination of the witness must be restricted to them and cannot be general,[54] unless the parties otherwise agree.[55]

b. Adoption of Former Statements or Depositions. The testimony must be elicited by propounding the interrogatories, or by questions and answers,[56] and it is improper to permit the witness to adopt statements contained in books or papers,[57] to adopt answers made by him in other suits,[58] or, although there are decisions to the contrary, to permit him to adopt depositions or answers formerly made.[59]

Pipe Line Co., 16 N. Y. App. Div. 188, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 713; Matter of Bushnell, 19 Misc. (N. Y.) 307, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 257.

In executing a foreign commission the commissioner cannot compel a witness to examine books and papers in the custody of the latter, but not before the commissioner, in order to refresh his recollection. Matter of Dittman, 65 N. Y. App. Div. 343, 72 N. Y. Suppl. 886.

Bill to perpetuate.— The complainant is confined to the matters alleged in his bill to perpetuate testimony and to the interrogatories annexed thereto. Hickman v. Hickman, 1 Del. Ch. 133.

A prize commissioner is limited to putting the standing interrogatories or those specially framed by the court. The Peterhoff, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,024, Blatchf. Pr. Cas. 463. Under special circumstances the master of a vessel who has been examined in preparatorio may be reëxamined at the instance of the claimant on one of the standing interrogatories, on condition that he shall at the same time be examined on special interrogatories framed by the court, although all the testimony has been filed and an order for the opening of the proofs has been made. The Peterhoff, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,024, Blatchf. Pr. Cas. 463, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,022, Blatchf. Pr. Cas. 345.

Inability to execute commission abroad.— Where the local authorities refuse to permit the execution of a commission on interrogatories a deposition taken on questions propounded by a foreign tribunal in the presence of the commissioners may be read. Winthrop v. Union Ins. Co., 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,901, 2 Wash. 7.

58. Knox v. Strader, 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 84, 2 West. L. J. 69.

Correctness of former answers.— The attention of the witness may be called to answers made in another proceeding, and he may be permitted to testify as to their correctness. Bixby v. Carskaddon, 63 Iowa 164, 18 N. W. 875.

59. Hull v. Alexander, 26 Iowa 569; Stevenson v. Myers, 1 Harr. & J. (Md.) 102. Contra, Samuel v. Hostetter, 118 Fed. 257, 55 C. C. A. 111.

A former deposition may be adopted as testimony in chief, where the witness is cross-examined. Robinson v. Hutchinson, 31 Vt. 443.

Copying former deposition.— In Underhill v. Van Cortlandt, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 339, the witness in a cross suit copied his deposition given in the original cause, and the court admitted it under the circumstances, notwithstanding its irregularity.

Second examination.— If a witness be examined a second time by the same party to correct a mistake in his answers to the former interrogatories, it is not improper to furnish the witness with a copy of his former answers. Heard v. McKee, 26 Ga. 332.

c. Prior Information by Witness. The deposition is not invalidated by the fact that before testifying the witness was furnished with or read the interrogatories and cross interrogatories in advance of his examination, where no attempt was made or influence brought to bear on him to affect his testimony, and the party complaining has not been prejudiced.[60]

d. Preparation in Advance. Although depositions or answers prepared by the witness in advance of the examination and adopted by the officer have been received,[61] the general rule is that such depositions are not admissible.[62]

7. Influence of Party or Counsel — a. In General. A deposition in equity will be suppressed where counsel assumes to pass on the admissibility of testimony, and in obedience to his instruction the witness refuses to answer.[63]

b. Consultation With Counsel. A witness may consult with counsel openly and in the presence of the officers;[64] but not privately so as to procure aid in framing his answers.[65]

c. Suggestion or Preparation of Answers. The suggestion to the witness or the preparation for his use by the party or his counsel of answers to the questions or interrogatories will invalidate the deposition,[66] or at least is highly Mere suspicion.— A deposition will not be rejected merely because some of the answers of the deponent lead to the belief that he had, before he answered certain interrogatories, read previous ones. Sabine v. Strong, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 270.

Witness not influenced.— A deposition is not objectionable, although the body of it was drawn up by the witness before his examination, if there is no other reason to suppose undue influence. Clement v. Hadlock, 13 N. H. 185.

Instructing witness to tell the truth.— A witness is not disqualified because of having received a letter from one of the parties, requesting him to tell the whole truth, without any suggestions as to what the writer con-objectionable, and will affect the credibility of the witness, and weight of the evidence.[67]

8. Reference to Books or Papers. Written statements as to which the witness is interrogated should be exhibited to him,[68] and to refresh his memory or to enable him to testify accurately he may refer to books, papers, or memoranda not in evidence;[69] but he will not be permitted to make abstracts from books of account of the adverse party and have them verified by the officer,[70] nor can he be examined with respect to papers or instruments not referred to in the notice or interrogatories, or as to which there is no opportunity to cross-examine.[71]

9. Cross-Examination — a. Right to Cross-Examine. Unless he has waived the right, the adverse party is entitled to cross-examine or have his cross interrogatories propounded and answered, and if he is deprived of this right or it is denied him the deposition will be rejected.[72] However, the refusal to answer unimporsidered the truth to be. Warner v. Daniels, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,181, 1 Woodb. & M. 90.

Posting witness.—That the attorney of the party was with the witness for three or four days and drank with him, and endeavored "to post him up in regard to the case," it not appearing that the witness was influenced thereby, will not exclude the deposition. Nutter v. Ricketts, 6 Iowa 92.

Interference by commissioner.— Where the right to cross-examine a witness appears to have met with unreasonable interference on

tant cross interrogatories or interrogatories not pertinent to the issue will not require the rejection or suppression of the deposition.[73] This general rule is subject to the exception, in equity at least, that a deposition is admissible, where the direct interrogatories have been answered, but because of death or inevitable accident and without the fault of either party, cross-examination has been prevented.[74] But if a party might have cross-examined or filed or submitted cross interrogatories but did not, the effect is the same as if there had been a cross-examination.[75] And where he has not filed cross interrogatories he cannot cross-examine orally.[76]

b. Time of. The cross interrogatories may be propounded before[77] or after all the direct interrogatories have been answered;[78] but the witness should not be allowed to read his direct examination before he is cross-examined.[79] If a party omits to cross-examine at the proper time he may be permitted to do so at a subsequent day.[80]

the part of the commissioner, the deposition will be suppressed. Hacker v. U. S., 37 Ct. Cl. 86. In People v. Restell, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 289, a prisoner was taken to the house of the complaining witness, a prepared affidavit was read to the witness, who was sworn to its truth, and then the prisoner was invited to cross-examine, which she did, but the questions and answers were not taken down, the magistrate stating that the questions had been fully answered in the direct examination, and it was held that the affidavit was not admissible as a deposition taken before a committing magistrate.

Parties interested in a proceeding to award dower should have an opportunity to cross-examine. Ewell v. Tye, 76 S. W. 875, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 976.

Withdrawing proceedings to preclude cross-examination.—After a party has examined his witness in chief and an adjournment has been taken he cannot withdraw the proceedings and preclude a cross-examination. In re Rindskopf, 24 Fed. 542, 23 Blatchf. 302.

c. Further Cross-Examination. Where the circumstances warrant it, a further cross-examination may be permitted on a proper application and showing therefor,[81] although it has been held that after the return of a commission, further cross interrogatories cannot be filed, but the party must file direct interrogatories and give notice.[82]

d. Sufficiency of Answers. It is sufficient if cross interrogatories are answered according to a reasonable understanding of their object and meaning, and the answers are as full and specific as the interrogatory naturally and fairly interpreted requires,[83] or it will be sufficient if the witness answer by referring to answers to the direct interrogatories.[84]

10. Interpreter. The depositions may be taken in a foreign language and translated when introduced in evidence.[85] If the witness does not understand the English language and the commissioner does and also understands the language of the witness, he may interpret and translate;[86] but where the services of an interpreter are necessary one may be appointed or employed, and be duly sworn to interpret and translate the questions and answers.[87]

Attorney for party.— It is irregular to permit the attorney of the party in whose behalf a deposition is being taken to act as interpreter, but it is not a ground for suppression that the attorney so acted, because he could write English with greater facility than the officer who, himself familiar with both languages after comparing the work, which was done in his presence, assured the witness

11. Objections and Exceptions — a. In General. On an oral examination the officer has no authority to determine the competency of the witness, the propriety of questions or the admissibility of evidence, but must take down the questions and answers,[88] and note the objections and exceptions,[89] for subsequent determination by the court.[90] The examination will not be suspended to procure such a determination,[91] unless the objection is by the witness for cause.[92]

b. Leading Questions. The allowance or refusal to allow answers to leading questions is discretionary with the trial court,[93] which will not reject a deposition because the magistrate declined to take the question and objections thereto,[94] and the refusal to strike out a question as leading will not be disturbed where the answer is not prejudicial.[95]

terms of the agreement are violated or the testimony is immaterial the deposition should not be rejected.[96]

12. Reduction to Writing — a. What Constitutes. A typewritten deposition substantially complies with a statute requiring it to be reduced to writing;[97] but it has been doubted whether a deposition taken in pencil would be sufficient.[98]

b. Taking in Shorthand. A deposition is not objectionable because the testimony was taken in shorthand, if the notes were thereafter transcribed into longhand and read to the witness before their subscription by him.[99] But testimony taken stenographically in the absence of the officer,[1] and not reduced to writing in the presence of the witness,[2] or read to him after its transcription,[3] does not constitute a valid deposition.

Person acting for party or agent.— A person copying a deposition in the absence of a witness at the suggestion of the party or his agent is the attorney of the party within the statute. Moulton v. Hall, 27 Vt. 233.

Partly written by officer.— The part of the testimony which is in the handwriting of the officer may be read. Patterson v. Patterson, 2 Penr. & W. (Pa.) 200.

Copying, supplying omissions.— A statute providing that "no agent or attorney . . . shall write or draw up the deposition of any witness" does not extend to a mere copying and filling up words accidentally omitted, or elliptical forms not affecting the meaning. Moulton v. Hall, 27 Vt. 233.

Caption written by party.— That the caption of the interrogatories is in the handwriting of the party, the answers having been written by the witness, does not indicate such fraud as will vitiate the deposition. Shropshire v. Stevenson, 17 Ga. 622.

But the questions to be propounded may be written by the party or his attorney.[11]

(iv) Person Interested or Related to Party. An interested person or a person related to the party taking the testimony should not be permitted to write out the deposition or the answers of the witness.[12]

d. Presence of Commissioner or Officer. Where the testimony is reduced to writing by the witness, a clerk, or an indifferent person, it must be written down in the presence of the commissioner or officer authorized to take the deposition.[13]

e. Erasures and Interlineations. Erasures or interlineations in a deposition, existing when the commission was returned, will be presumed to have been made with the knowledge of the witness, at the time the testimony was taken.[14]

f. Two or More Witnesses. While it is more regular to take separately the depositions of two or more witnesses, it is not improper to permit them to make a single deposition,[15] and one witness may adopt the answers of the other.[16]

g. Irregularities in Form. Irregularities in preparing a deposition, which are in no wise prejudicial and consist of the failure to incorporate the interrogatories,[17] or to put them down in their order,[18] followed by the answers thereto,[19] or in taking the testimony in the third person,[20] or in narrative form,[21] may Contra.— Fisk v. Tank, 12 Wis. 276, 78 Am. Dec. 737, where the answers were written by the witness in the absence of the commissioner.

Consent to taking by typewriter in absence of examiner.— Where, under equity rule 67, counsel have agreed that the deposition of a witness may be taken down by a typewriter in their presence, at the office of one of them, in the absence of the examiner, but under his constructive direction, if one of the counsel abandons such examination without adequate cause the testimony of the witness will be closed. Ballard v. McCluskey, 52 Fed. 677.

Cross-examination as waiver of objection. — If the adverse party cross-examines, and the informality is not objected to, the deposition may be read. Logan v. Steele, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 230.

14. Wallace v. McElevy, 2 Grant (Pa.) 44.

They will not require the exclusion of the deposition unless there is a reasonable ground to believe that it has been tampered with. Johnston v. Beckham, 3 Grant (Pa.) 267; Ballard v. Perry, 28 Tex. 347.

Interlineations by interested party.— Evidence is admissible to show that the interlineations were made by a party interested. Bunzel v. Maas, 116 Ala. 68, 22 So. 568.

be disregarded. But statements required by the statutes or rules should appear.[22]

13. ANNEXING EXHIBITS — a. Necessity. Books, papers, or documents offered in evidence[23] identified or referred to by the witness, should be annexed to the deposition,[24] and accompany it, with proper reference and identification,[25] or where they cannot be annexed because of their bulk they may be sealed up with the deposition;[26]

22. A deposition should state that the witness is not related, allied, or next of kin to any of the parties to the case, or should state the degree of relationship. Lauzon v. Stuart, 4 L. C. Jur. 126.

The omission of the usual words "y persiste" at the end of a deposition is not fatal. Carden v. Finley, 3 L. C. Jur. 232.

A book containing the entry of a cash payment need not be produced, where parol evidence of that fact is admissible. Keene v. Meade, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 1, 7 L. ed. 581 [affirming 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,373, 3 Cranch C. C. 51].

Letters annexed to a deposition in answer to interrogatories are not thereby made competent evidence, if otherwise incompetent, and not inspected by the party interrogating. Ashley v. Wolcott, 3 Gray (Mass.) 571.

Photograph of instrument.— Introduction of a deposition containing a witness' opinion of the identity of handwriting of an instrument in suit, a photograph of which is annexed to the deposition, is not justified by the facts that the witness is a resident of another state, and that the instrument is on file in a court of the state where the cause is pending. Eborn v. Zimpelman, 47 Tex. 503, 26 Am. Rep. 315.

Merits not affected by failure to annex.— The failure to annex exhibits may be disregarded, where the failure has had no effect on the merits of the case. Tyrell v. Cairo, etc., R. Co., 7 Mo. App. 294.

Admissibility immaterial.— The admissibility or inadmissibility of the instrument at the trial is immaterial. Giles v. Paxson, 36 Fed. 882.

Proof viva voce.— An exhibit referred to in a deposition, and filed with the bill, may be proved viva voce notwithstanding the provision of the statute requiring exhibits to be attached to the depositions, and sealed up, and returned with them. Nicks v. Rector, 4 Ark. 251.

The annexation of a memorandum referred to by the witness is not erroneous. Langham v. Grigsby, 9 Tex. 493.

The failure to annex papers referred to only vitiates so much of the deposition as refers to them. Myers v. Anderson, Wright (Ohio) 513.

United States.— Bird v. Halsy, 87 Fed. 671. See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 157.

Exhibits annexed to deposition in another case.— Where a witness testified that certain exhibits had been already attached to his answers in a deposition taken in another case, "and are hereto again referred to, affirmed, and made part of my foregoing answers in this case," the exhibits were properly received in evidence, although the first depositions were taken in a suit between other parties. Pope v. Anthony, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 298, 68 S. W. 521.

Imperfect reference.— That an account testified to is described as annexed and marked "A," when it is not so marked in fact, is not a valid objection to the deposition, if no other account is annexed. Marvin v. Raigan, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 132.

Identification by commissioner.—No formal certificate of the commissioner is necessary, but it will be sufficient if the indorsements on the exhibits and depositions be made by the same person, and the exhibits are so described and marked by the commissioner that their identity is unmistakably established. Bird v. Halsy, 87 Fed. 671.

Return for identification — Right to examine further.— Where exhibits are not identified and attached to a deposition as required by the instructions, and the deposition is returned for that purpose, the right of the adverse party to further examine as to the identity of such exhibits is waived, if no request therefor is made. U. S. v. Fifty Boxes, etc., of Lace, 92 Fed. 601.

Writings to be proved by two witnesses may be attached to the deposition of one and suitably referred to and identified in the deposition of the other. Mobley v. Leophart, 51 Ala. 587.

26. Shaw v. McGregory, 105 Mass. 96.

Annexation after opening.— A deposition will not be suppressed where the commissioner certified "that the annexed deed of conveyance, hereunto attached, marked 'A,' was shown to the witness, and by him examined, and recognized to be the original deed by him signed and delivered," when in fact and if their identification is clear, for convenience or any other reason, they may be transmitted in a separate package.[27]

b. Originals or Copies. In lieu of the originals copies or transcripts of books or papers testified or referred to may be annexed to or accompany the deposition,[28] especially where the original is in the custody of the law and cannot be procured.[29]

14. Reading to Witness. To constitute a valid deposition the testimony must be read to the witness prior to its subscription by him.[30]

15. Signature of Witness — a. Necessity. The failure of the witness to sign or subscribe his deposition after its reduction to writing requires its rejection.[31] Under some circumstances, however, as where the witness refused to sign,[32] or the witness has been duly sworn, or the commissioner so certifies, the deposition may be admitted although not signed;[33] or the adverse party may waive the signature the deed was marked "A," was inclosed in the package containing the deposition, and was attached to the interrogatories after the deposition had been opened. Humphries v. Dawson, 38 Ala. 199.

An unsigned deposition should be cautiously received, and subordinated to conflicting evidence properly taken. Looker v. Looker, 46 Mich. 68, 8 N. W. 723.

Transcription of shorthand notes.— A statute providing that when depositions are taken in shorthand the writer shall be duly sworn to take the same correctly, and to make correct extension thereof into longhand, and that the notes shall be signed by the witness expressly and permit the deposition to be taken by a stenographer or typewriter, after the witness has been sworn.[34]

b. Sufficiency. It is sufficient if the witness sign by his initials[35] or affix his mark,[36] or if another signs at his instance or in his behalf,[37] at the end or close of all the interrogatories and answers thereto.[38] But unless so required by statute the witness need not sign in the presence of the officer.[39]

c. Identification of Signature. The signature is sufficiently identified by the certificate of the commissioner or officer,[40] or the mark of the witness may be attested by the magistrate's signature as subscribing witness,[41] or the question of identity may be submitted to the jury.[42]

16. Oath to Witness — a. Necessity. Unless otherwise stipulated[43] the failure to affirm or duly administer a sufficient oath to the witness will invalidate his deposition.[44]

Deposition must be completed before it can be subscribed. Hewlett v. Wood, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 227.

Signing answers to direct interrogatories.— In Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Denton, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 284, 68 S. W. 336, the deposition was received, it appearing that the witness having signed his answers to the direct interrogatories, they were sworn to by him before the officer, and the officer's certificate was attached to the interrogatories, and recited that the answers were signed and sworn to before him.

Signing in the wrong place will not necessarily invalidate the deposition. Moss v. Booth, 34 Mo. 316.

Signature at the end of the officer's certificate and above his attestation is sufficient. Read v. Patterson, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 430.

Memorandum below signature.— A memorandum, made by the magistrate below the signature of the witness, that the witness had requested him to change a mistake in a date in the redirect examination, but that the opposite counsel objected, forms a part of the redirect. Sabins v. Jones, 119 Mass. 167.

Signing separate sheets.— An irregularity consisting of the omission to sign each separate sheet may be disregarded where there is no suggestion that the deposition is not full and complete, or that it was not returned in the same condition in which it was taken. Smith v. Groneweg, 40 Minn. 178, 41 N. W. 939.

Signature on loose sheet.— A deposition written out from phonographic notes after its return by the commissioner with a loose sheet bearing the signature of the witness, previously obtained, attached, will be suppressed on the court's own motion. Martin v. U. S., 3 Ct. Cl. 384.

39. Harzburg v. Southern R. Co., 65 S. C. 539, 44 S. E. 75.

Subscription in absence of counsel.—Where it is agreed by counsel that the stenographer's notes be written out, and subscribed by the witness on a subsequent day, the deposition will not be suppressed because of their absence. Clark v. Manhattan R. Co., 102 N. Y. 656, 6 N. E. 111.

40. Sonneborn v. Southern R. Co., 65 S. C. 502, 44 S. E. 77; Darling v. Darling, 8 Ont. Pr. 391.

Depositions authenticated by the seal of the commissioner will be sufficient, although the witnesses failed to sign them. Hodges v. Cobb, L. R. 2 Q. B. 652, 8 B. & S. 583, 36 L. J. Q. B. 265, 16 L. T. Rep. N. S. 792, 15 Wkly. Rep. 1038.

41. State v. Depoister, 21 Nev. 107, 25 Pac. 1000, where it was held to be immaterial that the attestation was written below the jurat.

42. Williams v. Rawlins, 33 Ga. 117, where the signature appeared to be in the handwriting of the commissioner.

43. Shoemake v. Smith, 80 Iowa 655, 45 N. W. 744.

44. Payne v. Long, 121 Ala. 385, 25 So. 780; Bond v. Ward, Wright (Ohio) 747;

b. Form. If the form of the oath to be administered to the witness is prescribed conformity with the requirements is necessary to the validity of the deposition;[45] and when the deposition is taken by commission, the witness must be sworn according to the law of the forum from which the commission issued.[46] It has been held sufficient, however, to administer the oath according to the law of the state where it is taken.[47]

c. By Whom Administered. It is not necessary that the commissioner or commissioners should themselves administer the oath, but the witness may be sworn in their presence by an officer duly authorized to administer oaths,[48] unless by statute it is required that the witness shall be sworn by the commissioners personally.[49]

d. Time of Administration. A requirement that the witness shall be sworn before he is examined should be observed,[50] although in the discretion of the court the deposition may be admitted, if the oath was administered after the testimony

Jones v. Ross, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 143, 1 L. ed. 324; Zehner v. Lehigh Coal, etc., Co., 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 29; Smith v. Cokefair, 1 Pa. Co. Ct. 48; Luther v. The Merritt Hunt, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,610, Newb. Adm. 4.

Declaration by witness.— A statute requiring answers to interrogatories to be verified by the affidavit of the party making them that they are true is not satisfied by subjoining thereto by a notary public over his hand and seal the words "subscribed and sworn to before me," etc., there being no declaration by the person making the answers. Averill v. Boyles, 52 Iowa 672, 3 N. W. 731.

Date of jurat.— A jurat dated some days later than the date fixed for taking the deposition will not vitiate it. Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, 77 Ill. App. 603.

Cautioning witness.— A statute requiring the witness to be "carefully examined, cautioned, and sworn" renders it necessary that the witness should be cautioned as well as sworn. Luther v. The Merritt Hunt, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,610, Newb. Adm. 4. Where a deposition is taken on commission without the state, he need not be cautioned, but it will be sufficient if he is sworn according to law. Crowther v. Lloyd, 31 N. J. L. 395.

Swearing appointees to office.— An act prescribing that if any person whose name is inserted in a commission of dedimus potestatem shall not make return of the oaths administered by him to appointees to office, within a prescribed time, he shall forfeit, etc., does not apply to persons not named in the dedimus. Bell v. Dole, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 173.

An oath more comprehensive than the statute requires is not objectionable. Ballance v. Underhill, 4 Ill. 453.

In Wisconsin the rules require the commissioner to certify "that the witnesses were duly sworn or affirmed before giving their evidence." Bacon v. Bacon, 33 Wis. 147.

In the courts of the United States, in taking depositions de bene esse, the witness must be sworn to testify the whole truth on the entire subject and not as to each interrogatory. Wilson Sewing Mach. Co. v. Jackson, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,853, 1 Hughes 295.

47. Vail v. Nickerson, 6 Mass. 262.

Following state statute.—In taking a deposition de bene esse for use in the federal courts the requirements of the state statute may be followed. Wilson Sewing Mach. Co. v. Jackson, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,853, 1 Hughes 295.

48. Glover v. Millings, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 28; Ander v. Ross, 2 Harr. (Del.) 276; Vaughan v. Blanchard, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 192, 1 L. ed. 344. See Lincoln v. Battelle, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 475.

It will be presumed in the absence of anything to the contrary that the oath was administered in the presence of the commissioners (Vaughan v. Blanchard, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 192, 1 L. ed. 344) by a duly qualified officer (Glover v. Millings, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 28).

49. Perry v. Thompson, 16 N. J. L. 72.

Inability to administer oath.— Depositions taken under commission will be received, although the oaths to the witnesses were not administered by the commissioners, if it appears that the commissioners were prohibited by the law from administering them, and the oaths were in fact administered by local authority. Lincoln v. Battelle, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 475.

Deposition in shorthand.— Under the Iowa statute the witness need not swear to the translation of his testimony taken in shorthand by a shorthand writer duly sworn. Slocum v. Brown, 105 Iowa 209, 74 N. W. 936.

Effect of stipulation.— Where the witness is sworn before testifying as required by statute, his deposition will not be suppressed for non-compliance with a stipulation that he shall be sworn to the deposition after it has been given and transcribed. Knapp v. American Hand-Sewed Shoe Co., 63 Kan. 698, 66 Pac. 996.

was taken;[51] and it has been held to be unimportant whether a witness is sworn before or after his deposition is reduced to writing.[52]

XVIII. THE RETURN.

A. In General. All the papers which properly constitute the return must be transmitted or delivered in due form to the court in which the deposition is intended to be used or to its clerk,[53] within the time prescribed;[54] and they must show that the deposition was taken or the commission executed, and the mode or manner of the taking or execution so as to leave nothing to conjecture.[55] But the omission to return immaterial matters may be disregarded,[56] as may unnecessary papers, memoranda, or statements.[57]

B. Form and Requisites — 1. In General.[58] The return should be sufficient

51. Wight v. Stiles, 29 Me. 164; Wurzburg v. Andrews, 28 Nova Scotia 387.

52. Barron v. Pettes, 18 Vt. 385; Tooker v. Thompson, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,097, 3 McLean 92. See Donovan v. Hibbler, (Nebr. 1902) 92 N. W. 637.

53. Edleman v. Byers, 75 Ill. 367.

Commission and interrogatories must be returned with the deposition to show that it was taken by the proper person and in a proper manner. Woods v. Clark, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 35.

Failure of an examiner to sign a deposition is a mere irregularity (Stephens v. Wanklin, 19 Beav. 585), and when he has died before affixing his signature, the deposition may be filed and read (Felthouse v. Bailey, 14 Wkly. Rep. 827; Bryson v. Warwick, etc., Canal Co., 1 Wkly. Rep. 124).

Return by one of two commissioners.— Where a commission issued to two commissioners for the examination of witnesses, and some evidence was taken before both, one may return the commission, and is not bound to wait an indefinite time for the examination of other witnesses. Burpee v. Carvill, 16 N. Brunsw. 141.

Where proper stamps could not be affixed to a deposition taken abroad, they may be supplied after the return. Chitty v. East India Co., 2 Cox Ch. 190, 30 Eng. Reprint 87.

Additional time for mailing.— In England where depositions are taken in the country, in addition to the time prescribed, such additional time as may be necessary for mailing is allowed. Ex p. Henderson, Coop. 227, 35 Eng. Reprint 540.

A return delayed by accidental circumstances may be received. Townsend v. Lowe, Cox Ch. 410, 29 Eng. Reprint 1225.

Extension of time.— The court cannot extend the time prescribed by the commission. Hall v. De Tastet, 6 Madd. 269.

55. Bailis v. Cochran, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 417; Scott v. Horn, 9 Pa. St. 407.

Deposition taken by commissioner.— It is sufficiently shown that a deposition was taken by a commissioner where it appears from its caption that it was taken before him at his office, and from the jurat that it was sworn to and subscribed before him. Bailey v. Wiggins, 1 Houst. (Del.) 299.

Pursuant to commission.— It is sufficient to state that the deposition was taken pursuant to the commission. King v. King, 28 Ala. 315.

Several commissioners.— Under a rule providing that should any commissioner appointed to take testimony fail to attend for that purpose after notification the other commissioners may proceed to execute the same, the return to a commission issued to several persons must show that all were present, or were notified of the time and place of executing it. Mair v. January, 4 Minn. 239.

What may be considered.— The commission, interrogatories, caption of the answers, and certificate may be looked at together to ascertain if the commissioner performed his duty, and a defect in one part of the return may be supplied by another part. King v. King, 28 Ala. 315.

56. The commissioner need not note a request of counsel to be present and a refusal of the request. Harper v. Young, 17 Phila. (Pa.) 109.

57. Interrogatories not signed by counsel or filed in the clerk's office or served on the opposite party, returned with a deposition taken de bene esse on commission, will be treated as mere memoranda made by or for the commissioner, and may be disregarded. Dill v. Camp, 22 Ala. 249.

Extra-official statement.— The certificate of the magistrate that a party made no objection is extra-official. Hall v. Houghton, 37 Me. 411.

as to form and should comply with the requirements of rules and statutes in relation thereto.[59]

2. Indorsement of Return on Commission.[60] A statutory requirement that the commissioner shall indorse his return on the commission is substantially complied with by an indorsement on any part of the commission,[61] or where it is securely attached thereto on the deposition,[62] the interrogatories,[63] or on a separate paper attached with the depositions to the commission.[64]

C. Caption — Certificate — 1. In General.[65] Unless a caption is dispensed with by statute[66] or a certificate is waived or its necessity obviated by the act of the parties,[67] there should be a caption to the deposition,[68] which should also be

59. Creamer v. Jackson, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 413.

A deposition returned mutilated, several pages being missing, cannot be received. Dangerfield v. Thruston, 8 Mart. N. S. (La.) 232.

Answers in foreign language.— Where interrogatories annexed to a commission to be executed abroad are in English, a return of the answers in the language of the foreign country, annexed to a translation of the questions into such language, is not objectionable. Kuhtman v. Brown, 4 Rich. (S. C.) 479.

Contingencies entitling deposition to be used.— The deposition need not recite the contingencies on which it is to be used. Johnson v. Fowler, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 521.

Date — Presumption.—Depositions, although dated a day after the date of the execution of a warrant of resurvey in an ejectment suit, will, if returned with the plats, be considered prima facie as having been taken on the survey. Steuart v. Mason, 3 Harr. & J. (Md.) 507.

Reference to order for taking.— An objection that a deposition is not expressed to be taken under a rule of court is not tenable when it is attached to a certified copy of the rule of court under which it was taken. Vincent v. Huff, 8 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 381.

Setting out questions.— Although properly the deposition should set out the questions, an omission in that respect is immaterial. Read v. Patterson, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 430.

That the answers are on a separate sheet attached to interrogatories, but not at the end of each one is immaterial, if the whole is above the signature of the commissioner. Street v. Andrews, 115 N. C. 417, 20 S. E. 450.

Form of indorsement on return see Homer v. Martin, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 156.

61. A rule requiring the commissioner to indorse on the commission the time and place of executing it is not complied with by a certificate as to those facts annexed to the deposition. Beatty v. Ambs, 11 Minn. 331, which fails to notice Tyson v. Kane, 3 Minn. 287, which is directly to the contrary.

On second leaf.— The return is properly indorsed on the commission, where it appears on the second leaf of the same sheet of that paper. Tyson v. Kane, 3 Minn. 287.

The indorsement should be on the back of the commission and not on the envelope inclosing it. Philips v. Philips, 4 Jur. 599.

62. In Hall v. Barton, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 274, it was held sufficient to write the return on the deposition which was securely fastened to the commission, in such a manner that the return could not be separated from the evidence.

63. McCleary v. Edwards, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 239.

64. Cook v. Bell, 18 Mich. 387; Pendell v. Coon, 20 N. Y. 134. But see contra, Fleming v. Hollenback, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 271, holding that the statute was not complied with by a return made on a separate paper annexed to the commission. However the later New York cases declined to follow this holding.

65. Forms of caption to deposition see Eaton v. Peck, 26 Mich. 57; Currier v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 31 N. H. 209; Street v. Andrews, 115 N. C. 417, 20 S. E. 450; Nye v. Spalding, 11 Vt. 501.

Failure to properly object.— The omission of a certificate is waived by the failure to interpose a proper objection at the trial. Darby v. Heagerty, 2 Ida. (Hasb.) 282, 13 Pac. 85.

68. Statutory requirements as to the caption need not be precisely followed. Bates v. Maeck, 31 Vt. 456. But see contra, Sanders v. Howe, 1 D. Chipm. (Vt.) 363.

Incorporation with certificate.— The capauthenticated by the certificate of the officer before whom it was taken,[69] conforming to all statutory requirements and rules of court substantially at least.[70]

2. Several Depositions. A separate certificate need not be annexed to each deposition; but a single certificate will suffice for several.[71]

3. Time of Making. The caption or the certificate may be drawn up or executed a reasonable time after the examination.[72]

4. Conclusiveness. The certificate and the caption thereto are prima facie evition may be incorporated with the certificate. Hauxhurst v. Hovey, 26 Vt. 544.

Erroneous designation of court.— Where there is no doubt as to the commissioner's authority, an erroneous statement as to the court out of which the commission issued may be disregarded, where other recitals in the caption, and the commission correctly designate the court. Henderson v. Cargill, 31 Miss. 367.

In Texas the authentication of the testimony on the examination into a criminal charge requires no special form of certificate. Kerry v. State, 17 Tex. App. 178, 50 Am. Rep. 122; Gregg v. State, (App. 1889) 12 S. W. 732; Clark v. State, 28 Tex. App. 189, 12 S. W. 729, 19 Am. St. Rep. 817.

Under federal judiciary act.— A magistrate who takes a deposition under the federal judiciary act must certify all the facts necessary to permit the introduction of the deposition as evidence. Jones v. Knowles, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,474, 1 Cranch C. C. 523. It should plainly appear from the certificate that the requirements of the statute have been complied with, and presumptions will not be indulged to supply defects in the taking. Bell v. Morrison, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 351, 7 L. ed. 174.

Appointment of clerk.—A certificate by the commissioners that they administered the oath to a person named "the clerk we are going to employ" sufficiently shows that they appointed a clerk and swore him. Keene v. Meade, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 1, 7 L. ed. 581 [reversing 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,373, 3 Cranch C. C. 51].

Deposition on commission.— The requirements of the statute need not be precisely followed where the deposition is taken under a commission. Bates v. Maeck, 31 Vt. 456.

Opinion of commissioner.— A certificate otherwise good is not affected by appending thereto the commissioner's opinion as to the sufficiency of the proof. Lee v. Burke, 10 La. 534.

Place of certificate.—The certificate is sufficient if it appears at the end of all the interrogatories and answers. Westcott v. Allston, 1 Del. Ch. 74.

Revenue stamps.— The absence of revenue stamps from the certificate of a notary will not invalidate the deposition. Magic Packing Co. v. Stone-Ordean-Wells Co., 158 Ind. 538, 64 N. E. 11.

Stipulation.—If a deposition is taken in accordance with a stipulation, the failure to certify as required by statute is immaterial. Knight v. Emmons, 4 Mich. 554.

The making of two certificates will not invalidate the deposition if the requisites of the statute are complied with. Currier v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 31 N. H. 209.

The return may be made part of the certificate by reference thereto. Dean v. Millard, 1 R. I. 283.

What law governs.— Depositions taken in other states must be certified according to their laws; but in the absence of proof of what these laws are the certificate will be judged of by the laws of the state where they are to be used. Coopwood v. Foster, 12 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 718.

72. Lee v. Burke, 10 La. 534; Sayre v. Sayre, 14 N. J. L. 487.

The omission to date the certificate may be disregarded (Dill v. Camp, 22 Ala. 249), where it is shown by another certificate appended (Elgin v. Hill, 27 Cal. 372), or by the time that the witness subscribed and swore to the deposition (Tyson v. Kane, 3 Minn. 287).

dence of the facts therein stated,[73] and have been held conclusive as to the cause of taking the deposition,[74] or as to the facts required by law to be stated.[75] On the other hand it has been held that they are not conclusive, but may be impeached or controverted,[76] especially where the officer certifies to facts not required to be stated.[77] But a statement as to who reduced the testimony to writing cannot be controverted by a person unacquainted with the handwriting of the officer or the witness;[78] nor can the genuineness of the certificate be determined by a comparison of handwriting.[79]

5. Who May Certify. The return to a commission authorizing a specified number of the commissioners to act must be certified by that number at least.[80] But the certificate cannot be made by a justice who has gone out of office since taking the deposition[81] although it may be by a justice having no authority to take depositions, where the testimony is taken by stipulation.[82] A deputy clerk having authority may certify in his own name,[83] and it is immaterial that the body of the certificate was written by the party procuring the testimony.[84]

6. Identification of Cause — a. In General. The cause in which the deposition was taken should be identified, by correctly settting forth the court in which it is pending, and the names of the parties.[85]

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 168.

Use of deposition in other suit.— The certificate is insufficient to render the statements of the witness made in the deposition admissible in another suit. Ross v. Cobb, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 463.

Authority of officer.— The superior court has power to make a rule that when a deposition is taken and certified by any person purporting to be an officer authorized by the commission to take the deposition, "if it shall be objected that the person so taking and certifying the same was not such officer, the burden of proof shall be on the party so objecting." McKinney v. Wilson, 133 Mass. 131.

Distance of witness' residence.— A certificate of the distance which the witness lived from the place of trial is not conclusive. Carter v. Beals, 44 N. H. 408.

Testimony on information and belief is insufficient to overcome a certificate of the officer that he was not an attorney of either party or otherwise interested in the case. Wagstaff v. Challiss, 31 Kan. 212, 1 Pac. 631.

77. Consent of parties.— As that the deposition was taken by consent of the parties. Clarke v. Goode, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 637; Johnson v. Rankin, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 86; Gillespie v. Gillespie, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 89.

The depositions should be properly entitled. Pritchard v. Foulkes, 4 Jur. 1006, 10 L. J. Ch. 17, 5 Myl. & C. 301, 41 Eng. Reprint 385 [affirming 2 Beav. 133]; Campbell v. Dickens, 9 L. J. Exch. Eq. 33, 3 Y. & C. Exch. 720; O'Hara v. Creagh, 2 Ir. Eq. 419.

Where the venue of an action is changed intermediate the issue of a commission and its execution, the papers should be entitled

b. Sufficiency. The cause is sufficiently identified by indicating the court in which it is pending and naming the parties litigant in the caption or certificate, or by otherwise therein suitably referring to it;[86] but omissions in this particular or imperfect or erroneous statements therein may be disregarded if the cause is sufficiently identified elsewhere in the return.[87] The parties may be designated by the initial letters of their given names,[88] or a middle name or initial thereof may be omitted.[89] So misnomer of the parties will not invalidate the deposition, where the mistake is apparent or is corrected by other parts of the return or is not misleading,[90] and if there is no uncertainty as to the cause in which the deposition was taken its imperfect or incorrect designation is immaterial.[91]

7. Nature or Character of Action. Although sometimes required,[92] it is not generally necessary to state the nature or character of the action.[93]

8. Time and Place of Using. There must be a substantial compliance with a requirement that the caption shall designate the tribunal where the cause is to be in the court out of which the commission issued. Helm v. Shackleford, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 390.

86. Knight v. Nichols, 34 Me. 208; Henderson v. Cargill, 31 Miss. 367.

Actions similarly entitled.— A certificate that the witness was sworn in a pending action, naming the parties thereto, is sufficient to permit it to be read in an action bearing that title, although another action similarly entitled is pending in the same court. Hall v. Silloway, 3 Allen (Mass.) 358.

All the parties need not be named (Egbert v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 7 Fed. 47, 2 McCrary 386, where the caption named the first plaintiff and defendant, adding to their names the word and abbreviation et al.); but the deposition may be read against those named (Jones v. Pitcher, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 135, 24 Am. Dec. 716). Merely naming one plaintiff and one defendant and adding to each the words "and others" is sufficient. Lincoln v. Wright, 4 Beav. 166, 10 L. J. Ch. 331.

Dismissal as to parties.— The name of a party who has been dismissed from the suit may be omitted in the title to depositions taken after the dismissal. Prince Albert v. Strange, 2 De G. & Sm. 652.

Reference to commission.— A recital that the deposition was taken "in compliance with the annexed commission" is insufficient. Slaughter v. Rivenbark, 35 Tex. 68; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Royal, (Tex. Civ. App. 1893) 23 S. W. 316.

Revived action.— A title applicable to the suit as originally brought or as revived is sufficient. Jones v. Smith, 6 Jur. 1078, 12 L. J. Ch. 432, 2 Y. & Coll. 42, 21 Eng. Ch. 42. See Brydges v. Branfil, 11 L. J. Ch. 12, 12 Sim. 334, 35 Eng. Ch. 283.

Attaching deposition to rule for taking.— Attaching a deposition to a certified copy of a rule of court under which it was taken sufficiently identifies the cause in which it was taken. Vincent v. Huff, 8 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 381.

A variance between the title of the deposition and that of the cause may be disregarded where the cause in which the depositions were taken is clearly identified. Harford v. Rees, 9 Hare (App.) lxviii, lxx, 41 Eng. Ch. lxviii, lxx.

tried, or to which the deposition is returnable,[94] or the time and place of the trial or session of the court.[95]

94. Plimpton v. Somerset, 42 Vt. 35; Pike v. Blake, 8 Vt. 400; Sanders v. Howe, 1 D. Chipm. (Vt.) 363.

Clerical error.— Although there is a clerical error in the name of the court to which a deposition is returnable, it may in the discretion of the court be admitted. State v. Kimball, 50 Me. 409.

Location of court.— A caption naming the city and county in which the court in which the deposition is to be used is situated, but naming no state, is sufficient if it describes plaintiff as a resident of the same city and county and names the state. Spaulding v. Robbins, 42 Vt. 90.

Presumption.— Where a deposition taken within any county in the state is by its caption returnable before the court at a time and place appointed by law within such county, it will not be presumed that such deposition is or may be returnable before the court in any other county and state. Kidder v. Blaisdell, 45 Me. 461.

95. Plimpton v. Somerset, 42 Vt. 35; Pike v. Blake, 8 Vt. 400. See McCrillis v. McCrillis, 38 Vt. 135.

Adjourned term.— A statement that the deposition is to be used at a court to be held on a day specified which is the first day of an adjourned term is sufficient. Martin v. Farnham, 25 N. H. 195.

Deposition taken pending trial.— Such a statement is unnecessary where the deposition is taken pending the trial in pursuance of a stipulation. Bates v. Maeck, 31 Vt. 456.

Court "next to be holden," etc.— A statement that the deposition is to be used at a court "next to be holden," etc., sufficiently designates the time and place of trial. Churchill v. Briggs, 24 Vt. 498; Clark v. Brown, 15 Vt. 658.

Term of court intervening.— It is no objection to a deposition that a term of the court intervenes between the time of taking and the term of court at which it is stated in the caption it is taken to be used. Gallup v. Spencer, 19 Vt. 327, where the caption of a deposition stated that it was taken to be used at the term "next to be holden on the first Tuesday of May next," and the last word "next" was rejected as surplusage and the deposition received.

Where the disposition is to be used in the county court it is sufficient to designate the county in which it is to be used and the time of holding the session. Chandler v. Spear, 22 Vt. 388.

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 173.

Conclusiveness of the certificate as to the cause of taking see supra, XVIII, C, 4.

Sufficiency.— Statements in the caption that the witness resides beyond the jurisdiction of the court (McCrillis v. McCrillis, 38 Vt. 135), that he appears to reside more than one hundred miles from the place of taking (Banks v. Miller, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 963, 1 Cranch C. C. 543), that he resides at a place which is known in fact to be more than that distance (Egbert v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 7 Fed. 47, 2 McCrary 386), or a statement of the residence in the body of the deposition, although omitted in the certificate (Houghton v. Slack, 10 Vt. 520) sufficiently show that the cause of taking is non-residence within the jurisdiction, or a residence which authorizes the deposition to be taken.

Time of existence of cause.— A certificate of the residence of the witness at a prescribed distance from the place of caption means at the time of caption. Mattocks v. Bellamy, 8 Vt. 463. The cause of caption is sufficiently set forth, if the magistrate certifies that the deposition is taken for the purpose of being used at the trial, if any of the grounds upon which it may be admitted, pursuant to the provisions of statute, shall then exist. Dole v. Erskine, 37 N. H. 316.

Pursuant to notice.— It is sufficient to state that the deposition was taken pursuant to an annexed notice, which states the reasons for taking it. Henderson v. Williams, 57 S. C. 1, 35 S. E. 261; Bulwinkle v. Cramer, 30 S. C. 153, 8 S. E. 689.

Where the deposition was taken without objection, it is immaterial that the reason assigned for taking it was insufficient. Cook v. Blair, 50 Iowa 128.

But it is insufficient to state the presence of the witness at a place more than the prescribed distance from the place of trial, without further stating that he lives there (Barron v. Pettes, 18 Vt. 385) or that the witness is in feeble health (Lund v. Dawes, 41 Vt. 370) or about to leave the state (Robbins v. Lincoln, 12 Wis. 1), without adding that he will be unable to attend the trial.

The clerical omission of a jurisdictional word in the statement cannot be supplied by the court (Dunkle v. Worcester, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,162, 5 Biss. 102), nor by intendment or the body of the deposition (Barron v. Pettes, 18 Vt. 385).

Oral proof at the trial is insufficient. Chase v. Garretson, (N. J. Sup. 1891) 22 statement in that respect is unnecessary and if made it may be disregarded, or treated as surplusage.[97]

10. On Whose Behalf Taken. It must appear in the caption that the deposition was taken at the request of one of the parties to the suit in which it is to be used.[98]

11. Authority and Qualification of Officer — a. In General. The certificate must identify the person[99] by whom the deposition was taken as the commissioner or officer authorized or qualified to act and show him to be the person intended,[1] and that he acted within his jurisdiction.[2]

b. Interest or Bias. If not required by statute or rule the certificate need not state that the commissioner or officer is not of kin or related to the parties or their counsel, or is not of counsel or interested in the cause.[3] But if such requirements exist the certificate must contain such a statement.[4]

H. 316, where it is said that the act of Dec. 26, 1848, so far as it relates to depositions de bene esse, repeals chapter 188, section 20, of the Revised Statutes, which requires the cause of caption to be certified.

Request of "plaintiff."— It is sufficient to state that the deposition was taken at the request of plaintiff, if his name appears in the caption of the action. Harrison v. Nichols, 31 Vt. 709.

Request of firm.— Where plaintiffs sue in their firm-name it is proper to state that the deposition was taken at the request of the firm, so styling it. Carr v. Manahan, 44 Vt. 246.

It is sufficient if the notice shows on whose behalf the deposition was taken, although the caption does not. Read v. Patterson, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 430.

99. But the official character of the officer need not be stated in the caption or the certificate (Hayes v. Frey, 54 Wis. 503, 11 N. W. 695), if it appears by his signature (Read v. Patterson, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 430), or a recital in the certificate (Moore v. Willard, 30 S. C. 615, 9 S. E. 273).

Acting pursuant to commission.— A certificate of a person that he acted pursuant to the commission which was issued to him by the designation of an office held by him is evidence of his identity, as the officer to whom the commission was directed. Brown v. Luehrs, 79 Ill. 575.

Addition to his signature of his official title by a commissioner who has certified that the deposition was taken pursuant to the commission will be regarded as verba persona merely. Griffin v. Isbell, 17 Ala. 184; Hobart v. Jones, 5 Wash. 385, 31 Pac. 879.

Clerk's certificate signed by deputy.— A certificate reciting that the witness appeared before the clerk who signed by his deputy shows that the deposition was taken by the deputy. Allen v. Hoxey, 37 Tex. 320. A certificate purporting to have been taken before the clerk and signed in the clerk's name by a deputy is to be construed as the certificate of the clerk. Trout v. Williams, 29 Ind. 18.

Proof by magistrate's clerk.— Where the examining magistrate is necessarily absent in the discharge of his duties, proof by the clerk of the court to which the deposition was returned that he was present when the deposition was taken, that it was written down by the magistrate, and that the deposition returned to his office and offered in evidence is in the proper handwriting of the magistrate, is sufficient. State v. Valentine, 29 N. C. 225.

2. Payne v. Briggs, 8 Nebr. 75.

Supplying omission by caption.— The omission of a justice to designate in his certificate the state of his jurisdiction may be supplied by the caption. Atkinson v. Starbuck, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 353.

3. Moore v. Booker, 4 N. D. 543, 62 N. W. 607; Looper v. Bell, 1 Head (Tenn.) 373; Blair v. State Bank, 11 Humphr. (Tenn.) 84; Giles v. Paxson, 36 Fed. 882; Miller v. Young, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,596, 2 Cranch C. C. 53; Peyton v. Veitch, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,057, 2 Cranch C. C. 123.

The Tennessee act of 1801, requiring such a statement by justices of the peace, refers exclusively to depositions taken in equity. Looper v. Bell, 1 Head (Tenn.) 373.

4. Bickley v. Bickley, 136 Ala. 548, 34 So. 946; Boykin v. Smith, 65 Ala. 294; Wilson v. Smith, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 379; Carter v. Ewing, 1 Tenn. Ch. 212; American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Spokane Falls First Nat. Bank, 82 Fed. 961, 27 C. C. A. 274; Gartside Coal Co. v. Maxwell, 20 Fed. 187; Donahue v. Roberts, 19 Fed. 863.

Sufficiency.— It is enough to certify that the commissioner is not of counsel or next of kin to either party. He need not state "that he is not of counsel or of kin to any one or either of the parties to the cause" in which the depositions were taken. Bickley v. Bickley, 136 Ala. 548, 34 So. 946.

Deposition taken in shorthand by disinterested person.— An incomplete statement is

c. Qualification by Oath. In the absence of proof to the contrary it will be presumed that the commissioner duly qualified by oath.[5] Likewise the authority of the officer to administer the oath to him may be presumed from the officer's signature,[6] or shown aliunde.[7] So, although it has been held that the name of the officer who administered the oath and the time and place of its administration should appear,[8] the weight of authority is to the effect that the certificate of the commissioners that they qualified is sufficient evidence of that fact and of the authority of the officer to administer the oath to them.[9]

12. Notice to Adverse Party. The fact that due notice of the taking of the deposition or execution of the commission was given to the adverse party or others entitled thereto must appear by the certificate,[10] or by annexing thereto the notice or a copy thereof with due proof of service,[11] or sufficient reasons must be assigned for not giving notice.[12] However, the omission to state the reason is not sufficient cause to suppress the deposition, where it appears that by consent the testimony was taken in shorthand by a disinterested person. Stewart v. Townsend, 41 Fed. 121.

Impeaching certificate.— A certificate that the officer was not an attorney for either party or otherwise interested cannot be overcome by testimony on information and belief. Wagstaff v. Challiss, 31 Kan. 212, 1 Pac. 631.

General statement that notice was given is insufficient. Gittings v. Hall, 1 Harr. & J. (Md.) 14, 2 Am. Dec. 502; Weems v. Disney, 4 Harr. & M. (Md.) 156; Johnson v. Kraner, 2 Harr. & M. (Md.) 243. But see Brown v. King, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 173.

Proof aliunde.— The return need not show the fact of notice which may be proved by affidavit. Doane v. Farrow, 9 Mart. (La.) 222.

Distance of residence from place of taking. — The distance of the places of residence of a party or his attorney from that at which a deposition is taken need not be certified. Voce v. Lawrence, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,979, 4 McLean 203.

If the certificate state facts which dispense with notice it need not state further that notice was not given because of the existence of those facts. Dinsmore v. Maroney, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,920, 4 Blatchf. 416.

Inability to ascertain interested person.— Under a statute requiring notice of the perpetuation of testimony to be given by the judges to persons within the county whom they know to be interested, or if without the county to the attorney, if any, a certificate by the judges that they did not know any person interested nor their attorney in the county is sufficient. Myers v. Anderson, Wright (Ohio) 513.

Judicial notice.— The court cannot judicially take notice of any facts, as a reason for omitting to notify the party, which do not appear from the certificate. Hopkinson v. Watson, 17 Vt. 91; Chipman v. Tuttle, 1 D. Chipm. (Vt.) 179.

Right to notice dependent on residence.— The federal judiciary act requires notice to the adverse party or his attorney, as either may be nearer, if either is within one hundred miles of the place of caption, and under this provision it has been held sufficient to state that neither of them lived within one hundred miles of such place (Dick v. Runnels, 5 How. (U. S.) 7, 12 L. ed. 26) or that the witness lived more than one hundred miles from the place of trial, and that the adverse party had no agent known to the commissioner within one hundred miles of the place of caption (Tooker v. Thompson, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,097, 3 McLean 92).

To controvert the certificate.— Proof may be given that the party did in fact reside not fatal, but the party offering the deposition may show that notice was unnecessary.[13]

13. Time and Place of Taking — a. Necessity. Although there are a few cases to the contrary,[14] it is the general rule that the certificate or caption must state the time and place of taking the deposition,[15] or that it was taken at the time and place designated by the notice or commission.[16]

b. Sufficiency. The certificate will be sufficient if it states that the deposition was taken pursuant or agreeably to notice or to the commission, or employs language importing that fact, where the commission or notice indicates the time and place;[17] or where, although not explicitly set forth in the body of the certificate, the time and place can be ascertained by reasonable construction thereof,[18] by reference to its date,[19] to the caption,[20] or to other parts of the return;[21] and where it appears that the deposition was taken on the day named in the notice of taking, it will be presumed in the absence of anything to the contrary, that it was taken between the hours therein named.[22]

Clerical error.— Where the caption states that a deposition was taken under a dedimus which issued over ten months later, the statement may be treated as a clerical error, corrected by a statement in the certificate showing that it was taken less than two months after the issue of the commission. Presumption.— A return showing that the deposition was taken on the day, at the place, and by the person designated, authorizes a presumption that the commission was properly executed. Street v. Andrews, 115 N. C. 417, 20 S. E. 450.

Statement of time and place of using.— Where it appears from the deposition and the commissioner's authentication that it was taken at the place provided, the fact that the name of the state and county at which it is to be used appears at the commencement, as though it might have been taken there, is immaterial. Locke v. Tuttle, 41 Mich. 407, 1 N. W. 1039.

c. Adjournments.[23] The failure of the certificate to show the adjournments is a non-prejudicial irregularity, where there is no surprise nor any injury sustained.[24]

14. Presence of Party or Counsel. The certificate must comply with statutory provisions requiring the officer to certify as to the presence of the parties or either of them, or the presence of persons representing them as attorneys, or agents,[25] as where neither party is permitted to be present in the absence of the other, on propounding written interrogatories;[26] or to certify that the adverse party being present he did or did not object.[27]

15. Appearance and Identification of Witness. The caption or certificate should name the witness,[28] recite his appearance,[29] and sufficiently identify him as the person intended to be examined,[30] either by stating the personal knowledge of the officer or that his identity was proven.[31]

23. Form of adjournment indorsed on return see Moore v. Willard, 30 S. C. 615, 9 S. E. 273.

25. Madison, etc., R. Co. v. Whitesel, 11 Ind. 55; Thieband v. Sebastian, 10 Ind. 454.

Necessity of indicating whether party or attorney present.—If a party was present the certificate should show whether he was present in person or by attorney. Hopkins v. Myers, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 39. A statement that a party to the action had not appeared "in person or by attorney" is sufficient. Hay v. State, 58 Ind. 337.

"Party," included his attorney.— A statement that a party was not present means that he was not present either in person or by attorney. Hopkins v. Myers, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 39.

Clerical omission.— A caption stating that "the adverse party was duly notified to attend and was not" (omitting the word present) will be taken to mean that the adverse party was not present. Kidder v. Blaisdell, 45 Me. 461.

26. See Iowa Code, § 4704.

Certificate silent.— It will be presumed that neither party was present where the certificate is silent and there is no showing to the contrary. Turner v. Hardin, 80 Iowa 691, 45 N. W. 758.

Reduction to writing by third person.— A recital that the deposition was reduced to writing by a person other than the officer does not show the presence of a party or his agent. Cook v. Gilchrist, 82 Iowa 277, 48 N. W. 84.

27. Wells v. Jackson Iron Mfg. Co., 47 N. H. 235, 90 Am. Dec. 575.

Sufficiency.— A certificate that "the adverse party was present and did not object to the taking" sufficiently complies with a statute requiring the magistrate to certify that the adverse party "did or did not object." Carter v. Beals, 44 N. H. 408.

28. Amick v. Holman, 71 Mo. 445; Lund v. Dawes, 41 Vt. 370.

Designating the witness by his christian name only is not defective. Braley v. Braley, 16 N. H. 426.

Misnomer of the witness in the caption will not vitiate the deposition, where it appears that the answers were those of the witness certified. Cain v. Loeb, 26 La. Ann. 616.

Reference to deposition.— If the witnesses are named in the depositions it will be sufficient to refer to them as "the above-named deponents" (Prather v. Pritchard, 26 Ind. 65) or to certify that "the foregoing depositions" were taken (Shepherd v. Snodgrass, 47 W. Va. 79, 34 S. E. 879).

29. A certificate that the witness "personally made oath" before the officer sufficiently shows that the witness personally appeared. Streeter v. Evans, 44 Vt. 27. See Clark v. Ellis, 9 Oreg. 128.

30. Emberson v. McKenna, (Tex. App. 1890) 16 S. W. 419.

Sufficiency.— It will be sufficient if it appears that a person of the same name as the witness whose deposition was to be taken was taken at the place of his indicated residence, and that he appeared before the officer and subscribed and swore to the deposition. Giles v. Paxson, 36 Fed. 882.

Initial of middle name.— The deposition is admissible, although the certificate indicates the middle name of the witness by an initial letter (Curtiss v. Martin, 20 Ill. 557) or omits it (Reeder v. Holcomb, 105 Mass. 93).

Business or profession of witness.—A deposition stating that the witness is a boy sixteen years of age, living with his brother on a place in the mountains, contains a sufficient designation of deponent's business or profession. People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301, 17 Pac. 214.

Presumption.— It will not be presumed that commissioners examined the wrong witness, although they fail to return expressly that the one examined was the one named in the commission. Flournoy v. Jeffersonville First Nat. Bank, 79 Ga. 810, 2 S. E. 547.

Where the answers show that they were written by the witness, and the certificate states that they were taken by virtue of the commission, he is sufficiently identified. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Denton, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 284, 68 S. W. 336.

31. Buford v. Gould, 35 Ala. 265; Farrelly v. Maria Louisa, 34 Ala. 284. See Stetson v. Lyons, 34 Ala. 140; Roberts v. Fleming, 31 Ala. 683.

Presumption.—As it will be presumed that the officer did his duty, and nothing to the contrary appears, the omission to state that he personally knew the witness will not vitiate the deposition. Lauve's Succession, 6 La. Ann. 530.

16. EMPLOYMENT OF INTERPRETER. The employment of an interpreter and the necessity therefor must be certified.[32]

17. REDUCTION TO WRITING. The commissioner or officer must certify that the testimony of the witness was reduced to writing by himself, the witness, or some disinterested person;[33] although if the required statement is not made, in the absence of suspicious circumstances, it will be presumed that the officer properly performed his duty.[34] If the deposition was not reduced to writing by the officer his certificate must show that it was written in his presence;[35] and it is sometimes required that the certificate should also show that the testimony was written down in the presence of the witness.[36] These statements are unnec-

32. Amory v. Fellowes, 5 Mass. 219, also holding that the omission of such a certification cannot be supplied by an affidavit of the commissioner subsequently made.

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 182.

A false certificate as to the person by whom the deposition was reduced to writing will render the deposition inadmissible. U. S. v. Smith, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,332, Brunn. Col. Cas. 82, 4 Day (Conn.) 121.

Clerical mistake.— A statement that the "deponent" was reduced to writing is an immaterial error. Payne v. West, 99 Ind. 390.

Omission of statement.—The court has discretion to admit a deposition, although it omits to state by whom it was written. State v. Kimball, 50 Me. 409.

Testimony in shorthand.— Where it is provided that a deposition taken down by a stenographer, and written out in longhand, and certified as being a correct statement of the testimony and proceedings, shall be prima facie evidence thereof, a certificate that the "foregoing is a correct transcript of the examination in the above-entitled case" is sufficient. People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 98, 16 Pac. 544.

Transcription into typewriting.— A certificate that the testimony was reduced to writing and thereafter transcribed into typewriting from the direct dictation of the officer sufficiently shows that the typewriter wrote what was dictated, and thus reduced the deposition to writing. Minard v. Stillman, 35 Oreg. 259, 57 Pac. 1022.

Handwriting unlike that of officer.— The mere fact that the handwriting in the body of the deposition does not appear to be that of the justice, without some proof to rebut the presumption of regularity arising from the certificate, is insufficient to exclude it. Piper v. White, 56 Pa. St. 90.

The burden of proof is on the party objecting. Imboden v. Richardson, 15 La. Ann. 534.

Cas. 152, 4 Wash. 215; Rainer v. Haynes, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,536, Hempst. 689.

Reduction by third person.— A deposition will not be suppressed because the notary's certificate recites that it was reduced to writing by another person in the officer's presence, unless it is shown that such person was a party, or the agent or attorney of a party. Cook v. Gilchrist, 82 Iowa 277, 48 N. W. 84.

Subscription in officer's presence.— A certificate that the deposition was reduced to writing by a person named and subscribed by the witness in the presence of the officer shows that it was written in his presence. Bobilya v. Priddy, 68 Ohio St. 373, 67 N. E. 736.

If the certificate is silent on the subject it will be presumed that the deposition was written in the presence of the officer, where it was taken in the presence of the adverse party who cross-examined. Winton v. Little, 94 Pa. St. 64.

Clerical omission.— A certificate that the deposition "was reduced to writing in my, and by the said deponent sworn to and subscribed in my presence" (Stone v. Stillwell, 23 Ark. 444) or that it was reduced to writing by a person named and subscribed by the witness "in my presence" (Bobilya v. Priddy, 68 Ohio St. 373, 67 N. E. 736) is sufficient.

It may be proven aliunde that the deposition was written in the presence of the magistrate. Vasse v. Smith, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,896, 2 Cranch C. C. 31.

Effect of certificate.—A commissioner's certificate that depositions were taken in his presence is evidence that everything on their face was done in his presence. Bowman v. Flowers, 2 Mart. N. S. (La.) 267.

essary, however, where there is no requirement of their incorporation in the certificate.[37]

18. Reading to Witness. Except where not so required by statute or otherwise,[38] it should affirmatively appear by the certificate that the deposition was read over to or by the witness and an opportunity afforded him to correct it before signing.[39]

19. Signing by Witness. Where the officer is required to certify that the deposition was signed or subscribed by the witness,[40] in his presence or under his supervision,[41] the omission of such a certification will require the rejection of the erts, 19 Fed. 863. But see Van Ness v. Heineke, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,866, 2 Cranch C. C. 259; Vasse v. Smith, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,896, 2 Cranch C. C. 31, in which such a statement was held unnecessary.

Written as given by witness.—Where the certificate states that the deposition was written by the officer as it came from the witness, an additional statement that it was written in the witness' presence is unnecessary. Timms v. Wayne, 1 Handy (Ohio) 400, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 204. It is sufficient to state that the answers were reduced to writing as nearly as possible in the words of the witness (Boykin v. Smith, 65 Ala. 294), or that the witness "testified as set down" (Gulf City Ins. Co. v. Stephens, 51 Ala. 121).

Literal compliance with the statute see Vaughn v. Smith, 58 Iowa 553, 12 N. W. 604.

Substantial compliance with the statute is sufficient. Beckett v. Gridley, 67 Minn. 37, 69 N. W. 622; Sheldon v. Wood, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 267.

Correction as requested.— A certificate that depositions were corrected as requested by the witnesses is sufficient. Higgins v. Wortell, 18 Cal. 330.

Omission cured by cross-examination.—The omission of such a statement will not invalidate the deposition, where both parties appeared and examined the witness. Lockhart v. Mackie, 2 Nev. 294.

Supplying omission.— The party offering the deposition will be afforded an opportunity of showing that the testimony was read to the witness in fact. Faith v. Ulster, etc., R. Co., 70 N. Y. App. Div. 303, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 420, 10 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 449.

By mark.— A certificate that the witness signed "by making his mark and sign" is sufficient. Neill v. Cody, 26 Tex. 286.

Deposition signed in fact.— The deposition is admissible, although the act of signing is not certified, if the certificate states that "the witness, being sworn, deposeth and saith that the answers as written out to the foregoing interrogatories and cross interrogatories are correct and true," and the deposition is in fact signed by the witness. Henderson v. Cargill, 31 Miss. 367.

"Signed interrogatories."— A certificate that the witness signed the interrogatories will be construed to mean that he signed the answers thereto. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Gillum, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 31 S. W. 356 [affirming (Civ. App. 1895) 30 S. W. 697].

Subscription by interpreter.— A certificate that "the examination was subscribed by the sworn interpreter" is immaterial, and not ground for suppressing the deposition, where the certificate shows that the interpreter was sworn, and the deposition is in fact subscribed by him. U. S. v. Fifty Boxes, etc., of Lace, 92 Fed. 601.

A general statement of subscription is sufficient. Beal v. Brandt, 7 La. 583. See also Bobilya v. Priddy, 68 Ohio St. 373, 67 N. E. 736.

deposition. But if not required such a statement is unnecessary and may be disregarded.[42]

20. Administration of Oath to Witness — a. Necessity. The certificate or the caption must affirmatively show that the witness was sworn or affirmed and that the affirmation or oath administered was in the form prescribed by statute or sufficient in law.[43]

b. Sufficiency. It has been held sufficient to certify generally that the witness was sworn,[44] or affirmed according to law,[45] duly sworn,[46] or that he

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 187.

Conformity to statute.— A certificate by the officer that the witness came before him, and being first duly sworn made the following answers, etc., adding, "Sworn to and subscribed before me this first day," etc.; "In testimony," etc., is in strict conformity with the statute. Dikes v. De Cordova, 17 Tex. 618. To same effect see Gregg v. State, (Tex. App. 1889) 12 S. W. 732; Clark v. State, 28 Tex. App. 189, 12 S. W. 729, 19 Am. St. Rep. 817.

Swore to interrogatories.— A certificate that deponent swore to the attached interrogatories will be construed to mean that he swore to the answers to them. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Gillum, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 31 S. W. 356 [affirming (Civ. App. 1895) 30 S. W. 697].

Sworn and examined.— A statement that the witness was "sworn and examined" justifies a presumption that the commissioner swore the witness by virtue of the commission returned. King v. King, 28 Ala. 315.

45. Atkinson v. St. Croix Mfg. Co., 24 Me. 171; Horne v. Haverhill, 113 Mass. 344.

Conscientious scruples as to oath.— A certificate stating the affirmation of the witness and that the witness was conscientiously scrupulous of taking an oath is sufficient evidence of that fact. Elliot v. Hayman, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,388, 2 Cranch C. C. 678.

qualified,[47] and in the case of several witnesses that each separately and severally made solemn oath.[48] Likewise it has been held sufficient to state that the witness was sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.[49] So it will be sufficient if it appears by reference or from the deposition that a suitable oath was administered,[50] or that there was a substantial compliance with the terms of the statute;[51] and to show that the oath was publicly administered as required by the commission it is sufficient to state that the oath was administered as prescribed by that writ.[52]

c. By Whom Administered. The certificate or caption should state that the oath was administered by the officer before whom the deposition was taken,[53] or in his presence, by an officer qualified to administer oaths.[54]

d. Time of Administration. The time when the witness was sworn, that is, whether before or at the close of his examination should be stated.[55]

"By virtue of commission."— A certificate that the witness was sworn by virtue of the commission authorizes a presumption that the oath was administered by the commissioners. Bolte v. Van Rooten, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 130.

"In due form of law."— A certificate that the witness was sworn before the commissioner "in due form of law" is sufficient. Neill v. Cody, 26 Tex. 286.

Presumption.— A certificate stating that the witness was "carefully examined and cautioned and sworn to speak the whole truth" authorizes the inference that he was sworn by the officer. Edmondson v. Barrell, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,284, 2 Cranch C. C. 228.

Reference to prior certificate.— Where it is certified to the first deposition that the witness was duly sworn by the commissioner, it is sufficient to certify to the depositions following that the witnesses were "duly sworn as before mentioned." Cooper v. Stinson, 5 Minn. 201.

54. Where the certificate shows that the oath was administered to the witness by a justice of the peace, it will be presumed to have been in the presence of the commissioners. Vaughan v. Blanchard, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 192, 1 L. ed. 344.

Sufficiency.— If no technical form of certificate is required it will be sufficient if it shows that the answers of the witness were made under oath in the presence of the officer taking the deposition. Ballard v. Perry, 28 Tex. 347.

Certificate of officer administering oath.— A justice of the peace who administers the oath in the presence of the officer need not certify to that fact. Vaughan v. Blanchard, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 192, 1 L. ed. 344.

Instances — Sufficiency.— It has been held sufficient to state that the witness was "first sworn" (Ferriber v. Latting, 9 La. Ann. 169; Lewis v. Soper, 44 Me. 72; Dennison v. Benner, 41 Me. 332; Palmer v. Fogg, 35 Me. 368, 58 Am. Dec. 708), "as above set forth," where the deposition states that the witness was "first sworn" (Timms v. Wayne, 1 Handy (Ohio) 400, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 204); or, "was duly sworn before giving his evidence (Bowman v. Van Kuren,

21. Cautioning Witness. Where it is required that the witness be cautioned before his examination, the certificate must show that the statute was complied with in this respect.[56]

22. Compliance With Commission or Notice. The certificate should state the manner of taking the deposition, that it was taken in pursuance of the commission or other authority, and that all the statutory essentials have been substantially complied with,[57] and will be sufficient if it appears that all the requirements of law, instructions, or directions have been duly observed.[58]

23. Signature, Seal, and Authentication — a. Signature. The deposition must be authenticated or the certificate signed by the commissioner or officer before whom the deposition was taken.[59]

Before and after testifying.— It is no objection that the officer does not certify that the witnesses were sworn as well after as before testifying. Donovan v. Hibbler, (Nebr. 1902) 92 N. W. 637.

The omission of the statement, where the deposition is taken out of the state, will not require its rejection, where by statute the court is vested with discretion to admit it. Freeland v. Prince, 41 Me. 105; Burt v. Allen, 103 Mass. 41.

Reference to notice.— Where a justice certified that the witness was sworn and examined at the place specified in the notice, on the day and between certain hours, specified in the notice which was attached, it is sufficient evidence that the witness was sworn before he was examined, there being no evidence to the contrary. Sample v. Robb, 16 Pa. St. 305.

56. Phelps v. Panama, 1 Wash. Terr. 615; Garrett v. Woodward, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,253, 2 Cranch C. C. 190; Luther v. The Merritt Hunt, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,610, Newb. Adm. 4; Pentleton v. Forbes, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 10,966, 1 Cranch C. C. 507. Contra, Burley v. Kitchell, 20 N. J. L. 305.

The omission to certify that the witness was cautioned is immaterial where it is stated that witness was "sworn in pursuance of the act" (Moore v. Nelson, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,771, 3 McLean 383), was "duly examined and solemnly affirmed" (Brown v. Piatt, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,026, 2 Cranch C. C. 253), or was "carefully examined and cautioned," etc. (Edmondson v. Barrell, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,284, 2 Cranch C. C. 228).

Several caption and certificate.— The certificate of the oath administered to the deponent and the caption must be severally signed by the magistrate before whom the deposition is taken. Shed v. Leslie, 22 Vt. 498.

Several depositions.— It is sufficient if the commissioner authenticate several depositions by a single signature. Boston v. Bradley, 4 Harr. (Del.) 524.

Signature by acting commissioners.— The depositions need only be signed by the commissioners who acted. Brydges v. Branfil, 11 L. J. Ch. 12, 12 Sim. 334, 35 Eng. Ch. 283.

Signature of a caption containing a certificate to the oath of the witness and another to the taxation of costs will be sufficient, where it is apparent that the signature was intended to apply to both. Jackson v. Barron, 37 N. H. 494.

Signature on cover of return.— A commission and return will be received, although the signatures of the commissioners appear only on the cover inclosing it. State v. Levy, 3 Harr. & M. (Md.) 591.

Signature to combined caption and certificate.— A deposition is admissible where the

b. Seal — (i) Necessity. Where a commission directs a return under seal,[60] or it is required that the certificate of the officer shall be authenticated by his seal,[61] an omission of the seal will preclude the reading of the deposition, unless his authority or official character is otherwise proved or authenticated.[62] But if a seal is not required by statute, or the commission issued to the commissioners as such, and not as officials, none need be affixed.[63]

(ii) Sufficiency. An impression on the paper,[64] the word "seal,"[65] or the abbreviations "L. S." will be sufficient;[66] as will the seal of a consular agent;[67] so a deputy may affix the clerk's seal;[68] and the return will be received, although the seal is misplaced.[69] Again a proper seal will be presumed to have been affixed where the officer so certifies;[70] and the omission of a seal will be regarded as an informality which by statute may be disregarded.[71]

D. Authority of Commissioner or Officer[72] — 1. Necessity of Proof. Unless where a person is specially directed by name,[73] agreed on by the parties,[74] or is a commissioner, appointed by state authority to act generally in another state,[75] his official character or authority to take the deposition or execute the commission must be apparent or be established by competent proof.[76]

A certificate of the clerk of a foreign court sealed with the seal of the court is a sufficient authentication of the officer's authority to administer oaths and take depositions. Levitt v. Levitt, 2 Hem. & M. 626.

The seal of the county, affixed by its clerk, is a sufficient authentication of the magistrate's certificate, with extrinsic evidence of its genuineness. Dunlap v. Waldo, 6 N. H. 450.

In Louisiana the official character of the officer must be shown by the attestation of the governor under the great seal of the state (Wardwell v. Sterne, 22 La. Ann. 28; Grant's Succession, 14 La. Ann. 795; Thatcher v. Goff, 13 La. 360). The certificate of the county clerk is not sufficient (McDonald v. Wells, 23 La. Ann. 189; Yeatman v. Erwin, 5 La. 264; Barfield v. Hewlett, 4 La. 118). Where there is no internal

E. Inclosing and Sealing — 1. In General. The commission, notice, interrogatories, answers, and all other papers constituting the return must be inclosed in a suitable wrapper or envelope,[79] and securely sealed.[80] But compliance with these formalities is unnecessary, where the commissioner personally delivers the papers to the clerk.[81]

2. Attaching Papers Returned. The papers returned should be attached or fastened together;[82] but there are decisions directly holding that the omission to attach or connect the papers returned may be disregarded where the formalities respecting inclosure, sealing, and superscription have been complied with.[83]

F. Indorsement and Superscription — 1. In General. Statutory requirements as to the indorsement or superscription of the return must be complied with; but a substantial compliance will ordinarily be sufficient.[84] evidence that the certificate of the officer was ever seen by the governor, the officer's capacity is not shown. Barelli v. Lytle, 4 La. Ann. 557; Edmondson v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 13 La. 282.

Time of authentication.— The official character of the notary may be authenticated at any time before the deposition is read. Scott v. Bassett, 186 Ill. 98, 57 N. E. 835.

Where there are two commissioners the seals of both should appear. Waln v. Freedland, 2 Miles (Pa.) 161.

Sufficiency of sealing.— Securing the flap of the envelope with gum is a sufficient sealing. Morgan v. Jones, 44 Conn. 225; Van Sickle v. Gibson, 40 Mich. 170.

The seal of an express company may be used by the commissioners when they write their names across it. In re Thomas, 35 Fed. 337.

Presumption as to seal.— Where the envelope is properly directed and sealed up it will be presumed that the seal is that of the commissioner who took the deposition. Doe v. Hughes, 18 N. Brunsw. 296.

Evidence of sealing.— It is sufficient evidence that the deposition was sealed up by the magistrate if the envelope is sealed and the name of the magistrate is written across the seal, although he certify only that he "intended" to seal it up. Thorp v. Orr, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 14,006, 2 Cranch C. C. 335.

Failure to seal.— A deposition will not be rejected because not inclosed in a sealed envelope, where the magistrate who took it properly certifies and identifies it. Cowell v. State, 16 Tex. App. 57.

Non-compliance with rule.— The failure to inclose the papers in a packet bound with tape, and sealed at the crossings of the tape, as required by chancery rule 52, §§ 5, 6, is a mere irregularity, which will be deemed immaterial, in the absence of any suspicion that the deposition has been tampered with, or that wrong has been done. Chadwick v. Chadwick, 59 Mich. 87, 26 N. W. 288.

Commissioner clerk of the court.— It is not a good objection that a deposition taken by a commissioner who is also clerk of the court was not sealed up. Nelson v. Woodruff, 1 Black (U. S.) 156, 17 L. ed. 97.

Necessity of certificate.— The officer need not certify that he closed and directed the return. Moran v. Green, 21 N. J. L. 562.

81. Hutson v. Hutson, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 354.

82. Gage v. Brown, 125 Ill. 522, 17 N. E. 754, where the depositions were pinned together, and the pins had evidently been removed one or more times.

Use of wafers.— It is sufficient to connect the papers by wafers. Gordon v. Nelson, 16 La. 321; Williams v. Eldridge, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 249.

Answers not attached to commission.— Answers to interrogatories, so designated, will be received, although not attached to the commission, if they are returned with it in the same package, indorsed as the depositions of the persons whose testimony was to be taken. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Walker, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 60 S. W. 796.

84. Babb v. Aldrich, 45 Kan. 218, 25 Pac. 558.

The caption need not appear on the wrapper inclosing the deposition, but may be on a separate paper. Nye v. Spalding, 11 Vt. 501.

Inclosing indorsed envelope.— An envelope properly indorsed may be returned in an envelope merely containing the direction. Evans v. Reynolds, 32 Ohio St. 163; Barber v. Geer, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 63 S. W. 1007.

Indorsed envelope furnished by attorney.— The officer may use an envelope prepared by the attorneys and in doing so he adopts the indorsements and superscription. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. St. Clair, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 345, 51 S. W. 666.

2. TITLE OF CAUSE — NAMES OF PARTIES. When so required the names of the parties or title of the cause should be properly indorsed,[85] but it will be sufficient if they substantially appear, although informally,[86] and omissions in this respect may in the discretion of the court be supplied by the officer.[87] However, such an indorsement is unnecessary if not required by statute,[88] or where the statute is merely directory.[89]

3. NAMES OF WITNESSES. The indorsement of the names of the witnesses is a mere matter of practice, and convenience and errors therein or even its omission may be disregarded especially where the witnesses are properly designated in the papers returned.[90]

4. NAME OF OFFICER. A substantial compliance with provisions that the officer or commissioner shall indorse his name on the envelope or wrapper or write it across the seal thereon is necessary.[91] However, where there is no suspicion of unfairness, if the name of the commissioner is written on the envelope, although not across the seals, it will be sufficient.[92]

5. ADDRESS OR DIRECTION. Regularly the return should be addressed or directed in accordance with the instructions to the court in which the deposition is to be used, or to the clerk thereof;[93] but a misdirection will not require the exclusion of United States.— In re Thomas, 35 Fed. 337.

Indorsement by magistrate to whom delivered.— Where an inclosed return which has not been indorsed is delivered to the magistrate in open court, he may as authorized by statute indorse thereon the name of the person from whom it is received and the time of its reception. Keys v. Flemister, 111 Ga. 874, 36 S. E. 948.

Indorsement on inner envelope.— If the officer's name is written across the seals of the envelope inclosing the return, it will be sufficient, although the outside envelope in which that envelope and its contents are inclosed is not so indorsed. Barber v. Geer, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 63 S. W. 934.

Where there are several commissioners, each should indorse his name on the envelope (Brown v. Southworth, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 351; Waln v. Freedland, 2 Miles (Pa.) 161), although a deposition undoubtedly genuine may be read, where but one commissioner signs (Brown v. Southworth, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 351).

The form of the direction is immaterial, if the package reaches its destination, and the manner of the return is provided for by a stipulation which has been complied with. Williams v. Eldridge, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 249.

Address to the court.— Depositions sealed up and indorsed "in the supreme court," with the title of the cause, the date and the commissioner's name, are sufficiently addressed to the court. Waterhouse v. New Brunswick Mar. Assur. Co., 5 N. Brunsw. 639.

Delivery to clerk.— It is no objection to a commission returned by stipulation to one of the counsel, and by him delivered to the clerk of the court, that the clerk's residence was not indorsed on the commission pursuant to statute. Williams v. Eldridge, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 249.

Necessity of certificate.—The commissioner need not certify that he directed the return. Moran v. Green, 21 N. J. L. 562.

the deposition where the return has reached the proper officer or tribunal, and no prejudice has or will result.[94]

G. Exhibits. Exhibits admitted in evidence or refused admission should be returned,[95] attached to or inclosed with the commission or deposition,[96] and properly identified.[97]

H. Transmission or Delivery — 1. In General. In some jurisdictions after depositions are taken the officer must retain them in his possession until they are delivered or transmitted by him;[98] and requirements of this character or requirements or instructions as to the transmission of the deposition must as a rule be strictly complied with.[99] But irregularities in transmission may be

The Missouri statute requiring exhibits proved or referred to to be inclosed, sealed up, and directed to the clerk is mandatory. Crane Co. v. Neel, (Mo. App. 1903) 77 S. W. 766.

A copy of a receipt, the original of which was produced for examination, should be inclosed with the commission. Hauenstein v. Gillespie, 73 Miss. 742, 19 So. 673, 55 Am. St. Rep. 569.

Failure to return.— If there is clear evidence to identify papers as those referred to in the depositions taken by the commissioners they may be received in evidence, although not returned with the depositions. Thompson v. Reed, 10 N. Brunsw. 7.

96. Edelman v. Byers, 75 Ill. 367; Thompson v. Reed, 10 N. Brunsw. 7.

Originals or copies.— There may be exceptions where the document cannot by law be removed from its place of custody; in such case an office copy or an examined copy should be returned with the commission. Thompson v. Reed, 10 N. Brunsw. 7.

Exhibits which are properly identified may be used, although not attached to the deposition. Black v. Webber, (Nebr. 1901) 96 N. W. 606; Lawton v. Tarratt, 9 N. Brunsw. 1.

Withdrawing deposition to attach exhibit. —A deposition may be withdrawn before trial for the purpose of attaching an exhibit which was not returned under seal. Crane Co. v. Neel, (Mo. App. 1903) 77 S. W. 766.

97. It will be presumed that a commission is in the same state in which it came from the commissioners, and that the exhibits inclosed are those referred to in the depositions. Lawton v. Tarratt, 9 N. Brunsw. 1.

Necessity of certificate of annexation.— When the execution of notes is proved by a commission, it is not essential, the notes being otherwise clearly described and identified, that the commissioners should distinctly certify in their return that the notes produced on the examination and sworn to by the witnesses were annexed to and returned with the commission. Brumskill v. James, 11 N. Y. 294.

The mere proof of the handwriting of one of the commissioners upon a paper purporting to have been referred to in the depositions is not sufficient evidence of identity. Thompson v. Reed, 10 N. Brunsw. 7.

98. Jones v. Neale, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,483, 1 Hughes 268; Shankwiker v. Reading, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,704, 4 McLean 240.

Presumption.— It will be presumed that commissioners have done their duty in keeping depositions until they were forwarded, unless the contrary appears. Glover v. Millings, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 28.

Immediate transmission.— Unless so required a deposition need not be immediately transmitted. Ukiah Bank v. Mohr, 130 Cal. 268, 62 Pac. 511.

Return by mail or express.— Retention need not be shown where the return is made by mail or express under the seal of the officer. Bulwinkle v. Cramer, 30 S. C. 153, 8 S. E. 689; Stewart v. Townsend, 41 Fed. 121.

A substantial compliance with the statute will be sufficient. Garner v. Cleveland, 35 Tex. 74.

To clerk of court in which action is pending.— A statute requiring delivery or transmission by the officer to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending is complied with by transmission to the clerk of the court in which the action originated, and delivery by him to the clerk of the court in which the trial was ordered. Waterman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 82 Wis. 613, 52 N. W. 247.

Time of return.— Where a party is likely to be prejudiced from the late return of a deposition, the proper practice is to interpose a motion for continuance over the term, or waived;[1] and if the return is erroneously transmitted to a party or counsel if no prejudice has resulted the irregularity may be disregarded.[2]

2. PERSONAL DELIVERY — a. By Officer. The return may be delivered by the officer before whom the deposition was taken.[3]

b. By Party. While it has been held that a return delivered by the party on whose behalf the deposition was taken, or by his attorney is irregular and improper,[4] it has also been held that a return delivered under such circumstances is not objectionable, if it is in the condition in which it left the hands of the commissioner or officer, and due proof of that fact is made.[5]

c. By Special Messenger. The return may be delivered by a private person or a special messenger who received it from the commissioner for that purpose.[6]

3. MAILING — a. In General. The most usual and convenient mode of transmitting the return is by mailing it properly directed, and this mode may be resorted to unless other methods are specifically required.[7]

b. Proof of. In some jurisdictions by statute proof of transmission by mail must appear by the certificate or receipt of the postmaster at the place of mail-for delay until preparation for trial can be made. Marsh v. French, 82 Ill. App. 76.

Day set for trial.— A deposition will not be suppressed because not returned until the day set for trial. Marsh v. French, 82 Ill. App. 76.

Presumption of regularity.— It will be presumed that commissioners performed their duty in forwarding depositions. Glover v. Millings. 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 28.

Proof.—The reception of a commission executed abroad must be proved by affidavit. Bourdillon v. Alleyne, 4 Bro. Ch. 100, 29 Eng. Reprint 799.

6. Dill v. Camp, 22 Ala. 249, holding that it is not incumbent on the party offering the deposition to prove that the messenger was disinterested.

A third person by whom the return was received from the person to whom it was delivered by the officer is not a competent messenger. Sayre v. Sayre, 14 N. J. L. 487.

Under the former English practice, where depositions were taken in the country, the answer was sealed up and taken to the court by one of the commissioners, or was sent by a messenger who swore he received it from one of the commissioners, and that it had not been opened nor altered since he received it. 3 Blackstone Comm. 447.

Proof of unchanged condition.— Where the return is intrusted for delivery to an express company, compliance with a statute requiring that the agent to whom the return is delivered by the commissioner must show that it had not been opened nor altered since its receipt is indispensable. Dwinelle v. Howland, 1 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 87.

Substantial compliance with a directory statute prescribing the mode in which the return may be transmitted by mail will be sufficient. Garner v. Cleveland, 35 Tex. 74.

Indirect mailing.— It is immaterial that foreign depositions, directed to be addressed to the clerk and returned by mail, were forwarded through the embassy bag by mail to Washington, and thence to the clerk, to ing,[8] and by an indorsement of the fact of its reception at the point of its destination by the postmaster there,[9] otherwise the deposition cannot be read. Notwithstanding such statutes[10] the commissioner may prove the fact of mailing himself,[11] or where the commission has been executed abroad,[12] the course pursued may be shown by extrinsic proof.[13]

c. Presumptions. Where the depositions are received by mail, and there is no evidence of irregularity, it will be presumed that the commissioner or officer duly deposited them in the proper post-office, although no indorsement or certificate to that effect appears.[14]

I. Filing or Recording[15]— 1. Necessity. Depositions when taken and completed should be returned to the court in which they are to be used, placed on its files, or recorded as required by law;[16] and neither the commissioners nor the par-whom they were properly addressed, instead of being forwarded direct. U. S. v. Fifty Boxes, etc., of Lace, 92 Fed. 601.

Receipt by deputy clerk.— That a deputy clerk instead of the clerk himself received the returns from the postmaster is no cause for suppressing it. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Chaffin, 84 Ga. 519, 11 S. E. 891.

Depositions used in argument before the court become part of the case and must be filed. Rogers v. Gilmore, 13 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 193.

Presumption as to shorthand notes.—If the record does not show affirmatively that the shorthand reporters' original notes were not filed with the transcript, it will be presumed in favor of the judgment that they were. People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301, 17 Pac. 214.

ties have the right to retain them.[17] If they are improperly retained, the party having them in possession may be compelled to produce, file, or record them.[18] Under some circumstances, however, the failure to file a deposition will not render it inadmissible, as where its filing is not required by rule or statute,[19] or the failure to file it was due to the inadvertence of the judge by whom it was received, or the neglect of the clerk with whom it was deposited.[20] And in a proper case a rule of court requiring depositions to be filed may be relaxed or disregarded.[21]

2. TIME OF. The depositions must be filed or recorded within the time prescribed by statute or rule,[22] or if no time is prescribed they must be filed a reason-

Failure to file — Death of witness.— The right to use a deposition in the lifetime of the witness which is lost by the failure to file it is not revived by his death. Folan v. Lary, 65 Me. 11.

If papers referred to in depositions in perpetuam are not recorded, those parts of the depositions which refer to the papers will be rejected, and the papers themselves received as independent evidence. Myers v. Anderson, Wright (Ohio) 513.

Right to require filing.— Where a will contest has been compromised and depositions taken therein are left by consent with counsel, their filing will not be ordered at the instance of a party who accepted the benefits, but took no part in the contest. Pepper's Estate, 3 Pa. Dist. 175, 34 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 65.

Production on trial.— A party who has taken a deposition which the law does not require to be filed in court is not obliged to produce it at the request of the other party on the trial, notwithstanding the opposite party appeared when it was taken and cross-examined the deponent, and although it has been filed with the clerk of the court by the party taking it. Wait v. Brewster, 31 Vt. 516.

A party who has taken depositions by consent will not be compelled to produce them at the instance of the other party where the consent does not appear of record. Moore v. Dulany, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,758, 1 Cranch C. C. 341.

Costs.—On granting an application to compel a party on whose behalf depositions were taken to file them, the moving party may be required to pay the costs of taking (Martin v. Dearie, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 186), unless where original papers desired by the applicant have been attached to the depositions (Johnston v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 5 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 360).

20. Moran v. Green, 21 N. J. L. 562.

Neglect of clerk.— Where depositions have been regularly taken and delivered to the clerk in proper time to be filed, and it is discovered after the case has been opened that the depositions have not been filed, although in the clerk's office, they may be read. Cravens v. Harrison, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 92. Where the clerk has neglected to file a deposition, the party offering it may prove the return of the commission executed to the clerk of the court from whence it is sued, and its transmission by the latter to the clerk of the court in which the action was then pending. Gee v. Bolton, 17 Wis. 604.

21. Phelps v. Hunt, 40 Conn. 97.

Depositions in another cause.— The rule requiring depositions taken in another cause to be filed before they are read may be dispensed with when the ends of justice require it. Cabanne v. Walker, 31 Mo. 274.

able time before they are to be used.[23] However, where the failure to file depositions within the time prescribed is due to inadvertence, accident, or mistake of the officer or the party the court may direct them to be filed[24] nunc pro tunc,[25] or may permit the deposition to be read.[26]

3. INDORSEMENT OR FILE-MARK. The absence of an indorsement or file-mark will not preclude the reading of a deposition, where it sufficiently appears or is shown that it was filed in fact.[27]

4. NOTICE OF. Where so required notice of the filing of a deposition should be duly given,[28] although it is held that the only effect of the omission is to per-

Repeal of statute.— That a deposition was not filed within the time prescribed by a statute in force at the time of taking, but repealed before the trial, is no ground for its rejection. Armstrong v. Griswold, 28 Vt. 376.

Abolition of term to which deposition returnable.— Where depositions when taken were to be returned to a term which was afterward abolished, and its business transferred to a subsequent term, they may be opened and filed at such subsequent term. Palmer v. Fogg, 35 Me. 368, 58 Am. Dec. 708.

In Vermont under a statute requiring a deposition to be filed thirty days previous to the session of the court in which it is to be offered, it need not be filed thirty days before the next session after it is taken when a term intervenes between the times of taking and of using the testimony (Clark v. Brown, 15 Vt. 658), and an ex parte deposition filed less than thirty days before the term may be used at the next term (Smith v. Woods, 3 Vt. 485).

Ex parte depositions are not required to be filed thirty days before the hearing, as in the case of trials in the county court. Churchill v. Briggs, 24 Vt. 498; Brigham v. Abbott, 21 Vt. 455.

Computation of time.— A provision that "every deposition intended to be read in evidence on the trial must be filed at least one day before the day of trial" requires that one entire day shall elapse between the day of filing and the day of trial. Garvin v. Jennerson, 20 Kan. 371. A requirement of filing within sixty days after taking is complied with by filing the deposition on the sixtieth day. Myers v. Anderson, Wright (Ohio) 513.

Excusing failure to file.— The trial court may permit an explanation as to why the deposition was not filed in time. Faith v. Ulster, etc., R. Co., 70 N. Y. App. Div. 303, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 420, 10 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 449.

Effect of denying motion to record.— Where a motion to have a deposition in perpetuam recorded after the prescribed time is denied, it has no validity and a subsequent recording without authority will not render it admissible. Simpson v. Dix, 131 Mass. 179.

Right of adverse party to continuance.— If not filed one day previous to the day the cause is set for trial the adverse party is entitled to a continuance. Dare v. McNutt, 1 Ind. 148, Smith (Ind.) 30.

23. Morgan v. Jones, 44 Conn. 225; Livingston v. Pratt, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,417, Brown Adm. 66.

What constitutes a reasonable time depends on the attendant circumstances. Morgan v. Jones, 44 Conn. 225, where a deposition retained for ten months by a foreign commissioner and sent to the clerk on the day the trial began was admitted, it appearing that the deposition was intact and that no one was prejudiced by the delay.

Depositions filed after a continuance taken because of their absence from the files may be read under a rule requiring filing within a reasonable time. Ankrim v. Sturges, 9 Pa. St. 275.

Second day of term.— A deposition may be filed on the second day of the term, although taken several months before. Doty v. Strong, 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 313, 40 Am. Dec. 773.

Jury impaneled.— It is too late to file depositions after the jury has been impaneled. Kentucky Union Co. v. Lovely, 110 Ky. 295, 61 S. W. 272, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1742.

Testimony closed.— Depositions taken by plaintiff may be filed after the testimony for defendant has been closed. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Bell, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 579, 58 S. W. 614.

The receipt or filing of the deposition may be shown by the certificate of the justice who received it (Hildreth v. Overseers of Poor, 13 N. J. L. 5) or the clerk with whom it was filed (Rodn v. Hapgood, 8 Gray (Mass.) 394).

Date of receipt.— An indorsement of the receipt of the deposition and the date of its reception is a sufficient substitute for a file-mark. Hogendobler v. Lyon, 12 Kan. 276; Stone v. Crow, 2 S. D. 525, 51 N. W. 335.

28. Ewing v. Alcorn, 40 Pa. St. 492.

Neglect of clerk.— Where the parties are without fault, the neglect of the clerk to give notice will not deprive them of the right to mit the adverse party to make such objections at the trial as he could have made on a motion to suppress.[29]

5. Withdrawal From Files. Ordinarily after a deposition has been filed with the clerk it should remain in his custody, except when taken from the files for use at the trial;[30] and its removal for any other purpose or its possession by a party or his counsel after removal will ordinarily necessitate its rejection,[31] or the court may compel the party in possession of the deposition to return it to the files,[32] and punish him as for a contempt if he fails to do so.[33] However this general rule will not affect the right to withdraw a deposition from the files temporarily by permission of the clerk for necessary purposes as inspection or to make copies,[34] or the depositions or accompanying papers may be permitted to be taken from the files for amendment or correction.[35]

Objections untenable.— The failure to give notice is not material, where objections to the deposition would not have availed, had exceptions been taken within the time prescribed. Hagey v. Detweiler, 35 Pa. St. 409.

30. To "remain on record."—Although the statute prescribes that a deposition must be filed in the clerk's office, there to remain "on record," it may be removed therefrom to be used in the case. Moran v. Green, 21 N. J. L. 562.

Refiling.— Depositions withdrawn to be read on the trial must be refiled. Peycke v. Shinn, (Nebr. 1903) 94 N. W. 135.

Death of witness.— A deposition inadmissible in the lifetime of the witness because taken from the files may be used after his death. Maine Stage Co. v. Longley, 14 Me. 444.

Second trial.— Where a deposition may be used in a second trial whether filed or not, it is immaterial that it was withdrawn from the files for use on the first trial, was not used, and was never restored to the files. Bartlett v. Hoyt, 33 N. H. 151.

By agent of party.— In the discretion of the court a deposition opened by mistake by the agent or attorney of the party in whose behalf it was taken may be read. Burrall v. Andrews, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 551; Goff v. Goff, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 475.

By counsel.— In New Hampshire the fact that a deposition was opened by counsel in the cause before it was filed is not a legal objection. Spear v. Richardson, 37 N. H. 23.

By special master.— Depositions taken under order of a special master cannot be opened by him, although they are in his hands as clerk of the court. In re Thomas, 35 Fed. 337.

In vacation.—A commission may be opened by a judge of the court in vacation. Den v. Wood, 10 N. J. L. 62.

Presumption as to opening by judge.— In Ecker v. McAllister, 54 Md. 362, it appeared that the commission, together with the return and the evidence, were received at the clerk's office, in an envelope addressed to the clerk; that papers so addressed were upon receipt at the office opened by the clerk or one of his deputies; that the indorsement of filing on the envelope was in the handwriting of the chief deputy; that neither the clerk nor any of the deputies recollected opening the envelope; and that it was not opened by the judge; and this was held to authorize a presumption that the commission was opened by

2. Opening Out of Court. Unless by consent depositions cannot be opened out of court.[37]

3. Notice of Opening. A deposition cannot be read, where a statutory provision that it shall be opened and passed on by the clerk after a prescribed notice to the parties or their attorneys has not been complied with.[38]

4. Necessity of Order. When not opened by the court they should not be opened by the clerk or any other person except upon a special order.[39]

5. Time of Opening. Unless otherwise expressly provided depositions may be opened at any time after they are received and filed and before trial.[40]

6. Certificate of Opening. The opening of a commission or deposition by a duly authorized officer may be shown by his certificate of that fact;[41] but it is not indispensable if not expressly required by statute.[42]

B. Publication — 1. What Constitutes. The filing and opening of depositions is equivalent to a publication.[43]

2. Exhibition to Adverse Party. Unless so required by statute or an order to publish depositions has been made the party on whose behalf they were taken is

Grounds for obstruction by one party.— A party who has been prevented from examining his witnesses by an order irregularly entered by the adverse party is entitled to an extension. Osgood v. Joslin, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 195.

Evidence of a conversation.—The court refused to open publication in order to obtain evidence of an alleged conversation between a person mentioned in the pleadings and one of the defendants. Malloch v. Pinhey, 1 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 105.

Imputation of laches repelled.— The time for publication will be enlarged after publication has passed, although not in fact made, on good cause shown by affidavit, such as surprise, accident, or other circumstances which repel any imputation of laches. Wood v. Mann, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,953, 2 Sumn. 316.

Interest of witness.— Where the application is made on the ground of the interest of a material witness, the applicant may be permitted to give evidence to establish the fact of interest in the witness, in order that in the event of the cause going to appeal, his evidence should not appear there as the evidence of an unbiased witness. Waterhouse v. Lee, 10 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 176.

To enable answer to cross bill.— The court will enlarge the rule to pass publication in the original cause, until plaintiff puts in an answer to a cross bill filed by defendant. Underhill v. Van Cortlandt, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 500.

laches and no injury or prejudice will result to the opposite party because of the extension sought by the application.[53]

5. Proof After. Exhibits in the cause may be proved after publication, and even viva voce at the hearing, when there has been an omission of the proof in due season, and they are applicable to the merits.[54]

C. Amendment and Correction — 1. In General. Errors of omission, misstatements, or mistakes may ordinarily be corrected by amendment;[55] but jurisdictional defects cannot be cured by parol evidence or amendment at the trial.[56]

2. The Commission. A commission duly issued may be amended by inserting the name or title of the commissioner in a blank address,[57] or correcting a misnomer of one of the parties to the cause,[58] or when omitted, an allowance of the interrogatories and a direction as to the return may be indorsed thereon.[59]

3. Correcting or Explaining Testimony — a. In General. In the discretion of the court a witness may be permitted to explain[60] or correct answers in his deposition,[61] where a mistake has been made in taking them down.[62] However, it has been held that a deposition cannot be corrected in this respect after the cause comes on for hearing or trial;[63] nor can it be corrected by an affidavit,[64] or by an ex parte deposition taken without an order therefor.[65]

Effect of order.— An order to enlarge publication is in effect an order for leave to examine witnesses notwithstanding publication has passed. Anonymous, 5 Beav. 92; Strickland v. Strickland, 4 Beav. 120, 5 Jur. 319; Carr v. Appleyard, 2 Myl. & C. 476, 14 Eng. Ch. 476; Daniell Ch. Pr. 947.

Effect of permitting examination.— An order made on motion to dismiss, giving leave to go to examination, has the effect of opening publication. Weir v. Weir, 1 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 194.

53. Underhill v. Van Cortlandt, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 500; Smith v. Brush, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 459; Colonial Trusts v. Cameron, 21 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 70 [affirmed in 21 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 76]; Waters v. Shade, 2 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 218.

Delay from poverty of party.—Where publication had passed shortly before a motion to open was made by plaintiff, and it appeared on the motion that defendant had examined witnesses, but plaintiff had not examined any; and plaintiffs and others swore that their evidence was material, and that the delay had arisen from the poverty of plaintiff, publication was opened on payment of costs. Taylor v. Shoff, 3 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 153.

No proof taken.— Where a commission to take testimony in an equity cause has been out several years, and has been returned without proof, the parties having failed to offer any, and the cause is set down for final hearing, the court ought not, on motion of the complainant, to remand the commission to the commissioners. Somerville v. Marbury, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 275.

Notice of interrogatories.— Where the return fails to show that notice of the interrogatories was given, it may be amended so as to show that notice was given in fact. Stuckey v. Bellah, 41 Ala. 700.

Identification of exhibits.— Where exhibits are not identified and attached to a deposition, as required by the instructions, it is proper to order the deposition returned for that purpose. U. S. v. Fifty Boxes, etc., of Lace, 92 Fed. 601.

Attachment of exhibits.— Depositions may be taken from the files for the purpose of attaching exhibits not returned. Crane Co. v. Neel, (Mo. App. 1903) 77 S. W. 766.

Correction by appending affidavit.—A sealed deposition cannot be opened for the purpose of correction. An affidavit should be appended setting forth the facts. Foster v. Foster, 20 N. H. 208.

65. Such a deposition taken a year and a half after the final hearing and decree in the cause cannot be used at a rehearing to explain the deponent's testimony read at the former hearing. Gray v. Murray, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 412.

b. Alterations or Additions. Interlineations in the absence of counsel will be stricken out.[66] And a material alteration by the officer after the witness has signed and sworn to the deposition made without his assent will invalidate it.[67] If the deposition has been altered or additions made thereto after it has been subscribed and sworn to it must be resworn.[68]

4. Certificate or Caption. An omitted certificate may be permitted to be supplied,[69] and the caption or certificate of the officer may be amended or corrected to conform to the facts.[70] Thus mere clerical errors may be corrected;[71] and amendments and corrections have been permitted with respect to misstatements or omissions as to the cause in which the depositions were taken,[72] or where pending;[73] the reasons for or cause of taking;[74] the time and place of taking;[75] the mode of taking;[76] the reading of the deposition[77] and administration of the oath to the witness;[78] the reduction to writing in the presence of the witness;[79]

Necessity of reswearing and new certificate. — Where after commissioners had certified to a deposition, the witness was permitted to add to his answers, and it did not affirmatively appear that the new jurat and certificate were made at the same time and place as the principal examination, or as part of the same transaction, it was held that the addition was not properly a portion of the return. The correct practice is to return the deposition to the magistrate for a new certificate or proper amendment, to be by him annexed to the deposition, sealed up with it, duly certified, and directed to the court where the deposition is to be used. Brown v. Clark, 41 N. H. 242.

Attachment of certificate in absence of officer.— It is improper to allow a corrected certificate, made by the notary and sent to the attorney for the party on whose behalf the deposition was taken, to be attached thereto, where the notary is not present to identify the deposition, and there is nothing in the defective certificate to identify it as the deposition referred to in the corrected certificate. Separate examination of witnesses.—Where the defect consists of the failure to insert that an instruction that the witnesses be examined separately and apart was complied with, and it appears from an affidavit of the commissioner that the witnesses were examined as instructed, the commission will not be sent back for correction. Arnold v. Lightner, 1 Pa. Dist. 791, 11 Pa. Co. Ct. 641.

and whether or not the adverse party was present and objected.[80] So defects as to the official character of the officer,[81] as to his qualification as a disinterested person,[82] or as to his personal acquaintance with the witness[83] have been corrected by amendment; and he has been allowed to supply an omitted seal.[84]

5. TIME OF AMENDMENT. Although applications for amendment or correction have been refused when not made until the hearing or trial,[85] they have been granted after the deposition has been returned and filed,[86] before trial,[87] at a subsequent term,[88] after publication passed,[89] and even at the trial,[90] after submission of the cause,[91] after verdict,[92] or on appeal.[93]

6. NECESSITY OF ORDER. After the deposition had been returned or filed it can only be amended, corrected, or withdrawn and returned for that purpose by order or leave of the court,[94] or a judge having jurisdiction in the premises.[95]

Ratification.— The court may ratify an unauthorized amendment. Oatman v. Andrew, 43 Vt. 466.

Order unnecessary.— A deposition may be returned for proper certification without an order. Barelli v. Lytle, 8 La. Ann. 28. Under a statute providing that "if the examining officer's certificate be defective, whether exceptions have been sustained or filed or not," the party for whom the deposition was taken may require the clerk to deliver the deposition or mail it under seal to the examining officer, an order of court is not necessary to the return of a deposition to the examining officer for correction, after an exception to the deposition because of the defective character of the certificate has been sustained. after it has been returned and filed,[96] or after its production and reading;[97] and that a party cannot withdraw his cross interrogatories and the answers thereto if the other party desires to use them,[98] or after they have been read.[99] On the other hand it has been held that a party taking it may decline to use a deposition filed, and impeach or discredit the witness [1] or withdraw it [2] after he has read it.[3]

E. Suppression — 1. Grounds. The usual grounds for suppressing depositions are irregularities in issuing the commission, in executing it, or in taking or returning the depositions;[4] or because of grounds for believing that the return has been tampered with before reaching the court;[5] and in the discretion of the court a deposition regularly taken may be suppressed where injustice must necessarily or will probably result from using the testimony.[6] So a deposition may be sup-

Opening or mutilation.— An executed commission will not be suppressed because, when received by the clerk the envelope containing the testimony was open at one end, presenting the appearance of having been worn in the mail, the clerk having noted the facts on the package and filed it, since which time it remained undisturbed in his office. Eiffert v. Craps, 44 Fed. 164. Where all legal requisites have been complied with in sealing and indorsing depositions to be transmitted by mail, and where such depositions are actually received by the district clerk without being separated or mutilated, the mere fact that the envelope containing such depositions has been broken or injured during transmission will not justify a court in suppressing the depositions. Commercial Nat. Bank v. Atkinson, 62 Kan. 775, 64 Pac. 617.

A deposition not inclosed in a sealed wrapper will not be rejected where the court is justified in finding that the covering had been opened by the clerk at the request of the objector on order of the court, and the wrapper destroyed. Robinson v. Savage, 124 Ill. 266, 15 N. E. 850.

pressed for fraud,[7] or where a new issue is formed by amendment whereby testimony taken by deposition becomes inapplicable;[8] and the whole deposition may be suppressed for the refusal of the witness to answer a material question.[9] But in the absence of bad faith or injury depositions will not be suppressed for noncompliance with mere matters of form[10] or for defects purely technical.[11] Nor should depositions or evidence therein contained be suppressed, because not admissible in the first instance, if they or it would be admissible in rebuttal,[12] or in any conceivable way can be made competent.[13]

2. Motion to Suppress — a. In General. The mode of suppressing a deposition is by motion[14] made in the mode prescribed by statute.[15] The irregularity or defect must be specifically stated,[16] and also that injury or prejudice resulted.[17]

b. Time of Making. A motion to suppress must be made within the time prescribed by statute.[18] If the time is not prescribed the motion should be made at the earliest opportunity after the cause for suppression has been ascertained,[19]

The failure to indorse the return upon a foreign commission is not a ground for suppressing a deposition, although it might require its rejection at the trial. Creamer v. Jaekson, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 413.

The renewal of a motion to suppress on the ground of newly discovered evidence showing that the deposition was improperly taken is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Hicks v. Lawson, 39 Ala. 90.

18. Casley v. Mitchell, (Iowa 1903) 96 N. W. 725; Harris Mfg. Co. v. Marsh, 49 Iowa 11.

After prescribed time.—Under a statute requiring exceptions other than for incompetency to be filed by noon of the third day after the deposition is filed, a motion made ten days after such filing comes too late. Casley v. Mitchell, (Iowa 1903) 96 N. W. 725.

At first term after deposition filed.— A requirement that the motion must be made at the first term after the depositions are filed is complied with by moving at the term next succeeding the term during which they were filed. McCown v. Terrell, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 40 S. W. 54.

Change in statute.— A statute prescribing the time of moving is inapplicable to a motion made before its adoption. Mayton v. Sonnefield, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 48 S. W. 608.

Great delay.— A motion filed but not acted on for two years and eight months thereafter is properly denied because not brought up at the first term of the court after the deposition was filed. Waters-Pieree Oil Co. v. Davis, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 60 S. W. 453.

19. Harris v. Miller, 30 Ala. 221; Hughes v. Humphreys, 102 Ill. App. 194; Newton v. Porter, 69 N. Y. 133, 25 Am. Rep. 152; Hartwig v. American Malting Co., 74 N. Y. App. Div. 140, 77 N. Y. No. 886, 4 Biss. 507.

The motion is in time when made on the day preceding the trial and presented for hearing on the next day and before the commencement of the trial (Adams Express Co. v. McConnell, 27 Kan. 238); two days before the case is called for trial (Everingham v. Lord, 19 Ill. App. 565); or where there is and at least before the trial,[20] especially where the objections are to matters of form, so that if sustained the defects may be remedied before trial.[21]

3. HEARING AND DETERMINATION — a. In General. The regularity of the order for the depositions and the competency of the witnesses may be considered.[22] Where the motion is based on irregularity or matters not affecting the admissibility of the testimony,[23] it should be determined before the hearing or trial to afford an opportunity to retake them; but where the motion is based on the irrelevancy, immateriality, or incompetency of the testimony or of the witness, or grounds of that nature the court may hold the matter under advisement until the hearing or trial.[24]

b. Discretion. Unless the objection is urged the judge to whom the motion is addressed is vested with a discretion to grant or deny it,[25] which is not reviewable on appeal.[26]

c. The Order. The order of suppression may be made by any judge having but a brief delay (Benedict v. Richardson, 68 Hun (N. Y.) 202, 22 N. Y. Suppl. 839).

Failure to explain delay.— The motion may be entertained, although the delay in making it is not explained. Jonas v. Smith, 2 Cinc. Super. Ct. 63.

23. As where suppression is sought because the depositions were irregularly or imperfectly taken, or were taken in violation of the privileges of either of the parties (Williams v. Vreeland, 30 N. J. Eq. 576; Wood v. Chetwood, 27 N. J. Eq. 311); or where the testimony was elicited by leading questions (Wood v. Chetwood, 27 N. J. Eq. 311).

Formal defects.—Where the motion is made for formal defects, on notice, the court may act on it before or after the commencement of the trial. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Royal, (Tex. Civ. App. 1893) 23 S. W. 316.

"Ready for trial."— Where notice of a motion to suppress is waived, and consent given to its consideration, the motion should be passed upon, although both parties have announced "Ready for trial," and the jury is being drawn. Coleman v. Colgate, 69 Tex. 88, 6 S. W. 553.

Necessity of moving before trial see infra, XIX, E, 3, b.

24. Taylor v. Elliott, 52 Ind. 588; Nichol v. McCalister, 52 Ind. 586; Williams v. Vreeland, 30 N. J. Eq. 576; Wood v. Chetwood, 27 N. J. Eq. 311; Williamson v. More, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 229.

Before or at trial.— When suppression of but part of a deposition is sought, the court should wait until the deposition is offered in evidence before passing on the objections; but where nothing but irrelevant evidence is sought to be stricken out, it is without prejudice whether it is stricken out before or after the deposition is offered. Stull v. Stull, (Nebr. 1901) 96 N. W. 196.

At trial.— Where the motion is made on the ground that deponent refused to answer certain interrogatories, the deposition should be read upon the trial, and the admissibility of the unanswered questions then decided. Palmer v. Great Western Ins. Co., 47 N. Y. Super. Ct. 455. Where evidence may be introduced on the trial which will make the answers to certain interrogatories in a deposition material, it is proper that a motion to suppress should not be decided until on the trial the court is informed whether or not such evidence will be offered. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. McWhinney, 36 Ind. 436.

25. Thus where the deposition of a witness showed no desire to conceal anything, but that her failure to fully answer a question as to whether any one had talked to her concerning her testimony, etc., was unintentional, and her testimony was corroborated by other witnesses, the refusal of the trial judge to suppress the deposition for failure to answer such question was not an abuse of discretion. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Baumgarten, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 253, 72 S. W. 78. So the action of a chancellor in suppressing a deposition after allowing a witness to be examined provisionally is discretionary. Hall v. Pegram, 85 Ala. 522, 5 So. 209, 6 So. 612.

26. Hall v. Pegram, 85 Ala. 522, 5 So. 209, 6 So. 612.

competent authority.[27] Where there is more than one deposition of the same witness, the order must indicate the particular one suppressed.[28]

d. Objections and Exceptions. The determination must be excepted to at the time,[29] and the ruling must be assigned as error on appeal,[30] or as ground for a new trial.[31] The refusal to suppress is immaterial where the deposition was not offered in evidence.[32] Nor can a party complain of the suppression of a deposition which contained nothing which would benefit him,[33] or where the witness personally testified to the facts stated in his deposition.[34] Neither will a judgment be reversed because the court erroneously suppressed a deposition, where the party taking it did not ask a continuance to retake it or to obtain the attendance of the witnesses.[35]

4. Effect of Suppression. After a deposition has been suppressed it cannot be used in any subsequent trial.[36]

F. Retaking or Reëxamination — 1. Right to Retake or Reëxamine. Although a commission has been executed, or a deposition has been taken and completed, a party on good cause shown may be permitted to reëxamine the witness, procure additional testimony, or take the depositions anew.[37]

27. A justice of a district court in the city of New York has jurisdiction to suppress a deposition taken under an irregular commission. Denny v. Horton, 11 Daly (N. Y.) 358, 3 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 255.

Against defaulting defendants.— Under the Maryland statute a complainant may under his commission in chief take testimony against defaulting as well as other defendants, and such a commission dispenses with an ex parte commission against the defendants in default. Higgins v. Horwitz, 9 Gill (Md.) 341.

Failure to make out case.— A master may refuse to open a case where the evidence was closed, on the ground that the applicant had not made such a case as entitled him to a new trial at law. Waddell v. Smyth, 3 Ch. Chamb. (U. C.) 412.

Prior commission not returned.— A new commission may issue, although one previously issued for the examination of the same witness has not been returned. Lee v. Lee, 1 La. Ann. 318.

Refusal to sign inaccurate deposition.— Where a witness refuses to sign a deposition because it is inaccurate, but is willing to sign when the errors pointed out by him have been corrected, his deposition cannot be retaken on a new subpœna. In re Hafer, 65 Ohio St. 170, 61 N. E. 72.

Validity of new deposition.— There is no right to exclude a second deposition, unless the first contains a complete examination as

2. GROUNDS. A deposition may be allowed to be retaken or the witnesses may be reëxamined in the following cases: Where irregularities in procuring it to be taken or in the taking or returning of it are shown;[38] where an outstanding commission has not been executed;[39] where through inadvertence the witness has not been examined as to a material fact[40] or exhaustively examined;[41] to permit further testimony to explain or correct that already given;[42] or to procure testimony as to the credit of other witnesses whose depositions have been published.[43] So too this may be done where injustice is likely to arise from the manner of issuing or executing a commission,[44] where there has been unfair or overreaching conduct to the prejudice of the adverse party,[45] where the deposition has been suppressed as scandalous[46] or because taken on leading interrogatories,[47] where the pleadings have been amended so as to change the issue,[48] where the deposition has been lost or destroyed,[49] or where there is reason to believe that it will

App. 605), or cross interrogatories have not been answered (Davis v. Moody, 13 Ga. 188; Ruckert v. Bursley, 51 N. Y. App. Div. 377, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 622); the failure of the commissioner to qualify by oath (Bollen v. Milladew, 10 C. B. 898, 20 L. J. C. P. 172, 70 E. C. Criminal prosecution.— In People v. Lindquist, 84 Cal. 23, 24 Pac. 153, a trial for homicide, it appeared that by agreement with the prosecution there were admitted at the former trial informal depositions of certain witnesses residing in Sweden, to the effect that defendant's mother was subject to epilepsy and died insane, and his brother was an idiot, and that the prosecution had notified the defense that such depositions would be objected to at the next trial, and it was held that the accused was entitled to the issuance of a commission to take the depositions of such persons in proper legal form.

Stipulation preventing retaking.—The court may grant a rehearing and permit the retaking of suppressed depositions on a showing that there was an understanding with opposing counsel that the depositions might be read, which prevents their retaking, and it appears that injustice may be done if a rehearing is not granted. not be executed.[50] But retaking or a reëxamination will not be permitted to procure more definite testimony on a particular point.[51]

3. Application[52]— a. Necessity. There must be a special application to reëxamine a witness or retake a deposition.[53]

b. Time of. The application must be made with due diligence and so soon as the necessity of retaking the deposition or reëxamining the witness is apparent.[54]

c. Requisites and Sufficiency. An application for a second commission must show some good reason for its issue.[55]

4. Necessity of Order.[56] Although there are numerous decisions to the contrary,[57] it is the general rule that a deposition cannot be taken or a witness reëxamined without the sanction of the court or its formal order.[58]

After a cause has been set for hearing a new commission will not be permitted unless on special order made on special circumstances shown. Salmon v. Clagett, 3 Bland (Md.) 125.

After hearing and decree.— The Virginia act which provides that, from the filing of a bill in equity "to the final hearing of the cause, either party may, without order of court, obtain commissions to take depositions to be read therein," should receive a limited construction. A party cannot, after the hearing of a cause and a decree settling the merits of the controversy, take new testimony as to matter that was fairly in issue and decided upon. If he has new matter or newly-discovered evidence, he must resort to his supplemental bill of review, or to a petition for a rehearing in the nature of a supplemental bill. Moore v. Hilton, 12 Leigh (Va.) 1.

After publication has passed witnesses cannot be examined unless under very special circumstances (Hamersly v. Lambert, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 432), as to impeach witnesses whose depositions have been taken (Wood v. Mann, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,953, 2 Sumn. 316).

Announcing ready for trial.— A party may be permitted to retake, although the other party has announced himself ready for trial. Milton v. Rowland, 11 Ala. 732.

5. PROCEDURE ON RETAKING. Statutory requirements respecting the taking of depositions generally must be strictly observed,[59] and it has been held that the original[60] or additional interrogatories,[61] which, when the examination is as to the credit of witnesses, must be so framed as to exclude testimony to overcome that already taken,[62] may be used. Due notice must be given,[63] and the scope of the examination may be restricted.[64]

6. RIGHT TO USE ORIGINAL DEPOSITION. The retaking of a deposition will not preclude the reading of the deposition originally taken.[65]

G. Lost or Destroyed Depositions — 1. SUBSTITUTION OF COPY. Where a deposition has been lost or destroyed a properly identified or authenticated copy may be substituted and read as the original,[66] or the contents may be proved as Merits unaffected by unauthorized retaking. — That a deposition taken without leave was erroneously permitted to be read is not a ground for reversal where it did not affect the decision of the case. Hickey v. Young, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 1.

The admission or rejection of such a deposition taken without leave or order of the court is addressed to its discretion. Detaching the interrogatories from a deposition defectively executed after it has been filed and attaching them to a second commission is harmless irregularity. Boone v. Miller, 73 Tex. 557, 11 S. W. 551.

Refiling. — The original interrogatories may be refiled. Foster v. Smith, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 474, 88 Am. Dec. 604.

Where depositions are not taken under a commission a new commission may issue without new interrogatories. Copeland v. Mears, 2 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 519.

The court cannot abridge the statutory time of giving notice or of service of the interrogatories. Gibbs v. Gibbs, 6 Colo. App. 368, 40 Pac. 781.

64. A witness cannot be reëxamined as to the same facts, but may be as to other facts, or new matter arising out of the testimony of other witnesses. Sawyer v. Sawyer, Walk. (Mich.) 48.

New witnesses. — An order is not irregular because not restricting the reëxamination to witnesses not before examined on the same subject-matter. Forbes v. Forbes, 9 Hare (App.) lxxvii, 41 Eng. Ch. lxxvii.

Witness to credit. — A witness examined to the mere credit of the other witnesses, whose depositions have been already taken and published, will not be allowed to be examined to prove or disprove any fact material to the merits of the case. Wood v. Mann, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,953, 2 Sumn. 316.

Former depositions may be used where the witnesses refer to and reaffirm them (Strader v. Graham, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 633); or where after a plea of infancy was added, the new depositions were taken to explain and qualify the facts stated in the former depositions of the same witnesses, and to prove defendant's age (Watson v. Brewster, 1 Pa. St. 381). The original deposition is not objectionable on the ground that the witness cannot be contradicted by previous statements made by him without his attention being first called to them. Becker v. Winne, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 458.

A deposition taken when a witness was incompetent cannot be read, where a second deposition was taken after restoration to competency, although it states that the facts stated in the first deposition are true. Scales v. Desha, 16 Ala. 308.

in the case of other lost papers.[67] So a copy may be read where a party takes a deposition from the files and refuses to produce it.[68]

2. Preliminary Proof. To authorize the use of a copy under such circumstances the loss or destruction must be shown,[69] and it must also appear that the proposed substitute is a true copy of the original,[70] and that a new deposition could not be procured.[71]

XX. Use of Depositions and Their Admissibility in Evidence.[72]

A. Parties Entitled to Use. A valid and competent deposition taken and filed in the cause is the common property of the litigants therein, and either is entitled to use it.[73] Especially is this so where the deposition is taken on interroga-

In McCally v. Franklin, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 340, parol evidence of the contents of a lost deposition was rejected, although the witness was dead, it appearing that there was ample opportunity to take it before his death. It has been held, however, that where the lost depositions are offered to be proved by copies admittedly true and not by oral evidence, it is not necessary to retake the deposition or to prove the death of the witnesses or their incapacity to testify. Analogy to ordinary evidence.— In Echols v. Staunton, 3 W. Va. 574, 578 [quoted in Ulrich v. McConaughey, 63 Nebr. 10, 88 N. W. 150], the court said: "It is as competent for one party to read on his own behalf a deposition regularly taken and filed by the other party, as it would be to introduce a witness summoned on behalf of such other party."

No previous notice necessary.— Either party to a suit has the right to read in evidence the depositions taken by the opposite party if offered at the proper time, without giving previous notice of his intention. McClintock v. Curd, 32 Mo. 411.

Texas statute.— Where depositions are taken by one party and no cross interrogatories are filed the statutory rule is that the person not crossing the interrogatories cannot read the depositions over the objections of the party taking them. tories propounded by both parties.[74] And while the use of a deposition by the adverse party is somewhat a matter of practice, and governed in most instances by statute or rules of court,[75] yet it may be stated as a general rule that where a deposition has been taken by one party and filed in the cause his adversary is entitled to use it in evidence,[76] although the first party refuses to introduce it in his own behalf;[77] and even where there is a subsequent trial of a former action

Admission of exhibits.— Where, in answer to the general interrogatory in a deposition, evidence is given consisting of original letters material to the issue, defendant, although not the party at whose instance the deposition was taken, is entitled to offer them in evidence, independently of the deposition to which they are attached as exhibits. Hazleton v. Union Bank, 32 Wis. 34.

After rejection.— A party who has procured the rejection of a deposition filed by his adversary cannot be permitted afterward to read it without the consent of the party filing it. Thomas v. Davis, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 227.

Competency of evidence.—In Young v. Wood, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 123, it was held that where a deposition of a witness taken by one party was repudiated by him before trial, and was offered and admitted on the other side, that the only effect of it was to preclude the party taking the deposition from disputing its competency, and impeaching the general character of the witness for truth.

Deposition by both parties.— A deposition taken by one party in which he has embodied by way of interrogatory a copy of a deposition of the same witness previously taken in the same action by the other party, but which the other party does not see fit to use, is not admissible. Dana v. Underwood, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 99.

Entire deposition.— Where a deposition which had been taken by plaintiff in an action was not used by him at the trial, and the court allowed defendant to read the cross-examination only, it was held that the whole deposition should have been admitted. Juneau Bank v. McSpedon, 15 Wis. 629.

Competent evidence.— A deposition taken but not used by defendant cannot be read in evidence by plaintiff if the testimony would not have been competent or legal for plaintiff if it had been taken on his part. Hallett v. O'Brien, 1 Ala. 585; Reid v. Hodgson, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,667, 1 Cranch C. C. 491.

Exception by adverse party.— Where defendant declines to read a deposition taken by him and plaintiff offers it, it is subject to objection by defendant that the testimony therein is hearsay. Elliott v. Shultz, 29 Tenn. 234.

Impeachment of credit.—A deposition taken to impeach the credit of a witness cannot be read by the adverse party if the party taking it declines to read it, and also fails to assail the character of the witness intended to be impeached by the deposition. Sullivan v. Norris, 8 Bush (Ky.) 519. But if the character of the witness had been assailed by the party taking the deposition, and he had declined to read it, then the adverse party would have had the right to use the deposi-

the deposition may be again introduced in evidence at the latter trial.[78] Again in some jurisdictions the right of the adverse party to read a deposition is affected by the fact that he cross-examined.[79]

B. Admissibility — 1. In General. To allow proof by depositions in actions militates against the principles of ancient common law,[80] which required the personal attendance of witnesses that the truth might be more readily and fully elicited in open court, and their credibility and statements more accurately weighed and thoroughly sifted; hence the authority to take testimony in this mode being in derogation of the rules of the common law has always been construed strictly. It is necessary to show that legal notice,[81] and all the other requirements of the statute have been strictly complied with before the deposition can be admitted in tion for the purpose of sustaining the witness. Sullivan v. Norris, 8 Bush (Ky.) 519.

78. Hallett v. O'Brien, 1 Ala. 585; Turner v. McIlhaney, 8 Cal. 575. Compare Sexton v. Brock, 15 Ark. 345.

Death of witness.—Where a deposition was taken by one party on notice, and both parties examined the witness at the caption, but the deposition had not been used upon trial, and the witness died, it was held that the adverse party was not entitled to use the deposition against the will of the party taking it. George v. Fisk, 32 N. H. 32.

Deposition by request.— The deposition of a party to an action on trial, taken at the request of the other party, which was intended to be used, and was filed by such other party in another suit, cannot be read as evidence against the party at whose request it was taken. Hovey v. Hovey, 9 Mass. 216.

79. Where the adverse party has cross-examined a witness, he acquires the right to use such deposition as if it had been taken on his own behalf (Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Brown, 56 Ala. 411; Stewart v. Hood, 10 Ala. 600; Rogers v. Barnett, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 480; San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Harrison, 72 Tex. 478, 10 S. W. 449. Compare Dwight v. Linton, 3 Rob. (La.) 57; Straw v. Dye, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 312, 2 West. L. Month. 388); yet where he has failed to cross-examine no such right will be allowed him (Watson v. Miller, 82 Tex. 279, 17 S. W. 1053; San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. Harrison, 72 Tex. 478, 10 S. W. 556; Brandon v. McNelly, 43 Tex. 76; Refugio v. Byrne, 25 Tex. 193; Harris v. Leavitt, 16 Tex. 340; Norvell v. Oury, 13 Tex. 31).

Depositions are regarded as secondary evidence, but may be read when duly taken, if the witness be dead or out of the jurisdiction of the court. Sexton v. Brock, 15 Ark. 345; Haupt v. Henninger, 37 Pa. St. 138.

Deposition of expert.— There is no distinction between the deposition of an ordinary witness and that of an expert, so far as their admissibility is concerned. Camp v. Averill, 54 Vt. 320.

Copy of deposition.— In Alcock v. Royal Exch. Assur. Corp., 13 Q. B. 292, 13 Jur. 445, 18 L. J. Q. B. 121, 66 E. C. L. 292, it was held that a copy of a deposition was inadmissible in evidence. In Robinson v. Davies, 5 Q. B. D. 26, 49 L. J. Q. B. 218, 28 Wkly. Rep. 255, it was held, however, that where copies of certain documents and answers of witnesses with regard to the contents thereof were received in evidence without objection on the part of the adverse party who joined in the commission and such documents were appended to the deposition and returned therewith, that it was too late to make objection that the original documents were not produced after the case had been referred to an arbitrator.

The English statutes as well as our own that authorize a departure from this salutary principle certainly never intended to allow depositions to be read in actions at law, unless the personal attendance of the witnesses could not be procured by reasonable exertions, and their absence first satisfactorily accounted for, or unless some stringent reason is shown to the satisfaction of the court why the witnesses could not be produced at the trial and their evidence given viva voce. Crary v. Barlow, 5 Ark. 210; Hayward v. Barron, 38 N. H. 366.

Commission by consent.— A deposition taken without notice and not upon interrogatories, under a commission issued by consent, cannot be read in evidence. Dunlop v. Munroe, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,167, 1 Cranch C. C. 536 [affirmed in 7 Cranch 242, 3 L. ed. 329].

Criminal prosecutions.— Under N. C. Acts (1891), c. 522, authorizing defendant in criminal actions, upon giving notice to the state and complying with certain other requirements, to take depositions, the deposition of the deceased, taken by one of the defendants in an indictment for murder without notice to his co-defendant, being otherwise in form, is admissible in evidence, with instructions to the jury that it was not to be taken as evidence against the other defendant. State v. Finley, 118 N. C. 1161, 24 S. E. 495.

evidence.[82] It is also necessary to show that the deponent comes within some of the provisions of the statute authorizing the admission of his testimony.[83] And it may be said that the general rule now is that depositions which have been regularly taken and filed in a cause in compliance with statutory provisions may be used as evidence therein, provided some statutory ground for their admission is shown,[84] and they contain evidence pertinent to the issue.[85]

2. DISCRETION OF COURT. If the deposition was taken in conformity with the statute and rules it is admissible of course, irrespective of objections to the testimony;[86] but immaterial infractions of the statute may be disregarded, and the court in its discretion may permit the deposition to be read.[87]

3. CONTENTS OF DEPOSITION. The mere fact that a deposition contains statements outside of the evidence will not render it inadmissible unless they are prejudicial.[88]

Deposition taken under stipulation.—Where a deposition is taken under stipulation which provides for the admission of the deposition without conditions, it is to be governed by the stipulation and not by statutory provisions. People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301, 17 Pac. 214.

Reporter's transcript of testimony.— The admission of the reporter's certified transcript of the testimony of a deposing witness is not error, under Cal. Pen. Code, § 864, placing such a transcript when properly filed on the same footing as depositions, and section 1345, providing that depositions may be read in evidence by either party in a criminal trial, etc. People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301, 17 Pac. 214.

83. Craft v. Jackson, 4 Ga. 360. In Meredith v. Kent, 3 N. C. 17, it was held that the deposition of a witness residing outside of the state would be admitted, although he was served with a subpœna before he left the state.

Where a deposition is competent as to one party it is competent as to all parties who are sued jointly and who have filed joint exceptions thereto. Allen v. Russell, 78 Ky. 105.

84. Adams v. Russell, 85 Ill. 284.

An erroneous rejection of a deposition is no ground for new trial, where the minutes of counsel containing the testimony of the witness on a former trial went to the jury, and for aught which appeared contained all that was material in his deposition. Allen v. Blunt, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 217, 2 Woodb. & M. 121.

Exhibits excluded.— A deposition may be admitted, and the exhibits annexed to it if in themselves incompetent may be excluded. Fisk v. Tank, 12 Wis. 276, 78 Am. Dec. 737.

Judicial notice.— A referee need not take judicial notice of depositions filed with the papers of the case but not offered in evidence. Myers v. Roberts, 35 Fla. 255, 17 So. 358.

The declarations of a party to a suit contained in his deposition taken by the other party may be read in evidence against him in the same case, although he is present at the trial. Bogie v. Nolan, 96 Mo. 85, 9 S. W. 14 [overruling Priest v. Way, 87 Mo. 16].

The object of taking a rule to show cause why testimony taken by commission should not be read on the trial is to enable the party, in case of irregularity or informality not attributable to himself, to remedy the defect before trial. Tarleton v. Bringier, 15 La. Ann. 419.

85. Adams v. Russell, 85 Ill. 284.

It is no objection to reading a deposition taken abroad that the witnesses had previously been examined and cross-examined under a commission in the United States. Winthrop v. Union Ins. Co., 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,901, 2 Wash. 7. So it is not a valid objection to the reading of a deposition taken in the country where the cause is tried that the testimony of the same witness had been previously taken upon a commission in another state. Hoffman v. Kissinger, 1 Watts & S. (Pa.) 277.

86. In Maine the question whether a deposition taken within the state is or is not admissible is merely a question of law, and no discretionary power to admit or reject it is lodged in the court. Cooper v. Bakeman, 33 Me. 376; Stinson v. Walker, 21 Me. 211.

In Wisconsin it has been held that the court has no discretionary power to admit in evidence a deposition not taken and certified according to the provisions of the statute. Lightfoot v. Cole, 1 Wis. 26.

Appeal to sympathy of jury.— The fact that defendant in giving her reasons for not appearing as a witness states that the condition of her health prevents it does not render her deposition inadmissible as apt to work on the sympathy of the jury. Arnold v. Penn, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 325, 32 S. W. 353.

Where such statements are prejudicial to parties in the cause the deposition will usually be rejected as evidence. Knight v. Coleman, 19 N. H. 118, 49 Am. Dec. 147; The Peterhoff, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,024, Blatchf. Pr. Cas. 463 [reversed in 5 Wall. 28, 18 L. ed. 564].

4. Translation. A deposition taken and returned in a foreign language may, by direction of the court, be translated into English before or at the trial.[89]

5. Part of Deposition — a. Where Whole Is Competent — (i) In General. The question whether a party has a right to use only a part of the deposition or must introduce it as a whole is one upon which courts have not been uniform in their decisions. In some cases the courts have allowed the deposition to be read in part[90] leaving the remainder to be read by the adverse party if he so desires;[91] but the better rule seems to be that a part of a deposition cannot be read and part omitted, but the entire deposition competent and pertinent to the issues involved should be read;[92] and especially is this so where a party introduces a deposition taken in his own behalf.[93] Where a party reads in evidence a part of a deposition Demand of adverse party.— It is error to permit the reading of a part of a deposition and to refuse to compel the party reading it to read the whole on demand of the adverse party. State v. Rayburn, 31 Mo. App. 385.

Deposition read as admission.— In Kritzer v. Smith, 21 Mo. 296, it was held that where a deposition was read as an admission the party reading it should read the whole.

Extracts from depositions are inadmissible in evidence unless the whole deposition is before the court. U. S. Trust Co. v. Lanahan, 50 N. J. Eq. 796, 27 Atl. 1032; Lanahan v. Lawton, 50 N. J. Eq. 276, 23 Atl. 476. So a party cannot be allowed to take out a portion of a deposition and a part of a sentence, leaving what stands to convey a different meaning from what it would if read with the context. Miles v. Stevens, 3 Pa. St. 21, 45 Am. Dec. 621.

No prejudice resulting.— Where the deposition of a defendant, taken in another action against him by third persons, is put in evidence as an admission of his liability on the cause of action being sued on, although the whole deposition should be read the omission to read a part will not be considered a good reason for reversal of judgment, if the party complaining of the omission was not thereby really prejudiced. Kritzer v. Smith, 21 Mo. 296.

Refusal to read entire deposition.— In Grant v. Pendery, 15 Kan. 236, defendant offered in evidence the deposition of a witness. Plaintiff objected. The court overruled the objection. Defendant then read in evidence the examination in chief of the witness, and refused to read the cross-examination. Plaintiff then moved the court to strike out that portion of the deposition which had been read unless defendant would offer and read in evidence the balance of the deposition. Defendant still refusing to read the balance of the deposition, the court struck out what had been read and instructed the jury not to consider the same.

Special notice.— If one party takes a deposition on interrogatories, a part of which is for the purpose of meeting certain expected testimony from the adverse party, and does not otherwise intend to use such part, he must accompany the interrogatories with a distinct notice in writing of his purpose in taking it, or such adverse party may require the whole to be read to the jury, although he has not introduced the testimony to meet which the deposition was taken. taken at the instance of his adversary, he thereby makes it his own testimony to the same extent as if he had taken it, and his adversary is entitled to read the whole.[94]

(II) Right of Adversary to Use Remainder. Where only part of a deposition is introduced or read in evidence, the adverse party has the right to read the whole deposition,[95] so far as it is competent evidence for him in the cause;[96] and where a deposition regularly taken and filed in a cause is not used by ing Calhoun v. Hays, 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 127, 42 Am. Dec. 275].

Abandonment of interrogatory.—In Wheeler v. Atkins, 5 Esp. 246, it was held that a party could not abandon an interrogatory in part, but must abandon the whole.

No prejudice resulting.— Where defendants offered in evidence the cross-examination in the deposition of a witness, taken on his own behalf, and the court below, under plaintiff's objection unless the whole deposition be read, admitted it, and ruled that any part of the deposition that was necessary plaintiff might offer, it was held that, although the court below erred in its ruling, yet if the error was not hurtful to plaintiff the court would not reverse, but that as the examination in chief showed the witness to have been in the employ of defendant plaintiff was entitled to have it go to the jury. Pittsburg, etc., Pass. R. Co. v. Boyd, 4 Pennyp. (Pa.) 110.

A party who has caused a deposition to be taken on his own behalf does not necessarily, by offering and reading parts of it in evidence, bind himself to read it all, nor make the whole of it evidence offered and put in by himself, nor make answers which are irrelevant or incompetent admissible. Gellatly v. Lowery, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 113. In this respect the deposition of a party taken on his own behalf stands on the same footing as any other deposition. If the answers which the party taking the deposition declines to read are relevant and competent, the other party may read them or cause them to be read and use them as evidence in his own favor. Declining to read.— The party putting interrogatories or cross interrogatories for the deposition of a witness pursuant to stipulation may decline to read any of them and the answers, but if he does the other party may read them. Byers v. Orensstein, 42 Minn. 386, 44 N. W. 129 [citing In re Smith, 34 Minn. 436, 26 N. W. 234]. So in Edgar v. McArn, 22 Ala. 796, where a letter or account current was attached to the deposition of a witness in answer to a cross interrogatory, it was held that if the party calling for them declined to read them the opposite party might read them in evidence to the jury.

For the purpose of contradiction.— When a party is permitted to read part of a deposition the opposite party cannot be allowed to read the other part for the sole purpose of contradicting the testimony. Logan v. McGinnis, 12 Pa. St. 27. In Webster v. Calden, 55 Me. 165, where defendant reads an answer to a certain interrogatory in a deposition given by a deponent to be used in a former suit between the parties, in order to contradict such deponent's statements in a deposition in the present suit, it was held that plaintiff had the right to read such parts only of the rest of the deposition as related to the subject-matter of the interrogatory or qualified the answer. In Neilon v. Marinette, etc., Paper Co., 75 Wis. 579, 44 N. W. 772, however, where plaintiff, employed in defendant's paper-mill, was injured by having his fingers caught in the gearing of a paper-machine which he was wiping while it was in motion, it was held that defendant having introduced a portion of the deposition of a witness taken at its own instance to show that it was not customary to wipe the gearing while in motion, it was competent for plaintiff to introduce other portions of the same deposition to contradict the testimony of other witnesses of defendant that it was not customary to wipe the gearing at any time.

Interest of deponent.— Where a part of a deposition has been used by defendant in an action for injuries to show that plaintiff's witness had intimated to deponent that he would make a corrupt bargain with him for defendant railroad, it was proper to allow plaintiff to read the rest of the deposition to show deponent's temper toward the witness, and his interest in the prosecution of the witness for alleged perjury in another case against the railroad arising out of the same accident. the party taking it, it may be offered and read by the adverse party, whether he participated in taking it or not.[97]

b. Where Part Is Incompetent. A deposition may be good in part and bad in part.[98] The party proposing to use it must use it only to prove that part which it is competent for him to prove,[99] and in introducing or reading it in evidence, he may omit incompetent or irrelevant facts or statements therein contained, and answers that are not responsive;[1] and where part of the evidence is admissible, it is error to reject the whole.[2]

6. Presumptions and Burden of Proof. To establish the right of a party to use testimony taken under a commission, it is incumbent upon him to show that the commission has been executed in compliance with the terms of the commission or the terms of the statute under which it was granted.[3] Where a legal cause exists for the taking of a deposition, such cause will be presumed to exist when the deposition is offered in evidence, unless such cause shall be shown to have ceased, by the party objecting to the admissibility of the deposition.[4] Where,

Statement of witness.— Where it appears however, it appears that the witness whose deposition is offered in evidence is within the jurisdiction of the court, it has been held the duty of the party offering the deposition to show a sufficient cause for using it.[5]

7. GROUNDS OF ADMISSIBILITY — a. In General. The grounds upon which a deposition is admissible are usually regulated by statute.[6]

b. Absence of Witness — (i) IN GENERAL. In the absence of agreement or waiver the deposition of a witness will not be admitted when he is present and capable of being examined.[7] While, however, this is the general rule on this from a deposition that the witness is a nonresident of the state it shows a sufficient reason for taking the same; and it will not be suppressed, although the witness may answer that he intends to be personally present at the term of court at which the cause is to be tried, unless it be shown that the witness is present in court. Nevan v. Roup, 8 Iowa 207.

Witness about to leave state.— A deposition de bene esse, the witness deposing that he was about to leave the state, may be used, where proof that he has not returned to his residence raises a presumption of his continued absence. Stockton v. Graves, 10 Ind. 294.

Witness presumed to be at home.— Where the residence of the witness is in another state it will be presumed in the absence of proof to the contrary that he is at home. Scott v. Province, 1 Pittsb. (Pa.) 189, 2 Pittsb. Leg. J. (Pa.) 134. So where a witness in his deposition states that his residence is at a point out of the state, the party taking may rely on the presumption that the witness is beyond the jurisdiction of the court, and need not show service or attempted service of a subpœna on him to render the deposition admissible. Waters v. Wing, 59 Pa. St. 211.

5. Morgan v. Halverson, 9 Wis. 271.

Less stringent proof required.— In Mills v. Mills, 30 L. J. P. & M. 183, 4 L. T. Rep. N. S. 479, 2 Swab. & Tr. 310, it was held that proof to satisfy the court that a witness whose evidence has been taken abroad under a commission is out of the jurisdiction when the evidence is tendered is less stringent when he is a resident abroad than when the evidence has been taken upon his leaving the jurisdiction for a temporary purpose.

Under N. C. Code, § 1378, providing that if a witness has been summoned and at the time of trial is more than seventy-five miles from the place of trial his deposition may be read, a party opposing the introduction of a deposition may show that the witness lives less than seventy-five miles from the court. Appearance after deposition is read.— Although a deposition cannot be read when the witness is present at the trial, the appearance of such witness in court after his deposition has been read will not justify its exclusion. Benjamin v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 133 Mo. 274, 34 S. W. 590.

Expectation of witness.— Where a deposition was taken before the clerk of the court, and in it the witness stated that he was a resident of another state, but that he expected to be present at the trial of the case some six months hence, it was held that the deposition would not be excluded unless it was shown that he was present in court. Nevan v. Roup, 8 Iowa 207. So in Eby v. Winters, 51 Kan. 777, 33 Pac. 471, where it appeared that a certain witness did not reside in a county where a trial was to be held, and his deposition was regularly taken in the county of his residence and filed in the district court of the proper county, it was held not a good objection, when the deposition was offered, merely to state "that the witness has been in attendance upon the court, and is at present, it is believed, on his way to the place of trial."

Person in jail.— Where the deposition of a person in jail under sentence has been taken, subject and the one most universally followed, yet where the opposite party is allowed the right of cross-examination or to examine the witness as his own the right of admission has not been denied;[8] and especially is this the case where declarations or admissions are evidence against the deponent.[9] Matters of practice in this regard rest largely within the discretion of the court.[10]

(II) Deponent Within Jurisdiction of Court. Where the presence of the witness beyond a prescribed distance from the place of trial is a prerequisite to the right to introduce his deposition in evidence, preliminary proof sufficient to satisfy the court of that fact[11] must be made before the deposition can be but upon proper affidavit the attendance of the deponent has been procured, the deposition will be suppressed. Webb v. Kelly, 37 Ala. 333.

Production in court.— Where a witness was in court the day on which his deposition was read, but the record does not show that he was "produced in court" at the time his deposition was read, or that he could have been compelled to attend, or that his absence was due to any fault of plaintiff, it was held that as the deposition was properly taken it could be read in evidence, under Ind. Rev. St. (1881), so providing where the witness is not "produced in court." Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Hubbard, 116 Ind. 193, 18 N. E. 611.

Where witness' mind is affected.— Where a witness who became a resident of the county after his deposition was taken was present at the trial, but stated that he had recently been sick, and that his mind and recollection were affected; that his mind was not in a condition then to remember what really occurred; and that he was well and his memory was better when the deposition was taken, it was held that the deposition was admissible, it appearing that his testimony contained in it was clear and positive, while that given on the trial was doubtful, hesitating, and uncertain. Tift v. Jones, 74 Ga. 469. See also Jack v. Woods, 29 Pa. St. 375, where the question arose but was not decided.

Under Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 2021, subd. 1, a deposition may be read, although the deponent is present in court, as section 2032 expressly provides "if the deposition be taken under subdivisions 2, 3, and 4 of section 2021, proof must be made at the trial that the witness continues absent or infirm, or is dead;" and the only reason for enumerating these subdivisions is to permit the depositions taken under subdivision 1 to be read, although the deponent be in court. See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 258 et seq.

On appeal.— A deposition which comes up in a case from the inferior court may be read, although the witness is also present in court. Oliver v. Sale, Quincy (Mass.) 29.

Witness declining to testify.— As a general rule, where the deposition of a witness has been properly taken, to be used at the trial of an action, but at the time of trial the witness is in court and called to the stand, the deposition is excluded. If, however, when called to the stand, the witness declines to testify, on the ground that he cannot do so without criminating himself, and is thereupon excused from testifying, the deposition is not thereby rendered admissible. Impeachment of testimony.— When a witness is present in court, his deposition used on a former trial of the same case can be read in evidence only to impeach him after the proper foundation has been laid. Moline Plow Co. v. Gilbert, 3 Dak. 239, 15 N. W. 1.

Judgment will not be reversed unless it is made to appear that such discretion has been abused in such a way as to prejudice the case of the party complaining. Schmick v. Noel, 64 Tex. 406.

11. Johnson v. McDuffee, 83 Cal. 30, 23 Pac. 214 (testimony of counsel); Golding v. The America, 20 La. Ann. 455 (deponent in the naval service); Golden v. State, 22 Tex. App. 1, 2 S. W. 531 (absence by procurement).

Removal of objection.— Where the objection to depositions on the ground that there is no proof that the witnesses are not within used unless the adverse party has dispensed with the necessity of such proof by expressly or impliedly waiving it.[12]

(III) Departure After Deposition Taken. Whether or not the deposition of a witness should be received in evidence must be determined from the facts in existence at the time of the trial, and if at that time it is shown that the witness does not reside in or has removed from the county or state where the trial is proceeding, his deposition, otherwise unobjectionable, is receivable in evidence.[13]

(IV) Failure to Depart. Where a deposition is taken for the reason that the deponent is about to depart from the jurisdiction of the court, and he fails to do so, such deposition cannot be used in evidence at the time of trial.[14]

(V) Removal Within Reach of Process. A deposition will not be competent evidence, where it is shown that the witness had, after it was taken, removed within the jurisdiction of the court, and that his attendance might have

Consent of parties.— The deposition of a resident of an adjoining county, taken by consent of parties, may be read, without accounting for the non-production of the witness. Griffin v. Templeton, 17 Ind. 234.

Knowledge of parties.— It is no objection to reading the deposition of a witness, taken under a rule of court, who lives in another state, more than one hundred miles from the place of trial, that he had been in the city during the session of the court, the fact not being known to the party. Pettibone v. Derringer, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,043, 1 Robb Pat. Cas. 152, 4 Wash. 215.

Temporary absence.— A temporary absence is sufficient to support a deposition taken on affidavit that the witness was about to leave the state, etc., and it is admissible in evidence, although it appear that the witness still resides or has his home in the state. Eddins v. Wilson, 1 Ala. 237.

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 254½.

Temporary absence.— Under N. C. Rev. St. c. 31, § 68, the deposition of an absent witness may be received in evidence whenever the witness has left the state, either with an intention of changing his domicile or under the expectation of being absent for a time which will include two terms of court, say six months; but it cannot be received when the witness is absent temporarily for a short time, as in the case of a seaman on a voyage to New York or Charlestown, when his return may be expected in two or three months at furthest. Alexander v. Walker, 35 N. C. 13.

Where a witness is within the jurisdiction up to within a short time of trial and disappears before he can be examined, it must be shown that his absence is without the consent, connivance, or collusion of the party offering the deposition. Mobile L. Ins. Co. v. Walker, 58 Ala. 290; Carpenter v. Lippitt, 77 Mo. 242; Huthsing v. Maus, 36 Mo. 101.

14. Commercial Bank v. Whitehead, 4 Ala. 637; Goodwyn v. Lloyd, 8 Port. (Ala.) 237; Morse v. Bugbee, 28 Wis. 683. In Larkin v. Avery, 23 Conn. 304, objection was made to the admission of a deposition on the ground that the deponent did not leave the jurisdiction of the court at the time the deposition was taken, and there was a controversy between the parties as to whether the deponent was within or without the state. Under such circumstances, the court refused to postpone the trial in order to allow further evidence as to the absence of the deponent, on the ground that parties were bound to have proof of such facts in court.

The reason is that no deposition should be used, where it appears that the reason for taking it no longer exists. Morse v. Bugbee, 28 Wis. 683; Morgan v. Halverson, 9 Wis. 271.

been procured at the trial.[15] It seems, however, that some knowledge of the change of residence must be brought home to the party proposing to introduce the deposition in evidence.[16]

(VI) Showing of Absence — (A) In General. In order to render a deposition admissible in evidence some sufficient grounds must first be produced, accounting for the absence of the party at the time of trial,[17] and especially is this the case where a deposition is taken de bene esse.[18]

15. Brewer v. Beckwith, 35 Miss. 467. Compare Ables v. Miller, 12 Tex. 109, 111, 62 Am. Dec. 520, where the court said: "It would be unreasonable to require a party to keep his eye on the witness after his testimony had been taken, and to make it his duty to put the witness under subpœna, should he move into the county."

Indiana statute.—It is provided that "when a deposition is offered to be read in evidence, it must appear to the satisfaction of the court that the cause for taking and reading it still exists." Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Stout, 53 Ind. 143, 159 [citing Haun v. Wilson, 28 Ind. 296; O'Conner v. O'Conner, 27 Ind. 69; Shirts v. Irons, 37 Ind. 98].

16. Gallup v. Spencer, 19 Vt. 327.

Notorious residence.—Depositions taken under the statute on account of the non-residence of the witness cannot be read at the trial providing the witness has notoriously resided within the county where the cause is pending for some time previously, and his attendance could have been coerced by a subpœna. Hammock v. McBride, 6 Ga. 178.

Temporary presence.—No person can be compelled to attend for examination on the trial of a civil action except in the county of his residence; and hence the fact that a witness is temporarily in or passing through another county at the time and place of the trial therein is no objection to the reading of his deposition previously taken for use at such trial. Waite v. Teeters, 36 Kan. 604, 14 Pac. 146.

United States practice.— After a deposition is taken, and before trial, if the witness moves within one hundred miles, still the deposition may be read, unless the party objecting shall show that fact, and that it was known to the opposite party in time to have had the witness subpœnaed. Inability to attend.— A deposition taken under a rule of court to be read in case of the inability of the witness to attend cannot be read unless such inability be shown, or that the witness lives beyond the reach of a subpœna. Read v. Bertrand, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,603, 4 Wash. 558.

No home or family.— Where a witness has no home or family his deposition taken out of the jurisdiction at a place where he was at work when last heard of may be read. Gould v. Crawford, 2 Pa. St. 89.

Summons insufficient.— The fact that a witness has been summoned and fails to attend is not sufficient to authorize the reading of his deposition taken de bene esse, but it must be proved that he is dead, or if living unable to attend, or has been sought for and cannot be found. Minnis v. Ecohls, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 31.

Admiralty practice.— Depositions cannot be read in admiralty any more than at common law without some sufficient showing why the witness was not produced at the hearing. Rutherford v. Geddes, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 220, 18 L. ed. 343.

(B) Attempt to Procure Attendance. In order to render a deposition admissible in evidence on account of the absence of a party, due diligence to procure his attendance must be shown,[19] yet such rule does not extend so far as to demand service or issuance of a subpœna, when such service or issuance would be ineffectual.[20] All that is required is a reasonable presumption that the witness is dead or outside of the jurisdiction of the court;[21] and while such presumption may arise from the deposition itself,[22] yet mere statements on the part of the deponent will not warrant the introduction of his deposition without other evidence.[23]

(C) Sufficiency of Showing. The question as to what will constitute a sufficient showing of absence is one upon which no absolute rule can be laid down,[24] except that the absence of the witness should be shown by someone who can

Question for the court.— Upon the preliminary question of the admissibility of a deposition, evidence to show that the alleged deponent was not a resident of the county or did not exist is for the court. Garner v. Cutler, 28 Tex. 175.

Where a special referee admits a deposition it must be presumed that it appeared to his satisfaction that the witness was then dead or removed without the state, was more than one hundred miles from the place of trial, or was unable to travel, which the statute prescribes shall be necessary to render a deposition admissible. Under Nebr. Code Civ. Proc. § 372, which makes a deposition admissible when the witness is a non-resident of the county, and section 386, which provides that it must be shown that the attendance of the witness cannot be procured, it is not necessary for the party offering the deposition to prove that the witnesses cannot be present in court, when it appears from the deposition itself that they are non-residents of the state. Further proof.— Where a witness stated in his deposition that he was "going to leave the State for Europe tomorrow," it was held that under the act concerning depositions such deposition is not admissible at the trial three months afterward without some further proof of absence. Gaul v. Wenger, 19 Mo. 541.

24. An affidavit that the witnesses "reside out of the State of Texas, and are residents of the Indian Territory" is a sufficient predicate for the introduction of a deposition taken before the committing magistrate. Ballinger v. State, 11 Tex. App. 323. So in Ward v. Wells, 1 Taunt. 461, 10 Rev. Rep. 581, it was held that where a witness had been examined on the ground that he was about to leave the kingdom, his deposition might be read if he had actually sailed, although his vessel had been driven back into port by contrary winds.

Affidavit for continuance.— Where a deposition was objected to for want of proof that the witness resided out of the county, but an affidavit for continuance in the case showed that the witness lived in an unorganized county which had been attached for judicial purposes to the county where the trial was had, it was held that the showing was sufficient. Wright v. Reed, 37 Tex. 265.

Competency of evidence of absence.—A deposition taken de bene esse may be read where it appears that the deponent resides in another state, has been seen there since he was examined, and that according to the information of the witness he is there at the time of the trial; the competency of this evidence to prove his absence not being questioned. Donnell v. Walsh, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 621.

Review by appellate court.— The reviewing court will not disturb the trial court's finding, having some evidence in support thereof, that a witness whose deposition is offered in evidence was absent from the state. Branton v. O'Briant, 93 N. C. 99.

Setting out for another state.— Proof that a witness whose testimony has been taken by speak to the fact of his own knowledge.[25] It has been held a sufficient showing that reasonable effort has been made to serve the deponent with subpœna,[26] that inquiry has been made at the deponent's usual place of business or abode,[27] and that letters have been received from the deponent from another state or country.[28] On the other hand the mere issuance of a subpœna or attachment,[29] evidence as to letters,[30] or the uncorroborated statement of witnesses[31] are not sufficient to allow the introduction of the deposition in evidence, where any uncertainty as to the deponent's real whereabouts may arise.

c. Disability of Witnesses — (i) In General. Where a witness is unable to attend the trial for reasons beyond the control of himself or the parties to the action, it has usually been considered good ground for introducing his deposition in evidence, whether such disability arises from old age and infirmity,[32] from illness,[33] or from some other cause which presents a reasonable and sufficient commission de bene esse started before court with his family to a neighboring state is sufficient to authorize the reading of the deposition. McCutchen v. McCutchen, 9 Port. (Ala.) 650.

The uncorroborated testimony of an interested witness that shortly before the trial he saw in the state a person proved by other testimony to be a resident of another state is not sufficient to authorize the exclusion of a deposition of such person taken de bene esse. Nixon v. Palmer, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 175.

A return of non est inventus to a subpœna issued to the sheriff of one county is not sufficient to admit the reading of a deposition, under a statute providing for the reading of depositions taken de bene esse only when the witness has departed from the state, when it appears that the witness resided in another county. Nature of employment.— Evidence preliminary to the introduction of a deposition taken de bene esse, that the party offering it believed that the witness was absent from the state, that he told the party at the examination that he expected to leave the state, that previously the party was accustomed to seeing him, but had not since seen him, is sufficient, it appearing that the witness is a journeyman carpenter without fixed habitation and in pursuit of employment. Criminal prosecutions.— The return of attachments for a witness, issued to every county in the state, not executed because no such person resided in those counties, is not sufficient evidence of his removal out of the state to render his deposition admissible in a criminal prosecution, under Tex. Code Cr. Proc. arts. 772–774, providing for proof of such removal by the prosecuting attorney or other credible person. Martinas v. State, 26 Tex. App. 91, 9 S. W. 356.

(II) Sufficiency of Showing. To introduce a deposition in evidence, competent proof of the inability of the witness to attend must be produced,[35] and as a general rule the presumption of inability to attend arising from the advanced age of the witness should not be relied upon.[36] Proof of inability to attend on account of disability is usually presented by affidavit,[37] or other competent evidence, sufficient to satisfy the court that reason exists for the admission of the deposition.[38] While the decision of the trial court in this regard is subject

Texas.— Stewart v. State, (Cr. App. 1894) 26 S. W. 203.

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 256.

Continuance of cause of taking.— When the deposition of a witness who resides in a county adjoining the place of trial is taken on account of his sickness without an order of court or an agreement of the parties, it cannot be used on the trial unless it then appears that the cause for taking and reading the deposition still continues. Haun v. Wilson, 28 Ind. 296.

Permanent sickness.— Under the English statute requiring that in order to admit depositions in evidence it should appear to the satisfaction of the judge that the deponent is unable from permanent sickness to attend the trial, it has been held that it is not necessary to show that such sickness is incurable, but it must be shown to be of that degree of permanency as to make it last beyond the impending trial. Beaufort v. Crawshay, L. R. 1 C. P. 699, 1 Harr. & R. 638, 12 Jur. N. S. 709, 35 L. J. C. P. 342, 14 L. T. Rep. N. S. 729, 14 Wkly. Rep. 989.

Georgia statute.— In Brooks v. Ashburn, 9 Ga. 297, a witness who resided in the county in which the suit was pending was in attendance under a subpœna on the first day of the court, and on that day his testimony was taken by commission. On the day of the trial he was unable to attend the court from bodily indisposition, and it was held that the testimony could not be read as that of a witness who was unable to attend the court from age or bodily infirmity, as contemplated by the Georgia act of 1838.

Certificate of the justice taking a deposition de bene esse is not sufficient evidence of the inability of the witness to attend. Taylor v. Whiting, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 364.

Evidence of pregnancy.— Evidence that a woman is in an advanced state of pregnancy, so as to render it unsafe for her to attend the trial, is sufficient evidence of sickness to justify the reading of her deposition taken conditionally. Clark v. Dibble, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 601; Barton v. Morphis, 15 N. C. 240; Beitler v. Study, 10 Pa. St. 418. Compare Abraham v. Newton, 8 Bing. 274, 1 Dowl. P. C. 266, 1 L. J. C. P. 10, 6 Scott 738, it was held that it must be shown by competent evidence that the delivery will occur about the time set for trial. See also Pond v. Dimes, 3 Moore & S. 161, 30 E. C. L. 494.

Return of non est upon a subpœna issued only a few days before the sitting of the court is not sufficient evidence that the witness is "unable" to attend, so as to enable the party to read his deposition taken de bene esse, under the Virginia statute. Jones v. Greenolds, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,464, 1 Cranch C. C. 339.

Ex parte affidavits of the witness' indisposition and consequent inability to attend are sufficient proof of the fact to admit his deposition taken de bene esse. Sims v. Sims, 3 Brev. (S. C.) 252, 1 Treadw. (S. C.) 131.

38. Gillespie v. Gillespie, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 89.

Cause of taking no longer existing.— In Emlaw v. Emlaw, 20 Mich. 11, a deposition taken de bene esse was excluded, the witness to review,[39] yet the matter is one resting in the sound discretion of the court to be exercised with reference to the circumstances of the particular case.[40]

d. Death of Witnesses Pending Action. While as a general rule testimony taken in perpetuam rei memoriam cannot ordinarily be used in pending suits,[41] yet there are circumstances which render its admission as necessary and proper in such cases as in suits subsequently instituted.[42] The death of a witness pending a suit will render his deposition admissible in evidence,[43] but in such cases there must be some proof of death,[44] and that the deposition was legally taken.[45] Where a witness has been examined in chief, but dies before he can be cross-examined, his deposition is nevertheless admissible in evidence.[46] Where, however, the death of the witness happens before his examination-in-chief is completely finished, no use can be made of such testimony.[47]

e. Death of Parties to Action. The admission of depositions in an action after the death of one of the parties is usually a matter of statutory regulation.[48] The rule in chancery is that if the testimony was competent when the deposition was taken and filed it remains competent, and the subsequent death of the party does not affect its use on the trial.[49] This rule, while not universally being in a condition to be sworn, and the cause of the taking de bene esse no longer existing.

Lapse of time before trial.— Where the deposition of a witness who was sick and did not expect to be able to attend the next session of the court was taken, but the case was not tried for a year afterward, when the deposition was admitted without showing that the witness could not have been present in court, it was held error. accepted,[50] seems to be the better one on this subject;[51] and especially is this the case where the deposition of the adverse party has also been taken in the cause.[52]

f. Incompetency of Witness — (i) In General. The competency of a witness at the time the deposition was taken or at the time it is offered at the trial is a matter of evidence pure and simple and must be governed by the recognized rules of evidence on this subject.[53] As a general rule the status of the witness at the time of trial governs the question of his competency,[54] for in contemplation of law the deposition itself is the witness[55] and the witness is presumed to testify when the deposition is used.[56]

666. In McMullen v. Ritchie, 64 Fed. 253, it was held that a deposition of a party as to transactions with another party, taken while the latter is alive, might be used when the suit is revived in the name of his executors, although one of the parties died without giving his deposition as he could have done.

Effect of death.— In Keran v. Trice, 75 Va. 690, it was held that the deposition of a party to a suit might be read, although his death had rendered his adversary's deposition, subsequently taken, inadmissible as evidence. So also in King v. Patt, 13 R. I. 132, it was held that the deposition of a party might be read at the trial, although his death before the trial has precluded the opposite party from testifying.

Evidence of admissions.— In Matson v. Melchor, 42 Mich. 477, 4 N. W. 200, it was held that the death of a party to a suit before it is brought up for hearing does not affect the validity of a deposition taken during his lifetime, nor exclude evidence of his own admissions.

Use on appeal.— A deposition read on the trial cannot be suppressed on appeal because since the trial an adverse party has died. Hinkson v. Ervin, 40 W. Va. 111, 20 S. E. 849.

52. Hardin v. Taylor, 78 Ky. 593, 1 Ky. L. Rep. 322. See also Lear v. Smith, 6 Ky. L. Rep. 657. In Rice v. Motley, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 143, plaintiff and defendant were examined as witnesses before trial, each upon the application of the other. Before trial defendant died. It was held that plaintiff's examination was admissible upon the trial, notwithstanding N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 829.

Proof of personal transactions.— In McDonald v. Woodbury, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 35, 65 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 226, plaintiff and defendant were examined before trial, each at the instance of the other, pursuant to a stipulation that they might be used at the trial. The parties were cross-examined and their examinations were reduced to writing and signed. Defendant died before the trial. It was held that plaintiff's deposition was admissible in evidence to prove personal transactions between plaintiff and defendant, as to which, after defendant's death, plaintiff could not have given oral testimony.

53. See generally Evidence; and infra, XXII, C, 3, e.

Opportunity for cross-examination.—Where a party is present at the execution of a commission, and has the right to cross-examine the witness, the question of competency should be then and there determined, and where the witness swears on cross-examination that he is disinterested, his deposition should not be excluded. Segond's Succession, 2 La. Ann. 138. So in King v. Upton, 4 Me. 387, 16 Am. Dec. 266, where the witness testified that he had no interest in the suit, it was held that this was an election of the mode of proof, and that the party would not be permitted to show such interest aliunde at the trial.

(II) Change in Status of Witness. Where there has been a change in the status of the witness since the deposition was taken and when it is offered in evidence, the rules governing its admissibility in evidence are in hopeless conflict.[57] Some of the courts hold that incompetency on the part of the witness at the time of taking the deposition, which cannot be removed or released after the deposition has been taken,[58] will render the deposition inadmissible in evidence.[59] Other courts have held that where the witness is competent at the time the deposition was taken, it may be admitted, although he was incompetent at the time of trial.[60] While still others have followed the more general rule that the competency or incompetency of the witness at the time of trial is the true test without regard to his prior status.[61]

(III) Acquirement of Interest. Whatever may be the variations of the rule of competency as a general proposition, the rule as to the acquirement of interest seems better settled, and where a deposition has been taken in good faith and a subsequent interest accrues to the deponent, his deposition will not thereby be rendered incompetent in evidence.[62]

Quick v. Brooks, 29 Iowa 484; Neville v. Hambo, 1 Disn. (Ohio) 517, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 768; Fagin v. Cooley, 17 Ohio 44; Zane v. Fink, 18 W. Va. 693.

57. Indictment for criminal offense.— The offense of forgery renders the one guilty of it so infamous as to disqualify him from testifying in a court of justice. And if his deposition be taken after indictment for that offense, although before conviction, it cannot be read in evidence if objected to. McFarland v. Mooring, 56 Tex. 118. In St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Harper, 50 Ark. 157, 6 S. W. 720, 7 Am. St. Rep. 86, it was held that a deposition taken while the witness was imprisoned awaiting trial on a charge of murder was not admissible after deponent had been convicted and executed. But compare State v. Valentine, 29 N. C. 225, where it was held that a deposition taken after the witness had been convicted of murder but before judgment was admissible after judgment and execution.

58. Johnson v. Roland, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 203; Ford v. Greishaber, 2 Head (Tenn.) 435.

Release after deposition.— A deposition does not become admissible by a release of the deponent's interest in the suit in which it is offered, when such release was not executed till after the deposition was taken. Bell v. Woodward, 46 N. H. 315; Reed v. Rice, 25 Vt. 171.

Release of interest.— In Wolfinger v. Forsman, 6 Pa. St. 294, it was held that a son's deposition for his father might be read at the trial, after the father's death, where the son had previously released all the interest that had accrued to him to the other children.

Removal of disqualifications.— The depositions of a witness who was incompetent at the time he was sworn, on the ground of interest, cannot be purged by removing the disqualification on the trial. Ellis v. Smith, 10 Ga. 253.

59. Burton v. Baldwin, 61 Iowa 283, 16 N. W. 110; Ford v. Grieshaber, 2 Head (Tenn.) 435. Where a witness is disqualified by reason of interest from being liable over to a party the fact that the party by calling him to testify at the trial is estopped to claim against him will not make his deposition previously taken admissible. Where the depositions of two of the eye-witnesses to a crime had been taken and stipulated to be read, subject to legal exceptions, and afterward the prosecution procured their indictment on the same charge for the purpose of excluding their testimony as accomplices, the depositions were none the less admissible. Doughty v. State, 18 Tex. App. 179, 51 Am. Rep. 303. In Baker v. Fairfax, 1 Str. 101, on an issue out of chancery, the depositions of a witness who became interested after they were taken were not allowed to be read, but the depositions were under similar circumstances admitted in chancery in Haws v. Hand, 2 Atk. 615; Goss v. Tracy, 1 P. (iv) Change in Law. Although the admissibility of a deposition, dependent upon the competency of the deponent as a witness, is usually to be determined by the statutes in force when the deposition was taken,[63] yet where the rules of evidence have been modified by law, rendering the witness incompetent by the change, his deposition offered after the law has taken effect may be excluded, although when it was taken he was competent.[64]

8. Irregularities in Taking or Return. While as a general rule depositions must be taken and returned in conformity to the statute or rules of court,[65] yet it is not every defect or irregularity that will constitute a good ground for their

Equity suit.— After a deposition was taken in an equity suit concerning land one of the parties died and the witness became interested in the subject-matter of the suit. It was held that the deposition was admissible in an ejectment afterward brought for the same land. Galbraith v. Zimmerman, 100 Pa. St. 374.

Examination on immaterial point.— A witness competent at the time of his examination in chief afterward became interested, and was subsequently examined upon a reference in the cause, but to a point having no influence upon the final decree. It was held that the use of these depositions at the hearing was no ground for interfering with the decree. Livingston v. Van Rensselaer, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 63.

Interest after beginning of action.— The depositions of witnesses in full life who became interested after the beginning of the action and after their depositions were taken are not admissible in evidence. Irwin v. Reed, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 512.

Interest during examination.— Where a death by which a witness becomes interested occurs during the cross but before the redirect examination, his deposition will be allowed to stand as to the direct and cross-examination but will be stricken as to the redirect. Need not be retaken.— The competency of evidence depends upon the state of the law when the evidence is offered. A deposition which owing to the interest of the witness was as the law then stood incompetent when taken became competent, and did not need to be retaken when by a change in the law the disqualification of interest was removed. Oliver v. Moore, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 482.

Mississippi statute.— Objections cannot be made, on a trial had since the adoption of the code of 1871, to the reading of depositions of parties to the suit, taken before the adoption of the code of 1871, on account of the incompetency of the parties to so testify. If any objection is sustainable, it is the specific objection to the taking of the depositions — that they were taken at a time when parties could not testify by deposition. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Green, 52 Miss. 332.

Removal of disability.— If a witness be disqualified by reason of interest at the time of giving his deposition, and at the time of trial that disqualification is removed by statute, the deposition is admissible. Haynes v. Rowe, 40 Me. 181; Oliver v. Moore, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 482.

Copy of examination.— In Clay v. Stephenson, 7 A. & E. 185, 1 Jur. 448, 6 L. J. K. B. 211, 2 N. & P. 189, W. W. & D. 537, 34 E. C. L. 116, it was held that where evidence was returned as an extract from the records of the court, with examination of the witnesses in German, for which a translation was made and put in at the trial, that such evidence was inadmissible, if it purported to be a copy of and was not the examination itself. See also Atkins v. Palmer, 4 B. & Ald. 377, 6 E. C. L. 525.

Not legally certified.— The deposition of a deceased witness, signed by him, is inadmissible in evidence, when it does not appear that the adverse party had notice of the time and place of the taking of it, or that there was any opportunity for cross-examination, and the deposition is not certified as the law requires, but as an affidavit merely. Perry v. Siter, 37 Mo. 273.

Officer without jurisdiction.— Where a justice of the peace has no jurisdiction to swear witnesses and take depositions in a murder case, his attestation to a deposition taken in such a proceeding, the witness having signed by mark, and there being no other proof of its authenticity, will not authorize the introduction of such deposition in evidence on a subsequent trial in contradiction of such wit-rejection.[66] Mere formal defects or irregularities in the examination of witnesses out of court or upon commission will be disregarded upon the trial,[67] or at least it is within the discretion of the court whether the deposition shall be admitted.[68]

9. Sufficiency of Answers — a. In General. While the deponent must answer substantially all the interrogatories, as it is otherwise impossible to show whether he has told the whole truth,[69] yet an objection to the reading of a deposition on the ground that some question contained therein is not fully or properly answered is not tenable, if the answer is as full and minute as the interrogatory naturally and fairly interpreted calls for.[70] General answers to general ness' testimony. State v. Valere, 39 La. Ann. 1060, 3 So. 186.

United States practice.— Depositions not taken in accordance with the rules of the United States courts cannot be used in such courts, although taken in accordance with the practice prevalent in the state courts, unless the parties expressly waive the objection or by previous consent agree to have them taken and made evidence. But any matter of substance affecting the rights of the parties, especially any act of the party or of the witness, by which a party is deprived of the right of cross examination, will be good reason for rejecting the deposition. Hewlett v. Wood, 67 N. Y. 394; Rust v. Eckler, 41 N. Y. 488; Forrest v. Kissam, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 463; Kimball v. Davis, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 437.

Failure to put or answer interrogatory.— It is doubtful if there is no appearance on the other side and no cross interrogatories, whether the opposite party can complain of the omission to answer the last interrogatory. The reason given for the strict rule is that unless this last general interrogatory is answered, it is impossible to say that the witness has told the whole truth. Where it is clearly apparent that the witness could not have testified to anything further unless to contradict evidence in answer to the specific interrogatories, which certainly is not to be presumed, the omission is harmless. Semmens v. Walters, 55 Wis. 675, 13 N. W. 889. Where a commission to take testimony is sued out by plaintiff, in which defendant joins and furnishes cross interrogatories, and the commission with the depositions of the witnesses is returned, and it does not appear that the last general cross interrogatory has been put to and answered by the witnesses, and defendant on that ground objects to the reading of the depositions in evidence, the objection in general is fatal. Kimball v. Davis, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 437; Semmens v. Walters, 55 Wis. 675, 13 N. W. 889. Plaintiff, however, is at liberty in such case to show that the commission was executed and the depositions signed by the witnesses in the presence of the counsel of both parties, and that no objection was made at the time by the counsel for defendant, that all the interrogatories were not answered, and on such facts appearing the depositions will be received notwithstanding the objection. Kimball v. Davis, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 437.

interrogatories are usually regarded as sufficient,[71] but where the cross interrogatories are only generally answered, the deposition should not be admitted in evidence.[72]

b. Immaterial Questions. The refusal of a party to depose or to answer a cross interrogatory which does not appear to be material in the cause will not render his deposition inadmissible in evidence.[73]

c. Evasive or Incomplete Answers. While evasive or incomplete answers do not render the entire deposition inadmissible in evidence, any more than such answers given by a witness on a cross-examination on the stand,[74] yet where from the circumstances of the case it appears that the deponent has some motive for evasion,[75] or where the answers are so imperfect or evasive as to induce the court

No understanding on part of deponent.— It is not error to admit in evidence the answer to an interrogatory in a deposition that witness did not understand the first part of the interrogatory. Kuechler v. Wilson, 82 Tex. 638, 18 S. W. 317.

Part of answer inadmissible.— In Steinkeller v. Newton, 9 C. & P. 313, 8 Dowl. P. C. 579, 9 L. J. C. P. 262, 6 M. & G. 30 note, 1 Scott N. R. 148, 38 E. C. L. 190, a witness who had been examined in a foreign country stated in one of his answers the contents of a letter which was not produced. It was held on the trial of the cause in England that so much of the answer as related to the contents of the letter could not be received.

In England the courts have gone so far as to hold that answers to lost interrogatories may be read as admissions by the answering party, although some of the answers are unintelligible in themselves. Rowe v. Brenton, 8 B. & C. 737, 3 M. & R. 271, 15 E. C. L. 363. In Brabant v. Perne, 2 Ch. Rep. 36, 21 Eng. Reprint 609, it was held, however, that where there had been several trials of a land case, in which certain witnesses had sworn contrary to their depositions given thirty years before, the court would not order copies of such depositions to be recorded and exemplified where the originals had been lost.

Where an impertinent interrogatory is put to a witness, it does not lie with the party putting it to object that a part of the answer thereto is impertinent, if the part complained of is necessary to prevent an improper inference being drawn from that part of the answer which is responsive. Putnam v. Ritchie, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 390. Oral interrogatories.— Where a deposition is taken on oral interrogatories, upon notice, and the adverse party is not represented by attorney, but depends upon written interrogatories sent to the examining officer, the mere fact that some of the cross interrogatories are evasively answered, by reason of the neglect of such officer to press vigorously for full and exact answers, is not sufficient ground for suppressing the deposition. Trowbridge v. Sickler, 54 Wis. 306, 11 N. W. 581.

75. Tompkins v. Williams, 19 Ga. 569; Lurty v. Maryman, 12 La. Ann. 180; Fulton v. Golden, 28 N. J. Eq. 37; Terry v. McNiel, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 241; Willis v. Welch, 2 Code Rep. (N. Y.) 64. In Bullard v. Lambert, 40 Ala. 204, 208, the court said: "Several of the answers, to which objections are made, are not so full as to defy extreme criticism, and are yet capable of standing the test of the doctrine announced in Buckley v. Cunningham, 34 Ala. 69, in the following words: 'The answers to the cross-interrogatories are certainly not chargeable with redundancy; but, upon a careful examination of them, it appears that all the questions receive a substantial answer; and as we can discover nothing which would justify us in concluding that the witness was seeking to evade the disclosure of facts within his knowledge, we think that the court committed no error in refusing to suppress his deposition. Nelson v. Iverson, 24 Ala. 9, 60 Am. Dec. 442; Spence v. Mitchell, 9 Ala. 744.' A deposition should not be suppressed, when the question was not pertinent to the issue; nor when the answer could not have affected the result. Yarborough v. Hood, 13 Ala. 176; Gibson v. Goldthwaite, 7 Ala. 281, 42 Am. Dec. 592."

to believe that he has wilfully kept back material facts within his knowledge, the deposition should not be admitted in evidence.[76]

d. Irresponsive Answers. An answer to an interrogatory which is irrelevant or not responsive may be objected to by either party at the trial and should be excluded.[77] Where, however, a deposition has been filed in the cause, and the parties in the cause have had ample opportunity for examination of the same, or for further examination of the deponent before trial, they should proceed to obtain such examination instead of seeking to suppress the deposition upon the trial.[78]

e. Failure to Answer. Where a witness has failed or refused to answer a proper interrogatory, it has been considered good ground for refusing to receive the deposition in evidence,[79] and it has usually been considered a fatal objection to the whole deposition where there has been a refusal to answer a general interrogatory.[80] In all such cases, however, the reasons for accepting or rejecting the deposition must depend upon the circumstances of the particular case[81] and the Answer after refusal.— A deposition should not be suppressed because witness at first refused to answer questions, if he subsequently answered. Tedrowe v. Esher, 56 Ind. 443.

Evidence of fraud.— Where a son nineteen years old claims to have paid six thousand dollars for land conveyed to him by his father, and creditors of the father seek to impeach the conveyance as fraudulent, the son may be compelled to disclose the source from which his payment was made, and if he fails to answer fully questions on this point his deposition will be suppressed. Aultman, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Joy, 9 Ill. App. 32.

Pertinency of questions.— Where a witness has refused without plaintiff's fault to answer cross interrogatories on the ground that they were not pertinent, and it appears that the questions may become pertinent at the trial, the depositions will not be entirely suppressed, but it will be ordered that the unanswered questions be read at the trial, and if it then appears that they are pertinent the deposition shall be suppressed, otherwise not; or plaintiff may at his option submit to a suppression. No prejudice to opponent.— A deposition will not be suppressed because a final gen-nature of the question which the deponent has failed or refused to answer.[82] So a deposition will not be suppressed as evidence on account of a failure to answer a question, if the facts sought to be elicited can be ascertained from other parts of the deposition.[83]

f. Failure to Produce Documents. Where the evidence shows that a document is outside of the jurisdiction of the court, or without the power of a witness to produce, the fact of non-production is no objection to the admissibility of the deposition in evidence.[84] A deposition should not be rejected as of course because a certain paper referred to therein or which should have been annexed thereto is not produced,[85] yet when the production of such papers goes to the very gist of the action, the deposition will not be allowed in evidence unless such papers are annexed.[86]

eral interrogatory was not answered, where it appears that the opposite party could not be prejudiced by such omission. Semmens v. Walters, 55 Wis. 675, 13 N. W. 889.

Presence of parties.— Where in the return of a commission issued on behalf of a defendant to take a deposition no answers were given to certain interrogatories, but it appeared that plaintiff was present at the taking, and that the commission was returned in due form, it was held that it might be admitted in evidence. Copy of an account.— In Burnham v. Wood, 8 N. H. 334, where a witness annexed to his deposition a copy of an account for articles charged on the books of a corporation which was without the state, and where the corporation had no interest in the suit, it was held that the evidence was admissible, as the books were beyond the control of the court and the witness.

Destruction of papers.— A deposition referring to papers not produced is admissible if it appear that these papers were likely to be speedily destroyed. Tilghman v. Fisher, 9 Watts (Pa.) 441.

Immaterial papers.— Where notes and a deed are incidentally referred to by a witness in a deposition and the witness states that the deed is not in his possession or control, and they are not the basis of the action, nor are their contents in dispute, the fact that they are not annexed as exhibits does not invalidate the deposition. Lyon v. Barrows, 13 Iowa 428.

The word "copy" generally presupposes an original, but not always. A deposition ought not therefore to be rejected which speaks of a telegraphic despatch as a "copy," on the ground that an original was necessarily implied, which was not produced, nor its absence accounted for. Recollection of witness.— Where a witness in his deposition speaks of a fact as within his recollection, but to fix the time of its recurrence is obliged to refer to letters in his possession, the fact that he does not produce the letters will not render his answer inadmissible. Henderson v. Ilsley, 11 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 9, 49 Am. Dec. 41.

86. Coleman v. Colgate, 69 Tex. 88, 6 S. W. 553. And compare Fulton v. Golden, 28 N. J. Eq. 37.

Books of account.— When a deposition refers to books of account, copies of them at least should be produced, properly authenticated, to entitle the whole deposition to be read in evidence. Christie v. Nagel, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 213.

Execution of document.— The deposition of a witness to prove the execution of a paper cannot be read in evidence unless the paper be particularly described, identified, and annexed to the deposition. Petriken v. Collier, 7 Watts & S. (Pa.) 392.

10. AMENDMENT OF PROCESS. The fact that process in a cause has been amended either as to mere title[87] or by the addition or withdrawal of parties[88] will not as a general rule render a deposition regularly taken prior to such amendment inadmissible in evidence, provided there has been no surprise or injustice resulting to the newly made parties. While the general rule is believed to be as above stated there is creditable authority to the contrary, holding that where process has been amended so as to bring a new party into the action depositions previously taken cannot be used in evidence against him,[89] on the ground that the newly introduced party has had no right of cross-examination.[90]

11. AMENDMENT OF PLEADINGS. Where an amendment of the pleadings has been allowed it has been held that unless the issues have been substantially affected a deposition previously taken is admissible in evidence,[91] but depositions

Action against copartners.— A deposition taken in an action against copartners before one of the defendants appeared can be used in the trial after that defendant appears as against those who had appeared at the time it was taken, and also as against the one who had not appeared, to the same extent that it would have affected him as a partner of the others if he had not appeared at all. Patterson v. Stettauer, 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 54.

Action continued by survivor.— Testimony taken conditionally is admissible on the trial, although one of the original plaintiffs has died and the suit is continued by the survivor. Markoe v. Aldrich, 1 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 55.

After discontinuance.— A deposition taken to be used against all the defendants in the action may after a discontinuance as to one be used against the rest. Medcalf v. Seccomb, 36 Me. 71. So in Holdridge v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 16 Mich. 66, it was held that an amendment of a declaration by striking out one defendant, but not altering the substance of the issue, would not render previously taken depositions inadmissible.

Contest of will.— Depositions of the subscribing witnesses to a will duly taken before the surrogate in open court do not cease to be evidence by reason of the subsequent filing of objections by a contestant, and the proponent need not recall the witnesses. Who may object.— Where during the pendency of an action brought by a copartnership one of the partners dies, and before his representatives had been made parties a commission on behalf of plaintiffs was issued, and a copy of the interrogatories served on defendant, it was held on appeal that the testimony taken under the commission should be received; and that none but the widow and legal representatives of deceased plaintiff had the right to object to it. XXI. ACTIONS AND PROCEEDINGS IN WHICH USED.

A. In General. Where a deposition has been regularly taken in a cause it is as a general rule admissible throughout the subsequent stages or proceedings had in the action.[93] So where a trial of issues is directed depositions taken in the original cause are admissible,[94] provided sufficient reason exists for offering such deposition in evidence.[95] Where, however, issues are directed out of equity, it has been held necessary, in accordance with the English practice, that there Depositions taken ex parte after default and order pro confesso do not become inadmissible by defendants afterward appearing and answering so that the pro confesso is taken off; but defendants may obtain a commission to take the depositions of the same witnesses on a proper showing and on terms to protect the complainant. Where a cause is removed from one court to another depositions taken in the original court are admissible in the court of removal (Pelamourges v. Clark, 9 Iowa 1. See also Earl v. Hurd, 5 Blackf. Where depositions taken in an original action are admitted to be read in a cross action, only such portions should be admitted as were pertinent to the issues in the original action. Underhill v. Van Cortlandt, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 339. A deposition admissible in the original suit is also admissible upon the hearing of a cross bill filed after it was taken, under an order afterward entered that all depositions taken in the original suit should be read in evidence in the cross suit also, with the same effect and subject to the same exceptions. Smith v. Profitt, 82 Va. 832, 1 S. E. 67.

Devisavit vel non.— A deposition taken before the register of wills in support of an alleged will, in consequence of a caveat by one of the persons interested in preventing the probate, is evidence on the issue of devisavit vel non, ordered by the register's court on an appeal afterward entered by another person interested, not a party to the original proceedings. 95. Dietrich v. Dietrich, 1 Penr. & W. (Pa.) 306.

Purpose of contradiction.— Where the complainant in an equity cause took the depositions of defendants, and issues were afterward framed and tried before a jury, it was held that it was not error for the court to refuse to allow complainant, after closing his evidence, and upon the cross-examination of defendants, who testified in their own behalf, to read their depositions "as evidence" or for any purpose other than for the purpose of contradicting them. Pearce v. Suggs, 85 Tenn. 724, 4 S. W. 526.

should be an order from the chancery court directing the use of the deposition upon the trial of the issues at law.[96]

B. Use on New Trial. Because a deposition has been read on a former trial it does not follow that it may be read at every subsequent trial of the cause, since the reason for its former admission may have ceased to exist in the interim.[97] While in most cases such deposition is admissible in evidence,[98] yet it seems that there must be some showing of absence, death, or disability.[99]

C. Use on Appeal. A deposition which has been taken with all necessary formality in a cause may be used upon an appeal in the same case,[1] provided the same is properly transmitted to the higher jurisdiction.[2]

96. Cahoon v. Ring, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,292, 1 Cliff. 592, in which case it was held that the court would not make such an order after the record on the equity side is made up and the case is already in the law court.

Limitation under New York statute.— The reading of the testimony of a deceased witness given on the trial of an action or hearing of a special proceeding is limited, by N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 830, to a new trial or hearing of the same action or proceeding; and the deposition of a witness which was taken to be used in one action cannot be read in another after the death of the witness. People v. Brugman, 3 N. Y. App. Div. 155, 38 N. Y. Suppl. 193.

In assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, plaintiff having read in evidence the deposition of a witness, it is competent for defendant to read the testimony of the same witness taken upon a former trial of the cause, and made a part of the record by bill of exception, not only to contradict the facts stated in the deposition, but to prove other facts material to the issue. Parker v. Donaldson, 6 Watts & S. (Pa.) 132.

Order of court unnecessary.— Under Minn. Rev. St. c. 95, § 21, which provides that depotions taken for use on the trial of a cause may be used upon a subsequent trial of the same cause, an order of the court allowing them to be so used is unnecessary. Chouteau v. Parker, 2 Minn. 118.

Certified case.— A deposition taken in a chancery suit certified to the supreme court is admissible, although taken before the case was removed. Earl v. Hurd, 5 Blaekf. (Ind.) 248.

Deposition not used in lower court.— It is no reason for refusing to either party the right to use a deposition in the appellate court that it was not used by the party taking the same in the lower court. Pelamourges v. Clark, 9 Iowa 1.

Depositions taken by consent.— In Forney v. Hallagher, 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 203, a deposition taken by consent before arbitrators was sought to be introduced in evidence on appeal from their award. In passing upon the question the court said: "When a cause is brought into the common pleas by an appeal from the award of arbitrators, the proceedings are de novo. This deposition, therefore, is to be considered, as if taken in another suit, between the same parties for the same cause of action. This is putting it in as strong a point of light for the plaintiff as it will bear, for the consent of the plaintiff was only that the deposition should be taken in the cause then pending, viz.: before the arbitrators, and in such case, the general rule is, that the deposition would be evidence, if the witness were dead. Richardson v. Stewart, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 84; Miles v. O'Hara, 4 Binn. (Pa.) 108. In the case of Magill v. Kauffman, 4 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 317, 8 Am. Dec. 713, this court went one step further, and decided that the deposition was evidence, though the witness were living, provided he were not within the state. But there was no ground for admitting the deposition in the case before us, because the witness was living within the state, and within the jurisdiction of the court."

A New Jersey statute providing that on appeal from justice's court no other documents, proofs, and witnesses shall be produced and examined than such as were previously examined in the trial below is not violated by the introduction of depositions taken de bene esse of witnesses since unable to testify. D. Other Actions Between Same Parties — 1. In General. Depositions taken in a former suit between the same parties, involving the same question or subject-matter, are usually admissible when the question again arises for judicial determination.[3] It is not material that the parties be identical, or that there be complete mutuality in respect to their relation to each other.[4] The rule for allowing depositions taken in one cause to be read in another seems to derive its support from necessity rather than principle, and is justly subject to several restrictions. The following may be considered as the usual tests by which the admissibility of such testimony is to be determined: (1) The parties must be the same, or in privity;[5] (2) the question in controversy must be the suit.[9] The general rules above laid down have been held applicable, notwithstanding the fact that one suit is at law and the other in equity.[10] Because a deposition has been taken regularly in a former cause between the same parties it does not necessarily follow that such fact of itself is a sufficient reason for admitting such deposition in evidence in a subsequent cause between the same parties;[11] there should be some showing of the death, absence, or disability of the witness whose deposition is desired;[12] and in some jurisdictions his death is considered a prerequisite.[13] The admission of depositions taken in a former suit between the same parties is a matter somewhat within the discretion of the court,[14] and one which will

Greenleaf says that such proof is received "if the witness, though not dead, is out of the jurisdiction, or cannot be found after diligent search, or is insane, or sick, and unable to testify, or has been summoned, but appears to have been kept away by the adverse party." 1 Greenleaf Ev. § 163 [cited in Long v. Davis, 18 Ala. 801].

Loss of memory.— The deposition of a witness, once regularly taken in a pending cause, may afterward be read in evidence in another cause between the same parties in regard to the same subject-matter, when in the interval the witness has lost his memory by reason of ill-health and old age. Rothrock v. Gallaher, 91 Pa. St. 108.

Use in criminal case.— A deposition given in a civil cause by the state against defendant and his bondsmen is not rendered admissible on defendant's prosecution for false pretenses growing out of the same matters by the fact that the deponent was summoned as a witness and is dead. not be reviewed unless there has been a palpable abuse of the discretion as exercised.[15]

2. Necessity of Order or Notice. As a general rule where a case has been dismissed before any trial has been had the entire case is out of court, including the interrogatories taken in that case which have not been read in evidence, unless there is some order of the court or agreement of the parties that the same may be used and read in another case.[16] In order to take a case out of such general rule, and to allow the interrogatories taken in the dismissed case to be read in another case upon substantially the same issue and between substantially the same parties, some good reason should be at least shown, either that the witness is dead, disqualified, or not accessible.[17] Under such circumstances the depositions should be either filed with the papers in the new cause[18] or reasonable notice should be given by the party seeking to introduce it to the adverse party of his intention to do so and of the grounds therefor;[19] but it has been held that where the notice sufficiently informed the party, the commission issued for, and the deposition was entitled of, both actions, it might be used in both.[20] Ordinarily in the absence of agreement, depositions cannot be noticed for two

15. Kercheval v. Ambler, 4 Dana (Ky.) 166.

Whether the issue in the two cases is the same or not is in the first instance a question for the presiding judge to decide, and a ruling or finding by him on that point can be reversed by the law court only when the case discloses an error therein; just as the question "whether the witness who is called as an expert has the requisite qualifications and knowledge to enable him to testify, is a preliminary question for the court. The decision of this question is conclusive, unless it appears upon the evidence to have been erroneous, or to have been founded upon some error in law." The Indiana statute authorizes the use in evidence of depositions taken in a former suit where it appears: First, that they have been duly filed in the court where the previous suit was pending; second, that they have remained on file from the dismissal of the previous suit until the time at which it is proposed to use them. The courts cannot annul this enactment by annexing conditions precedent to the use of such evidence, which the legislature has not required. Maggart v. Freeman, 27 Ind. 531. See also Whitcomb v. Stewart, Smith (Ind.) 135.

19. Bowie v. Findly, 55 Ga. 604.

No surprise to opposite party.— Where a deposition of one deceased, taken in a suit for the possession of land between A and B, was offered in evidence in an action of ejectment for the same land between B and C, who derived his title from A, it was held that it was admissible without having been filed, or notice given of its intended use, if there was no surprise to the opposite party. Adams v. Raigner, 69 Mo. 363, 364. In this case the court said: "It is true that in Samuel v. Withers, 16 Mo. 532, it was said that the deposition should be filed in the case where it was proposed to use it, or notice should be given of its intended use, but in Cabanne v. Walker, 31 Mo. 274, this rule was not considered indispensable, and was thought to be merely intended to guard against surprise."

Proceedings to render deposition competent.— In Stewart v. Register, 108 N. C. 588, 591, 13 S. E. 234, it was objected on the part of defendants to a deposition read in evidence in a subsequent suit that it "had not been regularly taken in this action, and no proceeding in law or equity had been taken to make" the same competent. In passing upon this question, the court said: "Nor was it necessary that any proceeding should be taken in a Court of law or equity to render it competent as evidence in this action. It was sufficient to take it from the files to which it properly belonged and introduce it on the trial, properly identifying it with the former action. It could not be changed, modified or amended; it, as it appeared on file, was sufficient or insufficient, competent or incompetent. Why, therefore, should any proceeding be taken in Court to render it competent? Any proper objection might have been made to it at the time it was put in evidence. It might have been objected that it was not taken in another action between the parties, or that it was taken in respect to a different matter or cause of action; it might have been objected further that it was in no way material to the former action."

separate actions,[21] although the parties to the action in which they are to be taken are the same.[22]

XXII. OBJECTIONS.

A. In General. In order to be available all defects, irregularities, or illegal evidence in depositions must be objected to or they will be considered waived.[23]

B. Who May Object — 1. In General. The question as to who may object to the taking or admission in evidence of a deposition depends upon the nature of the objection and the time when the same is raised.[24] Except in specified cases[25] either party has a right to object where the admission of the deposition would result in prejudice to his rights,[26] and to have such question passed upon by the court;[27] but a party will not be allowed to object to defects and irregularities which pertain to parties to the action other than himself.[28]

2. Party Taking. Where both parties appear and cross-examine at the taking of a deposition, the party causing the same to be taken cannot object to its being used by the opposite party on the ground of any irregularity[29] or on the ground of the incompetency of the witness.[30]

Waiver of objections see infra, XXIII.

24. An intervener will not be heard to object to depositions already taken on the ground that he had no opportunity to propound cross interrogatories. Rainbolt v. March, 52 Tex. 246.

Answers not responsive.— Where a witness, examined on deposition, instead of answering direct interrogatories as they are put, replies by introducing new and distinct facts not inquired about, and which favor the party on whose behalf the questions are put, the opposite party and not merely the party propounding direct questions may object that the answers are not responsive. Greenman v. O'Connor, 25 Mich. 30.

Competency of witness.— Where both parties in a suit obtain a special commission to take the deposition of a person, and only one of them acts under the commission and takes the deposition, the other is not precluded from objecting to the competency of the deponent. Beverley v. Brooke, 2 Leigh (Va.) 425.

Stipulation.— In French v. Canada, etc., R. Co., 42 Mich. 64, 3 N. W. 257, which was an action to enforce a joint liability, summons was served on only one of the defendants, who stipulated for taking a deposition. The other afterward appeared and the deposition was excluded on the trial, on his objection that it was taken without notice to him. It was held that defendant who stipulated could not bring error on account of such objection.

The cross-examining party to a deposition cannot object that direct questions were not answered by the deponent. Feagan v. Cureton, 19 Ga. 404.

Exceptions not taken in time.— Exceptions to depositions for want of a formal jurat and for the reason that an interrogatory is not according to law cannot be considered, when not taken in the time and manner prescribed by the rules of court. Marsh v. Nordyke, etc., Co., (Pa. 1888) 15 Atl. 875.

Argument on appeal.— An objection to the admission of a part of a deposition that the form of an interrogatory does not give notice of the substance of the answer thereto so as to permit cross-examination thereon cannot be taken on argument in an appellate court, when the entire deposition is not before the court. Kershaw v. Wright, 115 Mass. 361. Where the record shows a failure on the part of the trial court to pass on the exceptions to depositions, this is evidence to the appellate court that the exceptions were not urged. Where a party uses a deposition taken by his opponent he makes it his own, and his adversary has the right to object to interrogatories even when propounded by himself,

C. Time to Object — 1. In General. While the time to object to the admissibility of a deposition in evidence may depend upon the nature of the objection urged and the opportunity for previous objection,[31] it is usually a matter regulated by the statute or rules of court;[32] but it may be stated as a general rule that objection should always be taken at the earliest opportunity[33] or it will be considered waived.[34] The most universally observed rule on this subject is that defects in a deposition must be objected to before the cause comes on for trial,[35]

unless the ground of objection was unknown before it was offered in evidence[36] or does not appear on the face of the deposition itself.[37] The swearing of the jury has been held the legal commencement of the trial within the meaning of the rule requiring objections to be interposed before the commencement of the trial;[38] but the rule in this regard is usually a matter of practice which is regulated by the statute or rules of court.[39]

be confined to the objections alleged and will not be permitted to rely upon other grounds in the appellate court.[47]

3. As Dependent on Nature of Objection — a. Formal Defects in General. The courts have drawn the distinction between mere formal objections that vitiate the deposition itself and objections to the evidence therein contained. In the former case objection must be made before trial,[48] yet substantial objections that go to the very gist and legality of the deposition itself may be urged even at the trial.[49] Where a deposition has been taken in conformity with the statute, a

Agreement of parties.— Where at a trial the parties agreed that they would not object to the evidence taken under commission, except as noted on the return, unless for reasons to be satisfactory to the court, and one party has under the agreement introduced illegal testimony without objection, he will not on appeal be allowed to object to evidence of the same general character as the incompetent testimony introduced by him, unless his objections were specific at the trial and, as to the sufficiency of such objections the trial court is the final judge under such agreement. In re Bull, 111 N. Motion for new trial.— Where it was claimed on a motion for a new trial that a deposition which had been admitted by the court below should have been rejected because the notary public before whom it was taken had no power to exercise his office in the county where it was taken, but the admission of such deposition had been objected to entirely on other grounds, it was held that it must be assumed that such notary public had authority to act in the county where the deposition was taken. Lyon v. Ely, 24 Conn. 507.

Proof of absence of witness.— In Sheldon v. Wood, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 267, a deposition offered in evidence before referees was objected to as being inadmissible generally. The absence of the witness was proved, and no objection made to the sufficiency of the certificate. The referees adjourned pending the question, and at the next meeting the general objection was repeated and overruled and the deposition admitted. On the appeal the objection was raised for the first time that the absence of the witness was not sufficiently proved and that the certificate was defective in form. It was held that these objections came too late.

Where a general objection is made to the reading of a deposition which appears regular on its face, the supreme court will not notice any specific objections made for the first time in that court. Donnell v. Thompson, 13 Ala. 440; Worthington v. Curd, 15 Ark. 491.

Rule to show cause why depositions should not be read.— When a rule taken upon the adverse party to show cause why certain depositions should not be read has been made motion to suppress it at the trial is somewhat within the discretion of the court;[50] but if the deposition be not taken in conformity with the rules of law it is then illegal evidence and must be rejected when offered if a motion for that purpose is made.[51]

b. Objections to Interrogatories. An objection to a deposition on the ground that the interrogatories are improper should be made before the commission issues, at the time of taking,[52] or in any event before the trial of the cause.[53] So an objection to the form of an interrogatory must be made in the first instance, and where a party was present with the privilege of cross-examination and made no objection at the time, a subsequent objection will not be considered.[54]

c. Objection to Notice. In order that a party shall avail himself of the fact that no notice or insufficient notice was given of the taking of a deposition he absolute, as shown by the minutes of the court, it is too late to urge objection to the service of the rule after the trial has begun and the evidence has been offered. Right of counsel to be present at the execution of commission.— In Union Bank v. Torrey, 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 269, it was held that parties have the same right to appear by counsel on the execution of a commission as on the trial of a cause, and notice of their intention to do so is no more necessary to be given in one case than in the other, but no reasons were given for such ruling. See also Brown v. Kimball, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 259. An objection that an attorney was present on the part of plaintiff at the execution of a commission was raised in Farrow v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 53, 29 Am. Dec. 564, and was held untenable. In this case, however, the court admitted the evil of the practice and declined to interfere on the ground that the rules they had framed had not been promulgated, at the same time stating that there was another substantial reason for overruling the objection in the delay of some two years that had occurred after the filing of the deposition and before the objection was taken. In Walker v. Barron, 4 Minn. 253, it was held that neither party had a right to have any one present for him (unless by consent), at the execution of a commission, and if the return to the commission showed that a person was present at its execution on behalf of one of the parties, the deposition should be excluded even when the objection was raised on the trial.

must avail himself of such privilege before the deposition is offered in evidence at the trial; an objection on such grounds comes too late at such a stage of the proceedings.[55] Where, however, a deposition is taken without authority or notice, and in contravention of the rules of law and evidence, an objection thereto may be taken when it is offered as evidence to the jury.[56]

d. Objections to Authority of Person Taking. An objection to the authority of the commissioner or the person taking the deposition must always be made before trial,[57] and especially is this so where the party objecting had knowledge of such defect prior to the trial, and made no objection on that account.[58]

e. Objections to Competency of Witness. The time when objections should be made to the competency of a witness or evidence is a question which is usually regulated by statute[59] or by rules of court.[60] Although it has been held in some jurisdictions that the objections to competency can be made when the deposition is produced in the same manner as when the witness is tendered for examination on the trial,[61] especially where the incompetency cannot be removed or

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 314.

Election to admit interested testimony.— A party has a right at his election to admit an interested witness to testify against him, but the election must be made as soon as the opportunity is presented for making it; and failing to make it at that time he must be considered as having waived it forever. Donelson v. Taylor, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 390.

Reservation of right to except.— If the interest of a witness in the cause is of such a nature that it might have been released by the party calling him if no objection on that account has been made before his testimony was closed it is too late to raise the objection at the hearing; and a reservation by the opposing counsel made at the commencement of the examination of a right to except to the testimony thereafter on the ground of interest is unavailing. Gregory v. Dodge, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 557. In Gregory v. Dodge, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 593, the examiner made a note that the opposite counsel reserved "all objection to the competency of the witness," but no objection was made before the hearing of the cause. It was held that under the rule of court (No. 85) the objection was too late.

Second cross-examination.— A party who has twice before the commissioner cross-examined a witness cannot at the trial object that he was incompetent because black and so presumed to be a slave. Goldenbow v. Wright, 13 La. 371.

See 16 Cent. Dig. tit. "Depositions," § 314.

Interest of witness previously known.— An objection to a deposition on account of interest cannot be raised for the first time when it is offered on the trial, if the party objecting knew of the interest when the deposition was taken. Gray v. Brown, 22 Ala. 262; Segond's Succession, 2 La. Ann. 138; King v. Upton, 4 Me. 387, 16 Am. Dec. 266. But if the objection is made as soon as may be after the interest is discovered it will be heard. Gray v. Brown, 22 Ala. 262.

Newly discovered interest.— After a party has taken a deposition and given it to the jury he cannot ask the court to instruct the jury that they are not to regard it because the witness is incompetent from interest, there being no pretense that the interest is newly discovered. Walters v. Munroe, 17 Md. 154, 77 Am. Dec. 328; Whiteford v. Munroe, 17 Md. 135.

Objection reserved.— Where it does not appear that a party was aware at the time of crossing his adversary's interrogatories that the witness had an interest in the event of the suit the objection may be made, although not reserved. McClure v. King, 13 La. Ann. 141.

f. Objections to Irregularities in Taking. While as a general rule objections to defects and irregularities in the taking of a deposition must be objected to before the same is offered in evidence at the trial,[66] yet it has been held that a motion to suppress a deposition not taken in conformity with law is not addressed to the discretion of the court for it is illegal evidence, and a motion to reject it may be made when it is offered to be read.[67] In some states it is provided by statute[68] or by rules of court that objections to depositions on the ground of Cross-examination on the merits.— If upon cross-examination of a witness in taking his deposition he appears to be interested and therefore incompetent, the objection to his competency is not waived by pursuing the cross-examination upon the merits of the case. Rogers v. Dibble, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 238; Walker v. Parker, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,082, 5 Cranch C. C. 639.

Discovery of interest.— An objection to the competency of a witness from interest can be taken at any time before the trial is concluded, if taken as soon as the interest is discovered. Johnson v. Alexander, 14 Tex. 382.

Removal of interest.— If the deposition of an interested witness be taken and filed to be used in chancery, and the opposite party does not move to suppress it before trial, the exception if taken at the trial may still be sustained; but the party offering the deposition may remove the interest and avail himself of the testimony of the witness. Amendment of certificate.—In Hall v. Renfro, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 51, it appeared that an exception to a deposition had been taken and sustained more than two years prior to the trial. No leave of court had been obtained or even asked to have the certificate amended, but, without the knowledge of defendant and without authority from the court, the deposition was withdrawn from the papers, sent to a distant state, where, an amendment of the certificate having been attempted, it was placed among the papers of the cause, after the parties had announced themselves ready for trial. It was held that an exception to such a deposition, although not taken until after the jury was sworn, was under the circumstances properly sustained.

Code, § 3892, providing that where a deposition has been in the clerk's office for twenty-four hours prior to the trial exceptions to the execution and return thereof must be made in writing, and notice thereof given to the opposite party before the case is submitted to the jury, has no application where the parties have in writing waived commission, commissioners, and notice, and have stipulated that answers to interrogatories written out by the witness and sworn to before a notary should be received as though taken in the regular way. After rule to show cause.— The objection that all the cross interrogatories were not answered will be too late after a rule to show cause, under the Louisiana act of March 20, 1839, section 17, No. 53, is made absolute. It should have been made on the trial of the rule. Anderson v. Dinn, 17 La. 168.

Refusal of witness to answer.—Where upon the taking of a deposition of a witness de bene esse the opposing party is present in person or is represented by counsel, and the witness refuses to answer proper and material questions, the objection must be availed of upon the examination, or afterward by motion before the trial. The party cannot wait until the trial and then object begun,[78] since the practice is well settled that illegal and irrelevant evidence may be assailed by a general objection and excluded at any stage of the proceedings.

j. Objections to Evidence. Where objection is made to the form or nature of the evidence contained in or attached to the deposition,[79] the time for taking such objection depends in a great measure upon the nature of the objection and the situations of the parties prior to the time when the objection is sought to be urged.[80] Statements in a deposition which are not legitimate evidence, like

Statement of conclusion.— It is not reversible error for the trial court to refuse to strike out a portion of the answer of a witness in a deposition, because it stated a conclusion as to the effect of language, instead of repeating the language, where the answer was probative in its character, and material to the issues, and the objection was not made until the deposition was read at the trial. Correctness of answers.— Where a witness and the stenographer differ as to the correctness of answers taken down, the proper practice is to add the correction of the witness to the deposition, and leave the question to the jury to determine whether credence shall be given to the witness or to the stenographer. Ex p. Miller, 11 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 69, 8 Ohio N. P. 142 [affirmed in 21 Ohio Cir. Ct. 445, 12 Ohio Cir. Dec. 102].

Illegal proof.— An incompetent answer to the concluding interrogatory of an otherwise competent deposition should be excluded on objection thereto, whether its exclusion was moved before the trial or not, as it is the duty of the court in any stage of a cause to exclude illegal proof. Bush v. Jackson, 24 Ala. 273.

Motion to strike out.— Incompetent testimony in a deposition, although not objected to when the deposition is taken or when it is read, may properly be objected to by motion to strike out after the party reading it has rested. Sailors v. Nixon-Jones Printing Co., 20 Ill. App. 509.

It is difficult to lay down any general rule covering all cases. Evidence may be proper for one purpose and improper for another. It may be admissible as independent evidence or only as dependent evidence. It may be admissible as tending to establish the issue or it may be admissible as rebutting or supporting evidence. It may prove a fact or it may only be a link in a chain which proves the fact. And if the court must on a motion interposed before the hearing to suppress evidence examine into all the facts proved in the case to determine its materiality it would amount to the labor of a trial of the cause on each motion, and if all the evidence was not then taken the court in many cases could not know but evidence might still be taken which would render what then appeared to be immaterial highly important on the hearing. Swift v. Castle, 23 Ill. 209.

80. An amplified explanation of a witness' answers to interrogatories attached to his deposition, in which he swears to its truth, although not signed by him or certified by the commissioner, will not be excluded on objection first raised at the trial. Ratliff v. Thomson, 61 Miss. 71.

Corrected evidence.— An objection to the testimony of a witness when giving his deposition, which might have been corrected if seasonably made, will not be listened to for the first time upon the trial. Wilson Sewing Mach. Co. v. Lewis, 10 Ill. App. 191.

Parol evidence.— In assumpsit for goods sold and delivered an objection to parol evidence that the goods were shipped to defendant by her written instructions, in the absence of the writing itself, may be raised for the first time when the evidence is offered on the trial, although a deposition of the witness was in possession of defendant's counsel twenty-four hours before the trial, and no notice had been given to plaintiff to produce the writing. Boykin v. Collins, 20 Ala. 230.

hearsay[81] or opinion evidence, may be objected to at the trial;[82] but those which are objectionable merely because secondary evidence should be excepted to before trial.[83]

4. Failure to Make Timely Objection. Objection to a deposition should be made when the opportunity first presents itself or it will be considered waived;[84] and especially is this the case where there has been a former trial of the cause and no objection was therein noted.[85] By allowing a deposition to be read once without objection, a party waives all objections to any formality or irregularity in the taking of which he has knowledge; and thereafter he can only raise objections to the competency of the witness or the subject-matter of the deposition.[86]

D. Sufficiency and Scope — 1. In General. It is a well-settled rule that where objection to the introduction of a deposition in evidence is made the par-

Proof of passage of ordinance.— Where no objection before trial was made to a deposition in which deponent testified to the passage of a certain ordinance by a city, on the ground that it was an attempt to prove the passage of the ordinance by parol instead of by record, the objection is waived. Waiver of objections see infra, XXIII.

Refusal to remand commission.— Where testimony taken under a commission had been filed more than eight months and had been before an auditor to whose report exceptions had been filed, the commission will not be remanded on the ground that the commissioner had by mistake written down incorrectly the testimony of one of the defendants who was examined as a witness. Issue of law.— In directing an issue at law the chancellor ordered that all testimony previously taken in the case should be read at the trial of the issue. Certain parts of depositions had been objected to at the time of taking, but no objection was made to them when the order was granted authorizing them to be read on the trial of the issue. Under such circumstances it was held that it was too late to renew the objections when the depositions were offered on the trial, and that by failing to object when the order was made the objections were waived. Black v. Lamb, 12 N. J. Eq. 108.

Proof of notice.— If depositions are read on a trial without objection, or if objection is made without an exception taken to their admission, upon another trial they will not be excluded for the failure to prove notice to take them, unless the party objecting has given notice to the other party of his intention to object to them in time to enable the party offering them to take them again, and the witnesses are alive at the time of such notice. (Ky.) 100, it was held that the rejection without notice of objection to depo-ticular defect relied upon should be pointed out in the objection,[87] otherwise it will be considered as waived and cannot be urged on the hearing[88] or on appeal.[89] Mere vague and indefinite objections[90] or general objections going to the entire deposition without specification or detail will be rejected as not worthy of consideration.[91]

Stringent construction.— A general motion to suppress a deposition which does not specify any particular grounds of objection, if it can be considered at all in the appellate court, will receive the strongest construction that it reasonably admits of against the objecting party. Walker v. Smith, 28 Ala. 569.

Admission of objection.— When a party offers a deposition, accompanied by a release of the witness, admitting that he is incompetent without a release, and the opposite party objects to the deposition on the ground that it did not appear that the release was known to the witness, the objection is sufficiently definite and specific. Fitzpatrick v. Baker, 31 Ala. 563.

Failure of record to show authority for taking.— Where objection is taken generally to the admission of depositions without specifying the objection, if the record does not show a state of facts authorizing the taking of depositions the judgment will be reversed for admitting them. This distinction is grounded not in form merely, but has its support in substance; and indeed a departure from this rule would be attended with the charge of doing manifest injustice. In many cases an appellate court sitting as a court of error would be called on to reverse on exceptions, of which the court and the opposite party never heard, and which if pointed out at the time would have been remedied or waived. Peters v. Horbach, 4 Pa. St. 134.

It would be an absurd practice to permit a party to throw upon the court the burden of scrutinizing the entire proceedings, from the making of the affidavit to the return of the deposition into court, in quest of a fatal objection; while the party stood by forbearing to direct the attention of the court to any points of objection. Saltmarsh v. Bower, 34 Ala. 613.

Answers to particular questions.— Gassen v. Hendrick, 74 Cal. 444, 16 Pac. 242.

Irrelevant matter.— Where a deposition containing irrelevant matter is offered in evidence, objection should be made to the irrelevant portions specifically and not to the whole deposition (Hamaker v. Whitecar, 1 Walk. (Pa.) 120), and although a deposition offered in evidence may contain some irrelevant and improper matter, and a general objection is made to its admission by the party against whom it is offered, it is still not error for the court to allow the whole deposition to be read to the jury, but particularly instructing them in the charge to regard only those parts of the deposition which tend

3. Questions Raised by General Objection. A general objection to a deposition reaches the relevancy, competency, or legal effect of the testimony;[93] but will not be considered as extending to any matter of form or question of regularity or authority in respect to the taking of such deposition.[94]

E. Necessity For Notice of Objection. The mode of making objection to the admission of depositions in evidence depends upon the specific objection urged at the time when the objection is taken.[95] In some states the law requires a notice in writing of exceptions to the depositions to be filed before the time of trial;[96] to prove a particular point which it is material for the party to prove (Northfield v. Plymouth, 20 Vt. 582).

Leading interrogatories.—Neyland v. Bendy, 69 Tex. 711, 7 S. W. 497.

Partly hearsay.—Tussey v. Behmer, 9 Lanc. Bar (Pa.) 45. See also Ward v. Reynolds, 32 Ala. 384; Charlton v. Unis, 4 Gratt. (Va.) 58.

Several depositions.— One motion to suppress several depositions is well overruled if either be good. Bartee v. James, 33 Ala. 34; Thomas v. De Graffenreid, 27 Ala. 651. An objection "to each sentence of each deposition" is nothing more than a general objection to each deposition, and where each deposition so objected to contained some legal evidence the objections were held to be properly overruled. Taylor v. Strickland, 37 Ala. 642.

93. Blackburn v. Morton, 18 Ark. 384; Parsons v. Huff, 38 Me. 137; Fuchs v. Morris, 81 Hun (N. Y.) 536, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 1017; Taylor v. Mayhew, 11 Heisk. W. 870; State v. Jones, 7 Nev. 408.

Where a defendant by his cross-examination of a co-defendant elicits facts additional to his deposition, and which will operate against the party cross-examining, he cannot get rid of their effect by objecting to the competency of the witness. Bailey v. Cooper, 5 Humphr. (Tenn.) 400.

94. Blackburn v. Morton, 18 Ark. 384; Parsons v. Huff, 38 Me. 137; Garvin v. Luttrell, 10 Humphr. (Tenn.) 16 [citing Sexton v. Brock, 15 Ark. 345; Duvall v. Ellis, 13 Mo. 203; Hughes v. Nance, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 57].

Certified objection.— Where it was certified in the caption of a deposition that "the defendant objects to the foregoing deposition, both as to the form in which it is taken and the matter testified to by the witness," it was held that the objection was too general, and could not avail defendant as an objection to the leading character of an interrogatory contained in the deposition, the grounds thereof not being specified. Whipple v. Stevens, 22 N. H. 219.

Opinion of deponent.— A general objection to the admission of a deposition is not sufficient to warrant the exclusion of an answer to an interrogatory therein on the ground that it called for an opinion of deponent. Merchants' Despatch Transp. Co. v. Leysor, 89 Ill. 43.

95. Defect apparent on face of deposition. — Where a defect or omission is apparent on the face of depositions, it is a usual practice in chancery to move to suppress them, but not to exclude them for irrelevancy or on account of the matter deposed to. Vaugine v. Taylor, 18 Ark. 65.

Instructions of court.— An objection to parts of a deposition as being hearsay may be made by a request to instruct the jury to disregard such parts. Pittman v. Gaty, 10 Ill. 186. So where a deposition is offered, part of which is admissible and part not, the objector should if possible confine his objection to the inadmissible part; but if the matters are so blended as to be inseparable he may accomplish his object by asking an instruction as to the applicability of the evidence. Pettigrew v. Barnum, 11 Md. 434, 69 Am. Dec. 212.

Upon a motion to arrest the reading of the depositions of a witness who testified that he was the agent of the party plaintiff, upon the ground that his authority as agent was in writing and ought to be produced, and upon the introduction of other evidence to prove that his authority was in writing, it was held that whether the fact that the authority was in writing was sufficiently proved was a fact for the finding of the court which tried the case; that the supreme court would not interfere with the finding of the court below under such circumstances, except in a clear, strong case; and that a motion thus to arrest the reading of depositions or the examination of a witness was irregular, the better practice being to let the reading or examination proceed, and upon proof that the testimony was illegal to move afterward to withdraw it from the jury. but an objection may be filed with the papers in the case or by indorsement of objection upon the deposition itself.[97]

F. Renewal of Objections at Trial. Although a party has objected to the deposition at the time of taking or prior to the time when it is offered in evidence, yet in order to render his objection available it must, save in the case of incompetent evidence,[98] be renewed at the trial or it will be considered waived[99] and will not be considered on appeal.[1]

Interrogatories by consent.— Where interrogatories are taken by consent without commission in a justice's court, they will not be excluded on mere written objection to the same, founded upon refusal of the witness to answer some of the cross interrogatories, it not appearing that any notice of the objection was given to the opposite party or his counsel, nor that the answers had not been in the office for twenty-four hours before the trial. Baker v. Thompson, 89 Ga. 486, 15 S. E. 644.

No venue shown.—Where the interrogatories are rejected on the ground that no venue is shown, objection to them will not be overruled on a subsequent trial, on the ground that notice of the objection was not given in writing, as is required when interrogatories have been on file twenty-four hours. Cecil v. Gazan, 71 Ga. 631.

Objection apparent on face of deposition.— In Myers v. Casey, 14 Cal. 542, it was held that the rule that "all exceptions to depositions . . . unless appearing on the face thereof, must be filed," etc., meant not that the objectionable matter must appear, but that the objection must appear on the face of the depositions.

Objection resulting in nonsuit.—Where reasonable notice to the adverse party of formal objections to a deposition is not given, the court will set aside a nonsuit entered in consequence of such objections to the deposition without costs. Dodge v. Israel, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,952, 4 Wash. 323.

Chancery practice.— When the deposition of a party in a suit in chancery is taken under a special commission, subject to all just exceptions, whether the deposition be excepted against on the ground of incompetency or not, it behooves the court to examine and decide the question of competency; and although the deposition be read at the hearing in the court of chancery without exception, yet if on an appeal from the decree the appellate court finds the deposition incompetent evidence by reason of this deponent's interest in the event, it will pay no regard to the deposition. Beverley v. Brooke, 2 Leigh (Va.) 425.

Change of judges.— Where a motion was made before trial to suppress portions of a deposition on the ground of incompetency and irrelevancy, which was overruled, but the motion was renewed when the deposition was offered in evidence, it was held that, although there had been a change of judges, the decision first made was not a bar to the second. Hellman v. Wright, 1 Wyo. 190.

Refusal to suppress on motion.— Objections to depositions on the ground of incompetency and irrelevancy should be made on the trial, and this, although the court has previously refused to suppress them on motion. Hellman v. Wright, 1 Wyo. 190.

Hoxie v. Home Ins. Co., 32 Conn. 21, 85 Am. Dec. 240.

Omission of objections in reading.— If one against whom on a trial a deposition is read would object to the omission in the reading of objections noted to certain of the interrogatories he must do so at the time of the omission. After the reading he cannot demand the exclusion of the deposition. Valentine v. Middlesex R. Co., 137 Mass. 28.

XXIII. WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS.

A. In General. Where a party has appeared and cross-examined the deponent, but at the time makes no objections to the proceedings or evidence, he will be considered as having waived his right to object.[2] Thus by appearing and cross-examining without objection he waives irregularities in the issuance of the commission,[3] the authority of the commissioner,[4] the form or nature of the interrogatories,[5] and the competency of the witness to testify to the matter in con-

Manner of inclosure.— In In re Noble, 22 Ill. App. 535, a party moved to open the depositions, and then after they were opened moved to suppress them on the ground that they were not properly inclosed as required by the statute. Upon a denial of the motion, it was held that the motion to open the depositions was a waiver of any visible defect in the manner in which they were inclosed.

Second deposition.— If a deposition be improperly suppressed, the party waives the error by introducing another deposition of the same witness testifying to the same facts. Sanders v. Johnson, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 50, 36 Am. Dec. 564.

Objection to commission see supra, X, D.

Consent to commission.— If a commission issue by consent the want of an affidavit of the materiality of the testimony cannot be urged. Clay v. Kirkland, 4 Mart. (La.) 405.

Fundamental objections.— If a party without notice of taking deposition attends and cross-examines a witness, while it might be considered a waiver of notice, it is not a waiver of such fundamental objections as the want of a commission and the failure to make affidavit, as required by statute. Ragan v. Cargill, 24 Miss. 540. So, in Seymour v. Farrell, 51 Mo. 95, it was held that the appearance of an opposing party at the taking of depositions is not a waiver of a dedimus.

4. Crowther v. Rowlandson, 27 Cal. 376; Phillipi v. Bowen, 2 Pa. St. 20. In Sewell v. Gardner, 48 Md. 178, plaintiff applied for a commission and named a commissioner, but defendant failed to name one, whereupon the commission issued to the commissioner designated, and was executed and returned by him, and filed in the case. Defendant afterward filed affidavits and made motions for various purposes, filed amended pleas, and demanded a bill of particulars. It was held that whatever objection he had to there being but one commissioner was waived.

More than one commissioner.— Where a commission to take a deposition issues to three persons, before whom the parties appear, and examine and cross-examine defendant without objection, they cannot afterward object to the competency of one of the commissioners to act. Douge v. Pearce, 13 Ala. 127.

Signature to citation.— If a person authorized to take a deposition by commission signs his citation as a justice of the peace, and the party attended at the taking, it being objected that it did not appear by the citation that said justice was acting as commissioner, it was held that the objection if valid was waived by defendant attending the taking of the deposition. troversy,[6] as well as all irregularities in taking the deposition[7] or in filing the same.[8] It seems, however, that appearing and putting interrogatories to the witness waives only objections as to the form of the question or the manner of examination if not taken at the time, but does not preclude objections to the legal character of the testimony.[9]

B. Waiver of Notice. Where a party to an action appears and cross-examines the deponent and it so appears in the deposition, regularly certified,

In Massachusetts and Pennsylvania the rule is that objections to the form of the interrogatories must be taken before they are annexed to the commission and go to the commissioner." Competency of witness see supra, XVII, L.

Knowledge of incompetency.— Where a party in a chancery suit proceeds to examine a witness whom he knows to be interested, the deposition cannot be excluded at his instance on the sole ground of the incompetency of the witness. Lyde v. Taylor, 17 Ala. 270.

7. Williams v. Banks, 5 Md. 198; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Urlin, 158 U. S. 271, 15 S. Ct. 840, 39 L. ed. 977; Mechanics' Bank v. Seton, 1 Pet. (U. Irregularity after testimony taken.— Testimony, being in writing, and the certificate of the officer not showing whose writing it was, should be suppressed, as the exceptant could not be deemed by appearing to have waived an irregularity committed after the testimony was taken. In re Thomas, 35 Fed. 822.

No objections noted.— Where the attorneys for both parties agree that a deposition may be used in evidence, subject to the objections noted, and no objections are noted, it is error to reject a part of the deposition at the instance of one of the attorneys, although the part rejected is not legal evidence. Erwin v. English, 57 Conn. 562, 19 Atl. 238.

Testimony of several witnesses the same.— The practice, where the testimony of several witnesses is the same, of including the answers of all in one, instead of taking down the answer of each separately, is one of doubtful propriety; but depositions should not be suppressed on that account at the hearing of the cause, where the testimony has been published, and the party who makes the objection, having been in default, is let in to defend, and on leave granted proceeds, without noticing the objection to cross-examine the witnesses. Jordan v. Jordan, 17 Ala. 466.

Under the Alabama practice, by chancery rule 62, when a party files interrogatories he must give the names and places of residence of the witnesses or make affidavit that the same are unknown; otherwise no proceedings in the interrogatories shall be had except by consent. It was held that objection to the omission to give notice of residence is waived where no objection is noted, and as to one of the witnesses consent is given that a commission issue at once, and the question is first raised by motion to suppress the depositions. Cause not at issue.— So where evidence is taken under a special order before the cause was at issue as to one of defendants and in his absence, it cannot be used against him, and the fact that defendants noticed a cause "for hearing on pleadings and proof" is not an admission of the competency of a deposition taken before the cause was at issue. Lee v. Huntoon, 1 Hoffm. (N. Y.) 447.

Deposition unauthorized.— It is only when a civil suit is pending that depositions not in perpetuam are authorized to be taken, and so the appearance before the magistrate of the adverse party and his cross-examination of the witness do not waive his right to object on the trial that the deposition was taken before suit began. Howard v. Folger, 15 Me. 447.

Irregular practice.— Where defendant had taken sundry depositions for the purpose of discrediting a deposition taken by plaintiff, all of which had been taken from the files contrary to a rule of the court, and before the trial plaintiff's counsel told defendant's counsel that he should object to defendant's such party will not at the hearing of the cause be permitted to object that no legal notice has been served upon him.[10] The appearance and cross-examination is not confined to the party himself. Such action on the part of his attorney[11] or duly authorized agent will have the same effect.[12] A waiver of notice in this depositions because they had been taken from the files, to which defendant's counsel replied that plaintiff's deposition was liable to the same objection, plaintiff's counsel, at the trial, having read his deposition without any objection from defendant's counsel, was considered as having waived his objection to defendant's depositions. Doubt as to time of notice.— Where a notice is issued on the day of the date of the writ, and served upon defendant on the day of the service of the same writ, there being no evidence as to which service was in fact first made, and defendant attends at the taking of the deposition and takes part in the examination of the deponent he cannot at the trial deny that he had sufficient notice. Crooker v. Appleton, 25 Me. 131.

Evidence of presence.— An alleged error in overruling an exception to a deposition for want of sufficient notice cannot be considered on appeal, when it does not appear from the officer's certificate or otherwise that the party excepting was not present at the taking. Bailey v. Nichols, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 64.

Notice not shown by record.— A deposition is admissible in evidence, although the record does not find that notice was given to the adverse party, if such party cross-examined the witness. Rogers v. Wilson, Minor (Ala.) 407, 12 Am. Dec. 61.

Ohio Code Civ. 11. Latham v. Latham, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 307.

Waiver by attorney.— It is no objection to the admission of a deposition de bene esse that the notice of taking it was given to the attorney of record for the party, the statute requiring that it should be given to the party to the suit, when the attorney appeared at the taking of the deposition, this being equivalent to waiver of notice upon the client, which the attorney was competent to waive. Hunt v. Crane, 33 Miss. 669, 69 Am. Dec. 381.

Criminal cases.— Defects in the manner of issuing or serving notice of the taking of a deposition to be used on a criminal trial, as provided by Colo. Acts (1889), p. 475, § 2, are waived, when the attorney for the accused appears and subjects the witness to a searching cross-examination, although the accused himself elects to stay away. Ryan v. People, 21 Colo. 119, 40 Pac. 775.

12. Bedford v. Ingram, 5 Hayw. (Tenn.) 155; McNew v. Rogers, 1 Tenn. Cas. 17, Thomps. Cas. (Tenn.) 32. But where there is no proof that the adversary had notice of the taking of a deposition, the fact that a person styled an "agent" asked the witness a question will not dispense with notice, as such person might have acted without authority. Taylor v. Whiting, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 364.

regard is not entirely confined to appearance and cross-examination, for wherever a party by himself or attorney has appeared, objected to questions, the competency of witnesses, or to taking the deposition, or has done any substantial act connected with the taking of the deposition, he thereby forfeits his right to complain of notice at the time of trial,[13] unless his substantial rights have been prejudiced.[14]

XXIV. COSTS.[15]

A. In General. The question of costs in taking a deposition is usually a matter of statute.[16]

B. Who Liable. While as a general rule the prevailing party in an action is Questions by commissioner.— Where a justice of the peace before whom a deposition is taken, at the request of a party, puts questions to the witness, such party cannot afterward complain of a want of notice. Barnet v. School Directors, 6 Watts & S. (Pa.) 46.

13. Miller v. McDonald, 13 Wis. 673.

Appearance and objection.— A notice defective because not given in full time as required by law is cured if the party appear and object to taking the deposition for want of legal notice. Beal v. Brandt, 7 La. 583.

Consent of party.—Where the adverse party is present at the taking of a deposition and consents to the taking at a given place he cannot afterward object to the sufficiency of the notice as to the place of taking. Prather v. Pritchard, 26 Ind. 65.

Reading deposition in evidence.— By reading in evidence a deposition taken and returned into court by the adverse party, the reader admits notice and waives all objections to it. Devinny v. Jelly, Tapp. (Ohio) 159. So where depositions taken by one party and filed in court were read by the other party, it was held that on a second trial they might be read by the party who took them without proof that notice was given of the taking. Collier v. Jeffries, 3 N. C. 400.

14. Hunt v. Lowell Gas Light Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 343.

Extra-official act.— A statement at the foot of a deposition, thus: "To all of which testimony, the said James McVicar, by James Yell, his attorney, objected as being illegal: Attest, H. Scull, J. P.," was held to be an extra-official act of the justice, and to furnish no evidence of such an appearance as constituted a waiver of notice. Caldwell v. McVicar, 9 Ark. 418.

No authority to waive.— A deposition under a rule of court, taken without notice, is inadmissible, although a party interested, but without authority from the other defendants in the cause, attended and cross-examined the witness. Vincent v. Huff, 4 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 298.

Unreasonable notice.— Where defendants' counsel appears and objects to the taking of the depositions on the ground that the notice is unreasonable, in that notice for the taking at several distant places is given for the same day, the fact that he afterward proceeded to cross-examine the witnesses is not a waiver of the objection. Uhle v. Burnham, 44 Fed. 729.

Necessity for use of depositions as a ground of allowance.— See COSTS, 11 Cyc. 124; and Furman v. Peay, 2 Bailey (S. C.) 612; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Evansich, 61 Tex. 3.

Where a statute makes the party giving notice to take a deposition responsible for the cost if he "shall fail to take the same accordingly, unless such failure be on account of the nonattendance of the witness, not occasioned by the fault of the party giving the notice, or some other unavoidable cause," such party must not only show the non-attendance of the witness, but the reason why he did not attend. The liability for entitled to the costs and expenses of taking depositions,[17] yet it seems that the parties are primarily liable to the commissioner to the extent that his services have been engaged,[18] and the court may apportion the expenses accordingly.[19] So where depositions have been taken unnecessarily or in bad faith a party will not be allowed costs for taking the same;[20] and where it is shown that the purpose for taking a deposition is to oppress the adverse party by increasing the costs, the court may impose the cost of the deposition on the party in fault, if such purpose is clearly shown to the satisfaction of the court.[21]

DEPOSITOR. One who makes a deposit;[1] a person who pays money into a bank to be placed to his credit and to be subject to his check;[2] one who places his money on deposit for safe-keeping, to be paid out on demand on his check or draft therefor.[3] As defined by statute, the person who gives possession of personal property to another to keep for the benefit of the depositor or of a third party;[4] the person giving a deposit.[5] (See DEPOSIT; and, generally, BAILMENTS; BANKS AND BANKING; DEPOSITARIES; DEPOSITS IN COURT; WAREHOUSEMEN.) costs is not absolute, but is contingent upon some fault of the party to be charged. William Skinner Mfg. Co. v. Sinsheimer, 37 Ill. App. 467, 468.

Payment of costs not a condition precedent. — The adverse party cannot object to the reception in evidence of depositions, on the ground that the fees for taking the same have not been paid by the party offering them, since it is only for the officer taking the deposition to object to the non-payment of the fees, and since their ultimate payment would be a question of costs at the determination of the suit. Stone v. Crow, 2 S. D. 525, 51 N. W. 335. And so in Roumage v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 12 N. J. L. 95, it was held that the court would not impose the payment of costs upon the party as a condition of granting a commission.

If a party persist in calling witnesses to show something that can have no bearing on the case, the examiner's fees as to that portion of the deposition will be imposed on him. Howell's Estate, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 329.

20. Wilson v. Knox, 12 N. H. 347.

Irrelevant questions. — Where the successful party has issued a commission to take evidence on irrelevant matters, he cannot tax the expense thereof against his adversary. Teague v. South Carolina R. Co., 8 Rich. (S. C.) 154.

Previous questions. — The court will not impose the costs of cross-examination on the party cross-examining before the conclusion of the depositions, at which time they will consider the question, and if the questions are frivolous the costs will in part be imposed on the cross-examiner. Long v. Drummond, 22 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 11. See also Howell's Estate, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 329.

Recovery by action at law. — Where defendants have fraudulently procured false depositions and put plaintiff to great expense to controvert them, the court will not tax such expense against defendants in the case, but will tax under the regular rule and leave plaintiff to his action at law to recover the excess. Barker v. Wilford, Kirby (Conn.) 232.

Unnecessary prolixity. — The successful party will not be allowed to tax the full costs of taking depositions, when there has been unnecessary prolixity. Sanborn v. Braley, 47 Vt. 170.

Depositions rendered unnecessary. — So, in Furman v. Peay, 2 Bailey (S. C.) 612, a party was held entitled to tax the costs of commissions issued for the examination of witnesses whose testimony is material, although their depositions were not read at the trial in consequence of their having been rendered unnecessary by evidence introduced in anticipation by the opposite party.

I. EXISTENCE OF PRACTICE.

If a specific fund in the possession of a party to a cause is the subject of conflicting claims, the court may in certain cases either allow or compel him to pay it into court subject to further order in the cause. The practice of allowing or requiring deposits in court prevails not only in courts of equity, where the practice seems to have originated,[1] but also in courts of law[2] and courts of admiralty.[3]

II. GROUNDS OF DEPOSIT.

A. In General. The grounds which justify or require a payment into court of a fund in dispute are various.[4] Those deposits which are the subject of the

1. The practice of ordering property to be deposited in court to secure its safety pending litigation seems to be of considerable antiquity. There is record of an order prior to 1715 requiring deeds, securities, and jewels to be lodged with a master in chancery (Packer v. Wyndham, Gilb. 98, Prec. Ch. 412, 24 Eng. Reprint 184), and money had been ordered into court prior to 1727 (Finch v. Winchelsea, 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 2, 21 Eng. Reprint 828). Lord Eldon, however, said in 1803, "I remember, when the practice was introduced of making a Defendant pay in money appearing by his answer or examination to be in his hands." Mills v. Hanson, 8 Ves. Jr. 91, 32 Eng. Reprint 286.

Bank, 6 Wash. 603, 34 Pac. 143; being cases where deposits of money were made by one of the parties to stand in lieu of the property in litigation. So where defendant asserts an equitable defense by reason of the receipt, on behalf of plaintiffs, of money proceeding from defendant's predecessor in title, to which plaintiffs were not entitled, plaintiffs may be permitted to pay back the money into court. Requa v. Holmes, 26 N. Y. 338.

present discussion fall, however, under two general heads, namely: (1) A desire on the part of the party in possession of the fund to be relieved of the burden of caring for it;[5] and (2) a danger of loss or depletion of the fund.[6]

B. Relief From Care of Fund. If a party to a cause in possession of a fund to which there are conflicting claims desires to be relieved from the burden of caring for it and from the burden of the litigation, the court may authorize him to pay the fund into court to be disposed of as the rights of the parties interested may appear.[7]

C. Preservation of Fund From Danger. If a party to a cause is in possession of a fund to which there are conflicting claims, and it appears to the court that the fund is in danger of loss or depletion, or that the rights of the parties in interest may be endangered if the fund is allowed to remain in possession of the party holding it, that party may be compelled to pay the fund into court to abide its further order.[8]

Doubt as to ownership of fund.— It is only when the holder of a fund is unable to determine to whom the same rightfully belongs or who is rightfully entitled to the possession of it that he may, on action being begun therefor by one claimant, deposit it in court and give notice to the other claimants. Statutes.—In some states it is provided by statute that, upon affidavit by defendant, in an action on contract or for the recovery of personal property, that a third person, without collusion with him, has or makes claim to the subject of the action, and that defendant is ready to pay or dispose of the same as the court may direct, the court may make an order for its safe-keeping or its payment or deposit in court, or its delivery to such person as the court may direct, and also an order requiring the claimant to appear in a reasonable time and maintain or relinquish his claim against defendant; and if the claimant, having been served with a copy of the order, fails to appear, the court may declare him barred of all claim in respect to the subject of the action as against defendant; but if he appears he shall be allowed to make himself a defendant in the action in lieu of the original defendant, who shall be discharged from all liability to either of the other parties in respect of the subject of the action on his compliance with the order of court for the payment, deposit, or delivery thereof. Unknown parties.— If the persons entitled to a fund are unknown, it will be ordered into court until their identity can be established. Walters-Cates v. Wilkinson, 92 Iowa 129, 60 N. W. 514.

Merits of conflicting claims.—The fact that several claims are interposed to the fund is sufficient to justify an order requiring it to be paid into court. The court will not stop to investigate their merit. Deckerman v. Edinger, 13 Pa. Co. Ct. 541. However, an order to bring a fund into court to remain in medio will not be made upon a mere allegation in a bill that there is a question to be tried at the hearing, but the court must see whether there is really anything to be tried. Statutes.— In many states it is provided by statute that when it is admitted by the pleadings or examination of a party that he has in his possession or under his control any money or other thing capable of delivery which, being the subject of litigation, is held by him as trustee for another party, or which belongs or is due to another party, the court may order the same upon motion to be deposited in court or delivered to the party en-

III. NATURE OF FUND.

Ordinarily a court will not order the deposit of money unless it forms a specific fund.[9] A mere debt will not as a rule be ordered in.[10] If, however, the debt is for a sum wrongfully obtained or withheld from plaintiff, defendant may be ordered to pay it in.[11]

IV. WHO MAY COMPEL DEPOSIT.

The party who moves for the payment of money into court by another must show that he has a clear prima facie right to the fund or a part of it.[12]

10. Hexter v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 43 N. Y. App. Div. 113, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 453, holding that the court cannot order a judgment debtor to pay the amount of the judgment into court merely because there are liens upon and assignments of the cause of action. So a bank cannot be compelled to pay money into court and abide the event of an action brought against it by a receiver of an insolvent depositor to recover the balance due on a deposit. Balestier v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 564. And where the holder of a fund which has been attached borrows it and gives bond as security and afterward loans it to another, his claim against the borrower cannot be collected by compelling him to bring the fund into court. Harvey v. Hughes, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 556. However, where a purchaser of property defends an action for the price because an action to recover the property has been instituted against him by a third person, the court may render an interlocutory judgment, ordering defendant to deposit in court the balance due on the price, to await the decision of the other suit. Jacobs v. Sauvé, 15 La. Ann. 424.

On a bill for an accounting this rule has but a limited application, and the balance apparently due may be ordered into court. Foster v. Donald, 1 Jac. & W. 252, 21 Rev. Rep. 157; Gordon v. Rothley, 3 Ves. Jr. 572, 30 Eng. Reprint 1161. However, after the issue of a decree for an account, an order on motion to pay into court the amount of the principal sums admitted to be due by examination upon interrogatories will not be extended to interest. Voluntary deposit.— R. I. Pub. Laws (1899), c. 651, providing that whenever any executor, administrator, guardian, trustee, or any other person holds any sum of money payable to, or the property of, another, and the person entitled thereto cannot give proper receipt or discharge therefor, and such executor, etc., desires to free himself from further liability therefor, he may pay the fund into the registry of the court on a bill in equity stating the circumstances, was intended to cover only official relations where a trust was created, and does not apply to the ordinary relation of debtor and creditor; as for instance banker and depositor. Thus money will not be ordered to be brought into court on motion before decree, unless it clearly appears upon the answer to belong to plaintiff. Hagell v. Currie, L. R. 2 Ch. 449, 36 L. J. Ch. 448, 16 L. T. Rep. N. S. 307, 15 Wkly. Rep. 605.

Unclaimed funds.— The only persons having a right to move the court with reference to unclaimed chancery funds are the owners or their legal representatives and the state as custodian. Matter of Corning Foundation, 16 Misc. (N. Y.) 309, 39 N. Y. Suppl. 385.

V. Who Must Make Deposit.

The court will not ordinarily order a person to deposit property which is not in his possession at the time.[13] And a fund will not be ordered in unless it appears that the possessor has no equitable right to it whatever.[14] Thus money will not be ordered into court when the party holding it claims a lien upon it.[15] However an undisputed balance will be ordered in without prejudice to rights in the remainder.[16]

VI. Application For Order of Deposit.

A. Parties Applicant. All parties interested should unite in an application for leave to pay a fund into court.[17] The question whether a stranger to the suit may successfully apply for leave to pay a fund into court is not definitely settled.[18] He cannot apply for an order compelling another to make the deposit, however.[19]

B. Parties Defendant. The cases are in conflict as to whether an order to Foster v. Donald, 1 Jac. & W. 252, 21 Rev. Rep. 157.

Admission in plaintiff's pleading that he holds money subject to order of court was held to justify an order to pay the money into court, under Ida. Rev. St. § 4339. Reid v. Steele, 7 Ida. 571, 64 Pac. 892. It has been held, however, that after a decree for an account a motion by plaintiff for a payment of money into court by defendant, grounded on an admission in his answer alone, will not be entertained. Books of account.— On a bill for an accounting the court will not order into court money appearing as a balance due on the books in the master's office. Roe v. Gudgon, Coop. 304, 10 Eng. Ch. 304. Report of master.— If exceptions are taken to the master's report, money shown to be due thereby will not be ordered in on motion. Creak v. Capell, 6 Madd. 114, 22 Rev. Rep. 252. But where a sum was found due from defendant by the report and defendant acquiesced in it, the money was ordered in to the credit of the cause, although plaintiff had excepted to the report. Clarkson v. De Peyster, Hopk. (N. Y.) 274. See, however, Campbell v. Braxton, 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 446. pay money into court may be granted against a person who is not a party to the suit.[20]

C. Notice. Notice of an application for an order of deposit must ordinarily be given all parties concerned.[21]

D. Supporting Affidavit. A motion for a rule nisi to show cause why defendant should not be required to pay a fund into court should generally be accompanied by an affidavit verifying the facts on which that relief is asked.[22]

E. Time of Making Order. The order for payment into court may be made at various stages in the progress of the cause according to the nature of the particular suit and the practice prevailing in the particular court.[23]

F. Service of Order. An order requiring a person not a party to the cause to pay in a sum of money within a certain time must be served on him before the expiration of that time.[24]

G. Conclusiveness of Order.[25] An order on a motion to require money to be deposited in court is conclusive on the parties in subsequent proceedings.[26]

VII. ESSENTIALS OF DEPOSIT.

A. Delivery to Court. The fund must ordinarily come into the actual physical possession of the court else there is no effective deposit.[27]

Ann. 862; Belbee v. Belbee, 6 Madd. 28, both holding that a tenant from whom rents are adversely claimed by the parties may be ordered to deposit the same as they mature. But see Francis v. Collier, 5 Madd. 75; Johnson v. Chippindall, 2 Sim. 55, 29 Rev. Rep. 58, 2 Eng. Ch. 55, both holding that the order will not issue against a stranger.

Notice of hearing.— A final order on a petition asking defendant to bring money into court for the purpose of investment cannot be passed without notice to, or a hearing of, the opposite party, where he has answered the petition and objected to the application. Brooks v. Dent, 4 Md. Ch. 473.

Waiver of notice.— By paying money to a clerk, pursuant to a decree requiring him to do so, a stranger to a cause waives the objection that he had no notice of the suit in which the decree was rendered. Elliott v. Jones, 47 Iowa 124.

22. Texas v. White, 131 U. S. Appendix xcv, 19 L. ed. 532, 533, holding, however, that where due notice has been given to defendant, and he has appeared and admitted that he has received the fund in question, and stated that he is ready to answer on the merits, the court will grant the rule, giving leave to the parties to file their affidavits on the hearing.

23. Requa v. Holmes, 26 N. Y. 338, holding that the order may be made at the trial.

Before answer.— On a bill for partnership accounting defendant may be ordered to pay money into court before answer in a case of gross fraud appearing on an affidavit filed by plaintiff and the answer of defendant thereto. Jervis v. White, 6 Ves. Jr. 738, 6 Rev. Rep. 26, 31 Eng. Reprint 1284.

Before report a court will not order in a balance allowed against defendant on an accounting before the master. Fox v. Mackreth, 1 Ves. Jr. 69, 30 Eng. Reprint 234.

Before further consideration.— A defendant whose affidavit filed on an inquiry discloses that he has money in his hands may be ordered to pay it into court after decree and before further consideration. Dunne v. English, L. R. 18 Eq. 524.

Before further directions.— Plaintiff may, on an examination admitting money due, and before the cause is set down for further directions, move for payment of the fund into court. Hatch v. ——, 19 Ves. Jr. 116.

25. Finality of order of deposit for purpose of appeal see APPEAL AND ERROR, 2 Cyc. 604 note 49.

26. Elliott v. Jones, 47 Iowa 124, holding that where money is ordered into court to be paid by the clerk to defendant, the order cannot be attacked by answer and cross bill in a proceeding to compel the clerk to pay the money in accordance with it. So a motion to compel payment into court will be denied where a former motion for substantially the same relief was denied. Harris v. Elliott, 49 N. Y. Suppl. 916.

27. Myers v. Baker, 60 S. W. 521, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1325, holding that, where a party is adjudged to pay a sum to the court commissioner, an unexecuted agreement by the commissioner to give him credit by an amount which the commissioner was ordered in another action to collect and pay to the party does not entitle him to a credit therefor; no receipts being executed and the estate of the commissioner being insolvent. However, in lieu of appointing a receiver, the court may permit the fund in dispute to remain in the possession of a bank as depositary, to be held as a fund in court, subject to its orders

B. Consent of Court. In order to complete a deposit, the money must be delivered pursuant to an order of the court. Otherwise the delivery will have no legal effect.[28]

VIII. CUSTODY AND CONTROL OF FUND.

A. Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of Custodian.[29] The powers and duties of the custodian of a fund deposited in court with reference to the investment of the money are generally defined by order of court in the cause. In the absence of an order of instructions his powers and duties are usually controlled by statute or general rule of court.[30] The power and duty to invest the fund carries with it the power to do all things incidentally necessary or proper to effectuate the investment,[31] and to realize upon the securities taken by him.[32] The custodian is not liable to the parties in interest for loss or depletion of the fund, where he invests it in accordance with his powers and duties.[33] The custodian may pay out the fund upon a claim of ownership only upon order of court.[34]

B. Withdrawal of Fund by Depositor.[35] A deposit in court cannot ordinarily be taken out of court by the depositor;[36] but if it was made on a condition and demand. Continental Nat. Bank v. Myerly, 24 N. Y. App. Div. 154, 48 N. Y. Suppl. 718. See also, generally, DEPOSITARIES.

30. Chesterman v. Eyland, 81 N. Y. 398, holding that rule 180 of the former court of chancery, providing that where no direction for the investment of funds paid into court is contained in the decree, and the money is not applied for within six months thereafter, it shall be the duty of the custodian without any special order to invest it in public stocks or other permanent securities, is still in force, modified only by supreme court rules No. 82 of 1871 and 1874, and No. 73 of 1877, prescribing the place of deposit of the funds while on deposit.

31. Baldwin v. Crary, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 422, holding that where a fund is paid to a county treasurer, to be invested by him for the benefit of the parties, it is his duty to continue the investment, and that he has all power necessary to deal with it for that purpose; that he may receive payment in part or in whole; that if the investment be taken in the form of a mortgage, he has power, on payment, to discharge the same, and in case of part payment to release portions of the premises from its operation; and that where he invests the fund in a mortgage and afterward releases a part of the premises without receiving payment from the mortgagor, the release will be sustained in favor of persons subsequently making loans to the mortgagor on the faith of them and taking a mortgage on the released premises by way of security.

Mode of investment.— The chamberlain of the city of New York may aggregate in one mortgage several funds which it is his duty to invest. Chesterman v. Eyland, 81 N. Y. 398.

Transfer of securities.— The powers of a county treasurer in the control of funds paid into court are the same as other trustees, and he may transfer securities taken upon investment of the fund according to his best judgment without order of court, and the transferee takes a good title thereto notwithstanding the treasurer has used the money received from the transfer to replace court moneys wrongfully converted by him. Tompkins County v. Ingersoll, 81 N. Y. App. Div. 344, 81 N. Y. Suppl. 242.

32. Baldwin v. Crary, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 422.

Foreclosure suits.— If funds are deposited with the chamberlain of the city of New York for investment, and he invests them in a mortgage, it is his duty to realize on the security in the ordinary way, and he may accordingly foreclose the mortgage without order of court. Chesterman v. Eyland, 81 N. Y. 398.

33. People v. Randall, 73 N. Y. 416, holding that an order of court is a sufficient protection to the officer for his dealing with the fund.

Violation of rules of court.— No liability attaches to the chamberlain of the city of New York for violation of supreme court rule 82, of 1871 and 1874, prescribing the place of deposit of funds, where no harm resulted from the violation, and the fund was subsequently invested and lost without his fault. Chesterman v. Eyland, 81 N. Y. 398.

with which the other party refuses to comply, the depositor may withdraw the fund as a matter of right.[37]

C. Compelling Restitution of Fund. If a deposit be withdrawn without right, the court may summarily order its restoration to the official custodian,[38] and the statutes of limitations are not a bar to such a proceeding.[39]

D. Collection of Investment.[40] If a deposit in court is loaned out by order of court, and the borrower is in default, judgment may be rendered against him on motion without notice.[41] The statutes of limitations do not apply to a proceeding in the cause to collect an investment of funds in court,[42] although they may apply to an independent action for that purpose.[43] that where the parties stipulated that a deposit should be made with a third person to stand for the subject-matter of the dispute, subject to order of court until after determination of final appeal, the depositor could not withdraw the sum before appeal. So a property-owner who pays the amount of a municipal lien into court to release his land therefrom cannot withdraw it until it is determined whether the claim of the city can be sustained; and neither the statute of limitations nor delay in procedure can bar the city of its rights. Philadelphia v. Wellens, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 379.

Unauthorized deposit.—Where money is deposited with the clerk without order of court, however, the depositor may withdraw it at any time before the court recognizes it as a fund under its control or the party for whom it was intended manifests a willingness to receive it on the terms upon which it was deposited. Hammer v. Kaufman, 39 Ill. 87.

37. Cummins v. Rapley, 17 Ark. 381, holding that where a debtor, having executed a deed of trust for the benefit of his creditors, files a bill to enjoin a creditor from enforcing his judgment at law and to coerce his acceptance of the deed of trust, depositing in court the amount then due, according to its provisions, for the payment of the judgment, and the creditor refuses to receive the money except as an unconditional payment, or to accept the deed of trust, and upon a hearing the bill is dismissed, plaintiff may withdraw the fund.

Motion for restitution.— Where moneys in court have been improperly paid out in an action, a motion to compel restoration of the fund is the proper procedure. Hafker v. Henry, 5 N. Y. App. Div. 258, 29 N. Y. Suppl. 134; Allstadt v. Gortner, 31 Ont. 495.

Enforcement of order.— Where a party in whose favor judgment has been rendered obtains a fund from the depositary of the court thereunder, an order requiring him to restore the fund, made on a subsequent reversal of the judgment, is not enforceable only by execution against the party's property; but he is punishable as for contempt by commitment or by striking out his answer, or by both, for failing to comply with the order directing him to restore the money. 41. Vaughn v. Tealey, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1896) 39 S. W. 868, holding that a borrower of funds in court is a party to the cause to which the funds belong, and that an order that the funds be collected is notice to him upon which judgment may be entered on motion.

Waiver of objection to remedy.— Where funds in court were loaned by the clerk and master on a note, and before judgment was taken thereon on motion of the clerk and master the makers appeared and defended the motion, they cannot afterward object that they should have been sued in an action at law or by a bill in equity. Fisher v. Cunningham, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1899) 58 S. W. 399.

Estoppel to deny liability.— A surety on a note given to the clerk and master which states that the money is borrowed in a certain pending case cannot deny liability because the clerk and master was not authorized by court to make the loan, or because at the time the loan was made the fund had been exhausted by previous loans. Weaver v. Ruhm, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1897) 47 S. W. 171. See also Fisher v. Cunningham, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1899) 58 S. W. 399.

42. Weaver v. Ruhm, (Tenn. Ch. App. 1897) 47 S. W. 171, holding that a surety on a note given for funds in the custody of the clerk and master which states that it was given for funds belonging to a specified case makes himself a party to the case, and he may not avail himself of the statute of limitations to defeat collection of the note pending suit.

Limitations as to proceeding: To compel restitution of fund see supra, VIII, C. To enforce claim against fund see infra, IX, C, 2.

43. Bowen v. Helm, 41 S. W. 289, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 486, holding that the limitation provided by Ky. Gen. St. c. 71, art. 6, § 2, as

E. Loss of Fund.[44] Where several funds have been invested in one security a loss arising from depreciation in value should be borne by all the funds pro rata.[45] The party upon whom the loss of a particular fund shall fall depends upon the nature and purpose of the deposit.[46]

IX. DISTRIBUTION OF FUND.[47]

A. Jurisdiction of Court. The court in which a fund has been deposited has power to order distribution of it;[48] and when jurisdiction is once obtained it is not lost either by the abatement of the suit,[49] or by the dismissal of the bill.[50] After the fund has been distributed, however, the court has no further jurisdiction over it[51] in the absence of fraud.[52] The court in which the fund is deposited has exclusive jurisdiction of the question of the right to the moneys, and all claims against the deposit must be asserted there.[53]

B. Persons Entitled to Fund — 1. In General. In a proper case the court will recognize and enforce the rights of an assignee of a fund in court[54] or of a to the surety in a bond executed to the master commissioner for money loaned under order of court runs from the maturity of the bond, and not from the time the court orders the money to be collected, although the bond provides that payment is to be enforceable as the court may direct, and that the fact that one of the beneficiaries of the fund is an infant does not extend the period of limitation as to the surety.

46. De Peyster v. Clarkson, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 77 [affirming Hopk. 505], holding that where money is paid into court on a bill for an accounting, pursuant to order for the balance admitted to be due, and it is paid to the credit of the cause generally, and not in satisfaction of plaintiff's demand pro tanto, and the money is invested in public stocks on which a loss subsequently happens, the loss must be borne by defendant, especially where plaintiffs were willing to receive the money on account, and such appropriation was objected to by defendant. Where, however, goods in suit are converted into money, which is by consent of all parties placed in the hands of an officer of the court, it is at the risk of one party as much as the other. Mansfield v. Whatcom First Nat. Bank, 6 Wash. 603, 34 Pac. 143.

Priority over claim of county.— If there is a shortage in the funds of the clerk of a county not operating under the fee system, litigants having claims against a fund deposited with him are entitled to payment from the amount on hand in preference to the clerk's successor in office. In re Hobson, 8 Ohio S. & C. 51. Hammer v. Kaufman, 39 Ill. 87; Meehan v. Blodgett, 91 Wis. 63, 64 N. W. 429, holding that after the money has been refunded to the depositor in a proper case it is beyond the control of the court.

52. Keiley v. Dusenbury, 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 238, holding that where a wrongful payment of money out of court is procured by fraud, the distributee acquires no title to the fund, and the person rightfully entitled to it has his remedy by action, and in some cases by proceeding summarily against the distributee.

53. Gregory v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 171 Mass. 67, 50 N. E. 520; Gregory v. Boston Safe-Deposit, etc., Co., 144 U. S. 665, 12 S. Ct. 783, 36 L. ed. 585; Jones v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 76 Fed. 683, 22 C. C. A. 483, 35 L. R. A. 698, which cases hold that where moneys have been paid into court, and, pending litigation, have been placed by order of court with a depositary, neither party may maintain a bill against the depositary to compel it to pay over the fund to him. So the claimant of a fund cannot resort to a court other than that in which the fund is on deposit, and recover of the clerk and master and his sureties the amount of the deposit. Craig v. Governor, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 244.

54. Phillips v. Edsall, 127 Ill. 535, 20 N. E. 801, holding that equity has jurisdiction, upon the filing of a supplemental bill by attorneys alleging that they are assignees of a portion of a fund in court, to enter a decree preserving the equitable lien of the assignment by directing payment of the assigned amount out of the fund, as in such case the assignment being of only a portion of the fund and therefore not recognized at law, only a court of equity can afford adequate relief.

Title by estoppel.— Where a person purports to convey one sixth of a fund in court representing real estate, although only entitled to one ninth, and he afterward becomes entitled to one sixth, the assignment creditor[55] of the person otherwise entitled to the fund, and decree distribution accordingly. One who is not entitled to participate in the distribution of the fund cannot urge objections to the right of others to share in it.[56]

2. DEPOSITOR. The court may also in a proper case order a return of the fund to the depositor,[57] as where for example the deposit is made on a condition which is not performed,[58] or on a contingency which does not happen.[59]

C. Procedure — 1. REMEDY OF CLAIMANTS. The remedy of a person interested in a fund which has been paid into court to the credit of a cause depends in a measure upon the nature of that cause and the extent to which progress has been made in it.[60] As a rule, however, the claimant may for the purpose of asserting is effectual to pass the one-sixth interest. Re Hoffe, 82 L. T. Rep. N. S. 556, 48 Wkly. Rep. 507.

Notice of assignment.— The court and not the accountant is the custodian of a fund in court. Consequently notice to the accountant of an assignment of the fund is not tantamount to notice to a private trustee of the assignment of a trust fund. Cottingham v. Cottingham, 11 Ont. 294.

55. Minnesota Bank v. Hayes, 11 Mont. 533, 29 Pac. 90, holding that where money has been paid into court on a judgment in favor of a certain person as plaintiff, the court may, upon a hearing analogous to supplementary proceedings, all persons interested being present, order the money to be paid to a creditor of that person who has obtained a judgment against him in the same court. So if the claimant of a fund in court brings in a person interested in another portion of the fund, to whom the claimant is indebted, the court may order the fund paid to the creditor. Butler v. Butler, 67 S. C. 211, 45 S. E. 184. However a creditor who has neither an assignment of the interest of a distributee nor a lien thereon cannot intervene by petition in the suit in which the money is deposited for the purpose of reaching the distributee's interest and having it applied on his debt. 56. Munroe v. Sedro Lumber, etc., Co., 16 Wash. 694, 48 Pac. 405, a case where persons whose claims were unquestioned were entitled to the entire fund as against the person making objection.

57. Donohoo v. Howard, (Indian Terr. 1902) 69 S. W. 927.

Termination of suit in depositor's favor.— Where, in a proceeding under Battle Rev. c. 65, §§ 19, 20, to secure agricultural advances, the money received from the sale of a crop has been paid into court and the proceeding dismissed, the court has power to order a return of the money to defendant, and is under no obligation to plaintiff to order its continued detention, although plaintiff has instituted another action and files an affidavit that defendant is insolvent. Cottingham v. McKay, 86 N. C. 241.

Deposit on illegal contract.— If plaintiff deposits money on an illegal contract, and the court below orders it paid to defendant, the court on appeal may order a judgment for plaintiff for the amount so paid with interest from the date of the decree, in order that the parties may be placed in the position they were in when the action was brought. Horseman v. Horseman, 43 Oreg. 83, 72 Pac. 698.

58. Sutton v. Baldwin, 146 Ind. 361, 45 N. E. 518, holding that where defendant deposits money in court pending trial, to be returned to him unless plaintiff surrenders a certain check, to be held by the clerk subject to order of court, and the check is not surrendered, the court may order the money returned to defendant.

59. Donohoo v. Howard, (Indian Terr. 1902) 69 S. W. 927, holding that where plaintiff in ejectment alleged title through a sale to his grantor by an intervener, and admits non-payment of certain instalments of the price due the intervener, and pays them into court on the express stipulation that they are to be paid the intervener only in the event of plaintiff's recovery, it is proper, on sustaining a demurrer to the complaint, to order the money to be repaid to plaintiff.

60. Winslow v. Carthage, etc., R. Co., 82 Hun (N. Y.) 220, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 56, holding that where defendant, in an action to foreclose a trust mortgage, has paid the amount of the mortgage debt to the county treasurer, and the court has held that the payment was a sufficient tender and dismissed the complaint on the merits, it is improper for the treasurer, before he is authorized by an order to pay over the fund, and before an adjudication has been made discharging the lien of the trustees on the fund, to move for an order "adjusting his fees as county treasurer in the receiving and paying out" of the money; but he should apply for instructions, and ask for an allowance of such fees as he may be entitled to.

Motion by party to cause.— Where property is attached and sold and the proceeds paid into court, an independent petition in equity subsequently filed in the same court and before the same judge, to which the parties in the main suit are joined, to obtain payment of costs and attorney's fees out of the fund in court, to which the judgment in the main action entitled petitioner his right either intervene in the cause in which the fund was deposited[61] or proceed by a bill in equity.[62]

2. STATUTES OF LIMITATIONS. The statutes of limitations do not afford a bar to proving a claim against a fund in court.[63]

3. NOTICE. All persons who may be interested in the disposition of a fund in court are entitled to notice of a proceeding to obtain a distribution of the money.[64]

4. PARTIES. All persons who are interested in the distribution of the fund should be made parties to a petition for distribution.[65]

5. PLEADING. In a contest over a fund in court the parties need not file formal pleadings.[66]

6. PROOF OF CLAIM. Before an order of distribution can be made proof should be made before the court or a referee of the facts on which the application is based.[67]

7. EXECUTION OF ORDER OF DISTRIBUTION. Execution is not necessary to enable a party to collect, out of a fund in court, a sum to which he has been adjudged entitled in the action in which the fund was deposited.[68] may be treated as a motion in that action. Hornish v. Ringen Stove Co., 116 Iowa 1, 89 N. W. 95.

Motion by stranger to cause.—Where there is a dispute as to the ownership of a fund paid into court upon a judgment, the remedy of a claimant not a party to the cause is by a proceeding at law or in equity, and not by rule of court directing payment to him. Lewis v. Cockrell, 31 Ill. App. 476. And where a preliminary injunction is granted to restrain defendant from collecting a judgment against plaintiff for money deposited with a clerk of court until a judgment against defendant has been established as a set-off, persons claiming a lien on the deposit who have not intervened and are not parties to the suit cannot have their right to the lien adjudicated on motion supported by affidavits in advance of the trial. 62. Phillips v. Edsall, 127 Ill. 535, 20 N. E. 801, holding that a bill by an assignee of a part of the fund may be filed before the decree of distribution is entered in order that the court may have notice of claimant's rights, and although the notes to secure which the assignment was made are not due.

Notice to assignor of fund.— On a petition by an assignee for the payment out of court of a fund standing to the credit of the assignor, the assignor or his personal representative must be served with notice of the petition. Hurd v. Davenport, 13 Price 735. And see Briant v. Dennett, 4 Drew. 550, 5 Jur. N. S. 563. And where a stakeholder has deposited the sum in court in a suit in which one of two parties, each of whom claims the fund under a person residing abroad, is plaintiff, and the other a defendant, an order will not be made it seems for payment of the fund out of court until the absentee has been served. 65. Cowles v. Andrews, 39 Ala. 125.

Persons without interest.— Where a person having a contingent interest in a fund in court mortgages it and subsequently dies before his interest attaches, the mortgagees are not necessary parties to an application for distribution of the fund. 8. CONCLUSIVENESS OF ORDER OF DISTRIBUTION. The order of distribution is conclusive on the parties in subsequent proceedings.[69]

DEPOSIT SLIP. As used in banking, a note to help the memory.[1] (See DEPOSIT; DEPOSITOR; and, generally, BANKS AND BANKING.)

DEPOSITUM. A bare naked bailment of goods, delivered by one man to another to keep for the use of the bailor;[2] where goods are to be kept for the bailor, and returned upon demand without recompense.[3] (See DEPOSIT; and, generally, BAILMENTS; DEPOSITARIES.)

DEPOT. In a broad sense, a place of deposit for storing goods; a warehouse; a storehouse;[4] a place where any kind of goods is deposited; a storehouse; a warehouse.[5] In railroad law, a railroad station;[6] a railway station;[7] a station;[8] a passenger station;[9] a place where passengers get on and off the cars, and where goods are loaded and unloaded;[10] the building for the accommodation and protection of railway passengers or freight;[11] a building for goods at the terminus

69. State v. Alexander, 106 La. 460, 31 So. 60, holding that a judgment on a rule to distribute a fund may serve as a basis for the plea of res adjudicata, although not signed. However, a decree of distribution will not preclude a claimant not embraced in its provisions, and having rights similar to those of other claimants who are thus embraced, from asserting by bill or petition his right to share in the fund. Ex p. Howard, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 175, 19 L. ed. 634.

10. Fowler v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 21 Wis. 77, 79. And see State v. New Haven, etc., Co., 37 Conn. 153, 163, where it is said: "The words of the statute are 'depot and station.' A mere station falls within the letter of the law, but to come within its spirit the station must be one at which trains stop not merely for wood and water but for the transaction of the ordinary business of the company, the receiving and delivering of freight and passengers."

11. Webster Int. Dict. [quoted in Karnes v. Drake, 103 Ky. 134, 136, 44 S. W. 444, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1794].

"A 'regular' depot or station of a railroad company, as contemplated by the statute, is a certain place situate alongside of or near to its railroad, fitted up by it with suitable buildings, erections, appliances and conveniences for carrying on generally and continuously, in an orderly manner, the business of transporting freights, as is usually done by such companies. Such buildings, and other things necessary for a regular depot or station, may be greater or smaller in number and extent, or more or less elaborate, than others of like kind and for like purposes; but whether they be sufficient, or good, or indifferent, or are well or ill adapted to, and intended for, the purpose of prosecuting the business of transporting freights and passengers, receiving from shippers generally, and at all seasonable times, such freights as the railroad company is required to transport over its road, such depots or stations imply, ordinarily, such suitable and sufficient buildings, erections and appliances as may be necessary in receiving and delivering freights, and for the temporary protection of the same until they shall be transported or delivered to the persons entitled to have them, and that the company has a business office there, and suitor station of a railway, canal, etc.;[12] the entire grounds used by the company for its business purposes with the public at that station.[13] In military law, a place where military stores or supplies are kept, or troops assembled.[14] (See Depot Grounds; and, generally, Carriers; Railroads.)

DEPOT COMPANIES. See Railroads.

DEPOT GROUNDS. The place where passengers get on and off trains, and where goods are loaded and unloaded, and all grounds necessary and convenient and actually used for such purposes by the public and by the railroad company;[15] yard limits.[16] (See Depot; and, generally, Carriers; Railroads.)

DEPRECIATE. To fall in value; to become of less worth; to sink in estimation.[17]

"The term 'depot' in the mortgage is not necessarily limited to a place provided for the convenience of passengers while waiting for the arrival or departure of trains. It applies also to buildings used for the receipt and storage of freight, which, when received, is to be safely kept until forwarded by the cars of the company or delivered to the owner or consignee." Humphreys v. McKissock, 140 U. S. 304, 313, 11 S. Ct. 779, 35 L. ed. 473.

"The term 'depot' is sufficiently broad to embrace within its meaning a 'pass-way' used for the convenient and safe egress and ingress of passengers. It is not restricted in its signification to the 'house' or structure used also for their convenience in this respect." Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Thornsberry, (Tex. Sup. 1891) 17 S. W. 521, 523 [quoting Webster Dict.].

"The existence or extent of these grounds is not to be determined by the continued actual use of any part thereof. When station grounds are laid out, their contemplated future use is not unfrequently of more consideration than the actual demands at the time in determining their shape and extent. The construction and operation of new lines of railroad always tend to the development of the resources of the section through which it passes, and is followed by increased population and business. This is a matter of such common observation that ordinary prudence and foresight determines such an appropriation for station purposes as shall be commensurate with such reasonably anticipated growth. When these grounds are appropriated and set apart by the company it would be neither safe nor wise to allow their limits to be curtailed or extended by a jury in a proceeding where they collaterally come in question, as in this case, upon the mere showing that any part of the same was not in actual use at any particular time." McGrath v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 57 Mich. 555, 559, 24 N. W. 854 [followed in Schneekloth v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 108 Mich. 1, 65 N. W. 663; Grondin v. Duluth, etc., R. But compare Blair v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 20 Wis. 254, 261, where it is said: "As to the place of the accident being within the depot grounds of the company at Stoughton, it seems to us, after a careful consideration of the testimony, that there is no ground for saying that it was. It was out upon the main line of the road, where there is but a single track, several hundred feet beyond the switch, and beyond where the cattle guard now is. It is an admitted fact that the same was fenced by the company as part of the main line shortly after the accident in question, and that it has so remained ever since. And although long trains, in switching, sometimes run out to the place of the accident, still it is clearly shown that there is and was no practical objection to its being fenced. We do not think, under the circumstances, that it can be considered as part of the depot grounds."

"Distance from depots is not the controlling consideration in determining 'depot grounds' or 'yard limits,' which are synonymous terms. It is well known that in large cities these grounds extend for several miles. Neither does the question of frequent or infrequent use for switching purposes control. The question is, Are they reasonably necessary for that purpose, or liable to become so?" Rabidon v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 115 Mich. 390, 393, 73 N. W. 386, 39 L. R. A. 405.

"The word 'descends' as used in V. S. § 2613, is to be construed in accordance with the canon of construction, that, if words taken in their technical sense will make a statute inoperative in whole or in part, they will be taken in their popular sense." "Applying this rule, we construe the word . . . to include cases in which the use passes by will as well as cases in which it passes by operation of law." Mitchell v. Blanchard, 72 Vt. 85, 87, 47 Atl. 98.

49. Context and intention of parties.— See Wedekind v. Hallenberg, 88 Ky. 114, 123, 10 S. W. 368, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 696 (where it is said: "The clause last cited tends to show that the expression 'descend to her heirs,' used in the one in question was not employed by way of words of purchase or to express a devise, but merely that the testator expected and intended his bounty would, upon Mary's death, pass by descent to her heirs"); Spangenberg v. Guiney, 3 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 163, 165, 2 Ohio N. P. 39 (where it is said: "When the statute declares that in case the adopted child dies without issue the property shall descend not to his next of kin, but to that of the adopting parent, it means that in case the adopted child dies intestate, it shall so descend, for otherwise it would pass by devise and could not descend. And, furthermore, it means that in case he is the owner of the property at the time of his death, it shall so descend. Because no property can descend except that which the intestate owns at the time of his death. In other words, this statute is merely a branch of the general statutes governing descents, all of which imply, of course, that the deceased dies intestate, and that he owns the property at the time of his death"); Browning's Petition, 16 R. I. 441, 443, 16 Atl. 717, 3 L. R. A. 209 (where it is said: "The clause declares 'one half of said estates is to descend to said Edward's heirs and assigns, and the other half to descend to said George's heirs and assigns.' If the first takers take simply life estates, there will be nothing to descend from them to their heirs. The implication is that a fee was intended to be given to Edward and George. There are cases in which the word 'descend' has been taken in this sense. Criswell's Appeal, 41 Pa. St. 288; Eaton v. Tillinghast, 4 R. I. 276, 280").

Use of word cannot regulate course of descent.— "The words, to descend, in the expression 'to descend to the youngest son of his body lawfully begotten, and from him to the oldest heir male of said youngest son of his body begotten,' cannot have effect to sometimes in a statutory provision and at other times in a will or other instrument in writing, has been variously construed as meaning: To belong to;[50] to go;[51] to go to;[52] to go down;[53] to go down, to pass down from the elder, to be derived by the younger;[54] to go over to;[55] to pass;[56] to pass or be transferred;[57] to pass by descent or inheritance; or be inherited by;[58] to pass regulate the course of descent, since that is controlled by the statutes . . . and cannot be changed by the private will of any testator." Dennett v. Dennett, 40 N. H. 498, 501 [quoted in Halstead v. Hall, 60 Md. 209, 213]. And compare Harrington v. Gibson, 109 Ky. 752, 756, 60 S. W. 915, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1486 (where it is said: "The word 'descend,' in the expression 'at her death the same to deseend to such of her children as may then be living,' would seem to refer to the course the property would take by descent").

E. 92, supra, the court said: "There could be no reason for construction here if instead of the word descend the testator had used the word go, and we are unable to believe that the word used was intended to provide for the contingency of James surviving him, and of Sarah A. surviving James, without issue, when, as widow, she should be limited to one-third of the land. To hold that the word descend was used in the sense of a limitation upon the fee so clearly devised to James would not only be in denial of the presumptions we have cited, but would reduce the fee in James to an estate for life, with two-thirds over to the children of Isaac and one-third, under the law, to the widow of James."

St. 480, 487, 17 Atl. 463, where it is said: "It is suggested that the use of the word 'descend' by the testatrix, indicates an intention that the children should take directly from their respective parents, and not under her will, by way of remainder, but we think an examination of the whole will discloses no such intention. In the next preceding clause, after giving a life estate to other two of her nephews, she directs that immediately after the death of either life tenant, 'the undivided half of the one so dying shall go to and be enjoyed in equal shares to his children or to their heirs.' In this, she evidently intended that the remainder thus disposed of should go to the children under the provisions of her will, and not that they should take as heirs of their deceased parent." But see Spangenberg v. Guiney, 3 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 163, 165, 3 Ohio N. P. 39, where it is said: "The fallacy in plaintiff's contention arises from a misinterpretation of the words 'shall descend to.' It gives them the force of 'shall go to,' and this without regard to whether the adopted ehild owns the property at his death or dies testate or intestate. But the word 'descend' has a well defined meaning in the law, as the [aecepted] definitions of the word 'deseent' will show."

53. Rountree v. Pursell, 11 Ind. App. 522, 39 N. E. 747, 749 (where it is said: "In the law relating to the devolution of property rights, 'descend' may mean 'ascend' as 'descending in the ascending line'; and a son may be the ancestor of his father"); Ballentine v. Wood, 42 N. J. Eq. 552, 558, 9 Atl. 582 (where it is said: "The word 'deseend' was used, not to express descent in the legal sense, but devolution by force of the devise, and the use of it was probably due to the fact that while the gift for life was to parents, the gift in remainder was to children. It is as if the testator had said 'go down' to the ehildren").

57. Childs v. Russell, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 16, 22.

58. Baker v. Baker, 8 Gray (Mass.) 101, 119, where it is said: "The verb 'descend' is sometimes used in the sense of 'pass by descent or inheritance,' or 'be inherited by.' It is so used in our statute of descents, apparently to express by a single term, what might otherwise require a circumlocution. . . . But when so used, it is usually accompanied by other words, which prevent all ambiguity. These phrases are, 'shall descend to his father,' 'to his mother,' to 'his next of kin,' which may be in the aseending or from;[59] to vest in;[60] to be vested in.[61] (See Descendant; Descendible; and, generally, Descent and Distribution; Wills.)

collateral line, as well as the descending; but in these cases these terms so qualify the word 'descend,' as to give the effect of 'pass by inheritance' to the person named or described."

59. Taney v. Fahnley, 126 Ind. 88, 91, 25 N. E. 882, where it is said: "The word 'descend,' as used in the deed, means to pass from the grantee to her heirs, and is to the same effect as if it read to her during her natural life and to her heirs."

60. Johnson v. Morton, 10 Pa. St. 245, 248, where it is said: "It is well remarked that the word descend is inapplicable to any estate less than a fee; that the testator uses it as synonymous with 'belong to,' or 'vest in,' which would carry a fee."

61. Aydlett v. Swope, (Tenn. Sup. 1875) 17 S. W. 208, 209, where it is said: "The word 'descend' is not here used in its technical sense, but means 'shall go to' or 'be vested in.'"

62. Not a word of inheritance.— In Van Beuren v. Dash, 30 N. Y. 393, 422, Denio, C. J., said: "The word descendants has reference to genealogy, or the succession of persons in the family relation, and has no necessary connection with the laws of inheritance. Land descends, in certain cases, from a son to his father, and from a man to his brothers, but this does not prove that the father is the descendant of his son, or the brother of his brother, in any possible sense. It is correctly said, that the law-books and other writings commonly speak of lineal descendants; and it is argued, that this would be improper, if there were not another species of descendants; from which it is inferred, that there are collateral descendants. But we rarely meet with this latter expression. The truth is, that the word lineal in that connection is a pleonasm employed to emphasize the expression, and not, in general, to distinguish it from any other species of descendants; and so, where collateral descendants are spoken of, an ellipsis is made use of — the phrase meaning the descendants of collaterals."

See also West v. West, 89 Ind. 529, 531, where the court, in construing a statute relative to devises, said: "We are of opinion, however, that the word 'descendant,' as used in the statute above, does not apply to a brother of a testator. A term less broad than "issue."— In Hillen v. Iselin, 144 N. Y. 365, 374, 39 N. E. 368, the court said: "The learned counsel for the appellant has shown that the word 'descendant,' according to its accurate lexicographical and legal meaning, designates the issue of a deceased person, and does not describe the child of a parent who is still living. The word is the correlative of ancestor. The word issue is a word of broader import and may include the children of a living parent as well as the children or descendants of one who is dead. any relative to whom in some possible contingency property might descend, but lineal descendants — issue of the body;[78] and as used in its natural and ordinary sense, as a definite description of all those persons living at a particular time, it means those who can trace their origin, immediately or remotely, to a given person, as an ancestor.[79] As used in a statute, the term may mean those who descend in a direct line from the husband,— children, grandchildren, etc.;[80] in statutes disposing of real and personal estate in cases of intestacy, one sprung from the body of the person spoken of — a lineal descendant.[81] Again, when used either in written or spoken language, when unconnected with any qualifying word, the term is used to describe the children, grandchildren, etc., of the person named, and where that person is dead, it embraces his posterity, however remote, but it is confined to them.[82] (See CHILDREN; HEIRS; ISSUE; OFFSPRING; and, generally, DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION; WILLS.)

Sometimes synonymous with "heirs."— In Huston v. Read, 32 N. J. Eq. 591, 599, the court said: "The legacies given to her [a devisee under a will] by the first and fourth sections also lapsed. The substitutionary words in the first are the same — 'descendants'— and though, in the fourth, they are 'heirs and descendants,' the meaning of the testator was the same; the words 'heirs' and 'descendants' were used synonymously, and he meant lineal descendants."

Includes only mediate or immediate issue.— In Van Beuren v. Dash, 30 N. Y. 393, 419, 422 [citing 2 Blackstone Comm. 223, 224], Denio, C. J., said: "It cannot for a moment be maintained, that, according to the common use of the word descendants, it is not limited to such persons as proceed mediately or immediately from the body of the person of whom it is predicated, in the course of generation. . . . If we turn to the chapter of Blackstone's Commentaries, in which he treats of title by descent, we shall find the word descendant constantly used to denote the issue, mediate or immediate, of the person of whom those descendants are predicated, and never in a sense which would include collateral relatives." 81. "And is never used as synonymous with, or comprehensive of, any other class of relatives." Armstrong v. Moran, 1 Bradf. Surr. (N. Y.) 314, 319.

82. Van Beuren v. Dash, 30 N. Y. 393, 419, per Denio, C. J., where it is said: "Thus, we speak of the descendants of Abraham, of William the Conqueror, of George the Third, and of the first and second President Adams, of Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton; while we say of Queen Elizabeth, of William of Orange, of Washington and Madison, that they left no descendants, or, in the words of the statute, that they respectively died, leaving no child or other descendant. These are common forms of speech, and the meaning is perfectly definite, and it is such as I have mentioned. The word is invariably employed in that sense, in books of history, in memoirs, in biographies, in works on genealogy, and in almost every book which treats of men and their affairs."
